

2010

PREPRINT 410

Florentina Badalanova Geller

2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch:
Text and Context

2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch: Text and Context

Florentina Badalanova Geller

For Mark

Table of Contents

Preface	2
1. The Enochic chronotope	3
2. Text witnesses of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch in Slavia Orthodoxa : classification and taxonomy of sources	12
3. The Book of the Secrets of Enoch the Just and the religious art and iconography of Slavia Orthodoxa	18
4. The Book of the Holy Secrets of Enoch : a contribution towards a new translation of 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of Enoch)	25
5. Bibliography	73
6. List of Illustrations	84

Preface

The present study is a result of regular research visits to the Max Planck Institut für Wissenschaftsgeschichte, as part of a broader project, 'Unholy Scriptures: Apocryphal Heritage of Slavia Orthodoxa'. This Preprint also reflects my current courses taught within the Topoi Excellence Cluster at the Freie Universität, Berlin, and I am grateful to my students for feedback and uncomfortable questions.

The interpretation of the text translated here is based upon a paper I read at the Fifth Enoch Seminar, organised by G. Boccaccini and held in Naples, 14-18 June, 2009; the Seminar was devoted to 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch. I noticed that the seminar papers were based almost entirely upon English translation, with few scholars being able to read the original Slavonic text, and I therefore decided to offer a new translation based upon a version of the apocryphon published in 1899 by M. Sokolov, but never translated into English. This is a 16th-17th century Bulgarian redaction of The Books of the Holy Secrets of Enoch [КНИГѢ СѢН^x ТАИНЫ ЁНОХОВ^y] from MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade (fol. 269 – 323), which perished in a fire during the Second World War. The text only survives in Sokolov's edition.

The text of 2 Enoch has particular interest for Wissenschaftsgeschichte since it contains important data concerning astronomy and calendrical knowledge, and my hope is to make this available to colleagues who do not work on Slavonic texts.

As always, I am grateful for the support of MPIWG colleagues, and in particular Peter Damerow, Jürgen Renn, Urs Schoepflin, Ellen Garske, and Lindy Divarci. I would also like to thank Klaus Geus, Cale Johnson, Sacha Stern, and Ilana Wartenberg, who were consulted regarding the astronomy. James Dingley read the translation at an early stage. Tzveta Pokrovska is responsible for the chart.

Although originally this work was intended to appear in the proceedings of the Fifth Enoch Seminar, it is now planned to be published by Brill in my forthcoming book Beyond the Bible.

1. The Enochic chronotope

The present study explores the divergent spectrum of perceptions¹ of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch in Slavia Orthodoxa.² It is an attempt to provide some insights into 'pseudepigraphical embroidery of the biblical text',³ and examine the socio-cultural imprint — and indeed impact — which the 'Enoch Epos' exercised upon Christian intellectual milieu of the Slavonic realm of the Byzantine Commonwealth.⁴

¹ In our analysis we follow M. Stone's seminal ideas concerning the significance of vernacular 'reception-history' of Old Testament apocrypha and pseudepigrapha within the wider contexts of 'biblicized' native traditions [2009: 631-632, 635-637].

² The historiographic formula Slavia Orthodoxa, together with its counterpart Slavia Romana (also referred to as Slavia Catholica), was introduced by Picchio [1984]; the terms reflect the 'division of historical Slavdom into two main areas belonging to the jurisdiction of the Eastern Orthodox Churches (Slavia Orthodoxa) and to that of the Roman Church (Slavia Romana)' [ibid.: 1]. Following Picchio's methodology, I approach the institutionalised partition of Central and Eastern Europe between Rome and Constantinople as a sui generis linguistic phenomenon; Latin was to function as the lingua sacra in Slavia Romana, while in Slavia Orthodoxa this role was played by Old Church Slavonic. I further argue that, along with Slavia Romana and Slavia Orthodoxa, another set of terms, reflecting the confessional identity of 'other' religious communities (be it Christian, Jewish, or Muslim) should be taken into consideration, with special emphasis on their respective linguae sacrae; hence my argument for Slavia Evangelica, Slavia Judaica and Slavia Islamica [Badalanova 1994; 2001; 2002]. The linguistic differentiation between Slavia Romana and Slavia Orthodoxa (i.e. Latin versus Old Church Slavonic) had a major impact upon future cleavage between the respective cultural traditions: 'within each of these two main areas of civilisation, the self-identification of the Slavs with certain cultural and linguistic systems was directly affected by the ideological and linguistic models that the ecclesiastical organisations introduced into their spiritual patrimony' [Picchio [1984: 3]; see also Picchio and Goldblatt [2008: 66-85]. The fact that the 'spiritual patrimony' of Slavia Orthodoxa was anchored by Old Church Slavonic explains why 2 Enoch was not attested in apocryphal heritage of Slavia Romana and remained a specific product of Slavia Orthodoxa exclusively. However, folklore evidence indicates that 'the Enoch Epos' penetrated the domain of vernacular oral tradition of Christian communities in zones of mixed or overlapping influence between Slavia Orthodoxa and Slavia Romana, such as the Greco-Catholics (also known as Catholics of Byzantine rite) in the Carpathian region (i.e. Ruthenians, or Rysyns). Volodymyr Hnatiuk, for instance, published two fragments of folk spiritual chants (Hymns to Archangel Michael) mentioning the Ascent of Enoch to Heaven; the songs emphasise that it was Archangel Michael himself who took the visionary to Paradise:

Михаиле! Кто яко Богъ? Велми возопѣль ес, // Гды с небеса Луцѣпера под ноги струтилъ естъ. // Восхотѣл бо онъ проклятый равен быти Богу, // Той падаетъ с динономъ юж тебѣ под ноги. // Свою гордост по неволи мусѣль нахилити, // Гды казанно му от престола до аду вступити. // Идеже бо имя твое славимо биваетъ // Сатанаилъ съ динономъ оттуду утѣкаетъ. // [...] // Ты Еноха принеся еси южъ давно до раю, // Тѣм же и ми чудесь твоихъ славу отсылаймо.

The other fragment published by Hnatiuk offers a version similar to the above; see idem. [1985: 62-64, texts 47 and 48].

³ See Stone [2009: 631].

⁴ On the reception-history of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch the Just (2 Enoch), see Popov [1880: 67, 75-83], Sokolov [1905: 395-97, 399-402, 1910: 1-167], Ivanov [1925: 165-167, 186-191], Turdeanu [1950: 181-187], Vaillant [1952: i-xxvi], Meshcherskii [1964: 91-108], Greenfield and Stone [1979: 98-99], Andersen [1983: 91-100], Pennington [1984: 321-328], Stone [2000: 45-8; 2008: 635-637], Böttrich [1995; 1996], Alexander [1998: 101-04, 116-17], Anderson [2000: 99-102], Nickelsburg

The first reference to the Enochic apocryphal corpus within the context of Slavia Orthodoxa is found in Symeon's Florilegium, the earliest extant copy of which, Sviatoslav's Miscellany, comes from 1073.⁵ The Florilegium was compiled in Bulgaria during the reign of the Symeon (893-927), on the basis of a Greek (Byzantine) protograph, and most probably was commissioned by the King himself. Being 'an encyclopaedia sui generis' [Dinekov 1991: 17], it was designed as a compendium containing articles from various spheres of medieval knowledge: Christian theology and ethics, along with ancient science and philosophy. The reference to Enoch is found at the very end of the MS (Fol. 254), in the section devoted to the Index of Prohibited Books, the authorship of which is attributed to Isidor of Pelusium (d. c. 450). In fact, Enoch is listed at its very top, coming in second position after Vita Adae:

ІЄАНКОЖЕ СЪКРОВЬНЫХЪ • АДАМЪ •Ѫ• ІЄНОХЪ •Ѣ• МАЛЕХЪ •Ѥ• ПАТРЬАРСН •Ѧ•
МОЛНТВА НОСНФОВА •Ѩ• ІЄЛДАД •Ѭ• ЗАВѢТЪ МООУСННЪ •Ѯ• ВЪСХОДЪ МООУСННН
•Ѱ• ПСАМОСН СОЛОМОНН •Ѳ• НАНННО ОБАВЛЕННІЄ •Ѵа• НСАНННО ВНАѢННІЄ •Ѷв•
СОФОННННО ОБАВЛЕННІЄ •Ѹг• ЗАХАРНННО ІАВЛЕННІЄ •Ѻд• НІАКОВАЕ ПОВЕСТЬ •ѼЄ•
ПЕТРОВО ОБАВЛЕННІЄ •ѼЅ• ОБЪХОДН Н ОУЧЕННІА АПАСКА •ѼН• ВАРНАВЛЕ
ПОСЫЛАННІЄ •ѼѢ• ДѢІАННІЄ ПАУЛЕ •ѼѤ• ПАУЛОВО ОБАВЛЕННІЄ •ѼѦа• ОУЧЕННІЄ
КАНМЕНТОВО •ѼѨв• НГНАТОВО ОУЧЕННІЄ •ѼѨг• ПОЛОУКАРПОВО ОУЧЕННІЄ •ѼѨД•
ЕУАГГЕЛНІЄ ОТЪ ВАРНАВЫ [Dinekov . et al. 1991: 701].

Still, the appearance of Enoch in the Index of Prohibited Books in Symeon's Florilegium cannot be considered as corroborative evidence proving beyond doubt that the actual apocryphon was in circulation in Slavia Orthodoxa at the time when [2001: 75, 79-81, 99-100], Panajotov [2003: 279-283]; Orlov [2007: 19-35, 133-268]; Badalanova [2008:162-3, 186-91, 231-35]; Khristova [2008].

There is an unusual feature of Sokolov's posthumous publication, edited by Speranskii, since the page numbering of the edition of the Monuments from 1910 was intended to represent a continuation of Sokolov's earlier publication from 1899. Hence the page numbers and table of contents of the 1910 volume reflect Sokolov's earlier edition of MS № 321 of the National Library in Belgrade (chosen by him as the primary witness to the longer recension) and the 17th cent. Barsovian MS (as a text representing the shorter recension); the edition of these two MSS ended on page 107. Speranskii's publication of the second part of the MSS edited by Sokolov (Chapter 'Тексты') therefore begins on page 109, rather than page 1. After Speranskii completes his edition of Sokolov's text-edition, he then adds a second part to this work, namely Sokolov's research notes (Chapter Изслѣдованіе), now beginning on page 1. For this reason, references to Sokolov's works may be confusing to the reader. Sokolov's 1899 edition also includes variants from an 18th century MS (pages 108ff.), which is not reflected in Speranskii's table of contents.

⁵ It was made in Kiev for the Russian Prince Sviatoslav (hence its designation). For a detailed discussion of Symeon's Florilegium, Dinekov et al. [1991, 1993] and Thompson [1993: 37-53.]

the Florilegium was compiled/copied. It can merely mean that the scribe simply followed the original Greek protograph of which the Index of Prohibited Books was already a part. However, on the basis of the appearance of Enoch in the Slavonic version of the Index of Prohibited Books, an argument can be put forward that by the time when its protograph was composed, a Greek recension of Enoch was also known to the copyist.

The same applies to the multiple, repetitive attestations of the stock phrase 'the books of Enoch' (var. 'the books of the righteous Enoch') in Slavonic recensions of The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs;⁶ they may simply reflect the content of the Greek Vorlage. However, the systematic references in The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs to the 'books of Enoch', along with parallel attestations of some similar concepts (e.g. the idea of seven traits, or 'seven spirits' which were given to man at the Creation'),⁷ indicate that these two apocrypha must have shared a common intellectual background. Indeed, both of them are listed in the Index of Index of ⁶ Thus in Chapter 5: 5-6 of The Testament of Simeon [Завѣтъ Симеоновъ], the following statement is made: 'I have seen it in the account (var. report, relation) in the books of Enoch that your sons together with you will be corrupted by fornication' [внѣхъ оубо въ сказаньи книгъ еноховъ яко снве вашн с вами въ блуженьи нстаѣють]; see Tikhonravov [1863: 100] and Porfir'ev [1877: 161]. Similar references can be found in The Testament of Levi [Завѣтъ Левитинъ]: 'as it stands written in the book of the righteous Enoch' [бо рече въ книгахъ еноха праведнаго]; 'I understand from the writing of Enoch' [разоумехъ ѿ писменн енохова]; 'I understand from the book of Enoch' [оувѣдахъ в книгахъ еноховахъ]; see Tikhonravov [1863: 110-111] and Porfir'ev [1877: 169]. See also similar citations in The Testament of Judah: 'And I have also read in the books of the righteous Enoch about the evils you will commit in the last days' [оувнѣхъ оубо ре^ѣ в книгахъ еноховахъ еанко зла створите в послѣднѣи дни; var. оувнѣхъ бо рече въ книгахъ еноховахъ еанко зла сотворите в послѣднѣи дни]; see Tikhonravov [1863: 115] and Porfir'ev [1877: 172]. Further parallel quotations can be found in The Testament of Dan: 'I have understood from the book of the righteous Enoch' [разумѣхъ бо во книгахъ еноха праведнаго; var. разоумехъ бо во книгахъ еноха Праведнаго] (Tikhonravov [1863: 126] and Porfir'ev [1877: 181]), as well as in The Testament of Benjamin: 'I gather from the words of the righteous Enoch that you will give yourselves up to Sodomite practices' [разумѣхомъ же о словесхъ еноха праведнаго съблюдежеса чада моя блуженья содомска; var. разоумехомъ же во словесхъ еноха праведнаго соблюдетежеса чада моя блуженья содомска]; Porfir'ev [1877: 193].

However, in some cases, as in The Testament of Asher [Завѣтъ Ашеровъ], when the Slavonic text gives a reference to 'the books of the righteous Enoch' [Porfir'ev 1877: 187], this very reference may be missing from extant Greek versions; the latter case is most intriguing, as it suggests that either the Slavonic recensions used different Greek protographs, or that the text was changed in the process of translation and/or compilation.

Further on the relationship between Enoch and The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs (which was part of the text of the Palaea), see Charles and Forbes [1913: 428-429], Higgins [1953: 321-336], Nickelsburg [2001: 96].

⁷ See the discussion below (footnote 229).

Prohibited Books in Symeon's Florilegium. Still, the question of chronological boundaries for their translation into Old Church Slavonic remains open.

A more solid piece of evidence towards establishing the terminus ante quem for the translation/compilation of the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch comes from the much disputed text of The Secret Book of the Bogomils (Liber Sancti Johannis).⁸ Although the link between 2 Enoch and The Secret Book can be interpreted in various ways, there is one simple detail which remains unambiguous: the author of The Secret Book was definitely aware of the existence of the 2 Enoch.⁹ Thus, according to the Liber Sancti Johannis, when the Devil raised 'his deputy' Enoch above the firmament and showed him his 'divine nature', he ordered that the scribe would be given pen and ink, so that he might sit down and write 67 (variant 76) books, which were to be brought to Earth and passed on to his sons; Enoch was to embark thereby on teaching his people how to conduct 'unrighteous forms of sacrifice and mysteries':

[Et interrogavi Dominum, dicens: usque quo regnabit Sathanas in hoc mundo super essentia hominum?]¹⁰ Et dixit mihi: Pater meus permisit ei regnare septem diebus, quae sunt septem saecula. Et interrogavi Dominum et dixi: quid erit in tempore hoc? Et dixit mihi: ex quo cecidit a gloria Patris Diabolus et suam gloriam noluit,¹¹ sedit super nubes et misit ministros suos angelos ignis urentes ad homines infra ab Adam usque ad Henoc [variant: Enoch], ministrum suum. Elevavit Henoc super firmamentum et ostendit deitatem suam, et praecepit ei dari calamum et atramentum, et sedens scripsit sexaginta septem libros. Et praecepit, ut adduceret eos in terram, et tradidit [possibly: traderet] eos filiis suis. Et

⁸ Although The Secret Book of the Bogomils survived only in Latin, its Vorlage must have been originally composed in Old Church Slavonic (Old Bulgarian). It has two extant text-witnesses, found in two different MSS: the 12th century Vienna MS and the 14th century Codex Carcassoniensis (discovered in the Archives of the Inquisition in Carcassonne, France); see Thilo [1832: 884-896], Döllinger [1890: 85-92], as well as Sokolov's posthumous research notes [1910: 165-75], and Ivanov [1925: 65-87]. The fact that the Bogomils, like the Manichaeans, did not endorse the slaughtering of animals and/or consuming meat (hence their firm interdict of blood offerings) explains their hostility towards Enoch, who was believed to have taught his offspring the rites of animal sacrifices (e.g. his portrayal as 'the Devil's deputy' in the Liber Sancti Johannis). At the same time, because of their refusal to engage in animal slaughter, the Bogomils would have not used parchment as a material for writing; hence witnesses to their 'Secret Book' did not survive. Not only were their writings banned and proscribed (as a result the severe persecution of the adherents of the movement), but also the material on which they were copied was perishable.

⁹ See the discussion in Sokolov's research notes [1910: 148-151] and Ivanov [1925: 72, 188-191].

¹⁰ The text inside the brackets comes from the 12th century Vienna MSS.

¹¹ Ivanov, following Thilo [1832: 890], suggests noluit to be amended to voluit [Ivanov 1925: 80].

deposuit Henoc [variant: Enoch] libros in terram et tradidit eos filiis suis, et coepit eos docere facere formam sacrificiorum et mysteria injusta, et ita abscondebat regnum coelorum ante homines. Et dicebat eis: videte, quod ego sum Deus vester, et non praeter me alius Deus. Ideo misit me Pater meus in mundo, ut notum faciam hominibus, ut cognoscant malum ingenium Diaboli. Et tunc cum cognovisset, quod descendi de coelo in mundum, misit angelum, et accepit de tribus lignis [possibly: linguis] et dedit ea ad crucifigendum me Moïsi, quae [possibly: qui] nunc mihi servantur.¹² Sed ei hic nunc praeunciabat deitatem populo suo, et praecepit legem dari filiis Israël, et eduxit eum per siccum maris medium.¹³

And I [i.e. John the Evangelist] asked the Lord [Jesus Christ] saying, 'Until when will Satan [lit. Sathanas] rule over human beings in this world?' And He said to me, 'My Father allows him to rule for seven days, which is seven ages.' And I asked the Lord and said, 'What will happen in that time?' And He said to me, 'Since the Devil fell from the glory of the Father and desired his own glory, he sits above the clouds and sends his angelic deputies as burning fires to men, from Adam to his deputy Enoch [var. Henoch]. He raised Enoch above the firmament and showed him his divine nature, and he ordered that he [Enoch] would be given pen and ink, and sitting down he wrote sixty-seven books. And [the Devil] ordered him to bring them to earth and pass them on to his sons. And Enoch brought the books to earth and passed them on to his sons, and he began to teach them to perform unrighteous forms of sacrifice and mysteries, and thus the Kingdom of Heaven was hidden from men. And he [Satan] was saying to them, 'You see, I am your God and there is no other God besides me.' That is why My Father sent Me [i.e. Jesus] into the world so that I might tell people how to recognise the evil spirit of the Devil. When Satan learned that I had come down from heaven into the world, he sent an angel and he received three pieces of wood and gave them to Moses for My crucifixion, and they are being kept for Me even now. But now [Moses] was proclaiming his divinity to his people¹⁴ and [the angel] ordered him to give the laws to the sons of Israel, and he led them over dry land to the middle of the sea.¹⁵

The explicit statement expressed in the text of Liber Sancti Johannis, that Enoch was supposed to transmit knowledge about how to perform sacrifices, indicates that the compiler of The Secret Book was conscious of the content of 2 Enoch; the fact that the earliest extant copy of Liber Sancti Johannis (i.e. Vienna MSS) comes from the ¹² See Thilo [1832: 891, footnote 7].

¹³ See Chapter 7 in the Codex Carcassoniensis according to Ivanov's edition [1925: 80-81], and Thilo [1832: 890-892].

¹⁴ This comment about the divinity of Moses may reflect a trend in Hellenistic literature to treat Moses as a miracle worker; see Johnson [2005].

¹⁵ The translation is provided by Butler [1986: 191].

12th century suggests that 2 Enoch was translated into Old Church Slavonic (Old Bulgarian) no later. Besides, the inscription at the end of the Codex Carcassoniensis states that Liber Sancti Johannis was brought from Bulgaria to Concorezzo, near Milan, by Bishop Nazarius, the leader of the Cathar sect in Northern Italy. One of Nazarius' contemporaries clarifies the chronology by writing in 1230 that he had met Nazarius some 60 years earlier, hence in 1170.¹⁶ Therefore the year 1170 can be considered as terminus ante quem for the translation/compilation of the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch.

The linguistic analysis of the text of 2 Enoch, on the other hand, indicates that its Slavonic Vorlage may have been written originally in Glagolitic script, and only later converted to Cyrillic. Indicative in this respect is the shift between particular numbers in various recensions, and especially the alteration of six to five, due to the different numerical value of the letter E (ecmь) within the two scripts; while the numeral equivalent of the letter 'E' (ECTЬ) in Cyrillic alphabet is '5' (ѿ), in Glagolitic the same letter has the numeral value of '6'. Thus, when taken to the western side of this Heaven, Enoch sees, according to some of the versions of the apocryphon, five large gates through which the sun sets; according to other versions, however, the number of these gates is six.¹⁷ This kind of discrepancy between various redactions suggests that the terminus ante quem for the translation/compilation of the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch was the period when the transition from the Glagolitic to the Cyrillic script took place. Lexicographic examination of the Enochic thesaurus supports this argument; the analysis of the vocabulary of 'heavenly cosmography' referring to 'Garden of Eden' / 'Paradise' / 'Heaven', for instance, shows that there is terminological fluctuation in the narrative. Different renditions of certain celestial toponyms are attested throughout the Enochic corpus, with порода and пан being employed concurrently. However, while пан tends to stretch its temporal dimensions up to the modern dialects, the use of the form ποροδα (= παράδεισος), with its earliest attestations in Glagolitic texts from the 10th-11th centuries, passes its peak in the 13th century and gradually becomes obsolete.¹⁸

¹⁶ Cf. Reineriuiys Sacchoni, Summa de Catharis et Leonistis (published by Martène and Durand in the Thesaurus novus anecdotorium, 1773); see also the discussion in Sokolov [1910: 149-151] and Ivanov [1925: 66, footnote 1].

¹⁷ See the discussion below (footnote 146).

One further point. In Slavia Orthodoxa, the concept of 'Enoch's Ascension' is not confined to the apocryphal writings only. It is first attested in Codex Suprasliensis, one of the earliest Cyrillic texts composed in Bulgaria in the late 10th and early 11th centuries. The reference to 'Enoch's having been raised up by God' is found in the Menaion for the month of March, in the text used during the liturgical service on the Day of the Holy Martyr St Artemius of Thessaloniki;¹⁹ thus on Fol. 232 (pagina b, lines 9-10), the following prayer to God is found: 'Господи съпачи ма ты бо [. . .] възводи въздѣльника своего Еноха [...]' ('O God, save me, since [. . .] You were the One who elevated Your pious man Enoch [...]'). In the Septuagint, however, there is no stipulation suggesting any spatial dimension for Enoch's translatio; although there is a hint that he was 'taken up' (since it was God that he went to/with), in the canonical text it is not explicitly stated that he actually 'went up'. The intertextual clarification of this concept could have come either from apocryphal literature, or from ecclesiastical tradition (which, in fact, often drew heavily on apocryphal writings). One such source may have been the biblical exegete Saint Ephraem Syrus (Ephraem the Syrian). Translations of his heritage into Old Church Slavonic were made as early as the 10th century; thus a fragment of his *Paraenesis*²⁰ is found in the Rila Glagolitic Folia (composed in the 11th century Bulgaria). In the first of his Rhythms on the Nativity, for instance, he mentions Enoch as someone who 'mounted up in heaven to see Him'; and since references to Enoch's entrance into Paradise can be found in a number of the texts composed by Saint Ephraem Syrus, it can be argued that his patrimony was one of the sources of the raw material for 'the character of Enoch outside the Book of Enoch' (to paraphrase M. Stone's idea of 'Biblical characters outside the Bible'). Even Archbishop Gennadius of Novgorod (the first to compile Slavonic translations of Old Testament books at the end of the 15th century)

¹⁸ See the discussion below (footnote 118).

¹⁹ The Eastern Orthodox Church observes the memory of the Holy Martyr Saint Artemius of Thessaloniki on the 24th of March.

²⁰ See Goshev [1956]; Vaillant [1958; 279-286]; Lunt [1959: 16-37]; Bojkovsky [1984] and Kotseva [1992: 152-153].

refers to Enoch as to a truthful and venerable source.²¹ Furthermore, fragments of 2 Enoch were included in the Great Menaion Reader (Великия Минеи-Четъи) of the Metropolitan Macarius, the first edition of which was composed in 1541. Significantly, Enochic fragments were allocated to the end of the year, 31st of December.²²

An additional source for 'the character of Enoch outside the Book of Enoch' could have also been the apocryphal Testament of Abraham [13: 21-27],²³ the Gospel of Nicodemus [25],²⁴ or the erotapocritic tradition. Some versions of The Discussion Between the Three Saints indicate that Enoch was believed to have been placed on the Third Heaven (that is, in Paradise?), whereas the other six Old Testament Patriarchs were associated with the remaining 'Heavens'. Thus, according to one such source, СНТЬ (Seth) is on the First Heaven, on the Second is Азаръ (Azariah), on the Third — ЕНОВЬ (Enoch), on the Fourth — НОЕ (Noah), on the Fifth — Аврамъ (Abraham), on the Sixth — Исакъ (Isaac), and on the Seventh — Иаковъ (Jacob).²⁵ Furthermore there are apocryphal prayers against 'malevolent rain' in which 'the Holy Prophet Enoch' (along with Jeremiah, Daniel, John the Forerunner, and John the Theologian) is invoked as a protector of vineyards and fields, and intercessor on the behalf of the local Christian villages.²⁶

²¹ See the Epistle of the Archbishop Gennadius of Novgorod to the Archbishop Joasaph of Rostov; the text was first published by Popov [1880: 78-80]; see also the discussion in Sokolov [1910: 1, 118-119] and Thompson [1998: 651 f.].

²² Considering the fact that 2 Enoch was one of the most detailed sources of cosmogonic ideas, it is hardly surprising that it was associated calendrically with the end of the old and the beginning of the New Year; on the inclusion of fragments from Enoch in the Chronograph (and into the cosmogonic narratives in the Palaea), see Sokolov [1910: 2, 120, 161-162]. This detail will be analysed elsewhere.

²³ See the text in Tikhonravov [1863: 86]; see also the discussion in Sokolov's research notes [1910: 128-136].

²⁴ The apocryphal Gospel of Nicodemus (which, in fact, was not mentioned in the Slavonic Indices of Prohibited Books) enjoyed immense popularity in Slavia Orthodoxa, see A. Vaillant [1968] and A. de Santos Otero [1981].

²⁵ See Nachtigall [1902: 324 (Questions Nos 4 and 5)].

²⁶ See the text in Kačanovskii [1881: 157]. In some healing magic prayers, Enoch is called upon as someone who can cure any kind of suffering and disease [Iudin 1997: 71]. On the other hand, in some spells and incantations the evil demon itself may be called 'Enah' (Енах); see the data presented by Kliaus [1997: 351] and Iudin [1997: 263].

The fact that Enoch's name became part of apocryphal prayers and magical onomasticon shows the popularity of his image in Slavia Orthodoxa. Another reflection of the influence of 2 Enoch is the notion of the 'living saint' in the Balkans, which views visionaries or ones having near-death experiences as 'living saints',²⁷ or prophets, who are then specifically associated with Enoch.²⁸ The persistence of such traditions indicates a continuous and unbroken cognizance of the story of Enoch within the religious imagination of the region, a phenomenon which merits further anthropological investigation.

²⁷ See for instance the case of Bona Velinova [Бона Велинова] who was believed to be a prophet [пророчица] and a living saint [жива светица]; furthermore she was considered to be one of the most prominent visionaries in Bulgaria in the first half of the 20th century. The results of my anthropological field-research on the popular cult of Bona Velinova were deposited in 1989 in the Archives of the Institute of Folklore at the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences (Shelfmark АИФ–I No 72). Accounts of her visions (which can be regarded as vernacular counterparts of Enoch's translatio) appeared in a number of religious periodicals (such as Гласът на Ангелската тръба, Утеха, etc.), which were published by The Orthodox Society for Religious Revival of the Bulgarian People [Православно св. общество за духовна обнова на българския народ] (from 1922 to 1925), and subsequently (from 1925 to c. 1948) by its transformed offshoot, The Good Samaritan Society [Общество “Добрия Самарянин”].

²⁸ See the discussion in Badalanova [2008: 190-191].

2. Text witnesses of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch in Slavia Orthodoxa: classification and taxonomy of sources²⁹

The most exhaustive palaeographic assessment of MSS containing 2 Enoch remains that of the renowned Russian scholar A. I. Iatsimirskii, published in the turbulent 1921, four years after the Soviet Revolution. In his monumental Bibliographical Survey of South-Slavonic and Russian Apocryphal Literature: Catalogue of Monuments (Old Testament Apocrypha),³⁰ Iatsimirskii devotes a special chapter to the Enochic corpus. There he lists the following witnesses:

- i. MS № 3 /18 (fols. 626b-638b) from the Uvarov Collection, now in the State Historical Museum [ГИМ]. The MS is a 15th century Russian redaction copied from an earlier Bulgarian protograph.³¹
- ii. MS № 13.3.25 (fols. 93-125) from the Academy of Sciences Collection (St Petersburg), Bulgarian redaction, copied in the 16th century in Romania.³²
- iii. MS № 125 (fols. 308b-330) from the (then) Court Library Collection, Vienna (now Österreichische Nationalbibliothek);³³ Serbian redaction copied in the 16th-17th century from an earlier Russian text.³⁴

²⁹ For a survey of Slavonic MSS of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch the Just (2 Enoch), see Sokolov [1910], Iatsimirskii, [1921:81-8], Ivanov [1925: 165-166], Meshcherskii [1964: 93-94], Andersen [1983: 92], Pennington [1984: 326-327]. For text-editions of MSS, see Sokolov [1899; 1910]; Pypin [1862: 15-16]; Tikhonravov [1863: 19-23]; Porfir'ev [1877: 51-2]; Ivanov [1925: 167-180]. For translations of various recensions, see Morfill and Charles [1896]; Forbes and Charles [1913: 425-69]; Bonwetsch [1896; 1922]; Vaillant [1952]; Petkanova [1982: 49-63, 350-52]; Andersen [1983: 91-221]; Pennington [1984: 321-62]; de Santos Otero [1984: 147-202].

³⁰ See Iatsimirskii [1921: 81-8], but also Sokolov [1910: 10-122].

³¹ In his edition of the 16th-17th century Bulgarian recension of the text of 2 Enoch (MS № 321 from the Collection of the National Library in Belgrade), Sokolov provides parallel readings from this text-witness [1899: 1-80]. The full text appears in the posthumous publication of his research notes [1910: 111-130]; see also his comments on the history of the discovery of the MS and its contents [ibid.: 9, 33-44]. Sokolov designates the text as 'the intermediate recension' ['промежуточная редакция'], a definition disputed by Bonwetsch [1922] and Vaillant [1952] who prefer to classify it as a primary witness to the text of 'the shorter version'. This edition forms the basis of the French translation of the MS by A. Vaillant [1952] and the English translation of the text by A. Pennington [1984].

³² Excerpts published by Sokolov [1910: 47-53]; this edition forms the basis of the English translation of the text of MS J produced by F. Andersen [1983: 102-212].

³³ Used by Sokolov as a parallel variant in his edition of the shorter recension [1899: 83-107] (see MS vii below); see also Sokolov's research notes [1910: 74-77].

³⁴ See Meshcherskii [1964: 94], Sokolov [1910: 77].

iv. MS № 321 (fols. 269-232); until 1941 part of the Collection of the National Library in Belgrade.³⁵ The text is a 16th-17th century Bulgarian redaction;³⁶ see the translation below.

v. MS № 45.13.4 [Хронографический сборникъ] (fols. 357-366r.) from the Academy of Sciences Collection, copied in Russia the second half of the 16th century. It was discovered by V. Sreznevskii in June 1902 in Vologda during his palaeographic expedition. According to V. Sreznevskii, the text is a twin of Uvarov's MS № 3 /18 (fols. 626b-638b) ['двойникъ Уваровской'],³⁷ and betrays an earlier Bulgarian protograph [1903: 110].

vi. MS № 151/443 (fols. 1-25), Serbian redaction copied in the 16th century from an earlier Russian text;³⁸ until 1941 part of the Collection of the National Library in Belgrade.³⁹

vii. MS (fols. 9-34b) from the 17th century, part of the Barsov Collection.⁴⁰

viii. MS № 1828 (fols. 522-545) composed in the 17th century, Russian redaction; part of the Uvarov Collection.

ix. MS № 321 (fols. 1-25) from the Khludov Collection of the State Historical Museum [ГИМ, Собрание Хлудова],⁴¹ it is a South-Russian redaction composed in 1679 in Poltava. The text represents a 'poorly copied, full of scribal errors version of an earlier Moldavian-Bulgarian MS' which is 'rather close in its content

³⁵ Published by Sokolov [1889: 1-80] and used as the basic variant ['положень въ основу'] of the long recension; see also the discussion on the text in the posthumous publication of Sokolov's research notes [1910: 8, 10-32].

³⁶ See Sokolov [1899: 1-80; 1910: 10-32], Meshcherskii [1964: 93].

³⁷ See his 'Report to the Department of Russian Language and Literature at the Imperial Academy of Sciences regarding the expedition to the Olonetsk, Vologda and Perm regions (carried out in June 1902): list of acquired manuscripts' [1903: 109-111, 122-123]. This edition forms the basis of the English translation of the text of MS A produced by F. Andersen [1983: 102-212]. The text was published and translated into modern Russian (with accompanying commentary apparatus) by L. Navtanovich [2000: 204-241, 387-92].

³⁸ See Meshcherskii [1964: 93-94].

³⁹ First published by Novaković in Starine XVI (1884: 67-81), and later referred to by Sokolov as a witness to the shorter recension [1899: 83-107]; it is further used as the basic text for the translation (of the shorter recension of 2 Enoch) into English (by Morfill and Charles, and later by Forbes and Charles) and into German (by Bonwetsch).

⁴⁰ Published by Sokolov [1899: 83-107] who used it as the basic variant of the 'short recension' ['сокращенная редакция']; see also Sokolov's commentaries on the content of the MS in Sokolov-Speranskii II [1910: 54-69].

⁴¹ First published by A. Popov in 1880 in Vol. 3 of the Transactions of the Historical and Archaeological Society of the University of Moscow [1880: 67, 75-83, 89-139]; see also the commentaries in Sokolov [1910: 32-33] and Meshcherskii [1964: 93]. Popov's edition was used as a primary witness to the text of the longer recension in the translation of 2 Enoch into English (by Morfill and Charles, and later by Forbes and Charles) and into German (by Bonwetsch).

to MS № 13.3.25 (fols. 93-125) from the Academy of Sciences Collection (St Petersburg)' ⁴²

x. MS (fols. 87-98b) composed in 1701; part of the Barsov Collection. ⁴³

xi. MS № 3092 (fols. 93-99) dated to the 18th century; at the time when Iatsimirskii produced his Bibliographical Survey, the MS was part of the Collection of the Society of Lovers of Ancient Literature Collection [Общество любителей древней письменности].

Iatsimirskii further lists another 26 fragmentary witnesses to 2 Enoch ('извлеченія из памятника'), with the most significant among them being the following MSS: ⁴⁴

i. The 14 th century Merilo Pravednoe [Мерило Праведное] from MS № 15 (fols. 36-38) the Troitsa-Sergievskiaia Lavra Collection; ⁴⁵

ii. MS № 202 [489] (fols. 335-337r) from the Holy Synod Library Collection (Moscow), dated to the beginning of the 15th century; ⁴⁶

iii. The 15th century Kormchaia [Кормчая] from MS № 556 (fols. 598b-602b) from the Uvarov Collection;

iv. Merilo Pravednoe [Мерило Праведное] and Kormchaia [Кормчая] from the 15th century from MS № 187 (fols. 34-37) from the Holy Synod Library Collection (Moscow);

v. Kormchaia [Кормчая] from the 15th-16th century from MS № 414 (fols. 109-460) from the Theological Academy of Kazan Library Collection;

vi. MS № 253 (fols. 543-545) from the Holy Synod Library Collection (Moscow), dated to the beginning of the 17th century; ⁴⁷

⁴² See Meshcherskii [1964: 93]: 'Этот список был переписан в Полтаве в 1679г., он представляет собою очень дурную и полную ошибок копию более древней молдавско-болгарской рукописи, текст которой очень близок к предшествующей' (i.e. 'рукопись бывшей коллекции А. И. Яцимирского, ныне хранящаяся в Библиотеке Академии наук СССР, БАН № 13.3.25').

⁴³ Published by Sokolov [1910: 131-142] as a variant of the 'short recension' ['список сокращенной редакции'], and designated by him as MS Б ¹; see also the commentaries in his research notes [1910: 69-72].

⁴⁴ See Iatsimirskii [1921: 85-88], based on Sokolov [1910: 77-105].

⁴⁵ Published by Tikhonravov [1863: 20-23]; see the analysis in Sokolov [1910: 106-118]. The English translation of the text of the MS is produced by F. Andersen [1983: 216-221]; see also the discussion there [ibid.: 215].

⁴⁶ See Sokolov [1910: 92-93].

vii. MS № 3058 (fols. 391-393) from the Rumiantsov Museum, dated to the 18th century;⁴⁸

viii. MS № 578/147 (fols. 164-168) from the Rumiantsov Museum, dated to the 16th century;⁴⁹

ix. MS № 793 (fols. 401-402) from the Troitsa-Sergievskaja Lavra Collection, dated to the 16th century.⁵⁰

In the light of the analysis of the text-witnesses to 2 Enoch in Slavia Orthodoxa, the following can be suggested:

1) The Slavonic protograph was translated most probably from a Greek Vorlage fostered by Septuagint-related tradition, but not directly from a Hebrew (or Aramaic) protograph.⁵¹ One detail (among many others) still bearing 'the recognizable stamp of Akylas' (to paraphrase Nicholas de Lange [2010: 53]) and suggesting a distinct awareness of the Septuagint pattern can be seen in the age of Enoch when he fathers Methuselah. This detail is often omitted in shorter recensions, but when it is included, Enoch's age is given as 165 years, as in Septuagint, rather than the 65 years in the Masoretic text and Vulgate.⁵² This suggests an intertextual connection between 2 Enoch and the Septuagint-anchored tradition, rather than with

⁴⁷ Published by Sokolov [1910: 155-157]; see also his research notes [1910: 89-92].

⁴⁸ Published by Sokolov [1910: 145-147]; see also the discussion in his research notes [1910: 77-79].

⁴⁹ Published by Sokolov [1910: 153-155]; see also his research notes [84-89].

⁵⁰ Published by Sokolov [1910: 161-162] and Tikhonravov [1863: 19-20; 26-28].

⁵¹ See in this connection the discussion in the recently published seminal article by Nicholas de Lange, who maintains that 'Byzantine Jews used Greek Bible translations' [2010: 39], and that 'Akylas's translation was still being read publicly in the sixth century and maybe much later' [ibid. 46]. He further argues, 'on the basis of evidence of the manuscripts that Byzantine Jewish men, from an early age, learned to read the Hebrew Bible not only through the medium of the Greek language [. . .] but with the help of translations into Greek that were largely based on the second-century CE translations of Akylas, with its totally distinctive Greek vocabulary and approach to translation [ibid. 53].

⁵² On the shifting chronology of Enoch's life in the Old Greek Translation of The Book of Genesis and the Hebrew text, with special emphasis on Pseudo-Philo's Liber Antiquitatum Biblicarum also following the Septuagint and thus 'having Enoch live 165 years before he begets children instead of 65 years as in the Masoretic text', see Larson [2005: 86-87].

the Hebrew Bible,⁵³ which argues against Meshcherskii's idea that 2 Enoch could have originated from a Hebrew protograph.⁵⁴

2) The terminus ante quem for the translation/compilation of the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch was the period of transition from the Glagolitic to the Cyrillic script,⁵⁵ but not later than 1170.⁵⁶

3) The Slavonic protograph was written in Glagolitic script.

4) As for the spatial dimension of this process, linguistic data and socio-cultural evidence point towards Bulgarian intellectual landscape as the place of origin of the earliest translation(s)/compilation(s) of 2 Enoch.⁵⁷

5) The question of whether the earliest Slavonic translation represented the shorter or the longer recension still remains open.⁵⁸ Still, on the basis of the cross-textual analysis of the texts provided by Sokolov it can be argued that the longer recension preceded the shorter one.⁵⁹ I share this opinion.

6) Some intriguing details related to the description of solar movements found in 2 Enoch (see Chapter Six below) betray astronomic theory and calendrical knowledge kindred to that found in the Dead Sea Scrolls. Thus, 2 Enoch describes the length of the time spent by the Sun passing through the six solar gates 'according to the appointment of the seasons and according to the phases of the moon, for the ⁵³ Pennington also suggests that 2 Enoch was translated from a Greek protograph: 'there are a number of linguistic pointers in this direction; and the Septuagint, rather than the Hebrew, seems to have been the author's Bible' [1984: 324-325]; but she also points out that 'this by itself tells us very little' about the scribe himself [ibid.].

⁵⁴ Meshcherskii further argues that: 1) the Slavonic protograph was a direct translation from Hebrew; 2) this translation represented the shorter recension of the apocryphon, on the basis of which the longer recension eventually emerged; 3) the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch was translated in medieval Russia [1964: 93-102].

⁵⁵ See the discussion in Vaillant [1952: xiii-xxiv].

⁵⁶ See above, footnote 16.

⁵⁷ See Morfill and Charles [1896], Bonwetsch [1896, 1922], Sokolov [1899, 1910], Ivanov [1925], Vaillant [1952].

⁵⁸ For a brief survey of the two opposite scholarly opinions on this matter, see Andersen [1983:93] and Pennington [1984: 322-323].

⁵⁹ See Sokolov [1899, 1910]. Following Vaillant, Pennington argues that the longer recension 'in its pristine form' is found only in the Belgrade MS 321 (i.e. Sokolov's primary witness to the text); Andersen's translation of MS J of '2 (Slavonic Apocalypse) of Enoch brings new data into the discussion, but with the original text still remaining unpublished (although fragments are found in Sokolov's posthumous papers).

entire year, and according to the number of the horologe, day and night'. The compiler/author of the text narrates that the Sun goes through the first gate for 6 weeks, through the second — for 5 weeks, through the third — for 5 weeks, through the fourth — for 5 weeks, through the fifth — for 5 weeks, and through the sixth — for 6 weeks; after that the Sun returns to the fifth gate for 5 weeks, then spends once more 5 weeks at the fourth gate, to be followed by another 5 weeks at the third gate, and again 5 weeks at the second gate, after which it returns to the first gate, in order to re-start the new round of its never-ending celestial journey.

Therefore the number of weeks spent by the Sun during one full cycle of its journey through all the solar gates for the entire year (i.e. its path from gate one to gate two, three, four, five and six and then back to five, four, three, two and one) is 52. This detail, in turn, unequivocally implies that, along with the rather late (Julian) '365¼ day' calendar tradition, in 2 Enoch there survive 'fossilised' vestiges of an alternative, much earlier (Babylonian) calendar tradition, according to which the length of the 'ideal' year equals 364 days; the same pattern of the 364-day calendar is later attested in the Qumran scrolls, the Book of Jubilees and the Astronomical Book in 1 Enoch [Ben Dov 2008: 59ff.]. This detail will be discussed elsewhere.

3. The Book of the Secrets of Enoch the Just and the religious art and iconography of Slavia Orthodoxa

Neither Enochic iconography nor the visual narrative of his ascent to the Seventh Heaven has attracted the attention of art historians. In fact, the Prophet Enoch is often depicted, together with some other Old Testament figures (Adam, Noah, David, Solomon, Elijah, etc.) in the open galleries (narthex) of many churches in Slavia orthodoxa, such as the 19th century Church of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary in the city of Blagoevgrad, Southern Bulgaria [Fig. 1] and the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary [Fig. 2].

Fig. 1

Fig. 2

In some instances, Enoch's image (together with that of Solomon) can be found on the iconostasis itself, on the Altar Gates, above the Annunciation scene (in which case he functions as a substitute for either David⁶⁰ or Isaiah⁶¹). One such example comes from the 18th century iconostasis from the village of Asparukhovo, North-Western Bulgaria, where the image of Enoch is depicted above that of the Virgin Mary; he is holding a scroll in his left hand and a sceptre in the right hand.⁶² [Figs 3 and 4].

⁶⁰ The image of David is one of iconographic loci communes in the artistic thesaurus of the Annunciation visual representations; it stipulates Jesus' lineage from Jesse (the father of David).

⁶¹ Cf. The Book of Isaiah: 'Behold, a young woman shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel' [7:14], and 'There shall come forth a shoot from the stump of Jesse' [11:1]. In this way the significance of Enoch's testimony is implicitly equated to that of Isaiah's prophesy.

Fig. 3

⁶² His iconographic attributes, the scroll and the sceptre, parallel those of Isaiah.

Fig. 4

This type of iconography indicates that Enoch was considered by the local icon-painters to be one of the Old Testament Prophets heralding the birth of Christ, the New Adam. Having described the creation of the First Adam in the written testimony of his ascension to Heaven, he is now envisaged, via the language of visual narrative, as someone who predicts and witnesses the Immaculate Conception of Christ. In this way Enoch functions as a prominent prophetic figure in apocryphal literature and sacred art of Slavia Orthodoxa, harnessing both the Old and the New Testament narratives about the creation of 'Primordial Adam' and 'Christ the New Adam'. On the other hand, Enoch can be depicted, together with Elijah, on medieval Slavonic miniatures, frescos and icons showing the Last Judgment and/or Apocalypse.⁶³ This iconographic pattern is reinforced by the popular belief that the end of the world will take place when both Enoch and Elijah descend to earth and taste death. The roots of this belief are attested not only in the canonical Old Testament Book of Malachi [5:4], but also in the apocryphal Revelation of Pseudo-Methodius of Pathara,⁶⁴ which was translated from Greek into Old Church Slavonic no latter than 11th century.⁶⁵ In this way the image of Enoch bounds both Creation and Apocalypse, the beginnings of the Universe and its end, thus becoming a powerful icon of Divine Economy. One more point should be made in this connection. Further exploration into the realm of the iconography of sacred art of Slavia orthodoxa will clarify non-verbal dimensions of the reception of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch in the Byzantine Commonwealth, and will facilitate more profound understanding of the impact which this apocryphon had upon the cultural milieu of medieval Europe. While the surviving MSS reveal the perception and interpretation of 2 Enoch by learned men, its visual counterparts show how the apocryphon was 'read' and construed by icon-painters and illiterate believers of Pax Slavia Christiana. Because, as St. Gregory the Great once argued, what writing presents to readers, this a picture presents to the unlearned who behold, since in it even the ignorant see what they ought to follow; in it the ⁶³ For visual representations of this motif, see the miniatures from the 19th century illuminated MS № 1791 (Apocalypse), Fol. 107 r and Fol. 111 r; the latter is accompanied by the following inscription: 'Како уѣнена будутъ Нїліа и Ієнохъ Антхрїстомъ и воскреснѣта пакн' (How Elijah and Enoch will be killed by the Antichrist and how they will resurrect again'). The MS is kept in the Lomonosov State University Library, Moscow.

⁶⁴ See Tikhonravov, Vol. 2 [1863: 213-281] and Lavrov [1899: 6-22; 23-39].

⁶⁵ Visual renditions of this theme in Slavia Orthodoxa parallel closely another apocryphal text, the Apocalypse of Elijah, which is extant in Coptic (Akhmimic and Sahidic) and Greek fragments; there exists also a Jewish Apocalypse of Elijah. The Coptic witnesses are dated to the late 4th or early 5th century, translated from a Greek protograph composed in the 3rd century or even earlier [Kuhn 1984: 757]. The latter must have been composed in the 1st cent. BC 'by a Jew with Essene learnings, who lived in Egypt' [ibid.: 758-759]; as for the Christian elements, there is no certainty whether they were 'an original part of the apocalypse or were superimposed by a Christian editor who wrote and expanded a Jewish source' [ibid.]. The parallel interpretation of the concept of Enoch's death heralding the end of the world in religious art of Slavia Orthodoxa and Coptic apocrypha will be analysed elsewhere.

illiterate read. Hence, and chiefly to the nations,⁶⁶ a picture is instead of reading.⁶⁷

The same was indubitably true for the medieval Pax Slavia Christiana, when the translation of the 2 Enoch took place. The homo legens of Slavia Orthodoxa was not necessarily 'learned,' since s/he could 'read in icons'; 'reading' was not envisaged as an act based upon the knowledge of letters exclusively. Without being familiar with the alphabet, believers were able to 'read' Scriptures by gazing at the icons. Moreover, icons were in fact perceived as Scriptures depicted. If for 'men of letters' the process of reading required knowledge of letters as such, for those gazing at icons this was obviously not the case; pictures 'painted in venerable places' were likened to silent storytellers revealing the Word of God to all those 'ignorant of letters'. Furthermore 'the story of the picture' was regarded as a sacred text laid open on the walls of the Church, thus inviting the illiterate to read in it. Plainly, icons were letters enlightening the unlettered who were thus able to learn 'through the story of a picture'. Accordingly, the icon was thought as a written, i.e., verbal text composed in an ideographic manner.

Along with its iconographic renditions, the written accounts of 2 Enoch must have had a considerable effect on the rise, formation and development of indigenous apocryphal literature as well. There is strong evidence suggesting that the cosmogonic narrative of The Sea of Tiberias was profoundly influenced by the 2 Enoch.⁶⁸ Furthermore recent anthropological research in the Balkans and elsewhere in Eastern Europe provides evidence that 2 Enoch had its oral, folklore counterparts which were transmitted by word of mouth. The apocryphon was thus transformed into a cluster of vernacular legends and songs about the origins of the universe and the begetting of light, about the celestial bodies and the rules shaping their movements, about the mystical appearance of incorporeal heavenly hosts, about the foundation of heaven and the divine act of setting the eternal boundary between the earth and the sea, etc. These oral cosmogonic narratives and songs were considered to have originated from a 'holy text' which was believed to have been put in writing as a testimony by the Prophet Enoch himself, at the age of 365 years, when he was received on the Seventh ⁶⁶ I.e. 'to the unlearned'.

⁶⁷ Cf. Dialogues of Saint Gregory, Book 11, Epistle 13.

⁶⁸ This intertextuality is analysed in my forthcoming article 'The Sea of Tiberias: between oral tradition and apocryphal literature' [2011].

Heaven by God, so that he 'might be an eyewitness of the life above.' It was also in the Seventh Heaven that the Prophet Enoch, who was set by God 'nearer than Gabriel,' learned the mystery of the creation of man. Thus Enoch's testimony, as revealed in the extant Church Slavonic copies of his Book, has remained for centuries one of the best sources of esoteric knowledge. Scribes and icon-painters, illiterate singers and storytellers considered this wisdom to have been mystically acquired before the face of God, and delivered to them in a form of a written text under his command. Enoch captivated the imagination of generations of believers, enjoying respect and popularity, and exercising a long-lasting influential impact upon the cultural heritage of Slavia Orthodoxa. Being an offshoot of the manifold proto-biblical textual corpus which preceded the formation of the canonical Scriptures, 2 Enoch developed as an independent corpus of indigenous oral and visual epic narratives⁶⁹ which survived up until the present day.

⁶⁹ The vernacular folklore interpretation of 2 Enoch will be discussed elsewhere.

4. The Book of the Holy Secrets of Enoch: a contribution towards a new translation of 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch

Below follows an extract from the 16th-17th century Bulgarian redaction of The Books of the Holy Secrets of Enoch [КНИГѢ СЃНѢ ТАИНАѢ ЕНУХОУ^а] from MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade (fol. 269 – 323).⁷⁰ The MS was bequeathed by the Bulgarian intellectual Iordan Khadzhi Konstantinov-Dzhinot [Йордан Хаджи-Константинов Джинот] (1818-1882).⁷¹ The Russian scholar Matvei Sokolov first drew special attention to this account in 1886 and published it thirteen years later as the basic (representative) text-witness for his edition of the longer recension ['пространная редакция'] of 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch.⁷² Along with the Latin translation of the apocryphon, Sokolov provided an extensive textual apparatus reflecting two other supplementary witnesses. The first one is the 15th century account (Russian redaction) from MS No 3 [18] (fol. 626-638) from the Collection of Count Uvarov (currently kept in the archives of the State Historical Museum, Moscow).⁷³ The text is entitled From the Concealed Books of the Ascension of the Righteous Enoch [О ПОТАЕННЫ^х КНИГѢ О ВЪСХИЩЕНИИ ЕНУХОВѢ ПРАВЕ ДНАГО]. Sokolov designates it as MS U [Y],⁷⁴ after the name of the owner. The second text-witness, The Book of the Secrets of Enoch, the Son of Ared [КНИГА О ТАИНА^х ЕНУХОВИХѢ СНА АРЕДОВА] represents a South-Russian redaction of the apocryphon composed/copied in 1679 in the city of Poltava.⁷⁵ The MS was part of A. I. Khludov's Collection (also in the archives of the State Historical Museum, Moscow). Since it

⁷⁰ Cf. M. Sokolov [1899: 1-80; 1910: 8-32]; see also Morfill and Charles [1896: xiii-xiv], Iatsimirskii [1921: 83 (список No 4)], Ivanov [1925: 165-191], Vaillant [1952: iii-iv, vii, 86-119].

⁷¹ See Sokolov [1910: 10] and Ivanov [1925: 165].

⁷² Hence Bonwetsch marked it as MS S (after the name of Sokolov); I follow Bonwetsch's taxonomy. In Vaillant, Pennington and Andersen this MS is designated, however, as R; see F. I. Andersen's 'Introduction to 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch' in Vol. 1 of Charlesworth's Old Testament Pseudepigrapha [1983: 92] and A. Pennington's 'Introduction' to her translation of 2 Enoch in The Apocryphal Old Testament [Sparks 1984: 321-322].

⁷³ See Iatsimirskii [1921: 82 (список No 1)].

⁷⁴ Note that in F. I. Andersen's 'Introduction to 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch' the Cyrillic character Y is erroneously rendered as Ч; see Andersen [1983: 92].

⁷⁵ Cf. Iatsimirskii [1921: 84-85 (список No 9)].

was first published (in 1880) by A. Popov,⁷⁶ the account was subsequently marked (by Sokolov, Bonwetsch, Vaillant, Pennington and Andersen) as MS P [II]. This MS was first used by Charles and Morfill as the primary text-witness (designated by them as MS A) for the first English translation of the Slavonic Enoch (published in Oxford in 1896,⁷⁷ three years before the publication of Sokolov's edition); in the same year, 1896, Popov's edition was likewise used by G. N. Bonwetsch as the basis for the German translation of the longer recension of the apocryphon.⁷⁸ Sokolov, however, critically assessed the choice of MS P [II] as the main text-witness to the 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch and argued against it.⁷⁹ According to him, the text from MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade is generally superior to the account from Poltava not only because it is older, but also because it is much more complete, less corrupt and better preserved; hence the decision to put it as the prime witness for his edition. Sokolov's arguments were later shared by Andersen, who defined the MS used by Morfill and Charles as an 'eclectic text'; hence his choice of the 16th century Bulgarian redaction of 2 (Slavonic Apocalypse of) Enoch from the MS No 13.3.25 from the Library of the Academy of Sciences in St Petersburg as the prime text-witness for his translation.⁸⁰ In fact, excerpts of this account were previously

⁷⁶ See Popov's 'Bibliograficheskie materialy' (Part 4:) [1880: 89-139].

⁷⁷ The same edition/translation was revised by N. Forbes for Charles's Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament [1913: 425-469].

⁷⁸ See G. N. Bonwetsch, Das slavische Henochbuch [1896] and Die Bücher der Geheimnisse Henochs: Das sogenannte slavische Henochbuch [1922].

⁷⁹ Nine years after W. R. Morfill and R. H. Charles published the first English translation of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch, Sokolov made the following stern statement:

Переводчикомъ славянскихъ текстовъ на англійскій языкъ для д-ра Чарльса явился известный англійскій славистъ В.Р. Морфиль, которому нами доставлен былъ славянскій текстъ пространной редакціи книги Еноха, остановленный по открытыми нами рукописямъ, болѣе древнымъ и исправнымъ, чѣмъ текстъ Попова, принятый также во вниманіе. Къ сожалѣнію, г. Морфиль положилъ въ основу своего изданія текстъ Попова.

For further details see the discussion in his article 'Feniks v apokrifakh of Enokhe i Varukhe' [Sokolov 1905: 396].

⁸⁰ See Andersen [1983: 97-98]; in view of the fact that the former owner of the MS was A. I. Iatsimirskii [Яцимирскій], and the Cyrillic character Я was transliterated as Ja, this copy was designated by Bonwetsch, Vaillant and Andersen as MS J. In Ivanov's edition the same MS is marked with the letter Я [Ivanov 1925: 167]. Incidentally, when A. I. Iatsimirskii brought the MS in August 1895 from Romania to Russia, he was a student of Sokolov. Unfortunately, at the time when the MS reached Sokolov, he had already prepared his edition of The Books of the Holy Secrets of Enoch published by Ivanov in 1925, in his Books and Legends of the Bogomils, as variant readings to his edition of the 16th-17th century Bulgarian redaction of The Books of the Holy Secrets of Enoch [КНИГѢ СѢН^х ТАИНЫ ЕНОХО^в] from MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade. According to Sokolov,⁸¹ the MS was copied by a certain 'Monk Sava' [Іеромонах Сава] (var. Savl [Савль])⁸² the encrypted version of whose name appears on fol. 177 (in the third paragraph).⁸³ I present below an English translation of chapters I-XII and XVIII-XXII of Sokolov's edition of Monk Sava/Savl MS,⁸⁴ since the actual MS perished during the Second World War (in 1941, in a fire caused by bombardment, along with the entire collection of 1424 Cyrillic manuscripts kept at that time in the archives of the National Library of Belgrade).⁸⁵ Also taken into consideration is Ivanov's edition of the same recension,⁸⁶ in which he includes parallel readings from three additional text-witnesses:

1) the 16th century account (Bulgarian redaction) from MS No 13.3.25 (fol. 93-125) from the Library of the Academy of Sciences in Saint Petersburg (= MS J [Я] in Bonwetsch, Vaillant, Andersen).

[КНИГѢ СѢН^х ТАИНЫ ЕНОХО^в] on the basis of MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade, which is why he could not include Iatsimirskii's version in his commentaries:

Наконецъ, уже по отпечатаніи текстовъ одинъ изъ нашихъ слушателей, студентъ А. И. Яцимирскій въ августъ 1895 года доставилъ намъ вывезенную имъ изъ Румыніи рукопись, въ которой оказался списокъ Книги Еноха полной редакціи. Рукопись писана в Румыніи, болгарскимъ правописаніемъ и должна занять важное мѣсто в ряду другихъ списковъ книги Еноха. [Sokolov 1910: 9]

Unfortunately, Sokolov's research project on Slavonic Enoch was terminated by his premature death; he passed away on 17.6.1906, at the age of 51. The posthumous publication of his research notes by M. Speranskii brought to light some impressive preliminary results of this ambitious scholarly undertaking. Unfortunately, the 16th century MS J bequeathed by Iatsimirskii more than 100 years ago (=MS No 13.3.25 in the Library of the Academy of Sciences in St Petersburg) still remains unpublished. Andersen provided an English translation of the text with commentaries in 1983, which in itself is an important contribution to the study of the scribal tradition of the period. Nevertheless, MS J awaits proper philological editing, with all variants from other MSS being noted.

⁸¹ Sokolov's reading of the name is based on some earlier studies on medieval Slavonic cryptography [1910: 16-17].

⁸² The latter ('Savl') can also be interpreted as 'Pavel' (i.e. Paul).

⁸³ In fact, it was scribe's signature ['подпись писца'].

⁸⁴ This includes an improved version of my previous translation of the fragment about the creation of Adam previously published in 'The Bible in the making' [Badalanova 2008: 231-235].

⁸⁵ See Meshcherskii [1964: 93].

⁸⁶ See Ivanov [1925: 167-180].

2) the 1679 account (South-Russian redaction) from the Poltava MS, with its first edition being that of A. N. Popov (= MS P [III] in Sokolov, Bonwetsch, Vaillant, Pennington, Andersen).

3) the 15th century account (Russian redaction) from MS No 3 [18] (fol. 626-638) from the Collection of Count Uvarov [ѿ ПОТАЕНН ЫХ КНИГЪ ѿ ВЪСХИЩЕННН ЕНОХОВЪ ПРАВЕДНАГО] (=MS U [Y] in Sokolov, Bonwetsch, Vaillant, Pennington, Andersen).

To the best of my knowledge, the 16th-17th century Bulgarian redaction of The Books of the Holy Secrets of Enoch [КНИГѢ СѢН^х ТАИ^хНЬ ЕНОХО^в] from MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade (fol. 269 – 323) [our MS S] was never translated into English, and the current publication is the first attempt in this direction.⁸⁷ The commentaries accompanying the translation pay special attention to some intricate details in the original Slavonic text of 2 Enoch, which previous scholarship has failed to grasp. These include the interpretation of the name of the angel whom Enoch encounters on the Seventh/Tenth Heaven, i.e. Vrevoil [Врѣвоилъ / Врѣвоилъ]; the etymology of the demonic appellation 'Bēs' [вѣсь] (applied to the name of Satanael) [Дѣво^а ѣ^а долѣшнѣ^х мѣсть вжде^т вѣсь]; the opaque variation of the numbers of heavens (seven or ten); and corrupt astronomical/calendrical computations.⁸⁸ Furthermore, an attempt is made to solve the puzzle of some expressions hitherto considered obscure, such as КНИГѢ НЪЩАЩЕННЬ НЪМУРНѢ^м [var. НЪЩОЩЕННЪ НЪМОУРЕННЕМЪ] ('exquisite books fragrant/anointed with myrrh'); ЖИВОТГРѢМѢНІЕ ('Zodiac signs'); ВЕРНЖНН БЛАДОМН ВНСАЩЕ ('sinners hanging on chains'), etc.

As Jürgen Renn astutely comments about early medieval translations of European science, 'almost every work was translated more than once by different authors before a proper understanding of the content could be reached' [Renn 2011: 165]. The same can be said about the process of translating 2 Enoch, one of the major records of both ancient science and religion.

⁸⁷ Fragments of the MS, however, were translated into French (with extensive commentary apparatus) by A. Vaillant [1952: 86-119].

⁸⁸ For general discussion of astronomical discourse in Enochic literature, see Bergsma [2009: 36-51] and Ben-Dov [2009: 276-293].

The text below follows the following conventions:

- [] mark inserts from the original Slavonic text (MS No. 321 from the National Library in Belgrade = Sokolov's A, Bonwetsch's S).
- < > mark reconstruction of (missing and corrupt) passages on the basis of the other complementary text-witnesses (MSS J, U and P), or else indicate insertions of parallel (supplementary) renditions from MSS J, U and P;
- { } indicate conjectural additions in the English translation.

A PROLOGUE

Books⁸⁹ of the holy secrets of Enoch [КНИГН⁹⁰ СѢН^x ТАИНЫ ЕНОХО^b], a wise man [мѣжа мѣдра] and great scribe [вѣлика хѣдожнѣка],⁹¹ whom the Lord received and loved, {allowing him} to see life in heaven above [вѣшнаѣ жѣтїе], and the most wise [прѣмѣдраго], and great [вѣликаго], and inconceivable [недомыслимаго], and unchangeable kingdom [непрѣмѣннаго црѣтва] of the all-mighty God [бѣ вѣседрѣжнѣтелѣ], as well as the most-wondrous [прѣднѣвнаго], glorious [славнаго], luminous [свѣтлаго], many-eyed sentinels⁹² [многосѣунѣтаго стоанїа] of God's servants [слоугѣ гнѣ], and the immovable [неподви(жнмаго)] <Throne of God [прѣтла гнѣ], and His minions [степени] and their manifestation [сѣбѣявленїе]>,⁹³ the incorporeal hosts [воинѣ бесплѣтнѣ] and the ineffable

⁸⁹ Here the noun КНИГН can also be translated as 'Scriptures', 'Epistle', 'Testament'.

⁹⁰ In Old Church Slavonic the noun КЪНИГѢ is pluralia tantum; see Tseitlin et al. [1999: [1994: 300-301].

⁹¹ In other versions, (e.g. the 15th century MS U) the set phrase вѣлика хѣдожнѣка is replaced by кнѣжнѣка вѣликаго; see Sokolov [1910: 8] and Vaillant [1952: 2]. Then again, the Poltava MS of 1679 (MS P) describes Enoch as вѣликохѣдожнѣкѣ [Popov 1880: 89]. For the semantic coverage of the masculine noun хѣдожнѣкѣ (nomina agentis conventionally used to render the Greek τεχνίτης, 'creator', 'artist', 'artisan', 'scribe', 'master'), the neuter noun хѣдожѣство/хѣдожѣство (as equivalent of the abstract nouns ἐπιστήμη, τέχνη, denoting 'art', 'craft', 'knowledge', 'wisdom', 'technique', 'skill'), and the adjective хѣдожнѣнѣ / хѣдожнѣнѣ (meaning 'creative', 'artistic', 'decorative', 'skillful', 'wise') in Old Church Slavonic, see Sreznevskii [1903: 1415-1416] and Tseitlin et al. [1999: 769].

⁹² Lit. 'standing'; the noun СТОАНІЕ / СТОАНІЕ is used to convey the Greek στάσις, παράστασις; see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 626]; the form παράστασις functions a loanword in some modern Slavonic languages (e.g. Bulgarian and Russian парастас); semantically related to the feminine noun панихида (var. попихида / понахида = παννυχίς, παννυχίδες) □ which means both 'vigiliae pernoctationum' and 'vigiliae defunctorum' □ the noun парастас is used to denote 'service for the dead', 'prayer for the dead', 'office for the dead', 'ritual feast for the dead'; see in this connection Sreznevskii [1895: 874] and Gero [1901: 13].

⁹³ The fragment is missing from MS R; it is added by Sokolov on the basis of MS P; see Sokolov [1899: 1]. Ivanov's later edition of the MS takes into consideration the parallel passage from the 16th century account (also Bulgarian redaction) from MS J [Я]; see Ivanov [1925: 167].

composition [несказжаемаго сложенїа] of the great multitude of elements [многѡ мнѣства стѹхїи] and various visions [разлнѹнаа видѣнїа], and the ineffable singing [ненсповѣднмаа пѣнїе] of the host of Cherubim [хероувимскыѡ вон], so that he might witness⁹⁴ all this infinite universe [свѣта безѡ мѣрна самовидецѡ быти].⁹⁵

Chapter One

At that time — said Enoch — when I completed 165 years [егда напльни ми са рѣе лѣтѡ], I begat my son Mathusala⁹⁶ [родихъ сѣа своѣго Маѡусала]. After that I lived another 200 years [по се^м жн^х ѿ лѣтѡ],⁹⁷ so all together, the years of my life were 365.⁹⁸ In the first month [прѣвыи мѣцѡ], on a special day [въ нароуи^т днѡ] of the first month, which was the first day {of that month} [прѣваго мѣца въ ѡ днѡ], I, Enoch, was alone at home and resting on my bed, sleeping. While sleeping, a great sadness entered my heart and I said, 'my eyes are crying <in my sleep; and {since it was all happening in a dream} I could not understand what this sadness was'⁹⁹ {and I wondered}, what will happen to me?' Then two huge men [два моужа прѣвелика ⁹⁴ Lit. 'so that he might be an (eye-)witness' [самовидецѡ]; see the discussion below.

⁹⁵ As in other medieval Slavonic texts, there is a certain amount of ambiguity in this account, since the word used to denote 'world' / 'universe' (свѣтъ) is a homonym not only of the word for 'light' (свѣтъ), but also of the word for 'holy' / 'divine' (свѣтъ/свѣтъ/свѣтъ); see Sreznevskii [1903: 295-302] and Dal' [1882: 156-59], as well as Andersen [1983: 120, footnote 11 d].

⁹⁶ The name has different renderings in the manuscript, but tends to follow the form found in the Septuagint (i.e. Mathusala), which is not identical with the readings in the Hebrew (Masoretic) text and in the Vulgate. As for Meshcherskii's argument (in favour of the Masoretic pattern reflected in the Slavonic transliteration of the name), it is based on incorrect data [1964: 106].

⁹⁷ There is a discrepancy between the version of Genesis 5: 21-24 according to the Septuagint, and that found in the Hebrew (Masoretic) text and the Vulgate. The Septuagint gives Enoch's age as 165 when he fathers Methusaleh, whereas in both the Hebrew (Masoretic) text and in the Vulgate he is 100 years younger, i.e. he is 65. The account in 2 Enoch appears to have followed the Septuagint:

21. And Enoch lived an hundred and sixty and five years, and begat Mathusala. 22. And Enoch was well-pleasing to God after his begetting Mathusala, two hundred years, and he begot sons and daughters. 23. And all the days of Enoch were three hundred and sixty and five years. 24. And Enoch was well-pleasing to God, and was not found, because God translated him.

Then again, according to the Hebrew (Masoretic) text and the Vulgate, after the birth of Methusaleh, 'Enoch walked with God for three hundred years, and had other sons and daughters,' etc., whereas in the Septuagint, as well as in 2 Enoch, the number of days is two hundred.

⁹⁸ R. Borger [1974: 185] interprets this detail as an allusion to the solar calendar and associates Enoch's ascension and heavenly visions with the Mesopotamian tradition of the Sumerian sage Enmeduranki, who was the seventh antediluvian king (like Enoch being the seventh generation after Adam); both Enmeduranki and Enoch were given instructions in heaven about how to perform ritual sacrifices correctly, the knowledge of which they then conveyed to their contemporaries, before the Flood. Borger argues in this way for a Babylonian precursor to the Enoch narrative.

⁹⁹ Insert from MS P; see Sokolov [1899: 2, footnote 16].

зѣло] appeared to me, the likes of which I have never seen before on earth. Their faces were shining like the sun [бѣше лице єю ꙗко сѣнце сѣвтеце са], their eyes were like burning candles [ѡун єю ꙗко свѣци горѣци]; fire came out of their mouths [нзѣ оустѣ н^х ѡгнь нсхода]. Their clothes were like foam and their appearance had many colours [одѣаніе н^х пѣніе раздѣланіе вѣдо^м многы^х вагрн]. Their wings were brighter than gold [крылѣ н^х свѣтлѣнши зла^т] and their hands whiter than snow [рѣцѣ н^х бѣлѣнши снѣга]. They stood near the head of my bed and called me by name. I awoke from my sleep [аз же възбѣнжѣ ѿ снѣа своѣго] and vividly [вѣдѣ^х ѡвѣ]¹⁰⁰ saw the men standing before me. I looked at them and bowed before them, and I became terrified and my face showed fear. And the men said to me, 'Be truly brave, Enoch and do not be afraid [дрѣзан, Еноше, вѣ нстѣнж, не вонсе]! The Eternal God sent us to you [Гѣ вѣунѣн посла нн кѣ тебѣ]. Today you will ascend to heaven together with us [вѣсходнши сѣ намн на нѣо]. Tell your sons and your entire household what they should do in your absence here on earth and in your house. Nobody should look for you until God returns you to them.' Having listened to what they said, I quickly left my house [оускорн^х послоушае нзѣдо^х вѣнѣ нз домоу моѣго]¹⁰¹ and closed the doors, as they instructed me; and I called my sons, Methusalam [Мѣѡусала^м],¹⁰² Regim [Регима],¹⁰³ and Gaidad [Гандада],¹⁰⁴ and I related to them [нсповѣда^х н^м] what these most wondrous men told me [елнко глѣаста мн мѣжа ѡна прѣѡуднаа].

Chapter Two

Listen to me, my children, I do not know where I am going and what will happen to me. Now, my children, do not deny¹⁰⁵ God [не ѡстѣпанте ѿ Ба]. Walk before the face of God [прѣ^а лице^м г^анн^м ходите] and fulfil His commands [сѣ^абы его сѣхранѣнте]. Do not neglect prayers for your salvation [не ѡмраѣнте молѣтвы сѣпеніе вѣшего] so that God may not diminish the labour of your hands [да не сѣкратн^т Гѣ троуда рѣжкѣ вашн^х]. Do not deprive God of offerings [не лншанте даровѣ Гѣ], and He will not take away abundance and His gracious gifts from your ¹⁰⁰ Lit. 'when awake'.

¹⁰¹ Alternative reading, 'I hastened to obey them', since the verbs 'hear' and 'obey' are both possible translations of the verb послоушатн (which can be both perfective and imperfective); in some cases, it can also mean 'to bear witness', 'to verify', 'to testify'. The related lexemes послоушатн/послоуховатн (along with their cognates послоушаннѣ, послоушѣннѣ, послоушѣство, послоушѣннѣ, послоухѣ, etc.), are attested in several Glagolitic monuments from the earliest period of the Old Church Slavonic scribal tradition, such as Glagolita Clocianus, Codex Marianus, Codex Zographensis, Codex Assemanianus (Evangelium Assemani), and in some Cyrillic texts (Liber Sabbae, Codex Suprasliensis) composed in Bulgaria in the late 10th and early 11th centuries. See Tseitlin et al. [1999: 482-483] and Sreznevskii [1895: 1237-1243].

¹⁰² The form of the name should be in accusative; instead it is the nominative.

¹⁰³ The form of the name is in the accusative.

¹⁰⁴ The form of the name is in the accusative.

¹⁰⁵ Lit. 'step back from' / 'turn away from'.

storehouses [н не лишн^т Гѣ съннсканн^х н даролюбезнн^х свон^х къ храннлннца^х вашн^х]. Bless God [блѣнѣ Гѣ] with the firstborn of your flocks [прѣвѣнцн стадннмн] and firstborn of your oxen¹⁰⁶ [прѣвѣнцн юно^т вашн^х], so that you may be blessed forever [вѣдѣ^т блѣвенїа на вѣвѣ вѣкы]. Do not deny¹⁰⁷ God and do not bow down before false gods [не поклонѣте са бѣмъ поуостошнн^м] — to gods who created neither heavens nor Earth [всѣго^м нже не сътворншж нѣсн н земла], nor other creatures [нн ннне тварн], because they and those who bow before them will perish [ты во погыбнж^т н ты нже н^м са поклонѣ^т]. May God strengthen your hearts in awe of Him. Now, my children, may no one search for me until God returns me to you.

Chapter Three

When I was saying this to my sons [бѣ^с вѣнегда гѣа^х сно^м свон^м], these men called me [вѣзвѣста ма мжжа ѿна], took me on their wings [вѣзѣста ма на крнлоу своѣю], brought me up to the First Heaven and put me on clouds which moved on [поставнѣста ме на ѿблацѣ^х н се градѣахж]. Further up, I saw [сѣглада^х]¹⁰⁸ the air [вѣздоу^х] and further up I saw [внѣѣ^х]¹⁰⁹ ether [анерѣ]. They placed me in the First Heaven [поставнѣста ма на прѣвѣ^м нѣсн]. They showed me a sea which is bigger than the one on Earth [показѣста мн море прѣвелнкое, паѣе море земнаго]. And they brought before me [прнведѣста прѣ^а лнѣе мое]¹¹⁰ the elders [старѣншннѣ] and rulers of the ranks of stars [влѣкы звѣзднѣ^х ѣнновѣ]¹¹¹, and they showed me 200 angels who rule over the stars and composition of the heavens [сложенїе нѣсе^м] and who fly with their wings [лѣтаж^т крнлы своннмн] and circle around all the floating {planets/luminaries} [ѿвѣхода^т по всѣ^х плаваѣющн^х]¹¹². Here I saw ¹⁰⁶ The form юно^т is a corrupt version of the genitive plural form of the noun юнѣць (meaning 'ox', 'steer').

¹⁰⁷ Lit. 'step back from' / 'turn away from'.

¹⁰⁸ The semantic coverage of the (perfective) verb сѣгладаѣти (which in the above phrase is used in its aorist form, 1st person, singular) reflects various blends of the concept of 'visual perception', e.g. 'to catch sight of', 'to set one's eyes on', 'to spot', 'to view', 'to glimpse', 'to glance'.

¹⁰⁹ The scribe now uses yet another verb, внѣѣти (as a synonym of сѣгладаѣти), in order to denote 'visual perception'; in contrast to сѣгладаѣти, the verb внѣѣти, can be either perfective or imperfective. Significantly, the verb внѣѣти ('to see') and the noun (nomina agentis) самовнѣѣць ('eye-witness') are cognate forms. In fact, the latter is a derivative of the former. While traveling through the lower strata of the 'air' [вѣздоу^х], Enoch 'spies'; during the next step of his heavenly journey, in the upper celestial realm, when Enoch reached the ether [анерѣ], he 'sees'/'witnesses'.

¹¹⁰ Lit. 'before my face'.

¹¹¹ In Forbes and Charles [1913: 432] the above fragment reads as follows: 'They brought before my face the elders and the rulers of the stellar orders, and showed me 200 angels'; the expression 'the rulers of the stellar orders' is compared to 1 Enoch [lxxxii.9-18, 20] (see footnote IV.1).

¹¹² This passage is found only in the longer recension; Andersen points out that there is no other occurrence of a similar description of the planets as 'swimmers' (плаваѣющн^х) in heaven [1984: 112, footnote f]. However, Greek πλανήτης means both 'wanderer' and 'planet', hence providing the basis for the image in 2 Enoch.

treasures [скровница] of snow and ice, as well as the angels who keep these awesome storehouses [грознѣе хранѣнїе], and the treasures [скровница]¹¹³ in the clouds from which they enter and exit. They also showed me the treasures [скровница] of dew and an olive tree which was chrism-like [ѡко масть маслїноу],¹¹⁴ and the appearance of its image [внѣнїе ѡбразѡ ѡж] was much greater than any earthly bloom [ѡко^ѡ всѣкъ цвѣт^т земаа па^ѡ множаѡ]; and {they further showed me} angels who were guarding their treasures [агглы хранѣнїа скровница н^х], opening and closing them [како затварѣ^тса н ѡвръзаатъ ж].

Chapter Four

And these men took me [пожста ма] and raised me [възведоста ма] up to the Second Heaven. They pointed out to me and I saw darkness much deeper than that on Earth. Here I also spotted wrongdoers, hanging on chains [вернжнн бладомн внаѡце],¹¹⁵ awaiting infinite¹¹⁶ judgement [жажце сжаа безмѣрнаго]. These ¹¹³ In Slavonic languages, the words denoting 'treasure' / 'hoard' (Old Church Slavonic сѣкровнїце, Rus. сокровище, Bulg. сѣкровище) refer to something 'secret'/'hidden'/'covered up'. The OCS form сѣкровнїце (= ταμείον, τὸ ἀποκρυφόν, κατάδυσις), along with its cognates сѣкровъ (= ταμείον, κρυπτή) and сѣкровьнъ (κεκρυμμένος) is frequently attested in a number of Glagolitic monuments, such as Codex Marianus, Codex Zographensis, Psalterium Sinaiticum, Euchologium Sinaiticum, Codex Assemanianus (Evangeliarium Assemani), as well as in some early Cyrillic texts (Liber Sabbae, Codex Suprasliensis) from the late 10th and early 11th centuries; see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 653]. Its semantic scope envelops a range of notions: 'hoard,' 'treasure,' 'treasury,' 'granary,' 'stock,' 'storage,' 'depot,' 'depository,' 'repository,' 'storehouse,' 'warehouse,' etc. For later attestations of сѣкровьнъ/сѣкръвеньн and its cognates (e.g. сѣкрывалнїце = 'covert,' 'shelter,' 'haven') as derivatives from the verb сѣкрыти, see Sreznevskii [1903: 723-724, 726-727].

¹¹⁴ Var. 'anointing oil', 'balsam', 'incense', 'perfume'.

¹¹⁵ Perhaps it should read вернжннцн бладомн внаѡце, since the form вернжннцн appears in Chapter 7 of the text below (when Enoch describes those transgressors who followed the Watchers in their footsteps, and who were hence 'hanging on chains' in the Second Heaven, engulfed by deep darkness); вернжннцн is plural from of the noun вернжннѣ (nomina agentis) which in turn is derived from the noun вернга (meaning 'chain', 'shackless', 'fetters', 'irons'); i.e. вернжннѣ is someone who is 'enchained' / 'bound in chains' / 'shackled in chains'. As for the expression вернжнн бладомн внаѡце, there are several possible alternative readings here, since the semantic coverage of the noun бладѣ is elastic: it can be applied not only to the (ostensibly harmless) 'idle talker'/'gossiper', but also to any member of the society branded as 'miscreant', 'malefactor', 'heretic', 'sinner', 'transgressor', 'lecher', 'whore', 'witch', i.e. to the 'wrongdoers' and 'outcasts' in every possible domain of unconventionality. The lexeme бладѣ thus comes to epitomize any deviant behaviour, be it religious (applying to heterodoxy and heresy), or social (e.g. witchcraft, magic, sorcery), or ethical (e.g. slander, defamation, vilification), or indeed sexual (denoting adultery and fornication, along with homosexuality). Included in this category are also individuals disrespectful of kinship and customary marriage law (with emphasis on either endogamy or exogamy), as well as all those embodying any kind of deviation of public/communal/collective norms and taboos; see Tseitlin, et al. [1999: 93-94] and Sreznevskii [1893: 116-118, 122-124]. In the text of Codex Suprasliensis, for instance, the noun бладѣ can mean not only 'error' and 'misapprehension', but also 'sin', 'fallacy', 'sacrilege'. The semantic coverage of the related noun блѣдѣ, on the other hand, can fluctuate between 'error' (as in modern Polish bląd) and 'transgression' / 'lechery' / 'fornication' (as in modern Bulgarian and Russian блуд); the appellation 'the Great Whore of Babylon' from The Book of Revelation [17 – 18], for instance, is rendered in some parts of Slavia orthodoxa as Великата Блудница Вавилон. Hence the above expression (вернжнн бладомн внаѡце жажце сжаа безмѣрнаго) can be equally translated as 'wrongdoers / transgressors / heretics / sinners/ slanderers/ lechers/ fornicators hanging on chains and awaiting infinite judgement'. Some MSS omit this phrase altogether, while others give very different readings. In MS U, for example, the form ВЕРНЖНН is replaced by ОУЖНННН ('prisoners'); the scribe also amends ВЛАДОМН into ВЛЮДОМЫ (= блюдящие/блюстящие) and omits the participle ВНСАЦЕ, thus considerably transforming the entire fragment into ОУЖНННН ВЛЮДОМЫ СОУДА БЕЗМЕРНА ('prisoners abiding by infinite judgement'); see also Vaillant [1952: 6, footnote 38] and Andersen [1984: 112-113, footnotes 7c, 7d, 7e, 7f]. MS P, on the other hand, reads as follows: ВЕРЫЖНННН ВЛЮДОМН ВНСАЦА ЖДЖЦЕ СДАУ ВЕЛНКАГО Н БЕЗМЪРНАГО ('hanging prisoners abidingly awaiting infinite judgement'). The scribes probably had difficulties in fully comprehending their respective Vorlage.

{fallen} angels were much darker in their appearance than earthly darkness [ты

On the other hand, the motif of 'sinners / slanderers / gossipers / witches / sorcerers / magicians hanging by their tongues on iron hooks issuing forth from the branches of an iron tree and awaiting infinite judgement', is attested in some Slavonic apocrypha of eschatological content, such as The Holy Mother of God's Journey Through Torments [Хождение на Богородица по мѣстѣмъ, var. СЛОВО ПРЕСТН Б^АЦЕ КАКЪ Е БЫШ(ЛА) СЕТЕ МАКН]. Thus, in one of the darkest spots of the western/northern compartment of 'the Eternal Sorrow' (which is hardly ever called in this apocryphon 'Hell'), the Mother of God sees

ДАРВО ЖНЛАЗНЪ Н ЖНЛЕЗНН МЪ КЛОПНТЪ Н НА ТАХЪ ВНСЕХА МАЖЕ Н ЖЕНН МЛОГЪ ЗА АЗНКО ОУВЕСЕНН. Н ПОПНТА Б^АЦА АРХАНГЕЛА: ЦО СА ТЕЗН, ЦО НМЪ ГРЕХО. Н РЕУН АРХАНГЕЛЪ: ТЕЗН СА ВРОДНЦН Н МАГНѠСНЦН Н КЛЕВЕТНЦН, ДЕТО РАЗДЕЛЕТЪ БРАТЬ Ѡ БРАТА Н МАЖЕ Ѡ ЖЕНН Н ЖЕНН <Ѡ> МАЖЕ Н КЪМЕЦЪ Ѡ КЪМЪЦН [Lavrov 1899: 147].

The narrative describing the circumstances surrounding those sufferings in the 'the Eternal Sorrow' frequently employs the past passive participle of the verb 'hang', i.e. ОУВЕСЕНЪ/БВЕСЕНЪ, ОУВЕСЕНН/БВЕСЕНН. This detail can facilitate the decipherment of some obscure passages in 2 Enoch, e.g. the expression ВЕРНЖНН ВЛАДОМН ВНСАЦЕ ЖДЖЦЕ СЖДА БЕЗМЪРНАГО. Very much like Enoch himself, the Virgin Mary is guarded during her journey by 400 angels and guided by the Archangel Michael; and contrary to the opinion expressed in secondary literature on The Holy Mother of God's Journey Through Torments (i.e. that she was escorted down to Hell), in primary sources her journey is hardly ever described as a descent. Her movements have a horizontal direction; occasionally her journey is even described as an ascent:

Н РЕУН АРХАНГЕЛЪ: НА КАДА НЦНШЪ ДА НДНМ Б^АЦЕ. ТНА РЕУН: ДА НДНМЪ НА ЗАПАТЬ. Н САБРАХА СНУКНТЕ Ѡ АНГЕЛН Н ВДННАХА ПРЕУНСТА Б^АЦА НА ЗАПАТЬ [Lavrov 1899: 146].

This spatial description is similar to the descriptions of celestial journeys in other apocalyptic narratives, including 2 Enoch, The Ascension of Isaiah (Isaiah's Vision), The Apocalypse of Baruch (3 Baruch), etc. Considering the fact that the protograph of the apocryphon The Holy Mother of God's Journey Through Torments was composed in Byzantium in the 6th century, i.e. when the (Christianized) Greek version of 2 Enoch was most probably in circulation, it would be logical to expect that the lexicon, imagery, poetic devices and indeed ideology of the latter must have had an impact upon that of the former. Furthermore The Holy Mother of God's Journey Through Torments was translated from Greek into Old Church Slavonic in the 10th-11th century, which coincides with the time when the Slavonic Vorlage of 2 Enoch presumably appeared; hence they must have been offspring of similar scribal conventions, mutually influencing each other. In fact, these two apocrypha (along with The Apocalypse of Baruch, The Apocalypse of Abraham, The Ascension of Isaiah, The Apocalypse of Paul, The Apocalypse of Elijah, etc.) were but fractions of one multilingual meta-narrative transmitted through a diverse cluster of (parascriptural) apocalypses. See also the discussion in Sokolov [1910: 123-136].

For the iconography of 'sinners, hanging on chains awaiting infinite judgement' in religious art of Slavia Orthodoxa, see Figs 7, 8, 9 and 10.

¹¹⁶ Lit. 'immeasurable'.

агѣланъ бѣахъ темнозрауни па^у тѣмъ земныѣ], and they produced incessant crying at all times [непрѣстане^н плауѣ творѣхъ по вса ѹасы]. And I said to the men with me [рѣ^х мѣжема сѣцима съ множ], 'Why do they suffer unceasingly?' The men answered me, 'These are God's apostates [сн сж^т ѿстѣпници гѣи] who did not obey God's commands [не послоушаѣше повелѣнїе гѣе] but kept counsel according to their own will [нж своѣж волеж съвѣщавшѣ^с] and stepped back {from God} with their Prince {i.e. Satan} [ѿстѣпниша съ князо^м своимъ]; these are sentenced to be in the Fifth Heaven [нже сж^т оутврѣждени на пето^м нѣси].'¹¹⁷ I became saddened on account of them and the {fallen} angels bowed before me, saying, 'Man of God [мжжоу бѣи], pray for us to God.' I answered them, saying, 'But who am I? I am a mortal man [ѹлкѣ мѣртѣ], but let me pray for the {fallen} angels. Who knows where I am going and what will befall me and who will pray on my behalf?'

Chapter Five

From there, the men took me up to the Third Heaven [пожста ма ѿтѣдоу мжжа н възведоста ма на третоѣ нѣо] and placed me in the middle of Paradise [поставнста ма по срѣ^ѣ породѣ].¹¹⁸ This place is of immense beauty [мѣсто то несѣвѣдно добротож].¹¹⁹ I saw all kinds of trees with sweet blossoms [вѣсѣ дрѣвеса

¹¹⁷ The shifting connection of the second and fifth heavenly rings with the planet Venus, the name of which, as stated by John the Damascene, was occasionally rendered as Lucifer (further identified as 'the fallen angel' from Isaiah 14: 12-15) may have also caused the association of the Second and Fifth Heavens with 'God's apostates who did not obey God's commands but kept counsel according to their own will and stepped back from God with their Prince Satanail'; see also the discussion below, footnotes 164, 210, 211 and 214.

¹¹⁸ The vocabulary of 'heavenly cosmography' referring to 'Garden of Eden' / 'Paradise' / 'Heaven' varies in the manuscript; hence the different renditions of certain celestial toponyms throughout the text. In this particular case, the word used by the indigenous Slavonic scribes to denote 'Paradise' is порода (= παράδεισος). It is quite significant that this 'domesticated' equivalent of the original Greek form was semantically bound, on the basis of its close phonetic similarity to the native Slavonic verb podumu ('to give birth', 'to beget'), to the idea of 'fertility', 'fecundity', 'birth'; thus порода — a sui generis telltale noun — came to describe 'the Paradise topos' as the ultimate symbol of fruitfulness and abundance. The attestations of порода are found in Glagolitic texts from the 10th-11th centuries (e.g. Codex Marianus, Codex Zographensis and Codex Assemanianus), as well as in one of the earliest texts written in Cyrillic script in the same period, the Codex Suprasliensis; see in this connection Tseitlin, et al. [1999: 481] and Vasmer [1987: 330]. Furthermore the survey of Slavonic monuments in which the lexeme порода (= παράδεισος) is attested shows that most of them were copied before the 13th century [Sreznevskii 1895: 1208-1209]; of course, there are also later attestations of the form, but it gradually ceased to exist as a part of the active lexicon [Bogatova et al. 1991:120-121]. As for the Enochic corpus, it routinely conveyed the lexicon of earlier versions. One such case is presented by the 15th century account of 2 Enoch (Russian redaction) from MS U. The anonymous Russian scribe renders the phrase 'and placed me in the middle of Paradise' as поставнста ма посреда(н) породѣ, employing the same term for 'Paradise' as the one used in earlier Glagolitic and Cyrillic texts from the Balkans. This kind of linguistic data is rather useful in defining both the time and the place of origin of the earliest Old Church Slavonic copies of The Book of the Secrets of Enoch. In this particular case, evidence gathered from lexicographic sources suggests that the terminus ante quem for the translation/compilation of the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch was the period when the transition from the Glagolitic to the Cyrillic script occurred; as for the place of origin, the evidence points towards Bulgarian scribal tradition of that period.

¹¹⁹ Var. 'This place is of immeasurable/infinite fineness'.

БАГОЦВѢТНА], and their fruits were ripe and aromatic [ПЛОДН Н^x ЗРѢЛН Н БАГОДХАНІН]; and all food brought along {there} gave off a beautiful fragrance [ВЪСѢ БРАШНА ПРИНЕСЕНА Н КЫПЕЦІА ДЫХАНІЕ^M БАГОВОННЫ^M]. In the midst of it was the Tree of Life [ДРѢВО ЖИЗНЬНО], exactly on the spot where God rests [НА НЕ^M ЖЕ ПОУНВАЕ^T ГЪ] when He goes into [ѢГДА ВЪСХОДН^T]¹²⁰ Paradise [ВЪ РАН].¹²¹ This tree, in its goodness and fragrance, is unspeakably gorgeous [ТО ДРѢВО НЕСКАЖАЕМО Ё ДОБРОТОЖ Н БАГОВОНСТВО^M Н КРАСНО] beyond all other existing creations [ПА^V ВЪСАЖ ТВАРН СЖЦЕА]. All around it looks like gold and fire-like red [Ѣ ВЪСЖДЪ ЗЛАТОВИДНО Н ЦЪРВЕНО ѠБРАЗѠ^M Н ѠГНЕЗРАУНО], covering entire Paradise [ВЕСЬ ПОРО^A]. It combines properties of all trees {ever} planted and all fruits. Its roots are in Paradise [КОРЕ^N ЁМОУ Е ВЪ ПОРОДѢ] at the exit to Earth [НА НСХОДѢ ЗЕМНО^M]. Paradise [РАН]¹²² lies between mortality¹²³ and immortality¹²⁴ [МЕЖДОУ ТЛѢНІЕ^M Н НЕТАЛѢНІЕ^M]. From it two springs emanate, from one of which milk and honey issue forth [ѢДННЪ ТОУН^T МЕ^A Н МЛѢКО], and {from the other} oil and wine [ѢЛЕН Н ВІНО].¹²⁵ They divide into four parts; while streaming silently [ѠВХОДА^T ТИХО^M ШЕСТВІЕ^M] they approach Eden's Paradise [РАН ЕДОМСКЪ] between mortality and ¹²⁰ Lit. 'ascends'.

¹²¹ On this occasion the scribe does not use the lexeme порода to denote 'Paradise', but the lexeme РАН instead. The latter has its cognates in all Slavonic languages (e.g. Bulg. Паѝ, Russ. Паѝ, Belarus. Паѝ, Serbo-Croat Pâj, Slovene Râj, Slovak Raj, Czech Râj, Polish Raj). These are masculine, and singularia tantum. There are also some related vernacular expressions, such as Паѝ Божи, Паѝ Божен, Раюм Бога, Божорай, Райска градина (attested in Bulgarian oral tradition), which may denote both Paradise and Hell. Furthermore in the same tradition the Sun is referred to as Раѝко; the latter is a diminutive neuter noun (transformed into an anthroponym/theonym) deriving from the very same masculine noun used to denote Paradise (Паѝ). Besides, there exists a cluster of dialectal verbs, such as раювам, райовам, which denote 'to reign', 'to rule', 'to govern', 'to control'; see the discussion in Anastasov, Vasil et al. (eds) [2002: 163-165]. These contemporary forms (which are related to the Old Church Slavonic noun РАН), are offshoots of the proto-Slavonic lexeme rajъ*; the latter, in turn, derives from the ancient Indo-Iranian lexical corpus and has its close etymological relation to some Old Iranian/Old Persian words. The proto-Slavonic rajъ* corresponds to the Avestan form ray, meaning 'wealth', 'happiness'; see Vasmer [1987: 435-436]. These close linguistic correspondences should be considered, in my view, as evidence in ancient Eurasia for the existence of a certain common Ur-corpus of cosmogonic and cosmographic texts, which was subsequently inherited by Slavonic and Indo-Iranian cultural traditions. This discussion, however, is far beyond the scope of the present article.

To return to the vocabulary related to the concept of Paradise in Slavonic apocryphal tradition, it should be noted that the lexeme РАН is attested predominantly in The Life of Adam and Eve, The Sea of Tiberias, The Legend of the Holy Rood and the Two Brigands, and The Discussion Between the Three Saints. In the Book of the Secrets of Enoch the Just, the nouns порода and РАН are employed concurrently with parallel celestial toponyms, such as Edom, Edem, Eden. In various redactions of the apocryphal Sea of Tiberias (especially in copies from the 18th century), however, the word РАН can be replaced by the appellation 'Heavenly Jerusalem', which is an obvious allusion to The Book of Revelation.

¹²² See the note above.

¹²³ Lit. 'corruptible.'

¹²⁴ Lit. 'incorruptible.'

¹²⁵ Common biblical imagery, also attested in Bulgarian Christmas carols, a detail which will be analysed elsewhere.

immortality [МЕЖДОУ ТЛѢНІЕ И НЕТАЛѢНІЕ]. Going further to the other side, they divide into 40 parts and pour out gently onto Earth. They make a circuit and revolve, like all elements of the air [нма^Т ОБРАЩЕНІЕ КРЖГОУ СВОЕМОУ ЯКО ННІЕ СТУХІА ВОЗДОУШНІЕ]. There is not a single tree {in Paradise} which does not bear fruit and each tree provides an abundant harvest. This entire place is blessed [вса мѣсто бѣгословестѣвно], and 300 exceedingly luminous angels who guard Paradise [храна^Т пороу] with unceasing voices and melodic singing serve God all day long. And I said, 'How beautiful this place is!' The {two} men said to me, 'Enoch, this place is prepared for the righteous [праведнико^М 8готованно ѿ] who suffered all kinds of misfortunes in their lives. When their souls were becoming embittered, they turned their eyes from iniquity¹²⁶ and they were judging justly. They gave bread to the hungry, they dressed the naked with garments, they raised the fallen, they helped the oppressed and orphans. They walked without vices before the face of God and served only Him. This place is prepared for them for an eternal inheritance.' The two men then took me to the northern side {of the Third Heaven} and showed me a frightening place of all kind of sorrows and tortures, chilly darkness [люта тѣма] and a fog without light [мѣгла несвѣтла] there.¹²⁷ A dark fire [огнь мраунь] was burning there inside it [вѣзгарае са вѣнж], and a fiery river [рѣка огньна] ran through the entire place. On one side was fire and on the other side, cold ice, both burning and freezing [стоуденѣи ледъ жеже^Т и жебе^Т]. I also saw a rather chilling dungeon [оужнище люта зѣло] and murky pitiless angels [агѣли тожни и немѣлѣивы],¹²⁸ carrying cruel weapons [носаще оружжа напрасна] which cause merciless torture. And I said, 'Woe, woe, how very frightening is this place!' The {two} men told me, 'Enoch, this place is prepared for those who do not obey God, who do evil on Earth [нже дѣлаж^Т на землѣи злаа], {such as} magic/sorcery [вардѣнїа],¹²⁹ spells/ incantations [обаанїа],¹³⁰ and devilish divination [вѣлѣхвоанїа вѣсовска];¹³¹ who boast their evil deeds; {this place is prepared for} the forlorn ones, ¹²⁶ Or 'injustice'.

¹²⁷ According to the current text, both Paradise and Hell are placed next to each other, on the third heaven. The same celestial model (of Paradise and Hell being 'in heavens above, next to each other') is attested in Bulgarian oral tradition [Kovachev 1914: 17-18]. This correspondence between 2 Enoch and South-Slavonic folklore cosmography will be discussed elsewhere.

¹²⁸ Angels are torturing here, not devils. The place corresponds to Hell, which in this case is not described as a subterranean Underworld; see also the previous footnote.

¹²⁹ For iconographic devices employed in the depiction of those sufferings in Hell on the account of their having performed magic, sorcery and witchcraft on Earth, see Fig. 11.

¹³⁰ Referring to those who cast spells, or practice love magic, or perform healing rituals accompanied by chants and incantations, etc.; for the negative portrayal of healers and sorcerers as individual having a direct relationship with the Devil, see Fig. 5.

¹³¹ The formulaic expression ВѢЛѢХВОАНІА ВѢСОВСКА has a fascinating socio-cultural subtext. The noun (ВѢЛѢХВОАНІЕ / ВѢЛѢХВОАННІЕ) has its earliest attestations in some Cyrillic texts composed in Bulgaria in the late 10th and early 11th centuries, such as Codex Suprasliensis [see 23: 5-6, as well as 22, 28, 151]. There the noun ВѢЛѢХВОАННІЕ (along with its cognates ВѢЛѢШЬБА, ВѢЛѢШЬСТВО, ВѢЛѢШЬСТВО) is used to denote μαγεία / φαρμακεία; see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 118-119]. According to Sreznevskii [1893: 381-384], in some later sources the forms ВѢЛѢХВОАННІЕ / ВѢЛѢХВОАННІЕ / ВОЛѢХВОАННІЕ designate the act of performing divination rites (=τὰ μαντεῖα, divinationes). The who steal human souls [крадж^т дѣше ѱлѣе], who harass the poor, take their wealth and become richer from the property of others; instead of feeding the hungry, they starve them to death. Instead of providing clothes {for the poor}, they leave them naked. They do not recognise their Creator but bow before soulless and vain gods [бѣмъ бездоушнѣмъ н соуетны^{мъ}], fashioning idols [зѣждѣше ѡбразы]¹³² and bowing before the impure creation of the hand [покланѣше сѧ рѣкотворенїѧ мрѣзостномъ]. For all these {sinners}, this place is destined for eternity.'

Chapter Six

And these men took me and raised me up to the Fourth Heaven. Here they showed me all the movements [всѣ шествїѧ] and paths [прѣхожденїе] and rays of light¹³³ of the Sun and Moon altogether [вса лоуѣѧ свѣта сѣнѣнаго н мѣсаунаго]; and I measured {the dimensions of} their movements [размѣрихъ шествїѧ ѣж]. I calculated their light [сложихъ свѣтъ ѣж] and I saw the sunlight is seven times greater than the moonlight [внѣдѣхъ седмогоубнѣ свѣтъ нма^т сѣнѣце па^ѣ мѣѧ]. {I saw} their orbit [крѣгъ ѣж] and their chariot [колесниѣѧ ѣж],¹³⁴ on which each rides [на неѧ же ѡздѣхъ кѣждо ѣж] with wondrous velocity like the wind [ѧко вѣтрѣ ходѣѣѧ прѣѣодножъ брѣзостїѧ], without resting [нѣ нма покоѧ], day and night going and returning [нощѣ н днѣ ходѣѣѧ же вѣзвращѣѣѧ сѧ]. And on the right hand side of the Sun's chariot [ѡ деснѣѧ колесниѣѧ сѣнѣѣѧ] {I saw} four big stars [ѣтерѣ свѣздѣ велѣкѣѧ], each of which having 1000 subordinate¹³⁵ stars [коѣѣѧ нмѣѣѧ по^ѧ собожъ тѣсѣѣѧ свѣздѣѧ]; on its left hand side [ѡ шоуѧ] {I saw} another four stars, each of which having 1000 subordinate stars; all together, there were 8000 stars [вѣсѣхъ вѣкоупъ .ѣ. тѣсѣѣѧ], always going with the Sun [ходѣѣѧ съ сѣнѣѣѧ вѣнѣѧ]. During the day, the Sun is guided by 15 myriads of angels [вода^т ѣго вѣ днѣ .ѣѣ. тѣмѣ агѣлъ], and during the night {by} 1000 six-winged angels, marching before the chariot [ѧ вѣ нощѣ тѣсѣѣѧ агѣлъ, комоуждо агѣлоу по шѣѣѧ крѣѣѧ, нже ходѣѣѧ прѣ^ѧ колесниѣѧѧ]; and 100 angels give fire to him {i.e. the Sun} [ѡгнѣ даѧ^т ѣмоу сто агѣлъ]. And spirits in the image of two birds [дѣѣѧ лѣѣѣѧ обрѣзо^{мъ} двѣѣѧ птѣѣѧ], Phoenix [фѣнѣѣѧ] and Chalcedra [хѧл'кѣдрѣѧ],¹³⁶ are going {before forms вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / волаѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ, on the other hand, were used to signify the (three) Magi visiting the infant Jesus. In the latter case, the forms вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / волаѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ were used to denote 'sages' / 'wise men' / 'astrologers' (i.e. those who can read and interpret the signs of Heaven). Still, in medieval Slavonic tradition the forms вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ / волаѣхѣѧ / вѣлѣхѣѧ tend to have negative connotations, due to their transparent link with demonic forces; hence the expression вѣлѣхѣѧ ѣѣѣѧ (the semantic coverage of the adjective ѣѣѣѧ is analysed below, footnote 247).

¹³² Lit. 'images'.

¹³³ See also the discussion in Andersen [1983: 120, footnote 11 d].

¹³⁴ For the textual problems occurring in various renditions of the same paragraph in MSS A, J, P and V, see Andersen [1983: 120, footnote 11 e].

¹³⁵ Lit. 'below it', 'under it'.

¹³⁶ On the parallel depiction of the mythical beings/birds Phoenix [фѣнѣѣѧ] and Chalcedra [хѧл'кѣдрѣѧ] (described as either 'solar elements' or 'spirits') in 2 Enoch (as attested in MSS J and the Sun during the day}; their faces¹³⁷ are lion-like [образн^х львовъ] and their feet, tails, and head are like those of crocodiles [ноге н ѿпа^и н глава коркоднлоу].¹³⁸ Their image [внѣнїе н^х]¹³⁹ was {many-}coloured like the heavenly rainbow [внѣнїе н^х ѿбагрене ѿко доуга ѿблауна], and the size of their angelic wings is 900 measures¹⁴⁰ [велнкота н^х дева^т сж^т мѣрь]; their wings are angelic [крнла н^х агѣска] and each of {these birds} has 12 wings [комоужде н^х по .ѿ. крнлѣ]; it is they who are harnessed to the Sun's chariot [нже мжѹе^т колесницѣ слѣцоу], carrying dew [носаѹе росѣ] and {oppressive} heat [жнх]; and as God orders [ѿко повелѣ^т Гѣ], they turn [такѡ ѿбраѹаѣ^т],¹⁴¹ descending and ascending along the sky and Earth [нхсходнѣ н въсхода^т по нѣсн н по землн], with the light of their rays [сѣ свѣто^м лоуѣ свон^х].¹⁴²

The {two} men then took me to the eastern side of this Heaven [несоста ма мжѣ та на въстокѣ нѣсн того] and showed me the gates [впа^т] through which the Sun passes [нмнже прохсходн^т слѣце] routinely at the times appointed [по

S/R) and 3 Baruch, see Sokolov [1905: 399-405]. The number of the wings of the Phoenix in 2 Enoch is 12, whereas in 3 Baruch it is 2. On the earliest attestations (from the 13th-14th cent.) of the form ФННІѢ (var. ФДНІѢ, ФДННКСѢ, ФУННКСѢ) as 'domesticated' forms of the Greek Φοῖνιξ, see Lavrov [1899: iv-vi], and Sreznevskii [1903: 1357-1358]; see also the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 436, footnote XII.1] and Andersen [1983: 122, footnotes 12c and 12 d; 134, fn 19e] and Kulik [2010: 15, 17, 19, 23, 30-31, 39, 43, 47, 54, 58, 235-244, 296].

¹³⁷ Or 'images' / 'appearances'.

¹³⁸ A typical description of a composite mythical being (like a sphynx or griffon), which betrays mythological background.

¹³⁹ Lit. 'appearance'.

¹⁴⁰ For мѣра see the data presented in Sreznevskii [1895: 242-244], Tseitlin et al. [1999: 340]; see also the discussion in Andersen [1983: 122, footnote 12 g].

¹⁴¹ Lit. 'return in the same way'; but it can also be read as 'transform'.

¹⁴² Compare this to the following fragment from the Slavonic Apocalypse of Baruch (= Baruch 3) [Уѣтєніє сѣго Вароха, ієга посланѣ вѣ к нѣмоу ангѣлу Панѡунѣ оу сѣгоу гороу Снѣгѡнію на рѣцѣ, ієг^а плака се ѡ плѣнєніи Юроусѣмѣсѣмѣ. Гѣ блѡсвн] from the 13th-14th century Dragolev Miscellany (containing a Serbian recension of an earlier (Bulgarian) redaction [Ivanov 1925: 227]):

Н пакы рече мн ангѣл: ходн, Вароше, н покажю тн нгы тангы, н виднши ѿноудѣже слоунце въсходнѣ. Н покаѣ мн ѡроужнѣ ѹтворѡбразна: н вѣхоу конн пламенн, конн же тн ангѣлн перьнатн, н на ѡроужн томѣ сѣдѣше ѹлѣвѣкъ носѣ вѣнѣцѣ ѡгньны; н пошмо же вѣ ѡроужнѣ то .к. ангѣлы, н се пѣтнѣ прѣдн лѣтаюѹн, н крнлѣ ієн ѿ вѣстока до запада. Н рѣхѣ азѣ Варохѣ къ ангѣлоу: скажн мн, гѣ мон, ѹто ієсть ѡроужнѣ снѣ, ѹто лн ієсть ѹлѣвѣкъ сѣде на ѡроужн семѣ н носѣ ѡгньны вѣнѣцѣ, н ѹто лн ієсть пѣтнѣ снѣ, н скажн мн? Н рече мн ангѣл: ѹловѣкъ сѣден на ѡроужн ѡгньнѣмѣ н носѣн вѣнѣцѣ ѡгньны, рече мн ангѣл, се ієсть слоунѣце, а се пѣтнѣ, юже виднши прѣлѣтаюѹн, се ієсть храннло всемоу мнроу. Н рѣхѣ азѣ Варохѣ къ ангѣлоу: да како храннтель мнроу пѣтнѣ ієсть? Н рече мн ангѣл: сн пѣтнѣ простнраѣтѣ крнлѣ свон н заѣмлетѣ лоуѣе ѡгньнѣе слоунѣце; аще бо вн не заѣмала лоуѣ слѣнѣнѣхѣ, не вн трѣпѣль родѣ ѹлѣвѣскн н всака тварѣ пламене слоунѣнаго. Повелѣ бо Гѣ снѣн пѣтнѣ работатн всєн вѣселєнѣй до сконѣаннѣя вѣка. Нѣ внжѣ дєсноіє крнло ѹто пншетѣ намѣ. Прнстоупнѣ н прочѣтохѣ іє: вѣхоу же кннгы ѿко н токѣ велнкъ, н вѣхоу кннгы тн златы, н прочѣтохѣ іє, н пнсаннѣ снѣ: нн земла мнє родн, нн нево, нѣ родн мє прѣстоѣлѣ ѿцѣ. Н рѣхѣ азѣ Варохѣ: ѹто ієсть нмє пѣтнѣ снѣ? Н рече мн ангѣл: нмє ієсть пѣтнѣ снѣ фннїѣ (Quoted after Ivanov [1925: 197]).

See also footnote 149.

8СТАВНЫ^М ВРѢМЕНЕ^М], in accordance to its monthly rounds during the entire year [по ѿБХОЖДЕНІЕ^М мѣца лѣта вѣсего], and to the numbering of the horologium, day and night [по ѿНСЛО ѿСОВЕРѢЖ ДНѢ Н ПО^{III}].¹⁴³ I saw six vast open gates [шестора врата велнка ѿвръста]; each of these gates had 61¼ stadia [кааждо врата нмаѿста ста<дїе> ѿа н ѿтврѣтъ едннго стадїе]. I measured them diligently and I realised that this was their size. From them the Sun exits [нмн же нсходн^Т слнцѣ] and goes to the Earth [нде^Т на земан], and becomes even [сѣравнѣжт са],¹⁴⁴ and enters into each month [вѣходн^Т вѣ вса мѣѣ]. From the first gate, [the Sun] is coming out for 42 days [ѿ.мн вратн нсходнтѣ днн . мв.]; from the second {gate} — 35 {days} [вторнмн днн . лѣ.]; from the third {gate} — 35 {days} [третнмн днн . лѣ.]; from the fourth {gate} — 35 {days} [ѿтврѣтнмн днн . лѣ.]; from the fifth {gate} — 35 {days} [петнмн днн . лѣ.], and from the sixth {gate} — 42 {days} [шестнмн днн . мѣ.]; then again after that, [the Sun] starts in reverse from the sixth gate for a second circuit of seasons [пакы вѣспа^Т вѣзвраѿает са ѿ шестн^Х вра^Т по ѿвѣшествїе врѣманномоу], and returns through the fifth gate for 35 {days} [вѣходн^Т петнмн врата днн . лѣ.]; through the fourth {gate} for 35 {days} [ѿ.мн днн . лѣ.], through the third {gate} for 35 {days} [ѿ.мн дннн . лѣ.], and through the second {gate} for 35 {days} [вторнмн днн . лѣ.]. This is how the days of each year end after the passing of the four earthly seasons [такѣ сконѿает са дннѣ лѣта вѣсего, по вѣзвратѣ^М ѿ ре^Х врѣманѣ].¹⁴⁵

And then these men took me to the western side of this Heaven, and they showed me five¹⁴⁶ large gates [врата петора велнка] which are open on the other side of the eastern {heavenly} gates [ѿвръста по ѿБХОДОУ вѣСТОУНЫ^Х вра^Т]. Through them the sun sets, and the number of these days is 365¼ [по ѿНСЛОУ днн

¹⁴³ The form ѿСОВЕРѢ refers to the knowledge of 'timekeeping'; it is a composite (verbal) noun consisting of two components. The first part denotes 'time' / 'season' [ѿас-], while the second refers to the process of 'collecting', 'harvesting', 'keeping track of' [with the form -ВЕРѢ being a derivative from the verb берѣ]. A similar expression is attested in MS P (i.e. ѿНСЛО ѿСОВЕРѢѿа); see Sokolov [1899: 11, footnote 52]. MS U, on the other hand, reads ѿасѿворѣ лѣтовноѣ [Sokolov 1910: 115].

¹⁴⁴ The verb сѣравнѣжт са is reflexive. Possible reference to the equinox.

¹⁴⁵ The first gate (42 days) takes 6 weeks, the 2nd gate (35 days) is 5 weeks, the 3rd gate takes 5 weeks, the 4th gate takes 5 weeks, the 5th takes 5 weeks, and the 6th takes 6 weeks. Returning, the sun goes to the 5th gate for 5 weeks, 4th gate 5 weeks, 3rd gate 5 weeks, and the 2nd gate 5 weeks. Altogether the Sun's celestial journey takes 52 weeks (= 364 days). Further on the description of Sun's movements in various MSS, see Andersen [1983: 122-124, and especially footnote 13h] and Navtanovich [2000: 208, 389]. For the 364 day calendar in Qumran, see Ben Dov [2008], although the connection with the solar path in 2 Enoch was not noted.

¹⁴⁶ Should read 'six'; as suggested by Andersen [1983: 124-125, fn. 14b], the numeral equivalent of the letter 'E' (ЕСТЬ) in Cyrillic alphabet is '5' (Ѥ) whereas in Glagolitic the same letter has the numeral value of '6'. This detail indicates that the protograph of the 2 Enoch may have been composed/copied initially into Old Church Slavonic/Bulgarian using Glagolitic script and only later converted into Cyrillic; this process caused varying readings in the text (reflecting differences between Glagolitic and Cyrillic numeral equivalents of one and the same letter). Similar mistakes took place when numeral values of other letters (such as Вѣди, Глаголь, Добро, etc.) were converted from Glagolitic to Cyrillic; see in this connection Ivanova [1976: 24-27]. As usefully pointed out by Andersen, 'similar confusion among numerals can be explained in term of Glagolitic originals' [ibid.: 125, fn 14b].

.тѣ. н ѿетврѣ^т].¹⁴⁷ This is how {the Sun} sets through the western gates [такѡ заходѣ^т западнѣмъ вратѣ]. When it goes out through the western gates [ѿгда нзѣде^т ѿ западнѣхъ вратѣ], 400 angels take its wreath [вѣзмѣ^т ѿетврѣста аггѣль вѣнецъ ѿго] and bring it to God [несѣ^т ѿго къ Гѡу], while the Sun turns back with its chariot [сѣнѣ ѡбрѣта^т съ колесницѣхъ ѿго] and spends 7 hours of the night without light [прѣходѣ^т безъ свѣта .ѣ. ѡа^с нѡщѣ лнхы^х].¹⁴⁸ In the 8th hour of the night [вѣ .н. ѡа^с нѡщѣ], 400 angels bring the wreath along [прѣносе^т аггѣль .ѣ.ста аггѣль вѣнецъ] and crown {the Sun} with it [н вѣнѣжѣ^т ѿго], while the elements, called Phoenix and Chalcedra, sing {psalms to the Sun} [вѣспое^т стѣхѣ рекѡмъ фѣнѣксѣ н халкедрѣ]. Because of this, all birds clap their wings [того радѣ всѣ птѣце вѣстреѣжѣ^т крылѣ свѡмѣ], rejoicing at the one who provides light [ра^ужѣе сѣ свѣтодавѡу] and sing with their voices [пожѣе гѣсы свѡмѣ], 'Here comes the Light-giver and gives light to its creation [прѣходѣ^т свѣтодавецъ н дажѣ^т свѣтъ тварѣ своѣхъ]!¹⁴⁹ And then they showed me the calculation of the Sun's itinerary [се расѡнтѣнѣе покажѣста мѣ хождѣнѣе сѣнѣунаго] and the gates through which the sun rises and sets [врата, нмѣ же вѣходѣ^т н нсходѣ^т]. These gates are vast, because God created {them} for the horologium of the year [сѣна бо врата велѣка сѣжѣ^т, нже сѣворѣ Бѣ ѡасѡверѣе лѣтовѣна]. This is why the Sun was created so large.

Then the two men showed me another calculation of the entire path of the moon, all its movements and phases, and 12 big gates eternally facing to the east. Through these gates the moon enters and exits at a regular intervals of time. Through the 1st gate [ѿ мѣ вратѣ], 31 days precisely according to the sun's position [днѣ .ѣа. на мѣста сѣнѣуна нзвѣстѣо], through the 2nd gate, 35 days precisely [вѣ дѣнѣ .ѣе.

¹⁴⁷ As noted by Andersen, this detail is found only in MSS of the longer recension [1984: 124-125, footnote d] and reflects later interpolations. It can be argued that it was inserted by scribe(s) in order to justify the span of the Julian year (i.e. 365¼ days) contradicting (in the same text) the earlier calendar tradition of the Jewish 364 year (see footnote 145 above).

¹⁴⁸ As the above text indicates, the Sun does not orbit but goes on and off like a lamp, which is also maintained in Babylonian cosmology.

¹⁴⁹ This is paralleled by the following fragment from the Slavonic Apocalypse of Baruch (=Baruch 3) [Ѹѣтѣнѣе стѣго Варѡха, ѣга послѣнѣ бѣ к ѣмоу аггѣль Пѣноунѣ ѡу стѣоу гороу Снѡнѣу на рѣцѣ, ѣгѣа плака се ѡ пѣнѣнѣнѣ Ѱроусѣмьсѣмь. Гѣнѣ блѡсвѣн] from the 13th-14th cent. Dragolev Miscellany:

Н сѣшѣахъ громъ велѣнкѣ зѣло съ нѣсе, н ѡупросѣхъ аггѣла ѡто се бѣ^с громъ снѣ, гѣнѣ моѣ? Н ре^с мѣ аггѣль: снѣ громъ, ѣже сѣшѣа, разѣоуѡѣетъ свѣтъ ѡтъмѣ, нзѣносѣтъ аггѣнѣ вѣнѣцъ сѣоунѣуанѣ до прѣстола вѣжѣна. Н вѣдѣхъ сѣоунѣце гредѡуѣе, н бѣше ѣко ѡлѣвѣкъ ѡупѣлъ н дрѣхѣлъ, вѣдѣхъ же н пѣтѣнѣю снѣу гредѡуѣю сѣ нмѣ, н бѣ же дрѣхѣла. Н вѣпросѣхъ азъ аггѣла: ѡто ѣстѣ пѣтѣца снѣн дрѣхѣла снѣце? Н реѡе мѣ аггѣль: дрѣхѣла ѣстѣ ѿ зѣноѣ н кара сѣоунѣунаго. Н сѣшѣахъ ю зѡвоуѣю: свѣтодавѡе, пошѣнѣ свѣтъ тѡнѣ мѣроу. Ѱгѣа же вѣзѣѡѣетъ: свѣтодавѡе, пошѣнѣ свѣтъ тѡнѣ мѣроу, н ѡвѣнѣ пѣтель вѣзгѣасѣтъ. Н пакѣ рѣхъ къ аггѣлоу: гѣнѣ, скажѣ мѣ, мѣногѣ лнѣ поѡнѣѡѣетъ сѣоунѣце? Н реѡе мѣ аггѣль толѣнѣко поѡнѣѡѣетъ, ѡнѣелѣнѣже пѣтель вѣзгѣасѣтъ н дѡнѣлѣже свѣтъ бѣѡѣѡѣетъ, н пакѣнѣ поѡдѣтъ. Н пакѣ реѡе мѣ аггѣль: сѣшѣнѣ, Варѡше, ѣѣе тѣ скажѣю ѡ прѣхождѣнѣнѣ сѣоунѣуѣнѣмь. Ѱгѣа бо мѣнѣходѣтъ дѣѣ н прѣходѣтъ сѣоунѣце ѿ аггѣль вѣзѣмоуѣ вѣнѣцъ сѣоунѣуанѣ н ѡузнѡсѣтъ до прѣстола вѣжѣна, ѡскѣрѣѡѣетъ бо се ѿ зѣмѣле н ѿ грѣхъ зѣмѣлѣнѣхъ: н ѣдѣгѣа бо прѣходѣтъ сѣоунѣце по нѣбѣсѣнѣ, нѣ трѣпѣтъ вѣдѣ бѣзѣкоѣнѣа всѣ по зѣмѣлѣ: ѡубѣства, прѣѣѡѡѡдѣѣѣнѣнѣа, н плаѡетъ се, ѡскѣрѣѡѣетъ бо вѣнѣцъ свѡнѣ, сѣго радѣнѣ ѡѡнѣѡѣѡѣетъ се ѡу прѣстола вѣжѣа. (Quoted after Ivanov [1925: 198]).

For folklore parallels, see Mochul'skii [1887: 53-56].

нзвѣстно], through the 3rd {gate}, 30 days precisely [т днн ѿ нзвѣстно],¹⁵⁰ through the 4th, 30 days precisely [д-мн днн ѿ нзвѣстно], through the 5th, 31 days exceptionally [ѣ днн .ѿа. нзпадно], through the 6th, 31 days precisely [ѣ-мн днн .ѿа. нзвѣстно], through the 7th, 30 days precisely [з-мн днн ѿ нзвѣстно], through the 8th, 31 days exceptionally [н-мн днн .ѿа. нзпадно], through the 9th, 31 days accurately [ѣ-мн днн .ѿа. нспитно],¹⁵¹ through the 10th, 30 days precisely [т-мн днн ѿ нзвѣстно], through the 11th, 31 days precisely [дѣ-мн днн .ѿа. нзвѣстно], through the 12th, 22 days precisely [вѣ-мн днн .ѿв. нзвѣстно].¹⁵² Thus having passed through all western gates, {the Moon} enters through the eastern gates and this is how the year ends.¹⁵³ The days of the Sun are 365¹/₄, [Слнцоу днн тѣе н ѹетврѣ Ѵдннноу днѣ] while the lunar year is 354¹⁵⁴ days [лоуномоу лѣтоу тѣд], consisting of 12 months [творѣ вѣ мѣсе] calculated {each} to have 29 days [расчнтаемо по кѣ днн]. There is an 11 day discrepancy from the solar year, which is an annual lunar epact [лншае^м дѣ днѣ слнѣннаго крѣга, еже сж^т на всѣко лѣто ѣпактн лднѣ]. This great cycle holds for 532 years [тѣ же велнкѣ крѣ^т дръжн лѣ^т ѣ сж^т лѣв].¹⁵⁵ By means of a quarter it passes by in 3 years [ѹетврѣтнмн ходн^т вѣ т лѣта],¹⁵⁶ and the fourth fulfils it precisely [д то нзвѣщенно наплѣнѣжтѣ].¹⁵⁷ For this reason {exclusions, that is 1/4 days} are being subtracted from {calculations concerning} heavenly {bodies}¹⁵⁸ for 3 years [нзатн сж^т кромѣ нѣсн вѣ т лѣта], until what is less is filled in {= 366 days}. What is taken {into account in figuring the epact} is 3 years and is not added to the number of days {i.e. 1/4 days are excluded}, which is why they alter the lengths of the years in 2 new moons for fulfilling, 2 others for diminishing {the length of the year}.¹⁵⁹ When this {cycle} is over, the western gates are passed through [ѣгда сконѹает са западнаа врата], {and the Moon} returns to

¹⁵⁰ Var. 31 (in U).

¹⁵¹ Var. 35 days (in P); see Sokolov [1899: 14, footnote 138].

¹⁵² The number of days given in U is also 22 [ѿв], but in P the days are 28 [ѿн]; see Sokolov [1899: 14, footnote 143].

¹⁵³ Further on the description of Moon's movements in various MSS, see Andersen [1983: 126-130, especially footnotes 16 b, 16d, 16e, 16f].

¹⁵⁴ Var. 364 days (in U).

¹⁵⁵ This 'Great cycle' (i.e. 'Dionysian cycle', or 'Great Paschal Period') of 532 years reflects the total years of the solar cycle (28 years) times the years of the lunar/Metonic cycle (19) 'after which all movable ecclesiastical festivals occur on the same day of the month and the same day of the week' [Andersen 1984: 125, footnote 14d]; see also the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 438, footnote XVI.5], and Stern [2001: 9].

¹⁵⁶ That is, 365 days (omitting the quarter day).

¹⁵⁷ This means that the fourth year is going to consist of 366 days (+ 4 times 1/4 days).

¹⁵⁸ Lit. 'out of heaven'.

¹⁵⁹ This entire passage is complicated in both longer and shorter recensions, probably because scribes did not fully comprehend the Vorlage. The Moon's 'fulfilling' and 'diminishing' the year possibly refer to intercalations of the lunar calendar, which could potentially be made twice in the year, in months Elul and Adar, in Babylonian and early Jewish traditions.

the eastern gates with its light. This is how it moves day and night in a heavenly orbit [такѡ ходѣ^т днѣ и ноцѣ по кржзѣ^х нбнѣ^х]; {moving} below all other heavenly orbits it goes faster than the winds of heaven [ннже вѣсѣ^х кржго^х скорѣ вѣтрѣ нбнѣ^х]. When the spirits [дсн] are flying, each angel has 6 wings.¹⁶⁰ The lunar orbit has 7 divisions [ѣ разѹътенн нма^т лоуннн крж^г] and each cycle has 19 years [ѡбхожденіе нмѣ по .ѡ. лѣ^т].¹⁶¹ Amidst the heavens I saw armed hosts [вое вѡржженныѣ] serving God [слоужещѣ Гѡн] with drums¹⁶² and organs¹⁶³ [въ тѹмпанѣ^х и органѣ^х] with the unceasing sound [непрѣстанны^м гласѡ^м] of sweet singing [бл҃гы^м пѣніе^м]. Having heard it, I rejoiced at it.

Chapter Seven

And these men took me and raised me up on their wings [възведѡста мѧ крнлоу ѣж] to the Fifth Heaven [на ѣ-ж нѡ].¹⁶⁴ Here I saw countless warriors [многѹж вое пензѹътеніе] called Gregori [рекомѣн грнгоре] (=Watchers),¹⁶⁵ the appearance of which is like the appearance of humans [внѣннѣ н^х ѡко внѣннѣ ѹлѡѹе]. Their immensity {was} as enormous as the vastness of huge giants [велнѹъство нхѣ вѣще цѣждѡвъ велнкѹ^х]; their faces were morose [лнца н^х дрѡхлѧ] and their mouths are constantly silent [мѡлѹане оустѣ н^х вѣсѣгда]. There was no {divine} service [не бѣ слѹженіѧ на ѣ-мѣ нѣсн] in the Fifth Heaven,¹⁶⁶ and I asked the men accompanying me, 'Why are these {Gregori} so sad [ѹесо радн сн сж^т дрѡхлн сѣло], and their faces are morose [оуннлѧ лнца н^х] with their mouths silent [оуста н^х мѡлѹещѧ], and why no {divine} service is {performed} in this heaven?' The men answered me, 'Those are the Gregori {=Watchers}, and 200 myriads of them parted from God with their prince Satanail [нже ѡврѣгошжѣ ѡ Гѧ ѿ тѣмж сѣ кнѧзе^м свон^м

¹⁶⁰ See Forbes and Charles [1913: 439, footnote XVI. 7]

¹⁶¹ Reference to 'the Metonic cycle of 19 years during which 7 seven lunar months must be intercalated' [Andersen 1984: 125, footnote 14d]; see also Forbes and Charles [1913: 439, footnote XVI. 8].

¹⁶² The lexeme тоумьпанѣ comes from the Greek τύμπανον; apart from the 2 Enoch, it is also attested in the earliest Slavonic Psalter, the Glagolitic Psalterium Sinaiticum (dated to the 11th century); see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 708].

¹⁶³ For the attestations of the forms органы / ѡрганы (var. варганѣ / ѡрганѣ) as a 'domesticated' Slavonic version of the Greek ὄργανον, see Sreznevskii [1893: 227; 1895: 704-705].

¹⁶⁴ The identification of the Fifth Heaven as the space where the Watchers are sentenced (and the Second as the imprisonment for those following them), may be caused by the concealed association between the second and fifth rings as the abode of Venus=Lucifer (i.e. 'the fallen one' from Isaiah 14: 12-15); see also footnotes 117, 210, 211, 214.

¹⁶⁵ The form Grigori comes from the Greek Εγρηγοροι (= Vigiles, the Watchers); see also the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 439-440, footnote XVIII.3] and Andersen [1983: 130, footnote 18a].

¹⁶⁶ Suggesting that the celestial Universe is imagined as a temple in which heavenly Liturgy is served; in the place where the Watchers were sentenced, however, there was no Liturgy; see also in this connection the discussion in Himmelfarb [2010: 76-78].

УЕТРН УННН НБСН СЕ^М]. While I was standing with the {two} men, four trumpets sounded together loudly [ВЪСТРЖЫШЖ Д-РН ТРЖБН ВЪКОУПЪ ГЛСО^М ВЕЛНКО^М] and the Gregori began singing in one voice [ВЪСПЪШЖ ГРНГОРН ЁДННОГЛАСНО], and their voices ascended to God's face [ВЪЗЫДЕ ГЛА^Х Н^Х ПРЪ ЛНЦЕ^М ГНА^А].

Chapter Eight

And these men took me and raised me up to the Sixth Heaven [ВЪЗЕСТА МА ЁСЖДОУ МЖЖА ТА Н ВЪЗНЕСОСТА МЕ НА Ш-Е НБО]. Here I saw seven bands of the most bright and glorious angels [Ъ УЕТЪ АГЛА ПРЪСВЪТАН Н СЛАВНЫ ЗЪЛО], whose faces were shining more strongly than radiant rays of the Sun [ЛНЦА Н^Х СНАЕЦЪ ПА^У ЛОУУЪ СЛНУНЫХЪ ЛЫЦЕЦЕ СА]. Their faces were no different from the form and appearance of their garments [НЪ РАЗЛНУА ЛНЦОУ НЛН ОБДРЪЖАНІА НЛН СЪПРЛОЖЕНІА ОДЕЖДН Н^Х]. These bands {of angels} are in charge¹⁷³ of the movements of stars [ТЫ УННН ТВОРА^Т НЗЪОУУАЖ^Т ЗВЪЗДНОЕ ХОЖДЕНІЕ], the Sun's orbit [СЛНУНО ОБРАЩЕНІЕ], the Moon's phases [ЛОУНО ПРЪМЪНЕНІЕ]; they see earthly benevolence and malevolence [МНРСКОЕ БАГОТВОРАНІЕ Н ЗЛОУНННІЕ ВНАЦЕ]. They give¹⁷⁴ orders and instructions [СТРОА^Т ЗАПОВЪДН Н ПООУУЕНІЕ]; and singing with sweet voices [СЛА^В БОГЛАНОЕ ПЪНІЕ] {they give} every glorious praise [ВСЪКЖ ХВАЛЖ СЛАВНЖА]. These are the archangels [АРХАГЛАН] who are above the angels [НЖЕ НА^А АГЛАН] and above every other creature, whether celestial or terrestrial [ВСЪКО ЖНТІЕ СЪМНРАЖ^Т, НБНОЕ Н ЗЕМНОЕ]; and {these archangels are above} angels {who are in charge} of times and years, and {above} angels {who are in charge} of rivers and seas, and {above} angels {who are in charge} of every earthly fruit [АГЛАН НЖЕ НА^А ПЛОДЫ ЗЕМНЫМН], and {above angels who are in charge} of every grass and every food given to each living being [НА^А ВСЪКОЖ ТРЪВОЖ Н ВСЪКЖ ПНЦІЖ ДАЖЦЕ ВЪСАКОМУ ЖНВОТОУ], and {above} the angels {who are in charge} of all human souls [АГЛАН ВСЪ^Х ДШЪ УЛУЪСКЫ^Х]; {these archangels} write down the deeds {of all people} and their lives before God's face [ПНШЖ^Т ВСЪ ДЪЛА Н^Х Н ЖНТІЖ Н^Х ПРЪ^А ЛНЦЕ^М ГНН^М].¹⁷⁵ Among them are seven phoenixes [Ъ ФНННКЪ], seven cherubim [Ъ ХЕРОУВН^М], and seven six-winged {angels} [Ъ ШЕСТОКРНЛАТЬ]. All of them sing in one voice [ЁДННЪ ГЛА^Х СЖЦЕ Н ПОЖЦЕ ЁДННОГЛНО], and nobody can describe with ¹⁷³ Lit. 'create and study'.

¹⁷⁴ Lit. 'build'.

¹⁷⁵ This Enochic taxonomy of the seven highest ranks of angels/archangels resembles the classification of the supreme heavenly forces according to The Book of Jubilees [2: 2-3]; fashioned by God on the first day of Creation, they are also being divided into seven main categories: (1) 'the angels of the presence', (2) 'the angels of holiness', (3) 'the angels of the spirit of fire', (4) 'the angels of the spirit of the winds', (5) 'the angels of the spirit of the clouds and of darkness and of snow and of hail and of hoar-frost', (6) 'the angels of the depths and of thunders and lightning', (7) 'the angels of the cold winds and the hot winds and of winter and spring and autumn and summer' [Sparks 1984: 14]. Having delineated these seven main categories of angelic powers, the author of the Jubilees further clarifies that the latter were complemented by 'the spirits of His creatures in the heavens and on earth and in all the abysses, and the deep darkness and the light and the dawn and the morning and the evening, which he had already prepared and planned' [ibid.].

words their singing [нѣповѣстѣ пѣне н^х]. And God rejoiced by His footstool [ра^аужѣ сѧ Гѣ подножїи своѣмоу].¹⁷⁶

Chapter Nine

From there these men moved me up [възвѣнгоста ма ѿтѣдѣ мѣжа та] and raised me [възнесоста мѣ] to the Seventh Heaven [на 7-мое нѣбо].¹⁷⁷ Here I saw a rather great light [свѣ^т прѣвеле^н зѣло], and the entire fiery force of great archangels [вса ѿгнѣнѣе воа велнкѣ^х архангѣлѣ]; and {I saw} an incorporeal host [бесплѣтнѣ^х силѣ], and the origins of dominions and power [господствїи наѣалѣ н властѣ] of Cherubim [хероувѣ^м] and Seraphim [серафѣ^м], {and} the Thrones¹⁷⁸ [прѣстоли] and ten¹⁷⁹ regiments of many-eyed angels [многѡѡчѣнѣ ѿ плѣковѣ], a luminous

¹⁷⁶ An idiom based on a biblical metaphor 'footstool of my feet' [Isaiah 66:1]: God said, 'the heaven is My throne and earth My footstool'.

¹⁷⁷ The number of heavens in 2 Enoch is usually, but not always, seven. In only one case (i.e. the account presented by the version entitled 'О ЕНОСЕ УТО БЫЛ НА ПЯТОМ НЕБЕСИ И НАПИСАЛ 300 КНИГЪ' ['About Enoch who was on the 5th heaven and wrote 300 books'] briefly mentioned by Попов [1880: 106], Sokolov [1910: 1; part 1 in his Commentaries] with a reference to Pypin [1862a: 15]), and Iatsimirskii [1921: 81-82], the number of heavens is five (which parallels the number of heavens in The Apocalypse of Baruch). On the other hand, in two versions of the longer recension of the apocryphon (i.e. MSS J and P), the heavens are ten. The reason behind these conflicting readings is rather complicated; taken into consideration in this (certainly not only graphic) puzzle of fluctuating numbers of heavens should be various small but significant details reflecting the evolution of Slavonic writing systems. First, it should be noted that in the Glagolitic alphabet the number 7 was marked by the letter 'ЖВѢТЕ'; however, the connection between the letter 'ЖВѢТЕ' and the number 7 was disturbed in the process of transition from Glagolitic to Cyrillic, since in the Cyrillic alphabet the same letter (rendered as Ж) did not have any numeral value. In order to mark the number 7 (employing Cyrillic characters), the scribes used another letter, 'ЗЕМЛѦ' [З]. In the Glagolitic alphabet, however, the numeral value of this letter [i.e. ЗЕМЛѦ] was 9. The number 9, on the other hand, was rendered in Cyrillic alphabet by the letter Θ (Theta), which occurs at the end of the alphabet. As for the number 8, it was marked in Cyrillic by the letter И (Iota) which in Glagolitic had numeral value 20; however, its phonetic twin I (Iota), the 10th letter in both the Glagolitic and the Cyrillic alphabet, had the numeral value of 10; this is also true for the numeral value of this same letter (ι) in Greek alphabet. In the light of all these variations, it is hardly surprising to have different numbers of heavens in various manuscript traditions from different periods and, perhaps, from different scripts. One possibility is that the actual 7th letter in the Greek alphabet, η, which corresponds phonetically to Glagolitic and Cyrillic I (Iota), was once used to mark the number of heavens in the now lost Greek Vorlage; during the process of its translation into Slavonic, the scribe converted the actual 7th letter of the Greek alphabet, η, into either Glagolitic or Cyrillic using its phonetic twin I (Iota/ Iota); and since the latter has a numeral value of 10 in both Glagolitic and Cyrillic scripts, the number of heavens was also emended from 7 to 10. See also the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 442, footnote XXI. 6].

¹⁷⁸ Var. 'altars'. However, the word прѣстоля (= θρόνος, κόλπος) can also denote one of the angelic ranks (= θρόνοι); see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 551-552]. The latter is attested in a number of Glagolitic monuments, such as Glagolita Clocianus, Codex Marianus, Euchologium Sinaiticum, Codex Assemanianus (also known as Evangelium Assemani), as well as in some early Cyrillic texts (Liber Sabbae, Codex Suprasliensis) composed in the late 10th and early 11th centuries. It would be safe to suggest therefore that in this particular context the lexeme прѣстоля was most probably used to denote a specific angelic rank.

¹⁷⁹ In MS P they are nine [ѿ]; see Forbes and Charles [1913: 441, 20:1, and especially footnote XX.3].

station of Othanim {Ophanim} [свѣтлостіаніе ѿанн^мское].¹⁸⁰ I got scared [оубоах са] and started shaking from great fear [вѣстрепетахъ страхо^м велнко^м]. And the {two} men took me [пожста ма мжжа] and conducted me among their midst [ведоста ма въ срѣдѣ н^х], and told me, 'Have courage, Enoch, do not be afraid [дрѣзан, Еноше, не вон са]!' And they showed me God from a distance [показашѣ ми Га ѿдалече]; He was sitting on His highest Throne [сѣдаща на прѣстолѣ свое^м прѣвысоцѣ^м]. All the heavenly hosts stepped forth and stood in a line of ten ranks, according to their status [всѣх вон нѣснх вѣстѣпнвшіе стоахѣ на ѿ-тн^х степенѣ^х по ѹнноу]. And they bowed before God [поклонѣхѣ са Гѣн]; and with joy and merriment they again returned to their places [пакы вѣстѣпахѣ на мѣста своа въ радостн н въ веселн], in exceedingly bright light [въ свѣтѣ безмѣрнемѣ], singing with low and gentle voices [пожце пѣснх малнх н кроткымн гласн]. And the glorious ones were serving Him without departure through night and without leaving through day [славнх слоужещіа ѣмоу не ѿстѣпахѣ^т ноцѣ^х, нн ѿхода^т днѣ^х], while standing before God's face and fulfilling His will [стожше прѣ^а лице^м гѣн^м н твораще вола ѣго]. The Cherubim [хероувимн] and Seraphim [серафимн] surrounded the Throne [ѿкрѣтъ прѣстола ѿвстожцѣ], and the ones with six wings were covering His Throne [шестокрнцн покрываѣ^т прѣстоль ѣго], singing with a quiet voice before God's face [пожце тнхо^м гласо^м прѣ^а лице^м гѣн^м]. When I saw all this, the {two} men said to me, 'Enoch, we were ordered to accompany you until here [Еноше, до зде на^м с тобож ѣ повѣлено съвѣпѣтствовати].' The men went away and I never saw them {again}. I remained alone on the brink of Heaven [ѿста^х ѣднѣ на концѣ нѣсѣ]. I got scared [възбоах са] and I fell on my face [падо^х на лицн свое^м] and said to myself [рѣ^х въ себѣ], 'Woe is me, what has befallen me [оухъ мнѣ, ѹто ма ѿврѣте]?' God sent one of his glorious {archangels} [ѣднного ѿ славны^х свон^х], the archangel Gabriel [архагѣла Гаврѣла], who said to me, 'Have courage, Enoch, do not be afraid [дрѣзан, Еноше, не вон се]! Rise [вѣстанн] and come with me [пойди съ множ] and stand before the face of God forever [станн прѣ^а лице^м гѣн^м въ вѣкы]!' I answered him and said to myself, 'My God, my soul □ troubled from fear and trembling □ departed from me [ѿстѣпн дѣѣа моа нз мене ѿ стрѣа н трепета]. Please ask the men who brought me here to come to me [възови къ мнѣ мжжа, прнведша ма до мѣста сего] because I trust them [зане тѣма оупова^х]; with them {only} will I {have confidence to} go before God's face [зане тѣма оупова^х н съ тѣма нѣж прѣ^а лице гѣнѣ]!' And Gabriel swept me up just like the wind takes away a leaf [въсхѣити ма Гаврѣла, ѣко въсхѣцаѣт са лнсть вѣтро^м]. He took me and placed me before God's face [ѣмша ма н постави ма прѣ^а лице^м гѣн^м]. I looked into the face of God [внѣѣ^х Гѣ въ лице],¹⁸¹ His face was strong and most glorious [лицѣ ѣго силно н прѣславно], wondrous and most awesome [ѹдно н прѣоужасно], frightening and most fearsome [грознѣ н прнтрапно]. Who am I to tell about the incomprehensible Divine Being [кто ѣсмѣ азъ повѣдати неѿвѣтѣое сжцѣств гѣа]; and {about} His most wondrous ineffable face [лицѣ ѣго прѣднвно н ненсповѣднмо]; and {about} His sophisticated visage [лнкѣ многоѹченны ѣго]; and {about} the polyphonic and supreme Throne of God made by no human hand [мно^ггла^нн и прѣвелнкы и нержкотворанн прѣстоль г^нъ]; and {about} the standing of the host of Seraphim and Cherubim surrounding Him [анкостоаніе ѿкржгъ ёго хероувн^м и серафїмскы евоа]; and {about} their constant singing [немлѣуна пѣніа н^х]; {and about} the unchangeable and indescribable image of His beauty [ѿбразъ красоти ёго непрѣмѣненъ и несповѣдн^м]. Who is to relate this greatness of His glory [велнко тоу славы ёго кто нсповѣсть]? I fell on my face [падѡ^х ницъ] and bowed before God [поклонн^х са г^нъ]; and God said to me with his mouth [г^нъ оустн своихн ре^в къ мнѣ], 'Have courage, Enoch, do not be afraid [дрѣзан, Еноше, не бон са]! Rise up [въстанн] and stand up before My face [станн прѣ^а лице^м мон^м] forever [въ вѣкы]!' And God's archestrategos Michael lifted me [въздвнже ма Мнханлъ архнстратнгъ г^нъ] and led me [прнве^а ма] to the face of God [прѣ^а лице г^на]. And God said to His servants [ре^в г^нъ слоуга^м своихн], while testing them [нскоушаж н^х],¹⁸² 'May Enoch rise and stand up before My face forever [да въстжпн^т Ено^х стоати прѣ^а лице^м монмъ въ вѣкы]'. And the glorious ones bowed before God [поклонншѧ славы г^нъ] and said [рѣшж], 'May {Enoch} step up according to Your voice [да оустжпн^т по г^лоу твоѣму]!' And God said to Michael [г^ла г^нъ Мнханлоу], 'Approach [прнстжпн] and remove Enoch's earthly garments'¹⁸³ [сѣвлѣцн Еноха съ земнн^х рнзъ]! Anoint him with My blessed oil [помажн ёго мастїж бл^гож моѣж] and dress him with garments of My glory [ѿблѣцн ёго въ рнзы славы моѣж]!'¹⁸⁴ Michael did what God told him [такѡ сътвори Мнханлъ, ѡко же ре^в ёмоу г^нъ]; he anointed me [помаза ма] and dressed me [ѿблѣче ма]. The appearance of the oil was greater than a great light [вндѣніе масла ѡного па^в свѣта велнкаа] and its lubricant was like blessed dew [масть ёго ѡко роса бл^га], and its fragrance was like myrrh [вона ёго ѡко смрпа] shining like the sun's rays [ѡко лоуѣ сл^нѣне лѣстаце са]. I looked at myself [сѣглада^х са са^м] and saw that I was like one of His glorious ones [б^ы^х ѡко ѣдннъ ѿ славы^х его] and there was no obvious difference [не б^ы разлнѣж оузорнаго].

¹⁸⁰ See Enoch I [61:10, 71:7] and Dan. [7:9], where wheels of the divine chariot or a class of angels are equated with Cherubim and Seraphim; see also Andersen [1984: 135, footnote 20b].

¹⁸¹ The following text is inserted in the margins at this point: 'внѣѣннѣ лицѣ ѣго ѣко желѣзо раждежено' (= 'the appearance of His face was like melting iron').

¹⁸² Lit. 'tempting them'.

¹⁸³ The act of extracting Enoch from his terrestrial clothes and dressing him in celestial garments signifies in effect his metamorphosis from a mortal man into an angelic being. Encoded in this fragment is a discrete reference to the primordial 'garments of light' in which Adam and Eve were clothed in Eden, and of which they were stripped afterwards; in fact, it is an encrypted reversal of the Fall narrative. While the Original Sin caused the loss of the angelic status enjoyed by the first people and triggered their expulsion from Paradise, the new status of the protoplasts as mortals was signified by the replacement of the heavenly 'garments of light' with 'coats of skins' [Gn 3:21]; being mortal also meant that they were to wear on Earth 'clothes tailored by human hands.' The removal of Enoch's 'earthly garments' in God's presence indicates that at this point he is transformed into a type of being Adam used to be before the Fall, i.e. an angel clothed with 'garments of God's glory'. By being stripped of the 'clothes tailored by human hands' and dressed in 'clothes made by no human hands', Enoch thus becomes 'the New Adam' and regains the pristine glory of mankind before the Fall.

¹⁸⁴ See also Forbes and Charles [1913: 443, footnote XXII. 8].

Chapter Ten

And God summoned one of His archangels [вѣзва Гѣ ѣдннгого ѿ архангѣлъ свон^x], whose name was Vrevoil [Врѣвоила],¹⁸⁵ {and} who was swifter in wisdom than the other archangels¹⁸⁶ [нже н бѣшж скорѣ мждростж пауе ннѣ^x архангѣлъ]; he was {the one} writing down all God's acts [напнсоуе всѣ дѣла гнѣ]. The Lord said to ¹⁸⁵ As noted by Vaillant, this form is attested in the two Bulgarian versions of the longer recension of 2 Enoch, MSS J and R (=our S) [Vaillant 1952: 26, footnote 9]. However, different text-witnesses give various versions of the name of this archangel. As pointed out by Pennington, 'not only do the MSS vary considerably from one another in the spelling of this name in each of the five instances in which it occurs in this chapter [of MS U], but they also differ individually from instance to instance. Thus, in the first instance B*Ba read 'Vreteil', N 'Vretil', and P 'Pravuil'; and B reads 'Vreteil' in the first instance, but 'Vreveil' in the others' [Pennington 1984: 338, footnote 1]; see also Forbes and Charles [1913: 443, footnote XXII.11] and Vaillant [1952: 26, footnotes 9, 14, 20, 35, 39]. Andersen also calls attention to this puzzling detail: 'P's reading Pravuil is deviant. The other numerous variations in spelling are not material. The name is otherwise unknown, and remains unexplained' [1983: 140, footnote 22 r]. The answer to this puzzle may be entrenched in indigenous Slavonic ethnohermeneutics; hints encoded in vernacular dialects and popular angelology (usually excluded from the scribal conventions of the 'learned') may provide the solution here. The role assigned to this archangel in the above narrative shows that his main function is to speak to Enoch, to converse with him and to instruct him verbally about the mysteries of the Universe. He is appointed by God to tell the scribe all about the celestial and terrestrial phenomena, and to spell out for him the enigma of the movements of elements; he also has to articulate for Enoch the unfathomable calculations of the trajectories of luminaries, and to report 'about the Sun, the Moon, and stars, and the change of their movements, and about seasons, and years, the days and hours and rising up of clouds, the appearance of winds, the number of angels, songs of armed hosts, of every human thing, and songs in various languages, and human life, and orders and instructions and sweet-voiced singing, and everything which is edifying', etc. The entire chapter is in fact an angelic discourse about God's incomprehensible creation of Heaven and Earth, a discourse lasting for 30 days and 30 nights without Vrevoil's mouth ever stopping. He is 'the Talker', 'the Recounter', 'the Storyteller of Creation,' 'the Speaker on behalf of God', and thus, the verbal image of Divine agency. The name given to him, Vrevoil [Врѣвоила/Врѣвоила], is in fact a theonym which is derived from the Indo-European morpheme werw-* (etymologically related to Proto-Indo-European stem uer-*), with cognate forms in Hittite (uer-iie/a), Greek (εἶπω < uer-io*), Lat. (verbum), Gothic (waúrd), all of which denoting 'to speak' (and/or 'speech', but also 'word'), 'to talk', 'to call', 'to invoke', 'to summon', 'to name'; see Gamkrelidze and Ivanov [1984: 216, 231] and Kloekhorst [2008: 1002-1003]. The picture gets even more interesting when we take into consideration Slavonic ethnolinguistic data. The Indo-European morpheme werw-* has cognates not only in Old Church Slavonic, but also in some Bulgarian dialects, e.g. the verb врея [врѣвѣти / врѣвѣж / врѣвѣ] (meaning 'to talk', 'to speak', 'to converse', 'to answer', 'to respond'), the noun врея / вреевѣж [врѣва/врѣвѣжъ] ('talk', 'conversation', 'discourse'), etc.; see the discussion in Gerov [1895:166] and Georgiev et al. [1971: 183-4]. The linguistic evidence suggests that the name of the archangel who conversed with Enoch on the highest (seventh/tenth) heaven, i.e. Врѣвоила/Врѣвоила/Вреевѣла/Врѣтила was a derivative form of the verb врѣвѣти/врѣвѣж (врея). The fact that this form is attested in Bulgarian dialects suggests that the territory where these dialects were (and still are) spoken is most probably the homeland of the earliest Slavonic translation of 2 Enoch. This solves the enigma of the name Vrevoil [Врѣвоила/Врѣвоила] (and its variation Vreveil/ Vereveil/Vreteil/Vretil). As for the name 'Pravuil' (which was attested in the Poltava MS), it was most probably a corrupt version of the 'original' theonym Врѣвоила/Врѣвоила caused by scribal error (rendering B as П, etc.). Subsequently this form underwent a process of secondary (that is folk) etymologisation, thus acquiring new undertones. In this way the angel 'who spoke rightly' (i.e. право) became an epitome of 'rightful/truthful/faithful/devoted word'; hence his name, i.e. 'Pravuil'.

¹⁸⁶ Var. 'whose intellect was quicker than the other archangels'.

Vrevoil [Гѣа Гѣ Врѣвонлоу], 'Bring out the books from my treasury'¹⁸⁷ [нѣнеси кнѣгы ѿ хранилищѣ моѣх]! Take a reed(-stylus) [вѣзмѣ трѣсть]¹⁸⁸ and give it to Enoch [даждѣ Еноховѣ] and recount¹⁸⁹ for him {the content of} the books [скажи ѿмоу кнѣгы]! Vrevoil hastened [оускори Врѣвонль] and brought exquisite books [прѣнеса къ мнѣ кнѣгы нѣзѣщенѣ]¹⁹⁰ {fragrant/anointed with} myrrh [нѣзмурна^М]

¹⁸⁷ Var. 'storehouses'.

¹⁸⁸ Translated by Pennington and Andersen as 'pen' (= κάλαμος); although this interpretation is, in general, correct, it oversimplifies the semantic coverage of the lexeme трѣсть, and especially its metaphorical use in scribal traditions of Slavia Orthodoxa. The survey of sources in Tseitlin et al. [1999: 705] suggests that its earliest attestations are found in a number of Glagolitic monuments (Codex Marianus, Codex Zographensis, Codex Assemanianus), and in some Cyrillic texts (Liber Sabbae, Codex Suprasliensis) compiled in Bulgaria in the 10th-11th centuries; in all these texts it denotes an 'instrument for writing' [= instrumenti scriptorii genus]. However, in some other sources (mostly indigenous apocryphal apocalypses of messianic content) it was employed to denote 'prophet's staff', or 'prophet's sceptre'. One such example comes from the anonymous Bulgarian apocryphal chronicle entitled Сказаніе Нсаіе пророка како възнесень бысть аггелом до 7-го небесы (composed most probably in second half of the 11th century). According to this text, when the Prophet Isaiah was taken by an angel to the seventh heaven, he was given there specific regalia of priesthood = prophethood (denoted as трѣсть) so that he could lead the exodus of 'the chosen people' from 'the Old Rome' to the promised land of New Jerusalem:

Тогда же азъ, братіе, божіемъ повеленіемъ, прїидохъ на лѣвон странѣ Рима и одѣлахъ третію чсъ отъ коуманн, и поведохъ нхъ поутемъ, трѣстію показоуе [...] (Quoted after Ivanov [1925: 281]).

In iconographic tradition of Slavia Orthodoxa the Prophets / Priests are likewise depicted with a staff (or scepter) symbolising their special status; the same iconographic convention is followed by the unknown iconpainter of the altarpiece from the region of Lom (North-Western Bulgaria) on which Enoch is depicted in exactly the same manner: as a priest/prophet holding a scepter in his hand (see Figs 3 and 4).

¹⁸⁹ Lit. 'tell' / 'narrate' / 'relate' / 'report' / 'give a verbal account' (significantly, MS U reads here поглаголи емѣ кнѣгы). For writing as a product of orality in biblical tradition, see van der Toorn [2007: 14-15].

¹⁹⁰ Pennington suggests 'bright' for U and 'decorated' for R (=our S) [1984: 338, footnote 2]. Vaillant, on the other hand, while commenting on the famous expression нѣзошрени змоуреннемъ in U with reference to its parallel renditions in various witnesses (e.g. in B as нѣзошрени нѣзмурнемъ, in N as нѣзоштрени нѣзмурніемъ, in *B*² as нѣзепириени нѣзмурнемъ, and finally in R as нѣзѣщенѣ нѣзмурна^М) simply suggests the following: 'Le participe нѣзошрени ne donne pas de sens, et нѣзѣщенѣ(ы) P n'en doit être que le remanent. Si *B*² conserve la leçon primitive, ce qui n'est pas sûr, on lira: нѣспштрени смурнемъ.' [1952: 26, footnote 22].

A closer linguistic consideration of the above expression (i.e. кнѣгы нѣзѣщенѣ нѣзмурна^М) brings interesting results. In fact, the adjectival (past passive participle) form нѣзѣщенѣ (sing. нѣзѣщенѣ) is etymologically related to the Proto-Slavonic jъz-ęlj-ьnъ* / нѣz-aj-ьnъ ('chosen' / 'selected' / 'outstanding' / 'extraordinary' / 'exclusive' / 'special'); see Vasmer [1986: 124] and Georgiev et al. [1979: 61]. Its earlier attestations (i.e. нѣзѣщннѣскѣ) are found in some Old Church Slavonic (Cyrillic) monuments of South-Slavonic (Bulgarian) linguistic provenance, e.g. Codex Suprasliensis; see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 258]. Related (verbal and the adjectival/participial) forms, such as нѣзѣществовати / прѣнѣзѣществовати and нѣзѣщенѣ / прѣнѣзѣщенѣ also appear in the Bulgarian translation of The Chronicles of Constantine Manasses (compiled in the 14th century upon the request of Ivan Alexander), and in other contemporary Russian sources; see in this connection the brief lexicographic survey of MSS with attestations of нѣзѣщннѣ / нѣзѣщннѣ (as translations of ἀριστος, τάξις ἀρίστη, ἐξαιρετον) and нѣзѣщннѣство (meaning 'praestantia') in Sreznevskii [1893: 1086]. In the light of the above it can be argued that the expressions нѣзошрени and gave me from his hand a quick-writing reed(-stylus)¹⁹¹ [дѣмн трѣсть скорописанѣа нз ржкы своѣж]. And he told me [бѣ глѣа мн] {about} all celestial¹⁹² and terrestrial and marine activities [вѣсѣ дѣла нѣсѣ н земае н морѣ], and the movements of all elements [н вѣсѣ^x стухын прѣхожденіе н^x], and {about} the trajectories of their fluctuations [шествіа нзмѣненіа н^x], {and about} the Zodiac-signs [жнвотгрѣмѣніе н^x],¹⁹³ and {he also instructed me about} the Sun [слѣце], the Moon [лоунж], and the stars [звѣзды], and the change of their movements [шествіа нзмѣненіа н^x], seasons [врѣмана], and years [лѣта], the days [дѣни] and hours [часн] and rising up of clouds [вѣсходн ѡблакъ], the departure¹⁹⁴ of winds [нсходн нзмурнемъ (in B), нзѡштрєнны нзмурнїемъ (in N), нзпєцїрены нзмїрнїемъ (in *B*²), etc. were actually corrupt or amended variations of a composed stock-epithet applied to 'scriptures'; those were poetically described as 'exquisite books that were fragrant/ anointed with myrrh'. The expression кнїгы нзѡцєннѣ нзмурнѣ^m from MS R (=our S) is but one of its 'incorrupt' attestations.

¹⁹¹ Andersen mentions a knife (?) here [1984:140].

¹⁹² Var. 'taking place in the sky', taking place in heavens.'

¹⁹³ The alternative wording in MS P (громовъ грѣмѣнїа) is translated by Morfill and Charles [1896: 29] as 'the noise of the thunder'; in the next edition of the same recension (by Forbes and Charles), the phrase is rendered as 'the thunderings of the thunder' [1913: 443]. Andersen, on the other hand, interprets this expression (on the basis of MS J) as 'the living thunder' [1984: 140].

The form жнвотгрѣмѣнїе appears to be an artificial term coined to denote 'Zodiac (signs)' [ζωδιακός]. It is a composite noun, the first part of which (жнвот-) is a translation of the Gk. ζων ('living being', 'creature', 'animal', or 'animal figure'), while the second part (-грѣмѣнїе) is a corrupt transliteration of the Gk. γράφια (=scriptura) denoting 'character', 'letter'. Cf. also the related Gk. verb ζωγραφειν, meaning 'to paint (animal figures, living creatures, etc.)'. One of the earliest attestations of the noun жнвотъ with relation to the 12 Zodiac signs is found in Symeon's Florilegium (also known as Sviatoslav's Miscellany, after the earliest extant witness from 1073); the description of the 'Twelve Animals' (i.e. 12 Zodiac signs) is part of Іѡа(на) Дамаскннѣ о македоньскыныхъ мѣсцнхъ отъ црѣвьнааго прѣданнїа (Fol. 250 r -251r), the opening paragraph of which reads as follows:

Глѣбѣ бо нѣнне с жшѣа дѣва на десѣте жнвоты • звѣздамн на небєсн протнвноє пошѣстнїє нмоушѣа • слѣнѣж же н лоунѣ • н нѣмѣ патн планнѣтѣмъ • н • іѣ • жнвоты прѣходаѣа • сѣдмн тон • сѣдмн же планнѣтѣ сжѣтѣ нмєна сє • слѣнѣце ло(у)на • зєус • єрмнсь • арн(с) • афроднт(н) • (к)ронос • планнѣтѣ же нарнѣжѣтѣ ю • нмѣже странѣ небєсє пошѣ^{стѣн}їє нмоутѣ • єсть же по коємѣждѣо поѣсж єдннѣ отъ ѣ планнѣтѣ. [. . .] ; see Dinekov et al. [1991: 694]

Further on the relationship between the text of Іѡа(на) Дамаскннѣ о македоньскыныхъ мѣсцнхъ отъ црѣвьнааго прѣданнїа from Symeon's Florilegium and 2 Enoch, see the discussion below (footnotes 210, 211, 214). In fact, Sokolov also briefly mentions the use of the noun жнвотъ within the context of the 12 Zodiac signs in 2 Enoch [1910: 22, footnote k; 24 footnote x] and discusses the hypothetical semantic coverage of the glossary жнвотгрѣмѣнїе suggesting a probable link with Brontoscopy (thunder-divination) [ibid. 25]. This is a possible (but rather tentative) interpretation which is difficult to prove; see also the discussion in Vaillant [1952: 96-97, and especially footnote 1] and Petkanova [2001: 162-167]. On the duodentary animal cycle in medieval Slavonic tradition (with special emphasis on Russian texts), see Ryan [1971:12-20]. On astronomical knowledge in Symeon's Florilegium, see Dobrev [1979: 101], Ivanova [1991: 28-29, footnotes 41, 42, 43, 44, 45].

¹⁹⁴ Lit. 'exits'.

вѣтрѣхъ], the number of angels [аггласка ѡнсла], songs of armed hosts [пѣснь вѣсржженъ вон], {and about} every human thing [всѣкъ вещь ѡлѣжа], and songs in various languages [всѣкъ ѡзыкъ пѣснь], and {he told me about} human life [жнѣ ѡлѣ], and orders [заповѣдъ] and instructions [поученїа] and sweet-voiced singing [сладкогласъ пѣнїе], and everything which is edifying [всѣ, ѣлко по^аба^т поучати са]. Vrevoil was telling¹⁹⁵ me all this for 30 days and 30 nights without his mouth stopping speaking [исповѣда ми вѣвонлъ днѣ ѡ н поцн ѡ, н не прѣмлъкоша оуста ѣго гласа], whereas I was writing down all the signs of creation without ceasing [аз же не по^хн пише всѣ знаменїа вса ж тварн]. When I completed the 30 days and 30 nights [ѡко сконча^х днѣ ѡ н поцн ѡ], Vrevoil said to me [гласъ къ мнѣ вѣвонлъ], 'This is everything which I had to tell you, which you have written down [се ѣлко ти сповѣдо^х н ѣлко напнса]. Now sit and write down [сѣдн напн^ш] all the souls of the people [вса дшѣ ѡлѣ] who are yet to be born [ѣлко н^х не рождно] and also the places which are predestined for them forever [н мѣста н^х оуготована до вѣка], since every soul is predestined even before the creation of the Earth [вса б о дшѣ оуготована сж^т прѣжде вѣсржженїа земнаго].'¹⁹⁶ I sat for another 30 days and 30 nights [сѣдѣ^х соутоуѣ ѡ днѣ н ѡ поцн] and noted everything [спнса^х вса нзвѣстно], and I wrote 366 books [н пнса^х тѣс кннѣ].¹⁹⁷

Chapter Eleven

God called upon me and said [възва ма Гѣ н ре^ѣ ми], 'Enoch, sit at my left side with Gabriel [ѣноше, сѣдн ѡшоужа мене съ Гаврїило^м]'! And I bowed before God [поклонѣ^х са Гѣ]. And God said to me [гласъ къ мнѣ Гѣ], 'Enoch, whatever you see [ѣноше, ѣлко виднш], whether stationary or moving [ѣлка сж^т стожа н ходаща], is all created by Me [сѣврѣшена множ]. I will disclose to you {everything} [аз же възвѣщаа тебе] from the very beginning, how I created ex nihilo the visible from the invisible [прѣжде даже вса испрѣво ѣлко^ж сѣтворнѣ^х ѡ небытїа н ѡ невннмѣ^х виднмо]. Because I have not disclosed {yet} My secrets even to My angels [н агглас^м бо мон^м не възвѣстнѣ^х тннн мое], neither did I tell them how they came to be [н повѣда^х н^м вѣстанїа н^х], nor {about} My infinity and ineffability and rational creation, about which I tell you today [н мое бесконечнїе н неразоумнїе размыслиш ж тварн , н же тебѣ възвѣщаа днѣ^ѣ]. However, once all visible things did not exist [прѣж^ѣ бо даже не быш ж вн^амаа всѣ]. I was the only one moving within the invisible like the Sun [аз ѣдн^н прохождахъ въ невн^амѣ^х, ѡко сннцѣ], from East to West and from West to East [ѡ вѣстокъ на запа^а, н ѡ запады н на вѣстокъ]. Yet while the Sun has peace I did not find peace [нѣ н сѣнце нма^т покон себѣ, аз же не ѡврѣто^х покон], since I created everything [занае в'са бе створа]. And I thought of making a beginning¹⁹⁸ [оумнслы^х же поставити ѡснованіе]; I created visible beings [сътворити тварь видимѣ]. At first I ordered one of the invisible to descend and {become} visible [повелѣ^х въ неспрѣх^х да съннеде^т ѣдно ѿ невидимх^х видимо]; and the massive Adoil¹⁹⁹ descended [съннеде Адон^а прѣвелн^к зѣло]; and I looked at him [смотрн^х ѣго]; in his abdomen²⁰⁰ there was great luminosity yielded [н се въ урѣвѣ тѣ нмн свѣта велнкаго]. I told him [реко^х къ нему], 'Deliver yourself [раз^арѣши са], Adoil [Адонле],²⁰¹ and may the visible be born from you [бѣдн виднмо раждаемо нс тебе]!²⁰² He delivered himself [раздрѣши са]; and an overwhelmingly great Light came out [нзыде свѣ^т прѣвелн^к], and I {was} in the midst of this Light [н азъ же срѣдѣ свѣта].²⁰³ As the Light was looming [како носациоу са свѣтоу], a great epoch came out from it, making manifest all creatures which I was thinking of creating [е ѿ свѣта възыде вѣкѣ велнкы ѡблѣе в'са тварь, жже азъ помыслих^х сътворити]. I saw that it was good [видѣ^х ѡко бѣго]; and I placed my Throne there [постави^х себѣ прѣсто^а], and sat on it [сѣдо^х на не^м]; and told the Light [свѣтовн же глѣ^х], 'Ascend above the Throne and stand fast [възиди тѣ више прѣсто^а н оутврѣди са]! Be the foundation of the upper {world} [бѣдѣ ѡснованіе вышнн^м]!' Above the Light was nothing else [нѣ^с прѣвыша свѣта нного ннѣ^ссоже]. Then again I bent over [пакы вѣсклонн са], looked down from my Throne [възрѣ^х ѿ прѣстола моѣго] and for the second time raised my voice in the Abyss below and said [възва^х вторнѣа въ прѣнспо^аны^х н рѣ^х], 'May from the invisible firmament appear the invisible²⁰⁴ [да изыде^т ѿ невидимх^х тврѣди невидимо]!' Arkhas came out [нзыде Архасъ], who was hard and heavy and very red [тврѣ^х н та^жкъ н ѣрѣме^н зѣло],²⁰⁵ and I said [рѣ^х], 'Release yourself [разврѣзи са],²⁰⁶ Arkhas, and may the visible be born from you [бѣдн виднмо раждаемо нс тебе]!' He released himself [разрѣши са] and a very big dark epoch came out {of him} [нзыде вѣкѣ тѣмень прѣвелн^к зѣло]; it was carrying the creatures of all the lower worlds [носа тварь долны^х вѣсѣ^х]. I saw that it was good [видѣ^х ѡко добро]; and I said to him [рѣ^х къ немѣ], 'Go down and stand fast [сънниди ти долоу н оутврѣди са]!' And {thus he} became the foundation of the lower {world} [бѣ^с ѡснованіе ¹⁹⁸ Lit. 'foundation' / 'basis'.

¹⁹⁵ Lit. 'said'.

¹⁹⁶ See the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 444, footnote XXIII. 5]. For the archival function of ancient writing, see van der Toorn [2007: 15f.].

¹⁹⁷ The number of the books given (= 366) is a specific feature of the longer recension; in the shorter recension the number of books varies (e.g. 360, 300 etc.) [Andersen 1984: 140-141, especially footnote 23 h]. Most probably the fluctuating number of books in the shorter recension is due to scribal errors. The number of books in the longer recension (i.e. 366) is probably an allusion to the solar calendar.

¹⁹⁹ See Forbes and Charles [1913: 445, footnote XXV. 1], where the form Adoil is interpreted as 'the hand of God'.

²⁰⁰ Lit. 'womb'.

²⁰¹ The name is in the vocative.

²⁰² Here and further below, the terms 'deliver' and 'release' allude to childbirth terminology.

²⁰³ On the homonymy between lexemes denoting Universe and Light see the discussion above (footnote 95).

²⁰⁴ Perhaps a scribal error? It should read: 'May from the invisible firmament appear the visible!'

²⁰⁵ In Old Church Slavonic the adjective ѣрѣме^н is used for the Red Sea.

²⁰⁶ Another term for childbirth; lit. 'untie/unfasten/unknot/unravel/disentangle yourself'.

ннжнн^x]. And there was nothing below this darkness [нѣ̃подѣ тѣмож нного ннѣсоже]. Then I ordered {elements} to be taken from the lightness and darkness [повелѣ^x да възмѣт са ѿ свѣта н ѿ тѣмн] and I said [н рѣ^x], 'Be fecund and be wrapped in Light [бѣдн тлѣсто н ѡвнто свѣто^m]!' I spread this out [то прострѣ^x] and it became water [н бѣ̃вода]. I stretched it over the darkness [прострѣ^x врѣхоу тѣмн], under the Light [ннже свѣта] and thus I fastened the waters [ако воды оутврѣдн^x], that is to say, the Abyss [снрѣ̃^v без[^]нж]; and with Light I encircled the ring of the water [основа^x свѣто^m окрѣгоу воды] and inside I made seven circles [сѣтворн^x ̃з крѣ̃^r вѣноутрѣждоу]. I featured them like crystal²⁰⁷ [въобразн^x ѡко хроусталь], damp and dry [мокро н соухо], that is to say [снрѣ̃^v], glass and ice [стѣкло н ледѣ], surrounded by waters and the other elements [ѡвхожденїа вода^m нннмѣ стнхїа^m]. And I showed each of them their path [оуказа^x комоуждо свон пж^t], with seven stars [̃з-мн^m звѣздамѣ], each of them being in its own heaven [каждо нхѣ на свон^m нѣсн], so that they move in this way [тако да градѣ^t]. I saw that it was good [вндѣ^x ѡко добро]; and I divided the Light from the Darkness [разлѣжн^x междоу свѣто^m н тѣмож], which was in the midst of the waters from here and there [снрѣ̃^v просрѣ̃^v воды сѣдоу н сѣдоу]. And I said to the Light [реко^x свѣтовн], 'May you become day [бѣдн тн днѣ]!' And I ordered the darkness to be night [повелѣ^x тѣмѣ да бѣде^t ноцѣ]; and it became evening and morning, the first day [н бѣ̃ вѣчерѣ н пакы бѣ̃ оутро, то ѣ̃ а днѣ].

In this way I consolidated the heavenly rings [такѡ оутврѣдн^x нѣснѣ крѣгы] and said [реко^x], 'May the lower water, which is under the skies, gather together [да сѣбера^t вода долнѣа, нже ѣ̃ по[^] нѣсе^m въ сѣбранїе ѣдннѡ] and may its waves dry up!' And so it was. From the waves I created stones, hard and great [тврѣдо н велнко], and from the stones I created dryness [ѿ камен н сѣгрѣзн^x соухо], and I called the dry land 'Earth' [нареко^x соушѣ земла]. In the middle of the Earth I set a chasm [посрѣдѣ̃ земла нареко^x оупадо^k], that is to say, an Abyss [снрѣ̃^v без[^]нж]. I brought the sea together in one place and bound it in a yoke [море сѣбра^x на ѣдннѡ мѣсто н сваза^x йго^m]. I told the sea [рѣ^x моревн], 'I give you this internal boundary so that you never extend beyond your waters [се даж тн прѣ̃[^]ль вѣунѣ, н не прѣ̃трѣгнеши са ѿ свон^x во[^]]!' This is how I set up the earth and laid the foundations of the firmament above the waters [таковѡж тврѣ̃ вѣдрѣжн^x н ѡснова^x врѣхоу во[^]]. This day I called for Myself the 'first created' [сн днѣ̃ прѣвзданнн себѣ нареко^x]. And evening came and again morning, and it was the second day [тогда бѣ̃ вѣ^vрѣ н пакы оутро, н бѣ̃ днѣ̃ в.].

In all of these heavenly things I created a fiery nature [къ всѣ̃^m же свон^m нѣнѣ^m ѡбразова^x ѡгнѣно еѣтво]. My eye looked at the firmament and very hard stones [възрѣ̃ око мое на тврѣдн н много жестокы каменѣ]; and from a spark from My eye, lightning acquired aquatic properties [ѿ ѡблнстанїа ока моѣго н вѣспрнж^t н млѣнн етѣво водноѡ]. Fire in water and water in fire [ѡгнѣ въ водѣ н вода въ ѡгнн]; neither did the water extinguish the fire [нн сын ѡного оугашаа^t] nor did the fire dessicate the water [нн ѡно сего ̃соуашаа^t]. This is why lightning is sharper and brighter than sunlight [то̃ родн млѣнїа слѣ̃унаго ѡзаренїе ѡстрѣншїе н свѣтлѣншїа ѣ̃] and soft water is harder than tough stone [мекка вода тврѣжда камене жестокаго ѣ̃]. I struck a great spark from the stone [н ѿ камене^ж оусѣко^x ѡгнѣ велнкы] and I created from the fire the ranks of the incorporeal host of the ten angels [ѿ ѡгнѣ сѣтворн^x ҃ннн бесплѣтнн^x кон̃̃ тѣ̃^m агѣль], and their fiery armaments and their garments, which were like burning flames [н ѡржжѣа н^x ѡгньна н ѡдежде н^x пламн плеѣць]. I ordered each of them to stand according to their rank [повелѣ^x да стож кѣждо въ свое^m ѹнноу]; {but} one of the ranks of archangels seceded {from Me}, together with his subordinates [ѣднн же ѿ ѹнна архагѣкаго ѡвраща са съ ѹнно^m сжѣи^m под нн^m], seized by the futile idea [въспрѣж^t мнслѣ немоѣижа] to place his throne above the clouds above Earth [да поставн^t прѣсто^{ль} свонъ выше ѡбла^k на^a землѣа] and to become equal to My power [да вжде^t тжѹеⁿ моѣн слѣѣ].²⁰⁸ I cast him down from the height together with his angels [ѡврѣго^x ѣго съ высоти съ агѣан ѣго];²⁰⁹ and they began to fly in the air above the Abyss [бѣ лѣтаа по въздоухоу вннж врѣхоу безднн]. This is how I fixed all the heavens [сѣтворн^x тако всѣ нѣса] and it was the third day [бѣ днѣ третѣн].

²⁰⁷ Lit. 'envisages them like crystal.'

And on the third day I ordered the Earth to become overgrown with large trees and forests [въ третн днѣ повелѣ^x землн възрастнѣти дрѣва велнка н горы], and all kinds of sweet grasses [всѣкж трѣвж сладкжа], in each a seed which could be sown [всѣко сѣма сѣжмо]. I planted Paradise [посадн^x ран] and enclosed it [затворн^x] and put up guards — fiery angels [положн^x ѡржжннкы пламенны агѣан]. This is how I conceived the vitalisation of Earth [такѡ сѣтворн^x землн ѡбновленѣ]. Then evening came and morning came — the fourth day [тогда бѣ ве^rрь н бѣ^o оутро, днѣ ѣ].

On the fourth day, I ordered large luminaries to appear on the heavenly rings [въ ѹтврѣтн днѣ повелѣ^x да боу^aтъ свѣтнла велнка на кржзѣ^x нѣсны^x]. On the first and highest ring I placed the star Kronos {i.e. Saturn} [на прѣво^m н вншнѣ^m].

²⁰⁸ Cf. Isaiah 14: 12-15; Ezekiel 28: 12-19; Revelation 12: 7-9. For Slavonic folklore parallels to this motif, see Hnatiuk [1911: 15-17; 1985: 62-64, texts 47-48].

²⁰⁹ A similar concept is expressed in The Secret Book of the Bogomils (Liber Sancti Johannis). According to the 14th century Codex Carcassoniensis, when Satanail aspired to put his throne above the throne of God, he was expelled from Heaven and thrown down to earth:

Et dixi: Domine, antequam Sathanas caderet, in qua gloria persistebat apud Patrem tuum? Et dixit mihi: in tali gloria erat, quod ordinabat virtutes coelorum; ego autem sedebam apud Patrem meum. Ipse erat ordinans omnem imitatoreм Patris, et descendebat de coelo in infimum et ascendebat ab infimis usque ad thronum invisibilis Patris. Et observabat gloriam, quae erat moventis coelos, et cogitavit sedem suam ponere super nubes coelorum et volebat Altissimo similis esse. (Quoted from Ivanov [1925: 73-4].

And I said: 'Lord, before Satan fell, in what state of glory was he with Thy Father?' And He said to me: 'He was in such glory that he was directing the heavenly forces. I, however, was sitting next to my Father. That one [i.e. Satan] was managing things completely in imitation of the Father, and he was descending from Heaven to the depths, and ascending from the depths to the throne of the invisible Father. And he was observing the glory which pertained to the Mover of Heavens, and he got the idea of placing his throne above the clouds of heaven, and he wanted to be like the Most High.' [Butler 1996:191.

This intertextual link between 2 Enoch and The Secret Book of the Bogomils will be discussed elsewhere. On dualistic tendencies of Satan legend in 2 Enoch (with a reference to Liber Sancti Johannis), see Sokolov [1910: 148-151], Ivanov [1925: 188-191], Andersen [1984: 154-155, footnote 32d]. On the relationship between Enochic writings and Manichaean corpus, see Nickelsburg (with reference to Jerome) [2001: 94, 99-100] and Stroumsa [1984: 152-167].

кржѣ постави^x зѣѣдѣ Кроносъ].²¹⁰ On the second {ring}, below it, I placed Aphrodite {i.e. Venus} [на ѿ-емъ ниже поставихъ Афродитъ].²¹¹ On the third,

²¹⁰ The account about the seven luminaries, as rendered in this recension of 2 Enoch, is similar but not identical to the contemporary astronomical fragment found in Symeon's Florilegium [Dinekov et al. 1991: 694]; see also the discussion above, footnote 193. The description of 'the Seven Planets' in the latter is part of the section entitled Иова(на) Дамаскина о македоньскыхъ мѣсахъ отъ црѣвѣнаго прѣданна (Fol. 250 r), which, in turn, has roots in the famous Fountain of Knowledge (or Fountain of Wisdom) by John the Damascene (676–749). Thus in Book 2, Chapter 7 (Concerning light, fire, the luminaries, sun, moon and stars) of his Exact Exposition of the Orthodox Faith, John the Damascene writes:

There are, we are told, seven planets amongst these luminaries, and these move in a direction opposite to that of the heaven: hence the name planets. For, while they say that the heaven moves from east to west, the planets move from west to east; but the heaven bears the seven planets along with it by its swifter motion. Now these are the names of the seven planets: Luna, Mercury, Venus, Sol, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and in each zone of heaven is, we are told, one of these seven planets; in the first and highest — Saturn, in the second — Jupiter, in the third — Mars, in the fourth — Sol, in the fifth — Venus, in the sixth — Mercury, in the seventh and lowest — Luna.

The text of this chapter was translated in Bulgaria in the late 9th/ early 10th century by John the Exarch, and included in his work Theology (Heavens) [Duichev 1954: 59-91; Thompson 1991: 35-59]. As for the version in Symeon's Florilegium, it represents a rather abridged redaction of Damascene's text; it also has some specific textual features which indicate that it was translated from a source which was not identical with the source used by John the Exarch. Still, in both sources (Symeon's Florilegium and John the Exarch's Heavens) the pattern given is: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon, which is the standard Ptolemaic sequence of planets, but in reverse order. The author of 2 Enoch, on the other hand, puts Venus between Saturn and Mars (see the discussion below). Still, in all three sources (2 Enoch, Symeon's Florilegium and Exarch's Heavens), Kronos (Saturn) is placed on the first and highest heavenly ring. Thus, according to Symeon's Florilegium, планнѣ • ѿ на прѣвѣмъ и на вышѣшнѣмъ • кроно ['the first planet on the first and highest level is called Kronos']. Then again, in 2 Enoch, Kronos and other luminaries were considered to be 'stars' (as in Babylonian astronomy), while in Symeon's Florilegium and John the Exarch's Heavens they are called 'planets' (as in Greek astronomy). Another difference is that in 2 Enoch the expression used to denote 'heavenly ring' is кржѣ нѣсѣнъ, while in Symeon's Florilegium (and John the Exarch's Heavens) the same concept is described as a 'girdle'/'waist-band'/'belt' [поѣсъ].

²¹¹ Here the position of Venus on the second ring parallels the planetary pattern given in Book 2, Chapter 6 (Concerning the Heaven) of the aforementioned Exact Exposition of the Orthodox Faith; in this chapter, however, John the Damascene lists the seven planets in an order which differs from that offered in Chapter 7 (Concerning light, fire, the luminaries, sun, moon and stars); in Chapter 6, he puts Venus between Saturn and Mars, as in 2 Enoch:

They say also that there are seven zones of the heaven, one higher than the other. And its nature, they say, is of extreme fineness, like that of smoke, and each zone contains one of the planets. For there are said to be seven planets: Sol, Luna, Jupiter, Mercury, Mars, Venus and Saturn. But sometimes Venus is called Lucifer and sometimes Vesper. These are called planets because their movements are the reverse of those of the heaven. For while the heaven and all other stars move from east to west, these alone move from west to east. And this can easily be seen in the case of the moon, which moves each evening a little backwards.

It is most intriguing that in Slavonic sources Venus may also be called 'Lucifer' [=Дѣньница/Деница], and/or 'Vesper' [=Вечерница]. Thus in the 10th-11th cent. Codex Suprasliensis, which is contemporary to Symeon's Florilegium, the name of Venus is rendered as Дѣньница; see Sreznevskii [1893: 771] and Tseitlin et al. [1999: 203]. This can perhaps explain why the forms ДНН/ДН (as abbreviations of Дѣньница?) were used in astronomical texts from the same period to denote the planet positioned on either the second or on the fifth ring. Thus the earliest extant copy of Symeon's Florilegium (i.e. Sviatoslav's Miscellany from 1073) places on the second ring a planet the name of which is given as Aries {i.e. Mars} [на ꙗ-емь Аррѣсъ].²¹² On the fourth, the Sun [на ѿ-мь Слѣнце].²¹³ On the fifth, Zeus {i.e. Jupiter} [на ѿ-мь Зѣусъ].²¹⁴ On the sixth, Hermes {i.e. Mercury} [на ѿ-мь Ермѣ].²¹⁵ On the seventh, the Moon [на ѿ-мь Лоунѣ].²¹⁶ I adorned the lower ether with smaller stars [меншнмн звѣздамн оукрашѣ аерѣ долнѣ], and I put the Sun to shine during the day [поставиѣ слѣнце на просвѣщеніе днѣ], while the Moon and stars {were to shine} during the night [а лоунѣ и звѣзды на просвѣщеніе нощи]; and {I ordered} the Sun to advance through each Zodiac {sign} [слѣнце до ходиѣ по коемоуждо жнвотоу], being 12 Zodiac {signs} in the orbit of the Moon [жнвоѣ вѣ-те ѡбхожденіе мѣсѣу]. I gave names to the Zodiac signs²¹⁷, {and the time} when they enter to be born, and in their chronology and how АВВ; the planet Venus / Aphrodite, on the other hand, appears on the fifth ring, precisely where 2 Enoch has Zeus (i.e. Jupiter). Symeon's Florilegium must then have had Jupiter on the second ring, and the form АВВ may have been a corrupt version of the theonym denoting it. A similar detail appears in the 13th century version of Symeon's Florilegium copied in the Hilandar Monastery (i.e. Hilandar Miscellany), according to which the name of the planet on the second ring is АВВ [Lavrov 1899: xii, footnote 4]. There may be one further clue to explain the different order in 2 Enoch, which appears to have had Venus and Jupiter exchange places: Babylonian astronomy of the Seleucid period had Venus in the second position in the order of planets [Koch-Westenholz 1995: 120, footnote 2], and 2 Enoch may have attempted to follow this order, which required Venus changing places with Jupiter. In this way, 2 Enoch appears to be a compromise between the Seleucid Babylonian and Ptolemaic Greek order of planets, and therefore reflects neither system precisely. Moreover, the interchange between Venus and Jupiter in the 2 Enoch list may show their mutual links within Babylonian astrology, as both being benevolent and portending favourable omens (in contrast to malevolent Saturn and Mars, and ambivalent Mercury) [Rochberg-Halton 1984: 123].

On the other hand, the form ДѢВЪНЦА was likewise used to render the name of Lucifer in the Slavonic translation of Isaiah 14: 12-15; in the latter case, it functioned as a synonym of 'the fallen angel' Satan. This detail may explain why in 2 Enoch the Watchers and their followers are also sentenced on the Second and the Fifth Heavens, in association with the second and fifth planetary rings which were implicitly linked with Satan, through the name of Lucifer (i.e. Venus, also positioned on either second or the fifth ring). It should be noted, however, that the Hell of the Third Heaven is not intended for fallen angels but for (human) sinners. This hypothesis triggers further questions, which will be analysed in detail elsewhere.

²¹² In Symeon's Florilegium Аррѣсъ is rendered as Аррѣ.

²¹³ Identical reading with Symeon's Florilegium.

²¹⁴ As briefly mentioned above, in contrast to 2 Enoch, Symeon's Florilegium puts Venus (=Lucifer) on the fifth ring, and not Jupiter (see the discussion above). Indeed, 2 Enoch gives an idiosyncratic scheme which does not appear to follow either Babylonian or Greek astronomy (in contrast to Symeon's Florilegium and John the Exarch's Heavens, which conform to Ptolemy's order of planets), suggesting that 2 Enoch drew from different sources. This, in turn, indicates that in the period when the Slavonic protograph of 2 Enoch was composed (along with Symeon's Florilegium and John the Exarch's Heavens), medieval Bulgarian science did not have at its disposal an established system of astronomical knowledge; scientific concepts of this period derived from various competing sources from different traditions.

²¹⁵ The three sources agree at this point and put Hermes (Mercury) [Ермѣ / Ермѣсъ] on the sixth heavenly ring.

²¹⁶ According to all three sources, the Moon is placed on the lowest, seventh ring.

²¹⁷ At this point Symeon's Florilegium lists the names of the 12 Zodiac signs (Fol. 250r) [Dinekov et al. 1991: 694].

the hours go around [положн^х нмена н^х жнво^т грѣмѣнїе н^х н поворожденїа н^х н часотворенїа н^х како ѡбхода^т]. And after that it was night and morning — the fifth day [Н тогда бѣ^т ноцѣ н бѣ^т оутро, дѣ^т ѣ].

On the fifth day [въ дѣ^т патн], I ordered the sea to give birth to fish and all kinds of birds [породн рнбы н птнцѣ [ного разлнчнѣ]], to all kinds of creatures crawling on the Earth [въсѣ^ткъ гадѣ лазецѣ по землн], and quadrupeds walking on Earth [ходацѣ по землн четвероногѣ], and to feathered-creatures in the air, male and female [парацѣ по въздоху мжжескѣ по^а н женскѣ], and every breathing soul of all kinds of animals [въсѣ^ткж дїшж дншжцоу всѣ^х жнвотны^х]. It became evening and became morning — the sixth day [Н бѣ^т веучерѣ, н бѣ^т пакы оутро, дѣ^т ѣ].

On the sixth day [въ шестн дѣ^т ѣ], I ordered My wisdom [повелѣ^х моѣ^н мждростн] to create man [сѣтворнѣ^т члѣка],²¹⁸ from seven components [ѡ ѣ^т-мн^х сѣставѣ]:²¹⁹ his flesh from earth [плѣ^т ѣго ѡ земла],²²⁰ his blood from dew and sun

²¹⁸ As indicated by St. Thompson in his Motif-Index of Folk Literature, there are several numerical patterns inlaid in cosmogonic and anthropogonic narratives. The motif of 'Seven substances employed in composition of human body' is classified by him as type A 1260.1.4; the anthropogonic paradigm of 2 Enoch falls into this category. The parallel motif of Adam octipartite (i.e. man made of eight components: body — from earth, bones — from stones, veins — from roots, blood — from water, hair — from grass, thoughts — from winds, spirit — from clouds, warmth — from fire, cold — from air, dryness — from earth, instability — from water) is classified as A 1260.1.3. The latter has differing attestations in Slavonic apocrypha; see Mochul'skii [1886: 163-180], Böttrich [1995: 73-82] and Orlov [2007: 11-12]. On the shifting numerical patterns in Slavonic anthropogonies, see Badalanova [2008: 223, 230-235].

²¹⁹ See also the discussion in Forbes and Charles [1913: 448-449, footnote XXX.8] and West [1971: 377]. The anthropogonic paradigm of 2 Enoch has its counterparts in other Slavonic apocrypha (e.g. The Discussion Between the Three Saints, The Sea of Tiberias, etc.), and in folk poetry. Thus the Thompson motif A 1260.1.4 ('Seven substances employed in composition of human body') is found in some Russian oral poems, such as 'The Poem on the Dove Book' / 'The Poem of the Unfathomable Book' [Стих о Голубиной Книге], and The Jerusalem Scroll [Свиток Ерусалимскій]. According to one such text, the creation of man was described as follows:

Первая часть, кости — отъ камня; | Вторая часть, тѣло — отъ земли; | Третія часть, руда — отъ Чер<м>наго моря; | Четверая часть, дыханіе — отъ вѣтру; | Пятая часть, мысли, отъ облыцевъ; | Как оболаци ходють на небеси, вѣтромъ и ненастьемъ, | Такожда въ чловѣкѣ ходють мысли худыя и добрыя; | Отъ добраго разума душа воскресаетъ, | Отъ худаго разума душа погибаетъ; | За добрымъ пошеть, — добро и будетъ, | За худымъ пошеть, — пропасть во вѣки. | Очи — отъ сонца, разумъ — от Святаго Духа.

The bones — from stone, the first element; | the body — from earth, the second element; | the blood — from the Black/Red Sea, the third element; | the breath — from the wind, the forth element; | the thoughts — from clouds, the fifth element; | as clouds wander along in the sky, {moved by} wind and storm, | so do good and bad thoughts in man; | from good reason [i.e. good sense] soul resurrects, | from bad reason soul perishes; | if you follow good {cause}, you will be well; | if you follow evil {cause}, you will be lost forever. | The eyes {are made from} sun, {the sixth element}; | the intellect {comes from} the Holy Spirit, {the seventh element}.

The above text (entitled The Jerusalem Scroll) was recorded by P. Yakushkin in the first half of the 19th century in the Ryazan province of the Russian Empire, and published by P. Bessonov [1861: 68-74, text No. 564, lines 150-161]. Among Russian peasants there existed many different versions of this spiritual poem; some of them were transmitted orally, others were copied by the indigenous scribes, thus becoming part of local vernacular writings ['народные рукописи']. Their headings varied; titles such as: The Jerusalem Verse [Стихъ Ерусалимскій], The Jerusalem Scrolls [Списки Ерусалимскіе], The Jerusalem Sheet [Листъ Ерусалимскій], The List Regarding the Jerusalem Portent [Списокъ

[крѣ̂ ѿ рощи и слѣнца],²²¹ his eyes from the Abyss of the sea [ѿ ѿн ѿ бездны морскыѣ],²²² his bones from stone [костѣ ѿ каменѣа],²²³ his thoughts from angelic alacrity and from clouds [помысль ѿ бръзостѣ аггѣлкыѣ ѿбла^к],²²⁴ his sinews [жнлы ѿ] ²²⁵ and hair [космѣ] from the grasses of the earth [ѿ травѣ]

Ерусалимского знаменія], The Legend of the Scroll [Сказаніе о Свиткѣ], The Scroll of the Jerusalem Portent [Свитокъ Ерусалимского знаменія], Parable [Притча], About Signs and Epistle of Our God Jesus Christ [О знаменіи и посланіи Господа Бога нашего ІХ], The Epistle of the Lord God, Our Saviour Jesus Christ [Посланіе Господа Бога и Снаса Нашего ІХ], The Epistle of Our Lord Himself [Посланіе отъ Самаго Бога Нашего] were among the most popular ones [Bessonov 1861: 68]. Parallels between the vernacular Slavonic anthropogonies and 2 Enoch are analysed elsewhere [Badalanova Geller, forthcoming 2011: 74-79]. See also the discussion in Lincoln [1986: 4-40] who suggests that the anthropogonic narrative in 2 Enoch (along with other creation accounts from the 13th-14th century Irish sources, the 15th century Old Frisian Code of Emsig, etc.) and the Russian Stikh o Golubinoi Knige betray a common Indo-European mythological lineage; beware, however, of some erroneous translations of Russian material (e.g. Стѣх о Голубиной Книгѣ [Stikh o Golubinoi Knige] being rendered by Lincoln as 'Poem on the Dove King' instead of 'Poem on the Dove Book' / 'The Poem of the Unfathomable Book'). Further on the spiritual ballad/poem Stikh o Golubinoi Knige and its links with Zoroastrian cosmology and Armenian heresiology, see Russell [2009: 141-208].

²²⁰ On the homologies of earth and flesh in Indo-European cosmogonies and anthropogonies, see Gamkrelidze and Ivanov [1984: 821]; on the reflexes of these homologies in 2 Enoch, see Lincoln [1986: 4-16, 21-25].

²²¹ Identical with MS J; however, in MS P Adam's blood is from the dew, whereas his eyes are from Sun. It is most intriguing that some other sources also mix up the description of components of Adam's blood with the components for the eyes. One such example comes from the 15th-century Erotapokriseis Razumnik [Разоумникъ ѿ все(м)ъ спросѣ ѿ(у)ѣ] from the Tikveshky Miscellany (MS № 677 from the Archaeographic Collection of Sts. Cyril and Methodius National Library in Sofia, Bulgaria). According to this source, the body of the first man is created, like in the Enochic anthropogenesis, out of seven parts; however, the blood is described as a substance which originates from the sea, whereas the eyes are 'from the Sun and dew.'

Въпро(с)ѣ. ѿ кого сътвори бѣ аѡама. ѿвѣт. ѿ .ꙗ. чѣстѣ .ѡ. тѣло ѿго ѿ зем(л)ѣ .ѡ. кость ѿго ѿ каменѣа .ꙗ. крѣвь ѿго ѿ рощи и ѿ слѣнца .ꙗ. днх(а)нїѣ ѿго ѿ вѣтра. дѣшю ѿго ѿ дѣа вѣжнѣа .ѣ. разоумъ ѿго ѿ ѿблака .с. ѿн ѿго ѿ моря .ꙗ. помнсь ѿ врьзостѣ ѿго агг(с)кнн [Nachov, 1892: 402]

Question: 'From what [components] did God create Adam?' Answer: 'From seven components; the body — from earth, his bones — from stone, the blood — from the dew and the Sun, his breath — from the wind, whereas his soul is from the Holy Spirit, his reason is from the clouds, his eyes — from the sea, his thoughts — from angelic alacrity.'

On the derivation of blood from dew and sun in Indo-European cosmogonies and anthropogonies, with special emphasis on 2 Enoch, see Lincoln [1986: 11-12].

²²² As in MS J; on the attestation of 'Sun' as a macrocosmic alloform for 'eye(s)' in Indo-European languages and mythologies, see Lincoln [1986: 17-18, 21-25].

²²³ On implementation of 'bone' as a corporeal alloform for 'stone' in Indo-European creation myths, see West [1971: 377] and Lincoln [1986: 7, 12-16, 21-25].

²²⁴ On the mythological derivation of 'thoughts' from 'clouds', see Lincoln [1986: 19-25].

²²⁵ Referring to tendons, veins, or ligaments.

ЗЕМНІЕ],²²⁶ his soul [ДШЖ ЕГО]²²⁷ from My spirit [ѿ Дѣа моѿго] and from the wind [н ѿ вѣтра].²²⁸ And I gave {man} seven traits [да^х ѿмоу 7 есѣтъ]:²²⁹ hearing²³⁰ to flesh [слоу^х къ плѣти], seeing²³¹ to eyes [възрѣніе ѿчю], smell to the spirit/soul [ѿбонѣніе дшѣвно],²³² touch to the sinews [ѿсазаніа жнлы], taste to blood [въкоушеніе крѣве], the durability²³³ to bones [костн трѣпніе], pleasure²³⁴ to ²²⁶ On the Indo-European homology 'plants=hear' as manifestation of the inner reciprocity between the microcosmic body and macrocosmic universe, see Lincoln [1986: 16-17, 21-25].

²²⁷ Instead of 'soul', Morfill and Charles suggest 'spirit': 'his spirit from My Spirit and from the wind' [1896: 39-40]; Andersen also recommends 'his spirit from My spirit and from wind' [1983: 150].

²²⁸ Cf. St. Thompson's Motif-Index: A 185.12 (Deity provides man with soul); on the Indo-European mythopoeic equation 'soul=wind=God's breath', see Dukova [1988: 214-219], Tolstaia [2000: 54, 58, 60], Mencej [2008: 232-234], Badalanova Geller [forthcoming 2011: 41-49; 74-79].

²²⁹ A similar idea of seven traits, i.e. 'seven spirits' which were given to the man at the creation 'to be the means of his doing everything' is attested in The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs (and in particular in The Testament of Reuben, About Ideas, Chapter 2):

Also seven spirits were given him at the Creation to be the means of his doing everything. The first is the spirit of life, with which man's substance is created. The second is the spirit of sight, with which comes desire. The third is the spirit of hearing, with which is given teaching. The fourth is the spirit of smell, with which is given to draw in air and breath. The fifth is the spirit of speech, with which comes knowledge. The sixth is the spirit of taste, with which comes eating and drinking; and by them man's strength is built up (for food is the foundation of strength). The seventh is the spirit of procreation and sexual intercourse, with which sin enters through love of pleasure. For this reason it is the last in the order of creation and first among the desires of youth, because the truth about it goes unrecognized, and it leads the young man like a blind man to a pit, and like a beast over a precipice (Quoted after M. De Jonge [Sparks 1984: 516-517]).

The above fragment comes from the earliest surviving witness from a 10th century MS, Cambridge University Library [MS. Ff. 1.24]. For the Slavonic parallels, see Завѣты Дѣвѣнадцати Патріарховъ in the 14th century Palaea from Aleksandro-Nevskaia Lavra and Palaea from the Synodal Library in Moscow (MS No 210 dated 1477) in Tikhonravov [1863: 96-232]; see also Palaea No 653 in Solovetskaia Library published by I. Porfir'ev [1877: 158-94].

Further on seven sensory faculties in the anthropogonic narrative of 2 Enoch, see Lincoln [1986: 32-33]; on the list of senses in De Hebdomadivus (and cosmology of 'Hippocrates'), see West [1971: 379-379-380].

²³⁰ Linguistic data from various Slavonic dialects suggests that слоухъ has rather broad semantic coverage; see the data presented in Dal' [1882: 225-226]. Apart from 'hearing' per se it can denote also 'sense' in general (with emphasis on the ability to feel things physically, especially through the senses of touch). According to Dal', in Russian dialects the verb слышать (i.e. 'hear') can likewise mean 'to have the physical abilities of smell, hearing, touch and taste, excluding only sight' [ibid., 226]. Besides, the semantic coverage of the noun слух and the verb слышать ('to hear'), can include 'intuition'. Furthermore, the слух/ слышать semantic cluster may cover the notions of 'reason' / 'comprehension' / 'understanding'. Finally, some cognate lexemes (such as Russ. слушать, Bulg. слушам, etc.) may imply the concept of 'obeying', 'conforming' (e.g. the word послушник denoting novice, neophyte in Bulg. and Russ.); see also the discussion in Vasmer [1987: 178-680].

²³¹ Or 'sight'.

²³² Referring to the nose being the passage of the soul through breathing or smelling; lit. 'olfaction of the soul'; one possible translation of this expression would be 'spiritual sensation'.

²³³ Or 'tangibility'.

thoughts [помыслоу сладость].²³⁵ So I thought of saying this wise²³⁶ word [се помыслихъ хитрое слово сказати]: from invisible and visible natures [ѿ невидимаго же и видимаго ества],²³⁷ I created man, from both death and life [сѣздахъ ѿлка ѿ оубога, смръть и живоу]. The image came to know the Word and a new small creature {came into being} — small in greatness and great in smallness [и ѿбрази въсть слово, ꙗкы нѣкакоу тварь ѿнж въ велицѣ малж, и пакы въ малѣ великж]. And I placed him on Earth as a second angel, honourable, great and glorious [на земли поставихъ его аггъла втораго ѿтна и велика и славнаа]. And I put him as king on Earth [поставихъ его црѣ земли], having {rule through} My wisdom [нмѣща моеа мждростѣж], and there was no equal to him on Earth among My creatures [и не бѣ ему подобна на земли и ѿ сжѣи твари мои]. And I gave him a name from four components [поставихъ ему нма ѿ четыри составъ]: from East [ѿ вѣстока], West [ѿ запада], North [ѿ сѣвера], and South [ѿ юга].²³⁸ And I gave him four special stars [поставихъ ему дъ звѣзды нароути] and I called him the name 'Adam' [рекъ нма его ада^м]; and I gave him his {free} will [да^х емъ вола его].²³⁹ And I showed him two paths — the light and the darkness [оказа^х ѿ пжти, свѣтъ и тѣмж], and I told him [рѣхъ ему], 'Here is the Good, and here is the Evil [се ти добро, а се зло], in order to find out whether he has love or hate for Me [да оувѣ^м любов ли нма^т къ мнѣ или ненависть], so that one who loves Me may appear among his kin [да ѡвѣт са въ родѣ его любѣи ма].²⁴⁰ I saw his nature [аз же видѣхъ ество его], but he did not know his own nature [ѿ нже не вѣ^{ше} своѣго ества]; and this lack of knowledge caused a grave trespass [того ради невѣденіе е горе сѣгрѣшеніа],²⁴¹ since he was {fated} to sin [ꙗко сѣгрѣшити ему е]. And I told him [и рѣхъ] that after the trespass, there is nothing but death [по сѣгрѣшеніи нно развѣ смрътъ]. And I granted him a {deep} slumber [поставихъ

²³⁴ Alternatively: 'enjoyment', or 'sweetness'.

²³⁵ Or 'intentions'.

²³⁶ Alternatively: 'crafty', or 'clever'.

²³⁷ Alternatively, 'substance', or 'character'.

²³⁸ An acronym composed from the Greek words denoting the four corners of the Universe:

A ⇒ Ανατολή (East)
D ⇒ Δύσις (West)
A ⇒ Ἀρκτος (North)
M ⇒ Μεσαμβρία (South)

Further on medieval Greek and Slavonic sources interpreting the same idea, i.e. that the name of ADAM was an acronym composed of the initial letters of the words denoting the four corners of the Universe (East, West, North and South), see Morfill and Charles [1896: xvi, xxvii] and Böttrich [1995: 59-72]; consult also Stith Thompson's Motif-Index: A 1241.5 (Man made of earth brought from four different places) and A1281.6.1 (Adam's name composed of initial letters of four stars from the four quarters of the heaven).

²³⁹ Or 'will-power'.

²⁴⁰ Or 'later generations', 'progeny'.

²⁴¹ Or 'sin'.

ѢМОУ СѢНЬ],²⁴² and I put sleep into him and he fell asleep [ВЪЛОЖИ^x ѢМОУ СѢНЬ, Н ОУСПЕ]. And I took from him, the sleeping one, a rib [ВЪЗЕ^x ѢМОУ СПАЩОУ РЕБРО] and created woman for him [СЪТВОРИ^x ѢМОУ ЖЕНЖ],²⁴³ so that his death comes through woman [ЖЕНОЖ ДА ПРИДЕ^t ѢМОУ СЪМР^tЬ]. And I took the last letter²⁴⁴ from him {i.e. the letter М} [ВЪЗА^x ПОСЛАДНА СЛОВО ѢГО] and called her the name 'Mother' [НАРЕКО^x ѢН НМА МѢН], which is to say, 'Eve' [СНРѢ^v ЕВВА]: Adam {and} Mother, Earthly and Life [АДА^m МѢН ЗЕМЛЕНЬ Н ЖИЗНЬ ЖЕ].²⁴⁵ I then created a garden in Eden to the East [СЪТВОРИ^x ѠГРАДЖ ВЪ ЕДОМѢ НА ВЪСТОЦѢ] so that they keep the covenant and observe {My} commands [ДА БЛЮДА^t ЗАВѢ^t Н ХРАНИ^t ЗАПОВѢ^a]. And I opened the skies above him so that he may see the angels singing the song of glory [СЪТВОРИ^x ѢМОУ НѢСА ѠВРѢСТА, ДА ЗРИ^t АГГЛН ПОЖИЕ ПѢ ПОВѢДИЖА],²⁴⁶ and there was eternal light without darkness in Paradise [СВѢ^t БЕЗМРАУНЫ БѢ ВЪИЖ ВЪ РАН]. And the Devil realised that I want to create another world [РАЗУМѢ ДІАВО[^] ЯКО ДРЪГЫ МНРЬ ХОЩЕ СЪТВОРИТИ], which was to obey Adam on Earth and to be ruled by him [ЗАНЕЖЕ ПОВНИЖЛО СЕ Ѣ АДАМОУ НА ЗЕМЛИ Н ѠБЛАДАТИ Н ПРѢТВОРАТИ НМН]. Being the demon of the Lower World [ДІАВО[^] Ѣ ДОЛѢШНИ^x МѢСТЬ ВЪДЕ^t ВѢСЬ],²⁴⁷ the ²⁴² Sleep and shadow are homonyms in some texts.

²⁴³ Cf. Stith Thompson's Motif-Index: A 1275.1 (Creation of first woman from man's rib).

²⁴⁴ Implied in this statement is most probably the Platonic concept of the letters of the alphabet as graphic symbols representing the primordial elements of Creation [Dornseiff: 1925].

²⁴⁵ This is a play on words in Hebrew: Adam and adamah (earth), and Eve and 'life' (Chava/chay).

²⁴⁶ Lit. 'victory'.

²⁴⁷ The Bulgarian linguists Tikhova and Ivanova [2001: 171-184] have recently offered an exhaustive analysis of the diachronic aspects of the semantic coverage of Bēs [ВѢСЬ], as attested in the medieval (i.e. from 9th to 14th cent.) Slavonic translations of the Greek edition of Dialogorum libri IV, de vita et miraculis patrum Italicorum et de aeternitate animarum (composed in 593-594 by Saint Gregory the Great), with a special emphasis on the 14th century versions of ПАТЕРНІКЪ РИМСКЫН and Бесѣдовникъ. Provided there, with reference to N. Gerov [1895: 100-101], are parallel lexicographic data corresponding to the wide attestation of the lexeme ВѢСЬ in vernacular tradition (including magic and medicine). Following L. Sadnik and R. Aitzetmüller [1955: 10; 214 (39)], Tikhova and Ivanova suggest that the Old Church Slavonic lexeme ВѢСЬ is cognate to the Lithuanian baisa ('fear') and baisis ('frightful'/'horrible'/'terrible'/'horrifying'), to the Latin foedus ('abominable, 'vile'), etc.; they maintain that the latter forms are etymologically related to the Indo-European bhoidh-* and bhoi-dh-so*, with reference to the Avestan bayente / byente ('being frightened'). The same is held by the authors of the Bulgarian Etymological Dictionary, who examine the relevant Slavonic dialectal forms and provide a comprehensive survey of the Glagolitic and Cyrillic sources in which ВѢСЬ and its cognates (ВѢСЬНЬ, ВѢСЬНОВАТИ, ВѢСОВАНИЮ, ВѢСОВСЬКЪ, ВѢШЕННЮ, ВЪЗВѢСНТИ СЯ, ВЪЗВѢСЬНЕТИ, ВЪЗВѢСОВАТИ СЯ, ВЪЗВѢШЕННЕ) are attested; these include Glagolita Clozianus, Codex Marianus, Codex Zographensis, Codex Assemanianus, Liber Sabbae, Codex Suprasliensis (from the late 10th and early 11th centuries); see Georgiev et al. [1971: 190-110]. Their survey shows that in most of the Glagolitic and Cyrillic sources, the form ВѢСЬ and its cognates (along with ДѢВВОЛЪ and/or ДѢВОЛЪ) are predominantly used to denote a cluster of related concepts, such as δαίμόνιον, δαίμων, διάβολος. In some cases, however, the glossa ВѢСЬ may stand for, rather surprisingly, πνεῦμα and even θεός. The noun ВѢСОВАНИЮ on the other hand, is used to translate μανία, εἰδωλομανία, ἄθεος οἰκοδομή. As for the (reflexive) verbs ВѢСНТИ СЯ / ВѢСЬНОВАТИ СЯ, they are employed to indicate mental conditions such as μαίνεσθαι, λυττᾶν, δαιμονιᾶν, δαιμονιζεσθαι ('being possessed by an evil demon', 'being insane'); see Tseitlin et al. [1999: 106-7] and Sreznevskii [1893: 220-223]. However, it still remains a mystery why the translators of the canonical biblical text into Old Church Slavonic preferred to substitute the 'convenient' Greek form δαίμων with not change his nature but changed his thoughts, as is the case with the mind of the righteous and sinful [ЕЇѢВА НЕ ПРѢМѢНИ, НЖ МЫСЛЬ, ЯКО ЖЕ ОУМЪ ПРАВЕДНЫ^х И ГРѢШНЫ^х]. He understood his own damnation and sin, which he had committed previously [РАЗУМѢ СВОЖ ѠСЖЖДЕНІЕ И ГРѢ^х НЖЕ СЪГРѢШИ ПРѢЖДЕ]. And that is why he thought of {doing something evil to} Adam [ТОГО РАДИ ПОМЫСЛИ НА АДАМА]. He entered Paradise and enticed Eve [ТАЦѢ^м ѠБРАЗѠ^м ВЪННДЕ^т ВЪ РАИ И ПРѢЛЪСТИ ЕВВЖ]; yet Adam he did not touch [АДАМОУ ЖЕ НЕ ПРИКОСНѢ СѦ]. Because of her {their?} ignorance, I cursed them [НЖ ЗА НЕВѢЖЬСТВІѦ ѢЖ ПРОКЛА^х Н^х]. Yet what I previously blessed I did not curse [Ѧ ѢЖЕ ПРѢЖДЕ БЛѢН^х, ТѢ^х НЕ ПРОКЛА^х], nor did I curse what I previously did not bless [НХЖЕ ПРѢЖДЕ НЕ БЛѢНХѢ, И Т^х НЕ ПРОКЛА^х]. I did not curse man [НИ ЧЛѢКА ПРОКЛА^х] nor the Earth [НИ ЗЕМЛѦ], nor other creatures [НИ ННОЕ ТВАРИ], but the evil fruits of mankind [НЖ ЧЛѢЧКОЕ ЗЛОЕ ПЛО^дСТВО], which are the deeds of the good but yet the fruit of exertion [ТО ДѢЛѢ ДОБРО ТВОРЕНІѦ ПЛО^д ПОТО^м ТРОУДИ]. I told him, 'You are dust and will return to dust [ЗЕМЛѦ ѢСИ И ВЪ ЗМЛѦ ТЖЖДЕ ПОИДЕШИ], {since} I took you from it [Ѡ НЕѢ ЖЕ ТА ВЪЗЕ^х]; and I will not destroy you [НЕ ПОГООУБАЮ ТА], but I will send you there from where I took you [НЖ ПОСЛАЖ ѠКЖДОУ ТЕ ВЪЗА^х]. From there I may take you once again, at my Second Coming [ТОГДА МОЖ ПАКѢ ВЪЗАТИ ТЕ, ВЪ МОЕ ПРИШЕСТВІЕ ВТОРОЕ!]' I blessed all My creatures [БЛѢН^х ВЪСА ТВАРЬ МОЖ], visible and invisible [ВИДИМЖ И НЕВИДИМЖ], and the seventh day on which I rested from all My work [И ДНѢ СЕДМИ, ВЪ И ЖЕ ПОУИ^х ОТЪ ВСѢ^х ДѢЛѢ МОИ^х].

(Marginal note: And Adam was in Paradise for 5½ hours).

On the eighth day [ВЪ И ЖЕ ДНѢ], I also appointed the {very same} eighth day to be the first day of My first created week [ПОЛОЖИ^х ТЪЖДѢ^е ДНѢ И ДѦ БЖДЕ^т Ѧ ПРѢВОЗДАННИ НЕДѢЛА МОѢГО]; so that it may revolve in the image of 7 myriads [И ДѦ ѠБРАЩАЖТ СѦ ВЪ ѠБРАЗѢ 7 ТИСѦЦИ^х ТИ],²⁴⁹ and 8000 {years} [И ТИСѦЦИ^х] might be at the beginning [ДѦ БЖДЖ^т ВЪ НАЧЕЛО] {of chronology}; and may the first day and the eighth day always revolve like this forever [ЯКО Ѡ ПРѢВѢ^м ДНѢ НЕ^дЛА, ТАКО И И ДНѢ НЕ^дЛА ДѦ ВЪЗВРАТАТ СѦ ПРѢО].

(Marginal note: It was the beginning of disparities of boundless time {reckoning}, and regardless of years, or months, or weeks, or days, or hours).

And now, Enoch [И НИѢ ЖЕ, ЕНОШЕ], everything which I told you [ѢЛНКА ТИ СКАЗА^х] and what you understood [И ѢЛНКО РАЗУМѢ] and what you saw in heavens [И ѢЛНКО ВИДѢ НА НБСЕ^х], and what you saw on Earth [И ѢЛНКО ВИДѢ НА ЗЕМЛИ], and what you wrote in books [И ѢЛНКА НАПИСѦ ВЪ КНИГѦ], I managed to create with My wisdom [ПРѢМЖДОСТІѦ МОѢЖ ОУЧЫТИ^х ВЪСА СІЖ СЪТВОРИТИ]. I created it from the highest to the lowest fundamentals, and to the {very} end [СЪТВОРИ^х Ѡ ВЫШНѢГО ОСНОВАНІѦ ДО НИЖНѢГО И ДО КОНЦѦ]. There is no adviser nor heir for my Creation [НѢ СЪВѢСТНИКА, НИ НАСЛѢДНИКА МОИ^м ТВАРЕ^м]; I am Myself eternal and made by no hands [АЗЪ ЕСМѢ СА^м ВѢЧЕ^н И НЕРЖКОТВОРЕ^н]. My thought is immutable [БЕЗЪ ПРѢМѢНЕНІЕ МЫСЛЬ МОѦ], My wisdom is My counsellor [СЪВѢТНИКѢ МОИ^Ѣ МЖДОСТЬ МОѦ], and My word is a deed [СЛОВО МОЕ ДѢЛО Ѣ]. My eyes see everything [ОУИ МОИ ГЛАДАЕТА НА ВСѦ], and whatever I cast My eye upon stays and quakes from fear [аще призѣраж на вса, то стож^т н трасжт са страхом^м]. If I turn My face away, everything will perish [аще ли ѿвратиѣ лице мое, то всѣ потрѣбат са]. Enoch, employ your faculties and recognise the One speaking [положи оумъ свои, Еноше, и познай глаголющаго]! You take the books which you yourself wrote [и ты възми книги, еже ты сам^м напиша]! I give you Samuil and Raguil, who brought you to me [даж ты Самонла и Рагоунла, възведшаго та къ мнѣ]. Descend to Earth [сѣниши на землѣ] and tell your sons what I told you [скажи сино^м своим^м елико гла^х к тебѣ] and about whatever you saw from the Lower Heaven to My Throne [и елико видѣ ѿ нижних^о нбсе до престола моего]. I created all hosts and all powers [всѣ воинства азъ сотвори^х и вса силы]. Nobody challenges Me or disobeys Me [ни^ѣ противляѣщаго са мнѣ ни^ѣ непокарѣща мнѣ]. Everyone submits to My autocratic rule and works only for My power [всѣ бо покарѣжт са моему еднновластію и работаѣ^т моеи единой власти]. Give them the books written by your hand [даждь им^м книги ржкописаніе твоего], so that they {may read them and learn how to} worship and acknowledge Me, the Creator of all [поуѣж^т и познаѣ^т ма творца всѣх^х], and to understand that there is no other but Me [и разоумѣж^т ты, яко ни^ѣ иного, разѣ мене]. May they distribute the books written by your hand [да раздада^т книги ржкописанія твоего]; offspring to their offspring [ѿадо^м ѿада], kin to their kin [ро^а родоу], relatives to their relatives [жжнкы жжнка^м]. I will give to you, Enoch, my archestrategos Michael as an intercessor [дам^м ты, Еноше, ходатаа моего архистратига Миханла], on account of your covenant [за ржкописаніе твое]²⁵⁰ and on account of the covenants²⁵¹ of your grandfathers [ржкописанія ѿца твоих^х] Adam [Адама],²⁵² and Seth [Сѣта],²⁵³ and Enosh [Еноса],²⁵⁴ and Cainan [Каннана],²⁵⁵ Mahalaleel [Малелеела]²⁵⁶ and Jared, your father [Ареда ѿца твоего].²⁵⁷ I am not going to exterminate them until the Last Age [не потрѣблѣ^х до послѣднѣаго вѣка], as I ordered my angels [зане азъ заповѣда^х агглагома моима], Ariukh [Ариухоу]²⁵⁸ and Pariukh [Париух8],²⁵⁹ whom I put on Earth as their guardians [нже я постави^х на землѣ хранителѣ^м] {to protect them}. I ordered them to keep watch over them for the time being [повелѣ^х времени^м да сънабда^т нх^х], so that they do not perish in the future Flood [да не погнѣнж^т въ бж^аціе^м потопаѣ], which I will cause among your kin [нже азъ

²⁴⁹ Lit. 'seven thousand thousands'.

²⁵⁰ Lit. 'manuscript' (sing.).

²⁵¹ Lit. 'manuscript'.

²⁵² The form Адама (i.e. Adam) is in genetivus possessivus.

²⁵³ The form Сѣта (i.e. Seth) is in genetivus possessivus; see Gn 5: 3-8.

²⁵⁴ The form Еноса (i.e. Enosh) is in genetivus possessivus; see Gn 5: 6-11.

²⁵⁵ The form Каннана (i.e. Cainan) is in genetivus possessivus; see Gn 5: 9-14.

²⁵⁶ The form Малелеела (i.e. a corrupt spelling of Mahalaleel) is in genetivus possessivus; see Gn 5: 12-17.

²⁵⁷ The form Ареда (i.e. Jared) is in genetivus possessivus; see Gn 5: 15-20.

²⁵⁸ The form is in dative.

²⁵⁹ The form is in dative.

сѣтворѣ въ родѣ твоѣ^М. Because I have come to recognise human malevolence [Азѣ оубо сѣвѣ^М злобѣ ѹлѹа], since they cannot tolerate the yoke which I placed on them [ѹако не понесѣ^Т ѹрѣма, нже азѣ въздвигнѣх^Х н^М]. And they rejected my yoke [н ѿврѣгошѣ ѹремѣ мон] and accepted another yoke [н вѣспрѣж^Т ннѣ ѹре^М], and planted the seed of devastation [н вѣсѣашѣ сѣмена поустошнѣаа], and bowed down before vain gods [н поклонншѣ^А богѣ^М соуетнѣ^М]. They repudiated My Oneness [ѿрннѣшѣ мож ѣдннство] and the entire Earth was polluted by iniquities [всѣ зѣмла сѣгрѣзѣ са неправада^М],²⁶⁰ offenses [ѿбнѣда^М],²⁶¹ and fornication [прѣлюбода^Мнство^М],²⁶² and evil service {to false gods} [зло слоуженѣ^М].²⁶³ This is why I will bring a Flood on the Earth [того ради азѣ наведѣ потопѣ на зѣмлаа] and the Earth will be wrecked in a great mud [зѣмлаѣ сама сѣкроушнѣ са въ тнмѣнѣ велнко]. I will leave a righteous man from your seed, together with his entire household [оставаа мѣжа праведнѣ а ѿ племенн твоѣго сѣ вѣсѣ^М домѣ^М ѣго], who will act according to My will [нже сѣтворнѣти по воле моѣнѣ], and from their seed another great kin will rise [н ѿ сѣмене н^Х вѣстаѣ^Т ро^А ннѣ послѣ^Аннѣ многѣ], but many of them will be rather greedy [нжѣ ѿ тѣ^Х многѣ несытн бѣдѣ^Т сѣло]; and I will make the books written by you and your ancestors appear among the descendants of this kin [въ нзводѣ рода то^Г ѹаваа н^М кннѣгы рѣкопнсанѣа твоѣго н ѿцѣ твоѣн^Х]; and I will show them the earthly guardians, My faithful pious men, who will not call My name in vain [нмѣже стражѣ зѣмнн показовати нмѣ^Т мѣже^М вѣрнн^М оугоднннко^М мон^М, нже нменн моѣго вѣсоуе не прнзовѣ^Т]; and they will tell their kin [ты скажѣ^Т родоу ѿномоу] and become glorious; and they will be honoured more afterwards than in the beginning [н ѿнн, поѹѣтшѣа прославет са въ послѣдокѣ, нежелн прѣвѣа]. Now Enoch [ннѣ же, Еноше], I am giving you a period of 30 days to return to your home [дажѣ ти рокѣ прѣжѣ^Анѣа ѿ днн сѣтворнѣти въ домѣ твоѣ^М] and to recount everything to your sons and household on My behalf [нсповѣдати снѣ^М твоѣн^М всѣа н домоѹа^Мдѣ^М твоѣн^М вѣса ѿ лнца моѣго]; and may they fulfil what is said by you [да слышѣ^Т глѣаное н^М тобож], and to read [н проѹѣтѣ^Т] and understand [разоумѣжѣ^Т] that there is no other but Me [ѹако нѣ^Аннѣного развѣ мене]. May they all keep your commandments [всѣи да сѣхранѣ^Т заповѣдн твоѣ] and start copying your books [наѹжѣ^Т кннѣгы рѣкопнсанѣе твоѣго]. In 30 days [по ѿ-тн^Х днѣ^Х] I will send to you My angel [азѣ пошлаа по та аггѣла моѣго] who will take you up from the Earth [възма^Т та ѿ зѣмлаа] and {from} your sons [ѿ снѣовѣ твоѣн^Х] {and bring you} to Me [мнѣ].

Chapter Twelve

And God summoned one of his senior angels [възва Гѣ ѣдннѣго ѿ аггѣлѣ старѣннн^Х], awesome [страшна] and terrifying [грозна], and placed him next to me [н поставнѣ ѣго ѿ мене]; and the visage of this angel was white as snow [бнѣдѣннѣ ²⁶⁰ The form is in instrumentalis.

²⁶¹ The form is in instrumentalis.

²⁶² The form is in instrumentalis.

²⁶³ The form is in instrumentalis.

агѣла того бѣло яко снѣгъ], his hands {and arms}²⁶⁴ looked like ice, extremely cold [рѣцѣ ѣго лѣ^а вѣдѣнїе^м нмѣща стоуденъ велѣкѣ]. My face cooled down in such a way that I had no fear of God and it was not possible to feel the burning fire [огнѣ пецинаго], and the heat of the sun [зноа слѣнеунаго] and the freezing air [мраза въздоушнаго]. God said to me [Гѣ къ мѣѣ], 'Enoch, if your face does not cool down here {in Paradise}, no man could see it [Еноше, аще не оустоудн са лице твоа зде, не може^т ѣлкѣ зрѣти лица твоѣго]!' Then God said to these men who took me to Him [ре^у Гѣ мжжема ѡнѣма, възведшима ма прѣжде], 'Let Enoch descend down to Earth with you [да сѣннде^т Ено^х на земаа съ вама]; and you wait for him until the appointed day arrives [пождѣта ѣго до оуроунаго дне]!' And during the night they placed me in my bed [поставнста ма ноцїе на ѡдрѣ мое^м]; Methuselah was waiting for my return, keeping guard day and night next to my bed [Метоусала^м ѣаше прїшествїе моѣго, въ дне н в ноцїи стрѣгын стражѣ ѡ ѡдра моѣго]. When he heard my returning, he got frightened [оужасе^н бѣ^ѣ ѣгда слыша мо прїшествїе]. I told him [рѣ^х ѣмоу], 'May my entire household be summoned [да сѣнндѣт са всѣи домаѣдци мои]!'; and I spoke to them [азѣ же глѣ^х къ нмѣ].

Chapters 13-17: Enoch repeats the description of his vision to his children; the account is similar to the above.

Chapter Eighteen

When Enoch was talking to his household²⁶⁵ [вънегда бесѣдовашѣ Ено^х люде^м свои^м], God sent dusk on Earth [Гѣ пѣстн мра^к на земаа] and darkness fell [бѣ^ѣ тѣма], covering the men standing with Enoch [покры мжже, стоѣще съ Енохо^м]. The angels hurried [оускорн^ш агѣлн] and took Enoch [пожѣе Еноха] and raised him to the Heaven above [възнѣше н на вышїнеа нѣбо], where God received him and placed him before His face forever [ндеже Гѣ прїж^т н поставн ѣ прѣ^а лице^м свои^м въ вѣкы]. The darkness lifted from the Earth and it became light [ѡстѣпн тѣма ѡ земаа, н бѣ^ѣ свѣ^т]. People saw without comprehending how Enoch was taken [вѣдѣшѣ люде н не роузумѣшѣ како възать бѣ^ѣ Ено^х]. Having praised God, they returned to their homes [прославншѣ Бѣ н тогда ндо^ш къ домы своѣ].

Chapter Nineteen

Enoch was born on the 6th day of the month Parnovous [Ено^х же родн са въ 6 днѣ мѣца парновуса],²⁶⁶ and he lived for 365 years [жн^т лѣ^т 365].²⁶⁷ He was brought up ²⁶⁴ In Slavonic languages, the word for 'hand' and 'arm' is the same.

²⁶⁵ Lit. 'his people'.

²⁶⁶ i.e. Tammuz.

to Heaven during the month of Nisan, on its first day [ВЪЗД^Т БЫ^Г НА НБО МЦА НИСАНА, ВЪ А ДНЬ], and he spent 60 days in Heaven [ПРЪБЫ^Г НА НБСН ͵60 ДНН], {during which} he wrote down all wonders created by God [ПНШЕ В'СА ЗНАМЕНІА ВЪСА ТВАРН, НЖЕ СЪТВОРН ГЪ]. He wrote 366 books [НАПНСА ͵366 КНИГЪ], which he passed on to his sons [ПРЪДА^Г Н^Х СНОМЪ СВОИ^М]; and after that he spent another 30 days on Earth speaking with them [ПРЪБЫ^Г НА ЗЕМЛН ͵30 ДНН, ГЛАВЪ СЪ НМНН]. And again, he was brought up to Heaven [Н ПАКЪ ВЪЗЕ^Т БЫ^Г НА НБО], in exactly the same month of Pامovus, on the very same 6th day on which he was born, and at the very same hour [МЦА ПАМОВ8СА ТОГОЖДЕ Н ВЪ ТЪЖДЕ ДНЬ ͵6, ВЪН'ЖЕ Н РОДН СА, Н ВЪ ТЪЖДЕ ЧА]. Because every man has a non-transparent²⁶⁸ side to his current life [ІАКО^Ж НМА^Т ВЪСЪКЪ ЧЛКЪ ЕС^ГТВО ТЪМ'НО НАСТОЖІАГО СЕГО ЖНТІА], since at whatever hour a human being is conceived, at the very same hour one will be born and at the same hour will die [ТАКО Н ЗАЧАТІЕ Н РОЖЬСТВО Н ПРЪСТАВЛЕНІЕ ͵6 СЕГО ЖНТІА: ВЪНЖЕ ЗАЧУНЕТ СА, ВЪ ТЪ ЧА^Г Н РОДНТ СА, ВЪ ТЪ Н ПРЪСТАВНТ СА].²⁶⁹

Chapter Twenty

Methusalam [Μεθουσала^М] rose up early, together with his brothers and all the sons of Enoch, and they raised a sacrificial altar [жрѣтъвнн^К] at the place called Akhuzan [Ахоузань],²⁷⁰ where Enoch was taken up {to Heaven}. Having taken sheep [бравы] and cattle [говеда] they summoned all the people and offered sacrifices [пожрѣшж жрѣтъж] before God's face [прѣ^А лнце^М гнн^М]. Having come along to the celebrations [веч^Ліе],²⁷¹ people brought gifts to Enoch's sons; and they happily rejoiced [сътворишж веч^Ліе ра^Дужщеса] and made merry [веселещеса] for three days.

Chapter Twenty-one

On the 3rd day, in the evening, the Elders spoke to Methusalam [Μεθουσаламоу] and said,²⁷² 'Stand up before God's face [прѣ^А лнце^М гнн^М] and before the face of all ²⁶⁷ According to some scholars, this particular detail (i.e. that 'the days of Enoch were three hundred and sixty and five years' when God took him away), 'may show calendary or astronomical connections of Enoch' [Greenfield and Stone 1979: 93]; see also the discussion there [1979: 92-95].

²⁶⁸ Lit. 'murky'.

²⁶⁹ At this point Ms P ends.

²⁷⁰ Identified as Jerusalem on the account of a later narrative associating this place with Melchizedek; see the discussion in Ginzburg [1968: 162].

²⁷¹ Lit. 'feast' / 'festivity' / 'revelry'/'merriment'. However, in this particular context the noun веч^Ліе most probably denotes 'mourning customs'; see in this connection the discussion in S. M. Tolstaia and N. I. Tolstoy [1993].

²⁷² The name is in the dative.

the people, and before the face²⁷³ of God's hymnal [прѣ^л лице^м трѣбника гнѣ], and you will become famous among your people!' And Methusalam answered his people, 'Wait, O men, until God, the Lord of my father Enoch, Himself raises up a priest [жръца]²⁷⁴ among His people!' The people spent one more night at the place of Ahuzan [Ахоузанъ], while Methusalam [Меѳоусала^м] was next to the altar [ѡлта^ръ ѡлтаря]. And he prayed to God and said, 'O God of all ages, One-and-Only, Who chose my father Enoch, please appoint a priest [жръца] of your people and put wisdom into their hearts, so that they fear Your glory and begin doing everything according to Your will!' Then Methsalam fell asleep and God appeared to him in a night vision [внѣвнн ноцнѣ^м] and told him, 'Listen to Me, Methusalam, I am the Lord, the God of your father Enoch. Listen to the voice of these people and stand before the face of My altar [ѡлтаря моего] and I will glorify you before the face of all the people and you will be glorified for all the days of your life.'

And Methusalam woke up from his dream and gave praise to God, who appeared before him. The Elders of the people hastened to Methusalam and the Lord God made Methusalam's heart listen to the people's voice. And the Lord spoke {thus}, 'May these people who are standing in front of My eyes today be blessed!' The elders Sarsan [Сарса^н] and Kharmis [Хармнѣ] and Zazas [Заза^съ] hastened and dressed up Methusalam in fine garments and placed a bright wreath on his head. And the people hastened, bringing sheep, cattle, and birds, everything which Methusalam was supposed to sacrifice [пожрѣти] in the name of God and in the name of the people. And Methusalam went up to God's altar [жрътъвннкъ гнѣ] and his face brightened like the midday sun rising, and all the people followed him in his footsteps²⁷⁵ [градѣще въ слѣд его]. And Methusalam stood up before God's altar [ѡлтарю гнѣю]²⁷⁶ and all the people surrounded the {sacrificial} altar [жрътъвннкъ]. The Elders took the sheep and cattle and tied their four legs²⁷⁷ and then they placed them on the altar's capital [на главѣ ѡлтарюу] and said to

²⁷³ An overly literal translation of Hebrew lifnê ('before', literally 'to the face of') probably reflecting the language of the Vorlage of this text.

²⁷⁴ The noun used here to denote 'priest' [жръцъ] (var. жъръцъ, жърцъ, жъръцъ, жерцъ) is a cognate to the nouns for 'sacrificial offering' [жъртва, жрътва, жрътва, жертва], 'sacrificial victim' [жъртва, жрътва, жрътва, жертва], 'sanctuary' (=templum) [жъртвнще, жрътвнще, жертвнще], and 'altar' [жрътъвннкъ, жъртъвннкъ, жрътъвннкъ, жрътвеннкъ, жертвеннкъ, жрътовннкъ]; the same is true for the adjectives 'sacrificial' [жертвннын, жъртъвеннын, жрътъвннын] and 'priestly' [жъръѣ, жеръѣ, жъръѣскын, жъръѣскын, жреѣскын]. The verb 'to perform sacrifice' / 'to offer sacrifice' [жърѣти, жръѣти, жърѣти] on the other hand is identical with the verbs denoting 'to eat' and 'to drink' [i.e. жърѣти, жръѣти, жърѣти]; see the data presented in Sreznevskii [1893: 888-890].

²⁷⁵ Lit. 'walked in his footsteps'.

²⁷⁶ Here the phrase жрътъвннкъ гнѣ [God's altar] is replaced by ѡлтаръ гнѣ; the lexemes жрътъвннкъ and ѡлтаръ are used as synonyms.

²⁷⁷ Anthropological data collected among the Balkan Slavs indicates that the Qurban sacrificial rituals follow this rule; the four legs of the sacrificial animal are to be tied, otherwise the offering is incorrectly performed. However, the explanation given is usually with reference to the Akedah (i.e. Abrahamic narrative), but the obligatory customary to bind the four legs of the sacrificial animal may have originated with awareness of 2Enoch; see the earlier discussion in Pennington [1984: 326] and Badalanova [2001: 39-46]. The picture is much more complex and requires more detailed explanation.

Methusalam, 'Take this knife and slaughter these animals which are designated {for sacrifice} before the face of God!' Methusalam stretched his hands towards the sky and called upon God, saying, 'Hear me O God, who am I to be in the front rank of Your sacrificial altar [ЖРЪТЪВНИКА ТВОЕГО], at the head of these people? O God, look at Your servant and all these people now! May they now all be tested and give blessings to your servant before the face of the whole people, so that they may understand that You have appointed a priest for your people.' While Methusalam was praying, the altar [ОЛТА^p] shook, the knife raised itself from the altar [ВЪСТА ПО^ж ОЛТАРА] and jumped into Methusalam's hand, before the face of all the people; and the people trembled and praised God. From this day onwards Methusalam became holy before God's face and before the face of the entire people. Methusalam took the knife and sacrificed [ИЗЪКЛА]²⁷⁸ everything brought by the people; and the people rejoiced and became merry on this day before God's face and before the face of Methusalam. And after that, people went off {and returned} under their own roofs.

Chapter Twenty-two

From this day onwards, Methusalam began serving at the altar [ОУ ОЛТАРА] before the face of God and all the people. For a period of ten years, he was reassuring them regarding {their} eternal heritage and mentored the entire Earth and his entire people well. There was not a single person who turned his face away from God in vain, during all the days of Methusalam's life. And God blessed Methusalam and graciously accepted his sacrifices and offerings and all his service which he conducted before the face of God. When the time of Methusalam's death²⁷⁹ approached, God appeared to him in a nightly vision and said to him, 'Listen to me, Methusalam, I am the Lord, God of your father Enoch, telling you to be aware that the days of your life are coming to an end. The day of our peace is approaching. Summon Nir, son of your son Lamech, the second one born after Noah, and dress him in your priestly garb and place him next to My altar, and tell him everything which will take place during his days. Because the time of the destruction of the entire Earth and every man and living creature on Earth is approaching, since in his days a great upheaval on Earth will take place. Because man has started hating his next of kin and people have taken to pride over other people, and nation²⁸⁰ has started wars {against nation}, and the entire Earth is full of desecration, blood and all kinds of evil; and having abandoned their Creator and they will bow before vain gods and before the heavenly firmament and before what goes on Earth²⁸¹ and before the waves of the sea; and {My} adversary {the Devil} will take pride in his deeds, to My great regret. And the entire Earth will alter its makeup, each tree and each fruit will change its nature,²⁸² anticipating the time of destruction. And all the nations²⁸³ on ²⁷⁸ Lit. 'slaughtered'.

²⁷⁹ Lit. 'presentation {before God}'.

²⁸⁰ Lit. 'tongue'.

²⁸¹ Var. 'before Earth's path.'

²⁸² Lit. 'seeds'.

Earth will alter, to My sorrow.²⁸⁴ Then I will order the Abyss to sweep over the Earth and the vast storehouses of heavenly waters will descend to Earth in great substance [ВЕЩЬСТВО ВЕЛНКО],²⁸⁵ back to primordial matter [ПО ВЕЩЬСТВО ПРЪВОМОУ]. Everything existing on Earth will perish [Н ПОГЫБНЕ ВСА СТАВЛЕНІЕ ЗЕМЛА]. The entire Earth will quake [СЪТРЕСЕТСА ЗЕМЛѢ ВСѢ] and from that day it will lose its firmness [ЛНШЕТСА КРѢПОСТН СВОЕ ѿ ДНѢ ТОГО]. Then I will save Noah, the firstborn son of your son Lamech, and from his seed I will create another world. His seed will last for ages, until the second destruction, when mankind will also sin in the same way before My face.' Methusalam started from his dream and his dream saddened him greatly. He summoned all the elders of the people and told them what God had announced to him, as well as the entire vision which was portended to him by God. The people were saddened on account of his vision and said to him, 'It will be done according to the will of God the Ruler. As for you, Methusalam, do today whatever God told you to do.' Methusalam summoned Nir [ННрѣ], the son of Lamech, the younger brother of Noah, and dressed him in priestly garb before the face of the entire people. He placed him next to the altar capital and taught him everything which he was to do before the people. And Methusalam said to the people, 'From now on, Nir [ННрѣ] will be prince [КНАЗѢ] and ruler [ВОЖѢ] for you.' The people replied to Methusalam, 'May this be according to your words. And may you be the voice of God, since God spoke to you.' And as Methusalem was talking to the people in front of the face of the altar, his spirit became disturbed and while still kneeling on his knees, he straightened his hands towards heaven and prayed to God; and while he was praying, his spirit departed towards God. And Nir and all the people hastened and made a tomb [гробѣ]²⁸⁶ for Methusalam at the place called Akhuzan [АХОУЗАНѢ], finely adorned in holy vestments, and with candelabra. And then Nir went with much glory and the people moved Methusalam's body and glorifying him, put him into the tomb which was created for him, and they covered him and said, 'May Methusalem be blessed in front of the face of God and before the face of the people!' When they wished to depart to go to their {own} places, Nir said to the people, 'Hurry today and bring sheep [бравы] and young oxen [юнце] and turtledoves [грѣланце] and pigeons [голжвы], so that we sacrifice [пожрѣ^М] them before God's face today, and afterwards you go to your homes.' And people obeyed Nir the priest [оуслыша^{III} людѣ ННра їреа], and they hastened and brought {the animals} and tied them up to the capital of the altar. And Nir took the priestly knife and slaughtered everything which was brought along and sacrificed it in front of God's face. And all the people rejoiced in front of God's face, and on that day they praised the Lord, God of heaven and Earth, on which Nir was dwelling. From this day on, there was peace and harmony on all the Earth during Nir's days, which were 202 years. And afterwards the people turned away from God and they began to be jealous of one another, and people rose up against people and nation made war

²⁸³ Lit. 'tongues'.

²⁸⁴ Perhaps a scribal error? If so, the word желаніе ('will', 'wish') may be emended to сѣжаленіе (or сожаленіе), as the reading 'with all My will' will make little sense; other MSS (e.g. MS Б) suggest въ жалѣніе. See the survey of variant readings in Sokolov [1899: 68-69 fn. 30].

²⁸⁵ Lit. 'matter'.

²⁸⁶ The noun гробѣ can also mean 'sepulchre', as well as 'grave'.

against nation.²⁸⁷ Although they had one mouth, their hearts understood differently. Because the Devil started ruling for the third time [ЗАНЕ НАУ А ДІАВО^А ТРЕТЦЕ А ЦР^СТВОВАТИ]. The first {time} was before Paradise; the second {time} was within Paradise; the third {time} outside of Paradise and lasted until the Flood. And wars and great unrest started, and the priest Nir [НІРЬ ІЕРЕЕ] heard and became saddened and said in his heart, 'Indeed, I understood that the time about which God was talking to Methusalam, the father of my father Lamech, has approached.'

²⁸⁷ Lit. 'tongue against tongue'.

Bibliography

- Alexander, Ph. 1998. 'From Son of Adam to Second God: Transformations of Biblical Enoch'. In: Stone, M. and T. Bergen (eds.), Biblical Figures Outside the Bible (Harrisburg, Pennsylvania: Trinity Press), 87-122.
- Andersen, F.I. 1983. '2 (Slavonic Apocalypse) of Enoch. A New Translation and Introduction.' In: Charlesworth, J. H. (ed.), The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha. Vol. 1 (Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday), 91-221.
- Anderson, G.A. 2000. 'The Exaltation of Adam and the Fall of Satan.' In: Anderson, G., M. Stone and J. Tromp (eds.), Literature on Adam and Eve (Leiden, Boston, Köln: Brill, 2000), 83-110.
- Anastasov, V. et al. (eds.) 2002. Bŭlgarski Etimologichen Rechnik, Vol. 6 (Sofia: Academichno Izdarelstvo Prof. Marin Drinov)
- Arkhangel'skii, A.S. 1889. 'K istorii iuzhnoslavianskoi i drevnerusskoi apokrificheskoj literatury. Dva liubopytnykh sbornika Sofiiskoi Narodnoi Biblioteki v Bolgarii'. ['On the history of South-Slavonic and Old Russian apocryphal literature: Two curious MSS from the Sofia National Library in Bulgaria'], Izvestiia Otdeleniia Russkago Iazyka i Slovesnosti Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk 4:1 (1899), 101-147.
- Badalanova, F. 1994. 'Biblia Folklorica: folklorna konfesionalna konventsiiia na bŭlgarite v Besarabia i Tavria' [Biblia Folklorica: vernacular religious convention among the Bulgarian settlers in Bessarabia and Tavria]. — Bŭlgarski Folklor 20:1, 5-21 [in Bulgarian].
- Badalanova, F. 2001. 'Interpreting the Bible and the Koran in the Bulgarian Oral Tradition: the Saga of Abraham in Performance.' In: Hawkesworth, C. et al. (eds.), Religious Quest and National Identity in the Balkans (London & New York: Palgrave), 37-56.
- Badalanova, F. 2002. 'Folk Religion in the Balkans and the Qur'anic Account of Abraham.' — SEFEA Folklorica 7: 1, 22-73.
- Badalanova, F. 2008. 'The Bible in the Making: Slavonic Creation stories.' In: Geller M. et al. (eds.), Imagining Creation (Leiden and Boston: Brill), 161-365.
- Badalanova Geller, F. 2011 (forthcoming). 'The Sea of Tiberias: Between Apocryphal Literature and Oral Tradition'. In: DiTommaso, L. and Ch. Böttrich (eds.), The Old Testament Apocrypha in the Slavonic Tradition: Continuity and Diversity (Tuebingen: Mohr-Siebeck), In press.
- Barsov, E. V. 1886. 'O Tiveriadskom More (Po spisku XVI v.)' ['About the Sea of Tiberias (A sixteenth century redaction)']. — Chteniia v Imperatorskom Obshchestve Istorii i Drevnostei Rossiiskikh pri Moskovskom Universitete. Povremennoe Izdanie pod Zavedyvaniiem E. V. Barsova (Aprel'-Iun') 2, 3-8 [in Russian].
- Belova, O. 1995. 'Bes'. In: Tolstoy, N. I. (ed.), Slavianskie Drevnosti, Vol. 1 (Moscow: Mezhdunarodnye Otnosheniia), 164-166.
- Ben-Dov, J. 2008, Head of All Years, Astronomy and Calendars at Qumran in their Ancient Context (Leiden and Boston: Brill).

Ben-Dov, J. 2009. 'Tradition and Innovation in the Calendar of Jubilees. In: Boccaccini, G. and G. Ibba (eds.), Enoch and the Mosaic Torah. The Evidence of Jubilees (Grand Rapids, Michigan / Cambridge : Eerdmans), 276-293.

Bergsma, J. S. 2009. 'The Relationship between Jubilees and the Early Enochic Books (Astronomical Book and the Book of the Watchers). In: Boccaccini, G. and G. Ibba (eds.), Enoch and the Mosaic Torah. The Evidence of Jubilees (Grand Rapids, Michigan / Cambridge : Eerdmans), 36-51.

Bessonov, P. 1861. Kaleki Perekhozhie. Sbornik Stikhov [Wandering Crippled Singers of Tales: Collection of Chants] 2/1 (Moscow: Tipografiia A. Semena).

Bessonov, P. 1864. Kaleki Perekhozhie: Sbornik stikhov [Wandering Crippled Singers of Tales: Collection of Chants] 6/3: Stikhi Bylevye: Bibleiskie, Starshie i Mladshie [Historical Rimes: Biblical, Old and New] (Moscow: Tipografiia A. Semena, 1864).

Betz, H. D. 1986. The Greek Magical Papyri in Translation (Chicago: University of Chicago Press).

Boccaccini, G. 2005. Enoch and Qumran Origins. New Light on a Forgotten Connection (Grand Rapids, Michigan / Cambridge : Eerdmans)

Boccaccini, G. and G. Ibba 2009. Enoch and the Mosaic Torah. The Evidence of Jubilees (Grand Rapids, Michigan / Cambridge : Eerdmans)

Bötttrich, C. 1995. Adam als Mikrokosmos: eine Untersuchung zum slavischen Henochbuch (Frankfurt: Peter Lang).

Bötttrich, C. 1996. Das slavische Henochbuch. Jüdische Schriften aus hellenistisch-römischer Zeit. Bd 5, Apokalypsen, Lfg. 7 (Gütersloh: Gütersloher Verlagshaus).

Bojkovsky G. 1984. Paraenesis. Die altbulgarische Übersetzung von Werken Ephraims des Syrers. Bd 1: Monumenta linguae slavicae dialecti veteris. Fontes et dissertationes, T. 20. Freiburg im Breisgau Bonwetsch, G. N. 1896. Das slavische Henochbuch [= Abhandlungen der königlichen Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, Philologisch-historische Klasse, N.F. i 3; Berlin).

Bonwetsch, G. N. 1922. Die Bücher der Geheimnisse Henochs: Das sogenannte slavische Henochbuch (=Texte und Untersuchungen XLIV. 2; Leipzig).

Borger, R. 1974. 'Die Beschwörungsserie Bit meseri und die Himmelfahrt Henochs' — Journal of Near Eastern Studies 33: 2, 183-196.

Butler, Th. 1996. Monumenta Bulgarica: A Bilingual Anthology of Bulgarian Texts from the 9th to the nineteenth Centuries (Ann Arbor, MI: Michigan Slavic Publications)

Charles, R.H. (ed.) 1913. Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament, Vols 1-2 (Oxford: Clarendon Press)

- Charlesworth, J. H. (ed.) 1983-1985, The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha. Vols 1-2. (Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday)
- Dal', Vl. 1880-1882. Tolkovyi Slovar' Zhivogo Velikoruskogo Iazyka Vladimira Dalia. [Interpretative Thesaurus of the Living Russian Language]. Vols. 1-4 (St. Petersburg—Moscow: Izdanie Knigoprodavtsa-Tipografa M. O. Vol'fa)
- Dinekov, P., A. Mincheva, R. Pavlova. 1991-1993. Simeonov Sbornik (Po Svetoslavovia Prepis ot 1073) [Symeon's Florilegium (According to Svetoslav's Copy of 1073)], Vol. 1-2 (Sofia: Izdatelstvo na Bŭlgarskata Akademia na Naukite)
- Dinekov, P. 1991. 'Kulturno-Istoricheskoto Znachenie na Simeonoviiia Sbornik' ['Cultural and Historical Significance of Symeon's Florilegium']. In: Dinekov, P., A. Mincheva, R. Pavlova. Simeonov Sbornik (Po Svetoslavovia Prepis ot 1073) [Symeon's Florilegium (According to Svetoslav's Copy of 1073)], Vol. 1, 9-17
- Döllinger, Ign. 1890. Beiträge zur Sectengeschichte des Mittelalters, II (München: Beck)
- Dobrev, I. 1979. 'Redŭt na Zodiakalnite Znatsi v Izbornika ot 1073' ['The Order of the Signs of the Zodiac in the Florilegium according to the copy from 1073']. — Starobŭlgarska Literatura 5 [in Bulgarian]
- Dornseiff, F. 1925. Das Alphabet in Mystik and Magie (Berlin)
- Dubrovina, S. 2002. 'Predstavleniia ob Il'e Proroke v traditsionnoi kul'ture Tambovshchiny' ['How is the Prophet Elijah imagined among the people of the region of Tambov, Russia']. — Zhivaia Starina 1, 29-30
- Dukova, U. 1983. 'Die Bezeichnungen der Dämonen im Bulgarischen'. — Balkansko Ezikoznanie 4, 5-46.
- Dukova, U. 1988. 'Predstavite na Slavianite za Dushata' ['Concept of Soul Among the Slavs], In: Slavistichen Sbornik BAN (Sofia: BAN), 214-219.
- Forbes N. and R. H. Charles (ed.) 1913, '2 Enoch, or the Book of the Secrets of Enoch', In: Charles R. (ed.), Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament, Vol. 2: Pseudepigrapha (Oxford: Clarendon Press), 425-69
- Gamkrelidze, T.V. and V. Vs. Ivanov 1984. Indoevropeskii Iazyk i Indoevropetsy. Rekonstruktsiia i Istoriko-Tipologicheskii Analiz Praiazyka i Protokul'tury [Indo-European Language and Indo-Europeans. A Reconstruction and Historical Typological Analysis of Proto-Language and Proto-Culture] Vol. 1-2 (Tbilisi: Izdatel'stvo Tbilisskogo Universiteta)
- Georgiev, V. and Iv. Gŭlŭbov, I. Zaimov, S. Ilchev 1971. Bŭlgarski Etimologichen Rechnik. Vol. I. (Sofia: Izdatelstvo na Bŭlgarskata Akademia na Naukite).
- Georgiev, V. and I. Zaimov, St. Ilchev, M. Chalŭkov, I. Ivanov, D. Mikhailova, V. Anastasov, U. Dukova, M. Racheva, T. Todorov, 1979. Bŭlgarski Etimologichen Rechnik. Vol. II. (Sofia: Izdatelstvo na Bŭlgarskata Akademia na Naukite).
- Georgiev, V. and R. Bernard, St. Ilchev, I. Ivanov, D. Mikhailova, V. Anastasov, G. Rikov, O. Mladenova, U. Dukova, M. Racheva, L. Dimitrova-Todorova, T. Todorov, 1986. Bŭlgarski Etimologichen Rechnik. Vol. III. (Sofia: Izdatelstvo na Bŭlgarskata Akademia na Naukite).

Gerov, N. 1895. Rechnik na Bŭlgarskii Iazyk s Tlŭkuvanie Rechi-ty na Bŭlgarsky i na Russky. Sŭbral, nariadil i na sviat izvazhda Nayden Gerov [A Lexicon of the Bulgarian Language with Explanations of Words in Bulgarian and Russian. Collected, classified and published by Naiden Gerov]. Vol. 1 [A-Д] (Plovdiv: Druzhestvena Pechatnica 'Sŭglasie') [in Bulgarian].

Gerov, N. 1897, Rechnik na Bŭlgarskii Iazyk s Tlŭkuvanie Rechi-ty na Bŭlgarsky i na Russky. Sŭbral, nariadil i na sviat izvazhda Nayden Gerov [A Lexicon of the Bulgarian Language with Explanations of Words in Bulgarian and Russian. Collected, classified and published by Naiden Gerov]. Vol. 2 [E-K] (Plovdiv: Druzhestvena Pechatnica 'Sŭglasie') [in Bulgarian].

Gerov, N. 1899, Rechnik na Bŭlgarskii Iazyk s Tlŭkuvanie Rechi-ty na Bŭlgarsky i na Russky. Sŭbral, nariadil i na sviat izvazhda Nayden Gerov [A Lexicon of the Bulgarian Language with Explanations of Words in Bulgarian and Russian. Collected, classified and published by Naiden Gerov]. Vol. 3 [Л-О] (Plovdiv: Druzhestvena Pechatnica 'Sŭglasie') [in Bulgarian].

Gerov, N. 1901-1904, Rechnik na Bŭlgarskii Iazyk s Tlŭkuvanie Rechi-ty na Bŭlgarsky i na Russky. Sŭbral, Nariadil i na Sviat Izvazhda Nayden Gerov. Izdaden pod Redakciata na Teodor Panchev. [A Lexicon of the Bulgarian Language with Explanations of Words in Bulgarian and Russian. Collected, classified and published by Naiden Gerov and edited by Teodor Panchev]. Vols 4-5. (Plovdiv: Druzhestvena Pechatnica 'Sŭglasie') [in Bulgarian].

Gerov, N. 1908. Rechnik na Bŭlgarskii Iazyk. Dopŭlnenie na Bŭlgarskia Rechnik ot Nayden Gerov. Sŭbral, Nariadil i Iztŭkuval Teodor Panchev. Na Sviat Izdali Naslednicite na N. Gerov [A Lexicon of the Bulgarian Language. An Appendix to the Lexicon of Bulgarian Language Collected, Classified and Interpreted by Teodor Panchev. Published by the descendants of Naiden Gerov] Vol. 6. (Plovdiv: Pechatnica 'Trud' na Petko Belovezhzdov) [in Bulgarian]

Ginzberg, Louis 1909-1913, 1928, 1925, 1938. The Legends of the Jews. Vols. 1-7 (Philadelphia, Penna: The Jewish Publication Society of America)

Giunio, Kornelija and Smiljan Gluščević, 2007. 'Amuleti Egipatskoga Kulturnog Kruga iz Groba 877 s Nekropole na rejli u Zadru' [Amulets of the Egyptian Cultural Circle and Grave 877 from the Roman Cemetery at Relja in Zadar]. — Diadora 22, 69-92.

Goshev, I. 1956. Rilski Glagolicheski Listove. (Sofia) [in Bulgaria]

Greenfield, J. and M. Stone 1979. 'The Books of Enoch and the Traditions of Enoch'. — Numen 26: 1, 89-103.

Gusev, V. E. 1994. 'Besy v Zhitii Avvakuma i Narodnaia Demonologiya'. — Zhivaia Starina 2, 14-17.

Higgins, A.J.B. 1953. 'Priest and Messiah'. — Vetus Testamentum, 3: 4, 321-336.

Himmelfarb, M. 2010. An Apocalypse. A Brief History (Chichester: Wiley-Blackwell)

Hnatiuk, V. 1911. Etnografichni Materiali z Ugorskoi Rusi. Zibrav Volodymyr Hnatiuk, Tom 6: Baiki, Legendi, Istor. Perekazi, Noveli, Anekdoti. (=Etnografichni Zbirnik 30. Vidae Etnografichna Komisiiia Naukovogo Tovaristva Imeni Shevchenka). [Ethnographische Sammlung, Herausgegeben von der Ethnographischen Kommission

der Sevčenko-Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften in Lemberg, Bd. xxx] (Lvov: Naukovogo Tovaristva Imeni Shevchenka) [in Ukrainian]

Hnatiuk, V. 1985. Uhrorus'ki Dukhovni Virshi (Novi Sad: Ruske Slovo) [in Ukrainian]

IAtsimirskii, A. I. 1913. 'K Istorii Lozhnykh Molitv v Iuzhno-Slavianskoi Pis'mennosti'. — Izvestiia Otdeleniia Russkago Iazyka i Slovesnosti Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk 18: 3, 1-102; 18: 4, 16-126.

IAtsimirskii, A. I. 1921. Bibliograficheskii Obzor Apokrifov v Iuzhnoslavianskoi i Russkoi Pis'mennosti. Spiski Pamiatnikov. Apokrify Vetkhozavetnye. Vyp. 1. [Bibliographical Survey of South-Slavonic and Russian Apocryphal Literature. Catalogue of Monuments. Old Testament Apocrypha. Part 1.] (Petrograd: Izdanie Otdeleniia Russkago Iazyka i Slovesnosti Rossiiskoi Akademii Nauk, Rossiiskaia Gosudarstvennaia Akademicheskaiia Tipografiia) [in Russian]

Iudin, A.V. 1997. Onomastika Russkikh Zagovorov. Imena Sobstvennye v Russkom Magicheskom Fol'klore [Onomastikon of Russian Spells and Incantations. Proper names in Russian Magic Folklore] (Moscow: Moskovskii Obshchestvennyi Nauchnyi Fond) [in Russian]

Ivanov, Y. 1925. Bogomilski Knigi i Legendi [Books and Legends of the Bogomils] (Sofia: Pridvorna Pечатnitsa; Izdava se ot Fonda D. P. Kudoglu) [in Bulgarian]

Ivanova, K. 1991. 'Simeonoviiat sbornik kato literaturnen pametnik' ['Symeon's Florilegium as a literary work'] In: Dinekov, P., A. Mincheva, R. Pavlova (eds), Simeonov Sbornik (Po Svetoslavovia Prepis ot 1073) [Symeon's Florilegium (According to Svetoslav's Copy of 1073)], Vol. 1 (Sofia: Izdatelstvo na Bŭlgarskata Akademia na Naukite), 18-33.

Ivanova T. 1976. 'U Istokov Slavianskoi Pis'mennosti'. In: KHrapchenko, M.B. et al. (eds), Kul'turnoe nasledie Drevnei Rusi. Istoki, Stanovlenie, Traditsii (Moscow: Nauka), 24-27 [in Russian] Johnson, S. R. 2005. Historical Fictions and Hellenistic Jewish Identity: Third Maccabees in its Cultural Context (Berkeley: Univ. of California Press).

Kačanovskii, V. 1881. 'Apokrifne molitve, gatanja i priče.' ['Apocryphal prayers, divining, and tales] — Starine 13 (1881), 150-163.

Khristova, B. 2008. Kniga na Enokh (Sofia: Kralitsa Mab).

Kliaus, V. L. 1997. Ukazatel' Siuzhetov i Siuzhetnykh Situatsii Zagovornykh Tekstov Vostochnykh i Iuzhnykh Slavian [Index of Subjects and Subject Situations in the Spells of East and Southern Slavs] (Moscow: Nasledie)

Kloekhorst, Alwin 2008. Etymological Dictionary of the Hittite Inherited Lexicon. (Leiden and Boston: Brill)

Koch-Westenholz, U. 1995. Mesopotamian Astrology (Copenhagen: Carsten Niebuhr Institute)

Kotseva, E. 1992. 'Efrem Sirin'. In: Petkanova, D. (ed.) Stara Bŭlgarska Literatura. Entsiklopedichen Rechnik [Encyclopaedia Lexicon of Old Bulgarian Literature], Sofia: Petŭr Beron, 152-153 [in Bulgarian]

- Kovachev, Y. 1914. 'Narodna Astronomiia i Meteorologiia' ['Vernacular Astronomy and Meteorology'] — Sbornik za Narodni Umotvoreniia 30 (1914), 1-85 [in Bulgarian]
- Kulik, A. 2010: 3 Baruch: Greek Slavonic Apocalypse of Baruch (Berlin: de Gruyter).
- Kuznetsova, V. S. 2002. 'Prorok Il'ia i Bogoroditsa Kupina Neopalimaia v Uralo-Sibirskom Paterike' ['The Prophet Elijah and the Virgin Mary-the Burning Bush in the Ural-Siberian Paterikon'] — Zhivaia Starina 1, 33-36.
- Larson, E. 2005. 'The LXX and Enoch: Influence and Interpretation in early Jewish Literature'. In: Boccaccini (ed.), Enoch and Qumran Origins. New Light on a Forgotten Connection (Grand Rapids, Michigan / Cambridge : Eerdmans), 84-89.
- Lavrov, P. A. 1899. Apokrificheskie Teksty. (= Sbornik Otdeleniia Russkago Iazyka i Slovesnosti Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk 67:3; a monographic issue) [in Russian].
- Lincoln, B. 1986. Myth, Cosmos, Society. Indo-European Themes of Creation and Destruction. (Cambridge, Massachusetts and London, England: Harvard University Press)
- Lunt H. 1959. 'Contributions to the Study of Old Church Slavonic: 2. On the Rila Folia'. — International Journal of Slavic Linguistics and Poetics, 1/2, 16—37
- Marinov, D. 1914. Zhiva Starina. Narodna Viara i Religiozni Narodni Obichai. [Living Antiquities: Folk Beliefs and Religious Folk Customs] (= Sbornik za Narodni Umotvoreniia 28, 1-574; a monographic issue) [in Bulgarian].
- Mencej, M. 2008. 'Dushi v Vetre' ['Souls in the Wind']. In: Radenković, L. (ed.), Etnolingvistička Proučavanja Srpskog i Drugih Slovenskih Jezika. [Ethnolinguistic Explorations of the Serbian and Other Slavonic Languages]. Festschrift Svetlana Tolstoy (Belgrade: Serbian Academy of Sciences and Art), 227-44.
- Meshcherskii, N. A. 1964. 'K istorii teksta slavianskoi knigi Enokha' (Sledy Pamiatnikov Kumrana v Vizantiiskoi i Staroslavianskoi Literature)' — Vizantiiskii Vremennik 24, 91-108.
- Mochul'skii, V. V. 1886-1887. 'Istoriko-Literaturnyi Analiz Stikha o Golubinoi Knige' ['Historical and Literary Analysis of the Book of the Dove Stanza']. — Russkii Filologicheskii Vestnik [Russian Philological Journal] 16: 4, 197-219 (1886); 17:1 (1887) 113-180; 17:2 (1887), 365-406; 18:3 (1887), 41-142; 18:4 (1887), 171-188 [in Russian].
- Mochul'skii, V. 1894. 'Sledy Narodnoi Biblii v Slavianskoi i v Drevnerusskoi Pis'mennosti' ['Vestiges of the Folk Bible in Slavonic and Old Russian Literature']. — Zapiski Imperatorskogo Novorossiiskago Universiteta 61, 1-282 [in Russian]
- Morfill W. R. and R. H. Charles, 1896. The Book of the Secrets of Enoch. Translated from the Slavonic by W. R. Morfill and edited, with introduction, notes and indices by R. H. Charles (Oxford: Clarendon Press)
- Nachov, N. 1892-1894. 'Tikveshki Rükopis' ['The Tikveshki Manuscript'], Sbornik za Narodni Umotvoreniia 8 (1892) 389-418; 10 (1894), 69-193 [in Bulgarian]
- Nachtigall, Rajko 1901-2. 'Ein Beitrag zu den Forschungen über die sogenannte 'Беседа трехъ святителей' (Gespräch dreier Heiligen)'. — Archiv für Slavische Philologie 23 (1901), 1-95, 24 (1902), 321-408.

Navtanovich, L. M. 2000. 'Kniga Enokha'. In: Likhachev, D. S. Biblioteka Literaturny Drevnei Rusi. Tom 3: XI-XII veka. Sankt-Peterburg: Nauka, 204-241, 387-392.

Nielsburg, G.W. 2001. 1 Enoch 1. A Commentary on the Book of 1 Enoch, Chapters 1-36; 81-108. (Minneapolis: Fortress Press)

Novaković, S. 1874. 'Bugarski Sbornik Pisan Prošloga Veka Narodnim Jezikom'. — Starine 6 (1874), 24-59

Novaković, S. 1884. 'Apokrif o Enohu'. — Starine 17 (1884), 67-81

Orlov, A. 2004. 'Celestial Choirmaster: the Liturgical Role of Enoch-Metatron in 2 Enoch and the Merkabah Tradition.' — Journal of the Study of Pseudepigrapha 14 :1, 3-29.

Orlov, A. 2007. From Apocalypticism to Merkabah Mysticism: Studies in Slavonic Pseudepigrapha [(JSJSup 114)] (Leiden, Boston: Brill)

Panajotov, V. 2003. 'Za Enokh i Iliia.' In: Glubina K'nizhnaia (Shumen), 279-283.

Pennington, A. 1984. '2 Enoch'. In: Sparks, H. (ed.), The Apocryphal Old Testament (Oxford: Clarendon Press), 321-62.

Petkanova, D. (ed.) 1982. Stara Bŭlgarska Literatura. Tom 1: Apokrifi. [Old Bulgarian Literature. Vol. 1: Apocrypha], Sofia: Bŭlgarski Pisatel [in Bulgarian]

Petkanova, D. (ed.) 1992. Stara Bŭlgarska Literatura. Entsiklopedichen Rechnik [Encyclopaedia Lexicon of Old Bulgarian Literature], Sofia: Petŭr Beron, [in Bulgarian]

Petkanova, D. 2001. 'Lunata v srednovekovnata literatura i folklora' ['The Moon in Medieval Literature and Folklore']. Preslavska Knizhovna Shkola, Vol. 5. Izsledvaniia v chest na Prof. T. Totev (Sofia: Akademichno Izdatelstvo Prof. Marin Drinov), 153-168.

Picchio, R. 1984. 'Guidelines for a Comparative Study of the Language Question among the Slavs.' In: Picchio R. & H. Goldblatt (eds.), Aspects of the Slavic Language Question. Vol. I: Church Slavonic — South Slavic — West Slavic. Yale Russian and East European Publications, No 4-a. (New Haven: Yale Concilium on International and Area Studies), 1 - 42.

Picchio, R. and H. Goldblatt, 2008. 'Guidelines to the Study of the Literary Civilization of Orthodox Slavdom'. In: Miscellanea Slavica. Festschrift Boris Uspensky (Moscow: Indrik), 66-85.

Pinch, G. 1994. Magic in Ancient Egypt (London: The British Museum)

Popov, A. 1880. 'Bibliograficheskie Materialy, Sobrannye Andreem Popovym (iv): Iuzhnorusskii Sbornik 1679 goda' ['Bibliographic Material Collected by Andrei Popov. (Part 4): South-Russian Miscellany from 1679']. — Chteniia v Imperatorskom Obshchestve Istorii i Drevnostei Rossiiskikh pri Moskovskom Universitete 3 (1880), 66-139 [in Russian]

Porfir'ev, I. A. 1877. 'Apokrificheskie Skazaniia o Vetkhozavetnykh Litsakh i Sobytiiax po Rukopis'iam Solovetskoii Biblioteki' ['Apocryphal Legends About Old Testament Characters and Events. From the Manuscripts of the Solovetskaia Library']. — Sbornik Otdeleniia Russkogo Iazyka i Slovesnosti 17: 1, 1-276 (a monographic issue) [in Russian].

Pypin, A. N. 1862. Lozhnyia i Otrechennia Knigi Russkoi Stariny. Sobrannia A. N. Pypinym. Pamiatniki Starinnoi Russkoi Literatury, Izdavaemye Grafom Grigoriem Kushelevym-Bezborodko. Vyp. 3. [Pseudepigraphic and Proscribed Books of Russian Past Times; Compiled by A. N. Pypin. Monuments of Old Russian Literature Published by Count Kushelev-Bezborodko. Vol. 3], St. Petersburg [in Russian]

Pypin, A. N. 1862 (a). 'Dlia ob'iasnenia stat'i o lozhnykh knigakh'. — Letopis' Zaniatii Arkheograficheskoi Komissii 1 (Sankt Petersburg).

Renn, J. 2011. The Globalization of Knowledge. Berlin: Max Planck Institut für Wissenschaftsgeschichte.

Rochberg-Halton, F. 1984. 'New Evidence for the History of Astrology', Journal of Near Eastern Studies 43, 115-140.

Ryan, W. F. 1971. 'The Oriental Duodenary Animal Cycle in Old Russian Manuscripts'. — Oxford Slavonic Papers 4, 12-20.

Russell, J. 2009. 'The Rhyme of the Book of the Dove (Stikh o Golubinoi Knige): From Zoroastrian Cosmology and Armenian Heresiology to the Russian Novel'. In: Allison, Ch. et al (eds). From Daena to Din. Religion, Kultur und Sprache in der iranischen Welt. Festschrift für Philip Kreyenbroek zum 60. Geburtstag. (Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz)

Sadnik L. and R. Aitzetmüller 1955. Handwörterbuch zu den altkirchenslavischen Texten. (Heidelberg)

Sadovnikov, D. 1986. Riddles of the Russian People: A Collection of Riddles, Parables and Puzzles. Translated with an Introduction by Ann C. Bigelow (Ann Arbor: Ardis)

Santos Otero, A. de 1981. Die handschriftliche Überlieferung der altslavischen Apokryphen, Band II [PTS 23] (Berlin/New York: W. de Gruyter)

Santos Otero, A. de 1984. 'Libro de los secretos de Henoch. (Henoc eslavo),' In: Macho, A.D. et. al. (ed.), Apocrifos del Antiguo Testamento, Tomo 4. Ciclo de Henoc (Madrid: Ediciones Cristiandad), 147-202.

Schmidt, N. 1921. 'The Two Recensions of Slavonic Enoch'. — Journal of the American Oriental Society 41, 307-12.

Sokolov, M. 1888. Materialy i Zametki po Starinnoi Slavianskoi Literature. Vyp. 1 [Materials and Notes on Old Slavonic Literature. Vol. 1]. (Moscow: Universitetskaia Tipografiia) [in Russian].

Sokolov, M. 1899. Materialy i Zametki po Starinnoi Slavianskoi Literature. Vyp. Tretii (vii): Slavianskaia Kniga Enokha. II. Tekst s latinskim perevodom. [Materials and Notes on Old Slavonic Literature. Vyp. 3 (vii): The Slavonic Book of Enoch. Text and translation in Latin]. (= Chteniia v Imperatorskom Obshchestve Istorii i Drevnostei Rossiiskikh pri Moskovskom Universitete 4) (Moscow: Universitetskaia Tipografiia) [in Russian].

Sokolov, M. 1905. 'Feniks v Apokrifakh ob Enokhe i Varukhe' ['Phoenix in apocrypha of Enoch and Baruch']. In: Novyi Sbornik Statei po Slavianovedeniiu, Sostavlennyi i Izdannyi Uchenikami V. I. Lamanskogo pri Uchastii ikh Uchenikov po sluchaiu 50-letii ego Ucheno-Literaturnoi Deiatel'nosti (St. Peterburg), 365-405 [in Russian].

Sokolov, M. 1910. Slavianskaia Kniga Enokha Pravednago. Teksty, latinskii perevod i issledovanie. Posmertnyi trud avtora prigotovil k izdaniiu M. Speranskii [The Slavonic Book of Enoch the Just. Texts with Latin translation and commentaries. Posthumous publication of author's unfinished manuscript, edited by M. N. Speranskii] (= Chteniia v Imperatorskom Obshchestve Istorii i Drevnostei Rossiiskikh pri Moskovskom Universitete, Kn. 4/235). Moscow: Sinodal'naia Tipografiia [in Russian].

Sparks, H. F. D. (ed.) 1984. The Apocryphal Old Testament (Oxford: Clarendon Press).

Sreznevskii, I. 1893-1903. Materialy dlia Slovaria Drevne-Russkogo Iazyka po Pis'mennym Pamiatnikam [Materials for the Dictionary of the Old Russian Language According to the Written Sources]. Vols 1-3. (Sankt-Peterburg: Izdanie Otdelenia Russkogo Iazyka i Slovesnosti Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk, Tipografiia Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk) [in Russian].

Sreznevskii, V. 1903. 'Otchet otdeleniiu russkago iazyka i slovesnosti Imperatorskoi akademii nauk o poezdke v Olonetskuiu, Vologodskuiu i Permskuiu Gubernii. (Iun' 1902). Perechen' priobretennykh rukopisei.' ['Report to the Department of Russian Language and Literature at the Imperial Academy of Sciences regarding the expedition to the Olonetskaia, Vologodskaia and Perm Gubernias (carried out in June 1902). List of acquired manuscripts']. — Izvestiia Otdeleniia Russkago Iazyka i Slovesnosti Imperatorskoi Akademii Nauk 8: 4, 99 [in Russian].

Stern, S. 2001. Calendar and Community. A History of Jewish Calendar: Second Century BCE – Tenth Century CE. (Oxford: University Press)

Stone, M. and Theodore A. Bergen (eds.) 1998. Biblical Figures Outside the Bible. (Harrisburg, Pennsylvania: Trinity Press International)

Stone, M. 1980. Scriptures, Sects and Visions. A Profile of Judaism from Ezra to the Jewish Revolts. (Oxford: Basil Blackwell)

Stone, M. 2000. 'The Fall of Satan and Adam's Penance,' In: Anderson, G., M. Stone and J. Tromp (eds.), Literature on Adam and Eve (Leiden, Boston, Köln: Brill, 2000), 43-57.

Stone, M. 2009, 'Biblical Figures in the Armenian tradition.' In: H. Lichtenberger and U. Mittmann-Richert (eds), Biblical Figures in Deuterocanonical and Cognate Literature. Deuterocanonical and Biblical Literature Yearbook 2008 (Berlin-New York: Walter de Gruyter), 630-646.

Stroumsa, G. 1984. Another Seed: Studies in Gnostic Mythology (Leiden: Brill)

Thilo, I. C. 1832. Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti, 1 (Lipsiae)

Thompson, Francis J. 1991. 'John the Exarch's theological education and proficiency in Greek as revealed by his abridged translation of John of Damascus' De Fide Orthodoxa'. — Palaeobulgarica 15:1, 35-58.

Thompson, Francis J. 1993. 'The Symeonian Florilegium: problems of its origin, content, textology and edition, together with an English translation of the Eulogy of Tzar Symeon'. — Palaeobulgarica 17:1, 37-53.

Thompson, Francis J. 1998. 'The Slavonic Translation of the Old Testament'. In: Krašovec, J. (ed.) The Interpretation of the Bible (Sheffield: Sheffield University Press), 605-920.

Thompson, Stith 1955-1958. Motif-Index of Folk Literature. A Classification of Narrative Elements in Folktales, Ballads, Myths, Fables, Medieval Romances, Exempla, Fabliaux, Jest-Books and Local Legends, Vols 1-6 (Copenhagen: Rosenkilde and Bagger).

Tikhonravov, N. 1863. Pamiatniki Otrechennoi Russkoi Literatury [Monuments of Proscribed Russian Literature]. Vols 1-2. (St. Petersburg: Tipografiia Tovarishchestva Obshchestvennaia Pol'za) [in Russian]

Tikhova, M. and E. Ivanova 2001. 'Běs v predstavite na srednovekovnia chovek i semantikata mu v diakhronia' ['The Běs in the worldview of medieval people and its semantics in diachrony']. In: Preslavska Knizhovna Shkola, Vol. 5. Izsledvaniia v Chest na Prof. T. Totev (Sofia: Akademichno Izdatelstvo Prof. Marin Drinov), 171-184.

Tolstaia S. M. and N. I. Tolstoy 1993. 'Slovo v Obriadovom Tekste. Kul'turnaia Semantika Slavianskogo *vesel.' In: XI Mezhdunarodnyi S'ezd Slavistov. Slavianskoe Iazykoznanie (Moscow: Akademiia Nauk, Institut Slavianovedeniia)

Tolstaia, S. M. 2000. 'Slavianskie Mifologicheskie Predstavleniia o Dushe' ['Mythological Concepts of Soul Among the Slavs']. In: Vinogradova, L. N., E. E. Levkieskaia and S. M. Tolstoi (eds), Slavianskii i Balkanskii Fol'klor: Narodnaia Demonologiia (Moscow: Indrik), 52-95.

Tolstoy, N. I. 1995. Iazyk i Narodnaia Kul'tura [Language and Folk Culture]. (Moscow: Indrik)

Tolstoy, N. I. (ed.) 1995. Slavianskie Drevnosti [Slavonic Antiquities], Vol. 1. (Moscow: Mezhdunarodnye Otnosheniia)

Tolstoy, N. I. (ed.) 1999. Slavianskie Drevnosti [Slavonic Antiquities], Vol. 2. (Moscow: Mezhdunarodnye Otnosheniia)

Toorn, Karel van der, et al. 1999. Dictionary of Deities and Demons in the Bible (Leiden: Brill).

Toorn, Karel van der, 2007. Scribal Culture and the Making of the Hebrew Bible (Cambridge / London: Harvard).

Tseitlin, R. M. et al. (eds) 1994. Staroslavianskii Slovar' (Po Rukopisiam X-XI vekov) [Old Slavonic Dictionary: Based on Data from 10th-11th century Manuscripts] (Moscow: Russkii Iazyk; Slavianskii Institut Akademii Nauk Cheshskoi Respubliki, Institut Slavianovedeniia i Balkanistiki Rossiiskoi Akademii Nauk) [in Russian]

Turdeanu, É. 1950. 'Apocryphes bogomiles et apocryphes pseudobogomiles' — Revue de l'histoire des religions 138:1, 22-52; 138:2, 176-218.

Vaillant, A. 1952. Le livre des secrets d'Hénoch. Texte slave et traduction française (Paris: Institut d'études slaves).

Vaillant A. 1958. 'Le saint Éphrem slave'. — Byzantinoslavica 19: 2, 279—286.

Vaillant, A. 1968. L'Évangile de Nicodème. Texte slave et texte latin (Geneva/Paris: I. Droz)

Vasmer, Max 1986-1987. Etimologicheskii Slovar' Russkogo Iazyka. Vols. 1-4 (Moscow: Progress).

West, M. 1971. 'The Cosmology of 'Hippocrates', De Hebdomadibus'. — The Classical Quarterly (New Series) 21 (2) [Nov. 1971], 365-388.

Zowczak, M. 2000. Biblia Ludowa (Wroclaw: Funna)

List of illustrations:

Fig. 1. The Holy Righteous Enoch, the Son of Jared, a mural painting from the narthex of the Church of the Assumption of the Most Holy Virgin Mary in the city of Blagoevgrad (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 2. The Holy Prophet Enoch, a mural painting from the narthex of the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 3. The Altar Gates of the Church of the Village of Asparukhovo (North-Western Bulgaria), 18th century

Fig. 4. The Blessed Man Enoch, a detail from the Altar Gates of the Church of the Village of Asparukhovo (North-Western Bulgaria), 18th century

Fig. 5. Visiting a Healer, a mural painting from the narthex of the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 6. Fornicatress [Блудница] Hanging in Hell, a mural painting from the Church the Most Holy Virgin Mary in the village of Velushets (South-Western Bulgaria), early 20th century

Fig. 7. Sinners Bound in Chains in Hell, a mural painting from the narthex of the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 8. Thief [Крадец] Hanging in Hell, a mural painting from the Church of St Dimitar in the village of Palat (South-Western Bulgaria), early 20th century

Fig. 9. Sinners Bound in Chains in Hell, a mural painting from the narthex of the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 10. Wrongdoers Bound in Chains in Hell, a mural painting from the narthex of the Rila Monastery of the Most Holy Virgin Mary (South-Western Bulgaria), 19th century

Fig. 11. Witch [Магьсница] Burning in Hell, a mural painting from the Church the Most Holy Virgin Mary in the village of Velushets (South-Western Bulgaria), early 20th century

Fig. 5

Fig. 6

Fig. 7

Fig. 8

Fig. 9

Fig. 10

Fig. 11

MAX-PLANCK-INSTITUT FÜR WISSENSCHAFTSGESCHICHTE

Max Planck Institute for the History of Science

Preprints since 2009 (a full list can be found at our website)

- 364 Angelo Baracca, Leopoldo Nuti, Jürgen Renn, Reiner Braun, Matteo Gerlini, Marilena Gala, and Albert Presas i Puig (eds.) Nuclear Proliferation: History and Present Problems
- 365 Viola van Beek „Man lasse doch diese Dinge selber einmal sprechen“ – Experimentierkästen, Experimentalanleitungen und Erzählungen um 1900
- 366 Julia Kursell (Hrsg.) Physiologie des Klaviers. Vorträge und Konzerte zur Wissenschaftsgeschichte der Musik
- 367 Hubert Laitko Strategen, Organisatoren, Kritiker, Dissidenten – Verhaltensmuster prominenter Naturwissenschaftler der DDR in den 50er und 60er Jahren des 20. Jahrhunderts
- 368 Renate Wahsner & Horst-Heino v. Borzeszkowski Naturwissenschaft und Weltbild
- 369 Dieter Hoffmann, Hölke Rößler, Gerald Reuther „Lachkabinett“ und „großes Fest“ der Physiker. Walter Grottrians „physikalischer Einakter“ zu Max Plancks 80. Geburtstag.
- 370 Shaul Katzir From academic physics to invention and industry: the course of Hermann Aron's (1845–1913) career
- 371 Larrie D. Ferreiro The Aristotelian Heritage in Early Naval Architecture, from the Venetian Arsenal to the French Navy, 1500–1700
- 372 Christof Windgätter Ansichtssachen. Zur Typographie- und Farbpolitik des Internationalen Psychoanalytischen Verlages (1919–1938)
- 373 Martin Thiering Linguistic Categorization of Topological Spatial Relations. (TOPOI – Towards a Historical Epistemology of Space)
- 374 Uljana Feest, Hans-Jörg Rheinberger, Günter Abel (eds.) Epistemic Objects
- 375 Ludmila Hyman Vygotsky on Scientific Observation
- 376 Anna Holterhoff Naturwissenschaft versus Religion? Zum Verhältnis von Theologie und Kosmologie im 18. Jahrhundert (TOPOI – Towards a Historical Epistemology of Space)
- 377 Fabian Krämer The Persistent Image of an Unusual Centaur. A Biography of Aldrovandi's Two-Legged Centaur Woodcut
- 378 José M. Pacheco The mathematician Norberto Cuesta Dutari recovered from oblivion
- 379 Tania Munz “My Goose Child Martina”. The Multiple Uses of Geese in Konrad Lorenz's Animal Behavior Studies, 1935–1988
- 380 Sabine Brauckmann, Christina Brandt, Denis Thieffry, Gerd B. Müller (eds.) Graphing Genes, Cells, and Embryos. Cultures of Seeing 3D and Beyond
- 381 Donald Salisbury Translation and Commentary of Leon Rosenfeld's “Zur Quantelung der Wellenfelder”, Annalen der Physik 397,113 (1930)
- 382 Jean-Paul Gaudillière, Daniel Kevles, Hans-Jörg Rheinberger (eds.) Living Properties: Making Knowledge and Controlling Ownership in the History of Biology
- 383 Arie Krampf Translation of central banking to developing countries in the postwar period: The Case of the Bank of Israel
- 384 Zur Shalev Christian Pilgrimage and Ritual Measurement in Jerusalem

- 385 Arne Schirrmacher (ed.) Communicating Science in 20th Century Europe. A Survey on Research and Comparative Perspectives
- 386 Thomas Sturm & Uljana Feest (eds.) What (Good) is Historical Epistemology?
- 387 Christoph Hoffmann und Lidia Westermann Gottfried Benns Literaturreferate in der Berliner Klinischen Wochenschrift. Faksimileabdruck und Einführung
- 388 Alfred Gierer Wissenschaft, Religion und die deutungsoffenen Grundfragen der Biologie
- 389 Horst Nowacki The Heritage of Archimedes in Ship Hydrostatics: 2000 Years from Theories to Applications
- 390 Jens Høyrup Hesitating progress – the slow development toward algebraic symbolization in abacus- and related manuscripts, c.1300 to c.1550
- 391 Horst-Heino v. Borzeszkowski & Renate Wahsner Die Fassung der Welt unter der Form des Objekts und der philosophische Begriff der Objektivität
- 392 Ana Barahona, Edna Suarez-Díaz, and Hans-Jörg Rheinberger (eds.) The Hereditary Hourglass. Genetics and Epigenetics, 1868–2000
- 393 Luis Campos and Alexander von Schwerin (eds.) Making Mutations: Objects, Practices, Contexts
- 394 Volkmar Schüller Some Remarks on Prop. VIII Probl. II of Newton's Opticks Book I Part I
- 395 Tamás Demeter Hume's Experimental Method
- 396 Fynn Ole Engler, Björn Henning und Karsten Böger Transformationen der wissenschaftlichen Philosophie und ihre integrative Kraft – Wolfgang Köhler, Otto Neurath und Moritz Schlick
- 397 Frank W. Stahnisch «Der Rosenthal'sche Versuch» oder: Über den Ort produktiver Forschung – Zur Exkursion des physiologischen Experimentallabors von Isidor Rosenthal (1836–1915) von der Stadt aufs Land
- 398 Angela Matyssek Überleben und Restaurierung. Barnett Newmans Who's afraid of Red, Yellow, and Blue III und *Cathedra
- 399 Susanne Lehmann-Brauns, Christian Sichau, Helmuth Trischler (eds.) The Exhibition as Product and Generator of Scholarship
- 400 Fynn Ole Engler und Jürgen Renn Wissenschaftliche Philosophie, moderne Wissenschaft und Historische Epistemologie
- 401 M. J. Geller Look to the Stars: Babylonian medicine, magic, astrology and *melothesia
- 402 Matthias Schemmel Medieval Representations of Change and Their Early Modern Application (TOPOI – Towards a Historical Epistemology of Space)
- 403 Frank W. Stahnisch German-Speaking Émigré Neuroscientists in North America after 1933: Critical Reflections on Emigration-Induced Scientific Change
- 404 Francesca Bordogna Asceticism and Truth: The Case of 'Magic Pragmatism'
- 405 Christoph Hoffmann and Alexandre Métraux (eds.) Working with Instruments – Three Papers of Ernst Mach and Ludwig Mach (Translated by Daniel Bowles)
- 406 Karin Krauthausen Paul Valéry and Geometry: Instrument, Writing Model, Practice
- 407 Wolfgang Lefèvre Picturing the World of Mining in the Renaissance
The Schwazer Bergbuch (1556)
- 408 Tobias Breidenmoser, Fynn Ole Engler, Günther Jirikowski, Michael Pohl and Dieter G. Weiss Transformation of Scientific Knowledge in Biology: Changes in our Understanding of the Living Cell through Microscopic Imaging
- 409 Werner Kogge Schrift und das Rätsel des Lebendigen. Die Entstehung des Begriffssystems der Molekularbiologie zwischen 1880 und 1950

13 tercessions of the prophets, nor help of the righteous.^r *There is the proclamation of judgment to corruption,^s regarding the way^t to the fire and the path that leads 14 to the glowing coals.^u *Therefore, there is one Law by One, one world and an end 48:24
15 for all those who exist. *Then^v he will make alive those whom he has found, and^w
he will purge them from sins, and at the same time he will destroy those who are polluted with sins.

1 86 When you, therefore, receive the letter,^a read it carefully in your assemblies.
And think about it, in particular, however,^b on the days of your fasts. And remember me by means of this letter in the same way as I remember you by means of this, and always.^c Bar 1:14
Col 4:16
1Mac 12:11
Rom 1:9

1 87 And^a it happened when I had finished all the words of this letter and had written it carefully until the end, I folded it, sealed it cautiously, and bound it to the neck of the eagle. And I let it go and sent it away.

The end of the letter of Baruch, the son of Neriah.

3 (Greek Apocalypse of) BARUCH

(First to Third Century A.D.)

A NEW TRANSLATION AND INTRODUCTION

BY H. E. GAYLORD, JR.

In this pseudepigraphon, Baruch, the scribe of Jeremiah, weeps over the destruction of Jerusalem and its Temple and the mockery of its heathen destroyers. The Lord sends an angel to comfort him and to guide him through the heavens and show him their mysteries. This angel then leads Baruch through five heavens:

1. The first contains a plain where those being punished for waging war against God are found (ch. 2).

2. The second contains a plain where those who forced others to build a tower to heaven in order to discover its contents are found (ch. 3).

3. The third contains a plain in which are a snake, a sea, and primal rivers, as well as the garden of Eden (perhaps Hades), the sun with the Phoenix, and the moon (chs. 4-9).

4. The fourth contains a plain on which are a pool and exotic birds, and the gathering place of the souls of the righteous (ch. 10).

5. The fifth is where the angels responsible for men on earth bring the gifts of men to Michael, who presents them to God. Baruch does not pass inside the gates of this heaven; they remain closed. In these chapters, three classes of mankind are mentioned: the righteous, the insufficiently righteous, and the sinners. In the Slavonic version, Baruch is granted permission to intercede for the suffering sinners (chs. 11-16).

After his heavenly journey, Baruch is returned to earth to relate what he has seen to his fellow men (ch. 17).

Texts

3 Baruch is found in both Greek and Slavonic. The Slavonic is a translation from a lost Greek original.

GREEK MANUSCRIPTS

1. BM MS Add. 10073. This manuscript is dated from the late fifteenth to the early sixteenth century. It is described by M. R. James.¹

2. Andros, Monastery of the Hagia, MS 46; dated by J.-C. Picard to the beginning of the fifteenth century.

On the relation between these manuscripts, Picard concludes that they "were both copied from the same manuscript, today lost."²

r. Cf. Ps-Philo 33:5.
s. "To corruption," l; "of corruption," c solus.
t. "Regarding the way," l; "and the way," c solus.
u. "To the glowing coals," l; "to the realm of death," c solus.
v. "Then," l; "And then," 6h14 10g1 12d2 c.
w. "Has found and . . .," l; "has found that . . .," c solus.

86 a. "The letter," l; "this my letter," c solus.
b. "However," l; om., c solus.
c. "And always," l; "and it may fare you well always," c solus.

87 a. This ch. is available in c only.

¹ Apocrypha Anecdota II.

² J.-C. Picard, Apocalypsis Baruchi Graeci, p. 69. MS 46 is described in P. Lambros, "Katalogos ton en te kata ten Andron mone tes Hagias Kodikon," Epeteris tou Parnassou 2 (1898) pp. 180-83, and A. Ehrhard, Überlieferung und Bestand der hagiographischen und homiletischen Literatur der Griechischen Kirche (Leipzig, 1939-1952), I.3, pp. 587, 839. The first sixty-two fols. contain homilies, but it should be noted that all subsequent items of this MS are also contained in BM MS Add. 10073.

Family stemma: A B¹ B²

The Slavonic manuscript tradition is preserved in at least twelve manuscripts; these can be divided into two major families, one of which is composed of two subfamilies. In most respects the more original readings have been preserved in family A. Clear revisions can be found in family B as a whole, and further redaction has led to its subfamilies. Until now, subfamily B¹ has been used for comparison with the Greek manuscript tradition, with the exception of a comment by W. Lüdtké.³ The translation below is based on family A wherever possible. Unfortunately, its best representatives, manuscripts L and T, both lack the sections 1:2–2:2 and 16:8–17:1, and these have been supplied by family B.

Family A:

L. Leningrad Greek 70 fols. 105–111v and St. Catherine's Monastery Slavonic 34 fols. 27–29v. One large manuscript, formerly in St. Catherine's Monastery, Sinai, has been split into four parts. One part (Slavonic 34) remains there, and the other three were removed to Russia and are now in the Salykov-Ščedrin State Library of Leningrad. The folios containing 3 Baruch were misbound into two of the parts of this manuscript. B. M. Zagrebin has recently discovered the relationship of these parts and described the contents of the original manuscript.⁴ The manuscript was written by several scribes; the portion containing 3 Baruch dates from the thirteenth century. This scribe copied a number of apocrypha. A tentative list includes the Abar Legend, 3 Baruch, and 4 Baruch. The proper sequence of folios in 3 Baruch as now recovered is Greek 70 fols. 105–108; Slavonic 34 fols. 27–29; Greek 70 fols. 109–111v. Three gaps still damage the text of this manuscript. 1:2–2:2a is missing (fols. 105v and 106r [first half] are blank). The order of 2:7–4:5a and 4:5b–5:2a is reversed because of a confusion in an antecedent manuscript, and this is probably what caused the loss of text at 5:2b–12a. The third missing portion is from 16:8 to the end. Both L and T contain an addition before 5:1, and end with an expanded version of the prayer of Baruch in chapter 16. The ending (16:8 to the end) is contained only in the manuscripts of family B. For further details on this manuscript and a diplomatic edition of it, see my forthcoming edition.

T. Theological Academy of Moscow No. 363/679, reportedly now in the Historical Museum of Moscow. This manuscript from the fifteenth century was published by N. Tichonravov (see bibliography). In addition to the faults it has in common with L, this manuscript shares with manuscript B the loss of 1:1–3:1, and an addition at the end of 5:3. (This seems to be a fragment from Vita 13–17, otherwise unknown in Slavonic.) Both T and B omit 3:8b. T omits 6:6–10:5.

B. Originally in the Barsov collection, this manuscript has passed into the Theological Academy of Kiev. It was written in A.D. 1701 and was published by M. Sokolov (see bibliography). Its language is very late, and it summarizes and rephrases passages freely. Manuscript B ends with a summary conclusion after chapter 9.

Family B:

The effects of the redaction behind this group can be clearly seen at a number of points:

1. 2:6 is omitted.
2. An interpolation occurs at 3:5.

³ W. Lüdtké, "Beiträge zu slavischen Apokryphen: 2 Apokalypse des Baruch," ZAW (1911) 220: "Stimmt T [in family A] mehr fach genauer mit G [Gk.] überein als S [in family B¹]." MS N, a very inferior MS of family B¹, is the basis for the earlier translations of Bonwetsch ("Das slavisch erhaltene Baruchbuch," Nachrichten von der königlichen Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen: philologische-historische Klasse [1896] 91–101) and W. R. Morfill (in Apocrypha Anecdota II, pp. 95–102), and MS S, the best representative of family B¹, was used by W. Hage for his more recent translation in JSHRZ 5.1. For a fuller description of the MSS, see E. Turdeanu ("L'Apocalypse de Baruch en slave," Revue des études slaves 48 [1969] 23–48) and H. E. Gaylord (The Slavonic Version of 3 Baruch [forthcoming]).

⁴ This important discovery was announced in B. M. Zagrebin, "O proischoždenii i sud'be nekotorykh slavjanskikh palimpsestov Sinaja," in Iz istorii rukopisnykh i staropechatnykh sobranij Otdela rukopisej i redkich knig GPB (Issledovanija, obzory, publikacii; Sbornik naučnykh trudov; Leningrad, 1979) pp. 61–80.

3. 3:8 is revised and has an interpolation.
4. 4:1–2a is omitted.
5. 4:5b is revised in two respects.

This is not an exhaustive list; there are also a large number of small variants that support this grouping. The arrangement of subfamilies B¹ and B² is largely based on small variants. A full description of the manuscripts in family B can be found in Gaylord (see n. 3).

THE TEXTUAL BASIS FOR THE TRANSLATIONS

The translation below of the Greek is based on the texts of M. R. James and J.-C. Picard. The translation of the Slavonic is based on my forthcoming edition. In that edition manuscript L has been used as the base text, emended when necessary on the basis of a thorough comparison of all the known manuscripts, as described above. When manuscripts L and T are absent (1:2–2:2 and 16:8 to the end), an eclectic text has been made. T and family B are used for 5:2b–12a.

News of the discovery of the Sinai manuscript portion of L reached me only after this work was completed. I have had time only to make a preliminary examination of it and a provisional translation. My definitive analysis and translation, especially of 6:6–11:3, will be found in my critical edition.

Parallel translations of the Greek and Slavonic texts are presented rather than an eclectic one for several reasons. Firstly, the divergences between the two textual traditions are so many and so great that the apparatus would rapidly be filled with variants alone. Secondly, the systematic variations and tendencies of each tradition should be examined not only on individual readings, but as a whole. Furthermore, the divergence of the textual tradition of present Greek manuscripts and the Greek basis of the present Slavonic tradition occurred not later than the tenth century, approximately five hundred years before the earliest extant Greek manuscript. In several important differences, which separate the Greek from the Slavonic traditions, a strong argument for the priority of the Slavonic exists:

1. The possible dependencies of the Greek on 4 Baruch in the introduction and chapter 1 are omitted in the Slavonic.
2. Explicit New Testament citations in the Greek (4:15; 5:3(?); 15:4; 16:2), and the phrase "through Jesus Christ Emmanuel" at 4:15 are all lacking in the Slavonic.
3. The story of the planting of the garden by angels in the Slavonic, lacking in the Greek, is worthy of consideration as original.
4. The structure and content of chapter 4.

These matters are discussed below.

Original language

The Slavonic version is a translation from Greek. A few linguistic features of the Greek could be explained by supposing a Semitic base text but are not unknown in later Koine Greek usage. There is no convincing argument that the Greek is a translation from another language.

Date and provenance

The dating and assignment of a historical context for 3 Baruch have been the subject of considerable discussion. M. R. James⁵ was the first to suggest a reference to this work in Origen, De principiis 2.3.6: "Finally they appeal to the book of the prophet Baruch to bear witness to this assertion, because in it there are very clear indications of the seven worlds or heavens."⁶ If this identification is correct then the latest possible date for the writing of 3 Baruch would be A.D. 231. The suggestion that the earliest possible date may be set by 4 Baruch because of allusions to it in 3 Baruch (introduction and chapter 1) has been cautioned against by James himself.⁷ James concluded that 3 Baruch is "a Christian Apocalypse of the second century."⁸ L. Ginsberg argued that it is a Jewish-gnostic work from the beginning of the second century.⁹ H. M. Hughes maintained that the original version is a second-century Jewish work that has been modified by Christian redactors.¹⁰ J.-C. Picard claimed that it is a product of Jewish mysticism in the Diaspora from the first or second century with very minor Christian interpolations.¹¹ The most recent statement concerning the provenance is that it is a product of Syrian Jewry.¹²

⁵ James, Apocrypha Anecdota II, p. li.

⁶ Translation by G. W. Butterworth, Origen on First Principles (London, 1936; repr. New York, 1966) p. 91.

⁷ James, Apocrypha Anecdota II, p. lv.

Origen's statement does not help us to determine the latest possible date for our present work. Either he knew a version other than the present one (i.e. one with seven heavens), or he is speaking about another work altogether that has not survived. The only clear references to 3 Baruch are of a much later date, namely the use of 3 Baruch, chapter 2, in the History of the Rechabites¹³ and in later Slavonic literature.¹⁴ Nor is the suggested earliest possible date reliable since the possible references to 4 Baruch (absent in the Slavonic version) are probably secondary.¹⁵

Another argument for the earliest possible date is the dependency of 3 Baruch on 2 Baruch 76:3, in which Baruch is promised a vision.¹⁶ However, the interests of the author of 3 Baruch suggest that he belongs to a group completely other than that of the author of 2 Baruch. There is no apocalyptic notion of an end-time in 3 Baruch, nor would that interest him. Furthermore, his interest would seem to be focused on heavenly realities and not on those on earth. A timeless heavenly service in which the good deeds or prayers of men are offered by Michael on the altar is his chief answer to the crisis caused by the destruction of the earthly temple, and not a patient waiting for the new temple (whether in heaven or in Jerusalem) at the end of days.

Chapters 11–16 have often been singled out as having Christian characteristics, and even as being a secondary Christian conclusion replacing the earlier Jewish one. Yet many of these Christian elements are lacking in the Slavonic version, e.g. the citation of Matthew 25:23 in 15:4, Romans 10:19 or Deuteronomy 32:21 in 16:2, the monastic expression pneumatikous pateras in 13:4 (although it does contain references to the Church here and in chs. 15 and 16). The Slavonic also lacks the reference to Christian priests, Greek version 16:4. The Greek version would also appear to show a Christianizing tendency at the end of 5:3 (cf. Slavonic 5:3; the phrase as in the Slavonic also appears in 1:6 and 2:6), cf. also 4:15 in the Greek. One definitely sees Christian editing in chapters 11–16 in the Slavonic and even more in the Greek. Christian revision of the Greek manuscript tradition may also be seen in 4:3–6 and 4:15.

One cannot be certain about a time and place of composition for 3 Baruch. The alternatives are that it is a Christian composition that has made use of Jewish traditions, which may or may not have been later reworked, or that it is a basically Jewish composition that has undergone Christian reworking. The most likely dating of the initial composition in the latter case would be during the first two centuries after Christ; in the former, the dating would be very difficult. However, the scholarly dichotomy of Jewish and Christian writings in the first two centuries, like the earlier one between Diaspora and Palestinian Jewry, may be a misleading attempt to distinguish what is closely interrelated.

Historical importance

The greatest problem in establishing a historical context for this work is the evaluation

⁸ Ibid., p. lxxi.

⁹ L. Ginsberg, "Greek Apocalypse of Baruch," JE, vol. 2, p. 551.

¹⁰ H. M. Hughes, "The Greek Apocalypse of Baruch," APOT, vol. 2, pp. 529f.; accepted by W. Hage, Die griechische Baruch-Apokalypse, JSHRZ 5.1, pp. 19f.

¹¹ Picard, Apocalypsis Baruchi, pp. 75–78; and "Observations sur l'Apocalypse grecque de Baruch," Sem 20 (1970) 100–3.

¹² L. Rost, Einleitung in die alttestamentlichen Apokryphen und Pseudepigraphen einschliesslich der grossen Qumran-Handschriften (Heidelberg, 1971) p. 88.

¹³ Formerly called the Apocalypse of Zosimus. Cf. especially chs. 2f.; see James, Apocrypha Anecdota II, pp. lvif. [Also see HistRech discussed and translated in the present collection. —J.H.C.]

¹⁴ See Turdeanu, Revue des études slaves 48 (1969) 36–38, 44–48.

¹⁵ The points in common with the 4th cent. ApPaul chs. 7–11 do not necessarily reflect a literary relationship, but see Introduction, "Historical importance."

¹⁶ James, Apocrypha Anecdota II, p. liv.; P. Bogaert, Apocalypse de Baruch (SC; Paris, 1969) vol. 1, p. 455.

of the two versions. Previously it has been argued that the Slavonic is a rewritten version of the Greek. With the new manuscript evidence it can be seen that the Slavonic represents in the main the same text as the Greek. At some points it is shorter and at others it is longer.

Three sections (chs. 4f., 10, and 11–16) are most important in judging the two versions. The Slavonic places the resting place of the righteous and hell apparently elsewhere than in the first four heavens. The Greek version places hell in the third heaven (cf. chs. 4f.), and the resting place of the righteous in the fourth (ch. 10). In chapters 4 and 5 the Slavonic concentrates upon the incidents associated with the Fall: the garden of Eden and the serpent being punished for his role in the Fall. Further, in chapter 10 the inhabitants of the fourth heaven are not the righteous but probably angels singing the praises of God. Yet in both places it can be argued that those passages occurring only in the Greek are a reworking of the original construction, which is better represented by the Slavonic version.

In his introduction to the Greek text, M. R. James raised the issue of the relation between 3 Baruch and the fourth-century Apocalypse of Paul and suggested the possibility that the Apocalypse of Paul in chapters 9–18 was dependent on a version of 3 Baruch, chapters 11–16, closer to the original than the present Greek version.¹⁷ The Slavonic version of these chapters would reflect such a text, which includes the same sequence at that point as the Apocalypse of Paul. Another possibility would be the dependence of both 3 Baruch and the Apocalypse of Paul on a common original.

If the contents of the concluding chapters of the Slavonic version are more original than the Greek, then the earlier chapters 4 and 5 and chapter 10 also must be considered more original. Furthermore it is precisely in chapters 4f. and 11–16 that the Greek has suffered the most at the hands of Christian scribes. Wine is identified as the "blood of God" (4:15); "spiritual fathers" (mentioned in 13:4) is a Christian term especially used for monastics and bishops, and the function of the priests in 16:4 would also suggest a Christian context. Moreover, the New Testament is explicitly cited in the Greek at 15:4 and perhaps at 16:2. Yet the Slavonic itself is not free from Christian elements (cf. 13:4 and 16:2).

While there is evidence of Christian reworking of this apocalypse, there is also strong evidence of its original writing being Jewish or early Christian. The many parallels with Jewish traditions are not likely to have been known after the clear separation between Jewish and Christian communities. Therefore the original work should probably be dated in the first two centuries A.D.

Theological importance

The visions found in 3 Baruch share elements with many Jewish and Graeco-Roman traditions, yet differ from their parallels at crucial points.

The supreme episode in most heavenly visits in the apocryphal and mystical (Merkabah) literature is the appearance before the throne of God. Although the throne is mentioned twice in 3 Baruch (6:8[S]; 9:4[S]), this element is missing in the journey. The gates of the fifth heaven remain closed to Baruch, and he does not see the throne. It is possible, however, that the original text contained descriptions of further heavens, but the original form cannot be reconstructed from the extant versions.

There seem to be two differing views concerning God in this work. He acts directly against the two sets of tower builders (2:7; 3:6, 8), but in the later chapters he intervenes only through intermediaries, meting out rewards and punishments (chs. 11–16). Angels implement the will of God in the creation of the garden of Eden and in the daily care of the sun and moon. Moreover, another group of angels render daily (?) account of the activities of men to their commander-in-chief Michael. He receives from them the good works of men, which he as high priest then takes to the temple in an upper heaven to offer upon the altar. The same angels then give rewards and punishments to the men in their charge.

This work has a wealth of angels. Two angelic messengers are mentioned: Phanael is described as an archangel (10:1[G]), an angel of hosts (2:6[G]; 10:1[S]), and an interpreter of revelations (11:7[G]). An otherwise unknown angel, Sarasael, delivers a revelation to Noah (4:15). The central angelic figure in 3 Baruch is Michael, who is addressed as the commander-in-chief of all the angels (see n. to 11:4). Yet his activities are even broader: He holds the keys to the gates of the upper heavens, the kingdom of God or heaven (11:2), and functions as priest in the heavenly temple. In chapters 11–16 he is also the single intermediary between God and the angels overseeing men.

¹⁷ A close relation between ApPaul and 3Bar was first suggested by N. Bonwetsch, Nachrichten, pp. 92f. Cf. also James, Apocrypha Anecdota II, pp. 70f.; Turdeanu, Revue des études slaves 48 (1969) 42. 3Bar has many other parallels with ApPaul. An edition of the Slavonic version of ApPaul would aid in sorting out this problem.

Five angels are mentioned by name in the Slavonic version of 3 Baruch: Michael, Gabriel, Uriel, Raphael, and Satanael (the MSS of family A), and Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, Phanuel, and Satanael (the MSS of family B). The name Satanael, modeled upon the -EL element in other angels' names, is changed to Satan when he loses his favored status. Satanael is mentioned in several other works as well. The earliest is 2 Enoch 18, 31, where he is the chief of the fallen Watchers. Moreover, he is probably identified with the figure in Isaiah 14:13f. who falls from heaven. A parallel account is also found in the Gospel of Bartholomew 3:25–29 and in the Book of the Cave of Treasures.¹⁸ Yet the name Satanael in the Slavonic is probably secondary to the name Samael in the Greek version. Samael became a centralizing figure in the later rabbinic literature, incorporating the functions of several angels. Yet Diabolos, or Satan, functioned in the same manner among Christians, and we find little record of Samael in Christian literature. The first four archangels in the two lists are each paralleled in early Jewish and Christian sources (see n. to 4:7[S]). The name Samael is very common as the chief of evil angels in rabbinic literature and some apocryphal works. Possible etymologies are the poison of God (cf. the poison administered by the Angel of Death, b.AZ 20b), or the blind one.

Both versions of 3 Baruch are confused in their treatment of Samael and the vine. In the Greek they are both cursed before the fall of Adam and Eve, but the vine is to be transformed for the good (4:15). In the Slavonic version the vine is first identified with "sinful desire which Satanael spread over Eve and Adam," and then Noah is told to "alter its name and change it for the better." Implied in both versions is disobedience among the angels before that of Adam and Eve. At least three different backgrounds are possible for the account of Samael here, and it is impossible to make a definitive judgment. Though the vine was planted by Samael and cursed by God, in the new creation after the Flood the vine and its fruit remain useful, within reason.

By his disobedience Adam lost "the glory of God" (4:16[G]), which may have been comparable to that of angels (cf. 13:4[S]). The reward of the righteous is oil, possibly the sign of the glory of God, which the angel-guide promises to show Baruch several times in this text (6:12; 7:2; 11:2; 16:3[S]). It is hardly accidental that there are traditions that Adam sought to receive the "oil of mercy" at the point of death, and that Enoch was transformed by the "oil of his glory" (see n. to 15:1). The angel describes the resting place of the righteous as one of glory (16:4[S]), but Baruch does not visit it.

The story about the phoenix bird, known in classical, Jewish, and Christian antiquity, also appears here.¹⁹ Many of the details correspond to the classical tradition. Early Christianity used this story as a symbolic representation of the resurrection of Jesus: the new phoenix rising out of the ashes of its predecessor. Yet here, without parallel, the phoenix is the protector of the world, shielding its inhabitants from the fierce pure rays of the sun, which would destroy them and their impure deeds were it not for this mediator.

Two central themes run through the entirety of 3 Baruch. At the opening, Baruch is crying over the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple. The angel tells him not to be concerned for the salvation of Jerusalem (1:3), and he promises to show Baruch the mysteries of God. These mysteries concern obedience and disobedience to God's commands and their results. Another aspect of the mysteries that Baruch encounters at many points is the wonders of the natural, albeit heavenly world. He observes the workings of the sun and moon and, most clearly in the Slavonic, observes other wonders too: the snake that keeps the great sea in balance and the origin of fruitful rains. Baruch sees the punishment of those who waged war with God (ch. 2), of those who forced others to build a tower to the heavens (ch. 3), of the serpent who participated in the temptation of Adam and Eve (ch. 4), of the moon that helped Samael in the temptation (ch. 9), and the punishment of men who disobey God's commands

¹⁸ See E. A. W. Budge, The Book of the Cave of the Treasures (London, 1927) pp. 56f.

¹⁹ [See the recent and very important work on the phoenix—and the discussion of the phoenix in 3Bar (especially pp. 261–304)—by R. van den Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix (Leiden, 1972); also cf. nn. d, e, h, j, and k to ch. 6 below. —J.H.C.]

(ch. 16). Moreover, Adam himself lost the "glory of God" because of his disobedience (4:13, 16). In chapters 11–16 the focus is shifted to those presently living. No final Day of Judgment is even hinted at (except in Baruch's remark in 1:7). It appears that angels take a daily account of the lives of men and receive new instructions concerning them. Those who have lived virtuously receive their reward, and those who have clearly been disobedient are punished for committing the sins listed at several points in the text (chs. 4, 8, 13). The two versions give differing accounts of those who have insufficient accomplishments.

Baruch's initial concern would seem to be about the proper functioning of the Temple in Jerusalem. How can the proper relation between God and men be maintained without the sacrifices of the Temple? The answer becomes clear: There is a heavenly temple in which the prayers, virtues, and good deeds are offered by Michael. The rewards, the oil (of mercy) and the glory of God, will not be withheld because of the absence of the Temple in Jerusalem. This answer is quite different from others given in this period. Here there is no mention of a messiah, no division between Israel and the other nations (except possibly in Baruch's opening lament), and no notion of two ages.

Relation to canonical books

The opening chapters of 3 Baruch are most closely bound to stories from the Book of Genesis, but these are expanded and reworked in a manner common to much of the literature of second Temple Judaism.

A good example of this is the treatment of the tower of Babel (Gen 11:1–9). Two different groups of men seem to be distinguished here.²⁰ The first group attempted to reach heaven in order to wage war with God and are punished in the first heaven. The second group, imprisoned in the second heaven, forced others to build a tower so as to discover the composition of heaven. Here several elements of the Egyptian enslavement of Israel are incorporated into the story. The store cities (fortified cities in LXX) of Exodus 1:11 may here have been interpreted as a tower. The story of the woman forced to work while giving birth is elsewhere told of the Egyptian period (see n. to 3:5). Bricks are also a strong element of the account in Exodus 1. The punishment with blindness is mentioned in Genesis 19:11 in relation to the citizens of Sodom and Gomorrah, but it is suggested already in the Wisdom of Solomon 19:17 that the plague of darkness (Ex 10:21–23) was also blindness.

Again, the story of the garden of Eden is expanded here. The planting of the garden was not done directly by God but by his angels, and the angel who caused Adam and Eve to sin was one of these angels. The punishment of the snake (Gen 3:14f.) takes place in the third heaven, where, according to the Slavonic version, he "eats earth like grass" (4:3). The giants who, we are told, were drowned in the Flood may be the children of the unions described in Genesis 6:1–4 (cf. e.g. 1En 6–16). A strong typological relation is set up between Adam and Noah, who discovers a piece of the vine through which Adam and Eve sinned washed out of the garden by the receding floodwaters. Afraid to provoke God's wrath, Noah hesitates to plant the vine, but the angel Sarasael is sent to instruct him to do so.²¹

Relation to apocryphal books

Baruch, a minor figure in the Book of Jeremiah, became an important pseudonym in the second Temple period of Jewish history. In the second century B.C., 1 Baruch 1:1–3:8 was written. After A.D. 70 the works 2 and 4 Baruch were written. These books attributed to Baruch are not the work of a single school, but this name brought associations of the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the Temple in 587 B.C. and the crisis that resulted. Furthermore, there is a Christian Apocalypse of Baruch in Ethiopic which was adapted by ²⁰ A threefold division of tower builders is mentioned in rabbinic sources: "Rabbi Jeremiah ben Eleazar said, 'They (the builders) were split into three groups.' One said, 'Let us go up and dwell there,' and one said, 'Let us go up and practise idolatry,' and one said, 'Let us go up and make war.' " The first group is dispersed, the second is stopped when God confuses their tongues, and the third group is changed into apes, evil spirits, and demons (b.Sanh 109a).

²¹ The two versions diverge greatly here (5:15). The Gk. "and its fruit . . ." is a Christian addition, but its opening and closing phrases may be original.

the Falashas.²² Justin the Gnostic in the second century also had a book of Baruch.²³ James thinks that still another book of Baruch was known to Cyprian.²⁴ One can see by the last three books the degree to which Baruch's name was used for very different purposes: He is even identified as an angel by Justin the Gnostic.

3 Baruch is one of a number of books concerning the visions of a man conducted through the various heavens. Similar visions are recorded in the Testament of Abraham, the Apocalypse of Abraham, 1 Enoch, 2 Enoch, the Testament of Levi, the Vision of Isaiah, and the Merkabah literature. Lists of seven heavens and their contents are also given in rabbinic sources. These lists are far from uniform, and different items occur in the various works.

On many specific points common traditions are shared between 3 Baruch and other apocryphal literature, and these are mentioned in the notes below. Among these is the tradition about Adam's pre-Fall glory, which he lost (4:16[G]). This important tradition is closely related to the books concerning Adam and Eve. The secondary references to Satanael in the Slavonic version have probably been influenced by Christian traditions; this may also be true of the mention of Satanael in 2 Enoch. Still, it is possible that this myth, based on Isaiah 14:12-14, and found in the Latin Vita Adae et Evae as well as in one late rabbinic source, is much older than is sometimes thought.

In what A. Vaillant considers the oldest version of 2 Enoch²⁵ seven phoenixes are located in the sixth heaven (2En 19:6). However, in the long text, phoenixes and chalkydii accompany the sun in the fourth heaven (2En 12:1-3). Moreover, they announce to the earthly birds the entrance of the sun at dawn (2En 15:1). Yet the main function of the phoenix in 3 Baruch, guardian of the world, has no parallel.

Cultural importance

This work has not made a great impact in later history. It is possible that it has influenced certain parts of the Apocalypse of Paul and the History of the Rechabites. Origen may cite it at one point.

Yet in Slavic literature it has had some importance, as witnessed by the fact that twelve known manuscripts exist today. The Slavonic version was reedited before the fourteenth century (MSS of family B). Moreover, it gave rise to a Bulgarian folktale known from the eighteenth century.²⁶ There are also Russian manuscripts (15th-17th cent.) of a moral discourse against the abuse of wine, which uses chapters 4 and 5 of 3 Baruch to confirm its point.²⁷

Thus while in Western Europe and Greece 3 Baruch has lain in libraries unread until the late nineteenth century, it has been in popular and religious use among Slavic peoples.

ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

Charlesworth, PMR, pp. 86f.

Delling, Bibliographie, p. 163.

Denis, Introduction, pp. 79-84.

GREEK TEXT

James, M. R. Apocrypha Anecdota II, ed. J. A. Robinson. T&S 5; Cambridge, 1899. (Introduction, pp. li-lxxi; Gk. text, pp. 83-94. This is the first edition of the Gk. text based on BM MS Add. 10073, and the Introduction is still an important study of 3Bar and its themes. Repr. Kraus, 1967. For a translation of Slavonic MS N see W. R. Morfill's work in the same vol., pp. 95-102.)

Picard, J.-C. Apocalypsis Baruchi Graece, ed. A.-M. Denis and M. de Jonge. PVTG 2; Leiden, 1967. (Picard's text is based upon the two extant MSS.)

SLAVONIC TEXT

Hercigonja, E. "Videnje Varuhovo' u Petrisovu Zborniku iz 1468 Godine," in Zbornik za filologiju i lingvistiku N.S. 7 (1964) 63-93. (Transcription of MS Z, textual commentary including comparisons with MSS S and N, and linguistic discussion of MS Z.)

Novaković, S. "Otkrivene Varuhovo," in Starine 18 (1886) 203-9. (Transcription of MS N.)

Sokolov, M. I. "Apokričeskoe otkrovenie Varuka," Drevnosti, Trudi slavyanskoi kommissii imp. Moskovskago archeologičeskago obščestva 4 (1907) 201-58. (Transcriptions of MSS S, P, and B are included in this study, the only extensive comparison of Gk. and Slavonic traditions.)

Tichonravov, N. "Otkrovenie Varuka," in Sbornik otd. russk. jaz. i slov. 58 (1894) 48-54. (Transcription of MS T.)

Turdeanu, E. "L'Apocalypse de Baruch en slave," Revue des études slaves 48 (1969) 23-48.

STUDIES

Bonwetsch, N. "Das slavisch erhaltene Baruchbuch," Nachrichten von der Königlichen Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen: philologische-historische Klasse (1896) 91-101. (Translation and discussion of Slavonic MS N.)

Ginsberg, L. "Greek Apocalypse of Baruch," JE, vol. 2, pp. 549-51. (Argues for a Jewish origin. This article is still quite valuable.)

Hage, W. Die griechische Baruch-Apokalypse. JSHRZ 5.1; Gütersloh, 1974; pp. 15-44. (Translation of Slavonic MS S.)

Hughes, H. M. "The Greek Apocalypse of Baruch," APOT, vol. 2, pp. 527-41.

Picard, J.-C. "Observations sur l'Apocalypse grecque de Baruch," Sem 20 (1970) 77-103.

Riessler, P. Altjüdisches Schrifttum ausserhalb der Bibel. Heidelberg, 1928; repr. Heidelberg, 1966; pp. 40-54, 1269f.

Turdeanu, E. "Apocryphes bogomiles et apocryphes pseudo-bogomiles," Revue de l'histoire des religions 69 (1950) 22-52, 176-218. (For 3Bar, see especially pp. 177-81.)

———. "Les apocryphes slaves et roumains: Leur apport à la connaissance des apocryphes grecs," Studi bizantini e neoellenici 8 (1953) 47-52. (For 3Bar, see especially 50-52.)

²² Cf. W. Leslau, Falasha Anthology (New Haven, 1951) pp. 57-76.

²³ Cf. Hippolytus, Ref 5.24.

²⁴ Cyprian Testimonia 3.29. See M. R. James, LAOT, pp. 77f. [Also see S. E. Robinson's discussion of Baruch in 4Bar in the present collection. —J.H.C.]

²⁵ See A. Vaillant, Le Livre des Secrets d'Hénoch (Paris, 1952). [But regarding Vaillant's methods and conclusions see the contribution herein on 2En by F. Andersen. —J.H.C.]

²⁶ Published by P. Lavrov, in Sbornik otd. russk. jaz. i slov. 67 (1899) 149-51.

²⁷ See Turdeanu, Revue des études slaves 48 (1969) 36-38, 44-48.

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

Slavonic

when the angel Phanuel^c was sent to him on the holy mountain Zion^d beside the river, as he cried over the captivity of Jerusalem. Lord, give thy blessing.^e

- 1 When King Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem and enriched Babylon,^a then I Baruch cried loudly and said,
- 2 "Lord, in what way was King Nebuchadnezzar righteous?^d Why did you not spare your city Jerusalem which is your vineyard of glory?^c Why have you acted so, Lord?"
- 3 And behold, as I was crying to myself, an angel of the Lord appeared and said to me, "Be silent, O man of his pleasure!^e Jerusalem had to suffer this. But thus speaks the Lord Almighty to you,
- 4 and he sent me before your face so that I could show you all the mysteries of God.^g
- 5 For both your tears and your voice entered the ears of the Almighty God.
- 6 Only tell me that you will neither add nor omit (anything), and I will show you mysteries which no man has ever seen."
- 7 And I Baruch said to the angel, "As the Lord God lives, if you will show me, I will listen; I will not subtract nor will I add one word.^h If I do omit (anything), then ^{Deut 4:2} may the Lord pass judgment upon me on the Day of Judgment."

a. The Gk. contains two introductions. The first has signs of being a medieval creation. On "narration" cf. e.g. ApMos, introduction; TAB (both versions), introduction.

b. This term differs from that in the body of this work, mystery, cf. 1:4(S); 1:6; 1:8(G); 2:6; 5:3(S).

c. The name of Baruch's angelic guide is mentioned also at 2:5. This is one of the four archangels in the Parables of Enoch. See Introduction, "Theological Importance."

d. This is also the place of revelation to Baruch in 2Bar 13:1f.

e. The invocation in an introduction is a common patristic device, e.g. ActsThom, introduction; ActsJn, introduction; ApZos (= HistRech), introduction; ApSed, introduction. Cf. Lampe, eulogēō ad loc.

f. M. R. James emends the Gk. gel to read Kedrôn, lacking in the Slavonic. The geographical reference would be to the eastern side of the Temple mount, facing the Kidron brook. Cf. 2Bar 5:5; 21:1; 31:1.

g. The second introduction of the Gk. seems influenced by 4Bar 3:14. The background of these stories of Abimelek is in Jer 38:7–13 and 39:15–18.

h. Possibly the gates of Nicanor, cf. Josephus, War 5.201–6; m.Middot 1:4; t.Yoma 2:4; and A. Schalit, König Herodes (Berlin, 1969) p. 389, n. 834. These gates may be referred to in Acts 3:10. Baruch also laments before the Temple gates in 2Bar 10:5.

i. This is the place of revelations in 2Bar 34:1;

APOCALYPSE OF BARUCH

Greek

1. Narration^a and Apocalypse of Baruch concerning the secret things^b he saw by the command of God. Lord, give thy blessing.^c
2. Apocalypse of Baruch who is by the Kidron River^d weeping over the captivity of Jerusalem while Abimelek was safeguarded in the estate of Agrippa by the hand of God,^e and who was seated by the beautiful gates^h where the Holy of Holiesⁱ stood.

- 1 Woe, now I Baruch (was) weeping in my mind^b and considering the people and how King Nebuchadnezzar was permitted by God to plunder his city, saying,
- 2 "Lord, why have you set fire to your vineyard and laid it waste?^c Why have you done this? And why, Lord, did you not requite us with another punishment, but rather handed us over to such heathen so that they reproach us saying, 'Where is their God?' "
- 3 And behold, while I was weeping and saying such things, I saw an angel of the Lord coming and saying to me, "Know, O man, greatly beloved man,^e and do not concern yourself so much over the salvation of Jerusalem.^f For thus says the Lord God Almighty,
- 4 and he sent me before you in order that I should proclaim and disclose to you all things of God.^g
- 5 For your prayer has been heard before him and has entered the ears of the Lord God."
- 6 And when he told me these things, I became calm, and the angel said to me, "Cease irritating God, and I will disclose to you other mysteries greater than these."ⁱ
- 7 And I Baruch said, "As the Lord lives, if you disclose a word to me and I hear it from you, I shall speak no further. May God add to me punishment on the Day of Judgment if I speak in the future."
- 8 And the angel of hosts^k said to me, "Come and I shall disclose to you the mysteries of God."

Isa 5;
Ezek 15;
Ps 80:8–16
Pss 42:3, 10;
79:10; 115:2;
Joel 2:17;
Micah 7:10

35:1. The Gk. contains three conflicting geographical references. The Holy of Holies was set apart by a curtain, not gates. Between it and the end of the Temple mount stood the gates of Nicanor. The Slavonic has a plausible geographic reference.

1 a. The opening of 4Ezra 3:2 voices the same contrast. Cf. also 2Bar 11:1f.

b. Cf. also 2Bar 6:2; 10:5; 35:1.

c. This theme is also prominent in 2Bar 3:5; 5:1; 4Ezra 3:27–36; 5:28–30.

d. Cf. 4Ezra 3:28.

e. Dan 10:11 Ø. There also an angel is sent to announce God's hearing of a prayer.

f. In the Slavonic this seems to be misplaced from here to 2:3.

g. The Slavonic may conflate Gk. vss. 4 and 8b here. The mysteries are mentioned at 1:4(S), 6, 8(G); 2:6; 5:3(S); 17:1(S).

h. The requirement of precise transmission of revelations is also mentioned in Deut 4:2; 13:1 and Rev 22:18.

i. None has been mentioned except perhaps the salvation of Jerusalem. Cf. also 4Ezra 5:13 and ApPaul (Lat.) 40 [end].

j. Lacking in S. Cf. vs. 4.

k. Cf. 2:1(S). This class of the angelic guide is also mentioned in 2:6(G); 10:1(S); elsewhere cf. 1En 20:1(G*); 61:10; TAB (A) 9, 14; 2Thes 1:7; Josh 5:14 LXX.

- 1 2 And the angel of hosts took me and carried me where the firmament of heaven^a is.
- 2 And it was the first heaven,^d and in that heaven he showed me very large doors.^e And the angel said to me, "Let us pass through these doors." And we passed through like the passing of 30 days. He showed me salvation.^g
- 3 And I saw a plain;^h there were menⁱ living there whose faces were those of cattle, with the horns of deer, the feet of goats, and the loins of rams.
- 4 And I Baruch asked the angel, "Tell me what is the thickness of the heaven which we have crossed, and what is the plain, so that I can tell the sons of men."
- 5 Phanael^k said to me, "The gates which you saw are as large as (the distance) from east to west; the thickness of heaven is equal to the distance from earth to heaven, the plain where we are standing is equal to its width (i.e. heaven's)."
- 6 He said to me, "Go and I will show you the mysteries."
- 7 I said to the angel, "Lord, who are these strangely shaped creatures?" And the angel said to me, "These are those who built the tower of the war against God.^l The Lord threw them out."
- 1 3 And the angel took me and led me to the second heaven and showed me large open^a doors, and the angel said to me, "Let us pass through them."
- 2 And we passed through, flying like the passing of 7 days.^b
- 3 And he showed me a great prison,^c and there were strangely shaped creatures living in it, with the faces of dogs, the horns of deer, and the feet of goats.^d
- 4 And I asked the angel of the Lord, "Who are these?"
- 5 And he said to me, "These are the ones who had planned^e to build the tower, for at that time they forced men and a multitude of women to make bricks.^f Among them was one woman who was near to giving birth, and they did not release her, but, working, she gave birth, and took her cloak and wrapped the infant, and left her infant, and made bricks again.
- 6 And the Lord God appeared to them and confused their languages.^g And they built their tower 80 thousand cubits in height, and in width 5 hundred and twenty.
- 7 They took an auger so that they could proceed to bore heaven so that they could see whether heaven is (made) of stone or of glass or of copper.
- 8 And God saw them and did not heed them, but he chastened them invisibly."^h

2 a. The heavens rest upon the firmament, cf. 1En 18:5; 33:2. This is the Rāqia' in the creation story, Gen 1:6-8, which separates the upper and lower waters.

b. Identified as the ocean in ApPaul 21 and TAB (B) 8, or possibly the Upper Waters (Gen 1:6-8), which are discussed in GenR 4:3 and b.Hag 15a and elsewhere. In the ApZos 2 the Eumeles River is mentioned at this juncture. This work is very similar to 3Bar here and possibly dependent on it. In the heavenly journey of TLevi 2:7 a "hanging sea" is mentioned under the first heaven. Further a river of fire and the ocean appear also in 1En 17:5.

c. Gk. pnoē can also mean "living creature" as in 8:7 and e.g. LXX Ps 40:6; 24:12. Cf. ApZos 2, where the cloud over the waters says, "Through me passes no bird, nor breath of wind . . ." [See the contribution herein on ApZos = HistRech. —J.H.C.]

d. See Introduction on the arrangement of the heavens. This formulation is repeated in 3:1f.; 4:2. The entrances to other heavens are at 10:1(G) and 11:1f.

e. Cf. Ps 78:23 and also below 3:1; 11:1.

f. Lacking in the Slavonic, "Flying" is mentioned at 3:2. The winds carry Enoch to heaven in 1En 14:8. Cf. also ApZos 2.

g. Probably a misplaced fragment in Slavonic from 1:3.

h. Plains are mentioned in chs. 2, 3 (second heaven), 4 (third heaven), and 10 (fourth heaven).

i. Cf. 3:3. Cf. the rabbinic division into three groups, mentioned in the Introduction.

- 1 2 And taking me, he led me to where the heaven was set fast^a and where there was a river^b which no one is able to cross, not even one of the foreign winds^c which God created.
- 2 And taking me, he led me up to the first heaven^d and showed me a very large door.^e And he said to me, "Let us enter through it." And we entered as on wings^f about the distance of 30 days' journey.
- 3 And he showed me a plain^h within the heaven. And there were menⁱ dwelling on it with faces of cattle and horns of deer and feet of goats and loins of sheep.
- 4 And I Baruch asked the angel, "Tell me, I pray you,^j what is the thickness of this heaven in which we have journeyed, and what is its width, and what is this plain, that I may report these to the sons of men."
- 5 And the angel, whose name was Phamael,^k said to me, "This door which you see is (the door) of heaven, and (its thickness) is as great as the distance from earth to heaven, and the width of the plain which you saw is the same (distance) again."
- 6 And again the angel of hosts said to me, "Come and I will show you greater mysteries."
- 7 And I said, "I pray you, show me what those men are." And he said to me, "These are the ones who built the tower of the war against God,^l and the Lord removed them."
- 1 3 And taking me, the angel of the Lord led me to a second heaven. And he showed me there a door similar to the first. And he said, "Let us enter through it."
- 2 And we entered, flying about the distance of 60 days' journey.
- 3 And he showed me there also a plain, and it was full of men, and their appearance was like (that) of dogs, and their feet (like those) of deer.
- 4 And I asked the angel, "I pray you, lord, tell me who these are."
- 5 And he said, "These are the ones who plotted^e to build the tower. These whom you see forced many men and women to make bricks.^f Among them one woman was making bricks in the time of her delivery; they did not permit her to be released, but while making bricks she gave birth. And she carried her child in her cloak and continued making bricks.
- 6 And appearing to them, the Lord changed their languages;^g by that time they had built the tower 463 cubits (high).
- 7 And taking an auger, they attempted to pierce the heaven, saying, 'Let us see whether the heaven is (made) of clay or copper or iron.'
- 8 Seeing these things, God did not permit them (to continue), but struck them with blindness^h and with confusion of tongues, and he made them be as you see."

j. Oft-used phrase in Gk., lacking in Slavonic. Cf. also 2:7; 3:4; 4:8; 4:14.

k. Mentioned in the Introduction (S). Phamael is probably a corruption, the Slavonic MSS vary between Phanael and Phanuel.

l. Gen 11:1-9. Cf. Introduction.

3 a. Perhaps an addition under the influence of 11:1.

b. Probably confusion of letters that were used as numbers.

c. The Slavonic reading here is based upon a Gk. uncial error, PEDION/KELLION. This would indicate that the Gk. Vorlage of the Slavonic and the present Gk. MS family diverged during the period when uncials were still being written.

d. Contamination from 2:3.

e. This second group planned the tower and forced others to build it. This also is an expansion of Gen 11. Cf. also b.Sanh 109a and parallels and Introduction above.

f. A similar story about the Egyptian enslavement is told in PRE 48 and TarJon to Ex 24:10.

g. Cf. Gen 11:7f.

h. This seems to be the ninth plague against the Egyptians (Ex 10:21-23), which is reinterpreted as blindness. The men of Sodom received this punishment (Gen 19:11), and WisSol 19:17 makes this interpretation explicit.

i. Slavonic has misunderstood the point here. The confusion of tongues is mentioned twice in the Gk. (vss. 6, 8), but only once in Slavonic.

4 And I Baruch said, "The Lord has shown me great (things)."

2 And the angel said, "Come and let us pass through these doors; you will see the glory of God."^b And I passed through with the angel like the passing of 187 days.
3 And he showed me a plain, and there was a serpent on a stone mountain.^d And it drinks one cubit of water from the sea every day, and it eats earth like grass.^e
4 And I Baruch said to the angel, "Lord, does he drink one cubit from the sea?"
5 The angel said to me, "Listen, Baruch, the Lord God made 353 rivers,ⁱ and the first river is the Alpheia, the second Aboura, the third Agirenik, the fourth Dounab, the fifth Ephrat, the sixth Zephon, the seventh Matepus, the eighth Arenous, the ninth Pelkuri. And there are 354 others flowing into the sea, and thus it is washed,^j and it does not diminish^k because his heart is enflamed."
6 And I Baruch said to the angel, "Show me the tree^l which deceived Adam."^m

7 And the angel said to me, "When God made the garden and commanded Michael to gather two hundred thousand and three angels so that they could plant the garden, Michaelⁿ planted the olive and Gabriel, the apple; Uriel, the nut; Raphael, the melon; and Satanael,^o the vine. For at first his name in former times was Satanael, and similarly all the angels planted the various trees."

8 And again I Baruch said to the angel, "Lord, show me the tree through which the serpent^p deceived Eve and Adam." And the angel said to me, "Listen, Baruch. In the first place, the tree was the vine,^q but secondly, the tree (is) sinful desire which Satanael spread over Eve and Adam, and because of this God has cursed the vine because Satanael had planted it, and by that he deceived the protoplast Adam and Eve."

9 And I Baruch said to the angel, "Lord, if God has cursed the vine and its seed, then how can it be of use now?"

10 And the angel said to me, "Rightly you ask me. When God made the Flood upon the earth, he drowned every firstling, and he destroyed 104 thousand giants,^u and the water rose above the highest mountains 20 cubits above the mountains, and the water entered into the garden, bringing out one shoot from the vine as God withdrew the waters.^v

11 And there was dry land, and Noah went out from the ark

12 and found the vine lying on the ground, and did not recognize it having only heard about it and its form.

13 He thought to himself, saying, 'This is truly the vine which Satanael planted in the middle of the garden, by which he deceived Eve and Adam; because of this God cursed it and its seed. So if I plant it, then will God not be angry with me?'

4 a. Cf. Slavonic. The Gk. may be a Christian addition reflecting Rev 15:1, 3. Cf. n. on 5:3.

b. Omission due to homoeoteleuton; text preserved in the Slavonic.

c. James has suggested that this figure as presented in the Gk. version is related to the huge dragon that is the outer darkness of Pistis Sophia ch. 126. The Slavonic presents the serpent of Gen 3 being punished for its part in the fall of Adam.

d. Text corrupt. James et al. emend the text to read "two hundred plethra in length."

e. One of the punishments of the serpent in Gen 3:14; cf. also Isa 65:25. James suggests the background of LXX Ex 15:7.

f. Vss. 3-6 in the Gk. are perhaps later additions concerning Hades and punishments, absent from the Slavonic. Here the serpent is distinct from Hades, but in 5:3(G) Hades is identified as the belly of the serpent.

g. Or "in which also." This may be the rough seam of an interpolation. Cf. Slavonic "like a stone mountain and it drinks . . ."

h. In time or importance.

i. An acrostic may lie behind the list of rivers, cf. H. Jacobson, "A Note on the Greek Apocalypse of Baruch," JSJ 7 (1976) 201-3.

j. Cleansed?

k. The sense requires "does not increase."

l. Here the tree deceives Adam, but in vs. 8 it is the serpent and Satanael (or Samael) who deceive.

m. The following section in Slavonic may have fallen out of the Gk. by homoeoteleuton, or may be an addition. The story is not preserved elsewhere

4 And I Baruch said, "Behold, lord, you have shown me great and wondrous things. Now show me all, for the Lord's sake."

2 And the angel said to me, "Come, let us go through"^b . . . with the angel from that place, a journey of about 185 days.

3 And he showed me a plain and a serpent^c who appeared to be stone.^d And he showed me Hades,^f and its appearance was gloomy and unclean.

4 And I said, "What is this dragon and this monster around it?"

5 And the angel said, "This dragon is the one which eats the bodies of those who pass through their lives badly, and he is nourished by them."

6 And this is Hades which is like him, in that^g also he drinks about one cubit from the sea, and nothing is diminished from it (i.e. the sea)."

7 Baruch said, "And how is that?" And the angel said, "Listen, the Lord God made 360 rivers, the primary^h ones of them being the Alphias, the Aburos, and the Gerikos, and because of these the sea is not diminished."

8 And I said, "I pray you, show me which is the treeⁱ which caused Adam to stray." And the angel said, "It is the vine^q which the angel Samael^f planted by which the Lord God became angered, and he cursed him and his planting. For this reason he did not permit Adam to touch it.^g And because of this the devil became envious,ⁱ and tricked him by means of his vine."

9 And I Baruch said, "And since the vine became the cause of such evil and was cursed by God and (was) the destruction of the first formed, how is it now of such great use?"

10 And the angel said, "Rightly you ask; when God caused the Flood over the earth and destroyed all flesh and 409,000 giants,^u and the water rose over the heights 15 cubits, the water entered Paradise and killed every flower, but it removed the sprig of the vine completely and brought it outside.^v

11 And when the earth appeared from the water and Noah left the ark, he started to plant (some) of the discovered plants.

12 He also found the sprig, and taking it, he considered in his mind what it was. And I came and told him about it.

13 And he said, 'Should I plant it, or what (should I do with it)? Since Adam was destroyed by means of it,^w will I also encounter the anger of God through this?' And while saying these things, he prayed for God to reveal to him what he should do with this.

except in a Slavonic fable based on this story (see Introduction).

n. The order of the angels here follows MS family A. The list in family B is: Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Phanuel (corrupt in all MSS). The first four angels of A correspond with the list in ApMos 40:1 and in 1En 9:1(Gk.), as well as rabbinic lists. The list in family B is paralleled by the Parables of Enoch: 1En 40:9; 54:6; 71:8, 9, 13.

o. He lost his title, -EL, when he was exiled. Cf. Isa 14:12.

p. Is this the same serpent as in ch. 4?

q. This tree is identified as the vine by 2nd-cent. sages as well: R. Meir (b.Sanh 70a) and R. Judah b. Ilai (GenR 15:7). It is also mentioned in ApAb 23:5 and the Palea Historica (ed. Vassiliev, p. 190).

r. The Gk. MSS read Samuel, as in the Palea Historica (ed. Vassiliev, p. 258), but this is most probably a mistake for Samael, cf. 9:7. Samael is probably the original name. He is the chief of the evil angels in rabbinic literature, and appears in Ascens 7:9; 11:41(Eth.); and TarJon on Gen 3:6. In the Acts of Andrew and Matthew 24 both names are attested in MSS.

s. Omitted in Slavonic. In the biblical account God commands Adam not to eat from it (Gen 2:17), but Eve tells the serpent that they may not even touch it (Gen 3:3).

t. WisSol 2:24; Vita 12:1.

u. The offspring in Gen 6:1-4.

v. TarJon on Gen 9:20.

w. Connection established between Adam and Noah.

- 14 And he knelt down on (his) knees and fasted 40 days. Praying and crying, he said, 'Lord, if I plant this, what will happen?'
- 15 And the Lord sent the angel Sarasaël; he declared to him, 'Rise, Noah, and plant the vine, and alter its name, and change it for the better.'

- 16 "But beware, Baruch: The tree still possesses its evil.

- 17 Those who drink wine in excess do all evil: Brother does not show mercy to brother, nor father to son, nor son to father. And from the evil of wine comes forth murder and adultery, fornication and cursing, as much evil as exists, because of wine."

Micah 7:6
Mk 13:12
Mt 10:21

- 1 5 I Baruch said to the angel, "Let me ask you, lord, about one thing still which you said to me:
- 2 that the serpent drinks one cubit of water from the sea a day: How great then is its stomach that it drinks so much?"
- 3 And the angel said to me, "As great as is its stomach, so great is Hades."^b And he said to me, "If you wish, come and I will show you mysteries greater than these."

- 1 6 And the angel took me where the sun goes forth.^a
- 2 And he showed me a chariot-of-four, and the horses were flaming, for the horses were winged angels. And upon this chariot sat a man wearing a fiery crown.^b And the chariot was drawn by forty angels,^c and (there was) also a bird^d flying, large as a mountain.
- 3 I said to the angel, "Lord, what is this bird?" And he said to me, "This is the guardian of the world."^f
- 4 And I said, "For what purpose is it the guardian of the world? Show me!"
- 5 And the angel said to me, "This bird which goes before the sun stretches out its wings and hides the burning rays of the sun.
- 6 For if he did not hide the rays of the sun, the human race and every creature on earth would not survive because of the flames of the sun. Thus God has commanded this bird to serve the world.
- 7 But look on the right wing, at what is written." And he commanded the bird to spread his wings, and I saw letters, greater than a threshing floor on earth of 4000. Those letters were pure gold.
- 8 And he said to me, "Read them aloud!" And they said thus: "The earth has not borne me, nor has the heaven, but wings of fire bear me. And the birds wait for me."

x. Such pairs occur also in Isa 5:20. Cf. also 4Bar 9:18.

y. The Gk. version is the result of considerable reworking.

z. This emendation by James is quite probable. However, the vs. conflicts with vs. 9. Several scholars have viewed this vs. as a Christian interpolation.

5 a. Cf. ApPaul 32.

b. The Slavonic compares the serpent's stomach with Hades, rather than identifying them. Cf. 4:3(G) which seems to conflict with this vs.

c. Mysteries have been consistently promised. The Gk. may be a Christian revision; cf. Jn 5:20.

6 a. The sun and moon appear to be in the third heaven, cf. 7:2; 10:1.

b. This hellenistic conception of a crowned sun, riding in a chariot, was incorporated into Jewish art as well. Such a representation is found in the 4th-cent.-A.D. mosaic on a synagogue floor at Hammat Tiberias. The 6th-cent.-A.D. synagogue floor at Beth Alpha contains a depiction of Helios in a

- 14 And in 40 days he completed his prayer and entreating much and crying, he said, 'Lord, I implore you to reveal to me what I should do with this plant.'
- 15 And God sent the angel Sarasaël, and he said to him, 'Rise, Noah, plant the sprig, for the Lord says this: "Its bitterness will be changed into sweetness, and its curse will become a blessing,"^x and its fruit will become the blood of God, and just as the race of men have been condemned through it, so through Jesus Christ Emmanuel in it (they) will receive a calling and entrance into Paradise."^y
- 16 Then know, Baruch, that just as Adam through this tree was condemned and was stripped of the glory of God, thus men now who insatiably drink the wine deriving from it transgress worse than Adam, and become distant from the glory of God, and will secure for themselves eternal fire.
- 17 For (no)^z good derives from it. For those who drink excessively do these things: Brother does not have mercy on brother, nor father on son, nor children on parents, but by means of the Fall through wine come forth all (these): murder, adultery, fornication, perjury, theft, and similar things. And nothing good is accomplished through it."

Micah 7:6
Mk 13:12
Mt 10:21

- 1 5 And I Baruch said to the angel, "May I ask you one question, lord?
- 2 Since you told me that the serpent drinks one cubit from the sea, tell me how large its belly is."
- 3 And the angel said, "Its belly is Hades. As far as 300 men can throw a weight,^a so great is his belly.^b Come now and I will show you works^c greater than these."
- 1 6 And taking me, he led me where the sun goes forth.^a
- 2 And he showed me a chariot drawn by four horses and fire underneath it. And upon the chariot sat a man wearing a fiery crown.^b The chariot was drawn by forty angels.^c And behold, a bird^d runs along before the sun, as large as nine mountains.^e
- 3 And I said to the angel, "What is this bird?" And he said to me, "This is the guardian of the world."^f
- 4 And I said, "Lord, how is it the guardian of the world? Teach me."
- 5 And the angel said to me, "This bird accompanies the sun and spreading its wings absorbs its fire-shaped rays.
- 6 For if it did not absorb them, none of the race of men would survive, nor anything else that lives, so God appointed this bird."
- 7 And he unfolded his wings, and I saw on his right wing very large letters like the place of a threshing floor, having the space of 4000 modia,^g and the letters were gold.
- 8 And the angel said to me, "Read them." And I read, and they said thus: "Neither earth nor heaven bear me, but the wings of fire bear me."

chariot, pulled by four horses.

c. In 1En 72:4f. this chariot is driven by the winds, but in 2En 11 it seems to be drawn by angels. Cf. also PRE 6.

d. Phoenixes and chalkydii accompany the sun in 2En 12 (A) and seven more phoenixes are in the sixth heaven. On the phoenix in antiquity, see R. Van den Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix (Leiden, 1972).

e. This is James's conjecture on the corrupt text, partially confirmed by the Slavonic. Another suggestion is to emend in the light of 2En 12 (A): "about nine hundred measures" or with Discourse of the Paniogate, "about nine cubits" (Hughes, APOT, vol. 2, p. 536). The most interesting suggestion is by Moulton in Hughes to read hōs oreuōn, "as a guardian," cf. vs. 3. Cf. also V. d. Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix, p. 252.

f. This title and function of the phoenix is not attested elsewhere.

g. About 24,000 feet.

- 9 I Baruch said, "Lord, what is the name of this bird?"
 10 And he said to me, "Phoenix."
 11 I Baruch said, "What does he eat?" And the angel said, "Heavenly manna."^h
 12 And I said, "Does he produce excrement?" He said to me, "He produces it."ⁱ
 And again he said to me, "You will observe the glory of God^m; see what this bird is going to become." He went past in front of the sun.
 13 And while we were singing, there was a noise, great as 30 cows, and the place where we stood shook. And I Baruch said, "What is this noise, my lord?" And he said to me, "The angels are opening the 65 gates of heaven, and light is being separated from darkness."^p
 14 And the sun entered (the chariot)^q and a voice came, "O Sun, giver of light, give splendor to the world."^r The bird spread his wings and covered the rays of the sun and it flapped its wings and there was a noise like thunder and the bird cried out, saying, "O giver of light, give splendor to the world."
 15 As I heard the voice of the bird, I said, "What is that sound?"
 16 And he said, "This is the cocks on earth beginning to waken in the world. At the first call they call out, knowing that the sun is rising. And the cocks cry out."^t

- 7 I Baruch said, "Does the sun rest much?" And the angel said to me, "From when the cocks crow until the light comes."
 2 And the angel said to me, "Listen, Baruch, what I have shown you is in the first and second heavens, but this place in heaven (is where) the sun goes and it is where he gives light to the world." And he said to me, "Be patient and you will see the glory of God."^a

- 8 And the sun came with the crown and 36 angels and also the bird, exhausted.

- 3 And I said, "Lord, where are they carrying the crown of the sun, and why is the bird exhausted?"
 4 And the angel said to me, "The crown of the sun which he wears during the day, 4 angels take and carry to heaven. They cleanse the rays of the sun from the earth."

h. On the food of the phoenix, cf. V. d. Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix, pp. 335–56. The dew of heaven is mentioned in 10:9.

i. Family B² of the Slavonic contains the following here: "Its excrement becomes black cumin, and with this kings are anointed, and without cumin he is not king, not having (it) in a vessel when the king is enthroned." For fuller details, see H. E. Gaylord, The Slavonic Version of 3 Baruch (forthcoming).

j. See V. d. Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix, pp. 187, 214–16.

k. This is an element of the phoenix's nest in the classical tradition. Cf. V. d. Broek, The Myth of the Phoenix, pp. 164–70.

l. Is this for coronation or embalming?

m. Cf. 7:2; 11:2; 16:4(S).

n. Lit. "thunder like the sound of thunder."

o. This must relate to the solar calendar. The solar year contains 364 days according to 1En 72:32. However, in 1En 72–82 and 2En 13f. there are only six gates in the east and six in the west. The 300 has dropped out of S.

- 9 And I said, "Lord, what is this bird, and what is its name?"
 10 And the angel told me, "His name is Phoenix."
 11 "And what does he eat?" And he told me, "The manna of heaven and the dew of earth."^h
 12 And I said, "Does the bird excrete?" And he said to me, "He excretes a worm, and from the excretion, this worm,^j cinnamon^k comes into existence, which kings and princes use.^l But wait and you will see the glory of God."^m
 13 And while he was speaking, there was a thunderclapⁿ and the place where we stood was shaken. And I asked the angel, "My lord, what is this sound?" And the angel said to me, "The angels are opening the 365 gates^o of heaven now, and light is separating itself from darkness."^p
 14 And a voice came saying, "Light giver, give splendor to the world!"^r
 15 And hearing the sound of the bird, I said, "Lord, what is this sound?"
 16 And he said, "This is what wakens the cocks on earth, for just as articulate beings do,^s thus also the cock informs those on the earth according to its own tongue. For the sun is being prepared by the angels and the cock is crowing."^t

- 7 And I said, "And where does the sun begin to work after the cock crows?"
 2 And the angel said to me, "Listen, Baruch, everything I have shown you is in the first and second heaven; and in the third heaven the sun passes through and gives splendor to the world. But wait and you will see the glory of God."
 3 And while I was speaking to him, I saw the bird, and he appeared ahead and grew little by little, and became full sized.
 4 And after him (I saw) the sun gleaming and with him angels carrying (him) and a crown on his head; we were not able to look directly into this sight and see.
 5 And at the same time as the sun shone out, the phoenix spread out its wings. Seeing such glory, I became overcome with a great fear and fled and hid in the wings of the angel.
 6 And the angel said to me, "Do not fear, Baruch, but wait and you will see them setting."^b
 8 And taking me, he led me to the west. And when the time of the setting (of the sun) came, I saw again the bird coming in front and the sun coming with the angels. When he came, I saw the angels, and they removed the crown from his head.
 2 And the bird was overcome and let his wings droop.
 3 And when I saw these things, I said, "Why do they remove the crown from his head and why is the bird so overcome?"
 4 And the angel said to me, "When the day is completed, 4 angels take the crown of the sun and carry it to heaven and renew it because it and its rays are defiled upon earth. And every day it is renewed."^a

p. According to the Syr. TAdam (ed. Kmosko, Pat. Syriaca, 1.2, p. 1337) in the eleventh hour of the night. [See the contribution herein on TAdam. —J.H.C.]

q. The translation "entered (the chariot)" is a rare meaning for this word. It often means "set, go down"; but this meaning does not fit here.

r. 2En 15:2(A).

s. This is the conjectural translation of James; Ryssel, APAT, proposes "just as men do through the mouth."

t. Family B of the Slavonic for vss. 15f. read "And I said to the angel, 'What is this bird singing?' The angel said to me, 'He excites your cocks on earth, and the cocks sing when the sun rises.'"

7 a. S refers to the setting of the sun here and probably should be placed with 8:1f.(G).

b. See parallel in S 8:5.

8 a. 2En 14:2.

b. In S family B preserves vs. 6 as follows: "It

- 5 And the angel said to me, "The sun sees all the lawlessness in the world; he does not countenance lewdness, adultery, jealousy, rivalry, theft, murder, all of which are not acceptable to God. And also the bird is exhausted, just as one of the earthly birds; it takes up the fiery rays of the sun and is exhausted by them."

And then the angels brought the crown of the sun. And I saw such glory, I was frightened, I fled into the wings of the angel. And the angel said, "Do not fear, Baruch, the Lord is with you, but be comforted."

- 2 9 And I said to the angel of the Lord, "Teach me what the moon is."
- 3 And he said to me, "It is like a woman, sitting on a chariot, and twenty angels are leading the chariot by means of oxen, and the oxen are angels. The form of the moon is like a woman."^b
- 5 And I Baruch said, "Lord, why does it sometimes wax and sometimes wane?"
- 6 And he said to me, "Listen, Baruch, it was beautiful.
- 7 But when the first-created Adam sinned, having listened to Satanael, when he covered himself with the serpent, it (i.e. the moon) did not hide but shone forth, and God was angered by it. He lay bare its days to affliction."
- 1,2 10 And the angel of power took me to a very wide mountain, and in the middle of the mountain was a large lake of water.^b
- 3 And there were birds from all heaven. But the very large ones were not like these (ones), they were similar to a crane. And there were other birds larger than those.
- 4 And I asked the angel, "Lord, what is this lake in the midst of the mountain and what are these birds?"
- 5 And he said to me, "The birds are ready day and night, praising God ceaselessly."^c
- 6 And the clouds take the water from here and rain upon the earth, and plants sprout."

is overcome because of the burning heat and warmth of the sun."

c. Cf. 6:6; TLevi 3:1; ApPaul 4.

9 a. Ryssel, APAT, emends to read "the chariot of the moon."

b. This representation of the moon is hellenistic and has no parallel in Jewish literature of the period. In the Book of the Luminaries, 1En 72-82, the sun rides in a chariot and by implication so does the moon. 2En 16:7 explicitly states that the moon rides in a chariot pulled by angels.

c. The term "the first Adam" is very common in rabbinic literature and need not imply the Pauline second Adam.

- 5 And I Baruch said, "Lord, by what are its rays defiled upon earth?" And the angel said to me, "By the sight of the lawlessness and unrighteousness of men committing fornication, adultery, theft, robbery, idol-worship, drunkenness, murder, discord, jealousy, slander, murmuring, gossip, divination, and other things which are unacceptable to God. By means of these it is defiled, and because of this it is renewed.
- 6 And now, concerning how the bird becomes overcome: It is overcome because it checks the rays of the sun and the fire and burning the whole day.^b
- 7 For if its wings did not draw around the rays of the sun as earlier said, no living being would survive."^c
- 1 9 And when they had withdrawn, night arrived, and with it the moon^a and the stars.
- 2 And I Baruch said, "Lord, explain this also to me, please. How does it depart and where is it going, and in what pattern does it travel?"
- 3 And the angel said, "Wait and you will see this shortly." And on the morrow I saw this also in the form of a woman, seated in a wheeled chariot. And in front of it were oxen and lambs near the chariot, and also many angels.^b
- 4 And I said, "Lord, what are the oxen and lambs?" And he said to me, "These are angels also."
- 5 And again I asked, "Why does it sometimes grow larger and sometimes grow smaller?"
- 6 "Listen, O Baruch: This which you see was designed by God to be beautiful without peer.
- 7 And during the transgression of the first Adam,^c she gave light to Samael when he took the serpent as a garment, and did not hide, but on the contrary, waxed. And God was angered with her, and diminished her and shortened her days."
- 8 And I said, "And why does she not shine all the time, but only at night?" And the angel said, "Listen: Just as servants are unable to speak freely before kings, so also before the sun, the moon and stars are unable to shine. For the stars are permanently suspended, but they are dispersed by the sun; and the moon, while being safe, is exhausted by the heat of the sun."

- 1 10 And when I had been taught all these things by the archangel, he took me to a third^a heaven.
- 2 And I saw an unbroken plain and in the middle of it was a lake of water.^b
- 3 And in it were many birds of every species but unlike those here. But I saw a crane, like large oxen. And all were great, excelling those on earth.
- 4 And I asked the angel, "What is the plain and what is the lake and what are the multitude of birds around it?"
- 5 And the angel said, "Listen, Baruch: This plain which surrounds the lake, and in which are other mysteries, is the place where the souls of the righteous^d come when they assemble, living together choir by choir.
- 6 And the water is that which the clouds receive to send as rain upon the earth, and (then) fruit grows."

10 a. Lit. "third," but this must be the entrance to the fourth heaven. They entered the third in ch. 4, cf. also 7:2.

b. James and others identify this as the Acherusian lake; cf. ApMos 37:3; SibOr 2:334-38; ApPet 14; ApPaul 22.

c. Cf. TLevi 3:8; 2En 17:1; ApZeph (in Strom

5.11.77) for angelic choirs in the heavens.

d. It is not clear from the text if these are the birds. Various Jewish and Christian traditions portray the righteous souls as birds. On the Jewish traditions concerning the soul represented as a bird, cf. V. Aptowitz, "Die Seele als Vogel," MGWJ 69 (1925) 150-69.

- 8 And I said, "How is it that men say that clouds come to the sea and take water and rain?"
 9 And the angel said to me, "The race of men is ignorant, for all the water of the sea is salty so that if it rained because of the sea, no plant would sprout on earth. But know that they come from that lake and the clouds rain."

- 1 11 And the angel of power took me and led me to the fifth heaven.
 2 And he showed me large gates, and names of men were written (on them),^a and they were closed. And I said, "Lord, will these gates open so that we can enter through them?" And the angel said to me, "It is not possible to enter through them until Michael, the holder of the keys of the kingdom,^b comes." And the angel said to me, "Wait and you will see the glory of God."
 3 And while we were waiting, there was a noise from the highest heaven like triple thunder. And I Baruch said, "Lord, what is this noise?"
 4 And he said to me, "Michael is descending to accept the prayers of men."^d
 5 And then a voice came, saying that the gates should open, and they opened. And there was a great noise, greater than the first.
 6 And Michael came, and the angel who was with me met him and bowed to him.
 7 And I saw him holding a very large receptacle, and its depth was that from heaven to earth, and its width that from east to west.
 8 And I said, "Lord, what is Michael holding?"
 9 And he said to me, "This is where the prayers of men go."^h

- 1 12 And while he was speaking to me, angels came, carrying gifts full of flowers.^a 2 And I said, "Lord, who are these?"
 3 And he said to me, "These are the angels who are in the service of men."^b
 4 And Michael took the gifts from them and put them in the receptacle.
 5 And I saw other angels carrying gifts, and they were dejected and did not dare to draw near because they did not have (sufficient) measure.
 6 And Michael called, saying, "Come also, you angels, bring what you have brought."
 7 And Michael cried greatly over the [un]filled receptacle.^c

11 a. Cf. ApPaul 19.

b. Cf. 4Bar 9:5. Peter as the heavenly major-domo, cf. Mt 16:19.

c. This is the rank of Michael in several works, cf. e.g. Dan 10:13, 21; 2En 22:6; 33:10(A); TAB(A) passim, (B) 14. Cf. Josh 5:14 LXX.

d. These he apparently offers on the altar of the heavenly temple, which is mentioned in TLevi 5:1 and elsewhere. See also b.Hag 12b: "In it (the fourth heaven) is Jerusalem and the temple and an altar constructed and Michael, the great commander, stands and offers sacrifices on it." On the rabbinic sources for this idea, see V. Aptowitzer,

"The Heavenly Temple in the Agada," Tarbiz 2 (1931) 137-53, 257-77. TLevi 3:6 mentions "a reasonable and bloodless offering." On prayer and good deeds as the proper sacrifice at Qumran, cf. CD 11:20f., 1QS 9:4f. Cf. also the words of R. Johanan ben Zakkai in ARN A ch. 4.

e. This function is also ascribed to other angels, e.g. Ramiel in 2Bar 55:3 and Gabriel in Dan 9:23.

f. Contrasted with those portrayed in 4:5(G).

g. Probably the bowl for offerings at the heavenly altar. The LXX uses this term for sprinkling pans used in the Temple worship. The prayers of the saints are offered in such golden bowls in Rev

- 7 And again I said to the angel of the Lord, "What are the birds?" And he said to me, "These are the ones who continuously praise the Lord."^c
 8 And I Baruch said, "Lord, why do men say that the water which rains is from the sea?"
 9 And the angel said, "There is rain from the sea and from water on earth; but that which produces the fruits is from here. Know from now on that what is called the dew of heaven comes from here."

- 1 11 And taking me from this, the angel led me to the fifth heaven.
 2 And the gate was closed. And I said, "Lord, will the gate be opened so that we can enter?" And the angel said to me, "We are not able to enter until Michael the holder of the keys of the kingdom of heaven^b comes. But wait and you will see the glory of God."
 3 And there was a great noise like thunder, and I said, "Lord, what is this noise?"
 4 And he said to me, "The commander-in-chief^c Michael is descending to receive the prayers of men."^d
 5 And behold a voice came: "Let the gate be opened!" And they opened, and there was a shriek as from thunder.
 6 And Michael came, and the angel with me went to meet him and made obeisance to him and said, "Hail, commander-in-chief of all our regiment."
 7 And the commander-in-chief Michael said, "Hail thou also, our brother, interpreter of revelations^e to those who pass through life rightly."^f
 8 And after they greeted each other, they stood still. And I saw the commander-in-chief Michael take hold of a very large bowl,^g its depth being so great as from heaven to earth, and its width so great as from north to south. And I said, "Lord, what is it that Michael the archangel is holding?"
 9 And he said to me, "This is where the virtues of the righteous and the good works which they do are carried,^h which are brought by him before the heavenly God."

- 1 12 And while I was speaking with them, behold angels came carrying baskets filled with flowers,^a and they gave them to Michael.
 2 And I asked the angel, "Lord, who are these and what is it that they are carrying?"
 3 And he said to me, "These are the angels over the principalities."^b
 4 And taking the baskets, the archangel emptied them into his bowl.
 5 And the angel said to me, "These above-mentioned flowers are the virtues of the righteous."
 6 And I saw other angels carrying baskets which were less than full.^c And they came distressed, and did not dare to approach, for they did not achieve the full prizes.^d
 7 And Michael cried out, saying, "Come also, you angels, bring what you have brought."
 8 And Michael was greatly distressed and so was the angel with me, because they had not filled the bowl.

5:8, cf. also Rev 8:3.

h. Slavonic seems influenced by vs. 4.

12 a. James (in his introduction to R. L. Bensley, The Fourth Book of Ezra [Cambridge, 1895] pp. lii-liii) noticed that twelve angels with flowers are mentioned in the Spanish MSS of 4Ezra 1:40, a Christian work.

b. Angels of power and angels of principalities, cf. 1En 61:10. The powers and principalities in lists of heavenly forces are mentioned several times in the NT and in other sources, e.g. TLevi 3:8. Angels of hosts are mentioned in 1:8(G) and 10:1(S). The relation between these different heavenly forces is unclear.

c. Hughes, APOT, emended this to read "neither empty nor full." The text is uncertain but the meaning clear.

d. Ryssel, APAT, first suggested that the Gk. is here dependent on Phil 3:14; 1Cor 9:24.

e. The negative has dropped out of S.

- 1 13 And I saw others coming and crying, and they were trembling with fear, saying, "Woe to us, darkened ones, that we have been handed over to places of demons and of men. And we want to depart from them, if possible."
- 2 And Michael said, "You are not able to depart from them, but tell me what you want."
- 3 And they said to him, "We entreat you, Michael our chief, transfer us from them, for we do not want to remain with the disobedient, unreasonable men."
- 4 Their wives flee to the church, and from thence they bring them out to jealousy and to fornication and envy, and they sin in many other ways, which you, O Glorious One,^b know."
- 5 And Michael answered and said, "Be patient until I ask God what he commands concerning you."

- 1 14 Michael ascended and the gates closed; there was thunder as if there (were) 40 oxen.^a
- 2 And I said to the angel, "What is the noise?" And he said to me, "Now Michael is bringing the prayers^b of men."

- 1 15 And at that time Michael descended and brought the first angels full mercy.^a
- 2 And he said, "Come, angels, and receive mercies; just as you brought prayers to God, so receive. In the measure that men requested, thus give to them."
- 3 And Michael called out again, "Come, you angels who brought lesser gifts. Just as you brought, thus receive, in the measure that men offered prayers. Announce it to them and be not negligent. But (they should) prostrate themselves in prayer in the holy church."^d

- 1 16 Michael again called the other angels who were crying, "Come also, you angels, and take (back) the petitions (and) what the Lord has prophesied about those men. There is no command for you to depart from them."
- 2 But bring them painful diseases and horrors and caterpillars and locusts and storms, thunder and hail and devastation to their cities, and demons to strangle their children, because they do not fear God and they do not come to church and to the place of prayers. Bring them curses, and no success in good, and murder."
- 3 The angels took their commands from Michael; trembling and crying they went.

13 a. This expression is used to refer to monastics and Christian leaders, especially bishops, cf. Lampe, p. 1105b. Note that both versions are Christian.

b. It would appear that Michael is referred to as "Glorious One."

14 a. See 10:3(G).

b. The Slavonic calls the offerings "prayers" consistently, but the Gk. version refers to them as "prayers" and "virtues" and "good works," cf. 11:4, 9; 12:5; 15:2f.

15 a. The Slavonic version may have misread

- 1 13 And then similarly came other angels crying and lamenting and saying with fear, "See how we are, blackened, Lord, for we are handed over to evil men, and we want to be withdrawn from them."
- 2 And Michael said, "So that the enemy will not dominate at the end, you must not withdraw from them. But tell me what you desire."
- 3 And they said, "We beg you, Michael our commander-in-chief, transfer us from them, for we are unable to remain with evil and foolish men. For there is no goodness in them, but only every unrighteousness and greediness."
- 4 Indeed we have seen them enter into no church, nor (go) to the spiritual fathers,^a nor to anything good. But wherever there is murder, they are in the midst of it, and wherever there is fornication, adultery, theft, slander, perjury, envy, drunkenness, strife, jealousy, grumbling, gossip, idol worship, divination, and things similar to these. There are (with these men) works of such nature and worse; therefore we ask to be released from them."
- 5 And Michael said to the angels, "Wait until I learn from the Lord what is to happen."

- 1 14 And at that time Michael departed and the doors closed. And a noise like thunder came.
- 2 And I asked the angel, "What is the noise?" And he said to me, "Now Michael is bringing the virtues^b of men to God."

- 1 15 And at that time Michael came down, and the gate opened, and he brought oil.^a
- 2 And for the angels who had brought the full baskets, he filled (the baskets) with oil, saying, "Take, give a hundredfold reward^b to our friends, and to those who have laboriously done good works.^c For those who have sown well, harvest well."
- 3 And he said to those who had brought half-full baskets, "Come you also, receive the reward according to what you brought, and give it to the sons of men."
- 4 Then he said to those who brought the full (baskets) and those (who brought) the half-full (baskets), "Go, bless our friends and tell them that thus says the Lord: You have been faithful over a little, he will set you over much; enter into the delight of our Lord."^d Mt 25:23

- 1 16 And turning, he said to those who had brought nothing, "Be not sad, and cry not, but do not let the sons of men alone."

- 2 But since they have provoked me to anger by their deeds, go and provoke them to jealousy, and provoke them to anger, and embitter them against those who are no nation, against a people without understanding.

- 3 Moreover, send forth caterpillars and locusts, rust and grasshoppers, hail with lightning and fury. Punish them with the sword and death, and their children with demons. Deut 32:21 (LXX) Rom 10:19 elaion as eleos. Seth seeks the "oil of mercy" from the garden of Eden in ApMos 9:3; 13:1; cf. also 2En 8:1. Enoch is anointed before God with a "good oil" (2En 22:8), or the "oil of God's glory" (2En 56:2). Cf. E. Quinn, The Quest of Seth for the Oil of Life (Chicago, 1962) for other traditions concerning this oil.

b. Cf. Mt 19:29 and Mk 10:30.

c. Cf. nn. to 11:9 and 14:2.

d. The Gk. paraphrases the NT verse. The Slavonic parallel seems to be addressed to only those who brought an insufficient measure, but also appears to be Christian.

4 And the angel said to me, "By the command of the Ruler I say to you, Baruch, stand on the right side and you will see the glory of God.^a And you will see the resting place of the righteous, glory and joy and rejoicing and celebration.^b And you will see the torture of the impious, wailing and groans and lamentations and the eternal worm. Their voice goes up to heaven and implores, 'Have mercy on us, God.' "

5 And I Baruch said to the angel, "Lord, who are these?"

6 And he said to me, "These are the sinners, having despised the command of God."

7 And I said to the angel, "Permit me, Lord, to cry on their behalf."

8 And the angel said to me, "You also may cry for them; perhaps the Lord God will hear your voice and have mercy on them."

1 17 And a voice from heaven came, saying, "Bring Baruch down to the face of all the earth so that he will tell the sons of men that which he has seen and heard, and all the mysteries you have shown him. And glory be to our God forever." AMEN.

16 a. There appear to be three glories of God referred to in this work: that of the sun (6:12; 7:2; 7:5), that of Michael (11:2; 13:4[S]), and that of the righteous in their resting place (16:4). Note that Adam lost the glory of God in the Fall (4:16[G]).

b. This promise is not fulfilled.

4 For they did not listen to my voice, nor observe my commands, nor carry them out, but they despised my commands and my churches, and insulted the priests proclaiming my words to them."

5

6

7

8

1 17 And while he was speaking, the door closed and we withdrew.

2 And taking me, the angel returned me to where I was at the beginning.

3 And when I came to myself, I praised God, who had deemed me worthy of such honors.

4 And you, brethren, who happen upon these revelations, glorify God also so that he will glorify us now and forever to all eternity! AMEN.

APOCALYPSE OF ABRAHAM

(First to Second Century A.D.)

A NEW TRANSLATION AND INTRODUCTION

BY R. RUBINKIEWICZ

The theme of the Apocalypse of Abraham seems to be Israel's election and its covenant with God. The document can be divided into two parts, chapters 1-8 and chapters 9-32. Chapters 1-8 constitute a story of Abraham's youth and his perception of idolatry. Abraham concludes that his father's idols are not gods, because some stone idols are crushed and a wooden idol is accidentally consumed by fire. Abraham consequently beseeches God to reveal himself, whereupon he hears God's voice, which instructs Abraham to leave his father's house.

Abraham is commanded to offer a sacrifice so that God will reveal "great things which you have not seen . . ." (9:6). God sends his angel Iael to lead Abraham up to heaven (15:4), where he sees seven visions: the light and fiery angels (15:5-7), the fire (17:1-3), the throne (18:1-14), the firmaments (19:4-9), the world (21:2-7), the seven sins of the world (24:3-25:2), and the destruction of the Temple (27:1-3). Finally God announces the punishment of the gentiles through ten plagues (chs. 29f.) and the victory of the just (chs. 31f.).

Texts

The Apocalypse of Abraham is known only in an Old Slavonic translation, which has come down to us in several Russian redactions. The combined witness of six manuscripts that contain essentially the full text allows us to discern fairly clearly the original form of the Slavonic text, although many details remain obscure. Four manuscripts provide confirmatory evidence only for the first eight chapters. Other fragments, summaries, and reworkings are obviously derived from the older long form; they will not concern us here.

The apocalypse appears as a completely independent unit only in one manuscript, but basically the same text is found in a second manuscript with a slightly different beginning and a radically truncated ending. A slightly different redaction is reflected in the text that has been incorporated into the Explanatory Palaia (Tolkovaja Paleja), a broad account of Old Testament history interspersed with exegesis, much of it anti-Jewish polemic. These are the manuscripts:

- S- Sil'vestrovskij sbornik, Moscow, Central'nyj Gosudarstvennyj Arkhiv Drevnikh Aktov, Sin. Tip. 53, fols. 164-83. 14th cent. Facsimile published as vol. 99, Obščestvo ljubitelej drevnej pis'mennosti, St. Petersburg, 1891. Published by N. S. Tikhonravov in Pamjatniki otrečenoj russkoj literatury (St. Petersburg, 1863) vol. 1, pp. 32-53.
- D- A miscellany, Lenin Library, Moscow, Tikhonravov 704, fols. 70-79. 16th cent. Unpublished.
- A- The Volokalamsk Paleja Tolkovaja, Moscow, Lenin Library, Mosk. Dukh. Akad. 172/549, fols. 85-101. 15th cent. Printed in N. S. Tikhonravov, Pamjatniki, vol. 1, pp. 54-77.
- B- The Synodal Paleja Tolkovaja, Moscow, Gosudarstvennyj Istoričeskij Muzej, 869 (Sin. 211) fols. 76-90. 16th cent. Unpublished.

13 tercessions of the prophets, nor help of the righteous.^r *There is the proclamation of judgment to corruption,^s regarding the way^t to the fire and the path that leads 14 to the glowing coals.^u *Therefore, there is one Law by One, one world and an end 48:24
15 for all those who exist. *Then^v he will make alive those whom he has found, and^w
he will purge them from sins, and at the same time he will destroy those who are polluted with sins.

1 86 When you, therefore, receive the letter,^a read it carefully in your assemblies.
And think about it, in particular, however,^b on the days of your fasts. And remember me by means of this letter in the same way as I remember you by means of this, and always.^c Bar 1:14
Col 4:16
1Mac 12:11
Rom 1:9

1 87 And^a it happened when I had finished all the words of this letter and had written it carefully until the end, I folded it, sealed it cautiously, and bound it to the neck of the eagle. And I let it go and sent it away.

The end of the letter of Baruch, the son of Neriah.

r. Cf. Ps-Philo 33:5.
s. "To corruption," l; "of corruption," c solus.
t. "Regarding the way," l; "and the way," c solus.
u. "To the glowing coals," l; "to the realm of death," c solus.
v. "Then," l; "And then," 6h14 10g1 12d2 c.
w. "Has found and . . .," l; "has found that . . .," c solus.

86 a. "The letter," l; "this my letter," c solus.
b. "However," l; om., c solus.
c. "And always," l; "and it may fare you well always," c solus.

87 a. This ch. is available in c only.

3 (Greek Apocalypse of) BARUCH

(First to Third Century A.D.)

A NEW TRANSLATION AND INTRODUCTION

BY H. E. GAYLORD, JR.

In this pseudepigraphon, Baruch, the scribe of Jeremiah, weeps over the destruction of Jerusalem and its Temple and the mockery of its heathen destroyers. The Lord sends an angel to comfort him and to guide him through the heavens and show him their mysteries. This angel then leads Baruch through five heavens:

1. The first contains a plain where those being punished for waging war against God are found (ch. 2).

2. The second contains a plain where those who forced others to build a tower to heaven in order to discover its contents are found (ch. 3).

3. The third contains a plain in which are a snake, a sea, and primal rivers, as well as the garden of Eden (perhaps Hades), the sun with the Phoenix, and the moon (chs. 4-9).

4. The fourth contains a plain on which are a pool and exotic birds, and the gathering place of the souls of the righteous (ch. 10).

5. The fifth is where the angels responsible for men on earth bring the gifts of men to Michael, who presents them to God. Baruch does not pass inside the gates of this heaven; they remain closed. In these chapters, three classes of mankind are mentioned: the righteous, the insufficiently righteous, and the sinners. In the Slavonic version, Baruch is granted permission to intercede for the suffering sinners (chs. 11-16).

After his heavenly journey, Baruch is returned to earth to relate what he has seen to his fellow men (ch. 17).

Texts

3 Baruch is found in both Greek and Slavonic. The Slavonic is a translation from a lost Greek original.

GREEK MANUSCRIPTS

1. BM MS Add. 10073. This manuscript is dated from the late fifteenth to the early sixteenth century. It is described by M. R. James.¹

2. Andros, Monastery of the Hagia, MS 46; dated by J.-C. Picard to the beginning of the fifteenth century.

On the relation between these manuscripts, Picard concludes that they "were both copied from the same manuscript, today lost."²

¹ Apocrypha Anecdota II.

² J.-C. Picard, Apocalypsis Baruchi Graeci, p. 69. MS 46 is described in P. Lambros, "Katalogos ton en te kata ten Andron mone tes Hagias Kodikon," Epeteris tou Parnassou 2 (1898) pp. 180-83, and A. Ehrhard, Überlieferung und Bestand der hagiographischen und homiletischen Literatur der Griechischen Kirche (Leipzig, 1939-1952), 1.3, pp. 587, 839. The first sixty-two fols. contain homilies, but it should be noted that all subsequent items of this MS are also contained in BM MS Add. 10073.

A Synopsis of the Books
of Adam and Eve
Second Revised Edition

edited by Gary A. Anderson
Michael E. Stone

ABZ Early Judaism and Its Literature

A SYNOPSIS OF THE BOOKS
OF ADAM AND EVE

Second Revised Edition

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL LITERATURE

EARLY JUDAISM AND ITS LITERATURE

Series Editor
John C. Reeves

Editorial Board

Steven D. Fraade, Yale University
David Frankfurter, University of New Hampshire
Sarah J. Tanzer, McCormick Theological Seminary

Number 17

A SYNOPSIS OF THE BOOKS
OF ADAM AND EVE
Second Revised Edition

edited by Gary A. Anderson
Michael E. Stone

A SYNOPSIS OF THE BOOKS
OF ADAM AND EVE
Second Revised Edition

edited by Gary A. Anderson
Michael E. Stone

Scholars Press
Atlanta, Georgia

A SYNOPSIS OF THE BOOKS OF ADAM AND EVE Second Revised Edition

edited by Gary A. Anderson
Michael E. Stone

Copyright © 1999 by the Society of Biblical Literature

All rights reserved. No part of this work may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying and recording, or by means of any information storage or retrieval system, except as may be expressly permitted by the 1976 Copyright Act or in writing from the publisher. Requests for permission should be addressed in writing to the Rights and Permissions Office, Scholars Press, P.O. Box 15399, Atlanta, GA 30333-0399, USA.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Life of Adam and Eve. Polyglot.

A synopsis of the books of Adam and Eve / edited by Gary A. Anderson, Michael E. Stone. — 2nd rev. ed.

p. cm. — (Early Judaism and its literature ; no. 17)

Text in English, Armenian, Georgian, Greek, Latin, and Slavonic.

Includes bibliographical references (p.) and index.

ISBN 0-7885-0566-1 (cloth : alk. paper)

I. Life of Adam and Eve—Criticism, Textual. I. Anderson, Gary A., 1955– . II. Stone, Michael E., 1938– III. Title.
IV. Series.

BS1830.A25A1 1999

229'.911—dc21

99-28348

CIP

Printed in the United States of America on acid-free paper

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	vii
I. Text Versions	vii
Addendum: Notes On The Translation Of The Georgian Prepared By J.-P. Mahé	xii
II. Principles Of Versification	xvii
Bibliography	xvii
Acknowledgements	xix
Sigla	xx
 Pericope Number and Title
1. Authority over Animals [Slavonic only].....	1
2-6 Penitence of Adam and Eve (Greek Omits)
2. PENITENCE: Expulsion	2
3. PENITENCE: Cheirograph [Slavonic only].....	6
4. PENITENCE: Penitence and Second Temptation	7
5. PENITENCE: Fall of the Satan	15
6. PENITENCE: Separation of Adam and Eve	19
 7. Cain and Abel	26
8. Adam's Vision [Latin only].....	32
9. Illness of Adam.....	33
10. Adam's Story of the Fall	36
11. Command to Retrieve the Oil	39
 12-15 Quest of Eve and Seth for the Oil
12. QUEST: Encounter with Beast	41
13. QUEST: Arrival at Paradise	44
14. QUEST: Michael's Reply.....	45
15. QUEST: Return to Adam.....	46
16. QUEST: Adam's Rebuke of Eve	47

17-27 Eve's Tale (Latin Omits)

17. EVE'S TALE: The Portions of Adam and Eve in Paradise	48
18. EVE'S TALE: Satan's Encounter with the Serpent (Gen 3:1a)	49
19. EVE'S TALE: Serpent's Approach to Paradise (Gen 3:1b-3).....	51
20. EVE'S TALE: Temptation of Eve (Gen 3:4-6a)	54
21. EVE'S TALE: Eve's Oath	56
22. EVE'S TALE: Eve's Sin (Gen 3:7a).....	58
23. EVE'S TALE: Temptation of Adam (Gen 3:6b-7).....	60
24. EVE'S TALE: Entry of God into Paradise (Gen 3:8-13).....	62
25. EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam, Eve, and the Serpent (3:14-19) ..	65
26. EVE'S TALE: Adam's Plea for Mercy (Gen 3:22-24).....	69
27. EVE'S TALE: Expulsion (Gen 3:22-24)	72
28. Death of Adam	74
29. Eve's Confession	76
30. Angelic Liturgy	78
31. Assumption of Adam to Paradise	82
32. Adam and Abel's Funerary Rites	84
33. Two Stelae Legends [Latin only].....	91
34. Eve's Prayer to join Adam	92
35. Eve's Funeral and Epilogue	94

Addenda to the Latin Version

36. History of Stelae	96
37. Octipartite Adam.....	96
38. Place of Adam's Creation	96
39. Adam's Name	96

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES.....	97
----------------------------	----

Introduction

This book is a substantial revision of the synopsis we first published in 1994. In this revised synopsis we have provided fresh English translations of each of the versions and we have provided the original language of each version in a facing column. In spite of this considerable advance, this book must still be considered “a tentative document.” Text-critical problems still remain and the Greek, Latin and Slavonic versions are especially problematic from this perspective.

Here we will not discuss the text-critical problems that attend the individual language traditions. A very detailed and up-to-date discussion of these issues can be found in Stone’s recent publication on the Adam literature (1992). However, some background information is required about the origin of the texts provided in this volume and the conventions of formatting used to present them.

I. Text Versions

The Greek Version

The text used in this edition was produced by Nagel just shortly before his death and printed in the concordance of Denis (1987). The English translation has been provided by Gary Anderson.

Nagel did not produce a critical text for Denis’ concordance. Rather, it appears that he chose manuscript S from Family I as a base text and supplemented it with additional material from an important subgroup of Family I: ATLC. In his dissertation, Nagel was of the opinion that this subgroup was secondary, though its importance stemmed from the fact that it closely resembled the Georgian version (Nagel only spoke of and knew the similarities to the Georgian; the parallels to the Armenian became clear only after the publication of Stone’s edition).

It has not yet been determined finally whether the Armenian and Georgian versions stem from an existing sub-family within the Greek textual tradition or whether, as seems more likely, represent a witness to an independent form of the Greek text that has been lost. The text Nagel bequeathed us leaves this question open for further study.

Introduction

A thorough review of the Greek material in light of the publication of the Georgian and Armenian editions is now being undertaken by J. Tromp (Leiden).

Nagel divided the Greek manuscripts into three families:

I	II	III
1. DSV	RM	1. NI(J)K
2. KPB		2. QZ
3. B		3. HEW XF
4. ATLC

The manuscript group DSV in Family I appears to be the least corrupted. Manuscript D (11th century) is the oldest of these three witnesses, but it lacks chapters 18-35. Perhaps for this reason, Nagel favored S over D and most of his text conforms to this manuscript.

In the present edition we have set all the additions to S from ATLC within square brackets. Longer additions that stretch over several verses, such as those found in chapters 13 and 29, have been put in italics. The long addition found in 29:7 (the so-called “Penitence” narrative) is found in Family II only and is, therefore, in a different category. It is also put in italics.

The Latin Version

The Latin text printed here was supplied by Wilfried Lechner-Schmidt. He is currently finishing a dissertation in Germany on the topic under the direction of K. Berger. The English translation was prepared by Gary Anderson.

The textual condition of the Latin version presents the most text-critical difficulties. For this reason it is important to say something more about it. Meyer (1878) divided the manuscripts which he knew into 4 groups or families, which he numbered from I to IV in Roman numerals. These Roman numerals are also used in this synopsis as abbreviations for the different forms of the text.

Introduction

- I Group I of Meyer
- II Group II of Meyer
- III Group III of Meyer
- IV Group IV of Meyer

The text presented in the Latin column is normally that of Meyer's Group I.

Those parts of the Latin column which do not present the text of Group I are enclosed within square brackets ([]). For example: "Quando expulsi sunt [II,III=Cum expulsi (fuissent? essent?) Adam et Eva]II,III de paradiso. . ." means that Groups II and III read "Cum expulsi ... Adam et Eva" whereas Group I reads "Quando expulsi sunt Adam et Eva." The question marks after "fuissent" and "essent" indicate that some manuscripts read "fuissent" whereas others, "essent." If there are variant readings within Group I, readings other than the text are put in round brackets () and a question mark is put at the end. Consider the example of 29:4, ex ore maiestatis suae dabit omnibus mandata et paecepta (ex ore eius exiet gladius ex utraque parte acutus?). If there is more than one variant, then the different readings are separated by a comma. Compare Et iterum (die tertio?, septimo?) in 29:6.

Occasionally, additional narrative material was woven into the Latin text. Group III includes the Holy Rood legend in chapters 43, 44, and 48. Meyer chose not print this supplementary material in his edition. The present edition of the Vita has marked such material as follows: "[III+legenda de ligno crucis]III" At one point material from the Gospel of Nicodemus is introduced. This is marked by the abbreviation: Nic.

In addition the following symbols are used:

- + additional word / words
- missing word / words
- = other variant / variants

The Armenian Version

The Armenian text that is published here is based on the printed edition of the Armenian published in 1981. That edition was in turn based on three manuscripts, all the copies known so far. These are the following:

- A Jerusalem, Armenian Patriarchate, No. 1458, pp. 380-431, 17th century.

Introduction

- B Jerusalem, Armenian Patriarchate, No. 1370, pp. 127-150, 17th century.
- C Erevan, Matenadaran, No. 3461, fols. 66r-87v, dated 1662 C.E.

The questions of the intrinsic value of the Armenian version as a witness to the Life of Adam and Eve and of its relationship to the other versions have been debated. The work is closely related to the Georgian Book of Adam, which was translated and published after the publication of the Armenian version. J.-P. Mahé made a comparative study of the two and concluded that, together with Latin, they go back to a single recension, related to Greek manuscripts A, C and L. Moreover, he concludes correctly that Armenian and Georgian are closer to each other than either is to any other version.

The special readings of the Armenian version were discussed first by Stone, Penitence of Adam (1981) and his conclusion that Armenian preserves certain readings preferable to any other version is supported by G.A. Anderson. We see no reason to change this conclusion today (pace de Jonge and Tromp). Our study so far has uncovered no special relationship between the Armenian Penitence of Adam and any of the other numerous Armenian Adam books.

Due to the editorial policy of the series in which the editio princeps was published, readings of only one manuscript were given in the text and other readings, even if they were considered preferable, were put in the apparatus and marked lege. Such readings are now included in the text in square brackets and equally in the translation. The text and translation thus contain the best readings available. Variants are not noted. In a number of places small errors of the previous editions have been corrected and the translation has been revised to accord with the translations of the other versions, as far as is practicable.

Chapters had been marked already in the editio princeps. In the present text and translation, verses are also marked, which are coordinated with those of the other versions. Capitalization has been introduced and the punctuation normalized.

The Georgian Version

The Georgian text provided in this synopsis is that of C. K'urc'ikidze. We have not noted emendations, corruptions, etc. in the text we have printed. The English translation was made for this synopsis by J.-P. Mahé. C. K'urc'ikidze's edition is based on the following manuscripts:

Introduction

Recension alpha

- A A153, pp. 1-54, 17th century
- Q K'ut'aisi 128, pp. 1-23, 17th century
- B H443, fols. 1r-23r, 19th century
- C H881, fols. 1r-16r, 19th century

In addition Museum of Literature, no. 186, pp. 1-10, 19th century, belongs to this recension but it was not utilized by K'urc'ikidze.

Recension beta

- S S5157, 8 leaves with fragments, 17th century. This manuscript was written by the copyist of the famous Queen Mariam's Collection of Georgian Chronicles, known as K'art'lis Cxovreba "The Life of Georgia."

In Mahé's French translation of the Georgian he followed, in the main, the text of redaction alpha. Readings that were taken from beta were chosen because they were thought to provide a better text and were printed in italics. Here we have attempted to standardize the way in which variants have been presented.

The Slavonic Version

This version still requires a fair amount of work. We have published the Slavonic text prepared by Jagič in 1893. It is discussed in Stone (1992) where the known manuscripts and editions are listed.

Addendum: Notes on the Translation of the Georgian prepared by J.-P. Mahé

1:1 “to live in”: Thus QBC; A has a synonym.

2:2 “till we find out – who knows – (perhaps) the Lord”: This is better, on contextual grounds, than “testing (the food), etc.” They are attempting to see whether God will take them back.

4:3 “do penance”: Georgian has, literally, “let us repent in penitence,” meaning “let us do penance.” The construction resembles “to die a death” in 3:1 supra.

6:1a “stay and be”: Thus K’urc’ikidze, using the imperative and following AC; QB have “do.”

8:2 “for me”: Thus QB; “for us” K’urc’ikidze, following AC.

15:1 “heard”: The enclitic particle ya here means “still,” stressing the simultaneity of the action. Alternatively translate: “while the six ...that, then my speech...”

16:2 “by your power”: Thus B; “before you” K’urc’ikidze, following AQC.

20:1c “lamb”: Perhaps “little ewe”; if t’arigi means k’ravi. It means, most likely, “small female lamb” (like French “agnelle”).

20:2a “[luminaries]]”: or “[lights]].” The manuscripts have natesavta “generations” which we emend to mnatobu “luminaries”: see 44(32):2. One might also emend to nateli “light”: see 44(34):1.

21:2 “because of Adam, (the) elect (one)”: We use a different word division to K’urc’ikidze, reading adamis gamo, rčeulisa in place of her adamis, gamorčeulisa which might be translated “...of Adam, the elect ...”

“you are sure to have conceived”: In fact, the power says, “you have conceived,” not using an aorist, which would mean an objective, real fact, but a perfect with some sort of dubitative nuance. Alternatively render, “it seems you have conceived.”

21:3d “I have taught”: Thus QAC which read ray vasc’ave: B has rayta asc’ave, followed by K’urc’ikidze, “so that you teach.”

Introduction

23(3):2a “[Tell Adam]”: This is an emendation by K’urc’ikidze, with no manuscript support. Note, however, that Armenian reads asa Adamay “Tell (or: say to) Adam.”

23(3):2b “[he] will teach you”: This is an emendation of the text of QAC from gasc’ao šen “I will teach you” to gasc’aos šen “he will teach you.” This would accord with Armenian Ms B which has c’uc’c’ē k’ez “he will teach you.”

23(3):3a This verse is given according to recension alpha. Recension beta reads: “[God told Gabr]]iel; the angel came and told Adam and Adam kept these words in his heart. And they were both sad, Adam and Eve.

23(3):3a This verse occurs only in recension alpha.

23(3):3d “hand(s)”: It is impossible to distinguish the singular from the plural in Georgian at this point.

24(4):2 “before me” alpha; “before you (sing.)” beta.

30(5):4-5 Recension alpha reads: “And his sons told him: What is this, Father Adam? or how will a man become ill?” Recension beta reads: “And his sons told him: What is (this), Father? And he told them: I am sick my sons. And they told him the ...”

32(7):1 “to eat its fruit”: Thus recension beta; alpha omits and adds, “But there was one of the plants, beautiful, in the garden.”

32(7):3b “to ascend”: Thus recension beta; alpha omits.

32(7):4 “the garden”: This word, not found in the text of alpha is introduced into it by K’urc’ikidze from recension beta.

35(9):2 “Eve” is an addition in alpha supported by beta.

36 (9):4 This occurs only in alpha.

37(10):1 This passage occurs only in alpha with no variants.

37(10):3 “Did you dare”: This reading presumes a different word division.

Introduction

38(11):2 “You [[on account]] of whom”: Here the text reads romlisa gamoy which is emended into romlisa <gamo>. The unemended text would mean “whose taste the form of everything is changed.” The syntax is unclear and it does not really make sense.

42(13):3b [[resurrect]]”: There is a corruption in Georgian of aḡsrulobad “to finish, accomplish” for aḡdginebad “to resurrect.” K’urc’ikidze keeps the mistake, but marks it with an exclamation mark.

43(13):4 “that unction”: This, rather than oil, seems to be the meaning. For “oil” Georgian uses the word zet “(olive) oil”. Here, however, there is the word sacxdeli which derives from cxebay “to anoint,” and therefore the translation “unction” has been chosen here.

44(16):2a “I [[hear]] that”: Recension alpha reads, “the Devil told the serpent: You are wiser”; recension beta reads: “the Devil thirdly told the serpent: You are wiser.” The text must be corrupted and we emend mesamed vitarmed into <vitarmed> mes<mis> vitarmed. mes<mis> is exactly equivalent to Armenian lsem here.

44(16):3 “inferior”: From this point on, we follow recension beta. The remaining text of recension alpha is: “why do you eat (something) inferior and contemptible, and not the good fruit of the garden? But came and hearken to me, so that I (thus QAC; we B) may have him expelled outside the wall of the Garden.” The word “wall” (alpha) seems better than “enclosure” (beta) since Armenian reads orm “wall.” The Georgian zḡade may have both meanings.

44(17):2c The text of recension alpha resumes here and is used in the translation.

44(17):5 “Yes, we eat”: Thus beta; “I eat” alpha.

44(18):4 “you would become”: Thus B; “you were” AQC K’urc’ikidze alpha; “you would be” beta.

44(18):5 “Go to”: Thus B K’urc’ikidze; “look at” beta; “take” QAC.

44(21):2 We propose reading raymetu instead of rametu accepted by K’urc’ikidze.

44(21):4a “[[she told me]]”: An addition by the translator.

Introduction

44(21): 5 Recension alpha reads: “Then I gave (it to) your father and we learned that we were naked. And it happened when God came to the garden, we hid from the face of the Lord, because both of us had covered ourselves with a leaf of a fig tree.”

44(23):1 Recension alpha reads: “And God summoned Adam: Adam, Adam where were you? And he told him: I am here, Lord, because I was naked and I hid from you.”

44(24):1 “[[Because]]”: So we have emended the text to rametu, cf. Armenian p’oxanak zi. Recension beta has rata and K’urc’ikidze proposed the emendation raysa “why (do).”

44(24):3 All the negatives were added by K’urc’ikidze into the text of the one manuscript extant for this section. “have [[no]] rest” is confirmed by the Armenian mi lic’i k’ez hangist. There is no support “[[not]] be sated” and “[[not]] taste” in Armenian. The second occurrence of “[[not]] be sated” (following “bitterness”) might well be a dittography in Georgian.

“fle[[e to soak yourselves]] with water”: Only the first four letters of “fle[[e]]” survive and the instrumental of “water.” The rest is conjecture.

44(26):1 The translation here combines readings of alpha and beta. Alpha has “and God (AQC: he B) told the serpent: You too perish...” Beta has “When he had said all this to me, he became very angry with the serpent: Be cursed ...”

44(26):3 “exhausted and broken”: Thus beta; alpha has “thin and [unknown word].”

44(28):4 The translation follows beta. Alpha reads: “... from every evil, and you say: I shall die. And [[after]] death, I will arise in the future, then I will give you of the tree ...”

44(29):1 Thus beta: alpha reads: “When the Lord had said that in the garden.”

44(31):3 “alone”: Thus beta: alpha omits.

“do not move”: Thus beta: alpha has a third person.

44(32):2 The text of beta reads: “I have sinned against you before your angels and I have sinned before the Cherubs, and I have sinned before your altar, and I have sinned before the holy light, and I have sinned against the winged birds of the heavens and the beasts of the earth.”

Introduction

44(32):3 “on her [[knees]]”: So alpha emended: beta reads “while Eve was praying that ...” The text is emended from “feet” to “[[knees]]” since the next phrase says that she arose. Does kneeling down to pray indicate something about the original context of the text?

44(33):2 “[winds]”: This is an addition by K’urc’ikidze.

44(33):4 “cups”: This occurs only in beta.

“three angels”: This occurs only in alpha. Both these readings are confirmed by the following words.

44(34):1 “before God”: Thus beta; “before him” alpha.

44(35):4 “the blood of my spouse”: Thus beta; alpha has “the deeds of blood” K’urc’ikidze; “the deed of blood” QABC.

47(37):2 Thus beta; alpha reads: “Blessed are you, Lord, who have pardoned the protoplast.”

47(38):4 That is to say that they had fallen into a deep sleep, like Adam before the birth of Eve. See below 48(42):3.

48(40):2 Emend sindisani into sindnisani or sindonisani “of [[cloth]].”

48(41):1 “Here I am, [[Lord]].” Emending here to upalo. The manuscripts have parao “Pharaoh” or para “he hid” or “he said.”

48(42):3 “[when]] she saw all [[that]]”: We read ese ray instead of esera.

“...”: There is a lacuna here and K’urc’ikidze’s reconstruction is unacceptable.

II. Principles of Versification

1. The chapters correspond to the chapters of the Latin as found in Charles.
2. Where the Greek also exists, its numbers are given in parentheses.
3. When one Latin chapter corresponds to numerous Greek chapters, the Latin chapter number is repeated at the start of each "Greek" chapter.
4. Where Armenian and Greek are longer than Latin, the Latin number is repeated in square brackets.
5. The versification is taken from Charles from chapter 1 to chapter 22 who follows the Latin, thereafter it follows the Greek. From time to time we have altered the versification slightly so that the various versions can be brought into proper alignment.
6. If a verse is exceptionally long, we have subdivided it by adding the markers: "a," "b," "c," etc.

Bibliography

D.A. Bertrand, La vie grecque d'Adam et Eve (Recherches intertestamentaires 1) Paris: Maisonneuve, 1987.

A.-M. Denis, Concordance grecque des pseudépigraphes d'Ancien Testament: Concordance, corpus des textes, indices. Louvain-la-Neuve: Université Catholique de Louvain, 1987.

V. Jagič, "Slavische Beiträge zu den biblischen Apocryphen, I, Die altkirchenslavischen Texte des Adamsbuche," Denkschr. kais. Akademie der Wissenschaften, philos.-hist. Klasse (Vienna, 1893) 42, 1-104.

Introduction

M. de Jonge and J. Tromp, The Life of Adam and Eve and Related Literature. Sheffield: Sheffield Academic Press, 1997.

C. K'urc'ikidze, "Adamis Apokrip'uli C'xovrebis K'art'uli Versia," P'ilologiuri Dzebiani 1 (1964), 97-136.

J.-P. Mahé, "Le Livre d'Adam géorgien," Studies in Gnosticism and Hellenistic Religions. ed. R. van den Broek and M.J. Vermaseren, Leiden: Brill, 1981, 227-260.

W. Meyer, "Vita Adae et Evae," Abhandlungen der königlichen Bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, philosoph.-philologische Klasse (Munich, 1878) 14.3, 185-250.

J.H. Mozley, "The Vitae Adae," Journal of Theological Studies 30 (1929), 121-49.

M.E. Stone, The Penitence of Adam (CSCO, 429-30; Scriptorum Armeniaci 13-14) Leuven: Peeters, 1981.

M.E. Stone, A History of the Literature of Adam and Eve (Early Judaism and its Literature 3) Atlanta: Scholars Press, 1992.

L.S.A. Wells, "The Books of Adam and Eve," The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament, ed. R. H. Charles (Oxford: Clarendon, 1913) 2, 123-54.

Acknowledgements

The English translation of the Armenian is cited from M.E. Stone, Penitence of Adam (CSCO, 429-30; Scriptores Armeniaci 13-14; ed. R. Draguet; Leuven: Peeters, 1981) by permission of Peeters Press in Leuven, Belgium. The Greek text printed here is that prepared by M. Nagel for A.-M. Denis (ed.), Concordance grecque des pseudépigraphes d'Ancien Testament (Louvain-la-Neuve: Université Catholique de Louvain, 1987) pp. 815-818. It is reprinted by permission of the Publications de l'Institut Orientaliste, Université Catholique de Louvain, à Louvain-la-Neuve.

There are many to thank for their gracious help in bringing this work to completion. The National Endowment for the Humanities supported the project. M.E. Stone put final touches on his contribution while a Fellow-in-Residence of the Netherlands Institute of Advanced Studies in Wassenaar, Netherlands. Appreciation is expressed to both these institutions which do much to nurture studies in the humanities.

Thanks are due to J.-P. Mahé for his meticulous work on the Georgian edition and the English translation he provided. Many thanks are also extended to: Mr. W. Lechner-Schmidt who graciously supplied us with a text of the Latin version; the members of the Intertestamental Literature seminar of the Society for New Testament Studies which reviewed the production of the Synopsis at several stages (special thanks being due to M. de Jonge who provided many helpful criticisms of the work in progress); Richard Layton and Sergio Laporta who provided very able editorial help in the final stages of the assembling of this volume; and, finally, the members of the 1993 and 1996 NEH summer seminars on the Adam literature held at the University of Virginia and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem respectively.

Gary A. Anderson
Michael E. Stone

April 1998

Introduction

Sigla

(XXX)	addition provided to English for sense
[XXX]	addition to base manuscript from another supporting manuscript; correction of orthography
{XXX}	corruption
[[XXX]]	editor's conjectural emendation

INTRODUCTION IN THE GREEK

0.1 διήγησις καὶ πολιτεία Ἀδὰμ καὶ Εὕας τῶν πρωτοπλάστων ἀποκαλυφθεῖσα παρὰ θεοῦ Μωϋσῇ τῷ θεράποντι αὐτοῦ ὅτε τὰς πλάκας τοῦ νόμου ἐκ χειρὸς αὐτοῦ ἐδέξατο διδασχθεὶς παρὰ τοῦ ἀρχαγγέλου Μιχαήλ. κύριε εὐλόγησον.

SLAVONIC 1.1 Бѣше Адамъ въ раи прѣжде съгрѣшения и вса имѣаше въ хотѣнїе свое и вса въ хотѣнїе юго ходѣху. 1.2 звѣрие и скоти и все птице перьнатѣ, и вса же повелѣнїемъ юго хранѣху се и ходѣху и лѣтаху. 1.3 не повелѣвшу Адаму къ вещьмъ не смѣаху ни ходити ни лещи ни сънѣсти чѣто, донѣдеже не повелитъ имъ Адамъ. 1.4 такожде и Къвага.

INTRODUCTION IN THE GREEK

0.1 The story and the history of Adam and Eve the first-created, revealed by God to Moses his servant, when he received the tablets of the law from His hand, having been instructed by the Archangel Michael. O Lord pronounce a blessing.

SLAVONIC

1.1 Before the trespass, Adam was in Paradise and had everything he wanted and everything happened according to his will: 1.2 the wild animals and the domestic animals and all the feathered birds--all drew near, left and fled at his command. 1.3 Apart from Adam's command nothing was allowed to move around, or land, or eat anything before Adam permitted it. 1.4 It was the same with Eve.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:7a [Ἐγένετο δὲ ἡμᾶς πενθῆσαι ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ	1:1 Quando expulsi sunt [II,III=Cum expulsi (fuissent? essent?) Adam et Eva]II,III de paradiso, fecerunt sibi tabernaculum et fuerunt VII dies lugentes et lamentantes in magna tristitia.	1.1 ხეჩი ქრანსის Ադამայ ի դրախտէ անտի. հանդիք՝ կնամ իրով, ի դուրս ի կողմ արեւելից դրախտին. և արարին իրեանց տաղասար բնակութեան, և մտին անդ. և իրանէին արտասուք իրեանց անդադար, և եղին զատուր իրեանց միաբան յալով և տրտմութեամբ, և ասին ցմիւնասան ի՞նչ հեռացաք ի կենացս:	1:1 და იყო ოდეს გამოვიდა ადამ და ევა, ცოლი მისი, სამოთხიო, გამოვიდეს სამოთხეს აღმოსავალით კერძო. კმნა ადამ ტალავარი საყუდელად თვისა. და შევიდეს ორნივე და დაყვეს მუნ შვიდი დღე. ტიროდეს ორნივე ტირილითა დიდითა, რამეთუ ჯუოდეს საყოფელთა მათთვის სასუფეველი-სათა, რომელთა განშორნეს.	28-29.1 И сѣдохомъ прѣдъ дверьми раискими .
29:7b [καὶ μετὰ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ἐπεινάσαμεν	2:1 Post VII autem dies coeperunt esurire et quaerebant escam, ut manducarent et non inveniebant.	2.1 և ապա յետ ասուրց ելին քաղցեան և խնդրէին կերակուր:	2.1 და შემდგომად შვიდისა დღისა შეემშია და ეძიებდეს საჭმელსა.	28-29.2 Адамъ прилежъ къ земли и плака се за .3. дѣни и ничѣто сѣньдѣно не имѣхомъ и възалькахомъ велико .
29:7c [καὶ εἶπον τῷ Ἀδὰμ· ἀνάστα καὶ φρόντισον ἡμῖν βρώματα ἵνα φάγωμεν καὶ ζήσωμεν ἵνα μὴ ἀποθάνωμεν, ἐγερθόμεν καὶ κυκλώσωμεν τὴν γῆν εἰ οὕτως εἰσακούσῃ ἡμῖν ὁ θεός.	2:2 Tunc dixit Eva ad Adam: domine mi, esurio. vade, quaere nobis, quod manducemus. forsitan respiciet et miserebitur nobis dominus deus et revocabit nos in locum, quo prius eramus.	2.2 և ասէ Եւա Եւրամ. Տէր իմ քաղցեալ, արի խնդրես կերակուր զի ապրեսցուք, և գիտասցուք ե՞նչ գալոց է Աստուած և ասնիցի զմեզ ի դրախտ, ի տեղի մեր:	2:2 ჰრქუა ევა ადამს. "უფალო ჩემო, ადამ, აღდეგ და მიდი მე საზრდო, რათა ვჭამოთ ვიდრე განცდამდე, ვინ უწყის, შემიწყნაროს ჩუენ უფალ-მან და შემიყუანნეს ჩუენ მასვე აღვიღსა სამოთხისასა".	28-29.3 азъ же Къвѣга възъп ихъ гласомъ велиемъ . помылю мѣ, творьче, мѣне ради Адамъ сико патить . 28-29.4 и глаголахъ Адаму . вѣстани, господине мои, да поищевъ храню себѣ . оже бо доухъ мои омалѣ въ мнѣ и сръдце мое оледенѣло кѣстъ въ мнѣ .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:7a [And we grieved for seven days]	1:1 When Adam and Eve were expelled from paradise they made for themselves a tent and spent seven days mourning and lamenting in great sadness.	1:1 It came to pass, when Adam went forth from the Garden with his wife, outside, to the east of the Garden, they made themselves a hut to live in and went inside. Their tears fell ceaselessly and they spent their days in unison of mind, weeping and saddened, and they said to one another, "We are far from life."	1:1 It came to pass, when Adam went out from the Garden with his wife Eve, they went out at the eastern part of the Garden. And Adam made a hut to live in. They both entered (it) and resided there for seven days. They both wept with abundant tears, for they regretted the residences of the kingdom from which they had been expelled.	28-29.1 And we sat ourselves down before the gates of Paradise.
29:7b [and after seven days we grew hungry]	2:1 But after 7 days they began to be hungry and sought food to eat and did not find any.	2:1 Then, after seven days, they grew hungry and looked for food.	2:1 And after seven days, they were hungry and looked for something to eat.	28-29.2 Adam lay down on the ground and cried for seven days and nights, and we had nothing to eat and felt horrible hunger.
29:7c [and I said to Adam: "Rise and give some thought to food that we might eat and live and so that we do not die. Let us get up and circle the earth perhaps God will hear us."]	2:2 Then Eve said to Adam: "My lord, I am hungry. Go, seek for us something to eat. Perhaps the Lord God will look upon us and have mercy on us and will call us back to the place where we were previously."	2:2 Eve said to Adam. "My lord, I am hungry. Arise, seek food so that we may live and know that God is going to come and bring us to the Garden, to our place."	2:2 Eve told Adam: "Adam, my lord, arise and (go) search for food for me that we may eat, until we find out-- who knows -- (perhaps) the Lord will accept us and take us back to the same place in the Garden.	28-29.3 I, Eve, cried out with a loud voice, "Have pity on me, O Creator, for on my account Adam suffers so severely." 28-29.4 And I said to Adam, "Get up, my husband, that we may seek nourishment; for my spirit is already diminishing in me and my heart is going numb within me."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:7d [Καὶ ἀνέστημεν καὶ διωδεδύσαμεν πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν ἐκείνην καὶ οὐχ εὗρομεν.	3:1 Et surrexit Adam et ambulavit VII dies omnem terram illam et non invenit escam, qualem habebant in paradiso.	3.1 Յարեան եւ շրջեցան ի վերայ երկրի, եւ ոչ գտին կերակուր նման կերակուրի որով կերակրէին ի [դրահատին]:	3:1 და აღდგა ადამ შემდგომად შვიდისა ღღისა და იცევოდა პირსა ზედა ქუეყანისასა. და არა პოვა საზრდელი მსგავსად მისა, რომლისა-იგი ჭამდეს სამოთხესა მას შინა. მიუგო ადამ ევას და ჰრქუა: "სიკუდი ლითა მოსიკუდიდ ვართ.
	3:2 Et dixit Eva ad Adam: domine mi, putas fac me uti- nam moriar. et forte introducat te dominus deus de- nuo in paradisum, quoniam propter me iratus est tibi dominus deus.	3.2a եւ ասէ ხա ցარად. Մհրանիմք ի սովոյ ասալիկ. երանք էր եթէ ես մեռեայն էի. տէր իմ, քերեա տանէին զ[քեզ] ի դրահատն, զի վասն իմ իցէ բարկացեալ Աստուած:	3:2a ჰრქუა ევა ადამს: "ნეტარ თუშცა მე მოვკუედი და შენ ზოლო შეგი- წყენარა სამოთხედ".
		3.2b Ասէ Ադამ. Մեծ ցասումն հասնայ է ի վերայ մեր, ոչ գիտեմ վասն քո եթէ վասն իս:	3:2b მიუგო ადამ ევას და ჰრქუა: "ღიდი რისხვაი არს ჩუენ გამო ყოველ- თა ზედა დაბადებულთა. ესე არა უწყი, ანუ თუ ჩემ გამო, ანუ თუ შენ გამო".

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:7d [We arose and went about the entire earth but we did not find food.]

3:1 And Adam arose and walked for seven days over all that land but did not find food such as they had in paradise.

3:2 Eve said to Adam: "My lord, would that I might die. Perhaps then the Lord God would bring you back into the Garden, for it was because of me that the Lord God grew angry with you."

3:1 They arose and went about upon the earth, and they did not find food like the food by which they had been nourished in [the Garden].

3:2a Eve said to Adam, "I am dying of this hunger. It would be better if I were dead, my lord; perhaps (then) they would bring [you] into the Garden, for because of me God is angry."

3:2b Adam said, "Great wrath has come upon us, I know not whether because of you or because of me."

3:1 And Adam arose after seven days and went about upon the face of the earth and he did not find any food like that which they used to eat in the Garden. Adam replied to Eve and told her, "We are going to die a death."

3:2a Eve told Adam, "Oh, if only I were dead then God would have accepted you in the Garden!"

3:2b Adam replied to Eve and said to her, "Because of us a great anger lies upon all creatures. (However) I do not know this: whether it is because of me or because of you."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:8 [Καὶ ἀποκριθεῖσα εἶπον τῷ Ἀδὰμ· ἀνάστα κύριε καὶ ἀνάλωσόν με ἵνα ἀναπαύσωμαι ἀπὸ προσώπου σου καὶ ἀπὸ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ προσώπων τῶν ἀγγέλων ὅπως παύσονται τοῦ ὀργίζεσθαι σοι δι' ἐμοῦ.

29:9a [Τότε ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἀδὰμ εἶπέν μοι διὰ τί ἐμνήσθης τῆς κακίας ταύτης ἵνα φόνον ποιήσω καὶ ἐνέγκω θάνατον τῇ ἐμῇ πλευρᾷ; ἢ πῶς ἐπενέγκω χεῖρα τῇ εἰκόνι τοῦ θεοῦ ἦν ἔπλασεν; vis interficere me, ut moriar? et forte introducet te dominus deus in paradisum, quia propter meam causam expulsus es inde.

3:3 Respondit Adam: noli, Eva, talia dicere, ne forte aliquam iterum maledictionem inducat in nos dominus deus. quomodo potest fieri, ut mittam manum meam in carnem meam?

3:4 sed surgamus et quaeramus nobis, unde vivamus, ut non deficiamus.

4:1 Et ambulantes quaesierunt novem dies et non invenerunt sicut habebant in paradiso, sed hoc tantum inveniebant, quod animalia edebant.

3.2c Ասէ ցն(ա) նաւ. եթէ կամիս, սպան զիս. զի դարարեսցէ ցատսան եւ բարկութիւն իրեսաց քոց. զի վասն իմ եղիւ այդ. եւ տանիցեն զքեզ ի դրախտ անդ:

3.3 Ասէ ցնա Ադամ. Մի՛ նաւ լիշեսցես գալոքս, գուցէ ածիցէ Աստուած ի վերայ մեր այլ եւ չարիս յորովագորի, եւ իբրեւ այսպանողք լինիմք. իսկ զիս՝ ող կարեմ չար ինչ տանել քեզ. զի մարմին իմ եւ դու:

3.4 Ասէ նաւ. Արի՛ զի խնդրեսցուք կերակուր բանձարոյ.

4.1 [խնդրեցին] եւ ոչ գտին կերակուր [ճարակ բանջարոյ նման որ ի դրախտին էր]

3:2c მიუღო ევა ადამს: "უფალო ჩემო, უკუეთუ ჯერ-გისნს, მომაკლდინებ მე, რაითა მოვისპო პირისაგან ღმრთისა და ანგელოზთაგან მისთა, რაითა დაცხრეს რისხვაი ღმრთისაი შენ ზედა, რომელ არს ჩემ გამო და შეგვიყვან-ნოს მღვზე სამოთხედ".

3:3 მიუღო ადამ და ჰრქუა: "ნუვე, ნუცა მოიხსენებ მაგას საქმესა, რაითა არა ღმერთმან სხუთი სასჯელი მოავლინოს ჩუენ ზედა კლვისათვის, ვითარ-მე აღვიდო სელი ჩემი ვნებად ხორცთავე თვისთა ზედა?" მაშინ ჰრქუა ეავი:

3:4 "აღდეგ, ვიდოთ ორთავე მხალი".

4:1 და არა პოვეს გემო მსგავსად ხილისა მის, რომელი იყო სამოთხე-სა მას შინა.

28-29.5a тогда Адамъ къ мнѣ рече: "Евѣго, приходитъ ми на срьдѣце, 28-29.5b, 6 да съмрѣти прѣдамъ тебѣ, нь бою се, понеже образъ твои богъ сѣтворилъ юсть. того ради не могу сѣздание господне разорити, нь понеже каеши се и въпиешу къ богу, того ради срьдѣце мое не отлучаетъ се отъ тебѣ.

30-32.1 И вѣста Адамъ и обидоховѣ всѣмъ землю и не обрѣтоховѣ сѣнѣсти ничесоже, тѣкмо цволѣ траву селѣну

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29.8 [And I answered and said to Adam: "Rise, O Lord and destroy me that I might cease from before you and from before God and the angels (and) so that they might cease their anger toward you on my account."]	Do you wish to kill me, that I might die? Perhaps the Lord God will bring you back into the Garden, since on account of my action you were expelled from there."	3:2c Eve said, to h[im], "Kill me if you wish, so that the wrath and anger may abate from before you—for this has come about because of me—and they will bring you into the Garden."	3:2c Eve replied to Adam, "My lord, if you think it wise, kill me so that I will be exterminated from the sight of God and his angels, so that God's anger against you may cease, which came about because of me: and he will bring you back into the Garden."	28-29.5a Then Adam said to me, "Eve, I have half a mind to give you over to death,
29-9a [Then Adam answered and said to me, "For what reason do you call to mind this evil that I could commit murder and impose death upon my rib. How could I lift a hand against the image of God which he made?"]	3:3 Adam responded: "Don't say such things Eve lest the Lord God bring upon us some other curse. How could it be that I should raise my hand against my own flesh?"	3:3 Adam said to her. "Eve, do not (even) mention this matter; lest God bring upon us even greater evils and we become contemptible. How, indeed, can I do you any evil, for you are my body?"	3:3 Adam replied and told her, "No, no! Do not mention this matter, lest God send another judgment upon us because of (this) killing. How could I raise my hand and cause my own flesh to suffer?"	28-29.5b, 6 but I am afraid to do so, because God created your countenance. Thus, I cannot destroy the creation of God, on the contrary, because you now are filled with remorse and pray to God, my heart can never part from you."
	3:4 Let us arise and seek for ourselves something by which we might live so that we might not perish."	3:4 Eve said "Arise, so that we may seek vegetable food."	3:4 Then Eve told him, "Arise, let us both seek vegetables."
	4:1 Walking about, they searched for nine days but did not find anything like they had in the Garden. They only found what animals eat.	4:1 [They sought] and they did not find [vegetable] food [like that which was in the Garden].	4:1 And they did not find (anything) tasting like the fruit of the tree which was in the Garden.	30-32.1 And Adam stood up and we traveled about the whole earth but found nothing to eat, except thorns, a wild grass.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	4:2 Et dixit Adam ad Evam: haec tribuit dominus animalibus et bestiis, ut edant; nobis autem esca angelica erat.	4.2 քանզի գալս կերակուր բանճարոյ հաստատեալց Աստուած կերակուր գազանաց զի կերիցեն ինկրի. այլ մեր կերակուր այն է զոր հրեշտակքն կերակրին:	4:2 და ჰრქუა ევა: ესე დაბადა ღმერთმან მხეცთათვის, რაითა იზარღე-ბოლიან, ხოლო ჩუენდა საზრდელად იყო ანგელოზთა იგი ცხორებაი.
	4:3 Sed iuste et digne plangimus ante conspectum dei, qui fecit nos. peniteamus penitentiam magnam; forsitan indulgeat et miserebitur nostri dominus deus et disponet nobis, unde vivamus.	4.3 Արի ապաշխարեսցուք ատուր քառասուն, թերեւ գիշացի Աստուած ի մեզ եւ տացէ (մեզ) կերակուր որ յապգոյն իցէ քան զգազանացն, զի մի նմանեսցուք յոցա:	4:3 აწ მოვედ და შევიზნართ სინანულითა დიდითა ფრიად ორმეოც დღე, რაითა წყალობა ყოს ღმერთმან ჩუენ ზედა და მომცეს ჩუენ საზრდელი უძჯობესი პირუტყუეთასა, რაითა არა მსგავსად მათსა ვიყვენით.	30-32.2 и пакы възвративъшемъ се намъ въ едемъ (ed. къ двѣремъ райскимъ) единоголассно възыпихомъ: помилуй, владыко, творьче, твою свою . господи, припѣсти намъ сьнѣдь .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	4:2 Adam said to Eve: "The Lord gave these things to animals and beasts to eat. Ours, however was the angelic food.	4:2 (Eve said "...) because God established this vegetable food as food for the beasts that they might eat on the earth, but our food is that which the angels eat.	4:2 And Eve told him, "God created that for the beasts to get (as) their food; but our food was that by which the angels live.
	4:3 But justly and worthily do we lament before the face of God who made us. Let us perform a great penitence. Perhaps the Lord God will yield and have mercy on us and give us something by which we might live."	4:3 Arise, let us repent for forty days; perhaps God will pity us and give [us] food which is better than that of the beasts so that we should not become like them."	4:3 Now, come and let us do penance for forty days, so that God may pity us and then give us better food than that of the animals, lest we should become like them."	30-32.2 And when we returned to Eden (ed. to the gates of Paradise), we cried together praying, "Have pity, O Master and Creator, on your creatures; furnish us with nourishment."

SLAVONIC

30-32.3 непрѣстанно молещемъ се намъ .єі. днѣи, тогда слышахомъ архаггела Иоила (ed. Михаила Иоила), молеща се о насъ.

30-32.4 и повелѣтъ господь Иоилу, и въземъ .з. чѣсть отъ рая и даде намъ.

30-32.5 Тогда рече господь : тръниѣ и вльчѣць изъ длани твоихъ да изидеть и отъ пота твоего снѣси . и да зърить жена твоя тебе и да трепещеть .

30-32.6 рхаггелъ Иоиль рече : тако глаголетъ господь къ Адаму : жену твою не сътворишь да естъ тебѣ на повелѣніе, нѣ да естъ тебѣ на послушание . по чѣто ты жену свою слушаеши;

30-32.7 Паки архаггелъ Иоиль повѣда Адаму : отлучи скоты и все вещи отъ летѣщихъ и отъ ходѣщихъ и сътвори дивіе и питомы, и нареци всѣмъ вещи имена .

30-32.8 такожде възетъ Адамъ воловы и възора, да сътворить себѣ храну.

33-34.1 Тогда дияволъ прииде и ста прѣдъ волями и не дасть Адаму землю работати

33-34.2 и рече дияволъ къ Адаму : моя естъ земля а божия суть небесная (и рай) .

33-34.3 да аще хоцѣши мои быти, тогда землю работай .

33-34.4 аще ли хоцѣши божию быти, поиди себѣ въ рай .

33-34.5 Адамъ рече : божия суть небеса и божию рай, божия земля и море и вса въселенная .

33-34.6 дияволъ рече : не дамъ ти землю работати, аще не запишѣши рукописание свое, да (є)си мои .

33-34.7 Адамъ рече : кѣто земли господинь, тому юсмъ азъ и чѣда моя . дияволъ възрадова се .

33-34.8 Адамъ бо знааше, яко господь хоцѣтъ снѣити на землю о облѣщи се хоцѣтъ въ чловѣчь образъ и попрали хоцѣтъ диявола .

33-34.9 и рече дияволъ : запиши мнѣ рукописание свое .

33-34.10 и записа юму и рече : кѣто земли господинь, тому азъ и чѣда моя

35-37.1 Дияволъ приетъ рукописание Адамле .

SLAVONIC

30-32.3 And as we prayed unceasingly for fifteen days, we heard the archangel Joel (ed Michael Joel) praying for us.

30-32.4 And the Lord commanded the archangel Joel and he took a one-seventh portion from Paradise and gave it to us.

30-32.5 Then the Lord spoke, 'Thorns and thistles shall come forth from your hands and from your sweat you will have nourishment, and your wife will look on you in trembling.'

30-32.6 And the archangel Joel said, 'Thus says the Lord to Adam, I have not created your wife to command you, but to obey you; why do you obey your wife?'

30-32.7 Moreover, the archangel Joel told Adam, that he was to make a separation between farm animals and every sort of flying and creeping creature, namely, the wild and the tame, and to give to each creature a name.

30-32.8 Accordingly, Adam took oxen and began to till, that he might obtain nourishment.

33-34.1 Then the Devil appeared and stood steadfastly in front of the oxen and wouldn't allow Adam to till the earth.

33-34.2 And the Devil said to Adam, 'the earth is mine, God owns Heaven (and the Garden).

33-34.3 If you want to become mine, then, by all means, till the earth.

33-34.4 If, however, you want to belong to God then go only into Paradise.'

33-34.5 Adam said, 'God owns Heaven and Paradise, but God also owns the earth and the sea and the entire world.'

33-34.6 The Devil said, 'I will not permit you to till the earth, unless you sign a cheirograph, pledging that you belong to me.'

33-34.7 Adam said, 'Whoever is Lord of the earth, to him both I and my children belong.'

33-34.8 Adam knew of course that the Lord would come down to the earth and take on himself the form of a man and trample down the Devil.

33-34.9 The Devil said, 'Write for me your cheirograph.'

33-34.10 And Adam wrote and said, 'Whoever is Lord of the earth, both I and my children belong to him.'

35-37.1 The Devil took the cheirograph for himself.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

5:1 Et dixit Eva ad Adam: domine mi, dic mihi, quid est penitentia et qualiter peniteam, ne forte laborem nobis inponamus, quem non possumus sustinere, et non exaudiat preces nostras.	5:1 Ասէ Ադամ Եւայ. զոր սարինակ սպաշխարիս դու. կամ քան՝ ի սար կարիս համբերել վաստակոց. քուցէ սկսանիս եւ ոչ կարիս սպաշխարել. եւ ոչ լուիցէ Աստուած.	5:1 მიუგო ადამ ევას და ჰრქუა: " ძიობარ-ლა მე აწ, რაბამითა სინანულ-ლითა ინანი, ანუ რადღენთა დღეთა შეუძლო სინანულად სინანულისა შენისა, ნუტუკუე აღუთუქუათ ღმერთსა	5:1 მიუგო ადამს ევა და ჰრქუა: " ძიობარ-ლა რიცხუნი იგი დღეთანი, რადღენ ჟამ ეგულები სინანული, ვინ იცის, შე-ცა- უმატო მას, რამეთუ მე შეგამთვვიენ ჯირნი ესე."	35-37.2 и азъ, чѣда моя , рѣхъ къ отцу вашему Адаму . въстани, госп одинѣ, и помоли се господу о семь, да избавитъ насъ отъ диявола сего, понеже сико патиши менѣ ради .
5:2 Et avertat dominus faciem suam a nobis, quia sicut promisimus non adimplevimus.	5:2 զի զոր ի սկզբանէ ստացաք եւ ոչ կարացաք պահել:	5:2 და ვერ აღუსრულოთ აღუქმად იგი მისი, რომელი აღუთუქუათ .	5:2 და ვერ აღუსრულოთ აღუქმად იგი მისი, რომელი აღუთუქუათ .	35-37.3 Адамъ же рече къ мнѣ . ѿ Къво, понеже сико каѣши сео злобѣ своѣи, и сръдце мое оуслышитъ те, понеже създа тебѣ господь отъ ребръ моихъ .
5:3 Domine mi, quantum cogitasti penitere, quod ego tibi induxi laborem et tribulationem.	5:3 Ասէ Եւայ. Տուր ինձ գիշիս ատուրեն զոր խորհեցայց սպաշխարել. քուցէ երկայնիքեն ատուրել. քանզի ես [ածի] ի վերայ քո զապաշխարութիւն դ գայի:	5:3 მიუგო ადამს ევა და ჰრქუა: " ძიობარ-ლა რიცხუნი იგი დღეთანი, რადღენ ჟამ ეგულები სინანული, ვინ იცის, შე-ცა- უმატო მას, რამეთუ მე შეგამთვვიენ ჯირნი ესე."	5:3 მიუგო ადამს ევა და ჰრქუა: " ძიობარ-ლა რიცხუნი იგი დღეთანი, რადღენ ჟამ ეგულები სინანული, ვინ იცის, შე-ცა- უმატო მას, რამეთუ მე შეგამთვვიენ ჯირნი ესე."	35-37.4 და პოწიმъ სე .მ. ძნიი, ედა како оумилосръдитъ се господь о насъ и прип оуститъ намъ разумъ и животъ (ed. разумъ животъни) .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	5:1 Eve said to Adam: "My lord, tell me what is penitence and how long should I perform it, lest we place on ourselves a labor which we cannot endure, and he hears not our prayers, 5:2 and the Lord turn his face from us because we did not fulfill what we promised. 5:3 My lord, how much penitence are you thinking of doing since I brought labor and tribulation upon you."	5:1 Adam said to Eve, "In what fashion will you repent? How many days can you endure toils? Perhaps you will begin and be unable to repent, and God will not hearken, 5:2 so that we will not be able to keep that which we originally received." 5:3 Eve said, "Set me the number of days which I might think to repent; perhaps the days will be too long—for I brought this penitence upon you."	5:1 Adam replied to Eve and told her, "Explain to me now by what penitence you (wish to) repent, or for how many days will you be able to repent in your penitence, lest, perchance, we make a promise to God, 5:2 and be unable to fulfill the promise which we will have made to him." 5:3 Eve replied to Adam and she told him, "Tell me about the number of days, then; for what period of time will you consider doing penitence? Who knows, (perhaps) I will add more to that—for it is I who have brought these tribulations upon you."	35-37.2 But I, my children, said to your father Adam, 'Arise, my husband, pray to God, that he deliver us from the Devil, for you suffer so on my account.' 35-37.3 But Adam said to me, 'Eve, now you feel such remorse over your error, that you will listen to my heart, for God created you from my rib. 35-37.4 We will fast for forty days, perhaps the Lord will pity us and leave for us understanding and a portion of life (ed. life's understanding).'
--	--	--	--	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:9b [ἀλλὰ μετανοήσωμεν ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα ὅπως σπλαγχνισθῇ ἡμῖν ὁ θεός καὶ δώσῃ ἡμῖν τροφήν κρείσσονα τῆς τῶν θηρίων. 29-10a Ἐγὼ μὲν ποιήσω ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα σὺ δὲ ἡμέρας τριάκοντα τέσσαρας ὅτι σὺ οὐκ ἐπλάσθης τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἕκτῃ ἐν ᾗ ἐτέλεσεν ὁ θεὸς τὴν κτίσιν αὐτοῦ.	6:1a Et dixit Adam ad Evam: non potes tantum facere quantum ego, sed tantum fac ut salveris. ego enim faciam quadraginta diebus ieiunans.	6.1a Ասէ Ադամ. Ոչ կարես համբերել զպիղքաքի ասորս որպէս եւ ես, այլ արա դու զոր ինչ ասացից քեզ եւ կաց ի [նիին] քան: Ասէ Ադամ. Ես լինիմ ասորս քառասուն, անիւ քան զքեզ վեց ար. քանզի դու ստեղծար ասորս վեցերորդի զոր ստացաւ զարարածս իւր.	6:1a მიუგო ადამ და ჰრქუა ევას: "ვერ შეუძლო შეპყებულ, გარნა რა-ოღენი გრქუა, ევოლენ დაადგერ და ყავ. და მე შევივავო ორმეულ დღე და შენ შეინანე ოცდაათობმეტი დღე. ექუსნი იგი დღენი მე მომიტევნენ, რამეთუ შენ არა დაბადე დღესა მას მეექვსესა, რომელსა შექმნა ღმერთმან ყოველი დაბადებული?" 6:1b აწ შენ აღდეგ და მივედ მდინარესა ტიგრისისასა და მოიღე ქვაი ფერხთა ქუეშე შენთა და შთაღე წყალსა მას შინა და სამოსელი დაი-ფარენ ვიდრე ყელადმდე. და ვიდრე ილოცვიდ, ნუ გამოვალნ ხმაი პირობი შენით, რამეთუ არა ღირს ვართ აღებად პირთა ჩუენთა, რამეთუ ბაგენი ჩუენნი არაწმიდა არიან გარდასვითა მით მცნებათაითა ჭაპარისა მისგან სამოთხისა, რომლისა-იგი არა გვიბრძანა ღმერთმან,	35-37.5 азъ рѣхъ · госп одинѣ, ты пости се .м. дънеи, и азъ да пощю се .мд. 35-37.6 и рече Адамъ къ мьнѣ · прииди въ рѣку, и поими камыкъ великъ и подложи подъ нощъ свои и вьниди въ водѣ, и одѣжди се водою яко свитою до вьне своеѣ и моли бога въ срьдци своемъ и да не изидеть рѣчь изъ оустъ твоихъ .
29:10b [Ἄλλ' ἀνάστα καὶ πορεύου εἰς τὸν Τίγριν ποταμόν καὶ λάβε λίθον καὶ θες ὑπὸ τοὺς πόδας σου καὶ στηθὶ ἐνδεδυμένη ἐν τῷ ὕδατι ἕως τοῦ τραχήλου, καὶ μὴ ἐξέλθῃ λόγος ἐκ τοῦ στόματός σου· ἀνάξιοι γάρ ἔσμεν καὶ τὰ χεῖλα ἡμῶν οὐκ ἔστι καθαρά.	6:1b tu autem surge et vade ad Tigris fluvium et tolle lapidem et sta super eum in aqua usque ad collum in altitudine fluminis. et non exiet sermo de ore tuo, quia indigni sumus rogare dominum, quia labia nostra immunda sunt de ligno inlicito et contradicto.	6.1b արդ՝ արի այսունտե, գնա դու ի Տիգրիս գետ. եւ առ քար մի եւ դիր ի ներքոյ ոտից քոց. եւ կաց դու ի ջուր անդ հանդերձաւ քո մինչեւ ցպարակոց քո. եւ մի ելցէ քան ի բերանոյ քամմէ արպաչել գնառաժ, քանզի անարժան անձամբք եւ պիղծ են շրթնսք մեր եւ չեն սուրբ, վասն յանցանացն զոր արարար ի դրախտին լուսեղն մեր ի ծառոյ անտի.	6:1b აწ შენ აღდეგ და მივედ მდინარესა ტიგრისისასა და მოიღე ქვაი ფერხთა ქუეშე შენთა და შთაღე წყალსა მას შინა და სამოსელი დაი-ფარენ ვიდრე ყელადმდე. და ვიდრე ილოცვიდ, ნუ გამოვალნ ხმაი პირობი შენით, რამეთუ არა ღირს ვართ აღებად პირთა ჩუენთა, რამეთუ ბაგენი ჩუენნი არაწმიდა არიან გარდასვითა მით მცნებათაითა ჭაპარისა მისგან სამოთხისა, რომლისა-იგი არა გვიბრძანა ღმერთმან,	35-37.6 и рече Адамъ къ мьнѣ · прииди въ рѣку, и поими камыкъ великъ и подложи подъ нощъ свои и вьниди въ водѣ, и одѣжди се водою яко свитою до вьне своеѣ и моли бога въ срьдци своемъ и да не изидеть рѣчь изъ оустъ твоихъ .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:9b [Rather let us repent for forty days so that God may have mercy on us and give to us better food than the animals. 29:10a I will do forty days of penitence whereas you shall do 34 days for you were not made on the sixth day when God made his creation.

29:10b [Arise and go to the Tigris river and take a stone and put it under your feet and stand there covered in the water up to your neck and let not a word come from your mouth for we are not worthy and our lips are unclean.]

6:1a Adam said to Eve: "You cannot do as much as I, but do as much so that you might be saved. For I will do forty days of fasting.

6:1b You, however, arise and go to the Tigris River and take a stone and stand upon it in the water up to your neck in the depth of the river. Let not a word go forth from your mouth since we are unworthy to ask of the Lord for our lips are unclean from the illicit and forbidden tree.

6:1a Adam said, "You cannot endure the same number of days as I, but do what I tell you and abide by [this] instruction."—Adam said, "I shall be (in penitence) for forty days, six days more than you, because you were created on the sixth day (of those upon which) he accepted his works.

6:1b Now, therefore, arise, go to the T[i]gris river and take a stone and place it under your feet and stand in the water up to your neck, in your clothes. Let no word of supplication to God escape your mouth, for we are unworthy of [soul] and our lips are impure and unclean, because of the transgressions which we committed in the Garden when we ate of the tree.

6:1a Adam replied and said to Eve, "You will not be able to add (anything to it). On the contrary, as many (days) as I will tell you, that many (days, you should) stay and do. And I will do penitence for forty days, and you, do penitence for thirty-four days. Leave me these six days, since were you not created upon the sixth day, when God completed the creation of all creatures?

6:1b Now, you, arise and go to the river Tigris; and put a stone under your feet and stay in the water and clothe yourself (with it) up to your neck. While you pray, let no sound come from your mouth, for we are not worthy to open our mouths, for our lips are impure because we transgressed the commandments, so as to eat from (the tree) of the Garden which God had forbidden us.

35-37.5 I said, 'My husband, you fast forty days, and I will fast forty-four days.'

35-37.6 And Adam said to me, 'Come to the river called Tigris, take a stone and place it under your feet, stand up in the water and cover yourself with water, as with a coat up to the neck, and pray to God in your heart, but no word should come out across your lips.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	6:2 Et sta in aqua fluminis XXXVII dies. ego autem faciam in aqua Jordanis XL dies. forsitan miserebitur nostri dominus deus.	6.2 լոխայ կացցես անդ ի մէջ ջրոյն մինչև սպաշխարհացն[ս] գատուր երեսուն եւ չորս. եւ ես լինիմ ի Յորդանան գետ մինչև գիտացուի եթէ ահա լուսւ մեզ Աստուած, եւ տացէ մեզ գերակուրն մեր:	6:2 არამელ დადუმენ, ხოლო წყალსა მას შინა ინანდი : ლ : ლდე ყოვლითა გულთა შენითა და მე ეგრეთვე ვყოიორდანესა მდინარესა შინა, ვიდრემდე არა ისმინოს ჩუენი ღმერთმან და მოგუცეს ჩუენ საზრდელი .	35-37.7 и азъ рѣхъ : госп одине, азъ възвоу къ богу въсѣмъ сръдцѣмъ моимъ : 35-37.8 и рече къ мнѣ Адамъ : велико съблуди себе . аще не видиши мене и въсѣ бѣлєгы моє, не изиди изъ рѣкы ни върѹи глаголомъ , да не пакы съблажнєна бѹдеши .
	7:1 Et ambulavit Eva ad Tigris flumen et fecit sicut dixit ei Adam.	7.1 Գնաց Եվայն հետև ի Տիգրիս եւ արար որպէս հրամայեաց նաւ Ադամ:	7:1 წავიდა ევა მდინარესა მას ტიგრისასა და ყო ეგრე, ვითარცა აძ-ცნო მას ადამ:
29:11a [Ἐπορεύθη δὲ Ἀδὰμ εἰς τὸν Ἰορδάνην ποταμὸν καὶ ἡ θριξὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ ἠπλοῦτο εὐχομένου αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι.	7:2 Similiter ambulavit Adam ad flumen Jordanis et stetit super lapidem usque ad collum in aqua.	7.2 եւ Ադամ (գնաց) ի Յորդանան. եւ հեր գլխոյ նորա մեղկեալ էր:	7:2 ხოლო ადამ დადგრა იორდანესა მდინარესა და თმანი თავისა მი- სისანი გარდაემატნეს.	35-37.9 и иде Адамъ къ Иорданѹ и въниде въ водоу иорданѣскою и погрѹзи се въсь въ водѣ и въсь власы главы своєє погрѹзи .
29:11b [καὶ ἔκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ λέγων σοι λέγω τῷ ὕδατι τοῦ Ἰορδάνου· Στήθι καὶ εὐχου ὁμοῦ καὶ πάντα τὰ θηρία καὶ πάντα τὰ πετεινὰ καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔρπε- τὰ ἐν τῇ γῇ καὶ θαλάσσῃ.	8:1 Et dixit Adam: tibi dico, aqua Jordanis, condole mihi et segrega mihi omnia natantia, quae in te sunt et circumdant me ac lugeant pariter mecum.	8.1 եւ աղաչեալ ասէր. Բեզ ասեմ Զուրբ Յորդանանու վրտակից լիրութ ինձ եւ ժողովեալ գամենայն կայտառ[ս] որ ի քեզ եւ, եւ շրջեցին գինեւ եւ լացցեն զիս:	8:1 და თქუა ადამ: " შენ გეტყუ, იორდანე, იჭირვოლე ჩემ თანავე და შე- კრიბენ ყოველივც, რომელნი არიან გარემოს შენსა პირელტყუნო, რაითა გარე- მოგადგვენ და მტირორიან მე,	35-37.10a молящѹ же се богу, молитвы въсылающѹ,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	6:2 Stand in the water of the river for thirty-seven days. I however, will do forty days in the water of the Jordan. Perhaps the Lord will have mercy on us."	6:2 Stand silent there in the middle of the water until [you] have done penitence for thirty-four days, and I will be in the Jordan river, until we learn that, behold, God has hearkened to us and will give us our food."	6:2 Rather, be silent, only do penitence in the water for thirty-four days with all your heart and I will do the same in the Jordan river, until God hearkens and gives us food."	35-37.7 And I said, 'My husband, I will call out to God with my whole heart.' 35-37.8 And Adam said to me, 'Guard yourself carefully; if you don't see me and all my features, don't climb up out of the water, give no credence to words, so that you won't get into any more trouble.'
29:11a [Adam went to the Jordan river and the hair of his head was spread out as he prayed in the water.	7:1 Eve walked to the Tigris River and did just as Adam told her. 7:2 Likewise, Adam walked to the Jordan River and stood upon a rock up to his neck in the water.	7:1 Then Eve went to the Tigris and did as Adam had instructed her, 7:2 and Adam [went] to the Jordan. And the hair of his head was uncovered.	7:1 Eve went off to the Tigris river and she did as Adam had ordered her. 7:2 But, as for Adam, he remained in the Jordan river and the hair of his head spread out.	35-37.9 And Adam went to the Jordan and stood up in the water and immersed himself in water and also dampened the hair on his head.
29:11b [And he cried in a loud voice saying: "I say to the waters of the Jordan stand still and pray with me even all the beasts, all the birds, and all which creeps on the land and the sea."	8:1 Adam said: "I say to you, water of the Jordan, mourn with me and separate from me all swimming creatures which are in you. Let them surround me and mourn with me.	8:1 He prayed and said, "I say to you, waters of Jordan, be fellow sufferers for me and assemble all the moving thing<S> which are in you, and let them surround me and bewail me,	8:1 And Adam said, "I tell you, O Jordan, suffer with me and assemble all the animals which are around you, so that they (may come) to surround you and bewail me,	35-37.10a While he prayed to God and his prayers went up,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	8:2 Non se plangent, sed me, quia ipsi non peccaverunt, sed ego.	8.2 ոչ եթէ վասն ամձանց իւրեանց, այլ վասն իմ. զի ի նոցանէ ոչ արգել Աստուած զկերակուր իւրեանց զոր հրամայեաց Աստուած ի սկզբանէ, իսկ ես արգելալ ի կերակրոյն իմոյ եւ ի կենացս:	8:2 არა თუ მათთვის, არამედ ჩემთვის, რამეთუ მათ არა მთავლო ღმერთ-მან საძოვარი, რომელი მისცა ღმერთმან დასაბამითგან, ხოლო მე მოვაკლ- დი ცხოვრებისა ჩემისაგან და საზრდელისა.
29:11c /Καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι καὶ πάντα τὰ ποιήματα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐκύκλωσαν τὸν Ἀδὰμ ὥς τεῖχος κύκλω αὐτοῦ κλαίωντες καὶ προσευχόμενοι τῷ θεῷ ὑπὲρ τοῦ Ἀδὰμ ὅπως εἰσακου- σῇται αὐτοῦ ὁ θεός.	8:3 Statim omnia animantia venerunt et circumdederunt eum et aqua Jordanis stetit ab illa hora non agens cursum suum.	8.3 զայն իրրիւ ասաց Ադամ, ժողովեցան առ նա ամենայն կայստոր որ էին ի Յորդանան, եւ կացին շուրջ զնովա իրրիւ զպարիսպ. եւ դադարեցին ջուրք Յորդանանու ի ժամոյն յայնիկ, եւ զտեղի ադին ի գնացից իւրեանց: Ադամ աղաղակեաց առ Աստուած եւ մեկնեաց ի նոցանէ դասս վեց հարիւր ի ձայն աղաչանաց կարդալ առ Աստուած զամենայն ասորս:	8:3 ესე რა თქვა აღამ ტირილითა მწირითა, შეკრბეს ყოველნი საცხო-ვარნი მის თანა და გარე- მოადგეს მას ვითარცა ზღუდენი. მას უამსა, ვი- თარცა წყალმან იორდანემან დააცალა სლვაი თვისი, მაშინ აღუტევა აღამ ხმაი ღმრთისა მიმართ და იქცია მუხლნი ხმისა თვისისაი ექუსად მსგავსად ხმისა მის ყოველთა ანგელოზთაისა ყოველსა უამსა.	35-37.10b и тѣ сьнидоше сѣ аггели и всѣ вещи летеще, звѣриѣ и скоти, и всѣ пѣтице перьнатыѣ, ставшѣ яко и стѣна о кръсть Адама, молеще сѣ къ богу за Адама.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:11c [And all the angels and all things made by God circled Adam like a wall around him and cried while praying to God on behalf of Adam so that God might hearken to him.

8:2 Let them not lament for themselves, but for me, for they have not sinned, but I."

8:3 Immediately, all living things came and surrounded him and the water of the Jordan stood from that hour not flowing in its course.

8:2 not for their own sakes, but for mine. Because God did not withhold their food from them, which God appointed from the beginning, but I have been withheld from my food and from life."

8:3 When Adam said that, all moving things which were in the Jordan gathered to him and stood around him like a wall. And the waters of the Jordan stopped at that time and became stationary from their flow. Adam cried to God and he set apart six hundred orders of them to call to God in prayers all the days.

8:2 not for their own sakes, but for me. Because God did not withhold their fodder from them, which God gave them from the beginning, but I have been withheld from my means of life and from my food."

8:3 When Adam had said that with bitter tears, all the cattle gathered close to him and stood around him like walls. At the moment when the water (of) the Jordan had restrained its flow, then Adam raised his voice towards God and he varied his tone of voice six times, like the voices of all the angels in all times.

35-37.10b the angels assembled themselves and every flying creature, the wild and the domestic and every winged bird, and they stood as a wall around Adam, praying to God for him.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:12a Ἰ'Ο δὲ διάβολος μὴ εὐρῶν τόπον εἰς τὸν Ἀδάμ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὸν Τίγγριν ποταμὸν πρὸς με· καὶ λαβὼν στήμα ἀγγέλου ἔστη ἐνώπιόν μου	9:1 Et transierunt dies XVIII. tunc iratus est Satanas et transfiguravit se in claritatem angelorum et abiit ad Tigrem flumen ad Evam.	9.1 Թորժամ կատարեցան ասորք ութ եւ տասն յայդ նոցա. Սատանայ ի ձեւ թրորէի ի դարդ վայելչութեան եւ գնաց ի Տիգրիս գետ խաբէլ գետ.	9:1 ოდეს აღესრულნეს დღენი იგი ათორმეტნი ტირილსა მას შინა მისსა შეძრწუნდა ეშმაკი და იქცია ხატი მისი და სამოსელი მისი სიცრუეითა მით ხელოვნებისა მისისათა და მივიდა იგი ევასთანა მდინარესა მას ტიგრისასასა და ღადგა იგი გარეშე.	38-39.1a Дия воль прииде къ мнѣ аггелскимъ образомъ и свѣтлостимъ,
29:12b [κλαίων καὶ τὰ δάκρυα αὐτοῦ ἔρρεεν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. καὶ λέγει μοι· ἔξελθε ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος καὶ παῦσαι τοῦ κλαυθμοῦ	9:2 Et invenit eam flentem. et ipse diabolus quasi condolens ei coepit flere et dixit ad eam: egredere de flumine [II,III] et de cetero non plores. iam cessa de tristitia et gemitu. quid sollicita es tu et Adam vir tuus?	9.2 եւ արտասուք նորայ իցանէին ի վերայ դարդու նորայ միևնույն իրկիր: եւ ասէ Սատանայ ցեաւ. ել ի ջրոյ այդի եւ հանգիր զի լուսւ Աստուած ապաշխարութեան ձեր. քեզ եւ Ադամայ արն քո.	9:2 და ტირიდა და დაწოთბდა საცრუისა ცრემლთა მისთა ზედა სამოსელსა მისსა და სამოსლით ქუეყნად. და ჰრქუა ევას: "გამოვედ მაგიერ წყლით და დასცხერ ჯირთა მაგათგან, რამეთუ ისმინა ღმერთმან სინანუ-ლი შენი და აღამის, კმრისა შენისა".	38-39.1b идеще стояхъ въ водѣ, слъзы великы ронещи по земли, и глагола къ мнѣ · изиди къво изъ воды,
29:12c ἤκουσε γὰρ ὁ θεὸς τῆς δεήσεώς σου ὅτι καὶ ἡμεῖς οἱ ἄγγελοι καὶ πάντα τὰ ποιήματα αὐτοῦ παρεκαλέσαμεν τὸν θεὸν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν.	9:3 Audivit dominus deus gemitum vestrum et suscepit penitentiam vestram; et nos omnes angeli rogavimus pro vobis deprecantes dominum,	9.3 վասն զի մեք արաչեցար գնառուած.	9:3 და ჩვენცა ვევედრებოთ ურვათა თქუენთათვის, რომელი ვიხილეთ.	38-39.2a услыша богъ молитву твою, и насъ аггелы услыша господъ, молящихъ се за васъ,
	9:4 et misit me, ut educerem vos de aqua et darem vobis alimentum, quod habuistis in paradiso et pro quo planxistis.	9.4 եւ Աստուած առաքեաց զիս) հանել զձեզ այսի եւ տալ ձեզ զկերակուրն ձեր վասն որոյ ապաշխարեցէք:	9:4 და მოძავლინა მე ღმერთმან გამოყვანებად თქუენდა და მიცემად საზრდელი, რომლისათვისცა ინანიო.	38-39.2b и посылა мене господъ къ тебѣ, да изидеши отъ воды сея .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:12a [But the Devil, not finding a place with respect to Adam, came to the Tigris river to me. And assuming the form of an angel he stood before me]	9:1 Eighteen days passed. Then Satan grew angry and transfigured himself into the brilliance of an angel and went off to the Tigris River to Eve.	9:1 When eighteen days of their weeping were completed, then Satan took on the form of a Cherub with splendid attire, and went to the Tigris river to deceive Eve.	9:1 When the twelve days of his weeping were completed, the Devil trembled and changed his shape and his clothes by his artful deceit. He drew close to Eve, on the Tigris river, and stood beside the bank.	38-39.1a The Devil came to me in the form and radiance of an angel,
29:12b [weeping and his tears flowed upon the ground. And he said to me, "Come forth from the water and cease your crying, for God has heard your request]	9:2 He found her weeping, and then, the Devil himself, as if mourning with her began to weep and said to her: "Come out of the water [II,III+ and rest] II,III and weep no longer. Cease now from your sadness and lamenting. Why are you uneasy, you and your husband Adam? The Lord God has heard your lamenting and accepted your penitence.	9:2 Her tears were falling on her attire, down to the ground. Satan said to Eve, "Come forth from the water and rest, for God has hearkened to your penitence, to you and Adam your husband,	9:2 He was weeping and had his false tears dripping down on his garment and from his garment down to the ground. Then he told Eve, "Come out of that water (where you are) and stop your tribulations, for God has hearkened to your penitence, to you and to Adam, your husband.	38-39.1b there where I stood in the water, letting passionate tears fall to the ground, he said to me, "Come forth, Eve, out of the water.
29:12c [because even we, the angels, and all things made by him, have beseeched God on your behalf.]	9:3 All of us angels have pleaded for you, praying to the Lord.	9:3 because we beseeched God.	9:3 Moreover, we too have prayed because of your misfortunes which we have seen.	38-39.2a God has heard your prayer and also we angels, we who prayed for you,
	9:4 And he sent me to lead you forth from the water and to give you the nourishment which you had in the Garden and for which you have grieved.	9:4 And God sent [me] to lead you forth from there and to give you your food, on account of which you repented.	9:4 Thus God sent me to have you (pl.) come forth and to give you the food on account of which you repented.	38-39.2b and the Lord has sent me to you, that you should emerge from this water.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:13 [Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν δεύτερον ἠπάτησέν με ὁ ἐχθρὸς· καὶ ἐξέβην ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕδατος.]	9:5 Nunc ergo egredere de aqua et perducam vos in locum, ubi paratus est victus vester.	9.5 Քանզի այժմ առ Ադամ գնացի եւ նա առաքեաց զիս առ քեզ եւ ասէ. Գնա կոչեա զկիս իմ որդեակ, եւ յայժմ եկ գնասցուք առ Ադամ եւ տարայց զձեզ ի տեղին ուր կերակուր ձեր իցէ:	9:5 აწ აღმოვხედ მაგვიერ, რამეთუ მისრულ ვარ აღამისა და მოძავლინა და მრქუა მე: "მივედ და ჟთხარ ცოლსა ჩემსა ევას და მოიყვანე იგი ჩემდა". აწ მოვედ და მოიყვანო შენ აღამისა, აღგილსა მას, სადა არს იგი და სადა- ცა-იგი არს საზრდელი თქუენი".
	10:1 Haec audiens autem Eva credidit et exivit de aqua fluminis et caro eius erat sicut herba de frigore aquae.	10.1 եւ երեսი ხა ի ջրոյ անտի եւ եղև մարմինք նորա իբրև: զիսու ցամաքեալ զի ի ջրոյն ալկակերպեալ էին մարմինք նորա, բայց պատկեր փառաց նորա կայր պայծառ.	10:1 და აღმოვხვდა ევა მიერ წყლით და იყვნეს ხორცნი მისნი ვითარცა მხალნი დაპვნარ განთოშვითა წყლისაითა. გარდაქცეულ იყო ყოველი იგი ხატო ქმნულკეთილობისა მისისაი.	38-39.3 азъ же познахъ, яко дияволъ ксть и ничесоже ему не отвѣцахъ .
	10:2 Et cum egressa esset cecidit in terram et erexit eam diabolus et perduxit eam ad Adam.	10.2 (իբրեւ եւ նա ի ջրոյ անտի) եւ անկեալ եկաց ի վերայ իրկրի մեծաւ աշխատութեամբ ատուր երկուս. զի ամենեւին չէր կարող շարժիլ ի տեղողէն. եւ ասպա յարեաւ. եւ Սատանայ եւ առաջնորդեաց նմա ուր եւ Ադամ էր:	10:2 და ოდეს აღმოვხდა იგი მიერ წყლით, დაეცა პირსა ზელა ქუეყანისა- სა მრაველითა მით უძლურებითა და იღვა იგი შეუძრველად ორ დღე. და შემდგომად ორისა დღისა აღდგა და მოუძღვა მას ეშმაკი, სადაცა იყო აღამ.	38-39.4 И по .м. дѣнии гредущу Адаму отъ Иордана и обрѣте слѣды дияволовъ и ѿбоя се зѣло, ꙗко како прѣвѣстилъ мѣ ксть .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

29:13 [And when he said these things, the enemy deceived me a second time. And I came out of the water.]

9:5 Now, therefore, come out of the water and I will lead you to the place where your food is prepared."

10:1 Hearing this, Eve believed him and went out of the water of the river. Her flesh was like grass from the waters coldness.

10:2 When she had come out, she fell to the ground, but the Devil stood her up and led her to Adam.

9:5 Since just now I went to Adam and he sent me to you and said, 'Go, son, summon my wife,' now come, let us go to Adam and I will lead you to the place where your food is."

10:1. When Eve came forth from the water, her flesh was like withered grass, for her flesh had been changed from the water, but the form of her glory remained brilliant.

10:2 [When she came forth from the water] she fell down and remained upon the ground in great distress for two days, for she was quite unable to move from the spot. Then she arose and Satan also led her to where Adam was.

9:5 Now, come up from there, for I have gone to Adam and he sent me and told me, 'Go and speak with Eve, my spouse; bring her back to me.' Come, now, and I will lead you to Adam, to the place where he is and where your food also is."

10:1 And Eve came up out of the water and her flesh was withered like rotten vegetables because of the coldness of the water. All the form of her beauty had been destroyed.

10:2 And when she had come up out of the water, she fell on the face of the earth in great weakness and remained lying (on the ground) without moving for two days. And after two days she arose and the Devil led her to where Adam was.

38-39.3 And I discerned that he was the Devil, and answered him nothing at all.

38-39.4 But when after forty days, Adam emerged from the Jordan, he noticed the footprints of the Devil and was very afraid lest the Devil had duped me.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

10:3 Cum autem vidisset eam Adam et diabolum cum ea, exclamavit cum fletu dicens: O Eva, O Eva, ubi est opus penitentiae tuae? quomodo iterum seducta es ab adversario nostro, per quem alienati sumus de habitatione paradisi et laetitia spiritali.

11:1 Haec cum audisset Eva cognovit quod diabolus suavit exire de flumine et cecidit super faciem suam in terram et duplicatus est dolor et gemitus et planctus ab ea.

11:2 Et exclamavit dicens: ve tibi, diabole, quid nos expugnas gratis? quid tibi apud nos? aut quid tibi fecimus, quoniam dolose nos persequeris? aut quid pertinet ad nos malitia tua?

10.3 Եւ իբրեւ հոնա Ադամ զՍատանայ եւ զՅաւ զի գալլո զհետ Նորա, ելաց լալին մեծ եւ արարականց մեծ բարբարոսի եւ ասէ ցնա. Ո՛ր է պատուին իմ ասպաշխարոյթնան զոր հաւո քեզ. զիս՝ որ մորորեցար դու զհետ դորա գալ, որով աստարացար ի բնակութենէ մերմէ:

11.1 Զայս իբրեւ լուսն եւ գիտաց ինէ Սատանայ է որ խաբէրեաց զնա, անկաւ ատաքի Ադամայ. այնուհետեւ կրկին ցար Ադամայ յանդէս իբրեւ հոնա զսատանայան կնոջ իւրոյ. զի լքաւ եւ անկաւ իբրեւ գմեռեալ.

11.2 տրտմեցաւ եւ արարականց հեծութեամբ մեծաւ եւ ասէ ցՍատանայ. զիս՝ որ արդափ մարտ ինքր ընդ մեզ, կամ զի՛նչ մեղանք են մեր առ քեզ. զի հաներ զմեզ ի տեղողէն մերմէ.

10:3 და ვითარცა იხილა ადამიან ევას, ვითარ-იგი მისდევდა ეშმაკსა მას, იწყო ტირილითა მწარითა და ხმა-ყო ხმითა მაღლითა და ჰრქუა: " სადა არიან მცნებანი სინანულუსანი, რომელი გამცენ, ვითარ კჳლად შესცეთ მაგის მიერ, რომლისაგანცა უცხო ვართ საყოფელთაგან ჩუენთა".

11:1 ესე რა ესმა ევას, რამეთუ ეშმაკი არს, რომელმანცა აცთუნა იგი, და-ვარდა იგი წინაშე მისსა, ხოლო აღამს ორ წილ ექმნა საღმრთაი იგი ევას-სი, რამეთუ ხედვიდა იგი მას დავრდომილსა კუეყანასა ზედა ვითარცა მკუ-ღარსა.

11:2 შეჭუვნა და თქუა ღიღითა კუნესითა, ხმა-ყო: " ვაი შენდა, მბრძოლსა მაგას ჩუენთასა, რაი ბოროტი გიყავთ შენ, რამეთუ შენითა შეტყუვილითა იყო გამობღაი ჩუენი სამოთხით. უკუეთუ ჩუენ განგაგდეთ შენდა ჩუენდა მომართ არს მღუწვანი შენი?"

38-39.5 егда же видѣ мене въ водѣ стоѣщу, възрѣдова се велико, и поумѣ мене и изведе ме изъ воды.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

10:3 When Adam saw her and the Devil with her, he cried out with tears, saying: "O Eve, O Eve, where is the work of your penitence? How have you again been seduced by our adversary, through whom we were alienated from the dwelling of the Garden and spiritual happiness?"

11:1 When Eve heard this, she knew that it was the Devil who had persuaded her to go out from the river and she fell on her face on the ground and her grief was double, as was her wailing and lamentation.

11:2 He cried out, saying: "Woe to you, Devil. For what reason do you fight against us? What concern do you have with us? What have we done to you that you should persecute us so grievously? Why does your malice extend to us?"

10:3 When Adam saw Satan and Eve who was following him, he wept loudly and called out with a great voice and said to Eve, "Where is my command of repentance, which I gave you? How did you go astray, to follow him by whom we were alienated from our dwelling?"

11:1 When Eve heard this, she knew that he who deceived her was Satan; she fell down before Adam. From that time Adam's distress increased twofold when he saw the sufferings of his wife, for she was overcome and fell like one dead.

11:2 He was sad and called out great lamentation and said to Satan, "Why have you engaged in such a great conflict with us? What are our sins against you, that you have brought us out of our place?"

10:3 And as soon as Adam saw Eve (and) how she was following the Devil, he started to weep with burning tears and called out with a great voice and told her, "Where are the commands of repentance which I gave you? How have you been deceived again by him, because of whom we are aliens to our dwellings?"

11:1 When Eve heard that it was the Devil who had deceived her, she fell down before him and Adam's distress for Eve increased twofold for he saw her lying on the earth like one dead.

11:2 He was sad and called out with great groaning, "Woe to you who fight against us! What evil have we done to you? For it is because of your calumnies that we went out from the Garden. Is it because we have caused you to be expelled that you are angry against us?"

38-39.5 But when he saw me standing in the water, he was very happy, and he took me and led me out of the water."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	11:3 Numquid nos abstulimus gloriam tuam et fecimus te sine honore esse? quid persequeris nos, inimice, usque ad mortem impie et invidiose?	11.3 մի թէ գլխաւոյն քո հանաք մեք ի քէն. մի թէ մեղքեցաք գթեզ լինել մեզ ստացուածս. գի մարտնչիս լինդ մեզ ի տարապարտուց:	11:3 ანუ ჩუენ მიერ მოგვძრცუა დიდებაი შენი? ანუ სადამდე ჩუენითა შექმნითა ეგრეთ ნაკლულევან ხარ, ანუ ჩუენ ხოლო ვართ დაბადებულნი ღმრთისანი, რამეთუ ჩუენ გუბრძავთ?

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	11:3 Did we ever take your glory from you or cause you to be without honor? Why do you persecute us, O enemy, impiously and jealously unto death?"	11:3 Did we take your glory from you? Did we reject you from being our possession, that you fight against us unnecessarily?"	11:3 Or is it because of us that you were despoiled of your glory? Or is it, in some way, by our action that you are in such deficiency? Or are we the only creatures of God that you fight against us alone?"

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

12:1 Et ingemescens diabolus dixit: O Adam, tota inimicitia mea et invidia et dolor ad te est, quoniam propter te expulsus sum et alienatus de gloria mea, quam habui in caelis in medio angelorum, et propter te eiectus sum in terram.	12.1 Եյաց եւ Սատանայ լալին մեծ եւ ասէ ցնդամ. Ամենայն ժպրուհոյքինք իմ եւ սրտմոլեքինք վասն քո եղես. զի վասն քո եյայ եւ ի բնակոյթնէ իմէ, եւ վասն քո աստարացայ եւ յաթոռոյ ճիւղոյքիցն, որ տարածեալ հոլասի ոմէին ինձ. վասն քո կոխեցին ոտք իմ զերկիր:	12:1 ტირილად იწყო ეშმაკმან ტირილითა იძულებისათა, და ჰრქუა ადამს ეშმაკმან: "ჰოი ადამ, ყოველივე ანგარებაი და ძროღვადი, და ყოველი-ვე ჯუვილი გულისა ჩემისაი შენდა მოძარბო არს, რამეთუ შენ გამო გამოვარი მე საყოფელთაგან ჩემთა, შენ გამო უცხო ვიქმენ მე საყდრისაგან ჩემისა. ქერობინთაგან უფრო ფრთენი ჩემნი ზედა გარდამატებულ იყვენეს და დაფარულ ვიყავ მე მათ ქუეშე, აწ ვლენან ფერხნი ჩემნი ქუეყანასა ზედა, რომელ არა მრწმენა".
12:2 Respondit Adam: quid tibi feci? 12:3 Aut quae est culpa mea in te? cum non sis a nobis nocitus nec laesus, quid nos persequeris? 13:1 Respondit diabolus: Adam, tu quid dicis mihi? propter tuam causam projectus sum inde.	12.2 Պատասխանի ხო Աდამ եւ ասէ ցნայ. 12.3 զի՞նչ [(մեղք)] ես մեր առ քեզ զի զայս ամենայն պարսբեր ընդ մեզ: 13.1 Պատասխանի հո Սատանայ եւ ասէ. Դու ինձ ինչ ոչ պարսբեր, բայց ես վասն քո եկի յայդադի, յորում ատոր դու ստեղծար. զի ես այն ար եկի:	12:2 მიუგო ადამ ეშმაკსა და ჰრქუა: "რომელი არს ბრალი ჰემი, რომლი-თა-ეცა გიყავ შენ?" 12:3 რომელი არს ბრალი ჰემი, რომლი-თა-ეცა გიყავ შენ?" 13:1 მიუგო ეშმაკმან და ჰრქუა: "შენ არაი მიყავ მე, არამედ შენ გამო გამოვარი მე ქუეყნად.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	12:1 Groaning, the Devil said: "O Adam, all my enmity, jealousy, and resentment is towards you, since on account of you I was expelled and alienated from my glory, which I had in heaven in the midst of the angels. On account of you I was cast out upon the earth."	12:1 Satan also wept loudly and said to Adam. "All my arrogance and sorrow came to pass because of you; for, because of you I went forth from my dwelling; and because of you I was alienated from the throne of the Cherubim who, having spread out a shelter, used to enclose me; because of you my feet have trodden the earth."	12:1 The Devil began to cry with forced tears and the Devil told Adam, "O Adam, all the greed and the anger and all the grief of my heart are directed against you because (it was) through you that I fell from my dwellings; (it was) by you that I was alienated from my own throne. My wings were more numerous than those of the Cherubim, and I concealed myself under them. Because of you, now my feet walk on the earth, which I would never have believed."
	12:2 Adam answered: "What have I done to you?"	12:2 Adam replied and said to him,	12:2 Adam replied to the Devil and told him,
	12:3 What fault do I have against you? Since you have not been harmed nor injured by us, why do you persecute us?"	12:3 "What are our [[sins]] against you, that you did all this to us?"	12:3 "What is my fault, by which I have done all that to you?"
	13:1 The Devil answered: "Adam what are you saying to me? On account of you I was cast out from heaven."	13:1 Satan replied and said, "You did nothing to me, but I came to this measure because of you, on the day on which you were created, for I went forth on that day."	13:1 The Devil replied to him and told him, "You did nothing to me, but it is because of you that I have fallen upon the earth."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

13:2 Quando tu plasmatus es, ego proiectus sum a facie dei et foras a societate angelo-rum missus sum.
quando insufflavit deus spiritum vitae in te et factus est vultus et similitudo tua ad imagi-nem dei, et adduxit te Michahel et fecit te adorare in conspectu dei, et dixit dominus deus: ecce Adam, feci te ad imaginem et simil-itudinem nostram.

14:1 Et egressus
Michahel vocavit omnes angelos dicens: adorate imagi-nem domini dei, sicut praecepit
dominus deus.

14:2 Et ipse
Michahel primus adoravit, et vocavit me et dixit: adora imaginem dei Jehova.

13.2 Իբրեւ փշեաց
Աստուած զողին իւր ի ձեզ ամեր դու զնմանութիւն պատկերի տորա.
եկն այնուհետեւ
Միքայէլ եւ եւր քեզ երկիր պազանել ստացի Աստուծոյ:
եւ ասէ Աստուած ցՄիքայէլ. Ահա, արարի զԱդամ ի նմանութիւն պատկերի իմոյս:

14.1 Յայնժամ
Միքայէլ կոչեաց զամենայն հրեշտակսն, եւ ասէ ցնոսա Աստուած. եկալք երկիր պազէք Աստուծոյ զոր արարի:

14.2 Եպազ երկիր
նախ Միքայէլ.
կոչեաց զիս եւ
ասէ. Երկիր պազ եւ դու Ադամայ:

13:2 რომელსაცა
დღესა შეიქმენ შენ, მასცა დღესა გამოვარდი პირისა-გან ღმერთისა, რამეთუ ოდეს შთაგებრა შენ პირსა შენსა სული ღმერთმან, გაქუნდა შენ ხატო და მსგავსებაი ღმერთებისაი.
და მოვიდა მიქაელ, წარ-მოგადგინა შენ და თაყუანისგაცემინა შენ ღმერთისა და ჰრქუა ღმერთმან მიქაელს: " შევქმენ აღამ მსგავსად ხატისა და ღმერთებისა ჩემისა .
14:1 მაშინ მოვიდა მიქაელ და მოუწოდა ყოველთა ერთა ანგელოზთასა და ჰრქუა მათ : " თაყუანის-ეცით მსგავსსა და ხატსა ღმრთეებისასა " .
14:2 და ოდეს მოუწოდა მიქაელ და ყოველთა თაყუანის-გცეს შენ, და ძეცა მომიწოდა,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

13:2 When you were formed, I was cast out from the face of God and was sent forth from the company of the angels. When God blew into you the breath of life and your countenance and likeness were made in the image of God, Michael led you and made you worship in the sight of God. The Lord God then said: 'Behold, Adam, I have made you in our image and likeness.'

14:1 Having gone forth Michael called all the angels saying: 'Worship the image of the Lord God, just as the Lord God has commanded.'

14:2 Michael himself worshipped first then he called me and said: 'Worship the image of God Jehovah.'

13:2 When God breathed his spirit into you, you received the likeness of his image. Thereupon, Michael came and made you bow down before God. God said to Michael, 'Behold I have made Adam in the likeness of my image.'

14:1 Then Michael summoned all the angels, and God said to them, 'Come, bow down to god whom I made.'

14:2 Michael bowed first. He called me and said. 'You too, bow down to Adam.'

13:2 The very day when you were created, on that day I fell from before the face of God, because when God breathed a spirit onto your face, you had the image and likeness of divinity. And Michael came; he presented you and made you bow down before God. And God told Michael, 'I have created Adam according to (my) image and my divinity.'

14:1 Then Michael came; he summoned all the troops of angels and told them, 'Bow down before the likeness and the image of the divinity.'

14:2 And then, when Michael summoned them and all had bowed down to you, he summoned me also.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

14:3 Et respondi ego: non habeo ego adorare Adam. et cum compelleret me Michabel adorare, dixi ad eum: quid me compellis? non adorabo deteriorem et posteriorem meum. in creatura illius prius sum.
antequam ille fieret, ego iam factus eram. ille me
debet adorare.

15:1 Hoc audientes ceteri qui sub me erant angeli noluerunt adorare eum.

15:2 Et ait
Michabel: adora imaginem dei. si autem non adorave-ris, irascetur tibi
dominus deus.

15:3 Et ego dixi:
si irascitur mihi, ponam sedem
meam super sidera caeli et ero similis altissimo.

16:1 Et iratus est mihi dominus deus et misit me cum angelis meis foras
de gloria nostra, et per tuam causam in hunc mundum expuli sumus de habitationibus nostris et projecti sumus in terram.

14.3 Ասեմ եւ ես. ի բայ զնա դու Միքայէլ. ոչ պազան(ե)մ ես [երկիր] յանտոյդ իմոյ. զի առաջ ես եմ, զի ոչ արժան է [ինձ] դնա երկիր պազանեի:

15.1 Լուսն եւ [այլ] հրեշտակքն որ ընդ իս էին եւ հառոյ թուեցաւ բանք իմ եւ ոչ պազին քեզ երկրպագութիւն Ադամ:

16.1 Բարկացաւ
այնուհետեւ Աստուած ի վերայ իմ, եւ հրամայեաց հանել զմեզ ի բնակութենէն մերմէ եւ ընկենույ երկիր զիս եւ զհրեշտակս իմ որ ընդ իս հասանեցան, եւ դու էիր անդրէն ի դրախտին:

14:3 Լա թը զարկիւ.՝ գանձե՞տորդ ի՞նքն, ռա՞մեղ տմբե՞քմեցես ի՞նքն ա՞րա տապտանիս - ցեցե՞մ, ռա՞մեղ տմբե՞մ մա՞ցիս թը լա մա՞ցիս լուսն ի՞նքն տապտանիս - ցե՞մա՞ր՝.

15:1 Եւ-լա Եսմ
սեղտա անցելո՞ւտ քշտա լա՞ստ լա՞ստ լա՞ստ սո՞ւրբ Ես ի՞նքն լա՞րա տապտանի-ցեցե՞ թըն.

16:1 Ժամ գնորհե՞ն լմբոտի հղե՞ն թը լա տմբանա գարձա՞մեղ ի՞նքն լա՞ մա՞ցի քղեցնա՞լ սապտա՞լ հղե՞ն, եղո՞ւ թըն ծր՞ն պո՞ղ սա՞մոտե՞ս մա՞ն.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

14:3 I answered: 'I do not have it within me to worship Adam.' When Michael compelled me to worship, I said to him: 'Why do you compel me? I will not worship him who is lower and later than me. I am prior to that creature. Before he was made, I had already been made. He ought to worship me.'

15:1 Hearing this, other angels who were under me were unwilling to worship him.

15:2 Michael said: 'Worship the image of God. If you do not worship, the Lord God will grow angry with you.'

15:3 I said: 'If he grows angry with me, I will place my seat above the stars of heaven and I will be like the Most High.'

16:1 Then the Lord God grew angry with me and sent me forth with my angels from our glory. On account of you we were expelled from our dwelling into this world and cast out upon the earth.

14:3 I said, 'Go away, Michael! I shall not bow [down] to him who is posterior to me, for I am former. Why is it proper [for me] to bow down to him?'

15:1 The other angels, too, who were with me, heard this, and my words seemed pleasing to them and they did not prostrate themselves to you, Adam.

16:1 Thereupon, God became angry with me and commanded to expel us from our dwelling and to cast me and my angels, who were in agreement with me, to the earth; and you were at the same time in the Garden.

14:3 And I told him, 'Go away from me, for I shall not bow down to him who is younger than me; indeed, I was master before him and it is proper for him to bow down to me.'

15:1 When the six classes of other angels heard that, then my speech pleased them and they did not bow down to you.

16:1 Then God became angry with us and ordered us, them and me, to be cast down from our dwellings to the earth. As for you, he ordered you to dwell in the Garden.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

16:2 Et statim facti sumus in dolore, quoniam expoliati sumus tanta gloria, et te in tanta laetitia delictiarum videre dolebamus.

16:3 Et dolo circumveniebam mulierem tuam et feci te expelli per eam de delictis laetitiae tuae, sicut ego expulsus sum de gloria mea.

17:1 Haec audiens Adam a diabolo exclamavit cum magno fletu et dixit: domine deus meus, in manibus tuis est vita mea. fac ut iste adversarius meus longe sit a me, qui quaerit animam meam perdere, et da mihi gloriam eius, quam ipse perdidit.

17:2 Et statim non apparuit diabolus ei.

17:3 Adam vero perseveravit XL diebus stans in poenitentia in aqua Jordanis.

16.2 *Իբրիս
գիտացի եթէ վասն քո ելի ի քնակութենէ լուսոյն եւ եղէ ի վաստակս եւ ի ցասս.*

16.3 յակնժամ պատրաստեցի քեզ որովայն զի սատարացուցի(ց) զքեզ լուրսխութենէ քումնէ, որպէս եւ ես վասն քո սատարացայ:

17.1 զայս իբրիս լուսս Ադամ ասէ առ Տէր. (Տէր անձն իմ ի ձեռն քո). ի բաց արա լիեն զքէնամի իմ որ կամի մուրհեցուցանել զիս որ ի խնդիրս եմ եղեալ լուսոյն զոր կորուսի:

17.2 *Ի ժամոս
այնիկ շիրա Սատանայ ի նմանէ.*

17.3 *եւ Ադամ այնուհետեւ եկաց ի ջուրս սպաշխարութեան.
եւ սա լքեալ եկաց ի վերայ երկրի անկեալ ատուրս երիս իբրիս զմեռեալ. եւ ապա յնտ երից ատուրց յարեաւ յերկրէ.*

16:2 ოდეს გულისხმა-ვყავ, რამეთუ შენ ძლით გარდამოვარდი, და მე ვიყავ ჭირსა შინა და შენ განსუენებასა, 16:3 და
მოგინადირე, რაითა უცხო გქმნა შენცა სამოთხისა მისგან სა-შუებელისაისა, ვითარცა მე უცხო ვიქმენ შენითა.

17:1 ესე რა ესმა ადამს, ღაღადყო ხმითა მარღოთა და თქუა: "უფალო, ცხოვრებაი ჩემი ხელთა შენთა არს, განმაშორე ჭკმგან მტერი ესე, რომელსა უნებს ცოტუნებაი ჩემი და რომელი ეძიებს წარწყმედასა ნათესავისა ჩემი- სასა, რომლისაგან წარწყმედილ არს ევა".

17:2 მას უამსა უჩინო იქმნა ბელიარი.

17:3 ხოლო ადამ დადგრა წყალსა მას შინა და ინანდა, ხოლო ევა დავრდომილ იყო ქუეყანასა ზედა ვითარცა მკუდარი. და შემდგომად აღდგა იგი ქუეყანიით

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	16:2 Immediately we were in grief, since we had been despoiled of so much glory, and we grieved to see you in such a great happiness of delights. 16:3 By a trick I cheated your wife and caused you to be expelled through her from the delights of your happiness, just as I had been expelled from my glory." 17:1 Hearing this, Adam cried out with a great shout because of the Devil, and said: "O Lord my God, in your hands is my life. Make this adversary of mine be far from me, who seeks to ruin my soul. Give me his glory which he himself lost." 17:2 Immediately the Devil no longer appeared to him. 17:3 Adam truly persevered for forty days standing in penitence in the waters of the Jordan.	16:2 When I realized that because of you I had gone forth from the dwelling of light and was in sorrows and pains, 16:3 then I prepared a trap for you, so that I [might] alienate you from your happiness just as I, too, had been alienated because of you.' 17:1. When Adam heard this, he said to the Lord, "[Lord, my soul is in your hand.] Make this enemy of mine distant from me, who desires to lead me astray, I who am searching for the light that I have lost." 17:2 At that time Satan passed away from him. 17:3 Adam stood from then on in the waters of repentance, and Eve remained fallen upon the ground for three days, like one dead. Then, after three days, she arose from the earth,	16:2 When I had realized that I had fallen by your power, that I was in distress and you were in rest, 16:3 then I aimed at hunting you so that I might alienate you from the Garden of delights, just as I had been alienated because of you." 17:1 When Adam heard that, he cried in a loud voice and said, "Lord, my life is in your hands. Make this enemy distant from me, who desires to lead me astray and seeks to destroy my race. It is by him that Eve has been lost." 17:2 At that moment, Beliar became invisible. 17:3 As for Adam, he remained in the water and did penitence. But Eve had fallen upon the ground like one dead. Then she stood up from the ground.
--	--	---	---	--

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	18:1 Et dixit Eva ad Adam: vive tu, domine mi. tibi concessa est vita, quoniam tu nec primam nec secundam praevaricationem fecisti, sed ego praevaricata et seducta sum, quia non custodivi mandatum dei. et nunc separa me a lumine vitae istius, et vadam ad occasum solis et ero ibi usque dum moriar.	18.1 ևստ ցեղամ. Դու ասպարտ ես յառաջին յանցանացն եւ երկրորդսն. բայց միայն ինձ յողմեաց Սատանայ ի պատճառ բանին Աստուծոյ եւ քո: Եւ ասէ դարձեալ եւս ցեղամ. Ահա երթամ ես ի մոտս արեւու եւ լինիմ անդ եւ կերակուրիմ խոտ մինչեւ մեռանիմ. զի պատճառն անարժան եմ կերակուրցն կենդանութեան:	18:1 და ჰრქუა ადამს: "ცხონდი ადამ, რამეთუ შენ არა მიერთუ გარდა-სლვასა მცნებათასა არცა პირველსა, არცა მეორესა. მძლეს მე სიტყუამან ღმრთისამან". და ჰრქუა ევა: "აჲა ესეა, მე წარვიდე მზისა დასავალით კერძო და ვჭამდე თივასა ვითარცა პირუტყვი, ვიდრემდე მოვკლდე, რამეთუ რაითურთით არა ღირს ვარ ჭამადისა მისგან ცხოველთაისა".
	18:2 Et coepit ambulare contra partes occidentales et coepit lugere et amare flere cum gemitu magno.	18.2 Գնաց եւս ի մոտս արեւու, եւ եղիւ եւս ի սուգ եւ ի տրտմութիւն.	18:2 და წარვიდა ევა მზისა დასავალით კერძო და იყოფებოდა მუნ გლოვით და კუნესით.
	18:3 Et fecit ibi habitaculum habens in utero foetum trium mensium.	18.3 ևս ասպა არար իւր տաղասար ի մոտս արեւու. եւ ձգեալ էր ամսագ, եւ ունէր լյարդանդի զհայէն ասարեն:	18:3 და შემდგომად დღეთა მათ იქმნა მზისა დასავალით ტალავარი. ოდეს მიდგომილ იყო სამი თვით და მუცელსა ეღვა კენი.
	19:1a Et cum adpropinquasset tempus partus eius coepit conturbari doloribus et exclamavit ad dominum dicens:	19.1 Իբրեւ եկին ժամանակք ծննդեանս նորա, սկսաւ աղաղակել ի ձայն մեծ եւ ասէ.	19:1 ოდეს მოიწივნეს დღენი შობისა მისისანი, და შეძრწუნდა და ხმა-ყო ხმითა მაღლითა ღმრთისა მიმართ და თქუა:

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

	18:1 Eve said to Adam: "Long may you live, my lord to you is my life submitted, since you did not take part in either the first or second collusion. But I conspired and was seduced, because I did not keep the commandment of God. Now separate me from the light of this life. I will go to the west and I will be there until I die. 18:2 She then began to walk toward the western regions and began to wail and weep bitterly with great moaning. 18:3 She made there a dwelling, being three months pregnant. 19:1a When the time of her delivery approached, she began to be distressed with pains, and she cried out to the Lord, saying:	18:1 and she said to Adam, "You are innocent of the first sin and of this second one. Only me alone did Satan overcome, as a result of God's word and yours." Again Eve said to Adam, "Behold, I shall go to the west and I shall be there and my food (will be) grass until I die; for henceforth I am unworthy of the foods of life." 18:2 Eve went to the west and she mourned and was sad; 18:3 and then she made a hut for herself in the west, and she was advanced in her pregnancy and she had Cain, the lawless one, [in] her womb. 19:1 When the times of her parturition came, she began to cry out in a loud voice and said,	18:1 and told Adam, "Be saved, Adam, for you did not join me in the transgression of the commandments, neither in the first (instance) nor in the second. (But) the word of God will prevail against me." And Eve told him, "Behold, I shall go in the direction of the setting sun and I will eat grass like an animal until I die, for by no means am I worthy of (having a part in) the food of the living." 18:2 Then Eve went away in the direction of the setting sun and she remained there in mourning and moaning. 18:3 And after these days, she made for herself a hut in the direction of the setting sun. She had conceived three months before, and Cain was in her womb, 19:1 and when the days of her parturition arrived, then she started to tremble; she wailed towards God in a loud voice and said:
--	--	--	---	--

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

19:1b misere
mei, domine, adiuva me. Et non exaudiebatur nec erat misericordia dei circa eam.
19:2 Et dixit ipsa in se: quis nuntiabit domino meo Adae? deprecor vos luminaria caeli, dum revertimini ad orientem, nuntiate domino meo
Adam.

19.2 *Ուր է Ադամ զի տեսցէ զցաա իմ զայս. իսկ ո՞ պատմեսցէ
զտառապանս իմ
Ադամայ. եթէ իցէ
Հոյս ի ներքոյ երկնից զի երթնայ
պատմեսցէ
Ադամայ. եթէ եկ ազնական լեր եայի. եւ ասէ.
Ադայեմ գեղ ամենայն լուստոյր յորժամ երթնայց դուք յարեմիս պատմեսցէ տեսան իմոյմ Ադամայ վասն ցաոց իմոց:*

19:2 " Տաճա-մը արև աճած, հաճա ժողովոնոս մը ժիրտա ամառ Մինա հըմտա անդ զին տեսնես Տաճածանի ղեց հըմնի? արագին արև մղրինջվելոթաճան ո, մի-մցա-ջիւղա ը ձրէլա :
ժողվը ըս ղրիւ ըզս . ցոլոՏա ՄընՏա, գըզըմընթի տէլլըն, յողվելոթաճը նաղըՏաճա ցիՏաթա, ըս ղղըՏ միճջիւղա աճմոՏաճաղիտ, տոնընիտ տղալոՏա հըմՏա Տաճածանի ղեց
հըմնի".
20:1a ըս ղըմա
աճմոՏ մըմնարըՏա Մինա
օղղմոՏանիՏա
եմա ղրիւղիլոՏա ըս տղըճա
միՏաթա.

20:1 In illa autem hora dixit Adam:
placuit Evae venit
ad me;

20.1a *Յայնժամ
լուսա Ադամ ի գեղ Որդանան անդր.
զըզըզըզ յայլի եւ
զլայլիս նորա:*

20:1a ըս ղըմա
աճմոՏ
մըմնարըՏա Մինա
օղղմոՏանիՏա
եմա ղրիւղիլոՏա
ըս տղըճա
միՏաթա.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

19:1b "Have mercy on me, O Lord, help me." She was not heard, nor was the mercy of God toward her.

19:2 She said to herself: "Who will tell my lord Adam? I beseech you, lights of the heavens, when you turn again to the east, tell my lord Adam."

20:1 In that very hour Adam said: "The lament of Eve has come to me;

19:2 "Where is Adam, that he might see this pain of mine? Who, indeed, will relate my afflictions to Adam? Is there a wind under the heavens that will go and tell Adam, 'Come and help Eve?!' And she said, "I implore you, all luminaries, when you come to the east, tell my lord Adam about my pains."

20:1a Then Adam, in the river Jordan, heard Eve's cry and her weeping.

19:2 "Where is Adam so that he can console me in my present pain, or who will tell him about my sufferings? Is there none among the birds, who would go to him and tell him, 'Come, help Eve, your spouse.' I beg of you, all you races of heaven, when you go to the east, tell my lord about my present sufferings."
20:1a Then Adam, in the river Jordan, heard her tearful crying and misfortunes.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
		20.1b Իբրիւ յաւս Աստուած ձայնի ապաշխարութեան Ադամայ և ոսույց նմա գլխարեկ և գնեծեխ և գեկեայ նմա և գասակի նորա:	20:1b მაშინ ისმინა აღმერთმა ლიცვაი იგი აღამისი და მიუვლინა მი-ქაელ ანგელოზი და მოართუა მას თესლი შებეჭდული ბეჭდითა საღმრ-თოითა მორთუმაღ აღამისსა. და ასწავა მათ თესვაი და საქმე მისი, რაითა ცხოვნდენ იგინი მით და ყოველნი ნათესავნი მისნი.
	forte iterum serpens pugnavit cum ea.	20.1c և აպა յաւս Ադամ գձայն աղաչանացն ծալի ի մուտս արեւո և ասէ Ադամ ի սիրտ իւր. Զայն այն մարմնոյ ինոյ է և լալինն. յարեայց և գնացից առ նա և տեսից թէ վասն որոյ աղաղակէ. Գուցէ դարձեալ գազանն մարտեաւ ընդ նմա:	20:1c და ვითარცა ესმა აღამს ლიცვაი ევასი და დაღადებაი იგი ტი-რილისა მისისაი დაღასავალით კერძო, იცნა ხმაი მისი და თქუა აღამ გულსა შინა თვისსა:” ხმაი გუერდისა ჩემისაი არს, ხმაი ტარივისა ჩემისაი არს, აღვღვე და ვიხილო, რაისათვის ხმობს, ანუ-მე კუალად გუეღო იგი ზრდავს?”

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

20:1b When God
hearkened to the sound of Adam's penitence,

he taught him sowing and reaping and that which was to come upon him and his seed.

20:1c Then Adam heard the sound of Eve's entreaty in the west, and Adam said to himself,
"That voice and weeping are of my flesh. Let me arise and go to her and see why she is crying out. Perhaps the beast is fighting with her once more!"

Perhaps the serpent has fought with her again."

20:1b Then God
hearkened to Adam's prayer and sent him the angel Michael who brought him seeds, sealed with the divine seal, destined to be brought to Adam.

Then he taught him sowing and the work related to it, so that thus they might be saved, (they) and all their descendants.

20:1c And when Adam (had) heard the prayer of Eve and the wailing of her tears from the west, Adam recognized her voice and said in his heart, "This is the voice of my rib, the voice of my lamb; I will arise and I will see why she cries.
Perhaps the serpent is attacking her once more?"

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

20:2a Et ambulans invenit eam in luctu magno; et dixit Eva: ex quo vidi te, domine mi, refrigeravit anima mea in doloribus posita.

20:2a *Թարեա
Ադամ եւ Էնայ գհետ բարբառոյն ուր նա էր. Իբրեւ նտես նա խաանցաւ եւ ասէ ցԱդամ. Կամ՝ ր գձայն լալոյ իմոյ.
Իմացուցի՜ն քեզ
հողմք յորում սղաղակեց(ի) վասն քո, եթէ իմացուցի՜ն քեզ լուսաւորք երկնից որ կային ի կողմանս յար(եւ)եկից ար լուստ արեւ ի մնացից իրեանց, կամ թէ իմացուցի՜ն քեզ թուոմք երկնից կամ գազանք երկրի զոր կոչեցի եւ ստաքեցի առ քեզ, զի պատմեացն քեզ:*

20:2a აღდა აღამ და მისდევდა კუთლსა მას მისსა, და ვითარცა მოვიდა მისა დასავალით კერძო, სადაცა იყო ევა, და ვითარცა იხილა აღამი ევამან, ტიროლა ტირილითა დიდითა და თქუა: " უფალო
ჩემო, აღამ, არა გესმა ხმაი ტირილისა ჩემისა? რამეთუ დღეს ცხრა დღე არს და დღით და ღამით არს ღაღადებაი ესე ჩემი შენდა მოძარო, არა გაუწყესა შენ ნათესავთა აღმოსავალისათა აღმოსლვასა მათსა, ანუ არა გაუწყესა შენ მფრინველთა ცისა-თა და მხეცთა ქუეყანისათა, რამეთუ ვევმდრებოლე მათ ყოველთა, რაითამ-ცა
გითხრეს შენ!

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

20:2a Walking, he found her in great distress. Eve said: "How is it that I see you, my Lord. My soul has grown cold being in such pains.

20:2a Adam arose and followed the noise (to) where Eve was. When Eve saw him, she spoke and said to Adam, "Did you hear the sound of my crying? Did the winds inform you, whom [I] entreated concerning you? Did the luminaries of heaven inform you, who are in the [east]ern regions every day, in their courses? Did the birds of the heavens inform you, or the beasts of the earth whom I summoned and dispatched to you, to tell you?

20:2a Adam arose and followed her footsteps. When he had come close to her, in the part of the west where Eve was, and when Eve saw Adam, she was crying with abundant tears and said, "My lord, Adam, did you not hear the sound of my tears? For, today, it is nine days, day and night, that there has been this crying of mine towards you. Is it that the [[luminaries]] of the east have not informed you when they arose? And have not the birds of the heavens and the beasts of the earth informed you, for I begged them all that they tell you about it.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

20:2b et nunc deprecare dominum deum pro me ut exaudiat te et respiciat ad me et liberet me de doloribus meis pessimis.

20:3 Et deprecatus est Adam dominum pro Eva.

21:1 Et ecce venerunt XII angeli et duo virtutes stantes a dextris et a sinistris Evae.

20.2b Արդ արի աղաչեա դատեղծիչն քո, զի փրկեսցէ զիս ի ցատց աստի:

20.3 ելաց Ադամ եւ աղաչեա եկաց յասն նորա առ Աստուած:

21.1 եւ ահա իջին յերկնից երկու հրեշտակք եւ երկու զաւրութիւնք, եկին առ ծառ եւ կացին առաջի երեսաց նորա,

20:2b აღდევ და ევედრე შემოქმედსა შენსა, რაითა წყალობა ყოს და ისმინოს შენი ღმერთმან და მოსხნეს მე საღმობათაგან ჩემთა, ანუ თუ ჯერ - უჩნდეს, მოავლინოს ჩემ ზედა სიკუდილი, ანუ ურვათა ჩემთაგან განმარი-ნოს ლოცვითა შენითა".

20:3 ილოცვიდა
და იტყორდა ადამ მისთვის ვედრებასა წინაშე ღმრთისა. და ისმინა მისი უფალმან.

21:1 და აჰა ესერა მოვიდეს ზეციით ათორმეტნი ანგელოზნი და ორნი ძალნი. და მოვიდეს ადგილსა მას ევაისსა.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

20:2b Now pray to the Lord God on my behalf that he might hear you and look down upon me and free me from my very bad pains.

20:3 Adam then prayed to the Lord for Eve.

21:1 And behold, twelve angels came and two Virtues, standing to the right and to the left of Eve.

20:2b Now arise, entreat your Creator to deliver me from these pains."

20:3 Adam wept and prayed to God on her behalf.

21:1 And behold, two angels and two powers descended from heaven, came to Eve and stood before her.

20:2b Arise, entreat your Creator to have pity, so that God may answer your prayer and deliver me from my sufferings or, if it seems fitting to Him, send death to me or, by your prayers, liberate me from my torments."

20:3 Adam prayed and spoke a plea to God on her behalf and the Lord hearkened to him.

21:1 And behold, twelve angels and two powers came from heaven. And they came to the place (where) Eve (was).

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

21:2 Et Michahel
erat stans a dextris et tetigit faciem eius usque ad pectus et dixit ad
Evam: beata es, Eva, propter Adam.
quoniam preces
eius magnae sunt et orationes, missus sum ad te, ut accipias adiutorium nostrum. exsurge nunc et para te ad partum

21:3a Et peperit filium et erat lucidus.

21:3b et continuo infans ex surgens cucurrit et manibus suis tulit herbam et dedit matri suae. et vocatam est nomen eius Cain.

21.2 *և ասին ցնա
զարուքինք.
երան է քեզ նա վասն Ադամայ ընտրելոյ նստութոյ. զի մեծ են ինդրութեք նորա, եւ նովա եղեւ* *սաղմականութիւն քեզ յԱստուծոյ.
բայց ի նմանէն ի ծննդենէդ քո յարգանսն ոչ կարելի ապրել: եւ ասէ հրեշտակն
ցնա. Կազմեա զանձն քո եւ ես
լինիմ քեզ դայեակ:*

21.3a *Ապա իբր
ծնաւ զմանուկն էր զոյն մարմնոյ նորա իբրեւ զգոյն աստեղաց.*

21.3b ի ժամոյն իբրեւ մանուկն ի ծնաւ դայեակին անկաւ. ի վեր վազեաց եւ ծնուաքն ինտեր զխոր երկրին առ տաղապար մար իւրոյ եւ անպտորութիւնք բազում լինէին ի տեղոյն:

21:2 ერთი იგი ძალთავანი მოვიდა და შეეხო პირსა ევასსა და მკერდ- სა მისსა და ჰრქუა ევას: “ ნეტარ ხარ შენ, ევა, ადამის გამორჩეულისა და მონისა ღმრთისა, რამეთუ დიდ არიან ლოცვანი მისნი წინაშე ღმრთისა და მის გამო გიხსნეს შენ ღმერთმან.
უკუეთუდცა მის გამო არა ყოფილ იყო შეწევნაი შენი, ეგევითარი ეკალი მუცლად-გიღებდეს, ვერმცა განერე სალ- მობათავან შენთა. აღდეგ აწ და განეწესე
შობად ყრმისა”.
21:3a აღდგა ევა, ვითარცა ასწავა
მას ანგელოზმან
, და შვა ყრმაი და იყო ფერი მისი ვითარცა ვარსკვლავთაი.
21:3b და ხელთა ზელა ამკუმელოსათა გარდამოვარდა და იწყო ფხურად თივისა, რამეთუ ტალავარსა ღედისა მისისასა დგა მცენარე თივისაი.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

21:2 Michael was standing to her right and touched his face to her chest and said to Eve: "Blessed are you, Eve, on account of Adam, for his prayers and supplications are great. I was sent to you that you might receive our help. Arise now and prepare yourself for birth."

21:3a She brought forth a son who shone brilliantly.

21:3b At once the infant stood up and ran out and brought some grass with his own hands and gave it to his mother. His name was called Cain.

21:2 The powers said to her, "Eve, you are blessed because of Adam, God's elect one, for his prayers are mighty and through him help from God has come to you. Apart [from him], you would not be able to survive this birth." The angel said to Eve, "Prepare yourself, and I will be a midwife for you."

21:3a Then, when she bore the child, the colour of his body was like the colour of stars.

21:3b At the hour when the child fell into the hands of the mid-wife, he leaped up and, with his hands, plucked up the grass of the earth near his mother's hut; and infertilities became numerous in that place.

21:2 One of the powers came, touched Eve's face and her breast, and told Eve, "Blessed are you, Eve, because of Adam, the elect one and servant of God, for his prayers are great before God and, because of him, God will deliver you. If you had not been brought help because of him, you are sure to have conceived such a thorn (i.e., Cain the killer) that you could not have rescued yourself from your sufferings. Rise up now and prepare yourself to give birth to a child."
21:3a Eve arose as the angel had instructed her: she gave birth to an infant and his color was like that of the stars.
21:3b He fell into the hands of the midwife and (at once) he began to pluck up the grass, for in his mother's hut grass was planted.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
		21.3c ხე სათქ ჯრეზთასკს ფსა. სრერარ ჭ სათოთაძ ვჩი ოჯ ხო გხვ ასსკასსჩქ ჩ ძხთა ჩამ, ვჩი ხა ჯაქს ასსარქსს ორ რაროქ ხე. { } ხე სხსტასსოქს (სხსტოქ) ქიჭჩა ხე სოქოასსჩქ ხე ჯსოქჩქს, რასოქოქჩქს ხე ოჯ რაოქოქოქჩქს 21.3d ხე სათქ ჯრეზთასკს რარგხაქ ფსრჟამ. სკაფ ხე მწა ათ ხა ვჩი არასაფქ ხა ვჩი ჩსჯ ჯრამასჩხეჩქ	21:3c მიუგო ამქუტელმან მან ღა ჰრქუა: "მართალ არს ღმერთი, რამეთუ არასაღა ღაგიტევა შენ ხელთა ჩემთა, რამეთუ შენ ხარ კაენი, გულარძნილი და მკულელი კეთილისაი, რამეთუ ნაყოფიერისა ხისა აღმომგზერელი ხარ და არა ღამნერგული, განმამწარებელ ი ხარ და არა ღამატკობელი". 21:3d და ჰრქუა აღამს ძალმან:" დაღგერ ევას თანა ვიდრე ყოფადმღე მისა ყრმისა მისთვის, რაი ვასწავე .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
		21:3c The angel said to him, "God is just, that he did not make you fall into my hand, for you are Cain, the lawless one, who will be destroyer of the good and { . . . } and living [p]lant and adultery, bitterness and not sweetness." 21:3d And again the angel said to Adam, "Remain by Eve, so that she will do what I commanded."	21:3c The midwife replied to him and told him, "God is just that he did not at all leave you in my hands. For, you are Cain, the perverse one, killer of the good, for you are the one who plucks up the fruit-bearing tree, and not he who plants it. You are the bearer of bitterness and not of sweetness." 21:3d And the power told Adam, "Remain by Eve until she has done with the infant what I have taught her."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

1:1 Αὕτη ἡ διήγησις Ἀδὰμ καὶ Εὔας. Μετὰ τὸ ἐξελθεῖν αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου, 1:2 [ἔλαβεν] Ἀδὰμ Εὖαν καὶ ἀνήλθεν εἰς τὴν ἀνατολὴν καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ ἔτη δέκα καὶ ὀκτὼ καὶ μῆνας δύο.	22:1 Et tulit Adam Evam et puerum et duxit eos ad orientem.	22(1):2 [սոս] այնուհետեւ Ադամ զԵւայ եւ գմանուկն եւ ած զնոսա ի կողմ արեւելից, եւ եղի նա անդ նովա հանդերձ, եւ այսպ լցան ամբ ութուստան եւ ամիսք երկու.	22(1):2 ხოლო ადამ წამოიყვანა ევა და ყმადა იგი და მოიყვანნა იგინო აღმოსავალით კერძო და დაადგრა მუნ. და ოდეს აღესრულნეს წელნი მე-რვენი და თუეო იგი მეორე,	2.1 Когда же съгрѣши и прѣстоупи заповѣди госп одьнѣ, изгьнанъ бысть Адамъ изъ раю 2.2a и поемъ (Адамъ) жену свою Еву и изышдъ сѣде при едемѣ (ed. m: на мѣстѣ) прѣдъ двѣрьми райскими .
1:3 Καὶ ἐν γαστρὶ εἴληφεν Εὖα καὶ ἐγέννησε δύο υἱοὺς τὸν Διὰφωτον τὸν καλοῦμενον Κάϊν καὶ τὸν Ἀμιλαβὲς τὸν καλοῦμενον Ἄβελ.	22:3 Postea enim concepit Eva et genuit filium, cui nomen Abel. et manebat Cain cum Abel in unum.	22(1):3 յղացաւ եւ ծնաւ որդի զգաբար որ անուանեաց եւ կոչեաց Հաբէլ դայեակն], եւ բնակեցան ի միասին:	22(1):3 მოუღვა ევა და შვა სხუი ძე, რომელსა უწოდა ძალმან ღმრთი- სამან აბელ და დაადგრა მუნ ღრთი-ეთას.
2:1 Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐγένοντο μετ' ἀλλήλων Ἀδὰμ καὶ Εὖα κοιμωμένων δὲ αὐτῶν, εἶπεν Εὖα τῷ κυρίῳ αὐτῆς Ἀδὰμ·	23:1 Et dixit Eva ad Adam:	23(2):1 եւ ասէ նա ցԱդամ.	23(2):1 მას უამსა ჰრქუა ევა აღამს:

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
1:1 This is the story of Adam and Eve. After they had gone out of Paradise,				2.1 But after he committed the trespass and violated the command of the Lord, Adam was expelled from Paradise,
1:2 Adam [took] Eve and went to the east and abode there eighteen years and two months.	22:1 Adam took Eve and the boy and led them to the east.	22(1):2 Thenceforth Adam took Eve and the child and brought them to the eastern region, and he was there with her, and then eighteen years and two months were completed.	22(1):2 As for Adam, he took Eve and the child and he brought them into the eastern parts and he stayed there. And when the eighth year and the second month were completed	2.2a and (Adam) having taken his wife and left, he sat near Eden, (ed. on the spot) before the door of Paradise,
1:3 And Eve conceived and bore two sons; Diophotos, who is called Cain and Amilabes who is called Abel.	22:2 The Lord God sent various seeds by Michael the angel, who gave them to Adam and showed them how to work and tend the ground, in order to have fruit, from which they and all their generations might live. 22:3 Afterwards, Eve conceived and bore a son, whose name was Abel, and Cain and Abel remained together as one.	22(1):3 She became pregnant and bore a son, [Gap'at' whom the midwife named and called Abel:] and they dwelt together.	22(1):3 Eve became pregnant and bore another son whom the power of God called by the name Abel, and they remained there together.
2:1 And after this, Adam and Eve were with one another and while they were sleeping, Eve said to Adam her lord:	23:1 Eve said to Adam:	23(2):1 Eve said to Adam,	23(2):1 At that time Eve told Adam,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
2:2 Κύριέ μου, ἴδων ἐγὼ κατ' ὄναρ τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ τὸ αἷμα τοῦ υἱοῦ μου Ἀμὶλαβὲς τοῦ ἐπιλεγομένου "Ἀβελ βαλλόμενον εἰς τὸ στόμα Κάϊν τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔπινεν αὐτὸ ἀνελετημόνως. Παρεκάλει δὲ αὐτὸν συγχωρήσαι αὐτῷ ὀλίγον ἐξ αὐτοῦ. 2:3 Αὐτὸς δὲ οὐκ ἤκουσεν αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ' ὅλον κατέπιεν αὐτό. Καὶ οὐκ ἔμεινεν ἐπὶ τὴν κοιλίαν αὐτοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐξῆλθεν ἕξω τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ. 2:4 Εἶπε δὲ Ἀδάμ· Ἀναστάντες πορευθόμεν καὶ ἴδωμεν τί ἐστὶ τὸ γεγονὸς αὐτοῖς, μήποτε ὁ ἐχθρὸς πολεμῇ τὶ πρὸς αὐτούς.	23:2 domine mi, dormiens vidi visum quasi sanguinem filii nostri Abel in manu Cain ore suo deglutientis eum. propterea dolorem habeo. 23:3 Et dixit Adam: Vae, ne forte interficiat Cain Abel! sed separemus eos ab invicem et faciamus eis singulas mansiones. 23:3 Et dixit Adam: Vae, ne forte interficiat Cain Abel! sed separemus eos ab invicem et faciamus eis singulas mansiones.	23(2):2 Տէր իմ, Ադամ. Ենթեցի եւ տեսանէի ի տեսիլսան գիշերոյ. զի արիւն որդւոյ իմոյ Աբելի մտանէր բերան Կայինի որդւոյ մերոյ եղբար նորա եւ ըմբեր գարին նորա անորորմ, եւ աղաչէր գնա Աբել զի թողցէ սակաւիկ մի 23(2):3 եւ ոչ թողոր եւ ոչ անապր նմա, այլ ըմբեր գարին նորա բաանդակ: 23(2):4a Ասէ Ադամ ցնա. Արդեաւ սպանանէ Կային զԱբել. աղէ մենկնացուք զնոսա ի միմեանց. արասցուք նոցա իւրաքանչիւր տեղիս եւ թողցուք զնոսա անդ. եւ մի տացուք ի մեզ տեղի չարին:	23(2):2 "უფალო ჩემო, აღამ, ძილსა შინა ჩემსა ვიხილე, ვითარმედ სისხლი ძისა ჩემისა აბელისი შთავიდოდა პირსა კაენისა, და შესვლიდა უწყალოდ. და ევედრებოდა აბელი, რაითამეცა სისხლისა მისგან უტევა, 23(2):3 და მან არა ისმინა მისი, არამედ შესუა ყოველივე. და არა დაადგრა მუცელსა მისსა, არამედ გამოხდა გარე. დაეცვია ყოველთა ასოთა მისთა და არა განეშორა გუამსა მისსა ყოლაღვე." 23(2):4a მოუგო აღამ ევას და ჰრქუა: "ნუთუჲ შეცა მოკლვავი ეგულე"-ძის მისი კაენს, განვაშორნეთ ურთი-ერთას და ვიყვანეთ მათ თანა, რაითა არა ვსცეთ აღვილი რისხვასა."	2.2b и видѣ Адамъ сынѣ, како хошеть родити Каина и Авела брата его, и видѣ како хошеть ꙗвити Каинъ Авела, и въскрьбѣ Адамъ всѣми. 2.3 тъгда прииде архаггелъ Михаилъ къ Адаму и рече ему: Адамѣ, не скрьби, ни изрьци ни имая Каина въ срьдци своемъ. 3.1 И тоу прѣбывъ Адамъ при едемѣ .и.і. лѣтъ, и тоу роди Каина и Авела, брата его.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
2:2 "My lord, Adam, behold, I have seen in a dream this night the blood of my son Amilabes who is styled Abel being poured into the mouth of Cain his brother and he went on drinking it without mercy. But he begged him to leave a little of it. 2:3 Yet he hearkened not to him, but gulped it down completely; nor did it stay in his stomach, but came out of his mouth.	23:2 "My lord, while asleep I saw a vision like the blood of our son Abel on the hand of Cain who tasted it with his mouth. On account of this I am pained."	23(2):2 "My lord, Adam, I fell asleep and I saw in a night vision that the blood of my son Abel was entering the mouth of our son Cain, his brother, and he drank his blood without mercy. Abel beseeched him to leave a little, 23(2):3 and he did not leave (any), and did not hearken to him, but drank his blood completely."	23(2):2 "My lord Adam, in my sleep I saw that the blood of my son Abel was pouring into the mouth of Cain his brother and he drank it without mercy. And Abel beseeched him to leave him (a little) of his blood, 23(2):3 and he did not agree to hearken to him but he drank it completely and (it) did not remain in his stomach but it went forth and all his limbs were smeared with it and it could not at all be removed from his body." 23(2):4a Adam replied to Eve and told her, "Lest Cain plan to kill him, let us separate them from one another, and let us be with them, so as to provide no room for anger."	2.2b and he saw a vision, how Cain and his brother Abel would be begotten, and he saw, how Cain would kill Abel, and Adam was very troubled. 2.3 Then the archangel Michael came to Adam and said to him, "O Adam, Adam, don't be troubled, don't speak about this and don't have Cain on your heart."
2:4 And Adam said, "Let us arise and go and see what has happened to them. (I fear) lest the adversary may be assailing them somewhere."	23:3 Adam said: "Woe, let not Cain kill Abel, but let us separate them from each other and make separate houses for them."	23(2):4a Adam said to Eve, "Surely Cain is killing Abel. Come, let us separate them from one another. Let us make individual places for them and leave them there, and let us not provide room in us for the evil one."	23(2):4a Adam replied to Eve and told her, "Lest Cain plan to kill him, let us separate them from one another, and let us be with them, so as to provide no room for anger."	3.1 And here, near Eden, Adam spent eighteen years, and here Cain and his brother Abel were born to him.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	23:4 Et fecerunt Cain agricolam, Abel fecerunt pastorem, ut ita fuissent ab invicem separati.	23(2):4b bi արարին նորա բառ բանին այնմիկ. bi սաէ ցնոսա Ադամ. Որդեակք իմ, արիք գնացէք իւրաքանչիւր տեղիս ձեր: Թարեան bi գնացին նորա բառ բանին այնորիկ:	23(2):4b და ყვეს ეგრე. ვითარცა თქუა ადამ და ჰრქუა: "შვილნო ჩემო, მოველით და მიმოვეგნეთ თითოეულად ადგილსა თვისსა.	3.2 и по врѣмєни възрастєнии (възраста къ?) послєста ихъ къ скотомъ в Курино мѣсто. 3.3 и ꙗгда сѣврѣшишє сє .дї. лѣтъ, призыва Адамъ жену свою Къѣгѣ и рече ѣи 'сѣврѣшишє сє лѣтъ .дї. и сѣтворишь кєсть Кайнѣ крѣвь на братѣ своемъ Авєлѣ, ꙗкоже кєсть ѹрєчєно, немилостивно . 3.4 изидѣшь, да видимъ. 3.5 Изъшѣдъшє и обрѣтошє Авєла ѹбийєна немилостивно рукою Кайновѣю.
3:1 Πορευθέντες δὲ ἀμφοτέρωθεν εὗρον πεφονευμένον τὸν Ἀβελ ἀπὸ χειρὸς Κάιν τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ.	23:5 Et post haec interfecit Cain Abel. erat autem tunc Adam annorum CXXX. interfecit autem Abel cum esset annorum CXXII.
3:2a Καὶ λέγει ὁ θεὸς Μιχαὴλ τῷ ἀρχαγγέλῳ· Εἰπὲ τῷ Ἀδὰμ ὅτι τὸ μυστήριον οὐκ οἶδας μὴ ἀναγγείλῃς· Κάιν τῷ υἱῷ σου, ὅτι ὀργῆς υἱός ἐστιν.		23(3):2a bi սպա յետ այսց բանից սաէ Աստուած ցՄիքայել Հրեշտակապետն. Գնա bi առա Ադամայ թէ գիտորդուդ որ գիտես, մի պատմեսցես զայդ Կայնի, զի որդի բարկութեան է դա bi սպանակ դՀաբել գեղբայր իւր.	23(3):2a ძაშობ ჰრქუა ღმერთმან გაბრიელ ანგელოზსა: არქუ ადამს ზნახვაი საიდუმლოთ, რომელი ჴყუი, ნუ აღუწყებ კახეა, რამეთუ ნაშობი რისხვისაი არს, რამეთუ მოკლვად არს მისკან ძმაი მისი,	3.6 и рече господь архаггелу Михаилу рьци Адаму, не изрьци ничьто сыну своему Кайну о дѣлѣ томъ ничьто не въскрьби, ни (нь?) въсьхрани въ срьдци своемъ.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	23:4 They made Cain to be a farmer, and Abel to be a shepherd that they might thus be separated from each other.	23(2):4b They acted according to this proposal. Adam said to them, "My sons, arise, go each of you to your place." They arose and went according to this proposal.	23(2):4b And they acted as Adam had said, and he told them, "My sons, come and let us disperse, each to his own place."	3.2 And when they were grown, they sent them to tend the flocks at a place called Cyrene. 3.3 And when fourteen years had passed, Adam called his wife Eve and said to her, "Fourteen years have passed and Cain has spilled his brother Abel's blood, as it was announced, in a merciless way. 3.4 Let us go out to see." 3.5 And when they went out they found Abel murdered in a merciless manner by the hand of Cain.
3:1 And they both went and found Abel murdered by the hand of Cain his brother.	23:5 But even after this, Cain killed Abel. Adam was then 130 years old. Abel was killed when he was 122 years old.			3.6 And the Lord spoke to the archangel Michael, "Warn Adam, 'You should not say anything to your son Cain about this matter, and do not be troubled on account of it, instead keep it in your hearts.'"
3:2a And God said to Michael the archangel: "Say to Adam: 'Reveal not the mystery that you know to Cain your son, for he is a son of wrath.		23(3):2a Then, after these proposals God said to the archangel Michael, "Go say to Adam, 'Do not relate the mystery that you know to Cain, for he is a son of wrath and he is killing Abel, his brother.	23(3):2a Then God told the angel Gabriel, "[[Tell Adam]] 'Do not reveal to Cain the secret plan which you know, for he is a son of wrath, because his brother will be killed by him!'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
3:2b Ἀλλὰ μὴ λυποῦ· Δόσω σοι γὰρ ἄντ' αὐτοῦ ἕτερον υἱόν. Οὗτος δηλώσει πάντα ὅσα ποιήσης· Σὺ δὲ μὴ εἴπῃς αὐτῷ μηδέν. 3:3 Ταῦτα εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς τῷ ἄρχ- αγγέλῳ αὐτοῦ. 'Αδὰμ δὲ ἐφύλαξε τὸ ῥῆμα ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ, μετ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἡ Εὐά, ἔχον- τες τὴν λύπην περὶ 'Αβελ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτῶν.		23(3):2b բայց մի տրտմանցիս վասն նորա. տաց քեզ փոխանակ (տորա) զՍէթ որ նման է ատաղի պատկերին իմոյ և նա ցուցցէ զամենայն իշատակս լինէն. և ոչ եթէ ինչ ասասցես նմա: 23(3):3 Զայս ասաց Աստուած ցրեշտակն, և նա եկեալ խառնցաւ Ադամայ. և Ադամ պահեալ զայն ի (սրտի) իւրում և տրտմեալ ինքն և նա:	23(3):2b არაშედ ნუ შეტყუვებდის აღამ მისთვის, რამეთუ აღუღვინო მის წილ სეით, და ეძსგავ-სოს იგი ხატსა ჩემსა, და გასწაროს შენ ყოველი, რომელი მოვიხსენო, ხოლო ამას ნუვის აუწყებ თვინიერ აღამისა". 23(3):3ა ესე ჰრქუა ღმერთმან ანგელოზსა მას და ანგელოზმამ მან ჰრქუა აღამს სიტყუაი ესე, ხოლო აღამ დაიმარხა სიტყუაი იგი გულსა შინა. და ჭუთღეს ორნივე - აღამ და ცოლი მისი.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

3:2b But do not be sad, for I will give you another son instead of him ; he shall show (to you) all that you shall do. Do not tell him anything."

3:3 Thus God spoke to his archangel. But Adam kept the word in his heart, and with him also was Eve, though they were sad concerning Abel their son.

23(3):2b However, do not be sad because of him; instead of him I shall give you Seth, who is like my first image, and he shall show all memories through me, and not only what you shall say to him."

23(3):3 God said this to the angel, and he came and spoke to Adam and Adam kept it in his own [heart]; and he and Eve were sad.

23(3):2b However, let Adam not be sad, for I will raise up Seth for him instead of Abel, and he will resemble my image and [[he]] will teach you everything of which I have a memory. But do not reveal this to anyone but Adam!"
23(3):3a That is what God told the angel, and the angel spoke this word to Adam. Then Adam kept the word in his heart. And they both were sad, Adam and his spouse.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
			23(3):3b და იყო ჟამი იგი, რამეთუ მოიკლა აბელი კაენისაგან, ძმისა მისისა, და ჰრქუა: "დასდვა ღმერთმან აღსასრული ყოველთა კაცთაი, არა თუ სხუაი რაიმე იყო სიკუდილი იგი, არამედ კლვაი იგი, რომელ მოიკლა აბელ კაენისგან და მისცა შურმან კაენისამან სიკუდილად. რამეთუ ნა- თესავი გულარძნილი იყო. 23(3):3c და იყვნეს ჟამნი, რომელსა აღსრულ იყვნეს კაენ და აბელი ველსა შინა მათსა, მოვიდეს ორნი ეშმაკნი, მსგავსნი აბელისი და კაენისი ხოლო ეშმაკი იგი ეშმაკსა მას ესჯოდა, განრისხნა მას ზედა და მოიღო მახვილი ქვისაგან, რომელი იყო ქარწბია, და უკუეთა ყელი და მოკლა იგი

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

23(3):3b And the time arrived when Abel was killed by Cain his brother and he (i.e., Adam) told her, "God has established an end for all human beings. Was death anything else but the killing by which Abel has been killed by Cain and Cain's jealousy delivered him to death because (Cain) was of a perverse race?"

23(3):3c And the time arrived when Cain and Abel had gone up towards their fields. Two demons resembling Cain and Abel came. Now, one demon reproached the other demon. He became angry with him and took a stone sword, which was of a transparent stone. He cut his throat and killed him.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
4:1 Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἔγνω Ἀδὰμ τὴν γυναικα αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐν γαστρὶ ἔσχεεν καὶ ἐγέννησεν τὸν Σῆθ. 4:2 Καὶ λέγει Ἀδὰμ τῇ Εὐᾶ· Ἴδὸν ἐγεννήσαμεν υἱὸν ἀντὶ "Αβελ δὲν ἀπέκτεινεν Καὶν. Δώσωμεν δόξαν καὶ θυσίαν τῷ θεῷ.	24:1 Et post haec cognovit Adam uxorem suam et genuit filium et vocavit nomen eius Seth. 24:2 Et dixit Adam ad Evam: ecce genui filium pro Abel, quem occidit Cain. 24:3 Et postquam genuit Adam Seth, vixit annos DCCC et genuit filios XXX et filias XXX, simul LXIII. et multiplicati sunt super terram in nationibus suis.	24(4):1 Եւ Կադ ապօրիկ յղացաւ նա եւ ծնաւ զՍէթ. 24(4):2 Եւ ասէ Ադամ Եւայ ի խաանքն իրեանց առ միմեանս. Ահա ծնաւ(ք) որդի փոխանակ Աբելի զոր սպան Կայնն առաջի մեր:	23(3):3d და ვითარცა იხილა კაენმან სისხლი იგი, მივიდა სწრაფით და აღიღო ქვაი იგი ხელითა თვისითა, ხოლო ვითარცა იხილა აბელმან მიძავეა- ლი მის ზედა, ევედრებოდა მას: ნუ მომაკუდინებ, ძმაო კაენ. ხოლო მან არა ინება ვედრებაი მისი და დასთხია სისხლი აბელისი წინაშე მისა. და ჭუჭოღეს აღამ და ევა რაოდენ უამ მწუხარებითა დიდითა. 23(4):1 და შემდგომად ამისა შევიდა აღამი ცოლისა. მიიღვა ევა და შვა სეით, მსგავსი აღამისი. 24(4):2 და ჰრქუა აღამ ევას: ავა ესერა ვშევქე აბელის წილ, რომელი მოაკუდინა კაენმან წინაშე ჰემსა.	4-5.1 По томъ роди сына Ёвѣга и нарече име юму Сидѣ . 4-5.2 и рече Ёвѣга къ Адаму азъ родихъ сына мѣсто Авела, югоже ѿби Каинъ . нъ прииди, госп одине мои, да въздаси (въздасы?) хвалу богу и хрѣтву принесемъ юму .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

			23(3):3d And when Cain saw the blood, he went quickly and took the stone in his hand(s). But when Abel saw him coming upon him, he begged him, "Do not make me die, O my brother Cain!" He, however, did not accept his prayer and he spilled Abel's blood in front of him. And Adam and Eve afflicted themselves all that time with great sadness.
4:1 And after this, Adam knew Eve his wife, and she conceived and bore Seth.	24:1 After this Adam knew his wife and begot a son and called his name Seth.	24(4):1 After this, Eve became pregnant and bore Seth.	24(4):1 And after this, Adam entered his spouse and Eve became pregnant and bore Seth who resembled Adam.	4-5.1 Afterwards, Eve bore a son and called him Seth.
4:2 And Adam said to Eve: "Behold! we have begotten a son in place of Abel, whom Cain killed,	24:2 Adam said to Eve: "Behold, I have begotten a son in place of Abel, whom Cain killed."	24(4):2 Adam said to Eve when they were speaking with each other, "Behold, we have begotten a son in place of Abel, whom Cain killed before us."	24(4):2 Adam told Eve, "Behold, I have born a son in place of Abel, whom Cain killed before me."	4-5.2 And she said to Adam, "I have borne a son in the place of Abel, whom Cain killed; come my husband, let us give glory and sacrifice to God."				that you may thank God, and that we may make an offering to Him."
see pericope 9	24:3 After Adam begot Seth, he lived for 800 years and begot 30 sons and 30 daughters -- 63 altogether -- and they were multiplied over the earth in its nations.	see pericope 9	see pericope 9	see pericope 9

25:1 Et dixit Adam ad Seth: audi, fili mi Seth, ut referam tibi, quae audiui et vidi. postquam eiecti sumus de paradiso ego et mater tua, 25:2 cum essemus in oratione, venit ad me Michahel archangelus nuntius dei. 25:3 Et vidi currum tamquam ventum et rotae illius erant igneae et raptus sum in paradysum iustitiae. et vidi dominum sedentem et aspectus eius erat ignis incendens intolerabilis. et multa milia angelorum erant a dextris et a sinistris currus illius. 26:1 Haec videns perturbatus sum et timor comprehendit me et adoravi coram deo super faciem terrae. 26:2 Et dixit mihi deus: ecce tu morieris, quia praeteristi mandatum dei, quia plus audisti vocem uxoris tuae quam tibi dedi in potestatem, ut haberes eam in voluntatem tuam. et audisti illam et verba mea praeteristi. 27:1 Et cum haec audiui verba dei, procidens in terram adoravi dominum et dixi: domine mi, omnipotens deus et misericors sancte et pie, ne deleatur nomen memoriae tuae maiestatis. sed converte animam meam, quia morior et spiritus meus exiit de ore meo. 27:2 Ne proicias me a facie tua quem de limo terrae plasmasti, nec postponas gratiae tuae quem nutristi. 27:3 Et ecce verbum tuum incedit mihi et dixit dominus ad me: quoniam figurantur dies tui factus es diligens scientiam, propter hoc non tolletur de semine tuo usque in seculum ad ministrandum mihi. 28:1 Et cum haec verba audiui, prostravi me in terram et adoravi dominum deum dicens: tu es aeternus deus et summus et omnes creaturae tibi dant honorem et laudem. 28:2 Tu es super omne lumen fulgens vera lux, vita vivens, incomprehensibilis magnitudinis virtus. tibi dant honorem et laudem spiritales virtutes. tu facis cum genere humano magnalia misericordiae tuae. 28:3 Postquam adoravi dominum, statim Michahel archangelus dei adprehendit manum meam et eiect me de paradiso visitationis et iussionis dei. 28:4 Et tenens Michahel in manu sua virgam tetigit aquas quae erant circa paradysum et gelaverunt. 29:1 Et pertransivi et Michahel pertransivit mecum et reduxit me in locum, unde me rapuit. 29:2 Audi, fili mi Seth, et caetera mysteria sacramentaque futura quae mihi sunt revelata, qui per lignum scientiae comedens cognovi et intellexi, quae erunt in hoc seculo. [29.3 II,III,IV+temporali [III+futura]III quae facturus est Deus creaturae suae humano generi. 29:4 Apparebit Dominus in flamma ignis. ex ore maiestatis suae dabit omnibus mandata et praecepta (ex ore eius exiet gladius ex utraque parte acutus?) et sanctificabunt eum in domo habitationis maiestatis illius. et ostendet illis locum mirabilem maiestatis suae. 29:5 Et tunc aedificabunt domum domino deo suo in terra, qua pavit illos (quam praeparabit eis?), et ibi praeteribunt praecepta eius et accendetur sanctuarium eorum et terra eorum deseretur et ipsi dispergentur propter quod exacerbaverunt Deum. 29:6 Et iterum (die tertio?, septimo?) saluos faciet illos a dispersione illorum, et iterum aedificabunt domum Dei et exaltabitur novissime domus Dei maior quam prius. 29:7 Et iterum superabit iniquitas aequitatem. et post haec habitabit Deus cum hominibus in terris videndus. et tunc incipiet aequitas fulgere. et domus Dei in saeculum honorabitur et non poterunt adversa amplius nocere hominibus, qui sunt in Deo credentes. et suscitabit sibi Deus plebem fidelem, quam salvabit in secula seculorum. et impii punientur a deo rege suo qui noluerint amare legem illius. 29:8 Celum et terra noctes et dies et omnes creaturae obedient ei et non praeteribunt mandatum eius nec mutabunt opera sua. homines autem mutabuntur derelinquentes legem Domini. 29:9 Propter hoc repellet Dominus a se impios et iusti fulgebunt sicut sol in conspectu Dei. et in tempore illo purificabuntur homines per aquam a peccatis. 29:10 Condemnati autem erunt nolentes purificari per aquam. et felix erit homo, qui correxerit animam suam, quando erunt iudicia et magnalia dei inter homines et inquirerentur facta eorum a Deo iusto iudice.]II,III,IV

25:1 Adam said to Seth: "Hear, my son Seth, let me recount for you what I have heard and seen. After I and your mother were cast out of the Garden, 25:2 when we were at prayer, the archangel Michael, the messenger of God, came to me. 25:3 I saw a chariot like the wind, and its wheels were afire, and I was caught up into the the Garden of the just. I saw the Lord seated, his face like fire burning intolerably. Many thousands of angels were at the right and the left of his chariot. 26:1 Seeing this, I was disturbed and fear seized me and I worshipped before God above the face of the earth. 26:2 Then God said to me: 'Behold, you shall die because you transgressed the commandment of God, because you harkened more to the voice of your wife whom I gave over to your control that you might have her in your will. You listened to her and transgressed my words.' 27:1 When I heard these words of God, falling down on the ground I worshipped the Lord and said: 'My Lord, Almighty and merciful God, holy and faithful, do not let the name of the memory of your majesty be destroyed, but turn my soul around, for I will die and my spirit will go forth from my mouth. 27:2 Do not cast me out from your sight, whom you formed from the dust of the earth, nor put me out from your grace whom you nourished. 27:3 Behold, your word has come over me.' Then the Lord said to me: 'Since your days are numbered, you have become attentive to knowledge. On account of this no one shall ever be taken from your offspring to minister unto me.' 28:1 When I heard these words, I prostrated myself on the ground and worshipped the Lord God saying: 'You are the eternal and most high God. All creatures give you honor and praise. 28:2 You are above all, the shining light, the true light, the living life, the Virtue of incomprehensible greatness. To you the spiritual virtues give honor and praise. With the human race you show the great deeds of your mercy.' 28:3 After I worshipped the Lord God, straightway Michael, the archangel of God, took my hand and threw me out of the the Garden of God's visitation and commanding. 28:4 Michael, holding in his hand a rod, touched the waters which surrounded the Garden and they froze. 29:1 Then I crossed over, and Michael crossed over with me and brought me again to the place from which he had taken me. 29:2 Hear also, my son Seth, the other mysteries and promised things to come which have been revealed to me. By eating of the tree of knowledge I have known and understood the things which are in this age, [29:3 II,III,IV+ temporary [III+future]III which God will do to his creation, the human race. 29:4 The Lord will appear in a flame of fire. From the mouth of his majesty he will give commandment and precepts to all (from his mouth will go forth a sword, sharp on both edges?) and they will sanctify him in the house of the dwelling of his majesty. He will show to them the marvelous place of his majesty. 29:5 Then they will build a house for the Lord their God in the land which he will prepare for them, and there they will transgress his precepts. Their sanctuary will be set afire, and their land shall be desolate, and they themselves will be dispersed because they provoked God. 29:6 But again, (on the third / seventh day ?) he will save them from their dispersion and they will build once more the house of God, and it will then be higher than it was before. 29:7 But once again, iniquity will conquer justice. After this, God will dwell, living with men on the earth. Then justice will begin to shine, and the house of the Lord will be honored forever. The opponents will no more be able to kill men who are believers in God. God will then receive unto himself a faithful people, whom he will save forever and ever. But the impious who did not wish to love his law will be punished by God their King. 29:8 Heaven and earth, night and day, and all creatures will obey him and will not transgress his commandment, nor will they alter his works. Men who forsake the law of the Lord, however, will be changed. 29:9 On account of this, the Lord will cast away from himself the impious, but the just will shine like the sun in the sight of God. At that time, men will be purified by water of their sins. 29:10 Those unwilling to be purified by water, however, will be condemned. Blessed will be the man who shall amend his soul when the judgments and great deeds of God will be among men. Their deeds will be investigated by God, the just judge." II,III,IV

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

5:1 Ἐποίησεν δὲ Ἀδὰμ υἱοὺς τριάκοντα καὶ θυγατέρας τριάκοντα. Ἐζήσεν δὲ Ἀδὰμ ἔτη ἑνακόσια τριάκοντα.	30:1 Postquam factus est Adam annos DCCCCXXX,	30(5):1 Եւ ապա յիտ ականորիկ եղին նորա ոստերք եւ դատերք երեսուն երեսուն, եւ անցին նորա: Եւ էր Ադամ ի վերայ չորիք ինն հարիւր եւ երեսուն ամ.	30(5):1 და ამისსა შემდგომად მერმეცა ესხნეს ადამს ოცდაათ ძე და ოცდაათ ასულ, რამეთუ იყვნეს ყოველნი წელი ადამისნი ცხრაას ოცდაათ წელ. და მისგან განმრავლდეს ქუეყანასა ზედა და დაემეწნეს მას ზედა. და ოდეს აღესრულა ცხრაას ოცდაათ იგი წელი, 30(5):2 დასწულდა ადამ, დაღაღ-ყო ხმითა დიდითა და თქუა: "შემოკეზბით ჩემდა ყოველნი ნაშობნი ჩემნი და ვიხილნე იგინი ვიდრე სიკუდილადმდე ჩემდა".	4-5.3 И роди Адамъ сыновъ .л. и дщерии .л. и жить Адамъ .д. сътъ лѣтъ и .л.
5:2 Καὶ περιπεσὼν εἰς νόσον ἐβόησεν φωνῇ μεγάλῃ λέγων· Ἐλθέτωσαν πρὸς με οἱ υἱοί μου πάντες, ὅπως ὄψομαι αὐτοὺς πρὶν ἀποθανεῖν με.	30:2 sciens quoniam dies eius finiuntur dixit [II,III+ad Evam]II,III: con-gregentur ad me omnes filii mei, ut benedicam eos, an-tequam moriar, et loquar cum eis.	30(5):2 Եւ ապա հիանդացաւ Ադամ գախաւ մահու. եւ աղաղակեաց ի ձայն մեծ եւ ասէ. Եկեացին եւ ժողովեացին առ իւ ամենայն որդիք իմ, զի տեսից զնոսա յառաջ մինչ չեւ մեռեալ իցին:	30(5):2 დასწულდა ადამ, დაღაღ-ყო ხმითა დიდითა და თქუა: "შემოკეზბით ჩემდა ყოველნი ნაშობნი ჩემნი და ვიხილნე იგინი ვიდრე სიკუდილადმდე ჩემდა".	4-5.4 и въпадє въ болєсть и възыпи гласомъ великємъ и рече · събєрѣте сє, чєда моя, кѣ мнѣ . 4-5.5 и ѿбоя сє Адамъ вєльми, помєжє нє знаашє чѣто єсть болєсть .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
5.1 And Adam begat 30 sons and 30 daughters and Adam lived 930 years;	30:1 After Adam reached the age of 930 years,	30(5):1 Then, after that, he had sons and daughters, 30 of each kind, and they grew up. Adam was upon the earth 930 years,	30(5):1 And again, after that, Adam had 30 sons and 30 daughters. For all the years of Adam were 930 years. And (those who were descended) from him multiplied over the earth and settled it. And when the 930 years were completed,	4-5.3 And Adam fathered thirty sons and thirty daughters, and he lived 930 years.
5:2 and he fell sick and cried with a loud voice and said, "Let all my sons come to me that I may see them before I die."	30:2 knowing that his days were ended, he said [II, III+to Eve]II,III: "Gather about me all my children that I might bless them before I die, and that I might speak with them."	30(5):2 and then Adam fell sick with a mortal affliction, and he cried out in a loud voice and said, "Let all my sons come and gather by me, so that I may see them first, before I die."	30(5):2 Adam fell ill and cried out in a loud voice and said, "Gather to me all my descendants and I will see them before my death."	4-5.4 And he fell ill and cried out in a loud voice and said, "My children, gather around me." 4-5.5 Adam, of course, was very anxious, since he didn't know what illness was.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
5:3 Καὶ συνήχθησαν πάντες· ἦν γάρ οἰκισθεῖσα ἡ γῆ εἰς τρία μέρη. [καὶ ἦλθον πάντες ἐπὶ τὴν θύραν τοῦ οἴκου ἐν ᾧ εἰσῆρχετο εὐξασθαι τῷ θεῷ.]	30:3 Et congregati sunt in tres partes ante conspectum eius coram oratorio, ubi adorabant dominum deum. [III+erat autem numerus XV milia virorum exceptis mulieribus et parvulis]III	30(5):3 և ժողովեցան առ նա ամենայն որդիք իւր որ էին ամենայն կողմ երկրին [և ժողովեցան առ նա ի դռան տեղով ուր մտանէր նա] և յաղագիս կայր առ Տէր Աստուած:	30(5):3 და შემოკრბეს მისსა ყოველნი ნათესავნი მისნი, რომელნი ღამკვიდრებულ იყვნეს, და ღაუპყრა სამი ნაწილი ქუყყანისაი ნაშობთა მისთა. და შემოკრბეს აღამისსა ყოველნი ნაშობნი მისნი, რამეთუ ღამკვიდრებულ იყვნეს წინაშე კართა მისთა, აღგილსა მას, რომელი კჳნა აღამ, რომელსა შევიდოდა და ილოცვიდა ღმრთისა მიმართ.	4-5,6 и събраше се чедѣ юго и сташе на три страны.
5:4 Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ Σηθ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ· Πάτερ Ἀδάμ, τί σοὶ ἐστὶ νόσος	30:4 Et interrogaverunt eum: [II, III+et cum congregati essent omnes una voce dixerunt] II,III quid tibi est, pater, ut congregares nos? et quare iaces in lecto tuo?		30(5):4 და ჰრქუეს ძეთა მისთა: "რაი არს ესე, მამათ აღამ?"	6-7.1a И рече сынъ юго Сидъ · отьче, отьче Адамѣ, чьто юсть немощь твоя;
5:5 Καὶ λέγει· Τεκνία μου, πόνος πολὺς συνέχει με. Καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ· Τί ἐστὶ πόνος, τί ἐστὶ νόσος	30:5 Et respondens Adam dixit: filii mei, male mihi est doloribus. et dixerunt ad eum omnes filii eius: quid est pater male habere doloribus?		30(5):5 და მან ჰრქუა: "სნეულ ვარ, შეილნო ჩემნო", და ჰრქუეს მას: "რაი არს სენი შენი, ანუ ვითარ დასნეულდი?"	6-7.1b и рече Адамъ · ѿ чедѣ мое, болесть велика юсть въ мнѣ.
6:1 Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς Σηθ λέγει αὐτῷ· Μὴ ἐμνήσθης, πάτερ, τοῦ παραδείσου ἐξ ὧν ἦσθιες καὶ ἐλυσπῆθης [ἐπιθυμῆσας αὐτῶν.]	31:1 Tunc filius eius Seth dixit: domine forte desiderasti de fructu paradisi, ex quo edebas, et ideo iaces contristatus?	31(6):1 և ասէ որդի իւր Սէթ ցԱբաժ. Հայր իմ, լիջեցեր դու գպտուղ դրախտին յորմէ կերակրէիր ի նմանէ և ի ցանկութենէ անտի տրտմեցար.	31(6):1 მოუგო სეთი, ძემან მისძან და ჰრქუა: "მამათ აღამ, რაი არს შენ-და, ანუ მცა მოგესენა ნაყოფი იგი სამოთხისაი და გულმან გითქუა და სჭუვი მისთვის?"	6-7.2 И рече юмоу чедѣ юго · отьче, юда поминаеши блага райская и того ради болиши тако;

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
5:3 And all assembled, for the earth was divided into three parts. [And they all came to the door of the house in which Adam would enter to pray to God]	30:3 They were gathered before his sight in three parts, in front of the oratory where he worshipped the Lord God. [III+They numbered 15,000 men, not counting women and children.]III	30(5):3 All his sons who were in every part of the world gathered by him. [They assembled by him inside the place which Eve had entered,] and he prayed to the Lord God.	30(5):3 And all his progeny gathered to him who had settled, and he divided the three parts of the earth among his descendants. And all Adam's descendants assembled by him, for they had taken a position before his doors, in the place which Adam had made, and into which he would enter and address his prayers to God.	4-5.6 And his children gathered around and stood on three sides.
5:4 And Seth his son said to him: "Father Adam, what is your pain?"	30:4 They asked him [II,III+and when they all had been gathered, they said with one voice]II,III: "What is wrong with you, father, that you have gathered us together? Why are you lying on your bed?"		30(5):4 And his sons told him, "What is this, Father Adam?"	6-7.1a And his son Seth said, "Father, Father Adam, what is your sickness?"
5:5 And he said, "My children, I am crushed by the burden of pain. "And they say to him, "What is pain, what is illness?"	30:5 Answering, Adam said: "My children, I am in great pain." All his children said to him: "What does (it) mean, father, to have great pain?"		30(5):5 [He told them, "I am sick, my sons." And they told him, "What is your illness] and how does a human being fall ill?"	6-7.1b Adam said, "My child, a great pain is in me."
6:1 And Seth answered and said to him: "Did you remember, father, the fruit of paradise of which you used to eat, and have you become sad [in yearning for it]?"	31:1 Then his son, Seth, said: "Lord, do you perhaps long for some of the fruit of paradise, which you used to eat, and therefore you lie there saddened?"	31(6):1 His son Seth said to Adam, "My father, did you remember the fruit of the Garden, of which you used to eat, and have you become sad from that longing?"	31(6):1 Seth, his son, replied to him and told him, "Father Adam, what is with you? Have (you) remembered, perchance, the fruit of the Garden, and you longed for it and have you become sad because of it?"	6-7.2 And his children said to him, "Father, perhaps you are brooding about the delights of Paradise and for this reason it hurts you so."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
6:2 Εἰς οὕτως ἔστιν, ἀναγγεῖλον μοι καὶ ἐγὼ πορεύσομαι καὶ ἐνέγκω σοι καρπὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ παράδεισου. Ἐπιθήσω γὰρ κόπρον ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν μου καὶ προσεύξομαι· καὶ εἰσακουσεταιί μου κύριος καὶ ἀποστελεῖ τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐνέγκω σοι ἵνα καταπαύσῃ ὁ πόνος ἀπὸ σοῦ.	31:2 Dic mihi et vadam ad proximas ianuas paradisi et mittam pulverem in caput meum et proiciam me in terram ante portas paradisiet plangam in lamentatione magna deprecans dominum. forsitan audiet me et mittet angelum suum ut adferat mihi de fructu quod desiderasti.	31(6):2 Եթէ արդարեւ (արդաբէս) իցէ ասա ինձ, զի վնայից մերձ ի դարխան եւ արկից հող գգլիով իմով եւ լացից, զի թերեա տաքէ ինձ Աստուած ի պտղոյ անտի, զի բերից քեզ եւ փարատէ ի քէն ցաւ:	31(6):2 უკუეთუ ევრეთ არს, მითხარ მეღა მივიღე წინაშე სამოთხესა მას ღა გარდავისხა მტუერი თავსა ჩემსა ღა ვტირიდი. ღა ისმინოს ჩემი ხოლო თუ ღმერთმან, ღა მოავლინოს ანგელოზი მისი ღა მომართუას მე ნა- ყოფი სამოთხისაი, ღა მოგართუა შენ, რათა დასცხნე ჭუვილისაგან შენისა.	6-7.3 и рече Сидъ · отъче, азъ идоу съ материмъ своимъ и принесю отъ рая, ѣда како болестъ штолить ти се. 6-7.4 Адамъ рече · ѿ чедо, како да вънидеши ты въ рай; 6-7.5 Сидъ рече · отъче, изидоу на пространо мѣсто противу раи и въсп лачу се изъ срьдѣца, ѣда како оуслышитъ ны господь и принѣститъ изъ рая аггела и штолить болестъ твою.
6:3 Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἀδάμ· Οὐχί, υἱέ μου Σήθ, ἀλλὰ νόσον καὶ πόνους ἔχω.	31:3 Respondit Adam et dixit: non, fili mi, non desi- dero, sed infirmi- tatem et dolorem magnum habeo in corpore meo.	31(6):3 Ասէ ցնա Ադამ. Ոչ է այդպէս (որդեակ իմ Սէթ) այլ հիւանդութիւն եւ ցաւ մահու ունիմ:	31(6):3 ღა ჰრქუა ადამ: შვილო სეით, არა ევრრე არს, არამედ სნეულ ვარ ღა მელმის.	6-7.6 и рече Адамъ · не такъ, сынъ мои, не такъ, нѣ болестъ чръвьную имамъ.
6:4 Λέγει αὐτῷ Σήθ· Καὶ πῶς σοι ἐγένοντο;	31:4 Respondit Seth: quid est dolor, domine pater, nescio; sed noli nobis abscon- dere, sed dic nobis [quia penitus ignoramus] III.	31(6):4 Ասէ ցნա Սէթ. Թո՞րսէ եղի քեզ այդ ցաւ:	31(6):4 მიუგო სეით: "მამათ, რაი არს საღმობაი, ანუ ვითარ გელმის?"	8-10.1 И рече Сидъ · како ти естъ болестъ, како ли ти прииде;

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
6:2 "If this be so, tell me, (and) I will go and bring you fruit from paradise. For I will set dung upon my head and will weep and pray that the Lord will hearken to me and send his angel (and bring me a plant from paradise), and I will bring it you that your pain may cease from you."	31:2 Tell me and I will go up to the entrance of paradise and cast dust on my head and throw myself on the ground before the gates of paradise, mourning in great lamentation, beseeching the Lord. Perhaps he will hear me and send his angel to bring me some of the fruit you desire."	31(6):2 If indeed [this] is the [case], tell me, so that I may go close to the Garden and cast dust upon my head and weep. For, perhaps God will give me of the fruit, that I might bring (it) to you, and this pain may be driven away from you."	31(6):2 If it is thus, tell me and I will go before the Garden and I will cast dust upon my head and I will weep. And, if only God hears me, he will send his angel and he (the angel) will bring me the fruit of the Garden and I will bring it to you so that you may calm your distress."	6-7.3 And Seth said, "Father, I will go with my mother and bring something out of Paradise, by which perhaps your pain will be eased." 6-7.4 Adam, however, said, "My child, how will you be admitted into Paradise?" 6-7.5 Seth said, "Father, I will go to the great plaza before Paradise and cry out from my heart, perhaps the Lord will hear us and permit the angel (from Paradise) to come and your pain will be stilled." 6-7.6 And Adam said, "Not so, my son, not so, I have pain in my belly."
6:3 Adam said to him: "Nay, my son Seth, but I have (much) sickness and pain! "Seth said to him: "And how has this come upon you?" 6:4 Seth said to him: "And how has this come upon you?"	31:3 Adam answered and said: "No, my son, I do not desire it, even though I am suffering infirmity and great pain in my body." 31:4 Seth answered: "What is pain, my lord, father, for I do not know. Do not hide it from us, but tell us [III+ for inwardly we do not know.]III."	31(6):3 Adam said to him, "It is not so, [my son, Seth]; rather do I have mortal sickness and pain." 31(6):4 Seth said to him, "Through whom did this pain come to you?"	31(6):3 And Adam told him, "My son Seth, it is not so, rather I am sick and I have pain." 31(6):4 Seth replied to him, "Father, what is pain and how do you have pain?"	8-10.1 And Seth said, "In what way are you ill, how did it come over you?"

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

7:1 Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἀδὰμ· "Ὅτε ἐποίησεν ἡμᾶς ὁ θεὸς ἐμέ τε καὶ τὴν μητέρα ὑμῶν, δι' ἧς καὶ ἀποθνήσκω, ἔδωκεν ἡμῖν πᾶν φυτόν ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, περὶ ἐνὸς δὲ ἐνετείλατο ἡμῖν μὴ ἐσθίειν ἐξ αὐτοῦ, δι' οὗ καὶ ἀποθνήσχομεν.	32:1 Et respondit Adam et dixit: audite me, filii mei. quando fecit nos deus, me et matrem vestram, et posuit nos in paradisum et dedit nobis omnem arborem fructiferam ad edendum et interdixit nobis: de arbore scientiae boni et mali, quae est in medio paradisi, ne comedatis ex ea.	32(7):1 Ասէ ցնա Ադամ. Իբրեւ արար զմեզ Աստուած, զիս եւ զմայր քո, հրամանս եւս մեզ ի ծառոյ անտի չտառել.	32(7):1 ჰრქუა ადამ სეთს: "შვილო, ოდეს შეგუქმნა ღმერთმან მე და დედაი შენი, და დამადგინა ჩუენ სამოთხესა მას ფუფუნებოსასა ჯამად ნაყოფისა მისისა, ხოლო ერთი ნერგი იყო შორის სამოთხესა, რომლისა გუ-ამცნო ღმერთმან ჩუენ, ვითარმედ ნუ სჭამო.	8-10.2 и рече Адамъ · ꙗгда сътвори богъ мене и матеръ твою, и отъ нея ѿмираемъ и въ вси мрътви бѹдете, даде намъ богъ садъ райскыи, нь Къвгы ради погѹбихомъ
7:2 "Ἦγγισε δὲ ἡ ὥρα τῶν ἀγγέλων τῶν διατηρούντων τὴν μητέρα ὑμῶν τοῦ ἀναβῆναι καὶ προσκυνῆσαι τὸν κύριον. Καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτῇ ὁ ἐχθρὸς καὶ ἔφαγεν ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, ἐγνωκὼς ὅτι οὐκ ἦμην ἔγγιστα αὐτῆς οὐτε οἱ ἄγγελοι.		32(7):2 Խափեաց զմեզ Մատանայ ի ժաման Իբրեւ վերացան հրեշտակքն որ պահապանք էին ծառոյն երկիր պազանել Աստուծոյ. յայնժամ եւս ոտել Մատանայ ի պտղոյ անտի եսայի.	32(7):2 და აცთუნა დედაი თქუენი გულმან და აჭამა მას, რომლი-საგან აწ მოვკუდებოთ. უამი ოდეს იყო მცველთა მათ ანგელოზთაი აღლ-ვისა თაყუანის-ცემად ღმრთისა, აცთუნა იგი მტერმან და აჭამა მისგან	8-10.3 и тогда приближи сѣ часъ .S., видѣ Къвга диявола и поклони сѣ, понеже сътвори сѣ аггелъскыи образомъ . и даде Къвзѣ отъ дрѣва, и прѣстоппи зап овѣди госп одньи, и сънѣсть яже даде змиа.
7:3 Ἐπειτα ἔδωκε καὶ μοι φαγεῖν.		32(7):3a եւս ոտել եսა ինձ. Իբրեւ ոչ գիտել:	32(7):3a და მან მეცთუნა მე, შვილნო ჩემნო, რამეთუ არა უწყოდე.
32:2 Deus autem partem dedit paradisi mihi et matri vestrae: arborem orientalis partis et boreae quae est (et erubie que est?, et bone que est?, boree quod est?) contra aquilonem dedit mihi, et matri vestrae dedit partem austri et partem occidentalem.		32(7):3b Քանզի, որդեակ իմ Սէթ, բաժանեաց Աստուած զդրախտն ինձ եւ մայր քո եսայի. որպէս զի պահապանք մեք զնա, ինձ եւս զկողմ արեւելից եւ զ(հիւսիսի), եւ մայր քո զկողմ արեւմտից եւ զ(հարաւոյ):	32(7):3b და განვიცყო ჩუენ ღმერთმან სამოთხე, მე და დედასა შენსა, ევას, რათამცა დავიცევით იგი, ხოლო მე მომცა აღმოსავლით კერძო და ჩრდილოით, დედასა თქუენსა, ევას, მისცა სამხრით კერძო და დასავლით.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

7:1 And Adam said to him: "When God made us, me and your mother, through whom also I die, he gave us power to eat of every tree which is in the Garden, but, concerning that one only, He charged us not to eat of it, and through this one we are to die.	32:1 Adam answered and said: "Hear me, my children. When God made us, me and your mother, and placed us in paradise and gave us all fruit-bearing trees for food, he forbade us, saying: 'Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, which is in the midst of paradise, you may not eat.'	32(7):1 Adam said to him, "When God made us, me and your mother, he gave us a command not to eat of that tree.	32(7):1 Adam told Seth, "Son, when God made us, your mother and me, he set us in the the Garden of delights [to eat its fruit.] But there was one plant in the middle of the Garden, (very) beautiful, concerning which God ordered us, 'Eat not of it.'	8-10.2 And Adam said, "When God created me and your mother, through whom we die and through whom you will all be mortal, he gave us the Garden in Paradise, which we lost on account of Eve.
7:2 And the hour drew near for the angels who were guarding your mother to go up and worship the Lord, And the enemy gave it to her and she ate from the tree. You know that I was not near her nor the holy angels.		32(7):2 Satan deceived us at the hour when [the] angels [who] were guardians of the tree ascended to worship God. Then, Satan caused Eve to eat that fruit;	32(7):2 And the serpent deceived your mother and caused her to eat of it, because of which, now, we are going to die. When it was the hour for the guardian angels [to ascend] to worship God, the enemy deceived her and she ate of it	8-10.3 At that time, when it was the sixth hour, Eve saw Satan and venerated him, because he came in the form of an angel, and he gave to Eve from the tree and she transgressed the commands of the Lord and ate of what the serpent had handed her."
7:3 Then she gave also to me to eat.	32:2 God, however, gave part of the Garden to me, and part to your mother: to me he gave the tree of the eastern and northern part which is against the north, and to your mother he gave the southern and western part.	32(7):3a Eve gave [it] to me to eat when I did not know. 32(7):3b For, my son Seth, God divided the Garden between me and your mother Eve, so that we might watch it. To me he gave the eastern portion and the [northern], and to your mother, the western and the [southern].	32(7):3a and she deceived me, my children, for I did not know. 32(7):3b And God had divided the [Garden] between us---myself and your mother Eve--so that we might guard it. As for me, he had given me the eastern and northern portion; to your mother Eve he had entrusted the southern and the western portion.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
	33:1 Dedit nobis dominus deus angelos duos ad custodiendos nos.	33:1 Եւ անկաք մեք երկուսսան հրեշտակք որ շրջին ընդ մեզ խրաբանչիք վասն պահպանութեան գորտիստին մինչեւ ի ժամանակ լուսոյն.	33:1 და იყვენს ჩუენ თანა თითოეულად: օ'ზ': ანგელოზნი ცვალ ჩუენლა ვიდრე განთენებოსა უამდმდე.
	33:2 Venit hora ut ascenderunt angeli in conspectu dei adorare. statim invenit locum adversarius diabolus dum absentes essent angeli. et seduxit diabolus matrem vestram, ut manducaret de arbore illicita et contradicta.	33:2 քանզի հանապազ ապր ելանէին (երկիր պագանել Տեսան), ի ժամանակին իբրեւ նորա գնասցին յերկինս յայնժամ խափեաց Սատանայ գմալը քո, եւ ետ ոտել նաւ ի մրդոյ անտի. գիտաց Սատանայ եթէ եւ ոչ էի առ նա եւ ոչ հրեշտակք. յայնժամ ետ ոտել	33:2 ხოლო ყოველსა დღესა აღზდიან ზელა. აღსვასა ოდენ მათსა აც- თუნა დედაი ზენი გუელმან, და ხისა მისგანი აჭამა-ლა. და ოხილა არცა მე ვრთე. არცა ანგელოზნი.	8-10.4 И рече Сидъ · кѣто науми змию; 8-10.5 рече Адамъ сыноу своему · сътвори се дияволъ свѣтъль и аггелъскимъ образомъ прииде къ змии и рече ки · ты кси мудра много, ты даи отъ дрѣва ꙗвѣ да сънѣсть и дасть Адаму. 8-10.6 и тако сътвори · и того ради болести и смърти прѣдахомъ се.
8:1 Καὶ ὀργίσθη ἡμῖν ὁ θεός· καὶ ἔλθων ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ ὁ δεσπότης [ἔθηκε τὸν θρόνον αὐτοῦ καὶ] ἐκέλευσε θωνῇ φοβερά λέγων· Ἀδάμ, ποῦ εἶ; καὶ ἵνα τί κρύβεσαι ἀπὸ προσώπου μου; Μὴ δυνήσῃται κρυβῆναι οἰκία τῷ οἰκοδομήσαντι αὐτήν;	34:1 Et statim iratus est nobis dominus deus et dixit ad me dominus.	34(8):1 Գիտացի այնուհետեւ իբրեւ կերպ ի մրդոյ անտի եթէ բարկացաւ Աստուած ի վերայ մեր:	33:3 მეცა მაჭამა და არა გულისხმა-ვყავ. 34(8):1 ოდელ ვჭამეთ, განრისხდა ღმერთი ჩუენდა	8-10.7 Тѣгда прииде владыка и поставише прѣстолъ господень по срѣдѣ рая, и възвѣа страшнымъ гласомъ · Адамѣ, Адамѣ, гдѣ кси; 8-10.8 азъ рѣхъ · нагъ ꙗсмь, господи, и не могу изити .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

8:1 And God was angry with us, and the Lord came into the Garden [and set up his throne] and called me in a terrible voice and said: "Adam, where art you? And why do you hide from my face? Shall the house be able to hide itself from its builder?"	33:1 The Lord God gave us two angels to watch over us.	33:1 We had twelve angels who went around with each of us, because of the guarding of the Garden, until the time of the light.	33:1 And there were twelve angels with each of us to guard us until the time of the dawn,	8-10.4 And Seth asked, "Who instructed the serpent?" 8-10.5 Adam said to his son, "The Devil changed himself into radiant form and came to the serpent in the form of an angel and said to it, 'You are very intelligent, give to Eve from the tree, she will taste it and also give it to Adam.' 8-10.6 And thus it happened and for this reason we have fallen prey to sickness and death.
	33:2 The hour came for the angels to ascend to the sight of God for worship. At once, the Devil, the enemy, found the place while the angels were absent. And the Devil deceived your mother so that she ate from the unlawful and forbidden tree."	33:2 Since, every day they would go forth [to worship the Lord], at the time when they went to the heavens, at that time Satan deceived your mother and caused her to eat of the fruit. Satan knew that I was not with her, nor the angels, at that time he caused her to eat.	33:2 but each day, they ascended (there). And at the moment of their ascent, the serpent deceived your mother and caused her to eat of the tree, for he had seen that I was not with her any more than the angels.
	33:3 Then she ate it and gave it to me to eat.	33:3 [Afterwards, also, she gave (it) to me.]	33:3 She also made me eat of it and I did not understand.
	34:1 Immediately, the Lord God grew angry with us and said to me:	34(8):1 I knew then, when I ate the fruit, that God was angry with us.	34(8):1 When we had eaten, God became angry with us
				8-10.7 Then the Master came, and in the center of Paradise his throne was set up, and he called out in a frightful voice, 'Adam, Adam, where are you?' 8-10.8 I said, 'I am naked, O Lord, and I cannot come out.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
8:2 Καὶ λέγει· 'Επειδὴ ἔγκατέλιπας τὴν διαθήκην μου, ὠπλήνευκα τῷ σώματί σου ἐβδόμηκοντα πληγὰς. Πρῶτον νόσος πληγῆς ὁ βιασμός τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν· δευτέρον πληγῆς ἀκοῆς καὶ οὖτως καθεξῆς πᾶσαι αἱ πληγαὶ παρακολουθοῦσαι τῷ σώματι.	34:2 eo quod dereliquisti man- datura meum et verbum meum quod confortavi tibi non custodisti, ecce inducam in corpus tuum LXX plagas; diversis doloribus ab initio capitis et oculorum et au- rium usque ad un- gulas pedum et per singula membra torquebimini. haec deputavit in flagel- lationem dolori uno cum arboribus (dolorum pro transgressionem fruc- tus arboris?). Haec autem omnia misit dominus ad me et omnes generationes nostras.	34(8):2 եւ ասէ Աստուած. Փոխանակ զի անցեր զովասիւ իմով. ասից ի վերայ մարմնոյ քո հաւթանասուն պիտ. ցաւ աշաց եւ ականջաց եւ ամենայն զատրածոց դէշտընդումս եւ համարեցաւ զիս ի վիշտս հիաստութեանց որ պահին ի շտեմարանս զի արձակեցէ զնոսա Աստուած ի յիտին ժամանակս:	34(8):2 ღა გუტქუა: " შეუ- რაცხ-ჰყავთ ბრძანებაი ჩემი ღა მეცა შეურაცხ-ჰყვნი თქვენ" . ღა მთავლი- ნა სამეტყდაათი სალმობაი ჩუენ ზეღა, თუალთა ღა ყურთა ღა ვიღრე ფერ- ხთამღე, გულმაი ღა სასწაულნი ღაუნჯებლნი საუნჯეთანი. ესე მიყთ მე ღმერთმან წარსაწყმედელა ღ აღსრულებისა".	8-10.9 и рече господь . никогда тако скрыль се еси отъ мене. егда скрываехи се отъ мене, прѣстѹпиль еси заповѣди моѣ. 8-10.10 умножь тѣло твоѣ ранами и срьдцѹ твоѣмѹ болѣсти. 8-10.11 .а.-ая ꙗза бѹдетъ чрѣвоболь, .в.-ая ꙗза оцеболь и по томъ послѣдѹють вѣсе ꙗзы .о. и .в..

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
8:2 And he said to me: "Since you have abandoned my covenant, I have brought upon your body seventy-two strokes; first a stroke to the eyes, second a stroke to the hearing, and likewise in turn strokes shall follow upon (all parts of) the body."	34:2 'Because you have forsaken my mandate and have not kept my word which I entrusted to you, I will bring upon your body seventy afflictions. You will be racked with pains from the top of your head, eyes, and ears, to the toenails on your feet, and in every single member.' This he counted as punishment fitting in suffering [to the seriousness of our transgression] concerning the trees (of suffering for the transgression of the fruit of the tree?) The Lord sent all these ills upon me and all our generations."	34(8):2 God said, 'Because you transgressed my commandment, I shall bring seventy afflictions [upon] your body, pain of the eyes and ringing of the ears and all the joints.' It will be reckoned for me (?) among the afflictions of sickness which are preserved in the treasures, so that God might send them in the last times."	34(8):2 and he told us, 'You have, therefore, scorned my commandment; I too will scorn you.' And he sent 70 evils upon us, to our eyes, and to our ears and as far as our feet, plagues and portents laid up in (his) treasures. This God did to me to cause me to die a death."	8-10.9 And the Lord said, 'You have never hidden yourself from me.' Since you hide from me, you have thus transgressed my commandment. 8-10.10 I will inflict your body abundantly with injuries and your heart with pains. 8-10.11 The first sickness will be a pain in the belly, the second sickness [will be] dimness of vision and deafness, and on top of this, there will follow seventy-two illnesses of all sorts besides."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

9:1 Ταῦτα δὲ λέγων ὁ Ἀδὰμ τοῖς υἱοῖς αὐτοῦ ἀνεστέναιξε μέγα καὶ εἶπεν· Τί ποιήσω ὅτι ἐν μεγάλῃ λύπῃ εἰμὶ;	35:1 Haec dicens Adam ad omnes filios suos comprehensus est magnis doloribus et clamans magnis vocibus dicebat: quid faciam infelix, positus in talibus doloribus.	35(9):1 Զար իբրեւ ասաց Ադամ ցորդին իր Սէթ. աղաղակեաց եւ ասէ. Յի՛նչ անեմ զի ի մեծ ցաւ եւ յաշխատութիւնս եմ:	35(9):1 ესე რაი ეტყოდა ადამი ძესა თვისსა სეითს, ღაღად-ყოლა თქუა: "რაი-მე ვყო? დიდისა შრომასა შინა ვარ".	11-15.1 Тогда паки въздыхнувъ Адамъ рече къ сыновомъ своимъ . великоу болѣзнь имамъ, чѣда моя .
9:2 Ἐκλαυσε δὲ ἡ Εὐὰ λέγουσα· Κύριέ μου Ἀδὰμ, δός μοι τὸ ἥμισυ τῆς νόσου σου καὶ ὑπενέγκω αὐτό, ὅτι δι' ἐμὲ τοῦτό σοι γέγονεν, δι' ἐμὲ ἐν καμάτοις τυγχάνεις.	35:2 Et cum vidisset eum Eva flentem coepit et ipsa flere dicens: domine deus meus, in me transfer dolorem eius, quoniam ego peccavi. Et dixit Eva ad Adam: domine mi, da mihi partem dolorum tuorum, quoniam a me culpa haec tibi accessit.	35(9):2 Երայ եւ ասէ. Տէր իմ, Ադամ. արի տուր ինձ ի ցաւդ. զի րեկալայց եւ համբերեցից նմա. զի վասն իմ եղեն ցաւդ այդ որ եկեալ հասեալ եմ ի վերայ քո:	35(9):2 ტირილით თქუა ევა: "უფალო ჩემო, აღამ, მომეც ზოგი სალმობათა შენთაი და შრომაი ეგე შენი ვიტივროთო, რამეთუ ჩემ გამო არს სალმობაი შენი და მე შეგამთხვიენ შრომაი ეგე".	11-15.2 тогда Къва съ плачемъ рече Къму . Господине, дай мнѣ отъ болести твоѣе, да си оби подѣливъ . отъ мене бо тако трѣпиши болести .
9:3 Εἶπε δὲ Ἀδὰμ τῇ Εὐᾷ· Ἀνάστα καὶ πορεύου μετὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ ἡμῶν Σήθ πλησίον τοῦ παραδείσου· καὶ ἐπίθετε γῆν ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς ὑμῶν καὶ κλαύσατε,	36:1 Et dixit Adam ad Evam: exsurge et vade cum filio meo Seth ad proximum paradisi [III=portas paradisi] III et mitte pul-verem in capita vestra et prosternite vos in terram et plangite in conspectu dei.	36(9):3 Ասէ ցնա Ադամ. Արի եւ վնայ որդով քո Սէթաւ մերձ ի դրախտն եւ անդ արկանուք հող զգլխով ձերով եւ յացէք առաջի Աստուծոյ.	36(9):3 და პრეტა აღამ ევას: "აღდეგ და მოვედ სეითის თანა, ძისა ჩემისა თანა სამოთხედ. დაისხით მოწაი თავსა თქუენსა და ტიროდეთ წინაშე ღმრთისა,	11-15.3a рече Адамъ къ Къвъзѣ . не възможно естъ подѣлити, нь вьстани съ сыномъ своимъ Сидомъ и иди противу раю, и съ плачемъ посыпаше прѣсть на главѣ свои,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
9:1 As he said this to his sons, Adam groaned sore and said: "What shall I do? I am in great distress."	35:1 Saying this to all his children, Adam was seized with great pains, and crying out with a great voice, he said: "What shall I do, I who am unfortunate, being in so much pain?"	35(9):1 When Adam said this to his son Seth, he cried out and said, "What shall I do, for I am in great pains and toils."	35(9):1 When Adam said this to his son Seth, he cried out and said, "What shall I do? I am in great pain."	11-15.1 Then Adam sighed again and spoke to his sons, "I have a great pain, my children."
9:2 And Eve wept and said: "My lord Adam, rise up and give me half of your pain and I will endure it; for it is on my account that this has happened to you, on my account you have these troubles."	35:2 When Eve saw him, she began to cry and she herself crying said: "My Lord God, transfer his pain over to me, since it was I who sinned." Eve then said to Adam: "My lord, give me part of your pain, since by me this blame came upon you."	35(9):2 Eve wept and said, "My lord Adam. Arise, give me some of your pain, so that I might receive and bear it, for these pains which have come upon you, came about because of me."	35(9):2 Eve said, weeping, "My lord Adam, give me half of your sufferings and I will bear your present pain, for your suffering is due to me and it is I who caused these pains to come upon you."	11-15.2 Then Eve said to him amid tears, "Stand up, my husband, and give me a portion of your pain, we will both share it together; for on account of me you suffer such agony."
9:3 But Adam said to Eve, "Arise and go with my son Seth near to the Garden, and put earth upon your heads and weep	36:1 Adam then said to Eve: "Rise, go with my son, Seth, near the Garden [III]=to the gates of the Garden]III and cast dust on your heads, and prostrate yourself on the ground, lamenting in the sight of God.	36(9):3 Adam said to her, "Arise, go with your son Seth, close to the Garden and there cast dust on your heads and weep before God.	36(9):3 And Adam told Eve, "Arise and go with Seth, my son, to the Garden; cast soil on your head and weep before God so that he might give us grace.	11-15.3a Adam, however, said to Eve, "It is impossible to share it, but rise up together with your son Seth and go to Paradise, and cry, while sprinkling dust on your heads,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
9:4 δεόμενοι τοῦ θεοῦ ὅπως σπλαγχνισθῇ ἐπ' ἐμοὶ καὶ ἀποστείλῃ τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ [εἰς τὸν παράδεισον,] καὶ δώσῃ μοι ἐκ τοῦ δένδρου ἐν ᾧ ῥέει τὸ ἔλαιον ἐξ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐνέγκῃς μοι, καὶ ἀλείψομαι καὶ ἀναπαύσομαι ἀπὸ τῆς νόσου μου. 9:5 [καὶ δηλώσω σοι τὸν τρόπον ἐν ᾧ ἡπατήθημεν τὸ πρότερον.]	36:2 Forsitan miserebitur et transmittet angelum suum ad arborem misericordiae suae, de qua currit oleum vitae, et dabit vobis ex ipso modicum, ut me unguatis ex eo, ut quiescam ab his doloribus, ex quibus consumor.	36(9):4 թերեալ զՅիսակի Աստուած ի վերայ իմ եւ աստքսցէ զհրահրակ իւր ի դրահրտ անդր. եւ երթիցէ ի տեղին ուր կայցէ ծառն ձիթենեաց, յորմէ ելանէ ձէթն, եւ տայցէ քիչ ասկակի մի ի նմանէ, զի բերցես առ իս եւ ւաճից զուկիրս իմ եւ իարատեցայց ի ցաւոց աստի 36(9)5 եւ իմացուցից քիչ զասակս զայս զոր իորձեցար մեր երբեմն:	36(9):4 რაითა წყალობად ყოს ჩუენ ზედა და მთავლობოს ანგელოზი თვისი სამთხელე, სადაცა არს ხე იგი ცხთვებოსაი, რომლისა გამოსდის ზეთი, რაითა კნინ გცეს ზეთი იგი . და მომართუთ მე იგი აქა და ვიცხო და განვიცუენო საღმებათაგან ჩემთა. 36(9):5 მაშინ-ლა გაუწყო შენ ყოველი იგი სახე, რომლითა განვიცადე-ნით.	11-15.3b егда како услышитъ господь молитву ваю и припоуститъ ми отъ дрѣва маслинна, да виждѹ егда како покоитъ ми се болѣсть.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
9:4 and pray God to have mercy upon me and send his angel to the Garden, and give me of the tree out of which the oil flows, and bring it me, and I shall anoint myself and shall have rest from my illness. 9:5 And I will show you the way in which we were deceived at first."	36:2 Perhaps he will take pity and send his angel over to the tree of his mercy from which flows the oil of life, and will give you a little of it with which to anoint me so that I may have rest from these pains with which I am consumed."	36(9):4 Perhaps God will pity me and send his angel to the Garden, and he will go to the place where the olive-tree stands, from which oil comes forth, and give you a little of it, so that you might bring it to me and I might anoint my bones and be separated from pain, 36(9):5 and I might teach you this way...which we were tried formerly."	36(9):4 And (God) will send his angel to the Garden where the Tree of Life is, from which the oil flows out, so that he may give you a little of that oil. And you will bring it here to me and I will anoint myself and I will be healed of my sufferings. 36(9):5 Then I will let you know the whole way in which we were tried.	11-15.3b perhaps God will hear your prayer and grant to me from the Tree of Oils, that I might learn if perhaps my pain may be eased."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

10:1 Ἐπορεύθη δὲ Σηθ καὶ ἡ Εὐὰ εἰς τὰ μέρη τοῦ παραδείσου. [Καὶ πορευομένων αὐτῶν] εἶδεν ἡ Εὐὰ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς καὶ θηρίον πολεμοῦντα αὐτόν.	37:1 Et abierunt Seth et mater eius contra portas paradisi; et dum ambularent, ecce subito venit serpens bestia et impetum faciens morsit Seth.	37(10):1 Գնացին այնուհետև Մէթ եւ նա ի կողմ ի դրախտին. մինչդեռ երթալին, ետես նա (զորդին իւր զի) գազան մի մարտնչէր ընդ Մեթ[այ] եւ խաժանէր զնա. յալ սկսաւ նա եւ սսէ.	37(10):1 ეცე და ესმა, წარვიდეს სეით და ევა, საღა-ოგო იყო სამოთხე აღამისი. სლვასა მისსა იხილა ნაშობთა მისთაგანი, რომელსა ჰბრძოდა მხეცო და ჟებენდა ყრმასა მას, მაშინ ტირილად იწყო ევა და თქლა:	11-15.4 И въставъши Квъга съ сыномъ своимъ Сидомъ приходяще къ раю . 11-15.5 и видѣ Квъга свѣра велия, именемъ Котѣрь, гонѣше изѣсти сына юе Сидра.
10:2 Ἐκλαυσε δὲ ἡ Εὐὰ λέγουσα· Οἶμμοι οἶμμοι, ὅτι ἐὰν ἔλθω εἰς τὴν ἡμεραν τῆς ἀναστάσεως, πάντες οἱ ἁμαρτήσαντες καταράσσονται με λέγοντες ὅτι οὐκ ἐφύλαξεν ἡ Εὐὰ τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ θεοῦ.	37:2 Et cum vidisset Eva flevit dicens: heu mihi miserae, quoniam maledicta sum, quoniam non custodivi praecepta domini.	37(10):2 Զի եթէ եկեսցէ արդատաստանին, ամենայն մեղադրք մեղադիր լինիցին ինձ եւ ասացեն թէ մայրն մեր ոչ լուաւ պատուիրանին Տեառն Աստուծոյ:	37(10):2 “ვაი ჩემდა, რამეთუ ოდეს მივიწყო მე დღესა მას სასჯელი- სასა, ყოველნი შეცოდებანი ჩემნი მჭვიდენ მე და მრქელან: პირველად შენ არა დამარხვენ მცნებანი დამრთისანი”.	11-15.6a и въсплака се Квъга зъло и рече ѿ горѣ мнѣ, чедо мое сладкоѣ, отъ селѣ до свършениа и до .в.-го приишвѣяа клети мѣ хотѣть въси мене бо ради въса зла ѣмножише се.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
10:1 Then Seth and Eve went toward the direction of the Garden. [And while they were going,] Eve saw her son and wild beast assailing him. 10:2 And Eve wept and said: "Woe is me; if I come to the day of the Resurrection, all those who have sinned will curse me saying: 'Eve has not kept the commandment of God.'"	37:1 Seth and his mother went away opposite the gates of the Garden. As they were walking, there suddenly appeared the serpent, the beast, who attacked and bit Seth. 37:2 When Eve saw this, she cried saying: "Alas, woe is me, for I am cursed because I did not keep the precepts of the Lord."	37(10):1 Thereafter, Seth and Eve went in the direction of the Garden. As they were going, Eve saw that a wild beast was fighting with [her son] Seth and was biting him. 37(10):2 Eve began to weep and she said, "[When] the day of Judgment comes; all sins will be blamed upon me and (men) will say, 'Our mother did not hearken to the commandment of the Lord God!'"	37(10):1 When they heard that, Seth and Eve went (to the place) where the Garden of Adam was. As she went she saw one of her descendants who was being attacked by a beast and (the beast) was biting the child. 37(10):2 Then Eve began to weep and said, "Woe is me, for when I arrive at the day of judgment, all my sins will burn me and (people) will tell me, 'In the first instance, it was you who did not observe God's orders.'"	11-15.4 And Eve arose along with her son Seth and set off for Paradise, 11-15.5 and Eve saw a huge animal, called Mongrel, which followed her son Seth, to devour him. 11-15.6a Eve began to cry bitterly and said, "Woe is me, my sweet child, from now on until the end and until the second coming all will curse me, because it is on my account all sorts of evil have multiplied."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
10:3 Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς τὸ θηρίον· ὦ θηρίον πονηρόν, οὐ φοβήσῃ τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ θεοῦ πολεμήσαι αὐτήν· Πῶς ἡνοίγη τὸ στόμα σου; πῶς ἐνίσχυσαν οἱ ὀδόντες σου; πῶς οὐκ ἐμνήσθης τῆς ἐποταγῆς σου ὅτι πρότερον ὑπέταγης τῇ εἰκόνι τοῦ θεοῦ;	37:3 Et dixit Eva ad serpentem voce magna: bestia maledicta, quomodo non timuisti mittera te ad imaginem dei, sed ausus es pugnare cum ea? aut quomodo prae- valuerunt dentes tui?	37(10):3 ბი գոշհաց ծա ի վերայ գազանին եւ ասէ. Ով գազան, դու զի՞ս որ (դու ոչ) երկեար ի պատկերդ Աստուծոյ. զի Համարձակեցար մարտնել ի պատկերդ. Աստուծոյ. եւ կամ զի՞ս որ բացա(ւ) բերան քո եւ զարացան ժանիք քո եւ խոզացաւ մազ քո. եւ զի՞ս որ ոչ լիշեցեր զհնազանդութիւն որ յառաջն էիր. զի բացաւ բերան քո ի պատկերդ Աստուծոյ:	37(10):3 ხმა-ყოფო ევა და ჰრქუა მხეცსა მას ბოროტსა: ჰოი მხეცო უკეთურო, არა გეშინის შენ, იკადრებ და მბრძავ ხატსა ღმრთისსა? ვითარ ვუფლელ აღებად პირისა შენისა, ანუ ვითარ განაწონენ კბილნი შენნი, ანუ ვითარ არა მოიხსენებ პირველი იგი ბრძანებაი ღმრთისაი? და აღვიღებოც პირი შენი ხატსა ღმრთისსა ზელა?	11-15.6b и възъпи къ свѣрѣ глаголю великъ и рече 11-15.7 ѿ свѣрѣ, не боиши ли се иконы божияго образа, нъ хощеши извѣсти его; како смѣеши оуста своя отврѣсти на образъ божий и обья вити зѡбы свое къ нему; како не помѣнѣши, свѣрѣ, како те хранѣхъ роукою моею;
11:1 Τότε τὸ θηρίον ἐβόησε λέγων· ὦ Εὐα, οὐ πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἡ πλεονεξία σου οὕτε ὁ κλαυθμός, ἀλλὰ πρὸς σέ, ἐπειδὴ ἡ ἀρχὴ τῶν θηρίων ἐκ σοῦ ἐγένετο.	38:1 Respondit bestia voce hu- mana: O Eva, numquid non ad vos est malitia nostra? nonne con- tra vos est furor noster?	38(11):1 Յայնժամ գոշհաց գազանն եւ ասէ ցեա. Ապաքէն վասն քո են ժպրհութիւնք մեր. զի ի քէն եւ աւրինակն.	38(11):1 მაშინ მიუგო მხეცმან მან და ჰრქუა ევას: არა ჩუენისა ანგარებოსაგან არს მღურვაი შენი და ტირილი, არამელ შენისა ანგარე- ბისაგან არს მღურვაი შენი და ტირილი, რამეთუ პირველ დასაბამსა შენ ისმინე მხეცისა მის გუელისაი,	11-15.8 тогда свѣрѣ рече къ нѣи · ѿ къво, отъ сель не имаше власти надъ нами да повелѣваеши намы, понеже прѣжде отъ тебе зачело се естъ .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

10:3 And she spoke to the beast: "You wicked beast, Do you not fear to fight with the image of God? How was your mouth opened? How were your teeth made strong? How did you not call to mind your subjection? For long ago you were made subject to the image of God."

11:1 Then the beast cried out and said: "It is not our concern, Eve, your greed and your wailing, but your own; for (it is) from you that the rule of the beasts has arisen."

37:3 Eve said to the serpent in a great voice: "O cursed beast, why are you not afraid to cast yourself at the image of God, but dare to fight against it? Why have your teeth prevailed?"

38:1 The beast answered in a human voice: "O Eve, was our malice ever not against you? Isn't our anger against you?"

37(10):3 Eve called out against the wild beast and said, "O wild beast, how do you [not] fear the image of God, that you dared to fight with the image of God? How was your mouth open[ed] and your fangs bared, and your hair stood on end? How did you not remember the obedience which you formerly displayed, that your mouth was opened against the image of God?"

38(11):1 Then the wild beast cried out and said to Eve, "In truth, our insolence is because of you, for the example came from you."

37(10):3 Eve called out and told the wicked beast, "O evil beast, have you no fear? [Did you dare] to fight with the image of God? How did you take it upon yourself to open your mouth and how have you (thought to) sink your teeth? Or how have you not recalled the first order of God and have opened your mouth against the image of God?"

38(11):1 Then the beast replied to her and told Eve, "It is not from our greed that your discontent and your weeping come, but your discontent and your weeping come from your own greed, for at the beginning of creation, it was you who hearkened to the beast, the serpent."

11-15.6b And she screamed in a loud voice at the animal and said, 11-15.7 "O beast, aren't you afraid before the image of the divine countenance? Will you devour him? How do you dare to open your mouth against the image of God and to bare your teeth against him? Don't you remember, O beast, how I fed you with my own hand?"

11-15.8 Then the animal said to her, "O Eve, from now on you have no power over us to command us, for it has departed from you."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
11:2 Πῶς ἡνοίγη τὸ στόμα σου φαγεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου περὶ οὗ ἐντείλατό σοι ὁ θεὸς μὴ φαγεῖν ἐξ αὐτοῦ; Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡμῶν αἱ φύσεις μετεπλάγησαν.	38:2 Dic mihi, Eva, quomodo apertum est os tuum, ut manducares de fructu, quem praecepit tibi dominus deus ut non manducares:	38(11):2 զիս'րդ բացաւ բերան քո համարձակել եւ ի նստել ի միջոյ անտի. վասն որով պատուիրեսց քեզ Աստուած եթէ մի նստել ի նմանէ.	38(11):2 ვითარ იქადრე აღუბად პირისა შენისა და ჯამად ხისა მისგან, რომლისა გამცნო შენ ღმერთმან არაჯამაი?ხოლო რომლისა გამო ყოველთა სახე იცვალეძის.	11-15.9 како смыяше ты отвѣсти оуста своя и смыѣсти отъ дрѣва, отъ негоже ты не рече господь;
11:3 Νῦν οὖν οὐ δυνήσῃ ὑπενεγκεῖν, ἐὰν ἀπάρεωμαι ἐλέγχῃν σε.	38:3 nunc autem non potes portare, si tibi incepto ex- probrare?	38(11):3 [մինչեւ փոխեսցէ մեր ամենեցուն քնովքինք. դու այսուհետեւ ոչ կարես հանդարտել որ խօսեսցայս առ քեզ. կամ եթէ սկսայց յանդիմանել գրեզ]:	38(11):3 აწ შენ ვერ უძლო დათმენად, უკუვეთ ვიწყო სიტყუდ და მხოლეუბად შენდა.	11-15.10 за то и азъ хошу оубити тебе и избѣсти чѣда твоя. 11-15.11 Тогда Къвѣга не отвѣща ни что .
12:1 Λέγει ὁ Σῆθ πρὸς τὸ θηρίον. Κλείσαι σου τὸ στόμα καὶ σίγα καὶ ἀπόστηθι ἀπὸ τῆς εἰκόνης τοῦ θεοῦ ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς κρίσεως.	39:1 Tunc dixit Seth ad bestiam: inrepet te dominus deus. stupe, ob- mutesce, claude os tuum, maledicte in- imice veritatis con- fusio perditionis; recede de imagine dei usque in diem, quando dominus deus iusserit in comproportionem te adduci.	39(12):1 Յայնժամ ասէ Սէթ ցգազանն. եցցի բերան քո, ո Սատանայ. ի բաց քնա ի պատկերէ Աստուծոյ. [մինչեւ [[հասցէ ար]]] յորում Աստուած ածքէ գրեզ ի յանդիմանութիւն]:	39(12):1 მიუფო სეით და ჰრქუა მხედსა: "დაიყავნ პირი შენი და დალუ- მეზ, მხედო, და განგუეშორე ჩუენ ხატისაგან ღმრთეებისა, ვიდრე მუნ ღლეღმდე, ოდეს წარმოგადგინოს შენ ღმერთმან".	11-15.12 тогда Сидъ рече къ свѣримъ : да затвореть се оуста твоя до суда, понеже такое дрѣзньше на образъ божии, и въ ложи своемъ да прѣбываеши въ вѣки . и такое прѣбываеи въ вѣки.
12:2 Τότε λέγει τὸ θηρίον τῷ Σῇθ· 'Ἰδοὺ ἀφίσταμαι ἀπὸ τῆς εἰκόνης τοῦ θεοῦ.	39:2 et dixit bestia ad Seth: ecce recedo, sicut dixisti, a facie imaginis dei.	39(12):2 յայնժամ ասէ ցՍէթ. Ահա ի բաց կամ ի պատկերէր Աստուծոյ.	39(12):2 მაშინ - და ჰრქუა მხედმან სეითსა: " აჲ ესერა მე შენ განგე- შორედი ხატისაგან ღმრთისა, თუალთ- შეუდგამისაგან ღმრთისა".
12:3 [Τότε ἔφωγε τὸ θηρίον καὶ ἀφῆκεν αὐτὸν πεπληγμένον] καὶ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὴν σκηνὴν αὐτοῦ.	39:3 statim recessit plaga de dentibus a Seth.	39(12):3 փախստիս եղի գազանն ի նմանէ:	39(12):3 და ოდეს დალტევა, ივლტოდა მხეცი იგი სეითისაგან. და მოვიდა კაცი წყალთი ტალავარსა მას აღამისა, მამისა თვისისა,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
11:2 How was your mouth opened to eat of the tree concerning which God commanded you not to eat of it? On this account, our nature also has been transformed. 11:3 Now therefore you cannot endure it, if I begin to reprove you."	38:2 Tell me, Eve. How could you open your mouth to eat the fruit which the Lord God commanded you not to eat.	38(11):2 How was your mouth opened to dare to eat of the fruit concerning which God commanded you not to eat of it?	38(11):2 How did you dare to open your mouth and eat of the tree of which God had ordered you not to eat? You, [[on account]] of whom the aspect of everything has changed,	11-15.9 How did you dare to open your mouth and eat from the tree, which the Lord did not allow you?
12:1 Then Seth spoke to the beast, "Close your mouth and be silent and stand off from the image of God until the day of Judgment."	38:3 Now, however, you are not able to bear it, if I should begin to reproach you?"	38(11):3 [Until he will change all of our natures, henceforth you are unable to resist that which I speak to you, or if I begin to rebuke you.]"	38(11):3 now, you will not be able to endure, if I start speaking and rebuking you."	11-15.10 On account of this I will also kill you and devour your child."
12:2 Then the beast said to Seth: "Behold, I stand off from the image of God."	39:1 Then Seth said to the beast: "May the Lord God reproach you. Be mute, grow silent, close your mouth, cursed enemy of the truth, disorder of destruction. Fall back from the image of God until the day when the Lord God shall order you to be brought in for trial."	39(12):1 Then Seth said to the wild beast, "Close your mouth, O Satan. Get away from the image of God [until [[the day will come]] on which God will bring you to rebuke.]"	39(12):1 Seth replied to him and told the beast, "Let your mouth be closed and be silent, beast, and get away from us, the image of the divinity, until the day when God will have you standing (before him)."	11-15.11 At this Eve didn't answer.
12:3 [And the beast fled and left him wounded] and went to his hut.	39:2 The beast said to Seth: "Behold, I am going away, just as you have said, from the face of the image of God."	39(12):2 Then he said to Seth, "Behold, I am standing apart from you, the image of God."	39(12):2 Then also the beast told Seth, "Behold, then, I get away from you, image of God, dazzling (splendor) of God."	11-15.12 Then Seth spoke to the beast, "Your mouth will be closed until the judgment, for you yourself were so bold against the image of God; you will stay in your lair right into eternity. And so it will remain even in eternity."
	39:3 At once the wound from its teeth disappeared from Seth.	39(12):3 The beast fled from him.	39(12):3 And when the beast had left them, the beast fled (far) from Seth and the wounded man went to the hut of Adam his father."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

13:1 Επορεύθη δὲ Σήθ μετὰ Εὔας πλησίον τοῦ παραδείσου. Καὶ ἔκλανσαν δεόμενοι τοῦ θεοῦ ὥπως ἀποστείλῃ τὸν ἄγγελον αὐτοῦ καὶ δώσει αὐτοῖς τὸ ἔλαιον τοῦ ἐλέου.	40:1 Seth autem et mater eius ambulaverunt in partes paradisi propter oleum misericordiae, utungerent Adam infirmum. et pervenientes ad portas paradisi tulerunt pulverem de terra et posuerunt super caput suum. et prostraverunt se in terram super faciem suam et coeperunt plangere cum gemitu magno deprecantes dominum deum, ut misereretur Adae in doloribus suis et mitteret angelum suum dare eis oleum de arbore misericordiae suae.	40(13):1 Եւ զեսց Մէթ Եւայի(ւ) հանդերձ մերձ ի դրախտն. եւ լացին մեծաձայն լալիս եւ խնդրեցին լիստոծոյ. զի առաքիսցէ զհրեշտակ ապակահուսիս լսել նոցա.	40(13):1 ხოლო სეით წარვიდა ევს თანა სამოთხელ. და ტიროდეს ზღუდესა თანა სამოთხისასა და მუნ ილოცვიდეს ღმრთისა მიმართ, რაითამცა მოავლობნა ანგელოზი თვისი.	16-17.1 И прииде Сидръ къ раи съ матерію своєю, плачуще се и рыдающе и въпийше къ богу, посыпаше пръстимъ главѣ свои.
13:2a Καὶ ἀπέστειλε ὁ θεὸς Μιχαὴλ τὸν ἀρχάγγελον καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ·	41:1 [NIC+ Orantibus autem eis horas multas et deprecantibus ecce angelus Michahel apparens eis dixit: ego missus sum ad te a domino, ego sum constitutus a domino super corpus humanum. tibi dico.	41(13):2a Եւ առաքիսց Աստուած զՄիքայէլ զհրեշտակ առ նոսա, որ է իշխան հոգւոց եւ (սաւ) ցնտա զբան զայս].	40(13):2a და მოავლობნა ღმერთმან მოვარ-ანგელოზი მიქაელ, რომელ არს სულთა ზედა. და ჰრქუა	16-17.2a и пирпѣсти господь архаггела Михаила, и рече Сидрѣ
13:2b Σήθ ἄνθρωπε τοῦ θεοῦ, μὴ κάμῃς εὐχόμενος ἐπὶ τῇ ἱκεσίᾳ ταύτῃ περὶ τοῦ ξύλου ἐν ᾧ ῥέει τὸ ἔλαιον ἀλείψαι τὸν πατέρα σου Ἀδὰμ·	41:2 [Seth homo dei, noli lacrimare orando et deprecando propter oleum ligni misericordiae, ut perunguas patrem tuum Adam pro doloribus corporis sui.	41(13):2b Մէթ [այլ Աստուծոյ]. մի ինչ աշխատիր դու աղաչել վասն խորի որ ի ծառոյն ելանէ. եւրն այն ցնծութեան, ասանել զհայր թր զԱդամ:	40(13):2b სეითს:“ კაცო ღმრთისაო, ნუ შურებდი ღოცვასა მავას ხისა მისთვის ზეთისხილთაისა ცხებად მაშისა შენისა აღაშისა,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

13:1 And Seth went with Eve near the Garden,	40:1 Seth and his mother then walked to the region of the Garden for the oil of mercy to anoint the sick Adam.	40(13):1 Seth, [with] Eve, went close to the Garden,	40(13):1 As for Seth, he went with Eve to the Garden.	16-17.1 And Seth came with his mother to Paradise, and they wept there praying to God to send his angel and give them the oil of mercy.	Arriving at the gate of the Garden, they picked up dust from the ground and cast it on their heads, and prostrated themselves on the ground and began to lament with a great moan, beseeching the Lord God that He might have mercy on Adam in his pains, and send his angel to give them some oil from the tree of his mercy	and they wept with loud lament and asked God to send an angel to help them.	And they were weeping close to the wall of the Garden, and there they supplicated God to send them his angel.	they cried and sobbed and entreated God, sprinkling their heads with dust.
13:2a And God sent the archangel Michael and he said to Seth:	41:1 [NIC+After they had prayed and pleaded for many hours, behold, the angel Michael appeared to them and said: "I was sent to you by the Lord. I was given power over the human body.	41(13):2a God sent to them the angel Michael, who is prince of souls, and [he spoke these words to them],	41(13):2a [And God sent to them the archangel Michael,] who is in charge of the souls, and he told Seth,	16-17.2a And God sent his archangel Michael and he spoke to Seth,
13:2b "Seth, man of God, weary not yourself with prayers and entreaties concerning the tree which flowed with oil to anoint your father Adam.	41:2 [I tell you, Seth, man of God, do not weep, praying and pleading for the oil of the tree of mercy to anoint your father Adam on account of the pains of his body.	41(13):2b "Seth, [man of God]: Do not labour to supplicate for the oil which issues forth from the tree—that oil of joy—to anoint your father Adam.	41(13):2b "Man of God, do not labor to supplicate thus concerning the olive tree, in order to anoint your father Adam.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
13:3 Οὐ γενή- σεται σοι νῦν [ἀλλ' ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν. τότε ἀναστήσεται πᾶσα σὰρξ ἀπὸ Ἀδὰμ ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης τῆς μεγάλης ὅσοι ἔσονται λαὸς ἄγιος. 13:4 [Τότε αὐτοῖς δοθήσεται πᾶσα εὐφροσύνη τοῦ παραδείσου καὶ ἔσται ὁ θεὸς ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν. 13:5 [Καὶ οὐκ ἔσονται ἔτι ἐξαμαρτάνοντες ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ ὅτι ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτῶν ἡ καρδία ἢ πονηρὰ καὶ δοθήσεται αὐτοῖς καρδία συνετιζομένη τὸ ἀγαθὸν καὶ λατρεῦν θεῷ μόνῳ.]	42:1 [Quia nullo modo poteris ex eo accipere, nisi in novissimis diebus, quando completi fuerint quinque milia et quingenti anni. 42:2 [Tunc veniet super terram amantissimus rex dei resuscitare corpus Adae et cum eo resuscitare cor- pora mortuorum. 42:3 [Et ipse filius dei veniens baptizabitur in flumine Jordanis et dum egressus fuerit de aqua Jordanis, tunc de oleo misericordiae suae perunguet omnes credentes in se. 42:4 [Et erit oleum misericordiae in generationem et generationem eis, qui renascendi sunt ex aqua et spiritu sancto in vitam aeternam. 42:5 [Tunc descendens in terris amantissimus filius dei Christus introducet patrem tuum Adam in par- adisum ad arborem misericordiae.] NIC	42(13):3a Այլ այլ ոչ ունի լինել, բայց սպա ի ժամանակին իբրեւ լնուն եւ կատարին ամբ կատարածին. 42(13):3b յայնժամ եկեաց սիրելին Քրիստոս. յարուցանել զմարմինն Ադամայ. վասն յանցանաց նորա որ եղին: 42(13):3c եկեաց ի Թորանան եւ մկրտեացի ի Նմանէ եւ յորժամ եցէ նա ի ջրոյ անտի. յայնժամ եկեաց Միքայէլ եւ խղովն ցնծութեան ստեց զնոր Ադամ նովաւ. 42(13):4 եւ սպա յնտ աշտրիկ դովին աւրինակաւ լինիցի ամենայն զազանաց երկրի որ յարիցեն ի յարութեան, եւ լինիցին արժանատրք մտանել ի դրախտ անդ. եւ եւ ամբից զնոսա խղով այնուրիկ: 42(13):5 [Tunc descendens in terris amantissimus filius dei Christus introducet patrem tuum Adam in par- adisum ad arborem misericordiae.] NIC	42(13):3a აწვე არა ყოფად არს, არამედ მერმეთა უამთა, ოდეს ადესრუ- ლოს ხელთათსი წელიო. 42(13):3b ხოლო მეხელთათსესა და ნახევარსა წელი- მთვიდეს ქუე- ყანად საყუარელი იგი ძე ღმრთისაი, ქრისტე, აღვდებად გუამისა მის აღამისა დაცემისა მისგან გარდასლვითა მცნებათაითა. 42(13):3c მთვიდეს და ნათელ-იღოს იორდანესა მდინარესა. და ოდეს მიერ წყლით გამოვიდეს ზეთითურთ, და სცხოს იგი მას 43(13):4 და ყოველთა ნათესავთა მისთა, რათა აღვცნე უამსა მას აღვგომისასა. თქუა უფალმან: და შევიყუანნე მუნ სამოთხედ და ვსცხო მათ საცხებელი ესე.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

13:3 For it shall not be yours now, [but at the end of the times. Then shall all flesh be raised up from Adam till that great day,—all that shall be of the holy people. 13:4 [Then shall the delights of the Garden be given to them and God shall be in .their midst 13:5 [And they shall no longer sin before his face, for the evil heart shall be taken from them and there shall be given them a heart understanding the good and to serve God only.]	42:1 [For in no wise can you receive any until the last days, after 5500 years have passed. 42:2 [Then the most loving king of God will come upon the earth to resurrect the body of Adam and, with him, the bodies of the dead. 42:3 [The very Son of God, when he comes, will be baptized in the river Jordan, and when he comes forth from the water of the Jordan, he will then anoint all who believe in him with the oil of his mercy. 42:4 [This oil of mercy will be from generation to generation on those who are reborn of water and the Holy Spirit into eternal life. 42:5 [Then, the most loving Son of God will descend into the earth and lead your father, Adam, back into the Garden to the tree of mercy.] NIC	42(13):3a This cannot be now: but then, at that time when the years of the end are filled and completed, 42(13):3b then the beloved Christ will come to resurrect Adam's body, because of his sins which took place. 42(13):3c He will come to the Jordan and be baptized [by] him, and when he will come forth from the water, then Michael will come and anoint the new Adam with the oil of joy. 42(13):4 Then, after that, it shall happen in the same fashion to all the wild beasts of the earth, who will arise in resurrection and be worthy of entering the Garden. I shall anoint them with that oil.	42(13):3a This is not to be right now but in the future times, when five thousand years have been completed. Then, at the 5500 year 42(13):3b the beloved Son of God, Christ, will come upon the earth to re[[urrect]] Adam's body from his fall, because of the transgression of the commands. 42(13):3c He will come and he will be baptized in the river Jordan. And as soon as he will have come forth from the water, with the (anointing) of oil, he will anoint him, him 43(13):4 and all his descendants, so that they will rise at the time of the resurrection. The Lord said, 'I will admit them into the Garden and I will anoint them with that unction.'
--	---	---	--	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
13:6 Σὺ δὲ πάλιν πορεύου πρὸς τὸν πατέρα σου, ἐπειδὴ ἐπληρώθη τὸ μέτρον τῆς ζωῆς αὐτοῦ εἰς ὧν ἡμερῶν ἐξέρχομένης δὲ τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ, μέλλεις θεάσασθαι τὴν ἀνοδὸν αὐτῆς φοβερὰν.	43:1 Tu autem, Seth, vade ad patrem tuum Adam, quoniam completum est tempus vitae illius. adhuc sex dies tunc exhibit anima eius de corpore et, cum exierit, videbis magna mirabilia in caelo et in terra et in luminaribus caeli.	43(13):6 Բայց դու գնա առ Ադամ հայրն քո. քանզի լցան ժամանակք նորա. մինչև ցերիս ատորս: (ոմիս) տեսանել զարմանալիս բազումս յերկինս եւ յերկրի եւ ի (լուսատորս) ամենայն որ յերկինս է:	43(13):6 ხოლო აჲ მივედ მაძისა შენისა ადამისა, რამეთუ აღსრულე-ბულ არიან დღენი ეამთა მისთანი, სამ დღე გამოვიდეს სული გუდამისაგან მისისა და თხილნეს საკვირველებანი მრავალნი ცათა შინა.	16-17.2b чловѣче божи, възврати се къ отцю своему, понеже приближилъ се къ тебѣ днь сирѣти, и не имать врачѣбъ.
14:1a Εἰπὼν δὲ ταῦτα ὁ ἄγγελος ἀπῆλθεν ἀπ' αὐτῶν.	43:2 Haec dicens Michahel statim recessit a Seth.	43(14):1a Զայս իբրիս խառնցաւ հրեշտակն, քաղաքի եղիւ ընդ ծառով դրախտին:	43(14):1a ესე რაო თქუა ანგელოზმან მან, და დაეღუარა ნერგსა მას ქუე-შე სამთხისასა.	16-17.3 и даде ему .г. проты (от дрѣва, отъ негоже изгнанъ бысть) . певьги, кедръ и кypressъ. 16-17.4 И въземъ Сидъ проты и принесе къ отцю своему.
14:1b Ἦλθε δὲ Σήθ και ἡ Εὕα εἰς τὴν σκηνὴν ὅπου ἔκειτο ὁ Ἀδάμ.	43:3 et reversi sunt Eva et Seth. ac tulerunt secum [III+ ramusculum et odor]III odora-menta hoc est nardum et crocum et calaminthen et cinamomum. [III+]legenda de ligno crucis]III 44:1 Et cum per-venissent Seth et mater eius ad Adam dixerunt ei [III+omnia, quae gesta fuerant in via, et dixit]III, quia bestia serpens morsit Seth.	44(14):1b եկին այնուհետեւ Սէթ եւ Եւա ի տաղաարն ուր Ադամ կար հիանդացեալ. իջեալ Ադամ վասն ծառոյն կերակրոյն յանցմանն,	43(14):1b ხოლო სეით და ევა წარვიდეს ტალავარსა მას ადამისსა. და ტიროდა ადამ წყულულებასა მას მხეცისასა	16-17.5 и видѣ Адамъ и позна и въздѣхнувъ зѣло и свѣить себѣ вѣньць и възложи на главоу свою 16-17.6 и призыва чѣда своя и вѣнучета ихъ.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
13:6 But do go back to your father since the term of his life is filled in three days, and when his soul goes forth you will see its awesome ascent."	43:1 But you, Seth. go to your father, Adam, for the time of his life is complete. Six days hence, his soul will go forth from his body, and when it does, you will see great wonders in heaven and on earth, and in the lights of heaven."	43(13):6 But you, go to Adam your father, for his times will be full in three days and you [have] to see many wonders in heavens and upon earth and in all [luminaries] which are in the heavens."	43(13):6 But now, go to your father Adam, because the days of his times are completed. (In) three days his soul will go out of his body and numerous wonders will be seen in the heavens."	16-17.2b "Man of God, go back to your father, for his day of death is drawing near, and there is no cure for him."
14:1a After the angel said these things it left them.	43:2 Saying this, Michael at once withdrew from Seth. 43:3 Seth and Eve went home, carrying with them [III+a small branch and incense]III spices — nard, crocus, calaminth, and cinnamon. [III + Legend of the Wood of the Cross]III	43(14):1a When the angel had spoken this, he disappeared behind a tree of the Garden.	43(14):1a When the angel had told that to him, (immediately) he was hidden underneath the plant of the Garden.	16-17.3 And he gave him three branches (from the tree, on account of which he was expelled): from the spruce, from the cedar, and from the cyprus. 16-17.4 And Seth took the branches and brought them to his father.
14:1b And Seth and Eve came to the hut where Adam was lying.	44:1 When Seth and his mother reached Adam, they said to him [III+ all that had been done on the way, and said]III that the beast, the serpent, had bitten Seth.	44(14):1b Thenceforth, Seth and Eve came to the hut where Adam lay sick. Adam remembered about the transgression of the eating of the tree,	44(14):1b Now, Seth and Eve departed for Adam's hut. And Adam wept because of the wound of the beast	16-17.5 And Adam saw and recognized them, and with a heavy sigh he coiled a wreath, and set it on his head, 16-17.6 and [Adam] called his sons and grandchildren to him.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

14:2 Λέγει δὲ Ἀδὰμ τῇ Εὕᾳ· ὦ Εὗᾶ, τί κατειργάσω ἐν ἡμῖν; Ἐπήνεγκας ἐφ' ἡμᾶς ὄργην μεγάλην, ἥτις ἐστὶ θάνατος κατακυριεύων παντὸς τοῦ γένους ἡμῶν. 14:3 Λέγει Ἀδὰμ τῇ Εὕᾳ· Κάλεσον πάντα τὰ τέκνα ἡμῶν καὶ τὰ τέκνα τῶν τέκνων ἡμῶν καὶ ἀνάγγειλον αὐτοῖς τὸν τρόπον τῆς παραβάσεως ἡμῶν.	44:2 Et dixit Adam ad Evam: quid fecisti? induxisti nobis plagam magnam, delictum et peccatum in omnem generationem nostram. et hoc quod fecisti post mortem meam refert filios tuos, 44:3 quoniam qui exsurgent a nobis laborantes non sufficient sed deficient et maledicent nos dicentes: 44:4 quoniam omnia mala intulerunt nobis parentes nostri, qui ab initio fuerunt. 44:5 haec audiens Eva coepit lacrimare et ingemescere. [III+]legenda de ligno crucis]III.	44(14):2 Եւ ասէ ցեւա. Ոհ, զի՞նչ արարիր. կամ որպիսի ցաւ ածեիր ի վերայ մեր եւ ի վերայ զսասկի մերոյ. 44(14):3a արդ այսուհետեւ որպէս զիս՞ող եղիւ յանցանքն պատմեսցիս որդեց թոց. զի լքայ ասսիկ ի պակասել զպրութ(եանս) իմոյ. 44(14):3b զի գուցէ իբրեւ մեռանիցիմք, եկեսցեն աշխատութիւնք ի վերայ երկրի. եւ աշխատեսցին ամենայն ազգ որ եղեալ են ի մէ(ն)ք. եւ նզովեսցեն զմեզ եւ ասասցեն եթէ 44(14):4 հայր մեր եւ մայր մեր ածին զ[չարիս գայս] ի վերայ մեր:	44(14):2 და ჰრქუა ევას: “რაი მყო ჩუენ, რამეთუ მოიწია ჩუენ ზედა გუებაი, და ყოველისა ნათესავისა ჩუენისა. 44(14):3a რამეთუ რაი არიან შეცოდებანი შენნი, აღწყვენ შეილთა შენთა, 44(14):3b რამეთუ ჩუენ მოვკლდეთ, მე და შენ, და განუფინენ ჭირნი ქუეყანასა ზედა. ყოველნი ნათესავნი, რომელნი არიან გაბოსრულნი ჩუენ- გან, გუწყევდენ ჩუენ და თქუან, ვითარმედ: 44(14):4 “მაჰა-ღელათა ჩუენთა მოიღეს ჭირი ესე ჩუენ ზედა”.
--	---	---	---

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

14:2 And Adam said to Eve: "O Eve, What have you done to us? You have brought great wrath upon us which is death which will rule over our entire race." 14:3 And Adam said to Eve: "Call all our children and the children of our children and tell them the manner of our transgression."	44:2 Adam said to Eve: "What have you done? You have brought on us a great affliction, fault and sin unto all our generations. What you have done will be passed on to your children after my death, 44:3 for those who arise from us will not have all they need from their labors, but will be lacking. They will curse us, saying: 44:4 "Our parents, who were from the beginning, brought all these evils on us." 44:5 Hearing this, Eve began to weep and moan. [III + Legend of the Wood of the Cross]	44(14):2 and he said to Eve, "Oh, what did you do? What sort of pain did you bring upon us and upon our seed? 44(14):3a Now, then, tell your children how the sin took place; for, behold, I am weakened unto the exhaustion of my strength. 44(14):3b For, perhaps, when we die, toils will come upon the earth and all the generations who will issue from u[s] will labor. And they will curse us and say, 44(14):4 'Our father and our mother brought [these evils] upon us.'"	44(14):2 and he told Eve, "What has been done with us? For an evil has come upon us and upon all our descendants. 44(14):3a Indeed, tell your children what your sins are: 44(14):3b for we will die, you and I, and misfortunes will spread over the earth. All the descendants who have come forth from us will curse us saying, 44(14):4 'It was our father and mother who brought this misfortune upon us.'"
--	--	--	--	--

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

15:1 Τότε λέγει ἡ Εὐα πρὸς αὐτοῦς· Ἀκούσατε, πάντα τὰ τέκνα μου καὶ τὰ τέκνα τῶν τέκνων μου, καὶ γὰρ ἀναγγελῶ ὑμῖν πῶς ἠπάτησεν ἡμᾶς ὁ ἐχθρός.		44:1 Յայնժամ լալ սկսաւ նա, և ասէ. նկայք յապրողք ինձ և պատմեցից ձեզ զառաքի գալս, որպէս զհարդ եղին յանցանք մեր:	44:1 მამონ ტინოლად იწყო ევა და თქვა: "ისმინეთ აწ ჩემი, შვილნო ჩემნო, და ვითხრა თქვენ, ვითარ შევიტყუეხენოთ..	18-20.1 Събравъшими се чедомъ его, и бысть въсѣхъ числомъ двѣ хилядѣ людемъ, и въп рочише глаголюще: о мати наша, ты вѣса знаеши отца нашего Адама съкровенна и обьявляюща, повѣждь намъ, мати наша, чѣто се дивное видимъ; 18-20.2 тогда Къва рече: прѣпоручаю вамъ, чѣда моя, яко прѣльсти насъ врагъ, да не прѣльстити и васъ прѣзь законъ нашъ. 18-20.3 Адамъ блядѣше раи отъ въсточныя страны и съвернюю страну, азъ же съблѣдахъ западную и пладную страну.
15:2 Ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ φυλάσσειν ἡμᾶς τὸν παρ᾽αδείσων, [ἐφυλάττομεν] ἕκαστος ἡμῶν τὸ λαχόν τι αὐτῷ μέρος ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ· ἐγὼ δὲ ἐφύλαττον ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ μου νότον καὶ δῦσιν.		44:2 Ի ժամանակին յորժամ պահէր հար ձեր զվիճակ բաժանի իւրոյ զոր տուեալ էր նմա յԱստուծոյ, և ես պահէի իմում վիճակին ի կողմանէ հարաւոյ (և արեւմտից)	44:2 და იყო მამაი თქუენი სცვიდა თვისსა სამთხისა ნაწილსა აღმოსავალით და ჩრდილოთი, ხოლო მე ვსცევდი თვისსა ნაწილსა დასავა-ლით და სამხრით. 44:3 და მოვიდა ეშმაკი ნაწილსა აღმოსასა. და იყვნენ მუნ მხეცნი.
15:3 Ἐπορεύθη δὲ ὁ διάβολος εἰς τὸν κλῆρον τοῦ Ἀδάμ, ὅπου ἦν τὰ θηρία,		44:3 գնաց Մատանայ ի վիճակ հար ձերոյ, ուր էին գազանքն, կռչեաց զամեն և ասէ քնա. Արի եկ դու առ իս,	44:3 და მამალი ყოველი მისცა ადამს და თვითთუელად ვზრდიდით მათ.
15:4 ἔπειδὴ τὰ θηρία ἐμέρισεν ὁ θεός, τὰ ἀρσενικά πάντα δέδωκε τῷ πατρὶ ὑμῶν καὶ τὰ θηλυκὰ πάντα δέδωκεν ἑμοί. [καὶ ἕκαστος ἡμῶν τὸ ἑαυτοῦ ἔτρεφ.]		44:4 քանզի գազանս բաժանեաց Աստուած և ես մեզ զարտան ես հար ձերոյ և զգզան ես ինձ, և անուցանեաք մեք ըստ իւրաքանչիւր որում հասեալ էր:	44:4 რამეთუ მხეცენიცა განვეყვენა უფალმა: მამალი ყოველი მისცა ადამს და თვითთუელად ვზრდიდით მათ.	18-20.4 Адамъ съблѣдаше свѣри мѡжьскыи поль, азъ же съблѣдахъ свѣри женъскыи поль.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

15:1 Then said Eve to them: "Hear all my children and children's children and I will relate to you how the enemy deceived us.		44:1 Then Eve began to weep and said, "Come near me and I will tell you this way, how our sin took place.	44:1 Then Eve began to cry and she said, "Now hearken to me, my children, and I will tell you how we were tricked.	18-20.1 When all his children had assembled themselves--and they were altogether nearly two thousand people--they bid Eve, saying, "Our Mother, you know every secret and open thing of our father Adam, tell us, our mother, what does this incredible manifestation which we see mean?" 18-20.2 Then Eve said, "I will share with you, my children, in what manner our enemy deceived us, so that he will not be able to incite you as well against our law.
15:2 It befell that we were guarding the Garden, each of us [was guarding] the portion allotted to us from God. Now I guarded in my lot, the west and the south.		44:2 At the time when your father was guarding the lot of his portion which had been given to him by God and I was guarding in my lot, at the southern [and western side],	44:2 It happened, (then), that your father was guarding his portion of the Garden, the east and the north, while I was guarding my own portion, the west and the south.	18-20.3 Adam watched the eastern and northern sides of Paradise, I guarded the western and southern side.'
15:3 But the Devil went to Adam's lot, where the male creatures were.		44:3 Satan went to your father's lot, where the wild beasts were. He summoned the serpent and said to him, 'Arise, come to me!'	44:3 And the Devil came to Adam's portion. And there were beasts there,
15:4 For God divided the creatures; all the males he gave to your father and all the females he gave to me. [Each of us guarded his own portion.]		44:4 For God had divided the wild beasts and given them to us--the male ones he gave to your father and the female ones he gave to me. We used to nourish them according to whichever of us it had been allotted.	44:4 for the Lord had also divided the beasts between us. All (that were) male He had given to Adam, and all (that were) female, He had given to me. And we each fed our own ones.	18-20.4 Adam guarded the male animals, I tended the female animals.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

16:1 Καὶ ἔλαλθε τῷ ὄφει ὁ διάβολος λέγων· Ἀνάστα, ἔλθε πρὸς με [καὶ εἶπω σοι ῥῆμα ἐν ᾧ ὠφειληθῆς.] Καὶ ἀναστὰς ἦλθε πρὸς αὐτόν.

16:2 Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ διάβολος· Ἀκούω ὅτι φρονιμώτερος εἶ ὑπὲρ πάντα τὰ θηρία. [Ἐγὼ δὲ ἦλθον κατανοῆσαί σε· εὖρον δὲ σε μερίζονα πάντων τῶν θηρίων] καὶ ὁμίλῳ σοι· [ὁμῶς προσκυνεῖς τὸν ἑλαχιστότερον]

44:1 Եւ սաէ Սատանայ ցամաւն. Արի եկ դու առ իս եւ սանմ քիզ քան մի ինչ որ շահ լինի քեզ:

44:2a Յայնժամ եկն առ նա ամեն, եւ սաէ ցնա Սատանայ. Լսեմ զի իմաստունն ես դու քան գամենայն գազանս, եւ ես եկի տեսանել զքեզ (եւ գոի զքեզ յամենայն գազանս). զի չիք նման հանճարոյ քո. որպէս եւ Ադամ տալլ լեռնակուր ամենայն գազանաց, նոյնպէս եւ դու:

44:2b Եւ ապա յորժամ գնացին գազանքն երկիր պազանեի Ադամայ. գնաց եւ Սատանայ ընդ նոսա եւ սաէ ցամաւն. Ընդէ՞ր դու երկիր պազանես Ադամայ ամենայն առաւատ. յառաջ դու ես երեւել քան դատ. զիս՞ող երկիր պազանես առաջինդ յետնոյ, ալլ պարտ է փոքուն երկիր պազանեի առաջին, 44:1 ოდეს მოვიდა ეშმაკი ნაწილსა მას მამისა თქუენისასა, მოუწოლა ეშმაკმან გუელსა მას და ჰრქუა· „აღდეგ და მოვედ ჩემლა და გაუწყო შენ სარგებელი სიტყვისაო“.

44:2a მაშინ მოვიდა გუელი იგი და ჰრქუა ეშმაკმან გუელსა მას, ვითარმედ· „უბრძნეს ხარ შენ ყოველთა პირუტყუთა და მოსრულ ვარ გან“ ცლად მეცნეირებისა შენისა, რამეთუ აღამამან მისცის საზრდელი ყოველთა პირუტყუთა, ეგრეცა შენ ზედა,

44:2b ოდეს-იგი მოვიდან ყოველნი პირუტყუნი თაყუანის-ცემად აღამისა დღითი-ღღე და დღითი-ღღილად . ყოველსა ღღესა მიხვიდი შენცა თაყუანის-ცემად. პირველად მისსა შენ დაბადებული ხარ, დიდი ესე, და კნინსა მას თაყუანის-სცემ!

18-20.5 и тако вьниде дия воль вь страну ону, отъ коуду бѣше Адамъ, и призыва змию къ себѣ и рече ѿи · ты еси лмбовьна оу бога, та ра(звѣ) всѣхъ вещей тебѣ хощеть вѣровати .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

16:1 And the Devil spoke to the serpent saying, "Rise up, come to me [and I will tell you a word whereby you may have profit]." And he arose and came to him.		44:1 Satan said to the serpent, 'Arise, come to me and I will tell you something which is of profit to you.'	44:1 When the Devil came to your father's portion the Devil summoned the serpent and told him, "Arise and come to me, and I will teach you a useful word."	18-20.5 And so the enemy entered in from that side on which Adam was, and he called the serpent to himself and said to it, 'You are loved by God, therefore she (Eve) will give credence to you before any other creature.'
16:2 And the Devil said to him: "I hear that you are wiser than all the beasts, [I have come to observe you. I have found you greater than all the animals] and I have come to converse with you. [Nevertheless you worship the lesser.]		44:2a Then the serpent came to him and Satan said to it, 'I hear that you are wiser than all the wild animals and I have come to see you. [I found] that there is none like [you] in your cunning [among all the animals]. Even as Adam gave nourishment to all the wild beasts, so also you did." 44:2b And then, when the wild beasts went to worship Adam, Satan went with them and said to the serpent, 'Why do you worship Adam every morning? You came into being before him: why is it that you, who are the former one, worship the later? Rather should the younger worship the older.	44:2a Then, the serpent came and the Devil told the serpent, "I ([hear]) that you are wiser than all the animals and I have come to test your knowledge, for Adam gives food to all the animals, thus also to you.
			44:2b When then all the animals come to bow down before Adam from day to day and from morning to morning, every day, you also come to bow down. You were created before him, as old (as you) are, and you bow down before this younger one!

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
16:3 Διὰ τί ἐσθίεις ἐκ τῶν ζιζανίων τοῦ Ἀδάμ [καὶ τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ οὐχὶ] ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου; Ἀνάστα καὶ ποιήσωμεν αὐτὸν ἐκβληθῆναι ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου ὥς καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐξεβλήθημεν δι' αὐτοῦ.		44:3 ընդ"ը հրկիր պառաննս, կամ կերակրիս դու լնդամայ, եւ ոչ կերակրիս դու ի պտղոյ դրախտին: Աղէ, արի, եկ դու առ իս եւ լուր զոր ինչ ասեմ քեզ. հանցուք զնրամ ի դրախտէս, որպէս զմեզ. զի դարձեալ մեք մտցուք ի դրախտ անդր:	44:3 ღა რაისა სჯამ ნარჩვესა აღამისსა და ცოლისა მისისასა, და არა ნაყოფთა კეთილთა სამოთხისათა? არამელ მოვედო და ისმინე ჩემი რაითა გამოვჰხადოლდ აღამ გარეშე ზღუდესა სამოთხისასა, ვითარცა ჩუენ გარე ვართ. და, ვინ უწყის, ვითარ ჩუენ ნუღუჟუე შევიდეთ სამოთხესა?.
16:4a Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ ὄφεις· Φοβοῦμαι μήποτε ὀργισθῇ μοι ὁ θεός.		44:4a եւ ասէ ասն. Ո՞րպէս եւ կամ զիս"րդ մարթնացուք հանել զնա ի դրախտէն:	44:4a და ჰრქუა გუელმან:"ვითარ გამოვჰხადოთ?"
16:4b Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ διάβολος· Μὴ φοβοῦ· γενοῦ μοι σκευὸς καγὼ λαλήσω διὰ στόματός σου ῥήματα πρὸς τὸ ἐξαπατηῆσαι αὐτούς.		44:4b Ասէ Մատանայ ցաւն. Լեր դու ինձ ի կերպս քո քնար, եւ ես խաւանցայց ընդ բերան քո բան, որպէս մարթնացուք մեք աստեղ:	44:4b მიუგო ეშმაკმან და ჰრქუა გუელსა მას:"საჭურველ მექმედ და მე ვეძეყოდი დედაცესა მას პირითა შენითა სიტყვითა, რომლითა შევატყუოთ".	18-20.6 и наущи ю въсе и посылѧ ю къ мѣнѣ .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
16:3 Why do you eat of the tares of Adam [and his wife and not] of the Garden? Rise up and we will cause him to be cast out of the Garden, even as we were cast out through him." 16:4a The serpent said to him, "I fear lest the Lord be wroth with me." 16:4b The Devil said to him: "Fear not, only be my vessel and I will speak through your mouth words to deceive them."		44:3 Why do you worship (Adam) or (why) are you fed by Adam and are not fed by the fruit of the Garden? Come on, rise up, come to me and hear what I say to you. Let us expel Adam from the Garden like us so that we may re-enter the Garden.' 44:4a The serpent said, 'In what way or how can we expel him from the Garden?' [44]16:4b Satan said to the serpent, 'Be you, in your form, a lyre for me and I will pronounce speech through your mouth, so that we may be able to help. "	44:3 And why do you eat (food) inferior to Adam's and his spouse's and not the good fruit of the Garden? But come and hearken to me so that we may have Adam expelled from the wall of the Garden just as we are outside. Perhaps we can reenter somehow to the Garden." [44:4a And the serpent told him, "How can we have them excluded?" [44]16:4b The Devil replied and told the serpent, "Be a sheath for me and I will speak to the woman through your mouth a word by which we will trick them."	18-20.6 And he instructed it in everything and sent it to me.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

17:1 Καὶ εὐθέως ἐκρεμάσθη ἐκ τῶν τειχέων τοῦ παραδείσου. Καὶ ὅτε ἀνῆλθον οἱ ἄγγελοι τοῦ θεοῦ προσκυνῆσαι, τότε ὁ Σατανᾶς ἐγένετο ἐν εἰδεί ἁγγέλου καὶ ὕμνει τὸν θεὸν καθάπερ οἱ ἄγγελοι.		44:1 Եկին այնուհետև երկրքանն առ իս, եւ կախեցին զոտս իւրեանց զորմով դարստին: Իբրեւ վերացան հրեշտակքն յերկրպագութիւն Տեառն, եւ յարժամ եղև Սատանայ ի կերպս հրեշտակի եւ արհնէր գևատուած զայրհուքիսս հրեշտակաց. խոնարհեցալ ես առ որմովն, եւ միտ դնէի աւրհուքեանց նորայ.	44:1 და მოვიდეს ორივე ერთად, და მოჰვიდეს თავი მათი ზღუდესა სამოთხისასა, მას უამსა, ოდეს აღვიდეს ანგელოზნი თაყუანის-ცემად ღმრთისა, მაშინ გარდაიქცა ეშმაკი იგი ხატად ანგელოზისად, გალობდა გალობითა ანგელოზთაითა და მე ვიჭვირობდი ზღუდელ მიმართ სამოთხის-ად სემნად გალობისად.	18-20.7 змѣя мѣнѣши, яко аггелъ естъ, и прииде къ мѣнѣ .
17:2 Καὶ παρέκυσεν ἐκ τοῦ τείχους καὶ εἶδον αὐτὸν ὅμοιον ἁγγέλου.		44:2a Հայեցալ եւ տեսի զես ի նմանութիւն հրեշտակի. դարձեալ իբրեւ հայեցալ եւ ոչ տեսի զես: 44:2b Գնաց այնուհետև եւ կռչեաց դառն, եւ ասէ ցնս. Արի եկ դու առ իս զի մտից ի քեզ եւ խառնեցայց ընդ բերան քո, որչափ եւ պարտ իցէ ինձ խառնել:	44:2a გაწვიცადე და ვიხილე იგი მსგავსად ანგელოზისა. და მეყ-სეუღლად უჩინო იქმნა, 44:2b რამეთუ წარვიდა იგი მოყუანებდალ გუელისა მის და ჰრეკა მას: აღდეგ და მოვედ და ვიყო მე შენ თანა და ვიტყოდო მე პიროთა შენი-თა, რაი ჯერ-ანს სიტყუად შენდა.	18-20.8a и дия волю сътвори се аггелъскимъ образомъ и прииде свѣтль велико, поущѣ пѣснь аггелъскому, яко и аггелъ .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

17:1 And instantly he hung himself from the wall of the Garden, and when the angels ascended to worship God, then Satan appeared in the form of an angel and sang hymns like the angels. 17:2a And he bent over the wall and I saw him, like an angel.		44:1 Then the two of them came to me and hung their feet around the wall of the Garden. When the angels ascended to the worship of the Lord, at that time Satan took on the form of an angel and began to praise God with angelic praises. I knelt down by the wall and attended to his praises. 44:2a I looked and saw him in the likeness of an angel; when I looked again, I did not see him. 44:2b Then he went and summoned the serpent and said to him, 'Arise, come to me so that I may enter into you and speak through your mouth as much as I will need to say.'	44:1 And the two of them came together and they allowed their heads to hang on the wall of the Garden at the time when the angels had ascended to prostrate before God. Then the Devil changed himself into the image of an angel; he sang the praises of the angels. And I was gazing in the direction of the wall to hear the praises. 44:2a I stared, and I saw him like an angel and at once he became invisible 44:2b for he had gone forth to bring the serpent. And he told him, 'Arise and come and I will be with you and I will speak through your mouth that which is proper for you to say.'	18-20.7 The serpent believed that it was an angel, and came to me. 18-20.8a And the Devil had changed to the form of an angel and came here with radiance, singing an angel's song, just like an angel,
--	--	---	---	---

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

Καὶ λέγει μοι· Σὺ εἶ ἡ Εὕα· Καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ· Ἐγώ εἰμι. Καὶ λέγει μοι· Τί ποιεῖς ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ;

17:3 Καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ· Ὁ θεὸς ἔθετο ἡμᾶς ὥστε φυλάσσειν καὶ ἐσθίειν ἐξ αὐτοῦ.

17:4 Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ διάβολος διὰ στόματος τοῦ ὄφως· Καλῶς ποιεῖτε, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐσθίετε ἀπὸ παντὸς φυτοῦ.

44:2c
Յայժմամ եղիւ նմա առնն եւ քնար, եւ եկն դարձեալ ի պարիսպ դրախտին.
աղաղակեաց եւ
ասէ. Ով կին, դու որ ի դրախտդ փափկութեան կուրացեալ ես.
արի եկ դու առ իս եւ ասացից քեզ բանս ինչ:

44:2d եւ իրբն գնացի առ նա, ասէ ցիս. Դու ե՞ս ես. եւ
ասացի. Այո, ես եմ.
Պատասխանի ետ
եւ ասէ. Զի՞նչ գործես ի դրախտի ալդը:

44:3 Ասեմ
ցես. Աստուած եղ գմեզ ի դրախտի պահպանութեան:

44:4
Պատասխանի ետ
Սատանայ եւ ասէ ցիս ընդ բերան սահին. Բարի է գործդ, բայց աղէ նուէք դուք կամենայն ծառուղի որ ի դրախտի աստէն:

44:2c სახე ექმნა მას გუელი იგი ზღუდისა სამოთხისად. და შთაე- ცუა გუელსა მას უმბაკი, შთამოჰკიდა თავი თვისი ზღუდესა მას სამოთხი-სასა, ღაღად-ყო და თქუა. ჰაი შენდა ღელაჰაცო, რომელი-ეგე ხარ სამო-თხესა ფუფუნებისასა.
რომელი-იგი ბრმა ხარ, მოვედ ჩემდა და გარქუ რაიმე სიტყუაი საიდუმლოთი.
44:2d და
ვითარ მივედ, მრქუა მე. ევა!"
და ვარქუა. "აჰა ესეა ვარ".
მომიგო და მრქუა მე. რასა ჴამ შენ სამოთხესა შინა?"

44:3 მიუგე
და ვარქუა.
ღმერთმან
ღამადგინა ცვაღ სამოთხისა და
ჴამად.
44:4 მომიგო უმბაკან მან და მრქუა მე პიროთა.
გუელისათა:
კეთილად სჴამოთ თქუენ ნაყოფსა ყოვლისაგან ხისა, რომელ არს სამოთხე-სა მას შინა?"

18-20.8b и рече къ мнѣ вѣса ли райская снѣдѹете;

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
		44:2c At that time the serpent became a lyre for him, and he came again to the wall of the Garden. He cried out and said, 'Oh, woman, you who are blind in this Garden of delight, arise come to me and I will say some words to you.'	44:2c He took on the form of the serpent (to go) close to the wall of the Garden and the Devil slipped inside the serpent and he allowed his head to hang on the wall of the Garden. He cried out and said, 'Shame on you, woman, you who are in the the Garden of delight (and) who are blind! Come to me and I will tell you a certain secret word.'
And he said to me: "Are you Eve?" "And I said to him, "I am." And he said to me, "What do you do in the Garden?"		44:2d When I went to him, he said to me, 'Are you Eve?' I said, 'Yes, I am.' He replied and said, 'What do you do in [the Garden]?'	44:2d And when I had come, he said to me, 'Eve!' and I said to him, 'Here I am.' He replied to me and told me, 'What do you do in the Garden?'"
17:3 And I said to him, "God set us to guard and to eat of it."		44:3 I said to him, 'God set us to guard the Garden',	44:3 I replied to him and told him, 'God has set me to guard the Garden and eat (of it).'
17:4 The Devil answered through the mouth of the serpent: "You do well but you do not eat of every plant."		44:4 Satan replied and said to me through the mouth of the serpent, 'This work is good, but come, do you eat of [all] the trees which are in the Garden?'	44:4 The Devil replied to me and told me through the mouth of the serpent, 'Well (done!) Do you eat the fruit of every tree which is in the Garden?'	18-20.8b and said to me: 'Do you eat from everything in Paradise?'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
17:5 Κάγω εἶπον· Ναὶ, ἀπὸ πάντων ἐσθίομεν, παρὲξ ἐνὸς μόνου ὃ ἐστὶ μέσον τοῦ παράδεισου περὶ οὗ ἐνετείλατο ἡμῖν ὁ θεὸς μὴ ἐσθίεν ἐξ αὐτοῦ, ἐπεὶ θανάτῳ ἀποθανείσθε.		44:5 Ասեմ Այո, յամենայնէ կերակրիմք. բայց միայն ի միտքէն ծառայ որ է իսկ ի մէջ դրահատիս, վասն որոյ պատուիրեաց Աստուած մեզ թէ մի կերակրիք ի նմանէ. ապա եթէ ուտիցէք մահու մեռանցիք:	44:5 მოუგე ლა ვარკუთ: ჰე, ვჭამთ ყოველთსავე ნაყოფსა, ვარნა ერ-თისა მის ხისა, რომელ არს შუა სამთხესა ამას, რამეთუ ღმერთმან გუამცნო ჩუენ, ვითარმედ ნუ სჭამთ მისგანსა, რითა არა სიკუდილითა მოკუდეთ.	18-20.9 азь мьнеши, яко аггелъ есть, понеже прииде отъ Адамовы страны, и глаголахъ къ немюу · єдино дрѣво рече намъ господь не ясти, еже єсть по срѣдѣ рая.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

17:5 And I said: "Yea, we eat of all, save one only, which is in the middle of the Garden, concerning which, God charged us not to eat of it, for, you shall die the death."		44:5 I said to him, 'Yes, we eat of all of them ex- cept only of that one tree which is in the very middle of the Garden, con- cerning which God commanded us, "Do not eat of it, for if you eat you will surely die."'	44:5 I replied to him and told him, 'Yes, [we] eat all the fruit except for only one tree which is here in the middle of the Garden, for God ordered us, 'Do not eat of it, so that you will not die a death.'	18-20.9 And at that time I took him for an angel, because he had come from Adam's side, so I said to him, 'From one tree the Lord commanded us not to eat, the one which stands in the middle of Paradise.'
---	--	--	---	---

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

18:1 Τότε λέγει μοι ὁ ὄφης· Ζῆ ὁ θεὸς ὅτι λυποῦμαι περὶ ὑμῶν· [ὅτι ὡς κτήνη ἐστέ.] οὐ γὰρ θέλω ὑμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν. Δεῦρο οὖν καὶ φάγε νόησον τὴν τιμὴν τοῦ ξύλου.		44:1 Յայնժամ ասէ ասն. Կենդան է Տէր, զի մեծ հոգամ վասն [ձեր] զի իբրեւ գանաստն էք, վասն զի խորեաց Աստուած ի ձէնք, այլ ոչ կամիմ եւ եթէ տգետք լինիցիք. արէ գնա դու եւ կեր ի ծառոյ անտի. եւ տեսանես զինչ լինելոց է քեզ պատիւ:	44:1 მაშინ მრქუა გუელმან მან: " ვჭუვი მე თქუენთვის, რამეთუ ხართ თქვენ ვითარცა პირუტყუნო. შუთრა თქუენი ღმერთსა და არა გააფუ- ლნა თქუენ, ხოლო მე არა მნებავეს უმეცრებაი თქუენი, არამედ მივედ და ჯამე და იხილო დიდებულედაი იგო, რომელ ყოფად არს შენ თანა".	18-20.10 Дия вошь рече · много жалю васъ, понеже не разумѣета ничьто, нь си глаголю вамъ · то дрѣво · естъ блажоу въсѣхъ дрѣвъ .
18:2 Ἐγὼ δὲ εἶπον· αὐτῷ· Φοβοῦμαι μήποτε ὀργισθῇ μοι ὁ θεὸς καθὼς εἶπεν ἡμῖν.		44:2 եւ ասեմ ցնա. Երկնչիմ գուցէ մեռանիմ որպէս ասաց ցմեզ Աստուած:	44:2 ხოლო მე ვარქუე: მეშინის მე, ნელუაჲე მოვკუდე, ვითარცა თქუა ღმერთმან".
18:3 Καὶ λέγει μοι· Μὴ φοβοῦ· ἅμα γὰρ φάγησ, ἀνοιχθήσονται σου οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ καὶ ἔσσεθαι ὡς θεοὶ· γινώσκοντες τί ἀγαθὸν καὶ τί πονηρόν.		44:3 Պատասխանի ետ ասն հանդերձ Սատանայի եւ ասէ ցիս. Կենդանի է Տէր, զի ոչ մեռանիք, այլ որժամ կերակրիք բանին աչք ձեր եւ լինիցիք որպէս գևաստուած հանաչել զբարի եւ զչար:	44:3 მომიგო გუელმან მან და მრქუა: " რაი- არს სიკუდილი, ანუ ვითარ მოკუდის? სიკუდილი ცხორებაი არს". მიუგე და ვარქუე: " არა უწყი მე". მომიგო და მრქუა: " ცხოველ არს ღმერთი, რაითა არა მოკუდეთ, არამედ რომელსა ეამსა სჭამოთ, განეხუენენ თუალნი თქუენნი და იყვებეთ მეცნიერ, ვითარცა ღმერთი, კეთილისა და ბოროტისა .	18-20.11 аще сънхсте отъ дрѣва того, то яко бози бѹдете и свѣтли бѹдете яко и аггели.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

18:1 Then the serpent said to me, "As God lives! I am grieved on your account [that you are like animals,] for I would not have you ignorant. Come hither and eat and perceive the honor of that tree." 18:2 But I said to him, "I fear lest God be angry with me as he told us." 18:3 And he said to me: "Fear not, for as soon as you eat of it your eyes will be opened and you too shall be as gods knowing what is good and what is evil."		44:1 Then the serpent said, 'As the Lord lives, I am greatly concerned about [you] for you are like beasts, since God has withheld (it) from you, but I do not wish you to be ignorant. Come on, come and eat of the tree, and you see what honour will be yours.' 44:2 I said to him, 'I fear lest I die as God said to us.' 44:3 The serpent, together with Satan, replied and said to me, 'As the Lord lives, you (will) not die, but when you eat, your eyes (will be) opened and you will become like God, knowing good and evil.'	44:1 Then the serpent told me, 'I am distressed for you, for you are like the animals. God was jealous of you and he has not permitted you, but as for me, I do not desire your ignorance. Rather come, eat and you will see the glory which is to be with you.' 44:2 However, I told him, 'I am afraid of dying, perhaps, as God said.' 44:3 The serpent replied to me and told me, 'What is death and how does one die? Death is life!' I replied to him and told him, 'I do not know.' He replied to me and told me, 'God is living, just thus you (pl.) will not die, but at the moment when you (pl.) eat, your eyes will be opened and you will be instructed, like God, about good and evil.'	18-20.10 The Devil said, 'I am very sorry for you, because you don't understand, but I will tell you this: that tree is better than all the others.' 18-20.11 If you taste from that tree, you would become like gods and radiant like the angels.'
--	--	--	---	---

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
18:4 Τοῦτο δὲ γινώσκων ὁ θεὸς ὅτι ἔσσεσθε ὅμοιοι αὐτοῦ ἐφθόνησεν ὑμῖν καὶ εἶπεν· Οὐ φάγεσθαι ἐξ αὐτοῦ.		44:4 այց գիտ[այց] Աստուած հիւ ի նմանողք լինիք նմա. նենգեաց ձեզ. զի ասաց հիւ մի կերակրիք ի նմանէ.	44:4 უწყყოლა ღმერთმან, რამეთუ მსგავს მისა იქნებოდით და შერ- და ღმერთსა თქუენი, მისთვის გრქუა თქუენ ღმერთმან, ვითარმედ: ნუ სჯამთ მსგავსსა.
18:5 Σὺ δὲ πρόσχες τῷ φυτῷ καὶ ὄψει δόξαν μεγάλην. [Ἐγὼ δὲ προσέσχον τῷ φυτῷ καὶ εἶδον δόξαν μεγάλην περὶ αὐτοῦ. Εἶπον δὲ αὐτῷ ὅτι ὥραϊον τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς κατανόησαι.]		44:5 ևւ ասէ. Հայեալ դու ի ծառն եւ տես զինչ փառք են շուրջ դռաւորս: Ասեմ ցնա. (ես իբրեւ Հայեցալ ի ծառն եւ տեսի զի մեծ փառք էին շուրջ գետակա):	44(18):5 მივედ ხელსა ძას ღა იხილე გარემოსს მისსა დიდებულებაი მისი“. ხოლო ვითარცა მივედ და ვიხილე გარემო მისა დიდებულებაი მისი. და ვთქუ:
18:6 Ἐφοβήθη γὰρ καὶ λαβεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ.		44:6 Բարի է ծառն եւ հաճոյ թուեցաւ յաշի իմ. բայց զնալ եւ անուղ ի մրգոյ անտի ոչ կարեմ. երկնչիմ. (աղէ ե)թէ ոչ երկնչիս դու բեր ինձ ի մրգոյ անտի եւ կերայց. զի ծանեայց հիւ իցին բանք քո ճշմարիտ թէ ոչ. կոչեաց այնուհետեւ ամեն զիս եւ ասէ. եկ բաց գորտն ինձ եւ մտից եւ տաց քեզ ի մրգոյ անտի:	44:6 კეთილ არს ხე ესე და საცნაურ არს თელთა ჩემთა ნაყოფი მისი, ხოლო მე მიყოფად ხელისა და მოღებად მეშინის, ხოლო შენ თუ არა გეშინის, მოძართუ მე და ჯჯამო და ვცნა, უკუეთუ ჯეშმარიტ არიან სიტ- ყუანი შენნი ესე. ანუ არა“. მოძიგო გუელმან მან და ძრქუა:“ მოვედ და განმიღე მე კარი და გეც შენ მისგანი“.
Καὶ λέγει μοι· Δεῦρο καὶ δώσω σοι· ἀκολούθει μοι.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
18:4 But God knew that you would be like Him, so he envied you and said, 'You shall not eat of it.' 18:5 But, do give heed to the plant and you will see its great glory." [I gave heed to the plant and saw its great glory. I said to him that it was pleasing to the eyes to look at.] 18:6 Yet I feared to take of the fruit. And he said to me: "Come hither, and I will give it you. Follow me."		44:4 But God kn[ew] that you (will) become like him; he deceived you, that he said, "Do not eat of it."' 44:5 And he said, 'Look at the tree and see what glory is around the tree.' When I looked at the tree, I saw (that) great glory was around it. I said to him, 44:6 'The tree is good and it looks pleasing to me, but I cannot go and take of the fruit: I am afraid. [Come here!]If you are not afraid, bring me of the fruit and I will eat, so that I may know whether your words are true or not.' Then the serpent called to me and said, 'Come, open the gate for me and I will enter and I will give you of the fruit.'	44:4 God knew that you would become like him and God was jealous of you. Because of that God told you, "Do not eat of it!" 44:5 [Look at] the tree and see the glory around it.' As for me, when I had gone and I had seen its glory around it then I said, 44:6 'This tree is good and its fruit is worthy of notice in my eyes. However, I am afraid to stretch out my hand and take (it). But you, if you are not afraid, bring it to me and I will eat (of it) and I will know whether your (present) words are true or not.' The serpent replied to and told me, 'Come, open the gate and I will give you of it.'

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

19:1a Ἦνοιξα δὲ καὶ εἰσήλθεν ἕσω εἰς τὸν παρὰ δεισον καὶ διώδενυσεν ἔμπροσθέν μου. Καὶ περιπατήσας ὀλίγον ἐστράφη καὶ λέγει μοι· 19:1c Μετα- μεληθεὶς οὐ δώσω σοι φαγεῖν. [ταῦτα εἶπε θέλω εἰς τέλος δελεᾶσαι με. Καὶ λέγει μοι]		44:1a Իբրևի հին հմուտ գնաց սակաւիկ մի ի մէջ դրախտին եւ գտեղի առ. 44:1b սահմ ես. Ձի առեղ գտեղի. 44:1c սաւ ցիւ. Գուցէ իբրևի քեզ տամ ոստի, բանին աչք քո եւ լինիցիւ իբրևի զկատուած, նենդեսցես Արամայ եւ ոչ տաս ոստի նմա ի մրգոյ անտի եւ լինի նա իբրևի գանաստուն ստաջի քո.	44:1a და ვითარ მივედ და განუღე კარი, და ვითარცა შემოვიდა სამოთხედ, წარვიდა და დადგა მცირედ. 44:1b მიუგე და ვარქუ მას: "რასა სდგა?" ხოლო მან, შვილნო ჩემნო, იწყო ზაკუად ჩემდა მომარო. 44:1c მომიგო და მრქუა: "ამისთვის ვდეგ მე, რამეთუ შევიწინავე, ნულუკუე შენ გეც. და სჯამო და განგებუნენ თუალნი შენნი და იყო შენ ვითარცა იმერთი და სცნა კეთილი და ბოროტი და განჰლანე და გშურდეს აღამისთვის და არა აჯამო მას და იყოს იგი ვითარცა პირუტყვი შენ წინა- შე, ვითარცა თქუენ იყვენით წინაშე ღმერთისა, რამეთუ შურდა ღმერთსა თქუენი.
--	--	---	--	--

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

19:1a And I opened (it for him) and he entered the Garden and went before me. He walked a little way, then turned and said to me:

19:1c "I have changed my mind and I will not give you (something) to eat [These things he said wishing to trap me in the end. And he said to me:]

44:1a When he entered, he proceeded a little way into the Garden and stopped.

44:1b I said, 'Why did you stop?'

44:1c He said to me, 'Perhaps, when I shall give you to eat and your eyes are opened and you become like God, you will deceive Adam and will not give him to eat of the fruit and he will become like a beast before you.'

44:1a And when I had gone to open the gate for him and he had entered the Garden, he went forth, and then he stopped a little.

44:1b I replied to him and said, 'Why have you stopped?'

44:1c But he, my children, began to use trickery with me. He replied to me and told me, 'If I have stopped it is because I changed my mind for fear that, perhaps if I should give you of it and you eat it, and your eyes will be opened and you will become like God, and you will know good and evil, and you will become prideful and become jealous of Adam and you will not make him eat of it, and he will be like an animal before you, as you were before God, because God was jealous of you.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
19:1d ἐδὼν μὴ ὁμόσῃς μοι ὅτι δίδῃς καὶ τῷ ἀνδρί σου. 19:2 Ἐγὼ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ ὅτι οὐ γινώσκω ποίῳ ὄρκῳ ὁμόσω σοι, πλὴν ὃ οἶδα, λέγω σοι· μὰ τὸν θρόνον τοῦ δεσπότου καὶ τὰ χερουβὶμ καὶ τὸ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς ὅτι δώσω καὶ τῷ ἀνδρί μου. 19:3 Ὅτε δὲ ἔλαβεν ἅπ' ἐμοῦ τὸν ὄρκον, τότε ἦλθε [καὶ ἐπέβη ἐπ' αὐτόν] καὶ ἔθετο ἐπὶ τὸν καρπὸν ὃν ἔδωκε μοι φαγεῖν τὸν ἰὸν τῆς κακίας αὐτοῦ, τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας, ἐπιθυμία γάρ ἐστι κεφαλὴ πάσης ἁμαρτίας. Καὶ κλίνας τὸν κλάδον ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἔλαβον ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ καὶ ἔφαγον.		44:1d ալլ եթէ կամիս դու երդուիր ինձ ճշմարիտ եթէ տալցես նմա ուսով եւ ոչ նենգեսցես ասն քո Ադամայ: 44:2 Ասեմ ցես. Զերդրան ես ինչ ոչ գիտեմ թէ որով երդում էքզ, բայց զոր գիտեմ ասեմ քեզ. տնկաք դրախտի եւ քերովբէիք եւ սերովբէիք, եւ որ նստի հայր ի յերկինս եւ իջանել ի դրախտս. թէ կերայց եւ ծանեայց զամենայն ինչ [ոչ խորեցից], ալլ տաց ուսով ասն իմում Ադամայ: 44:3 Իբրեւ երդմամբ ընկալաւ զիս, ապա առաջտորդեաց ինձ եւ տարաւ զիս ի ծառ անտր, եւ ել ինքն ի ծառն, եւ եղ նա զխաթլէութիւնն ի պտղոյ նորա, այսինքն ցանկութիւն մեղաց, պտմկութիւնք, շնութիւնք, ազարտութիւնք. եւ խոնարհեցուց զոսս ծառոյն, մինչեւ երկիր. եւ առի յայնժամ ի մրգոյ անտի եւ կերպ:	44:1d უკუეითუ გინებს მეფუცე მე ჯემდარიტად, ვითარმედ მე თუ გაჯამო შენ, არა გმურდეს აღაძისთვის, ქმრისა შენისა, არამედ აჯამო და სცე მასცა". 44:2 მოუგე და ვარკუე მას: "ფიცო არა ვიცი, ვითარ გეფუცო შენ?" და მარკუა მე: "თქუ, ვფუცავ ნერგთა მათ სამთხისათა და ქეობინთა ზედა, რომელთა ზედა ზის მამაი, და გარდამოხდის სამთხესა მას უკუეითუ ვჯა-მო და ვცნა ყოველი, არა მმურდეს, არამედ ვსცე აღაძსცა". 44:3 და ოდეს მოიღო ჩემ ზედა ფიცო, შემკრა მე, მცა ხისა მისგანი და ვჯამე.	18-20.12a и азъ чохъ такова слова и ꙗгда сънѣдохъ отъ древа того,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

19:1d unless you swear to me that you will give also to your husband."

19:2 But I said, "I do not know what sort of oath I should swear to you? Yet what I know, I say to you: By the throne of the Master, and by the Cherubim and the Tree of Life, I will give also to my husband to eat."

19:3 And when he had received the oath from me, he came [and entered] and placed upon the fruit which he gave me the poison of his wickedness -- which is (the sense of) desire, for it is the beginning of every sin -- and he bent the branch to the earth and I took of the fruit and I ate.

44:1d But you, if you wish, swear to me truly that you will give him to eat, and will not deceive your husband Adam.'

44:2 I said to him, 'I do not know any oath by which I can swear [to you], but I will say to you that which I do know: By the plants of the Garden and by the Cherubs and the Seraphs and (by) the Father who sits in the heavens to descend to the Garden, if I eat and learn everything, [I shall not withhold], but I will give to my husband Adam to eat.'

44:3 When he had caught me through an oath, he then led me and brought me to the tree and he went forth to the tree. He set the deception in its fruit, that is desire of sins, harlotries, adulteries, greeds. He lowered the branches of the tree to the earth. Then I took some of the fruit and I ate.

44:1d If you want it, swear to me truly that, if I make you eat it, you will not be jealous of Adam, your husband, but will make him eat of it and give of it also to him.'

44:2 I replied to him and told him, 'I do not know any oath, how could I swear to you?' And he told me, 'Say: I swear by the plants of the Garden and by the Cherubs upon which the Father sits and (upon which) he descends to the Garden, that if I eat and know all, I will not be jealous but will give of it also to Adam.'

44:3 And when he had made me take the oath, he bound me (to it), gave me of the tree and I ate it.

18-20.12a And I listened to these words and as I tasted from the tree,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
20:1 Καὶ ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἤνεσθησαν οἱ ὀφθαλμοί μου καὶ ἔγνων ὅτι γυμνὴ ἦμην τῆς δικαιοσύνης ἧς ἦμην ἐνδεδυμένη. Καὶ ἔκλαυσα λέγουσα·		44:1 bi Ի ժամոն արևմիկ գիտացի ես աշաք իմովք եթէ մերկացայ ես Ի փառացն զոր զգեցեալ էի. այնունհոռի սկսայ լալ եւ ասեմ.		18-20.12b тогда отвѣрзоста се очи мои и видѣхъ яко и нага есмь, и въсплакахъ се сѣло, чѣто сѣтворихъ. дьяволъ же невидимъ бысть.
20:2 Τί τοῦτο ἐποίησας ὅτι ἀπηλλοτριώθην ἐκ τῆς δόξης μου [ἧς ἦμην ἐνδεδυμένη;]		44:2 Զի՞նչ արարեր ինձ (այլ ոչ եւ ճգնէի ես վասն մարտին զոր եղեալ էր ինձ) թշնամի: Թախժամ գիտացի այնունհոռի եթէ այս առաջնորդեացէ ինձ յանդմառ դժուոր:
20:3 Ἐκλαίον δὲ καὶ περὶ τοῦ ὄρκου. Ἐκεῖνος δὲ κατήλθεν ἀπὸ τοῦ φωτοῦ καὶ ἄφαντος ἐγένετο.		44:3 Զայս իբրեւ արար Սատանայ էջ Ի ծառոյ անտի, եւ եղիւ Թաքստեա Ի դրախտին.		18-20.12c дия воль же невидимъ бысть.
20:4 Ἐγὼ δὲ ἐζήτουν ἐν τῷ μέρει μου φύλλα ὀπωσ καλύψω τὴν αἰσχρὴν μου καὶ οὐχ εἶδρον· ἀπάντα γὰρ τὰ φυτόν τοῦ ἔμοῦ μέρους κατερρύη τὰ φύλλα, παρὲς τοῦ σύκου μόνου.		44:4 եւ ես խնդրէի Ի դրախտի յանտ, իմով կողմանս տերեւս ծառոյ ծածկել զ(մերկութիւն իմ) եւ ոչ գտանէի, քանզի Ի ժամոն արևմիկ տերեւաթափ լեալ էր ամենայն ծառոյ դրախտին, քաց միայն Ի Թգենոյ անտի.	44:4 ნო. . . შეშლულედაი ჩემი და არა ვპოვე ყოველთა მათ ზეთა თანა, რამეთუ რომელსა უამსა ვჭამე ყოველთა მათ ზეთა სამოთხისათა, ნაწილისა ჩემისათა, ფურცელი დაცვივა.	21-22.1 Азъ же събирахъ листвіе смоковне да покрыю срамоту мою, 21-22.2 понеже яко бѣше раздѣленъ рай, половина Адаму а половина мнѣ, кое дрѣвие бѣше въ мою страну, все листвіе повръже,
20:5 Λαβοῦσα δὲ φύλλα ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἐποίησα ἑμαυτῇ περιζώματα· [καὶ ἔστι παρὰ τὸ φυτόν ἐξ οὗ ἔφαγον.]		44:5a առի եւ ծածկեցի գանդկութիւն իմ. եւ կացի առ ծառոյն յորմէ կերայ.	44:5a ძოვილდე მისგან და ვჭმე საფარველად ჩემდა და დავდეგ ხეს მას თანა, რომლისაგან ვჭამე, შვილნო ჩემნო.	21-22.3 смоковница не повръже . 21-22.4a и възехъ отъ листвія и прѣпоясахъ се и вънидохъ, подъ дрѣво,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
20:1 And in that very hour my eyes were opened, and I knew that I was naked of the righteousness with which I had been clothed, and I wept and said to him: 20:2 "Why have you done this that I have been deprived of the glory [with which I was clothed]?" 20:3 But I wept also about the oath, which I had sworn. But he descended from the tree and vanished. 20:4 And I began to seek, in my nakedness, in my part for leaves to hide my shame, but I found none, for, as soon as I had eaten, the leaves showered down from all the trees in my part, except the fig-tree alone. 20:5 I took leaves from it and made for myself a girdle [and it was from the same plant of which I had eaten].		44:1 At that hour I learned with my eyes that I was naked of the glory I with which I had been clothed. Thenceforth, I began to weep and said, 44:2 "What did you do to me?" [But I was no longer mortified about the war which (the) enemy had made against me;] then I learned, thenceforth, that he will lead me to the depths of hell. 44:3 When Satan did this, he descended from the tree and hid in the Garden. 44:4 In my parts of the Garden I sought leaves of a tree to cover [my nakedness], and I could not find any on all the trees. For, at that hour all the trees of the Garden became leafless, except for the fig-tree alone. 44:5a I took (its leaves) and covered my nakedness, and I stood by the tree of which I had eaten.	44:4 [... (I was searching for leaves to cover)...] my nakedness and found none on all the trees, for at the moment at which I had eaten, the leaves from all the trees of the Garden, in my portion, fell down. 44:5a I took some and made a covering for myself and stood by the tree of which I had eaten, my children.	18-20.12b immediately my eyes were opened and I saw that I was naked, and I cried bitterly about what I had done. 18-20.12c The Devil, however, became invisible. 21-22.1 I, however, gathered fig leaves to cover my shame. 21-22.2 Because of how Paradise was apportioned, the one half to Adam, and the other to me, all the trees in my half had let fall all their leaves. 21-22.3 The fig tree, however, did not do this. 21-22.4a And I took from its leaves and wrapped myself and went under the tree, from which I had tasted,

59 Pericope 22 EVE'S TALE:Eve's Recognition of Sin* (Gen 3:7a)

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
		44:5b որդեակ իմ Սէթ վասն երդմանն զոր երդուալ եթէ տաջ ուսեղ տուն իմոյ Ադամայ:	44:5b შემეშინა ფიცისა მისგან, რომლისგან ვფიცე სამოთხისა რომლისა(!) და ვთქუე, ვითარმედ აღამსცა ვაჭამო.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

		44:5b I was afraid, my son Seth, because of the oath I swore that I would give my husband Adam to eat.	44:5b I was afraid because of the oath which I had sworn by the Garden and in which I had said, 'I will make Adam eat of it as well.'
--	--	--	--	--

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

21:1 Καὶ ἐβόησα αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ λέγουσα· Ἀδὰμ, Ἀδὰμ, ποῦ εἶ; Ἀνάστα, ἐλθὲ πρὸς με καὶ δείξω σοι μέγα μυστήριον.		44:1 Աղաղակեցի ի ձայն մեծ Ադամայ. Արի եկ առ իս եւ ես ցուցիք քեզ զառակս զայս:		21-22.4b отъ нѣгоже сѣньдохъ и въ зѣвахъ гласомъ велинемъ къ Адаму, глаголюе . Адаме, Адаме, где еси; 21-22.5 встанѣ и прииди къ мнѣ, да ти исповѣмъ чюдо.
21:2a "Οτε δὲ ἦλθεν ὁ πατήρ ὑμῶν		44:2 Ելաւ զայն Ադամ մեծ փառաք իւրով եկն առ իս.	44:2a մաժնե մոջօրս մամօ տէլլենօ ալամ ,
21:2b εἶπον αὐτῷ λόγους παρανομίας οἵτινες κατήγαγον ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ μεγάλης δόξης.			44:2b ეგრე ეგონა, ვითარმედ მხეცი შემოჰხელა სამოთხესა და მარქუა მე: "არა რასა ჰხმობ, ანუ რაი არს შენ თანა ფურცელი ეგე ლელვისაი?" 44:2c მოუგე და ვარქუ: "არა გნებავს თხრობაი ჩემი, რამეთუ გნე- ბავს ჩემი? ვიყუენით ვიღრე ღღეინღელად ღღეღღღე. ვითარცა პირუტყუნო.	21-22.6a И прииде Адамъ къ мнѣ,
21:3 "Αμα γὰρ ἦλθεν, ἤνοιξα τὸ στόμα μου καὶ ὁ διάβολος ἐλάλει καὶ ἠρξάμην νουθετεῖν αὐτὸν λέγουσα· Δεῦρο κύριέ μου Ἀδὰμ ἐπάκουσόν μου καὶ φάγε ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ τοῦ δένδρου οὗ εἶπεν ἡμῖν ὁ θεὸς τοῦ μὴ φαγεῖν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔσει ὡς θεός.			44:3 ვითარცა განვიცადე, რომლისა-იგო გულქუა ჩუენ უფალმან, ვითარმედ ნუ შჰამთ მისგანსა, და ვიხილუ ღიღებულებაი მისი, მოვიღე და ვჰამე მისგანი და ვცან კეთილო და ბოროტო. აწ ჰამე შენცა და იყო ვითარ- ცა ღმერთო"	21-22.6b и азъ отвори зохъ уста моя, и дьяволъ глаголаше въ мнѣ о дрѣвѣ и развѣтъ, егда како сѣньсть и ты."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

21:1 And I cried out in that very hour, "Adam, Adam, where are you? Rise up, come to me and I will show you a great mystery."		44:1 I cried out to Adam in a loud voice, 'Arise, come to me and I will show you this way.'		21-22.4b and called in a loud voice to Adam, saying, 'Adam, Adam, where are you? 21-22.5 Stand up and come here so that I can share something incredible with you.'
21:2a But when your father came,		44:2 Then Adam came to me with his great glory,	44:2a Then your father Adam came.
			44:2b He had thought thus: that a beast had entered the Garden and he said to me, 'What are you shouting for and why do you have this fig-leaf on yourself?'	21-22.6a And Adam came to me
21:2b I spoke to him words of transgression which have brought us down from our great glory.			44:2c I replied to him and I told him, 'Don't you wish me to tell you something or do you wish me to? Until today we were like animals.
21:3 For, when he came, I opened my mouth and the Devil was speaking, and I began to exhort him and said, "Come hither, my lord Adam, hearken to me and eat of the fruit of the tree of which God told us not to eat of it, and you shall be as a God."			44:3 When I understood [that of which] the Lord had said to us, 'Do not eat of this' and when I saw its splendor, I took of it and ate of it and I learned good and evil. Now, eat also of it and you will you become like God.'	21-22.6b and I opened my mouth and the Devil spoke through me about the tree and about knowledge, so that he would also want to taste of it.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
21:4a Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ πατήρ ὑμῶν εἶπεν· Φοβοῦμαι μήποτε ὀργισθῇ μοι ὁ θεός. 21:4b Εγὼ δὲ εἶπον· Μὴ φοβοῦ· ἅμα γάρ φαγγίς ἔσται γινώσκων καλὸν καὶ πονηρὸν. 21:5 Καὶ τότε ταχέως πείσασα αὐτόν, ἔφαγεν. Καὶ ἠνεῶχθησαν αὐτοῦ οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ καὶ ἔγνω τὴν γύνωσιν αὐτοῦ. 21:6 Καὶ λέγει μοι· ὦ γύναι πονηρά, τί κατειργάσω ἐν ἡμῖν; Ἀπηλλοτριώσας με ἐκ τῆς δόξης τοῦ θεοῦ.		44:5 ևս ետուստի նմա ի մրգոյ անտի. և արարի զնա ի բրբի զիս. եկն ևս նա այնուհետև առ տերևի թզենոյն. և ծածկնաց զմերկութիւն իւր:	44:4a მომიგო და მრქუა მე აღამ: "მეშინის, ნუფუჟუე განმირისხნეს მე ღმერთი და მარქუას მე: მცნებაი ჩემი, რომელი გამცენ შენ, არა ღაიპარხე". 44:4b ხოლო მე ვარქუ მას: "ჩემ ზელა იყოს ბრალი ესე, უკუეთუ გეითხოს შენ, ესრეთ თქუ: ღელაკაცი ესე, რომელი შენ მომეც, მისი ბრალი არისო. გეშო იხილუე ღიდებისა ამის". 44:5 მაშინ ვეც მისგან, ჯამა და იქმნა ვითარცა მე. და მოიღო მანცა ლელვისა ფურცელი და ღაიფარა შიშულთებაი მისი.	21-22.7a И сънѣде Адамъ и отвѣрзостѣ се очи ѣмоу и видѣ наготу мою и свою . 21-22.7b и рече ми · ѡ жено, чѣто сътвори мнѣнъ; 21-22.8 почѣто оудалихомъ се отъ милости божіе;

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
21:4a And your father answered and said, "I fear lest God be angry with me. 21:4b And I said to him, "Fear not, for as soon as you have eaten you shall know good and evil." 21:5 And speedily I persuaded him, and he ate and his eyes were opened and he too knew his nakedness. 21:6 And to me he said, "O wicked woman! what have you done to us? You have deprived me of the glory of God."		44:5 and I gave him to eat of the fruit, and I made him like me. Subsequently, he, too, came (and) took a fig leaf and covered his nakedness.	44:4a Adam replied to me and told me, 'I fear lest God be angry with me and tell me, "You did not keep my commandment which I gave to you!"' 44:4b But I told the father, "This blame shall be on me. If He asks you, say thus: "This woman whom you have given me said she is to blame for that; [[she told me]]: See the flavor of this glory!"' 44:5 Then I gave [him of it and he ate of it and became like me, and he also took a leaf of the fig tree and covered his nakedness with it.]	21-22.7a And Adam tasted, and his eyes were opened, and he saw his and my nakedness, 21-22.7b and he said to me, 'O wife, what have you done to me? 21-22.8 Why have we departed from the grace of God?"

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
22:1 Καὶ αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἤκούσαμεν τοῦ ἀρχαγγέλου Μιχαὴλ σαλπίζοντος [ἐν τῇ σάλπιγγι αὐτοῦ] καὶ καλοῦντος τοὺς ἀγγέλους καὶ λέγοντος· 22:2 Τάδε λέγει κύριος· "Ἐλθατε μετ' ἐμοῦ εἰς τὸν παράδεισον καὶ ἀκούσατε τοῦ κρίματος ἐν ᾧ κρινῶ τὸν Ἀδάμ. Καὶ ὧς ἤκούσαμεν τοῦ ἀρχαγγέλου σαλπίζοντος, εἵπομεν· 'Ἰδοὺ ὁ θεὸς εἰς τὸν παράδεισον ἔρχεται κρῖναι ἡμᾶς. 'Εφοβήθημεν δὲ καὶ ἐκρύβημεν. 22:3 Καὶ ἦλθεν ὁ θεὸς εἰς τὸν παράδεισον ἐπιβεβηκώς ἐπὶ ἄρματος χειρουβὶμ, καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι ὑμνοῦντες αὐτόν. ἐν ᾧ δὲ ἦλθεν ὁ θεός [εἰς τὸν παράδεισον.] ἐξήνθησαν τὰ φυντά τὸν κλήρου τοῦ Ἀδὰμ καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα ἐστερεῖτο. 22:4 Καὶ ὁ θρόνος τοῦ θεοῦ ἐστηρίχτετο ὅπου ἦν τὸ ξύλον τῆς ζωῆς.		44:1 Թեւ ալորիկ լուար զի Գարրիէլ հրեշտակն փող հարկանէր եւ կոչեաց զհրեշտակն ամենայն եւ ասէր ցնոսա. 44:2 Զայս ասէ Տէր. եկալք առ ի զի ձեար հանդերձ իջից) եւ ի դրահտն, եւ լուարուք դուք դատաստանի իմով զոր ինչ դատեմ եւ զկրամ: Եւ իջրիւ լուար մեք զձայն փողոյ հրեշտակին գիտացար եթէ Աստուած գալոց է ի դրահտս դատել զմեզ. 44:3 Եկալ ի կառս քերորէից. եւ հրեշտակք արհեսէին զնս. երկար այնուհետեւ եւ ի թագաւորի եղար. եկն Աստուած ի դրահտն եւ ծաղկեցան ամենայն տունիք դրահտին. 44:4 Եւ արկ գաթող իւր մեր(ձ) առ ծառն կենաց:	44:1 შემდგომად ამისა გუესმა ანგელოზისაგან, ვითარმედ დასცა საყვირისა. უწოდა ანგელოზთა და პრეტუა: 44:2 "ესრეთ იტყვის უფალი, მოვედით სამოთხეს, ისმინეთ სასჯელო, რომელსა ვსჯით". მრქუა აღამ: ვცოთი, ვითარმედ ღმერთი სამოთხისა მოვალს დასჯად ჩუენდა." შეგუშინდა და დავიძალებნით. 44:3 და მოვიდა ღმერთი სამოთხედ მკლდმარე ქერობინთა ზედა და წინაშე მისისა გალობდეს ანგელოზნი. მოოდენ-ვიდა სამოთხეს, მუნთქუეს- ვე ფურცელი გამოიღო ყოველმან ხემან 44:4 და ღაღვნეს საყდარნი ხესა მას თანა ცხობებისასა.	23-24.1 Тогда услышахомъ въ небесныхъ гласъ архангела Михаила, призываеаггелы все и глаголюе имь . 23-24.2 тако глаголетъ господь . снидѣмъ въ рай да услышите сѣудъ, где юсть сѣгрѣшихъ ядамъ и како да суждаю юмоу . 23-24.3 и сниде господъ на раму херувимъскою и множество аггелъ, поущее немлъчнѣюу пѣснь, славаще бога неспѣстанно . 23-24.4 и ста по срѣдѣ рая прѣстоль госп однь . 23-24.5 адамово дръвие цвѣтѣше цвѣтнемъ велиемъ, моу страны дръвие оубело бѣ и отъпало .

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

22:1 And in that same hour, we heard the archangel Michael blowing [with his trumpet] and calling to the angels and saying: 22:2 "Thus says the Lord, Come with me to the Garden and hear the judgment with which I shall judge Adam." And when we heard the archangel sound the trumpet we said, "Behold God is coming into the Garden to judge us." We feared and we hid. 22:3 And God came into the Garden, mounted on the chariot of his Cherubim with the angels proceeding before him and singing hymns of praises. As God entered [the Garden,] the plants of Adam's portion flowered but all mine were bereft of flowers. 22:4 And the throne of God was fixed where the Tree of Life was.		44:1 After that, we heard the angel Gabriel blowing a trumpet and summoning all the angels and saying to them, 44:2 'Thus says the Lord, "Come to me so that I [may] descend to the Garden with you, and listen to my judgement with which I will judge Adam.'" When we heard the sound of the angel's trumpet, we knew that God was about to come to the Garden to judge us. 44:3 He set forth upon the Cherub chariot and the angels were praising him; consequently, we were afraid and hid. God reached the Garden and all of the plants of the Garden flowered. 44:4 He set up his throne close to the Tree of Life.	44:1 After which we heard from an angel that (God) blew the trumpet. He (had) summoned the angels and told them, 44:2 'Thus says the Lord, "Come to the Garden and hear the sentence by which we are going to judge (them)."' Adam [[told me]], 'We have sinned, for God is going to come to judge us.' We were afraid and we hid. 44:3 And God came to the Garden sitting upon the Cherubim and the angels were singing hymns before him. When he had arrived at the Garden, at once all (the) tree(s) cast off their (its) foliage, 44:4 and thrones were set up near the Tree of Life.	23-24.1 Then we heard the voice of the archangel Michael in the heavenly realm, who called together all the angels and said to them: 23-24.2 'Thus says the Lord, "We will go down to Paradise to hold a hearing where Adam has sinned, and I will pronounce the verdict on him."' 23-24.3 And the Lord came down on the shoulders of the Cherubim and a host of angels with him, singing the eternal song, glorifying God without end. 23-24.4 And the throne of God was set up in the center of Paradise. 23-24.5 The trees of Adam burst forth in great blossoms, the trees of my half became withered and all their leaves were fallen.
--	--	---	---	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
23:1 Καὶ ἐκάλεσεν ὁ θεὸς τὸν Ἀδὰμ λέγων· Ἀδὰμ, ποῦ ἐκρύβης; νομίζεις ὅτι οὐχ εὗρισκω σε; Μὴ κρυβήσεται οἶκος τῷ οἰκοδομήσαντι αὐτόν; 23:2 Τότε ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ πατήρ ὡμῶν εἶπεν· Οὐχί κύριε, οὐ κρυβόμεθα σε ὡς νομίζοντες ὅτι οὐχ εὗρισκόμεθα ὑπὸ σοῦ· ἀλλὰ φοβοῦμαι ὅτι γυμνός εἰμι καὶ ᾗδέσθην τὸ κρᾶτος σου, δέσποτα. 23:3 Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ θεός· Τίς σοι ὑπέδειξεν ὅτι γυμνός εἶ εἰ μὴ ὅτι ἐγκατέλιπας τὴν ἐντολήν μου [ἣν παρέδωκά σοι] τοῦ φυλάξαι αὐτήν; 23:4 Τότε Ἀδὰμ ἐμνήσθη τοῦ λόγου οὗ ἐλάλησα αὐτῷ [ὅτε ᾗθελον ἀπατήσαι αὐτόν] ὅτι ἁκίνδυνον σε ποιήσω παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ.		44:1 Կոչեաց Աստուած զԱդամ եւ ասէ. Ադամ, Ադամ, ու՞ր ես. համարիս եթէ թաքուցեալ ես եւ ասես եթէ ոչ գիտէ նա զիս. միթէ թաքել կարէ շինուածն ի շինողէ անտի. զի թաքուցեալ ես աս ծառովդ ձիջենոյ: 44:2 Պատասխանի ետ Ադամ եւ ասէ. Ոչ Տէր, ոչ եթէ թաքուցեալ համարիցիմ թէ ոչ գտահիցես զիս, այլ երկեալ, զի մերկ եմ, եւ ամաչեմ: 44:3 Ասէ ցնա Աստուած. Ո՞ր եցուց քեզ մերկ լինել, եթէ ոչ թողեալ էր քո դպաստութիւնն իմ զոր ետու քեզ պահել զիս: 44:4 Յանձնամ լիշեաց Ադամ զբանն զոր ասաց նմա գործել եւ պահել. ասէ Ադամ. Կի՛նս զոր ետուր, աս խափեաց զիս եւ կերպ:	44:1 და უწოდა ღმერთმან ადამს და ჰრქუა: "ადამ, ადამ, სადა ხარ, მე დამეძალები?" ან უ ვითარ დამძლოს სახლი მაშენებელსა თვისსა, ანუ რაისა დამალულ ხარ ხესა თანა სამთხისასა?" 44:2 მაშინ მიუტო მაშამან თქუენმან და ჰრქუა უფლოსა: "დამალ - ლუ ვარ მე, რამეთუ მეშინის, შიშუელ ვარ და მრცხუენის". 44:3 მიუტო ღმერთმან და ჰრქუა: "ვინ გითხრა შენ, ვითარმედ შიშუელ ხარ? ნუთუ შეუტრაცხ-ჰყავ მცენებაი ჩემი, რომელი გამცენ შენ?" 44:4 მაშინ მოესენა ადამს სიტყუაი იგი ჩემი, რომელი ვთქუე ვითარმედ: ნუ ზრუნავ, არამედ ჩემ ზედაცა იყოს ესე და თქუა ადამ: "უფალო, დედაკაცი ესე, რომელ მომცე მე, მან მაცთუნა".	23-24.6 И възва господь Адама, Адаме . 23-24.7 Адамъ рече . госп оди гласъ твои услышавъ и ѡбояхъ се съшло, пониж е нагъ ясмь . 23-24.8 и рече господь къ немю . къ то ти повѣда, яко нагъ еси, аще не бы сънѣлъ отъ дрѣва, еже те рѣхъ не ясти; 23-24.9 и поше насъ аггели и сверѣпо гонѣху ны .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
23:1 And God called Adam saying, "Adam, where are you hiding? Do you think that I won't find you? Can the house be hidden from the presence of its builder?" 23:2 Then your father answered; "It is not because we think we can't be found by you, Lord, that we hide, but I was afraid, because I am naked, and I was ashamed before your might, (my) Master." 23:3 God said to him, "Who showed you that you are naked, unless you has forsaken my commandment, [which I gave to you] to keep."		44:1 God summoned Adam and said, 'Adam where are you?' Do you think that you have hidden and do you say, "He does not know me?" Can the building hide from the Builder, that you hide near that olive-tree? 44:2 Adam replied and said, 'No, Lord, it is not that having hidden, I think that you will not find me, but I was afraid, for I am naked and I am ashamed.' 44:3 God said to him, 'Who showed you to be naked, if you have not abandoned my commandment which I gave you to observe?'	44:1 And God summoned Adam [and told him,] 'Adam, Adam, where are you? Are you hiding from me? Or how will a house hide from its builder? Or why have you hidden near the tree of the Garden?' [44:2 Then your father replied and told the Lord, 'I have hidden because I am afraid: I am naked and I am ashamed.'] 44:3 God replied to him and told him, 'Who told you that you are naked? Have you scorned the commandment which I gave you?'	23-24.6 And the Lord called Adam, 'O Adam, Adam.' 23-24.7 Adam said, 'Lord, I heard your voice and was terribly afraid, since I am naked.' 23-24.8 And the Lord said to him, 'Who told you that you are naked, unless you have tasted from the tree, of which I told you not to taste?' 23-24.9 And the angel took us and brusquely drove us away.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
Καὶ στραφεὶς πρὸς με εἶπεν· Τί τοῦτο ἐποίησας; 23:5 Κἀγὼ εἶπον ὅτι ὁ ὄφεις ἡπάτησέ με.		ხე ჟარბათ არ ჯუ ხე სასტ. ლხე"რ არარხერ ჟარცე 44:5 მჩხეჩ ხე ჟჳას სატჳის ხე სასხმ, სადს ჯარხაყ ჟჳა:	მაშინ მომექცა მე და მარქუა : რაი ჰყავ?" 44:5 მე მოვახსენე სიტყუაი იგი გუელისა მის და ვთქუ. ვითარ- მედ: " გუელმან მაცთუნა მე".

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

23:4 Then Adam remembered the word which I spoke to him [when I wished to deceive him] "I will make you secure before God;"

and he turned and said to me: "Why have you done this?"

23:5 And I said, "The serpent deceived me."

44:4 Then Adam remembered the injunction which He had spoken to him, to do and observe. Adam said, 'This woman, whom you gave, deceived me and I ate.'

He turned to me and said, 'Why did you do that?'

44:5 I recalled the serpent's speech and said, 'The serpent deceived me.'

44:4 Then Adam remembered my word(s) which I had said, 'Do not be concerned for (the blame) for it will lie upon me.' And Adam said, 'Lord, it is this woman whom you gave to me who deceived me.' Then He turned towards me and told me, 'What have you done?' 44:5 And I remembered the serpent's word and I said, 'It is the serpent who deceived me!'

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

24:1 Καὶ λέγει ὁ θεὸς τῷ Ἀδὰμ· Ἐπειδὴ παρήκουσας τὴν ἐντολήν μου καὶ ἤκουσας τῆς γυναικὸς σου, ἐπικατάρατος ἦ γῆ ἕνεκα σου.		44:1 Եւ ասէ այնունհոռի Աստուած ցԱդամ. Փոխանակ զի լուար ձայնի կնոջ քո եւ անցեր գպատուիրանաւ իմով, նախատեալ լինիցիք դու ի վերայ երկրի.	44:1 მიუგო ღმერთმა ადამს და პირქუა: "რასია ისმინე ცოლისა შენისაი და შეურაცხ-ჰყავ მცნებაი ჩემი? წყუელ იყავნ ქუეყანაი საქმეთა შინა შენთა,
24:2 Εργάσει αὐτὴν καὶ οὐ δώσει τὴν ἰσχὺν αὐτῆς· ἀκάνθας καὶ τριβόλους ἀνατελεῖ σοι καὶ ἐν ὑδρώτῃ τοῦ προσώπου σου φάγει τὸν ἄρτον σου.		44.24.2 վաստակեալ եղիցի ի նմա (եւ նա մի տաց քեզ զգորութիւն իւր). փուշ եւ տաւասկ) բուսցի քեզ. ջրտամբ երեսաց քոց կերիցիս զհաց քո.	44:2 იქმოდგე და არა გამოგცეს ნაყოფი, ეკალსა და კუროსთავ- სა აღმოგიცენებდეს შენ. ოფლითა პირისა შენისაითა სჯამდე ჰურსა.
24:3 Ἐσεὶ δὲ ἐν καμάτοις πολυ- τρόποις, [καμῆ καὶ μὴ ἀναπαύσῃ] θλιβεὶς ἀπὸ πικρίας, καὶ μὴ γεύσῃ γλυκύτητος, θλιβεὶς ἀπὸ καύματος καὶ στενωθεὶς ἀπὸ ψύξεως. [Καὶ κοπιάσεις πολλὰ καὶ μὴ πλουτήσεις καὶ παχυνθήσῃ καὶ εἰς τέλος μὴ ὑπάρξεις.]		44:3 եւ մի լիցի քեզ հանգիստ. քաղցիցիս եւ յազնացիս եւ նեղեսցիս ի դանութենէ. եւ սպա ճաշակ(եսցես) ի քաղցրութենէ. ճղեսցիս ի տաւթոյ եւ նեղեսցիս ի ցրտոյ. սղքատասցիս եւ մեծասցիս, լցիրասցիս եւ տկարասցիս	44:3 იყავ კუნესითა ძრავლითა, შრომითა შეერ და არა განსლევ- ნო, გშიოდეს და არა განსძღე, იჭირვოდე სიძწარისაგან და არა განსძღე, გემოი არა ობილო სიტკბობისაგან , გჭირდეს სიცხისაგან და გვევებოდეს ყინელისაგან, დაგლახაკეთ და არა გამდიდრნეთ, ჯამდეთ და არა განსლქ- ნეთ, განსტყვეთ ცეცხლითა და არა განხურდეთ, ილტო. . . წყლითა და განჰყო- ნენ

Pericope 25 EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam and Eve (Gen 3:14-19) 65E

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

24:1 God said to Adam: "Since you transgressed my commandment and hearkened to your wife, cursed is the earth on your account. 24:2 You shall work it and it shall not give its strength: thorns and thistles shall spring up for you and in the sweat of your face you shall eat your bread. 24:3 You shall be in manifold toils [and you shall not rest]; you shall be crushed by bitterness, but of sweetness you shall not taste. You shall be crushed from heat and constrained by cold. [You shall struggle greatly and not become rich and you shall grow fat, but in the end you will not be.]		44:1 Subsequently God said to Adam, 'Because you obeyed your wife's voice and transgressed my commandment, you will be condemned upon the earth. 44:2 You will toil upon it, [and it will not give you its strength]; thorns and thistl[es] will sprout forth for you. By the sweat of your brow you shall eat your bread 44:3 and you shall have no rest; you [shall hunger] and you shall be sated and you shall be afflicted by bitterness then you shall eat of sweetness; you shall be tormented by heat and afflicted by cold; you shall be pauperized and become great; you shall grow fat and you will be weakened	[44:1 God replied to Adam and told him, '[Because] you hearkened to your wife and scorned my commandment, let the earth be cursed in your deeds. 44:2 May you work it and it will give you no fruit; it will sprout only thorns and thistles for you. By the sweat of your brow you shall eat bread. 44:3 May you be with many sighs, toil in labors and have [[no]] rest. You shall hunger and you shall [[not]] be sated. You shall be affected by bitterness and you shall [[not]] taste sweetness; you shall be tormented by heat and will undergo cold; you (pl.) shall be pauperized and you shall [[not]] be enriched; you shall eat and shall [[not]] grow fat; you shall warm yourselves with fire, and you shall not be heated. You will fle[e (to soak yourselves)] with water and it will draw back.
---	--	--	--	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
24:4 Καὶ ὃν ἐκυρίευσεν θηρίων ἐπαναστήσονται σοὶ ἐν ἀκαταστασίᾳ, ὅτι τὴν ἐντολὴν μου οὐκ ἐφύλαξας.		44:4 hi որոյ տիրէիր գազանայ յարիցեն ի վերայ քո անգամութեամբ, վասն զի անցեր դու գաատուիրանա իմով եւ ոչ պահեցեր:	44:4 ღა მხეცთა, რომელთა ზედა შენ უფლებდი, იგინი შენ ზელა აღგვენ. ლაუმტკიცებელ იყო, რამეთუ მცნებანი ჩემნი არ ღაიმარხვენ.
25:1 Στραφεὶς δὲ πρὸς με ὁ κύριος λέγει· Ἐπειδὴ ἐπηκουσας τοῦ ὄφεως καὶ παρήκουσας τὴν ἐντολὴν μου, ἔσει ἐν καμάτοις καὶ ἐν πόνοις ἀφορήτοις.		44:1 Դարձաւ Աստուած եւ ասէցիս. փորձանակ զի լուար դու ամին [եւ անցեր գաատուիրանա իմով] լիցիր դու ի վաստակս եւ ի ցասս.	44:1 მომქეცა მე ღა მრქუა: "რასი ისმინე შენ გუელისა ღა ლაუ- ტვევენ მცნებანი ჩემნი, რომელნი გამცვენ შენ? აჲაჲ შრომათა შინა ღა სალ- მობათა,
25:2 Τέξει τέκνα ἐν πολλοῖς τρόποις καὶ ἐν μιᾷ ὥρᾳ ἔλθεις τοῦ τεκεῖν καὶ ἀπολέσεις τὴν ζώην σου ἐκ τῆς ἀνάγκης σου τῆς μεγάλης καὶ τῶν ὀδυνῶν.		44:2 ծնցիս որդիս բազումս, եւ ի ժամանակի ծնեբան վախճանեցի[ս ի] իննաց քոց, եւ ի մեծ վշտաց քոց եւ ի ցատց	44:2 შეც ნაყოფი მრავალი. ღა ოღეს შვა, წარსწრო ცხორებაი შენი ურვათა ღა სალმობათა,
25:3 Εξομολογήσει δὲ καὶ εἴπεις· Κύριε, κύριε, σῶσόν με καὶ οὐ μὴ ἐπιστρέψω εἰς τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τῆς σαρκός. [ἀλλὰ καὶ πάλιν ἐπιστρέψεις.]		44:3 խոստովանեցիս բերանով քրդով եւ ասացես. Եթէ ապրեցայց ի վշտացս յայցանէ, ոչ ես արարից դարձ յայլն իմ. եւ իբրեւ եյանիցես ի վշտացս, դարձ արատցիր դու ատժամայն իբրկիր այլս.	44:3 უკუეთუ განერჯიროთა მათ, არღარა მოიქცე კმრისად. ღა განაფიცზე გული შენი ბრძოლისა მისგან დიდისა, რომელი დაღვა გულმან შენ თანა,
25:4 Διὰ τοῦτο ἐκ τῶν λόγων σου κρινῶ σε, διὰ τὴν ἔχθραν ἣν ἔθετο ὁ ἐχθρὸς ἐν σοί. Στραφήσῃ δὲ πάλιν πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα σου, καὶ αὐτὸς σου κυριεύσει.		44:4 զի ի բերանոյ քումէ դատապարտեսչիր, վասն զի խոստովանեցար ի տագնապախս ցանս եթէ ոչ դարձայց իբրկիր այլս. եւ ապա դարձար ի [նոյնն. ցաւօք] ծնցիս որդիս եւ գնաւք դարձիս առ այլ քո, եւ նա տիրեցէ քեզ:	44:4 მიიქეც მეცუელად მუხვე. ჯუვილითა შეც ნაშობი შენი ღა მოწყალებითა მიიქეც კმრისა შენისა ღა იგი შენ ზელა უფლებდეს.

Pericope 25 EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam and Eve (Gen 3:14-19) 66E

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
24:4 The beasts, over whom you ruled, shall rise up in rebellion against you, for you have not kept my commandment."		44:4 and] the beasts [which] you ruled will rise up against you malignantly, because you transgressed my commandment and did not observe (it).'	44:4 And the beasts over whom you (sing.) used to rule shall rise up against you. You shall be weakened because you have not kept my commandments.'
25:1 And the Lord turned to me and said: "Since you has hearkened to the serpent, and transgressed my commandment, you shall suffer torments and intolerable pains;		44:1 God turned and said to me, 'Because you obeyed the serpent [and transgressed my commandment,] you shall suffer torments and pains.	44:1 God turned to me and told me, 'Why did you hearken to the serpent and abandon my commandments which I commanded you? (May you) be in toils and pains;
25:2 you shall bear children in much trembling and in one hour you shall come to the birth, and lose your life, from your sore trouble and anguish.		44:2 You shall bear many children and at the time of birth [you shall] bring your life [to] an end and, from your great agonies and pains	44:2 ((may you) give birth to many fruits and when you give birth to them you will despair of your life because of the torments and pains.
25:3 But you shall confess and say: "Lord, Lord, save me, and I will turn no more to the sin of the flesh." [But even another time you shall so turn.]		44:3 you shall promise with your mouth and say, "If I survive these agonies, I shall never go back to my husband." And when you emerge from the agonies, you shall return immediately to the earth.	44:3 (You shall promise yourself) that if you are ever delivered from the agonies, you will never go back to [[your husband]] and you will harden your heart in view of the great combat which the serpent instituted with you.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
26:1 Μετὰ δὲ τὸ εἰπεῖν μοι ταῦτα, εἶπεν τῷ ὄφει ἐν ὀργῇ μεγάλη λέγων· Ἐπειδὴ ἐποίησας τοῦτο καὶ ἐγένου σκευὸς ἀχάριστον ἕως ἄν πλανήσῃς τοὺς παρεμένους τῇ καρδίᾳ ἐπικατάρατος σὺ ἐκ πάντων τῶν κτηνῶν.		44:1 և լինա սահլոյն ինձ զայս ամենայն, բարկացաւ Տէր ի վերայ ամէն բարկութեամբ մեծաւ եւ սաւ. Փոխանակ զի արարիր դու դարձ եւ եղեր քնար [մոլորեցուցանել լքեալ սրտիւրդ]. անխեղալ լիջիր դու ամենայն անասնոց.	44:1 ოდეს მრქუა მე ესე ყოველი, განისხნა გულსა ზელა რისხვითა და პრქუა მას: წარწყმდი შენცა და წყუთლ იყავ ყოველთა შორის პირუტყუთა,
26:2 Στερηθήσεται τῆς τροφῆς σου ἥς ἴσθιες καὶ χοὺν φάγεις πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ζωῆς σου. Ἐπὶ τῷ στηθεὶ καὶ τῇ κοιλίᾳ πορεύσεται ὑστερηθεὶς καὶ χειρῶν καὶ ποδῶν σου.		44:2 արգելիր դու ի կերակրոց քոց [զոր կերակրէիր]. հող կերակուր լիցի քեզ եւ ի վերայ լանջաց եւ որովայնի քոմ քանացես. արգելցին ոտք քո եւ ձեռք քո	44:2 მოაკლდი საზრდელისაგან შენისა, რომელსა სჭამდი, და მიწა იყავნ საჭმელად შენდა ყოველთა ღღელთა ცხორებისა შენისათა, მკერდითა და მუცლითა შენითა ხვიდოდე შენ. მოაკლდენ შენგან ხელნი და ფეხნი შენნი
26:3 Οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται σοι ὥτιον οὐτε πτέρυξ οὐτε ἐν μέλος τοῦτων ὧν σὺ ἐδελέασας ἐν τῇ κακίᾳ σου καὶ ἐποίησας αὐτοὺς ἐκβληθῆναι ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου.		44:3 և մի լուիցեն ականջ[ք] քո. և մի ինչ լանդամոց քոց. նմանութիւն խաչին գորդին իմ բերելոց է լերկիր. վասն ալարիկի զոր դու խաբեցիր. լքեալ եւ խցեալ լիջիր դու վասն չարութեան սրտի քո.	[44:3 და ნუ იყვნენ ყურნი და ფრხილნი შენნი და ნუ იყოფინ ნუფა ერთი ასით შენი, დაგსაჯენ შენ პატიოსანმან ჯუარმან, რომელი აღიღოს ძემან ჩემმან ჭუეყანასა ზელა, საცთურისა მისთვის, რომელი აცთუნე აღამი. არამედ შენ იყავ კუალადვი მკლინავ და განსხუთლ (!) უკეთურებითა გულისა შენისაითა.

Pericope 25 EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam and Eve (Gen 3:14-19) 67E

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

25:4 And on this account, from your own words I will judge you, by reason of the enmity which the enemy has planted in you. And you shall return again to your husband and he will rule over you."

26:1 After he said these things to me, he spoke to the serpent in great wrath saying: "Since you has done this, and become a thankless vessel until you has deceived the innocent hearts, be cursed (more than) all beasts.

26:2 You shall be deprived of the food which you ate and you shall eat dust all the days of your life; on your breast and your belly you shall walk and be robbed of hands and feet.

44:4 For you shall be condemned by your own mouth, since you promised when the pain was acute, "I will never go back to this earth" and then you returned to [the same. In pain] you shall bear children and in pity you shall return to your husband and he will rule over you.'

44:1 After he had said all this to me, the Lord became very angry at the serpent and said, 'Because you did this and became a lyre [to lead astray those who were weak of heart], be cursed more than all the animals.

44:2 Be withheld from your foods [which you used to eat]. Dust will be your food and you shall go upon your breast and your stomach; your feet and hands will be withheld

44:4 (But may you) return at once to the same point, may you bear your offspring in hurt and return in pity (lit: begging for alms) to your husband, and he will rule over you.'

44:1 [When he had said all this to me, he became very angry with the serpent,] and God told the serpent, 'You, too, perish and be cursed among all the animals.

44:2 (May you) be withheld from your food which you used to eat and (may) the soil be to you as food all the days of your life; you shall go on your breast and on your stomach; your hands and your feet will be taken from you.

68 Pericope 25 EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam and Eve (Gen 3:14-19)

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
26:4 Καὶ θήσω ἔχθραν ἀνὰ μέσον σοῦ καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ σπέρματος αὐτῶν· αὐτὸς σοῦ τηρήσει κεφαλὴν καὶ σὺ ἐκείνου πτέρναν ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας τῆς κρίσεως.		44:4 թընամութիւն եղից ի մէջ քո եւ զասակին Ադամայ. դու նորա գարշապարին սպասես եւ նա քոյ պիտուղ. մինչեւ յաւրն յորոյս տանջեսցիք.	44:4 და დავდვა მტერობაი შორის შენსა და შორის ნათესავისა მისგან დედაკაცისა, იგი უშვირდეს თავსა შენსა და შენ უშვირდე ბრჯალ-სა მისსა ვიდრე დღედმდე სასჯელისა”.

Pericope 25 EVE'S TALE: Judgment of Adam and Eve (Gen 3:14-19) 68E

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
26:3 May you have neither ears nor wings, not even one of the limbs with which you ensnared them in your malice and so caused them to be cast out of the Garden;		44:3 and your ear[s] will not hear, and [none of your limbs.] A likeness of the cross will bring my son to the earth, because of him whom you deceived. Be disabled and broken because of the evil of your heart.	44:3 And (may you) have neither ears nor nails and may not even one limb remain for you. Let the precious cross which my Son will take upon the earth condemn you because of the deceit by which you deceived [Adam]. But may you again [be exhausted and broken] because of the evil of your heart.
26:4 and I will put enmity between you and their seed: he shall lie in wait for your head and you [shall lie in wait] for that one's heel until the day of Judgment."		44:4 I have set enmity between you and Adam's seed. You will lie in wait for his heel and he for your head, until the day upon which you will be punished.'	44:4 And I will set enmity between you and the offspring of the woman: she will lay in wait for your head and you will lay in wait for her heel until the day of judgment.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
27:1 Ταῦτα εἰπὼν κελεύει τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ ἐκβληθῆναι ἡμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου.		44:1 Զայս իրրիւ ասաց Աստուած, Հրամայեաց Հանել զմեզ ի դրախտէն.	44:1 ესე თქუა ღმერთმაჲს და მძდაბა ჩუენი ორთავე გამოვლინებაი სამოთხით.	25-27.1 И тако сътвори насъ отъждены отъ рая,
27:2 Ἐλαυνον- μένων δὲ ἡμῶν καὶ ὀδυρομένων, παρεκάλεσεν ὁ πατὴρ ὁμῶν Ἄδᾰμ τοὺς ἀγγέλους λέγων· Ἐάσατέ με μικρὸν ὅπως παρακαλέσω τὸν θεὸν καὶ σπλαγχνισθῇ καὶ ἐλεήσῃ με, ὅτι ἐγὼ μόνος ἥμαρτον.		44:2 Եւ վարեցին հրեշտակքն Հանել զմեզ: Աղաչաց Ադամ զհրեշտակս եւ ասէ. Թողացուցէք ինձ սակաւիկ մի, զի աղաչեցիք զԱստուած վասն յանցանաց իմոց. Բերեա տաքէ ինձ ապաշխարութիւն, եւ ոչ Հանել ի դրախտէս:	44:2 ევეღრებოდა აღამ ანგელოზთა და ჰრქუა: "მაცადეთ მე, რაი- თა ევეღრო უფალსა, ვინ უწყის, თუ სინანული მცეს მე უფალმაჲს ამისა"- თვის, რომელი-ესე ვყავ მე და არა გამოვხდე სამოთხით".	25-27.2 мы же моляхось се ангеломъ и глаголахомъ имъ · потрипъте насъ мало, да помолимъ се богу .
27:3 Αὐτοὶ δὲ ἐπαύσαντο τοῦ ἐλαύνειν αὐτόν, ἐβόησε δὲ Ἄδᾰμ μετὰ κλαυθμοῦ λέγων· Συγγώρησόν μοι, κύριε, ὅ ἐποίησα.		44:3 Թողացուցին նաև հրեշտակքն ի Հանելոյ ի դրախտէ անտի. եւ ասէ Ադամ. Շնորհեա ինձ Տէր Աստուած, զի մեղա քեզ:	44:3 მაშინ დააცადეს ანგელოზთა გამომივბაი ჩუენი, ევეღრებოდა აღამ უფალსა და თქუა: "გევეღრებო, მომიტევე მე, უფალო, რომელი-ესე ვყავ ."	25-27.3 и кличе Адамъ гласомъ величемъ · помилуй ны, владыко, яко съгрѣшихомъ · оумили сръди се о насъ, владыко .
27:4 Τότε λέγει ὁ κύριος τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ· Τί ἐπαύσασθε ἐκβάλλοντες τὸν Ἄδᾰμ ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου; Μὴ ἐμὸν ἐστὶ τὸ ἁμάρτημα, ἢ κακῶς ἔκρινα;		44:4 Յալմամ ասէ Տէր [հրեշտակս]. Մի տաք դնա անուղ զտեղի, այլ Հանելք ի դրախտէս. միթէ իմ մեղանք իցեն կամ ի գոր ինչ դատիմ:	44:4 მაშინ ჰრქუა უფალმაჲს ანგელოზთა: "რაისა დააცადეთ გა- მოყვანებაი აღამისი სამოთხით, ნუუჯუე ჩემი ბრალი არსა, ანუ თუ არა მართალი ვსაჯე?"

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

27:1 After saying these things he commanded the angels to cast us out of the Garden: 27:2 and as we were being driven out amid our loud lamentations, your father Adam besought the angels and said: "Leave me a little (space) that I may entreat the Lord that he have compassion on me and pity me, for I only have sinned." 27:3 And they left off driving him and Adam cried aloud and wept saying: "Pardon me, O Lord, my deed." 27:4 Then the Lord said to the angels, "Why have you ceased from driving Adam from the Garden? Is it I who have done wrong? Or have I judged badly?"		44:1 When God had said this, he commanded our expulsion from the Garden, 44:2 and the angels set about expelling us. Adam beseeched the angels and said, 'Let me be for a little, so that I may beseech God about my sins. Perhaps he will grant me penitence and not expel (me) from the Garden.' 44:3 The angels let him be from expelling (him) from the Garden, and Adam said, 'Be gracious to me, Lord God, for I have sinned against you.' 44:4 Then the Lord said [to the angels], 'Do not let him stand still, but expel (him) from the Garden. Were the sins mine? Do I pronounce judgement in vain?'	44:1 Thus God said, and he ordered both of us to be expelled from the Garden. 44:2 Adam beseeched the angels and told them, 'Wait for me to beseech the Lord; who knows, perhaps the Lord will grant me a penance for that which I have done and I will not go out of the Garden.' 44:3 Then the angels waited for us to ask. Adam beseeched the Lord and said, 'I beseech you, Lord, pardon me for what I have done.' 44:4 Then the Lord told the angels, 'Why have you been waiting (before) separating Adam from the Garden? Is the blame mine (Am I to blame) or have I not judged justly?'	25-27.1 And so he exiled us from Paradise. 25-27.2 We, however, bid the angel saying to him, 'Be a little patient with us, so that we may entreat God.' 25-27.3 And Adam cried out in a loud voice, 'Have mercy on our sin, O Master, be merciful with us, O Lord.' see 25-27.10 in pericope 27 for parallel material
---	--	---	--	---

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
27:5 Τότε οἱ ἄγγελοι πεισόντες ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν προσεκύνουσιν τῷ κυρίῳ λέγοντες· Δίκαιος εἶ, κύριε, καὶ εὐθύτητας κρίνεις. 28:1 Στράφεις δὲ πρὸς τὸν Ἀδὰμ εἶπεν· Οὐκ ἀφήσω σε ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν εἶναι ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ. 28:2 Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἀδὰμ εἶπεν· Κύριε, δός μοι ἐκ τοῦ φυτοῦ τῆς ζωῆς ἵνα φάγω πρὶν ἢ ἐκβληθῆναι με. 28:3 Τότε ὁ κύριος ἐλάλησεν πρὸς τὸν Ἀδὰμ· Οὐ λήψαι νῦν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ὥρισθαι γάρ τῷ χερουβὶμ καὶ τῇ φλογίνῃ ῥομφαίᾳ τῇ στρεφομένῃ φυλάσσειν αὐτὸ διὰ σέ, ὥπως μὴ γεύσῃ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀθάνατος ἔσθαι εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, ἔχεις δὲ τὸν πόλεμον ὃν ἔθετο ὁ ἐχθρὸς ἐν σοί.		44:5 Յայնժամ Հրեշտակքն երկիր պագին Աստուծոյ եւ ասեին. Արդար ես դու Տէր եւ ուղիղ են իրատմբ քո: 44:2 Դարձաւ Ադամ եւ ասէ ցԱստուած. Տէր իմ. աղաչեմ գրեզ, տուր ինձ ի ծառոյն կենաց զի կերայց ես մինչ չեւ ելեալ իցեմ ի դրախտէս: 44:3 եւ ասէ Տէր ցԱդամ. Ոչ ունիս ասուլ ի նմանէ ի կեանս քո, քանզի հրաման եսու սերորդից շուրջնակի պահել զես զիտուք վասն քո. զի այլ մի ես ճաշակեսցես դու ի նմանէ եւ լինիցիս անմահ, եւ ասես եթէ ահա որ ոչ մեռայց, եւ պարծեսցիս ի նմա, եւ յաղթեսցես դու պատերազմին, զոր երեպս է թշնամոյն ընդ քեզ.	44:5 მამინ დავარდეს ანგელოზნი ქუეყანასა ზედა და ჰრქუეს თაყუანის - ცემით უფალსა: - მართალ ხარ შენ, უფალო, და წრფელ არს სასჯელი შენი". 44:1 მოექცა უფალი და ჰრქუა ადამს: - არა დატევებად ხარ შენ სამოთხესა შინა". 44:2 მოუგო ადამ და ჰრქუა უფალსა: - გვედრებდი შენ, უფალო, მეც მე ხისა მისგან ცხოვრებისა, რათა ვჰაძო გამოსლვად იქმდამდე". 44:3 მამინ ეტყუღა უფალი ადამს და ჰრქუა: - არღარა მიიღო იგი ცხოვრებასა შენსა, დამიდგინებია ქერობინი მოტყინარე და მახვილი იქცე- ვისი დაცვად მაგისა შენთვის, რათა არა გემო იხილო და უკუღდავ იყო და იქადლოდ, ვითარმდე: არა მოვეკუდე მე უკუთნისამდე. და ჰყო ბრძოლოლა, რო- მელ ჰყო მტერმან შენ ზედა.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

27:5 Then the angels fell down on the ground and worshipped the Lord saying, "You are just, O Lord, and you judge righteously."

28:1 But the Lord turned to Adam and said: "I will not suffer you henceforward to be in the Garden."

28:2 And Adam answered and said, "Grant me, O Lord, of the Tree of Life that I may eat of it, before I be cast out."

28:3 Then the Lord said to Adam, "You shall not take of it now, for the Cherubim with the flaming sword that turns (every way) has been stationed to guard it from you that you taste not of it and live without death forever, but you have the war which the adversary has put into you."

44:5 Then the angels worshipped God and said, You are just, O Lord, and your judgments are upright.

44:2 Adam said again to God, 'My Lord, I beseech you, give me of the Tree of Life, so that I may eat before I shall have gone forth from the Garden.'

44:3 God said to Adam, 'You cannot take of it in your lifetime, because I have given an order to the Seraphs to guard it round about with weapons because of you, lest you should eat more of it and become immortal and say, "Behold, I shall not die;" and you will be boastful of it and be victorious in the war which the enemy has made with you.'

44:5 Then the angels fell to the ground and told him, bowing before the Lord, "You are just, Lord, and your sentence is upright."

44:1 The Lord turned and told Adam, 'You are not to remain in the Garden.'

44:2 Adam replied to the Lord and told him, 'I beseech you, Lord, give me of the Tree of Life so that I may eat before I shall have gone forth.'

44:3 Then the Lord addressed a speech to Adam and told him, 'You will not take of it anymore in your lifetime. I have posted burning Cherubim and a turning sword to keep it from you, lest you should taste it and become immortal and boast saying, "I shall not die ever;" and you should conduct the fight which the enemy has conducted against you.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
28:4 'ἄλλ' ἐξερχομένου σου ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου, ἐάν φυλάξεις ἐαυτὸν ἀπὸ παντὸς κακοῦ ὡς βουλόμενος ἀποθανεῖν, ἀναστήσῃς πάλιν γενομένης, ἀναστήσῃ σε καὶ δοθήσεται σοι ἐκ τοῦ ξύλου τῆς ζωῆς καὶ ἀθάνατος ἔσει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.		44:4 սլլ իրիւ ելանիցես դու ի դրախտէ անտի, եւ պահեսցես զանձն քո ի շարահաւանքինէ, ի պոռնկութիւնէ, ի շնութիւնէ, ի կախարդութիւնէ, յարժախիրութիւնէ, ի գաւաքադութիւնէ, եւ յամենայն մեղաց. եւ ապա յարիցես ի մահոանէ անտի. որ լինելոց է յարութիւն. եւ յալնժամ տաքից քեզ ի ծառոյն կենաց եւ լինիս դու անմահ մինչեւ յախտեան:	44:4 უკუეოთ განვვიდე სამთხიოთ და დაიცვა ყოვლისაგან ბორო- ტისა, მოჰყუდე და შეძღვომად სიკუდილისა აღსდგე შერმესა მას აღდგომა- სა. მაშინ-ღა მიგეც ხისა მისგან ცხორებისა და უკუდავ იყო უკუენისამდე”.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
28:4 Yet when you have gone out of the Garden, if you keep yourself from all evil, as one wishing to die, when again the Resurrection has come to pass, I will raise you up and then there shall be given to you from the Tree of Life and you will be without death forever."		44:4 Rather, when you go out of the Garden, guard yourself from slander, from harlotry, from adultery, from sorcery, from the love of money, from avarice and from all sins. Then, you shall arise from death, (in the) resurrection which is going to take place. At that time, I will give you of the Tree of Life and you will be eternally undying.'	44:4 If you go out of the Garden and guard yourself from every evil, [you will die and after death you will arise in the future resurrection. Then, indeed,] I will give you of the Tree of Life and you will be undying for ever.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:1 Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ κύριος ἐκέλευσεν τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ ἐκβλήθηναι ἡμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου. 29:2 Ἐκλάνσε δὲ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀγγέλων ἀπέναντι τοῦ παραδείσου καὶ λέγουσιν οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτῷ· Τί θέλεις ποιήσωμέν σοι, Ἀδάμ; 29:3 Ἐποκρθεὶς δὲ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν εἶπεν τοῖς ἀγγέλοις· Ἰδοὺ ἐκβάλλετε με· δέομαι ὑμῶν, ἄφετέ με ἄραι εὐωδίας ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου, ἵνα μετὰ τὸ ἐξελθεῖν με ἀνεγέκω θυσίαν τῷ θεῷ ὅπως εἰσακουσεται μου ὁ θεός. 29:4 Καὶ προσελθόντες εἶπον οἱ ἄγγελοι τῷ κυρίῳ· Ἰαήλ, αἰώνιεν βασιλεῦ, κέλευσον δοθῆναι τῷ Ἀδὰμ θυμιάματα εὐωδίας ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου.		44:1 Զայս իբրեւ ասաց Աստուած, հրամայեաց հանել զմեզ ի դրախտէ անտի. 44:2 Կալ սկաւ Ադամ ասացի հրեշտակացն. եւ ասեն ցնա հրեշտակքն. Զի՞նչ կամիս եւ անենմք քեզ: 44:3 Պատասխանի եւս Ադամ եւ ասէ ցհրեշտակսն. Աղաչեմ զմեզ թողացուցէք սակարիկ մի. զի առից ընդ իս խոնկս անուշոմա ի դրախտէ աստի. զի իբրեւ ելանիցեմ աստի. մատուցանեմ Աստուծոյ խոնկս անուշս, եւ պատարագս. զի թերեւ լուիցէ մեզ Աստուած:	44:1 ესე რა თქუა უფალმან, ბრძანა გამოძეაი ჩუენი სამოთხით. 44:2 და ტიროლა მამაი თუქუენი წინაშე ანგელოზთა. ხოლო მათ ჰრქუეს მას: "რაი არს, ანუ რაი გოყთ შენ?" 44:3 მაშინ მიუტო მამამან თუქუენმან და ჰრქუა: "ავა ესე რა მე განვალ, აწ გვედრებო თუქუენ, რაითა განსლვასა ამას ჩემსა აღვიდო საკუ- მვევლი სამოთხისაგან, რაითა ოდეს განვიდო, შევსწინო საკუმვევლი სულ- ნელეღისაი და ისმინოს ჩემი ღმერთმან".	25-27.4 тогда пославише аггели, гонещи ны . 25-27.5 Адамъ же помоли се и рече : господи, пирпоusti мнѣ храню, како живю азъ . 25-27.6 Изведоше ны аггели изъ рая и затворише раи отъ насъ . 25-27.7 тогда Адамъ въпияше, глаголюе помилуй ны, владыко, и припоusti ми благоухание, ꙗгда хоуоу сътворити хрътвю богу, да принесю кадило . 25-27.8 аггелъ Иоиъль неспръстанно моле се глаголаше помилуй, владыко, пръво създание твоё . 25-27.9 и рекоше аггели вси тоу же рѣчь къ богу о Адамъ помилуй, владыко, пръво създание твоё .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:1 When the Lord had said these things he ordered us to be cast out of the Garden. 29:2 But your father Adam wept before the angels opposite the Garden and the angels said to him: "What would you have us to do, Adam?" 29:3 And your father said to them, "Behold, you cast me out. I pray you, allow me to take away fragrant herbs from the Garden, so that I may offer an offering to God after I have gone out of the Garden that he hear me." 29:4 And the angels approached God and said: "Jael, Eternal King, command, my Lord, that there be given to Adam incense of sweet odor from the Garden."		44:1 When God had said this, he commanded to expel us from the Garden. 44:2 Adam began to cry before the angels, and the angels said to him, "What do you want us to do for you?" 44:3 Adam replied and said to the angels, 'I beseech you, let (me) be a little, so that I may take sweet incenses with me from the Garden, so that when I go out of here, I may offer sweet incenses to God, and offerings, so that, perhaps, God will hearken to us.'	44:1 When the Lord had said that [he ordered us to be chased out of the Garden.] 44:2 And your father wept before the angels, but they told him, 'What is this or what shall we do for you?' 44:3 Then your father replied to them and told them, 'Behold, I am going out. Now I beseech you that at the very moment of my leaving the Garden I may take incense from the Garden so that, when I go out, I may offer a sweet-odored incense and God will be willing to hearken to me.'	25-27.4 Then the angels driving us forth relented a little, 25-27.5 and Adam prayed and said, 'O Lord, furnish me with nourishment, that I might live.' 25-27.6 The angel guided us out of Paradise and barricaded it off from us. 25-27.7 Then Adam prayed and said, 'Have mercy on us, O Master, let me have pleasing aromas, that whenever I make an offering to God, I may bring incense to him.' 25-27.8 Angel Joel prayed unceasingly and said, 'Have mercy, O Master, on your first creation.' 25-27.9 And all the angels spoke the same word to God concerning Adam, 'Have mercy, O Master, on your first creation.'

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:5 Καὶ ἐκέλευσεν ὁ θεὸς ἐαθῆναι τὸν Ἀδὰμ ἵνα λάβῃ εὐωδίας καὶ σπέρματα εἰς διατροφήν αὐτοῦ. 29:6 Καὶ ἀφέντες αὐτὸν οἱ ἄγγελοι, ἔλαβε τέσσαρα γένη, κρόκον καὶ νάρκον καὶ κάλαμον καὶ κινάμωμον, καὶ ἕτερα σπέρματα εἰς διατροφήν αὐτοῦ. Καὶ λαβὼν ταῦτα ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ παραδείσου· καὶ ἐγενόμεθα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. [two manuscripts from Nagel's family II have an epitome of the penitence narrative; see pericopes 2 and 4]		44:6 Թողացուցին նմա հրեշտակք եւ առ ընդ իւր խումբկս անուշուխ. Հիւրիկս եւ ասպրամս: Առաք զայն եւ ելաք ի դարպասէ աստի լերկիրս այս:	44:6 და მიუტევეს ანგელოზთა. და მთილთ საკუმეველი სურნელი ოთხი: ნარდნი, კროკონი, ლერწამი და იამინდლი - ესე გამოიღო საშობით აღამ ქუეყნად.	25-27.10 и рече господь къ аггеломъ своимъ · право ли кѣсть тако патити Адаму, како мѹ кѣсть соуждено, или неправедно кѣсть тако; 25-27.11 аггели непръстанно глаголахѹ · праведнь кѣсть соудъ твои, господи, въ истинѹ праведнь · 25-27.12 тогда господь припусти кѹмоу благоуханіе · тѣмیانъ, ладанъ и ливанъ · [Penitence narrative follows; see pericopes 2-4]

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
29:5 And God commanded it to be so for Adam that he might take sweet spices and seeds for his food.				25-27.10 And the Lord said to his angels, 'Is it right, that Adam suffers thus, just as the verdict was pronounced on him, or is it unjust?'
29:6 And as the angels let him go he took four kinds: crocus and nard and calamus and cinnamon and the other seeds for his food: and, after taking these, he went out of the Garden. And we were on the earth.		44:6 The angels let him be, and he took sweet incenses with him, iris and balsam. We took them and went forth from the Garden to this land.	44:6 And the angels let him and he took four sweet-odored kinds of incense: nard, saffron, reed, cinnamon; that is what Adam brought from the Garden onto the earth.	25-27.11 The angels spoke in one accord, 'Just is your judgment, O Lord, in truth it is just.'
[two manuscripts from Nagel's family II have an epitome of the penitence narrative; see pericopes 2 and 4]				25-27.12 Then God allowed him to provide the pleasing aromas: incense, laudanum, and libanum.
				[Penitence narrative follows; see pericopes 2-4]

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

30:1 Νῶν ὁν, τεκνία μου, ἐδῆλωσα ὑμῖν τὸν τρόπον ἐν ᾧ ἡπατήθημεν. Ὑμεῖς δὲ φυσλάξατε ἐαυτοὺς μὴ ἐγκαταλιπεῖν τὸ ἀγαθόν.		44:1 Արդ (որդեակ) իմ, Սէթ. (ցուցի) ձեզ զառակս զայս, որպէս զիս՝ որ յանցեաք: բայց դուք զգոյշացարուք զբարիս գործել. մի թողուք ի բաց զպատուիրանս Աստուծոյ. եւ մի մերժիք յորդրմութենէ նորա: Ահա զամենայն աւրինակ հատուցման զբարոյ եւ զբարի ցուցից ձեզ:	44:1 " ხოლო აწ, შვილნო ჩემო, გაუწყე თქვენ ესე სახე ყოველი, რომელთა შევიტყუენით ლა აძას გავედრებო, რათა ღაცვნეთ თავნი თქუენნი ლა ნუ ღააცადებთ კეთილის ყოფასა".
31:1 Ταῦτα δὲ εἰπούσα ἐν μέσφ τῶν υἱῶν αὐτῆς, κοιτωμένου τοῦ Ἀδὰμ ἐν τῇ νόσφ αὐτοῦ, ἄλλην δὲ εἶχεν μίαν ἡμέραν ἐξελθεῖν ἐκ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ. Καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἀδὰμ ἡ Εὐα·	45:1 Et sicut praedixit Michabel archangelus, post sex dies venit mors Adae.	45:1 Ի ժամանակին իբրեւ կայր Ադամ ի հիանդութեանն եւ նորա շուրջ կային զմովա, քանզի սար մի միտս եա կայր ի կենաց նորա, եւ եյանէր ողին Ադամայ ի մարմնոյն: Պատմեաց եա զայս ամենայն, եւ դարձեալ եա ասէ ցԱդամ.	45:1 ესე ღა თქუა ევა შორის შვილთა თვისთა, ოღეს ეძინა ადამს სნეულებასა მისსა. ღა მეორესა ღღესა გამოსლვად იყო სული გუამისაგან მისისა. ჰრქუა ევა ადამს:	45:2 "რად- მე შენ ხოლო მოჰკუდებო და მე ცოცხალ ვარ, ანუ რა-ოღენ უაძაღმდე ვყოფ, ანუ რაი ყოფად არს ჩემდა შემდგომად სიკუდილისა შენისა? მაუწყე მე".
31:2 Διὰ τί ἀποθνήσκεις κάγω ῥῶ; ἡ πόσον χρόνον ἔχω ποιήσαι μετὰ θάνατόν σου; Ἀναγγεῖλόν μοι.	45:2 Cum cogno- visset Adam, quia hora venit mortis suae, dixit ad omnes filios suos: ecce sum annorum DCCCCXXX, et si mortuus fuero, sepelite me contra ortum dei magnum (contra ortum dei in agrum habita- tionis illius?) habi- tationibus.	45:2 Ընդէ՛ր մեռանիս դու եւ ես կեամ. զի՛նչ սունեմ քեզ կամ որչա՛յի ժամանակս յինելոց եմ յերկրի յետ մահու քո պատմեցես ինձ:	45:2 "რად- მე შენ ხოლო მოჰკუდებო და მე ცოცხალ ვარ, ანუ რა-ოღენ უაძაღმდე ვყოფ, ანუ რაი ყოფად არს ჩემდა შემდგომად სიკუდილისა შენისა? მაუწყე მე".

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

30:1 Now then, my children, I have shown you the way in which we were deceived; and do guard yourselves from transgressing against the good."		44:1 Now, my son, Seth, I [have] shown you the way, how we sinned. But you, take care to do the good things. Do not abandon God's command and do not depart from his mercy. Behold, I will show you every sort of recompense, both of good and of evil."	44:1 Now, therefore, my children I have taught you the whole way in which we were tricked and I beseech you to watch yourselves and not to stop doing good."
31:1 And Eve said this in the midst of her sons, while Adam was lying ill and had but one more day before he would depart from his body. Eve said to Adam:	45:1 Just as Michael had predicted, after six days the death of Adam came.	45:1 At the time when Adam was ill and they were standing around him, because one more day remained of his life and Adam's soul was going forth from his body, Eve related all this. And again Eve said to Adam,	45:1 That, then, is what Eve said in the midst of her children when Adam was lying ill. And on the second day his soul was about to go out of his body. Eve said to Adam,
31:2 "How is it that you die and I live or how long have I to live after you are dead? Tell me."	45:2 When Adam knew that the hour of his death had come, he said to all his children: "Now I am 930 years old, and if I die, bury me opposite the great Garden of God near his dwelling (opposite the Garden of God in the field of his dwelling?)."	45:2 "Why do you die and I live? Tell me, what shall I do for you? How long shall I be on the earth after your death?"	45:2 "Why do you alone die and I live? Or, how long shall I exist? Or, what will become of me after your death? Let me know about that."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
31:3 Τότε λέγει ὁ Ἀδὰμ τῇ Εὐφ· Μὴ θέλε φροντίζειν περὶ πραγμάτων· οὐ γὰρ βραδυνεῖς ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, ἀλλ' ἴσα ἀποθνήσκομεν ἀμφοτέρω· καὶ αὐτὴ τεθήσεται εἰς τὸν τόπον τὸν ἐμόν. Κἀν ἀποθανῶ, κατὰλειψόν με καὶ μηδεὶς μου ἄνηται ἕως οὐ ἄγγελος λαλήσεται περὶ ἐμοῦ. 31:4 Οὐ γὰρ ἐπιλήσεται μου ὁ θεός, ἀλλὰ ζητήσεται τὸ ἴδιον σκευός· ὃ ἐπλασεν. Ἀνάστα, μάλλον εὐδῆσαι τῷ θεῷ ἕως οὐ ἀποδώσω τὸ πνεῦμά μου εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τοῦ δεδωκότος μοι αὐτὸ διότι οὐκ οἶδαμεν πῶς ἀπαντήσωμεν τοῦ ποιήσαντος ἡμᾶς, ἢ ὀργισθῇ ἡμῖν ἢ ἐπιστρέψῃ τοῦ ἐλεῆσαι ἡμᾶς.	45:3 Et factum est, cum finisset omnes sermones illius, tradidit spiritum.	45:3 Աստ ցնա Ադամ. Միթէ զբաղեսցիս ինչ զերկրաւորս ամ վարկիր զի (զոյգ) մեռանիմք երկրքեանս, եւ զքեզ դիցեն ուր են կայսն. քայց իբրեւ մեռանիմ մի ինչ մերձենայք առ իս շարժի ի տեղորէ անտի, մինչեւ Աստուած խաւանցի ընդ Վասն իմ. 45:4 զի ոչ եթէ Աստուած մոռացի զիս, ամ խնդրէ զանայքն զոր իւրն ստեղծեալ է: Արդ, արի կաց յաղաքս առ Աստուած մինչեւ տամ զողի իմ ի ձեռս նորա, որ ետ ցիս զի ոչ զխեղմ որպէս զխարդ պահիցենք հարն ամենայնի. քարկացի եթէ ողորմեսցի մեզ:	45:3 մաშობ 31-ეულია აღამ ევას. ნუგაი ბჭონ მე, რაიცა ჰყავ. უკუეთუ მოკვლეთ ონნივე, შენცა დაღებად ხარ იემ თანა და მე ხოლო თუ მოკვლულე, ნუ შემძრევნ ადგილით იემით, ვიდრე ოღეს ღმერთმა ნებდა. ნოს იემვის. 45:4 რამეთუ არა ღამივწყოს მე უფალმა, არამელ მოიძიოს ჴული, რომელი შექმნა. აღღებ და ილოცე ღმრთისა მიძართ, რაითა შეივე-ღრთოს სული იემი ხელთა შემოქმედისა იემისათა. რამეთუ არა უწყი, ვითარ შემთხუევად ვარ მე შემოქმედისა ყოველთაისა ანუ თუ მოისხავსა ანუ თუ შემოიწყნარებს?"	40-41.1 Тогда възъва Адамъ великъмъ гласомъ шумлякии ѣвьго, иже бо доухъ мои омагъль есть въ мнѣ (ed. одолѣеть се, гead отъдѣля етъ се, отъ тѣла моего) . нѣ встани, изиди и помози се кь богѹ, дондѣже прѣдъамъ доухъ мои кь богѹ .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
31:3 And Adam said to her: "Give no thought to this, for you will not tarry long after me, but both of us are to die together. And (as to) this one he shall set (her) in my place. But when I die, leave me alone and let no man touch me till the angel shall say something concerning me. 31:4 For God will not forget me, but will seek the vessel he made. Now, arise, and pray to God until I give up my soul, which he gave me, into His hands. For we know not how we are to meet our Maker, whether He will be angry with us, or will turn to show mercy on us."	45:3 And it happened that, when he had finished all his words, he gave up his spirit.	45:3 Adam said to her, "Do not concern yourself with earthly things, but consider that we will both die as a couple, and they will place you where I will be. But when I die, do not come near me to move me from the place, until God speaks with you about me. 45:4 For God will not forget me, but he seeks the vessel which he made. Now, arise, pray to God until I give up my soul, which he gave me, into his hands. For I do not know how we shall preserve for the Father of all, whether he will be angry or will be merciful to us."	45:3 Then Adam told Eve, "Be not concerned, whatever you have done. If we must both die, you too will be set near me. And if I [alone] am to die, [do not move] me from my place until God gives you a command about me, 45:4 for the Lord will not [forget] me, but rather he will seek out the vessel which he has made. Arise and pray a prayer to God that my soul be commended into the hands of my Creator. For I do not know how I am going to reach the Creator of all, or whether he is angry with me or whether he will accept me."	40-41.1 Then Adam called in a loud voice, "Stop talking, Eve, my spirit is already diminished in me (ed. lit. "is being overcome." Read instead "my spirit is departing from my body"), but arise, go out and pray to God, until I have given my spirit to God."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

32:1 Τότε ἀνέστη ἡ Εὐα καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἔξω· καὶ πessoῦσα ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἔλεγεν·

32:2 "Ἡμαρτον, ὁ θεός, ἡμαρτον, ὁ πατήρ τῶν ἀπάντων, ἡμαρτόν σοι, ἡμαρτον εἰς τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς σου ἀγγέλους, ἡμαρτον εἰς τὰ χερουβὶμ, ἡμαρτον εἰς τὸν ἀσάλευτόν σου θρόνον, ἡμαρτον, κύριε, ἡμαρτον πολλά, ἡμαρτον ἐναντίον σου καὶ πάντα ἁμαρτία δι' ἐμὲ γέγονεν ἐν τῇ κτίσει.

45:1
Ծալեալս յարեալ Եւա, աղաչեաց զևստոած եւ ասէ.

45:2 *Մեղայ
Աստուած. մեղայ
քեզ. Տէր իմ սիրելի, մեղայ ընտրելոյց) քոյց) հրեշտակաց, մեղայ քերորէիցն
մեղայ սերորէիցն, մեղայ առաքի քո
Տէր, աղաչեմ զամենեւեան զոր ստացեալ է Աստուծոյ յերկինս եւ յերկրի. զի բարեխաւսեալք առ հայր ի յերկինս:*

45:1 მამონ
აღდგა ევა და გამოვიდა აღამისაგან და იხანა და თქლა:

45:2 " შეგოდე, ღმერთო, შეგოდე და
ვეოდე წინაშე შენსა, ვეოდე წინაშე რჩეულთა ანგელოზთა შენთა, ვეოდე წინაშე
ქერობინთა,
ვეოდე წინაშე
საკურთხეველსა სიწმიდისა შენისასა, ვეოდე წინაშე
ნათესავთა ცისათა, ვეოდე წინაშე მფინველთა ცისათა, ვეოდე წინაშე მხეცთა
ქუეყა-ნისათა.
შეგოდე,
ღმერთო,
ყოველთა ანგარებთა ჩემთა ყოველთა შორის დაბადებულთა შენთა, გევედრები, თქუენ ყოველთა დაბადებულთა
ცისათა და
ქუეყანისათა, ვედრებოდეთ ჩემთვის უფალსა ყოველთასა".

40-41.2 тогда въставъ Квѣга изиде вънъ и прилежѣ образомъ къ земли, и помоли се къ
богѣ и рече .
40-41.3
сѣгрѣшихъ ти,
господи,
сѣгрѣшихъ ти,
владыко, прѣдъ аггелы твоими и серафими шестокрилатъ ыми .
сѣгрѣшихъ ти
прѣдъ страшными прѣстоломъ .
сѣгрѣшихъ ти,
господи,
сѣгрѣшихъ .
вѣсакъ бо грѣхъ мене ради сѣтвори се .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
32:1 And Eve rose up and went outside and fell on the ground and said: 32:2 "I have sinned, O God, I have sinned, O Father of All, I have sinned against You. I have sinned against your elect angels. I have sinned against the Cherubim. I have sinned against Your unshakable Throne. I have sinned, o Lord, I have greatly sinned, I have sinned before You and all sin has begun through my doing in the creation."		45:1 Then Eve arose, beseeched God and said, 45:2 "I have sinned, God; I have sinned against you, my beloved Lord; I have sinned against your elect angels; I have sinned against the Cherubim; I have sinned against the Seraphs; I have sinned before you, Lord. I beseech all (you) whom God created in the heavens and on the earth, that you intercede with the Father in heaven."	45:1 Then Eve arose and went out from Adam('s place). She did penitence and said, 45:2 "I have sinned against you, God; I have sinned against you and I have sinned before you. I have sinned before your elect angels. I have sinned before the Cherubim. I have sinned before the altar of your holiness. I have sinned before the generations of the heavens. I have sinned before the birds of heavens. I have sinned before the beasts of the earth. I have sinned against you, God, by all my greed, among all your creatures. I beseech you all, you creatures of heaven and earth, beseech the Lord of all for me."	40-41.2 Then Eve stood up, went out and fell with her face to the ground, and prayed to God and said, 40-41.3 "I have sinned before you, O Lord, sinned, O Master, before the angels and six-winged Seraphim, sinned before your awesome throne, sinned, O Lord, sinned; for each and every sin occurs through me."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
32:3 "Ετι δὲ εὐχομένης τῆς Εὐῆας [ἐπὶ τὰ γόνατα αὐτῆς οὖσῃ] ἰδοὺ, ἦλθεν πρὸς αὐτήν ὁ ἄγγελος τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος καὶ ἀνέστησεν αὐτήν λέγων· 32:4 Ἀνάστα, Εὐῆα, ἐκ τῆς μετανοίας σου· ἰδοὺ γὰρ ὁ Ἀδὰμ ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐξῆλθεν ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ· Ἀνάστα καὶ ἰδὲ τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτοῦ ἀναφερόμενον εἰς τὸν ποιήσαντα αὐτὸν τοῦ ἀπαντῆσαι αὐτῷ.		45:3 bi միկղբո կայր յաղաքս նաւ. ի ծունր իրեայ, ահա եկն առ նա Միքայէլ հրեշտակապետն կանգնել զնա, եւ ասէ. 45:4 Արի նա յապաշխարութենէ քրանէ, ահա կերամայ առն քո եւ հոգին ի մարմնոյ անտի:	45:3 ილოცვიდა ოდენ ევა მუხლთა თვისთა ზედა და მეყსეულად მოვიდა მიქაელ ანგელოზი კაცებისა და აღადგინა ევა და ჰრქუა: 45:4 აღდეგ სინანულისაგან მაგის შენისა, რამეთუ აღამ, ქმარი შე- ნი, გამოსრულ არს ხორცთაგან. აღდეგ და იხილე სული მისი, ვითარ-ღა ჰყავს შემოქმედსა თვისსა.	40-41.4a и прииде аггелъ господень къ Ѣвьѣзъ и рече· 40-41.4b въстани, Ѣвьго, отъ покаяния, иже бо ядѣмъ изиде отъ тѣла своего и дохъ его изиде и прииде прѣдъ господа.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
32:3 Even as Eve prayed [on her knees] behold, the angel of mankind came to her, and raised her up and said: 32:4 "Rise up, Eve, from your penitence, for behold, Adam your husband has gone out of his body. Rise up and behold his spirit borne aloft to meet his Maker."		45:3 While Eve was praying on bended knee, behold, the archangel Michael came to her, stood her up and said, 45:4 "Arise, Eve, from your penitence. Behold, the soul of your husband Adam has gone forth from the body."	45:3 While Eve was praying on her [[knees]], suddenly Michael came, the angel of mankind, he stood Eve up, and told her, 45:4 "Arise from that penitence, for Adam your spouse has gone forth from the body. Arise and see his soul, how his Creator has already (got) it."	40-41.4a And the angel of the Lord came to Eve and said, 40-41.4b "Rise up, Eve, from your repentance, for Adam has already departed out of his body and his spirit is separated and gone before God."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

33:1 Ἀναστᾶσα δὲ Εὐὰ ἐπέβαλεν τὴν χεῖρα αὐτῆς ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ. [Καὶ λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ ἄγγελος· ἄρον καὶ αὐτὴν ἀπὸ τῶν γῶνων.]		45:1 Կանկեցաւ նա,	45:1 აღდგა ევა და დაიდვა ხელი პირსა ზედა თვისსა და ამაღლდა ანგელოზი იგი და პრქუა ევას: „აღიხილენ თუალნი შენნი და განეშორე ზრუნვათაგან ქუეყანისათა“.
33:2 Καὶ ἀτενίσασα εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἶδεν ἄρμα φωτὸς ἐρχόμενον ὑπὸ τεσσάρων ἀετῶν λαμπρῶν ὃ οὐκ ἦν δυνατόν γεννηθῆναι ἀπὸ κοιλίας ἢ εἰπεῖν τὴν δόξαν αὐτῶν ἢ ἰδεῖν τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτῶν, καὶ ἄγγέλους προάγοντας τὸ ἄρμα.			45:2 ხოლო ევა, ვითარცა აღიხილნა თვალნი თვისნი ზეცად და იხილნა ეტლნი ცეცხლისანი და ნათელი აღმავალი ოთხთა ქართა ზედა, ეგრე ბრწყინვალე იყვნეს, ვითარცა ვერარაი ემსგავსების თქუჲმად, ვერ შეძძლებელ იყო განცდად ვერცა მუცლით, ვერცა ზურგიით, და ანგელოზნი წინა უძღოლეს ეტლთა მათ,
33:3 Ὅτε δὲ ἦλθεν ὅπου ἔκειτο ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν Ἀδάμ, ἔστη τὸ ἄρμα καὶ τὰ Σεραφίμ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ ἄρματος.			45:3 და ვითარცა მივიდეს, სადაცა-იგი იყო მამაი, დადგა ეტლი იგი და სერაბინნი დგეს შორის მისსა და შორის ეტლთა.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

33:1 And Eve rose up and put her hand on the face (of Adam), [and the angel said to her, "Lift up your hand from that which is of the earth."] 33:2 And she gazed steadfastly into heaven, and beheld a chariot of light, borne by four bright eagles, (and) it was impossible for any man born of woman to tell the glory of them or behold their face—and angels going before the chariot. 33:3 But when they came to the place where your father Adam was, the chariot halted and the Seraphim were between the father and the chariot.		45:1 Eve arose,	45:1 Eve arose and put her hand on her face and the angel went up again, and he told Eve, "Raise you eyes and abandon earthly concerns." 45:2 As for Eve, when she had raised her eyes towards the heavens, she saw chariots of fire and a light which went up, (borne) by four [[winds]]: they were so resplendent that no word could express it, and it was impossible to sound them out, neither from the front nor from the back. And angels were proceeding before these chariots. 45:3 And when they had arrived (at the place) where the father was, the chariot stopped and the Seraphs stood between him and the chariots.
---	--	------------------------------	--	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
33:4 Ἰδὼν δὲ ἐγὼ θυμιατήρια χρυσᾶ καὶ τρεῖς φιάλας· καὶ ἰδοὺ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι μετὰ λίβανον καὶ θυμιατήρια ἤλθον ἐν σπουδῇ ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον καὶ ἐνεφύσαν αὐτά· καὶ ἡ ἀνμίς τοῦ θυμιάματος ἐκάλυψεν τὰ στερεώματα. 33:5 Καὶ προσέπεσαν οἱ ἄγγελοι τῷ θεῷ βοῶντες καὶ λέγοντες· Ἰαήλ ἄγιε, συγχώρησον, ὅτι εἰκὼν σου ἐστὶν καὶ ποίημα τῶν χειρῶν σου τῶν ἀγίων. 34:1 [καὶ ἀνθις] ἰδὼν ἐγὼ Εὐα δὴ μεγάλα καὶ φοβερὰ μυστήρια ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ· καὶ ἔκλαυσεν ἐκ τοῦ φόβου καὶ ἐβόησεν πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν μου Σὴθ λέγουσα·	46:1 Obtenetratus est sol et luna et stellae per dies VII. et cum esset Seth amplexans corpus patris sui lugens desuper et Eva cum esset respiciens in terram intextas manus super caput eius habens et ca- put super genua imponens et omnes filii eius fletibus amaris simis lacrimassent:		45:4 ლა ვიხილუ მე, ევა, სასაკუშმევლუ სამი ოქროსიანი ლა ფიალები და სამი ანგელოზნი მოვიდეს სწრაფით საკუთხეველსა ზედა. მოვიდეს ნა-კუერცხალი და შთაასხეს საკუთმევლი ანგელოზთა მათ მას ზედა. და ვითარცა მბერვიდეს, აღვიდოდა კუამლი და ლაჰფარნა სამყარონი ცისანი. 45:5 აქებდეს ანგელოზნი იგო და თაყუანის- სცემდეს, ღალღებდეს და იტყუოდეს: "ღმერთო, მიუტევენ აღამს, რამეთუ ხატი შენი და კმნილი ხელთა შენთა არს და ღაბადებული შენი არს". 46:1 ლა ვიხილუნ მე, ევა, ონნი ნათელნი ღღინი შიშით ღაცემულნი წინაშე ღმრთისა, და ვტიროდუ და ვარქუ ძესა ჩემსა სეთის:	40-41.5 И възврата се Къвѣга гдѣ лежить тѣло отца нашего Адама и видѣ кадильницѣ златѣ и .г. свѣтильницѣ горящѣ и .г. аггелы, дрѣжщѣ тѣхъ, кадещѣ тѣло адамово, и воня благосухания възидѣ до небесъ . 40-41.6 И съшъдѣшѣмъ се аггеломъ поклонимѣ се прѣдъ прѣстоломъ, глаголющѣ архаггелъ Иоиль : свѣтъ свѣтымъ, владыко прости тварь свою, яко тварь руку твоюю ѣстъ . 42-44.1а Къвѣга же видѣ велия чюдеса, строжаща се прѣдъ богомъ, и плака се съ страхомъ великимъ и възва сына своего Сидра, и рече ему :

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

33:4 And I beheld golden censers and three bowls, and beheld all the angels with censers and frankincense came in haste to the incense-offering and blew upon it and the smoke of the incense veiled the firmament.

33:5 And the angels fell down to God, crying aloud and saying, "Jael, Holy One, have pardon, for he is Your image, and the work of Your holy hands."

34:1 [And then] I Eve beheld two great and fearful mysteries before the presence of God and I wept for fear, and I cried aloud to my son Seth and said, 46:1 The sun, moon and stars grew dark for seven days. Seth embraced the body of his father and mourned over it. Eve cast her eyes upon the ground with her hands clasped above her head and her head placed on her knees. All her children wept with very bitter tears.

45:4 And I, Eve, saw three gold censers; and (three) [cups] and three angels come quickly upon the altar. These angels took a burning coal and put it in the censer and set the censer upon the (altar). And while they blew, the smoke went up and veiled the firmaments of the heavens.

45:5 The angels were praising (God), they were bowing before him, crying out and saying, "God, forgive Adam for he is your image and the work of your hands: he is your creature."

46:1 And I, Eve, saw two great lights prostrated in fear before [God] and I wept and told my son Seth, 40-41.5 And Eve returned again to where the corpse of our father Adam lay, and she saw a golden incense pot and three burning flares and three angels attending them, and the corpse of Adam anointed and the scent of fragrance ascending to Heaven.

40-41.6 And as the angels assembled, they bowed before the throne and the archangel Joel said, "Holy above holy, O Lord, forgive your creature, for it is the creation of your hands."

42-44.1a Eve saw great marvels, which were being performed before God and cried in great distress and called her son Seth and said to him,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
34:2 Ἀνάστα, Σήθ, ἐκ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ πατρός σου καὶ ἔλθε πρὸς με καὶ ἰδὲ ἃ οὐκ εἶδεν ὀφθαλμὸς ποτε τινὸς καὶ πῶς δέονται ὑπὲρ τοῦ πατρός σου Ἀδάμ. 35:1 Τότε ἀνέσθη Σήθ καὶ ἦλθεν πρὸς τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ λέγει αὐτῇ· Διὰ τί κλαίεις· 35:2 Καὶ λέγει αὐτῇ· Ἀνάβλεψον τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς σου καὶ ἰδὲ τὰ ἐπὶ τὰ στερεώματα ἀνεφγμένα καὶ πῶς κεῖται τὸ σῶμα τοῦ πατρὸς ἐπὶ πρόσωπον, καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτοῦ εὐχόμενοι ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ καὶ λέγοντες· Συγχώρησον αὐτῷ, ὁ πατήρ τῶν ὅλων, ὅτι εἰκὼν σου ἔστιν. 35:3 Ἄρα δέ, τέκνον μου Σήθ τί ἐστὶν μοι; πότε παραδοθήσεται εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τοῦ ὁράτου θεοῦ ἡμῶν; 35:4 Τίνες δέ εἰσιν, υἱέ μου Σήθ, οἱ δύο Αἰθιοπες οἱ παριστάμενοι ἐπὶ τὴν προσευχὴν τοῦ πατρὸς σου;	46:2 Et ecce Michael angelus apparuit stans ad caput Adae et dixit ad Seth: exurge desuper corpus patris tui et veni ad me et vide, quid de eo disponat dominus deus. plasma eius est et misertus est ei.		46:2 აღდგე გუამისაგან მამისა შენისა და მოვედ ჩემდა და იხილე რომელი თუალთა შენთა არა უხილავს აღამისთვის მამისა შენისა“. 46:1 მამენ აღდგა სეით და მივიდა ევაისა, ღუდისა თვისისა, და ჰრქუა:“რად სტირ?” 46:2 აღიხილენ თუალნი შენნი და იხილენ შვიდნი სამყარონი განხუშულნი და იხილენ მსგავსებაი მამისა აღამისი, ვითარ ძეს იგი წინაშე ღმრთისა. და ყოველნი ანგელოზნი ევედრებოან მისთვის და იტყვიან: მიუ- ტევე, ღმერთო, აღამს, რამეთუ ხატო შენი არს და მსგავსი, რამეთუ შენ შეჰქმენ“. 46:3 “ჰოი შვილო ჩემო, სეით, 46:4a ანუშგა ჰინდოთა იმათ მისცემენ სისხლსა კრმისა ჩემისასა, რამეთუ ყვენეს იგინი წინაშე ღმრთისა“.	42-44.1b встани, Сиде, отъ тѣла отца твоего и прииди, да видиши чюдо, же не видѣлъ еси николиже. 42-44.2a встанѣ же Сидъ прииде къ матери своеи, и рече кѣмѹ . 42-44.2b възри снѹ на небо. 42-44.3 и възрѣвъ и видѣ Сидъ всѣ воинство аггелъ, стояще прѣдъ прѣстоломъ господьнимъ и молюще сѣ глаголаху . помилѹи, владыко, тварь свою .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
34:2 "Rise up, Seth, from the body of your father Adam, and come to me, and see a spectacle which no man's eye has yet beheld and how they supplicate on behalf of your father, Adam." 35:1 Then Seth arose and came to his mother and said to her: "Why do you weep?" 35:2 And she said to him: "Look up and see with your eyes the seven heavens opened, and see how the body of your father lies on its face and all the holy angels are praying on his behalf and saying: 'Pardon him, Father of All, for he is Your image.'" 35:3 Pray, my child Seth, what shall this mean? And will he one day be delivered into the hands of our Invisible God?	46:2 Then Michael the angel appeared, standing at Adam's head, and said to Seth: "Arise from the body of your father, and come with me and see what the Lord God has arranged for him. He is his creature and he has taken pity on him.		46:2 "Rise up from beside your father's body, come towards me and see that which your eyes have not seen, concerning Adam your father." 46:1 Then Seth arose and went close to his mother Eve and told her, "Why are you weeping?" 46:2 Raise your eyes and see the seven firmaments open and see the likeness of father Adam, as he lies before God and all the angels are beseeching him and saying, 'God, forgive Adam, for he is your image and your likeness, because it is you who have created him.'" 46:3 "What is this, then, my son Seth?	42-44.1b "Arise, Seth, from the corpse of your father and come to see a marvelous thing, such as you have never seen before." 42-44.2a Seth arose and came to his mother and she said to him, 42-44.2b "Look, my son, toward heaven." 42-44.3 And looking up Seth saw the whole angelic host standing before the throne of the Lord, saying in prayer, "Pity your creation O Master."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
36:1 Λέγει δὲ Σὴθ τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ· ὅτι εἰσιν ὁ ἥλιος καὶ ἡ σελήνη, καὶ αὐτοὶ προσπίπτοντες καὶ εὐχόμενοι ὑπὲρ τοῦ πατρὸς μου Ἀδὰμ. 36:2 Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ Εὐὰ· Καὶ ποῦ ἐστὶν τὸ φῶς αὐτῶν καὶ διὰ τί γεγόνασι μελανοειδεῖς; 36:3 Καὶ λέγει αὐτῇ Σὴθ· Οὐκ ἀπέστη τὸ φῶς αὐτῶν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνανται φαίνειν ἐνώπιον τοῦ φωτὸς τῶν ὅλων, τοῦ πατρὸς τῶν φωτῶν, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἐκρύβη τὸ φῶς ἀπ' αὐτῶν.	see 46.1		46:4b მიუგო ევას სეით და ჰრქუა: "არა ეგრე, დედაო, არა იცან ესე, რომელთა ინლო-ებაი სოქუ სისხლისფერთაი მათ". 46:4c მიუგო ევა და ჰრქუა: "არა ვიცნო, შვილო ჩემო". 46:1 მიუგო სეით და ჰრქუა: "ესე არიან მზე და მთოვარე და იგიინი დავრდომილ არიან და ევერდებიან აღამისთვის, მაძისა ჩემისა". 46:2 "სადა არს ნათელი იგი მზისაი, რამეთუ არღა რაი არს მისი თანა. ანუ რადმე დაშავებულ არს ეგრე?" 46:3 მიუგო სეით და ჰრქუა ევას: "რამეთუ განქარდა ნათელი მისი წინაშე ღმრთისა ყოველთაისა და შავა ნათელი მისი შიშისაგან ღმრთისა".	42-44.4 пакы Сидъ рече къ матери своѣи · възъри, яко слъньце и луна покланя юта се прѣстолю и молеще се за отца нашего Адама . 42-44.5 и рече Евѣга · где юсть свѣтъ тѣмь; 42-44.6 рече Сидъ матери своѣи · югда вѣста архаггелъ Михайль молити се, и оумлькоше въсе силы аггелъскыѣ прѣдъ госп одомъ,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

35:4 But who are, my son Seth, the two Ethiopians who stand by at the prayers for your father?"

36:1 And Seth said to his mother, "They are the sun and moon and themselves fall down and pray on behalf of my father Adam."

36:2 Eve said to him: "And where is their light and why have they taken on such a black appearance?"

36:3 And Seth answered her, "The light has not left them, but they cannot shine before the Light of all things, the Father of Light; and on this account their light has been hidden."

see 46.1

46:4a Do they deliver [the blood of my spouse] to these Indians, for they were before God?"
46:4b Seth replied to Eve and told her, "No, mother, [did you not recognize those whom you called Indians in these colors of blood]?"
46:4c Eve replied to him and told him, "I do not know them, my son."

46:1 Seth replied to her and told her, "These are the sun and the moon: they are prostrated and they are beseeching for Adam, my father."
46:2 Where is the light of the sun, for it is no more with it, or why is it darkened thus?"

46:3 Seth replied to her and told Eve, "Because its light has been eclipsed before the God of all and its light had become darkened by fear of God."

42-44.4 Again Seth spoke to his mother, "Look there, how the sun and moon bow down to the throne, praying for our father Adam."
42-44.5 And Eve said, "Where is their light?"

42-44.6 Seth said to his mother, "When the archangel Michael himself arose in order to pray, all the power of the angels before throne of the Lord ceased."

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

37:1 Λέγοντος δὲ τοῦ Σηθ ταῦτα πρὸς τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ Εὐάν, ἰδοὺ ἐσάπλισεν ὁ ἄγγελος· καὶ ἀνέστησαν πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι οἱ ἐπ' ὄψεσιν κείμενοι καὶ ἐβόησαν φωνὴν φοβεράν λέγοντες·	47:1 Et omnes angeli canentes tubis dixerunt:		47:1 ამას რაი ეტყულა სეით ევას, მეყსეულად ღიღამან ანგელოზმან ღაპბერა საყვირსა და აღეპართნეს ანგელოზნი, რომელნი ღაცემულ იყვნეს პირსა ზედა თვისსა. ევეღრებოდეს აღამისათვის, ხმა-ყვეს ხმითა ღიღითა და თქუეს: 47:2 კუთხოველ არს ღმერთი ყოვლითა კუთხოვეითა. შვიწყალე პირველი ღაბადებული". 47:3 ღაოდეს თქუეს ანგელოზთა ხმაი ესე, მოთვლინა მისა ერთი სერაბინთაგანი მიიტსფრთე ღა მიიტაცა აღამი ტბასა მას კეროვანისასა	42-44.7a и паки аггели великимъ гласомъ възъваше, глуще . 42-44.7b благословена слава господня, помилованыи тварь своимъ Адама. 45-46.1 Тогда прииде множество аггелъ, херувими и серафими, и възехе тѣло Адамово и поставише ю въ Герусимъ блато и прославивъше юго тѣмъ омываху .г.-ши .
37:2 Εὐλογημένη ἡ δόξα κυρίου ἀπὸ ποιημάτων αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἠλέησεν τὸ πλάσμα τῶν χειρῶν αὐτοῦ Ἀδάμ.	benedictus es, domine, quia misertus es plasmæ tuæ.
37:3 Ὅτε δὲ εἶπον τὰς φωνὰς ταύτας οἱ ἄγγελοι, ἰδοὺ ἦλθεν ἐν τῶν Σεραφὶμ ἐξαπτερύγων· καὶ ἦρπασε τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ ἀπήγαγεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν Ἀχερουσίαν λίμνην καὶ ἀπέλουσεν αὐτὸν τρίτον καὶ ἦγαγεν αὐτὸν ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

37:1 Now while Seth was saying this to his mother, behold, an angel blew the trumpet, and all the angels who were lying on their faces rose up, and they cried aloud in an fearsome voice and said: 37:2 "Blessed (be) the glory of the Lord from the works of His making, for He has pitied Adam, the creature of His hands." 37:3 But when the angels had said these words, behold, there came one of the Seraphim with six wings and snatched up Adam and carried him off to the Acherusian lake, and washed him thrice, and led him before God.	47:1 Then all the angels, playing trumpets, said: "Blessed are you, Lord, for you have taken pity on your creature."		47:1 As Seth was telling that to Eve, at once a great angel blew the trumpet and all the angels who were prostrated on their faces stood up again. They prayed for Adam and cried out in a loud voice, and said, 47:2 "Blessed [is God, by all blessing. You] pardoned the protoplast." 47:3 And when the angels had said these words, one of the six-winged Seraphim was sent towards him (Adam). He took Adam to the lake of (A)cheron,	42-44.7a And again the angels cried out in a loud voice saying, 42-44.7b "Blessed is the glory of the Lord, who has reprieved his creature Adam." 45-46.1 Then came a multitude of angels, Cherubim and Seraphim, and they took the corpse of Adam and laid him in the Sea of Gerusia and honoring him, they washed him three times.
--	--	--	--	---

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
37:4 Ἐποίησεν δὲ τρεις ὥρας κειμενος. Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐξέτεινεν τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ ὁ πατὴρ τῶν ὄλων καθήμενος ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ καὶ ἦρεν τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν τῷ ἀρχαγγέλῳ Μιχαὴλ λέγων·	47:2 Tunc vidit Seth manum do- mini extensam tenentem Adam; et tradidit Michaheli dicens:		47:4 ლა განბანა სამჯერ, მოიყვანა იგი წინაშე ღმრთისა და იღვა იგი პირსა ზედა თვისსა ვიდრე სამ ქამ ოღენ. და შემღვთმად მისსა მიყთ ხელი თვისი ღმერთმან საყდრით თვისით და აღადგინა ადამი და მისცა მი- ქაელს და ჰრქუა მას:	45-46.2a въ .Г.-тии же часъ прострѣ господь рѣкъ своѣ, сѣдѣши на прѣстолѣ, и възѣтъ Адама, и прѣдѣстъ єго архаггелю Михаилу, и рече єму госп одъ .
37:5 Ἄρον αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν παράδεισον ἕως τρίτου οὐρανοῦ καὶ ἄφες αὐτὸν ἐκεῖ ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης τῆς μεγάλης τῆς οἰκονομίας ἧς ποιήσω εἰς τὸν κόσμον.	47:3 sit in custodia tua usque in diem dispensationis in suppliciis ad annos novissimos, quando convertam luctum eius in gaudium. Tunc sedebit in throno eius, qui eum supplantavit.		47:5 "მოიყვანე ეგე მესამესა ცასა სამოთხეს და ლატუქვე წინაშე საკურთხეველსა ვიდრე ღლეღმდე განგებისა, რომელი მეგულვების ყოველ- თა თანა ხორციელთა საყუარელისა მისა ჩემისა თანა .	42-44.2b вънеси тѣло єго въ рай, доухъ же єго да прѣбываетъ въ третіємъ небеси . тѣло же єго тѣ да прѣбываетъ до въскрьсєнія моєго .
37:6 Τότε ὁ Μιχαὴλ ἦρεν τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ ἀφῆκεν αὐτὸν ὅπου εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ θεός· καὶ πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι ἔμνουν ἔμνον ἀγγελικὸν θαυμάζοντες ἐπὶ τῇ συγχωρήσει τοῦ Ἀδὰμ.			47:6 მაშინ მიქაელ წარიყვანა ადამი ადგილსა მას, რომელსა უბრძანა ღმერთმან, და ყოველნი ანგელოზნი ფსალმუნებდეს ფსალმუნსა ანგელოზთასა. აქებდეს საკვირველებასა ადამისსა და აღთქუმასა მას მერ- მისასა.	45-46.3 тогда архаггелъ поѣмъ Адама и принесе єго идеже рече єму господь .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
37:4 And he stayed there three hours, lying down, and thereafter the Father of all, sitting on his holy throne stretched out his hand, and took Adam and handed him over to the archangel Michael saying:	47:2 Then Seth saw the hand of the Lord outstretched, holding Adam. He handed him over to Michael, saying:		47:4 and he dipped him in it three times. Then he led him back before God and (Adam) remained (prostrate) on his face for three hours. And after that, God stretched out his hand from his throne, raised Adam up and gave him to Michael, and he told him, 47:5 "Take him to the third heaven, to the Garden, and leave him before the altar until the day of the 'oikonomia' which I contemplate concerning all the fleshly (beings) with my well-beloved Son." 47:6 Then Michael took Adam to the place which God had ordered and all the angels were chanting angelic psalms. They were praising this wonder: the forgiveness of Adam and the promise of a future (life).	45-46.2a In the third hour, however, the Lord, seated on the throne, stretched forth his hand and took Adam and gave him to the archangel Michael and said to him,
37:5 "Lift him up into the Garden unto the third Heaven, and leave him there until that fearful day of my reckoning, which I will make in the world."	47:3 "Let him be in your care until the day of retribution, in supplication until the last years when I shall change his mourning into joy. Then he will sit on the throne of him who beguiled him."			42-44.2b "Carry his corpse into Paradise; his spirit shall tarry in the third Heaven, but his corpse shall remain here until my resurrection."
37:6 Then Michael took Adam and left him where God told him. And all the angels sang an angelic hymn being amazed at the pardoning of Adam.				45-46.3 Then the archangel took Adam and carried him there, to the place God had commanded him.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

38:1 Μετά δὲ
τὴν γεγενημένην χαρὰν τοῦ Ἀδάμ ἐβόησεν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ὁ ἀρχάγγελος Μιχαήλ
διὰ τὸν Ἀδάμ.
38:2 Καὶ ἐλάλησεν ὁ πατήρ πρὸς αὐτόν ἵνα συναχθῶσιν πάντες οἱ ἄγγελοι ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ, ἕκαστος κατὰ τὴν τάξιν αὐτοῦ, τινὲς μὲν ἔχοντες θυμιατήρια ἐν χερσὶν αὐτῶν, ἄλλοι δὲ κιθάρας καὶ φιάλας καὶ σάλπιγγας.

38:3 Καὶ ἰδοὺ
κύριος στρατιῶν ἐπέβη καὶ τέσσαρες ἄνεμοι εἶλκον αὐτόν, καὶ τὰ χερουβὶμ ἐπέχοντα τοῖς ἀνέμοις καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ προάγοντες αὐτόν. Καὶ ἐλθόντες ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ὅπου ἦν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἀδάμ.

47:2 *և ժողովեցան հրեշտակք ամենայն առաջի նորա ըստ իրաքանչիւր կարգի. ոմանք ունէին բուրմանս ի ծնոս իրեանց.
ոմանք ունէին կողոս, և ոմանք ունէին սարհնութիւնս:*

47:3 *և ահա
Տէր զաւրութեանց
ի կառս քերորէից.
և չորք հորմք ձգէին զնս, և քերորէքս սպասէին հողմոցն
այն. և հրեշտակքն գնացին առաջի նորա: Եկն Աստուած յիրկիր ի տեղի ուր կայր մարմինն Ադամայ.
և ամենայն
հրեշտակք սարհնութեամբ առաջի նորա:*

47:1
შემდგომად ადისსა ღაღადყო მიქაელ ღმრთისა შიშარს

47:2 ღა
ღმერთმან ბრძანა ღაცემად საყვირისა და შეკრებაი ყოველთა ანგელოზთაი წინაშე ღმრთისა თითოეულად წესთა მათ, რომელთა აქუნდა სასაყუმევლე და რომელთამე აქუნდა საგალობლები და რომელნი-მე საყვირსა სცემდეს.

47:3 ღა აჰა უფალი საბაოთისა აჰხდა ქერობინთა ქართა ზედა და ანგელოზნი შვიდით ციოთ წინა უძღოლეს მას, და მოვიდეს ქუეყანად, საღაცა ისხნეს
ხორცნი აღამისი.
და ყოველნი ანგელოზნი
უგალობდეს.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

38:1 But after this joyous event of Adam, the archangel Michael cried to the Father concerning Adam. 38:2 And the Father commanded him that all the angels should assemble before God, each in his order, some having censers in their hands, and others lyres, bowls and trumpets. 38:3 And behold, the Lord of Hosts entered and four winds drew Him and Cherubim mounted on the winds and the angels from heaven escorting Him and they came on the earth, where was the body of Adam.		47:2 and all the angels assembled before her, each according to his rank. Some of them bore censers in their hands, others bore trumpets and others bore blessings. 47:3 Behold, the Lord of hosts upon a Cherub chariot and four wind[s] were drawing him, and Cherubim were serving those winds and the angels were proceeding before him: God came to the earth, to the place where Adam's body lay, and all of the angels (were) before him with praises.	47:1 After which Michael cried out towards God, 47:2 and God ordered that the trumpet be sounded and that all the angels assemble before God, each one in his rank: those who held a censer; those who held a psaltery; and those who sounded the trumpet. 47:3 And behold, the Lord of Sabaoth rose upon the winds of the Cherubim, and from the seven heavens angels were proceeding before him, and they came to the earth to the place where the fleshly (remains) of Adam had been put, and all the angels were sing-ing his (praises).
--	--	---	---	--

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
38:4 Καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς τὸν παράδεισον· καὶ ἐκινήθησαν πάντα τὰ φυτὰ τοῦ παραδείσου, ὡς πάντα τὰ ἄνθρωπος γεγεννημένους ἐκ τοῦ Ἀδάμ νυστάζει ἀπὸ τῆς εὐωδίας, χωρὶς τοῦ Σῆθ μόνου, ὅτι ἐγένετο καθορῶν τοῦ θεοῦ. 39:1 [καὶ ἦλθεν ὁ θεός] πρὸς τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἀδάμ καὶ ἐλυπήθη σφόδρα ἐπ' αὐτόν· καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ θεός· Ἀδάμ, τί τοῦτο ἐποίησας; Εἰ ἐφύλαξας τὴν ἐντολήν μου, οὐκ ἂν ἐχαίροντο οἱ καταγαγόντες σε εἰς τὸν τόπον τοῦτον.		47:4 ხელს შათოაძ ხ ჟრახის ხ [ჯარძეჲას] ამხნაჲს თონსჲს ხე ამხნაჲს ქარო ჟი ათ სჲამ ღჲს ჟონ ღათ გნთაჲ, ჟაჲც მქაჲს სღჲ ათაჲრს სარჲონ ღჲ რათ თხს[ჯ]ოჲჲს შათოთჲ; 47:1 ხელს შათოაძ ათ ქარძჲს სჲამაჲ ოჲ ქაჲრ მხთაჲ, თრთმეჲთ შათოაძ ჟოჲ ხ ათ ჲ ღაჲს ჟაჲგროჲჲს. ო სჲამ. ჟჲ^ს არარჲრ ჟაჲრ. ხჲღ ყა^სნაჲ ღჲ რთ ყა^სათოჲრანს ჲმ, ოჲ ორახჲ ქს^სჲს ჲ ქს^სრჲჲ რთ, ოჲ ქოოჲრს ჟჲჲჲ ჟაჲრ თხ^სჲჲ.	47:4 ღა მოწია პირველად სამოთხესა თვისსა, ღა შვიძრნეს ყუავილნი სამოთხისანი სულნელეთა თვისთა, სულნელეზისაგა ნ დიდებულისა ღმრთისა დასულბეს ყოველნი ნაშობნი აღამისნი, გარნა სეით ხოლო არა, რამეთუ ნაშობი იყო სიმდიდრისა ღმრთისაი. 47:1 ღა ოღეს მოვიდა უფალი დავრდომილსა მას ზელა გუამსა აღამისსა, შეჴვენა მას ზელა უფალი და ჰრეჴა ხმოთა მჴუხარებისაით ა: უჴუეთჲმცა დაგემარნეს მცნებანი ჯემნი, არამცა დავრდომილ იყავ მაგას ადგილსა, არამცა იხილა მტერმან შენმან შენი, რომელ გამოგაგდო შენ მაგას ადგილსა,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

38:4 And they came to the Garden and all the leaves of the Garden were stirred so that all men begotten of Adam slept from the fragrance save Seth alone, because he was born according to the appointment of God.

39:1 [And God came] to the body of Adam and grieved greatly over him and God said to him: "Adam, what is this you have done? Had you kept my commandment, those who born you down to this place would not have rejoiced.

47:4 God came to the Garden and all the plants [moved], and all the people who were with Adam fell asleep. Only Seth alone, the virtuous one, was awake, according to God's direction.

47:1 God came to Adam's body, where he was lying dead. God mourned greatly and said in a sweet voice, "Oh, Adam. Why did you do that? If you had observed my commandment, those who brought you down to this place would not have rejoiced over you.

47:4 And (God) first reached his Garden, and the flowers of the Garden, with their sweet odors, were moved at the sweet odor of the glorious God. All the children of Adam grew numb, except only for Seth, for he was son of the greatness of God. 47:1 And when the Lord had come to the body of Adam which had fallen (on the earth), the Lord was sorrowful for him and told him in a sad voice, "If you had kept my commandments, you would not have fallen in that place and your enemy would not have been able to see that he had caused you to be expelled in that place.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
39:2 Πλην λέγω σοι ὅτι τὴν χαρὰν αὐτῶν ἐπιστρέψω εἰς λύπην, τὴν δὲ λύπην σου ἐπιστρέψω εἰς χαρὰν· καὶ ἐπιστρέψω σε εἰς τὴν ἀρχὴν σου καὶ καθίσω σε εἰς τὸν θρόνον τοῦ ἀπατήσαντός σε. 39:3 Ἐκεῖνος δὲ [τὸν καθίσαντα ἐπ' αὐτῷ πρὶν γένεσθαι αὐτὸν ἐν ὑπερηφανίᾳ] εἰσβληθήσεται εἰς τὸν τόπον τοῦτον, ἵνα ἴδῃ σε καθήμενον ἐπ' αὐτὸν· τότε κατακριθήσεται αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ ἀκούσαντες αὐτοῦ, καὶ λυπηθήσεται ὁρῶν σε καθήμενον ἐπὶ τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ. 40:1 Μετὰ ταῦτα εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς τῷ ἀρχαγγέλῳ Μιχαήλ· Ἄπελθε εἰς τὸν παράδεισον ἐν τῷ τρίτῳ οὐρανῷ καὶ ἔνεγκε τρεῖς σινδόνας βυσσίνους καὶ σηρικὰς.	48:1 Et dixit iterum dominus ad Michahel et Urihel angelos: afferte mihi tres sindones bissinas	47:2 բայց զուրախութիւն նոցա դարձուցից ի տրտմութիւն. եւ զտրտմութիւն քո դարձուցից յուրախութիւն. արարից զքեզ սկիզբն ուրախութեան եւ նստեցուցից զքեզ յաթոռ նորա, որ խաբեացն զքեզ 47:3 եւ արկից զնոսա ի տեղի խաարի եւ մահու: 48:1 Յետ այսորիկ խաաեցաւ Աստուած զՄիքայել եւ ասէ. Երթ դու ի դուրստն (երրորդ) երկնից եւ բեր ինձ կտան երկու.	47:2 არამედ სიხარული მისი ზღუდილად გარდავაქციო და მოგა- ქციო მას მთავრობასა და ღაგსუა შენ საყდართა ზედა მტევისა შენისათა, რომელ იგი ჯდა მას ზედა, რომლისა თანა იბოვა ამპარტავანებაი იგი. 47:3 გაშვარდეს მაგას აღგილსა და შენ გიხილოს მაგას აღგილსა მკლდმარე საყდართა ზედა. 48:1 და ამისა შემდგომად უბრძანა ღმერთმან მიქაელს

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

39:2 Yet, I tell you that I will turn their joy to grief and your grief will I turn to joy, and I will return you to your rule, and seat you on the throne of your deceiver.

39:3 But that one [the one who sat on it prior to his becoming arrogant] shall be cast into this place that he may see you seated upon it. Then he himself shall be condemned along with those who obeyed him and he shall grieve when he see you sitting upon his throne.

40:1 Then God said to the archangel Michael: "Go away to Paradise in the third heaven, and carry away three fine linen clothes."

48:1a Again the Lord said to the angels Michael and Uriel: "Bring me 3 linen shrouds

47:2 But I will turn their rejoicing into sorrow, and I will turn your sorrow into rejoicing. I shall make you the beginning of rejoicing and I shall set you on the throne of him who deceived you, 47:3 and I shall cast them into a place of darkness and death."

48:1 After this, God spoke to Michael and said, "Go to the Garden of the [third] heaven and bring [me] three linen cloths".

47:2 But I will change his joy into sorrow and I will lead you back towards this realm and I will set you upon your enemy's throne, where he was seated, close (by the place) where his rebellion was discovered. 47:3 He will fall in the place (where) you (are) and he will see you in that (other) place sitting upon a throne."

48(40):1 And after that, God gave an order to Michael who took (Adam) back to the Garden, which is in the third heaven.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:2 Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς τῷ Μιχαὴλ καὶ τῷ Γαβριήλ καὶ τῷ Οὐριήλ· Στρώσατε σινδόνας καὶ σκεπάσατε τὸ σῶμα τοῦ 'Αδάμ· καὶ ἐνεγκόντες ἔλαιον ἐκ τοῦ ἐλαίου τῆς εὐωδίας ἐκχέετε ἐπ' αὐτόν. Καὶ ἐκήδευσαν αὐτόν οἱ τρεῖς μεγάλοι ἄγγελοι.	48:1b et expandite super Adam. et alias sindones super Abel filium eius, et sepelite Adam et filium eius.	48:2 իրիւ հրիւ, ասէ Աստուած ց' ի քալելի եւ ց' Ուլէլ եւ ց' Գաբրիէլ· տարածեցէք զկտաւադ եւ ծածկեցէք գմարմինս Ադամայ, եւ բերէք իւղս անուշս. բերին եւ արկին զնովաւ. եւ «պատեցին» զնա նովին Հանդերձովն:	48:2 ლა მიავლნა სამთხელს, რომელ არს მესამესა ცასა. მოიხუნეს სამნი არმენაკნი სინდესანი წარგრაგნილნი და ჰრქუა ღმერთმან მიქაელს და გაბრიელს: „განმ არტენით არმენაკნი ეგე და შეგრაგნეთ გულამი აღამისა და მოიღეთ საცხებელი ზეთის ხილისაგან და დაასხით მაგას ზედა. და შე- ძოსეს იგი სამთა ანგელოზთა. და ოღეს შემოსეს გულამი იგი აღამისი, 48:3 եւ Իրիւ կատարեցին զամենայն, Հրամայեաց Աստուած բերել զԱբելի մարմինս. բերին եւ լալլ կտաւա եւ Հանդերձեցին զնա.	48:3 ლა ჰრქუა ღმერთმან: „მოიღ ეთ გულამი იგი აბელისაგა და მოი- ხუნეთ სხუანიცა არმენაკნი და შემოსეთ იგიცა, 45-46.4 Паки господь рече къ архангелу · въниди въ раи и възьми плащаницу порфиру и покрови тело Адамово, и прими маслинно масло и прѣлви его . 45-46.5 также и тѣло Авелово сътвори при немъ .
40:3 Ὅτε δὲ ἐτέλεσαν κηδεύοντες τὸν 'Αδάμ, εἶπεν ὁ θεὸς ἐνεχθῆναι καὶ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ 'Αβελ· καὶ ἐνεγκόντες ἄλλας σινδόνας ἐκήδευσαν αὐτόν.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:2 And God said to Michael and to Gabriel and Uriel: "Spread out the clothes and cover the body of Adam." And they bore the sweet olive oil and poured it upon him. And the three great angels prepared him for burial. 40:3 When they finished preparing Adam, God said they should bear the body of Abel also. And they brought more linen and prepared him for burial.	48:1b and stretch them over Adam. Bring other shrouds and stretch them over Abel, his son. Then bury Adam and his son."	48:2 When he had brought them, God said to Michael and to Ozel and to Gabriel, 'Bring these linen cloths and cover Adam's body, and bring sweet oil.' They brought them and set them around him and wound him in that garment. 48:3 When they had finished everything, God ordered them to bring Abel's body. They brought still other linen cloths and dressed him.	48(40):2 They seized three folded shrouds of [[cloth]] and God told Michael and Gabriel, "Unfold these shrouds and envelop Adam's body and take the ointment from the olive tree and pour it upon him." And three angels dressed him (in it) and when they had dressed Adam's body (in it), 48(40):3 God told them, "Take Abel's body as well, seize other shrouds and dress him in them also	45-46.4 Once again the Lord spoke to the archangel, "Go into Paradise and take the purple cloth and cover the corpse of Adam and take the olive oil and pour it over him." 45-46.5 The same was done to Abel's body.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:4 Ἐπειδὴ ἀκήδευτος ἦν ἄφ' ἧς ἡμέρας ἐφόνευσεν αὐτὸν Κάιν ὁ ἀδελφός αὐτοῦ. Καὶ πολλὰ ἐθέλησε κρῦψαι αὐτὸν ὁ Κάιν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐδυσήθη, ὅτι ἀνεπήδα τὸ σῶμα αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ἐξήρχετο φωνὴ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς λέγουσα· 40:5a Οὐ κρυβήσεται εἰς τὴν γῆν ἕτερον πλάσμα ἕως οὗ ἀφίενται μοι τὸ πρῶτον πλάσμα τὸ ἀρθὲν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, τὸν χοῦν ἐξ ἧς ἐλήφθη. 40:5b Ἐλαβον δὲ οἱ ἄγγελοι ἐν τῷ καιρῷ ἐκεῖνῳ καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὴν πέτραν ἕως οὗ ἐτάφη Ἀδάμ ὁ πατήρ αὐτοῦ.	48:2 Et processerunt omnes virtutes angelorum ante Adam. et sanctificata est dormitatio mortuorum. 48:3 Sepelierunt Adam et Abel Michahel et Urihel angeli in partibus paradisi videntibus Seth et matre eius et alio nemine. et dixerunt Michahel et Urihel: sicut vidistis, similiter sepelite mortuos vestros. [III+]legenda de ligno crucis]III	48:4 քանզի կայր յարէ յայնման[է] նա յորում պպան զնա Կային անարէնն, եւ կամեցաւ ծածկել զնա եւ ոչ կարաց. քանզի վարկաղ էին մարմինք նորա ի հողոյ անտի. ձայն եղև երկնից եւ ասէ. 48:5a Ոչ է արէն ծածկել զդա [յ] երկրի. եթէ ոչ [նախ] ստարին ստեղծուածն դառնայ [յ] երկիր ոստի եկն: 48:5b Առին զնա պկուհետի ի նմին քարածերպէ ուր էրն, մինչեւ մեռաւ Ադամ. ապա յետ այտորիկ բերին զնա եւ արարին նմա զոր պրինակ արարին Ադամայ հար նորա.	48:4 რამეთუ შეუძღოსილი იდგა მიერ ღლითგან, ვინაიცა მოკლა იგი კაენმაჲს უკეთუჲრმან და უნდა დაფლავად ქუეყანასა და ვერ უძლო, რამეთუ აღმოვარდის ქუეყანით გუამი იგი მისი. და ხმაი ესმა ზეცით. და ჰრქუა მას: 48:5a ⁷ვერ დაეფლას ვგე ქუეყანასა, არა თუ პირველად ქმნილი მიეპცეს ქუეყანად. რომლისაგან შეეკმნეს. 48:5b მას უამსა მოიღო იგი რომელსამე კლდესა ზედა და იდგა იგი მუნ, ვიდრეჲმდის მოკულა აღადმი. მაშინ მოიღეს და შეძოსეს იგი ვითარცა მამაი თვისი.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:4 For he was unburied since the day when Cain his brother slew him; for Cain took great pains to conceal (him) but could not, for the body sprang up from the earth and a voice went out of the earth saying:	48:2 And all the virtues of the angels processed before Adam, and thus was the dormition of the dead sanctified.	48:4 For he had remained [from] that day upon which Cain the lawless one had killed him and had wished to hide him, and had been unable. For, as soon as his body was in the dust, a heavenly voice came and said,	48(40):4 for he had remained lying naked since the day when wicked Cain killed him. And he wished to bury him in the earth and he was unable (to do so), because his body came back out of the earth. For a voice made itself heard from heaven and said to him,
40:5a "No other body can be covered until --with respect to the first creature who was taken from me -- the earth from which he was taken is returned to me."		48:5a "It is not permitted to hide him [in] the earth [before] the first creature has returned to the earth from which he came."	48(40):5a "He will not be able to be buried in the earth before he who was created first has returned to the earth from which he was created."
40:5b And the angels took at that moment and put him upon a rock until Adam, his father, was buried.	48:3 The angels Michael and Uriel buried Adam and Abel in the regions of paradise which Seth and his mother saw, but no one else. Michael and Uriel: "Just as you see us doing, likewise bury your dead."	48:5b Thenceforth, they took him into that same cave where he was until Adam died. Then, after this, they brought him and treated him just as they had treated his father Adam.	48[40]:5b Then he took it to a rock and it remained spread out there until the death of Adam. Thus (the angels) took him and dressed him like his father.
	[III+Legend of the Wood of the Cross]III

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:6 Καὶ προσέταξεν ὁ θεὸς μετὰ τὸ κηδεῦσθαι καὶ τὸν Ἄβελ ἄραι αὐτοὺς εἰς τὰ μέρη τοῦ παρὰδείσου, εἰς τὸν τόπον ὅπου ἦρεν χοῦν ὁ θεός· καὶ ἐπλασεν τὸν Ἀδὰμ. Καὶ ἐποίησεν ὀρυγῆναι εἰς δύο τὸν τόπον. 40:7 Καὶ ἀπέστειλεν ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ τὸν ἄγγελον εἰς τὸν παρὰδεισον· καὶ ἦγαγον εὐωδίας πολλὰς καὶ ἔθεντο αὐτάς ἐν τῇ γῇ. Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἔλαβον τὰ δύο σώματα καὶ ἔθωσαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν τόπον εἰς ὃν ὥρυξαν καὶ φκοδόμησαν αὐτοί. 41:1 ἐκάλεσεν δὲ ὁ θεὸς τὸν Ἀδὰμ καὶ εἶπεν· Ἀδὰμ· Ἀδὰμ. ἀπεκρίθη τὸ σῶμα ἐκ τῆς γῆς καὶ εἶπεν· ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ, κύριε. 41:2 Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ θεὸς ὅτι εἰπόν σοι ὅτι γῆ εἰ καὶ εἰς γῆν ἀπελεύσει.		48:6 և լինա Նանդերձելոյն հրամայաց Աստուած անուղ զերկուսեանն և բերել ի կողմն դրախտին ի տեղին ուր զհող ատալ էր և ստեղծեալ գերամ: նստ փորել 48:7 ի տեղոյն յայնիկ. և առաքաց Աստուած բերել զխոնկա անուղ և խոնկա [[հերիկա]]. և նստ խաղ դին ի վերայ հողոյն և ծածկել զխոնկան. ապա լինա այնտրիկ աղին զմարմինն երկուցունց և եղին ի տեղոյն յորում ստեղծն. փոխեցին և արարին շիրիմն ի վերայ նորա: 48:1 Կոչեաց Աստուած զմարմինն Ադամայ ի հողոյ անտի, և ասէ. Ադամ, Ադամ: Ասէ մարմինն Ադամայ զհողն. Պատասխանի տուր և ասա թէ ահաասիկ Տէր: 48:2 և ասէ ցնա Տէր. Ահա, որպէս ասացի քեզ թէ Ադամ հող ես և ի հող դառնաս,	48:6 უბრძანა ღმერთმან აღედაი ორთავე სამოთხით კერძო აღმო- სავალით, აღვიღსა მას, რომელსაცა აღიღო მიწაი ღმერთმან და შექმნა აღამი. და უბრძანა ღმერთმან აღმოთხრად მიქაელს. 48:7 და მიაველინა ღმერთმან სამოთხედ შვიდნი ანეგლოზნი და მოიღეს ძრავალი სუღნელები სამოთხით და დაუყყეს მათ. და მოიხუწეს გუამნი ირთანოვე მათ. და შთასხნეს საფლავსა და დაფარეს. 48:1 და მიუქცა ღმერთი და უწოლა ადამს. მიუგო გუამმან აღამისმან მიწით ვამო და თქუა: "აჰა ასეა უფალო". 48:2 და პრეტა მას უფალობა: "აჰა ესეადა გრქუა შენ, ვითარმედ მიწა ხარ და მიწად მიხვიდე შენ,	47.1 И призыва госп одь Адама и рече : Адаме, Адаме, где еси; 47.2 тѣло же отвѣща : се, азъ господи .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
40:6 And God commanded that after they had prepared the body of Abel for burial that they bear Abel up also to the area of the Garden, to the spot where God had taken the earth and fashioned Adam. And God made them dig the spot for two. 40:7 And God sent seven angels to the Garden and they brought many fragrant spices and placed them in the earth, and afterward they took the two bodies and placed them in the spot which they had dug and built (a sepulcher). 41:1 And God called and said, "Adam, Adam. "And the body answered from the earth and said: "Here am I, Lord." 41:2 And God said to him: "I told you (that) earth you are and to earth shall you return.		48:6 After the dressing, God commanded that both of them be taken [to the region of the Garden] and be brought to the place from which the dust had been taken and Adam created. God caused them to dig 48:7 in that place and sent them to bring sweet incenses and iris incense and he caused them to put oils upon the dust and to cover the spices. Then after this, they took the bodies of both of them and put them in the place in which he had fashioned them. They [dug] and made a sepulchre over them. 48:1 God called to Adam's body through the dust and said, "Adam, Adam." Adam's body said to the dust, "Answer and say, 'Here (I am), Lord.'" 48:2 The Lord said to him, "Behold, just as I said to you, 'Adam, you are dust and you return to dust;'	48(40):6 God ordered that both of them should be taken up to the Garden, on the eastern part, in the place from which God had taken some soil and created Adam. And God ordered Michael to dig. 48(40):7 And God sent seven angels to the Garden: they gathered many kinds of incense from the Garden and they brought it to them. Then they took both bodies, put them into the grave and covered them (with earth). 48:1 Then God turned and called Adam. Adam's body answered him from the soil and said, "Here I am, [[Lord]]. 48:2 And the Lord told him, "Behold, as I told you, you are soil and you have returned to the soil,	47.1 And the Lord called Adam to himself and said, "Adam, Adam, where are you?" 47.2 And his body answered, "I am here, O Lord."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
41:3 Πάλιν τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἐπαγγέλλομαί σοι· ἀναστήσῃ σε ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει μετὰ παντὸς γένους ἀνθρώπων τοῦ ἐκ τοῦ σπέρματός σου. 42:1 Μετὰ δὲ τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα ἐποίησεν ὁ θεὸς σφραγίδα τρίγωνον καὶ ἐσφράγισεν τὸ μνημεῖον ἵνα μηδεὶς τι ποιήσῃ αὐτῷ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις, ἕως οὗ ἀποστραφῇ ἡ πλευρὰ αὐτοῦ πρὸς αὐτόν. 42:2 Τότε ὁ κύριος καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι ἐπορεύθησαν εἰς τὸν τόπον αὐτῶν.		48:3 բայց յարութիւն զոր [յառտաջա] յարութից զքեզ ի նմին: 48:1 եւ յետ խաւերոյն դալս Աստուծոյ, առ կնիք երեքկնի եւ կնքնաց զգերեզմանն Ադամայ, եւ ասէ. Մի որ ինչ մերձեսցի յաւորս յայմիկ մինչեւ դարձին մարմինք որդա ի դմա: 48:2 եւ ասպս յանձամ վերացաւ Տէր իրկինս հանդերձ հրեշտակայք իւրովք սերորէիք եւ լուսնդէն կառայք յիրարանչիւր կայանս.	48:3 ხოლო აღდგომაო, რომელ აღგითქუ, აღგადგინო უამსა აღდგომისასა. 48:1 ხოლო შემდგომად ამისა მოიღო ღმერთმან ბეჭედი იგი სამკელელი და დაბეჭდა სამარე იგი ადამისი და ჰრქუა. ნუშცა ვინ შეეხების ეკუსთა ამათ ღლეთა, ვიდრემდე მოიქცეს გულრდი შენი შენლავე. 48:2 მაშინ-ღა ღმერთი აღხდა ზეცად და ანგელოზნი თვითოვ-ულად წესთა თვისთა ზედა.	47.3a господь рече · тако рѣхъ тебѣ · земля еси и въ тѣждѣ землю паки поидеши . 47.3b и паки на въскръсєніє въскръсєніши и съ въсѣмъ родомъ чловѣчьскымъ . 47.4 и прѣкръсти господь гробъ на .д. страны и въложи єго въ гробъ, и прѣблиа и рече · твоя отъ твоихъ тебѣ приносить се .

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
41:3 Again I promise to you the Resurrection; I will raise you up in the Resurrection with every man, who is of your seed." 42:1 After these words, God made a three-fold seal and sealed the tomb, that no one might do anything to him for six days till his rib should return to him. 42:2 Then the Lord and his angels went to their place.		48:3 but I will raise you in the resurrection which [I] promised you." 48:1 After God had said this, he took a three-fold seal and sealed Adam's tomb and said, "Let none approach in these days, until their bodies return to it." 48:2 Then, at that time, the Lord ascended to the heavens with his angels, Seraphim and chariot of light, each to his station.	48:3 but I will raise you up in the resurrection which I have promised you, at the time of resurrection. 48:1 Then, after that, God took the triangular seal and sealed the tomb of Adam and he said, "Let no person touch it during these six days, until your rib returns to you." 48:2 Then God ascended to the upper heaven and each of the angels to his office.	47.3a The Lord said, "So I told you, 'You are earth and to the same earth you will return again.' 47.3b And at the resurrection, you will rise with all of mankind." 47.4 And the Lord made on four sides the sign of the cross over his grave, and one laid him in the grave, and he anointed it and said, "What is yours, taken from you, is again returned to you."

33 LATIN 49:1 Post sex dies vero quod mortuus est Adam, cognoscens Eva mortem suam, congregavit omnes filios suos et filias suas, qui fuerunt Seth cum XXX fratribus et XXX sororibus, et dixit ad omnes Eva: 49:2 Audite me, filii mei, ut referam vobis, quod ego et pater vester transgressi sumus praeceptum dei et dixit nobis Michahel archangelus:

49:3 propter praevaricationes vestras generi vestro superinducet dominus noster iram iudicii sui primum per aquam secundum per ignem: his duobus iudicabit dominus omne humanum genus.

50:1 Sed audite me, filii mei! facite ergo tabulas lapideas et alias tabulas lutae et scribite in his omnem vitam meam et patris vestri quae a nobis audistis et vidistis.

50:2 Si per aquam iudicabit genus nostrum, tabulae de terra solventur et tabulae lapideae perma nebunt. si autem per ignem iudicabit genus nostrum, tabulae lapideae solventur et de terra luteae decoquentur.

50:3 haec omnia cum dixisset Eva filiis suis expandit manus in caelum orans et inclinans genua in terram et adorans dominum et gratias agens tradidit spiritum.

ATIN 49:1 Six days after Adam's death, Eve knew her own death [was near], so she gathered together all sons and daughters, who were Seth along with his thirty brothers and thirty sisters. Eve said to them all: "Hear me, my children, that I might recount for you how I and your father transgressed the precept of God. And the archangel said to us: 'On account of your conspiracies, our Lord will bring upon your race the wrath of his judgment, first by water, and second by fire. By these two will the Lord judge all the human race.' But hear me, my children! Make, therefore, tablets of stone, and other tablets of earth, and write on them your whole life, and that of your father, which you have heard from us and seen. If he judges our race by water, the tablets of earth will dissolve, but the tablets of stone will endure. If, however, he judges our race by fire, the tablets of stone will be destroyed, but the tablets of earth will be fired." When she had said all these things to her children, she stretched out her hand toward heaven, knelt upon the earth, worshipped God, and giving thanks, gave up her spirit.

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

42:3 Εὐὰ δὲ καὶ αὐτῇ, πληρωθέντων τῶν ἕξ ἡμερῶν, ἐκοιμήθη. Ἔτι δὲ ζώσας αὐτῆς, ἔκλαυσεν περὶ τῆς κοιμήσεως τοῦ Ἀδὰμ· οὐ γὰρ ἐγίνωσκεν ποῦ ἐτέθη. Ἐπειδὴ ἐν τῷ ἔλθειν τὸν κύριον ἐπὶ τὸν παράδει-σον πρὸς τὸ κηδεύσαι τὸν Ἀδὰμ, ἐκοιμήθησαν ἅπαντες, ἕως οὗ ἐτέλεσεν τοῦ κηδεύσαι τὸν Ἀδὰμ, πλὴν τοῦ Σὴθ μόνου· καὶ οὐδείς ἐγίνωσκεν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, πλὴν τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Σὴθ.		48:3 Եւան եւ կատարեցան ժամանակք ծալի եւ մեռանէր: Սկսալ եւ խնդրէր ճանաչել գտնողին ուր թաղեցան Ադամ, քանզի անտեղեկ էր. զի ի ժամանակին իբրեւ եկն Աստուած ի մահն Ադամայ շարժեցան ամենայն տոնկք դրախտին. եւ ի սուրբ հոգւոյն քուն էառ զամենայն որ էին ի վերայ երկրի մինչեւ հանդերձեցին զԱդամ, եւ ոչ որ գիտաց ի վերայ երկրի բայց միայն Սէթ:	48:3 სოლო ევა დასულეებულ იყო ესე რაი ყოველი იხილა. ტიროდა ევა და უნდა ხილვას, სადა დაღვეს ადამი, რამეთუ არა უწყებდა. ოღეს გარ- ღამობდა უფალი ქუეყანად, აღემატა არა ყოველთა ხეთა სამთხისათა სულენუებაი მისი, რამეთუ სულენუებისა მისკან ყოველნი დასულეებეს. ვიდრე შემოსადმდე და ღამარხვად აღამისა არავინ აგრძნა სეითისა სოლო;	48.1a Евѡа же прѣбнѣсть по адѡмъ .s. днѣи, молещи се глаголаше плачущи се .
42:4 Καὶ προσήξατο Εὐὰ κλαίουσα ἵνα ταπῇ εἰς τὸν τόπον ὅπου ἦν Ἀδὰμ ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς. Μετὰ δὲ τὸ τελέσαι αὐτὴν τὴν εὐχὴν λέγει·		48:4 Դարձեալ աղաղակել սկսաւ ծա աղաչել զԱստուած զի տարցին զնա ի տեղին ուր թաղեցան Ադամ: Իբրեւ կատարեաց զաղաւթնս ասէ.	48:4 და ილოცვიდა ევა, ტიროდა, რაითამცა მიიყვანეს და უჩუე- ნეს, სადა დაღვეს ადამ. და ოღეს აღასრულა ლოცვაი იგი, თქუა:
42:5 Κύριε δέσποτα, θεὲ πάσης ἀρετῆς, μὴ ἀπαλλοτριώσῃς με τοῦ σώματος Ἀδὰμ ἕξ οὗ ἦρες με ἐκ τῶν μελῶν αὐτοῦ,		48:5 Աստուած իմ Աստուած արունասոյց. մի աստարացուցաներ զիս ի տեղողէն Ադամայ,	48:5 უფალო, ნუ უცხო მყოფ მე აღგილისა მისკან აღამისისა,

GREEK

LATIN

ARMENIAN

GEORGIAN

SLAVONIC

42:3 And Eve also, when the six days were fulfilled, fell asleep. But while she was living, she wept bitterly about Adam's falling asleep, for she knew not where he was laid. For when the Lord came to the Garden to bury Adam all were asleep until he finished the burial of Adam except Seth alone. And no one knew (this) on the earth, except her son Seth.

42:4 And Eve prayed while weeping that she might be buried in the place where her husband Adam was. And after she had finished her prayer, she said:

42:5 "Lord, Master, God of all virtue, do not alienate me from the body of Adam, from whose members you made me.

48:3 The times of Eve were filled and completed and she was dying. She began to weep and sought to know the place where Adam was buried, because she was ignorant (of it). For, at the time when God came for the death of Adam, all the plants of the Garden were moved and, through the Holy Spirit, sleep overcame all those who were upon the earth, until they had dressed Adam, and none upon the earth knew, except Seth alone.

48:4 Again Eve began to cry out, to beseech God that they should bring her to the place where Adam was buried. When she had completed that prayer, she said, 48:5 "My God, God of miracles, do not alienate me from Adam's place, 48:3 But Eve grew numb [[when]] she saw all [[that]]. Eve wept and wished to see where they had put Adam, for she did not know. When the Lord had descended upon the earth, the sweet odor of all the trees of the Garden did not {...} because of his sweet odor all had grown numb. Until the wrapping and the burial of Adam, nobody understood anything except Seth.

48:4 Then Eve begged (and) wept so that (God) might lead her off, show her the place where they had put Adam. And when she had completed her prayer, she said, 48:5 "Lord, do not alienate me from Adam's place,

48.1a Eve lived six days beyond Adam; she prayed and said crying,

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
42:6 ἀλλ' ἄξιωσον καμὲ τὴν ἀναξίαν καὶ ἁμαρτωλὴν εἰσελεῖν μετὰ τοῦ σκηνώματος αὐτοῦ. Ὡσπερ ἦμην μετ' αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ ἁμφοτέροι μὴ χωρισθέντες ἀπ' ἀλλήλων, 42:7 ὥσπερ ἐν τῇ παραβάσει πλανηθέντες παρέβημεν τὴν ἐντολὴν σου μὴ χωρισθέντες, οὕτως καὶ νῦν, κύριε, μὴ χωρίσῃς ἡμᾶς. 42:8 Μετὰ δὲ τὸ εὐξασθαι αὐτὴν ἀναβλέψασα εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεστέναξε τύπτουσα τὸ στήθος αὐτῆς καὶ λέγουσα· Θεὲ τῶν ἀπάντων, δέξαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. Καὶ ἀπέδωκεν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτῆς.		48:6 սլլ հրամայեա ղեկի զիս ի գերեզման[ի] նորա. 48:7 որպէս էաք ի միասին ի որախտին եւ չէաք մեկուսի ի միմեանց. որպէս ի կենդանութեանն նորկպէս ի մահու մերո[ւ]մ. յորում տեղոր թաղեցաւ Ադամ. թաղեցալց եւ եւ ընդ նմա: 48:8 Զայս իբրեւ ասաց աղաչելով, և հոգին ի նմանէ.	48:6 ანამედ ბრძანე ჩემოცა მის თანა, 48:7 ვითარცა ორნოვე ვიყვენით სამოთხესა შინა განუშორებდ-ლაღ ურთოვნთას, 48:8 სიუღლილსა მას ჩუენსა ნუ განმეშორებ, არამედ სადაცა ოგო დასდევ, მუხცა მე . და შემდგომად ლოცვისა მისისა აღმოუტევა სულო.	48.1b господи боже, якоже ме еси сътворилъ отъ рѣбра Адамова, тако и съ ними да бѣждѹ . 48.2 и причне на грѣдехъ своихъ глаголющи . господи, боже, приими дѹхъ мои . 48.3 и тѹ прѣдасть дѹхъ свои къ богу.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
42:6 But deem me worthy, even me who is unworthy and a sinner, to enter into his tabernacle. Just as I was with him in the Garden, both of us not being separated from the other; 42:7 just as in our transgression, we were (both) led astray and transgressed your command, but were not separated, even so now, o Lord, do not separate us." 42.8. But after she had prayed, she gazed heavenwards and groaned aloud and smote her breast and said: "God of All, receive my spirit," and she delivered up her spirit.		48:6 but command to place me in his tomb. 48:7 Just as we were together in the Garden, and were not separate from one another, just as in life, so in ou[r] death. In the place in which Adam was buried let me, too, be buried with him." 48:8 When, beseeching, she had said this, her soul left her.	48:6 but command me, me also, (to be) with him, 48:7 as we both were in the Garden, inseparable from one another. 48:8 Do not separate us in our death, but place me where you have placed him." And after this prayer she gave up her soul.	48.1b "Lord God, as you created me from the rib of Adam, so I want to be with him." 48.2 And she lowered her head onto her breast, saying, "Lord God, receive my spirit." 48.3 And so she gave her spirit to God.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
43:1 Καὶ ἦλθε Μιχαὴλ καὶ ἐδίδαξεν τὸν Σὴθ πῶς κηδεύσῃ τὴν Εὐαν. Καὶ ἦλθαν τρεῖς ἄγγελοι· καὶ ἦσαν τὸ σῶμα αὐτῆς καὶ ἔθαψαν αὐτὸ ὅπου ἦν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἀδάμ καὶ τοῦ Ἀβελ.	51:1 Postea cum magno fletu sepe- lierunt eam omnes filii eius. cum es- sent lugentes quat- tuor dies, tunc ap- paruit eis Michahel archangelus dicens ad Seth:	51:1 և եկն Միքայել հրեշտակապետն խաահեցաւ առ Սէթ և ուսուց նմա թէ որպէս հանդերձեացէ զհա- նկին երեք հրեշտակք և առին զամենայն ծաղի, և տարան երկն ուր կայր մարմին Արամայ և Արեփի:	51:1 და მოვიდა მიქაელ ანგელოზი და ასწავა სეთს, ვითარ შევძო- სოს ევას. მოვიდეს სამნი ანგელოზნი და აღიღეს ჯუამი ადამისო.	49-50.1 И прииде архаггелъ Михаилъ къ Сирру и наущи Сиду, како да схранить матерь свою . 49-50.2 и приидоше .г. аггели, възвѣвше тѣло Ѣвъжино и погребомше ю, гдѣ и тѣло Адамово и Авелово, сына юу .
43:2 Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Μιχαὴλ τῷ Σὴθ λέγων· Οὐδῶς κηδεύσον πάντα ἄνθρωπον ἀποθνήσκοντα ἕως ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναστάσεως.	see 48.3	51:2 Թեա այսորիկ խաահեցաւ Միքայել առ Սէթայ և ասէ. Այսպէս հանդերձեալք զամենայն մարդ որ մեռանի մինչեւ կայր կատարածի յարութենէն:	51:2 და შემდგომად ამისა ეტყოდა მიქაელ ანგელოზი: "შემოსეთ ყოველი მკუდარი, რომელი მოკუტდეს, ესრეთ, ვიდრე აღსასრულადმდ ეყო" ველთა კაცთასა .	49-50.3 и рече архаггелъ къ Сирру . тако да съхранишь всакого чловека умирающаго до днѣ въскрсенія .
43:3 Μετὰ δὲ τὸ δοῦναι αὐτὸν νόμον εἶπεν· Παρ' ἔξ ἡμερῶν μὴ πενθῆσθε· τῇ δὲ ἐβδόμῃ ἡμέρᾳ κατάπαυσον καὶ εὐφρανθήθι ἐν αὐτῇ ὅτι ἐν αὐτῇ ὁ θεὸς καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι ἡμεῖς εὐφρανόμεθα μετὰ τῆς δικαίας ψυχῆς τῆς μεταστάσης ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς.	51:2 homo dei, ne amplius lugeas mortuos tuos quam sex dies quia septimo die signum resur- rectionis est futuri seculi requies, et in die septimo re- quievit dominus ab omnibus operibus suis. [III]+omni opere suo. Octavus vero dies futurae et aeternae beatitudi- nis est, in qua omnes sancti cum ipso creatore et salvatore simul cum anima et cor- pore nunquam de cetero morituri regnabunt per in- finita secula secu- lorum. Amen.] III. 51:3 tunc Seth fecit tabulas.	51:3 Զայս իրրիւ ասաց հրեշտակն առ Սէթայ, վերացաւ յերկինս փառատորիով զհայր և զորդի և զսուրբ հոգին այժմ և միշտ:	51:3 ოდეს ასწავა სეთს, ესე ყოველი, ამადღლა ზეყად სეთისაგან და ჰრქუა მას: "უფროის ხეთისა ღღისა არა იგლოვდეთ მკუდართა ზედა, ხოლო ღღესა მას მეშვიდესა განმზიარულდეთ , რამეთუ ამას ღღესა განი- სუენა ღმერთმან ყოველთაგან მისთა, რომელ ქმნა უფალმან",	49-50.4 паки рече юмоу . творю память и въ .г. днь, и въ .а. и въ .к. и въ .м., и въсе по чину, якоже аггели веселимъ се съ праведьнами дошми.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
43:1 And Michael came and taught Seth how to prepare Eve for burial. And there came three angels and they bore her body and buried it where Adam and Abel's bodies were.	51:1 Afterwards, all her children buried her with great weeping. After they had mourned her for four days, Michael appeared to them and said to Seth:	51:1 Michael, the archangel, came and spoke to Seth and taught him how to dress her. Three angels came and took Eve's body and brought it and placed it where Adam's and Abel's bodies were.	51:1 And the angel Michael came and taught Seth how to dress Eve. Three angels came and took Eve's body and placed it where they had placed Adam's body.	49-50.1 And the archangel Michael came to Seth and instructed him as to how he should bury his mother. 49-50.2 And three angels came, took Eve's corpse and buried it, where also the corpse of Adam and their son Abel were buried.
43:2 And afterwards Michael spoke to Seth saying; "Lay out in this manner every man that dies until the day of the Resurrection."	see 48.3	51:2 After this, Michael spoke to Seth and said, "Thus shall you dress every human being who dies, until the day of the end, through the resurrection."	51:2 And after that, the angel Michael told him, "Thus dress every dead person who dies, until the death of all human beings."	49-50.3 And the archangel said to Seth, "So shall you bury every person who dies until the resurrection."
43:3 And after giving him this rule he said: "Mourn not beyond six days, but on the seventh day, rest and rejoice on it, because on that very day, God and we the angels rejoice with the righteous soul, who has passed away from the earth."	51.2 "Man of God, mourn no longer than 6 days, for the 7th day is the sign of the resurrection, the repose of the coming age, and on the 7th day the Lord rested from all his works. [III+ all his work. Indeed, the 8th day is (the sign) of the future and eternal blessedness, in which all the holy will reign throughout endless ages with the Creator and Savior himself, in both soul and body, never again to die Amen.] III 51:3 Then Seth made tablets.	51:3 When the angel had said this to Seth, he ascended to heaven, praising the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, now and forever.	51:3 When he had taught Seth all that, he ascended to the uppermost heaven, far from Seth, and he told him, "Do not mourn for the dead more than five days and on the seventh day rejoice, for on that day God rested from all his (works) which the Lord had made."	49-50.4 Again he said to him, "Arrange a memorial ceremony on the third day and on the ninth and on the twentieth and on the fortieth, and arrange everything in proper order, so that we angels might take joy in it along with the souls of the righteous."

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
43:4 Ταῦτα εἰπὼν ὁ ἄγγελος ἀνῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν δοξάζων καὶ λέγων· 'Ἀλληλούϊα. "Ἄγιος, ἅγιος, ἅγιος, κύριος. Εἰς δόξαν θεοῦ πατρὸς. Ἀμήν.			51:4 წმლისაი არს ღიღუბაი და პატივი და თაყუანის-ცემაი თანა მამით და სულით წმიდით აწ და მარადის და უკუნითი უკუნისამდე, ამინ.	49-50.5 Тогда архаггелъ Иоиль прослави бога, глаголюще свѣтъ, свѣтъ, алилѹиа, 49-50.6 свѣтъ госп одѣ, испльнь небо и земля славы его.

GREEK	LATIN	ARMENIAN	GEORGIAN	SLAVONIC
43:4 After the angel said these things he ascended into heaven, glorifying (God) and saying: "Allelujah, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord, to the glory of God the Father, Amen."			51:4 To him is glory and honor and adoration, with the Father and the Holy Spirit, now and for ever and for ever and ever. Amen.	49-50.5 Then the archangel Joel glorified God with words, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Allelulia. 49-50.6 Holy is the Lord, heaven and earth are full of His glory."

36 (following Mozley) [52] Tunc Seth fecit (duas?) tabulas lapideas et (duas?) luteas, (et composuit apices literarum?) et scripsit in eis vitam patris sui Adae et matris sue Evae quam ab eis audivit et oculis suis vidit et posuit tabulas in medio domus patris sui in oratorio ubi orabat dominum. et post diluvium a multis videbantur hominibus tabulae illae scriptae (lapides illi scripti?) et a nemine legebantur.

Salomon autem sapiens vidit scripturam et deprecatus est dominum et apparuit ei angelus domini dicens: ego sum qui tenui manum Seth, ut scriberet cum digito suo (ferreo digito?, ferro stilo?) lapides istos, et eris sciens scripturam, ut cognoscas et intelligas (ubi sint) quid contineant lapides isti omnes et ubi fuerit oratorium, ubi Adam et Eva adorabant dominum deum. et oportet te ibi aedificare templum domini id est domum orationis. Tunc Salomon supplevit templum domini dei et vocavit literas illas achiliacas hoc est sine verborum doctrina scriptas (achilicas quod est latine lapideas id est sine labiis doctrina scripta?, achiliacas quod est latine sillabicas hoc est sine librorum doctrina scriptas ?) digito Seth, tenens manum eius angelus domini.

[53] et in ipsis lapidibus inventum est, quod prophetavit septimus ab Adam Enoch dicens ante diluvium de adventu Christi: ecce veniet dominus in sanctis suis (in sanctis milibus suis?, in milibus suis?, in sanctis nubibus suis?) facere iudicium de omnibus et arguere impios de omnibus operibus suis quibus locuti sunt de eo peccatores et impii murmuratores et irreligiosi qui secundum concupiscentias suas ingrediuntur et os eorum locutum est superbiam. [IV+et os illorum locuntur superbiam ibunt in orcum, iusti vero plaudentes in regnum caelorum. [54] (Adam vero post quadraginta dies introivit in paradisum et Eva post octoginta et fuit Adam in paradisum annos septem et sub die moverunt omnem bestiarum)]IV.

37[55] Sciendum est quod de octo partibus plasmatum fuit corpus Ade. Una pars erat de limo terre unde facta est caro eius et inde piger erit. Alia pars erat de mari unde factus est sanguis eius et inde erat uagus et profugus. Tertia pars erat de lapidibus terre unde sunt ossa eius et inde erat durus et avarus. Quarta pars erat de nubibus, inde facte sunt cogitationes eius et inde factus est luxuriosus. Quinta pars erat de uento unde factus est anelitus et inde factus est levis. Sexta pars erat de sole unde facti sunt oculi eius et inde erat bellus et preclarus. Septima pars est de luce mundi unde factus est gratus et inde habet scienciam. Octava pars est de spiritu sancto unde facta est anima et inde sunt episcopi et sacerdotes et omnes sancti et electi dei.

38 [56] Et sciendum quod deus fecit et plasmavit Adam in eo loco in quo natus est Iesus scilicet in ciuitate Bedleem que est in medio mundi, et ibi de quatuor angulis terre corpus Ade factum est, deferentibus angelis de limo terre de partibus illis, uidelicet Micaele Gabriele Raphaele et Uriele. Et erat illa terra candida et munda sicut sol, et conspersa est illa terra de quatuor fluminibus id est Geon Phison Tigris et Euphrates, et factus est homo ad imaginem dei, et insufflauit in faciem eius spiraculum uite scilicet animam. Sicut enim a quatuor fluminibus conspersus sic a quatuor uentis accepit flatum.

39 [57] Cum factus fuisset Adam et non erat ei nomen impositum adhuc, dixit dominus ad quatuor angelos ut quererent ei nomen, et exiuit Micael ad orientem et uidit stellam orientalem Ancolim nomine et sumpsit primam literam ab illa, et exiuit Gabriel ad meridiem et uidit stellam meridianam nomine disis et tulit primam literam ab illa; exiuit Raphael ad aquilonem et uidit stellam aquilonarem Arthos nomine et tulit primam literam ab ipsa; exiuit Uriel ad occidentem et uidit stellam occidentalem Mencembrion nomine et attulit primam literam ab eadem; quibus literis adductis dixit dominus ad Urielam, Lege literas istas, et legit et dixit, Adam, et dixit dominus, Sic uocetur nomen eius. Explicit uita protoplasti nostri Ade et Eue uxoris eius.

36 (following Mozley) [52] Then Seth made (two?) tablets of stone and (two?) of earth, (and he devised the caps of letters?) and wrote on them the life of this father, Adam, and his mother, Eve, which he had heard from them and seen with his own eyes. He placed the tablets in the middle of his father's house in the oratory where he prayed to the Lord. After the flood, these written tablets were seen by many men (these written stones?) but were legible to no one.

Solomon, however, being wise, saw the writing and prayed to the Lord. There appeared to him an angel of the Lord, saying: "I am he who held the hand of Seth, that he might write these stones with his finger (with an iron finger/ with an iron stylus?). You will be knowledgeable of these writings, so that you might know and understand (whence they are) what all these stone contain, and where the oratory was where Adam and Eve worshipped the Lord God. You must build there the temple of the Lord, which is the house of prayer.

Then Solomon completed the temple of the Lord God, and called these letters 'achiliacae,' that is, written without the teaching of words' ('achiliacae' stones, which is in Latin, teaching written without lips' / achilia-cae' which is in Latin, parchments 'written without the teaching of books' ?) by the finger of Seth, while the angel of the Lord held his hand.

[53] On these stones was found what Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied before the flood about the coming of Christ: "Behold the Lord will come in his sanctuary (in his holy soldiers, in his soldiers, in his holy clouds ?) to render judgment on all and to accuse the impious of all their works by which they have spoken concerning him — sinners, impious murmurers, and the irreligious who have lived according to their feelings of desire, and whose mouths have spoken proudly. [IV+Those whose mouths have spoken proudly will go to Hades, but the just will surely go rejoicing into the kingdom of heaven.

[54] (Adam entered the Garden after forty days, and Eve after eighty. Adam was in the Garden for seven years and in one day they moved every beast)[IV].

37 [55]. It must be known that the body of Adam was formed of eight parts. The first part was of the dust of the earth, from which was made his flesh, and thereby he was sluggish. The next part was of the sea, from which was made his blood, and thereby he was aimless and fleeing. The third part was of the stones of the earth, from which his bones were made, and thereby he was hard and covetous. The fourth part was of the clouds, from which were made his thoughts, and thereby he was immoderate. The fifth part was of the wind, from which was made his breath, and thereby he was fickle. The sixth part was of the sun, from which were made his eyes, and thereby he was handsome and beautiful. The seventh part was of the light of the world, from which he was made pleasing, and thereby he had knowledge. The eighth part was of the Holy Spirit, from which was made his soul, and thereby are the bishops, priests, and all the saints and elect of God.

38 [56]. It must also be known that God made and formed Adam in that place where Jesus was born, that is, in the city of Bethlehem, which is in the center of the earth. There Adam was made from the four corners of the earth, when angels brought some of the dust of the earth from its parts, viz. Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel. This earth was white and pure like the sun and it was gathered together from the four rivers, that is, the Geon, Phison, Tigris, and Euphrates. Man was made in the image of God, and he blew into his face the breath of life, which is the soul. For just as he was gathered from the four rivers, thus from the four winds he received his breath.

39 [57] When Adam was made, and there was no name assigned to him yet, the Lord said to the four angels to seek a name for him. Michael went out to the east and saw the eastern star, named Ancolim, and took its first letter from it. Gabriel went out to the south, and saw the southern star, named Disis, and took its first letter from it. Raphael went out to the north, and saw the northern star, named Arthos, and took its first letter from it. Uriel went out to the west, and saw the western star, named Mencembrion, and took its first letter from it. When the letters were brought together, the Lord said to Uriel: "read these letters." He read them and said, "Adam." The Lord said: "Thus shall his name be called. "Here ends the life of our protoplast, Adam, and his wife, Eve.

Index

In this index are included the proper names to be found in the Synopsis, except for “Adam” and “Eve,” which occur on virtually every page. The numbers are the page numbers of the Synopsis. If the page number is followed by letters, they indicate the versions on that page in which the name is found. If no letters are found, the name occurs in all the versions found on that page. G = Greek and Ge = Georgian

Abel	26GLAGe 27 28GLAS 29LGe 30 31 87 89G 94GAS
Acherusian Lake	82GGe
Amilabes	26G 27G
Angels	4Ge 5 10GGeS 11GLS 15L 16 17 23 24AGe 25A 27S 28GAS 29 32 35GLGeS 36GAGeS 37LAGeS 40GLAGe 46GAGe 51 53S 54S 62 69LAGe 70 72 73 74G 76 77 78 79 80 81 82 83GGeS 84 87S 88 89GGe 90GAGe 94S 96
Beliar	18S
Bethlehem	96
Cain	19AGe 25 26GL 27 28 30 31 88GAGe
Cherub	11A 15AGe 57 62 70LGe 76GAGe 82S 84 88GAGe
Christ	45AGe
demons	30
Devil, Satan	6 7S 11 12LAGeS 13LAGe 15 18LA 19A 36AS 37LAS 43A 48 49LAGe 50LAGe 51 52GAGe 54AS 58 GAGe 60GS
Diophotos	26G
enemy	12G 18Ge 36GGe 48G 49S 70AGe 85S 86S
enoch	96
ethiopians	81G
euphrates, river	96
Gabriel, angel	28Ge 62A 87GAGe 96

Gap'at'	26
Geon, river	96
Gerusia, sea of	82G
Indians	81Ge
Jael	72G 78G
Jehovah	16L
Jesus	96
Joel, angel	6 72S 79S 95S
Jordan, river	9 10LAGe 12S 20AGe 45LAGe
King, of God	45L
Michael, archangel	1G 6 16 17LA 21Ge 24L 27S 28GAS 32 44 45A 46L 62GS 74L 77AGe 81S 82L 83GGeS 84G 86 87GAGe 89Ge 91 92GAGe 94 96
Mongrel, beast	41S
Moses	1G
Ozel	87A
Pison, river	96
powers(s)	23 24AGe 25Ge
Raphael, angel	96
Satan	see Devil
seraph	70A 76AS 78 82GGeS 90A
Seth	29AGe 31 34 35 36A 37S 39 41 43 44 46 59A 74A 79LS 81 82GLGe 85 91 94 96
Solomon	96
son, of God	45L 68AGe
Tigris, river	8 9 11GLAGe 96
Uriel	86L 87L 96
Virtues	32 see also power(s)

GLENN PEERS

SUBTLE

Representing Angels in Byzantium

BODIES

Subtle Bodies

THE TRANSFORMATION OF THE CLASSICAL HERITAGE

Peter Brown, General Editor

- I Art and Ceremony in Late Antiquity, by Sabine G. MacCormack
- II Synesius of Cyrene: Philosopher-Bishop, by Jay Alan Bregman
- III Theodosian Emperors: Women and Imperial Dominion in Late Antiquity, by Kenneth G. Holum
- IV John Chrysostom and the Jews: Rhetoric and Reality in the Late Fourth Century, by Robert L. Wilken
- V Biography in Late Antiquity: The Quest for the Holy Man, by Patricia Cox
- VI Pachomius: The Making of a Community in Fourth-Century Egypt, by Philip Rousseau
- VII Change in Byzantine Culture in the Eleventh and Twelfth Centuries, by A. P. Kazhdan and Ann Wharton Epstein
- VIII Leadership and Community in Late Antique Gaul, by Raymond Van Dam
- IX Homer the Theologian: Neoplatonist Allegorical Reading and the Growth of the Epic Tradition, by Robert Lamberton
- X Procopius and the Sixth Century, by Averil Cameron
- XI Guardians of Language: The Grammarian and Society in Late Antiquity, by Robert A. Kaster
- XII Civic Coins and Civic Politics in the Roman East, A.D. 180–275, by Kenneth Harl
- XIII Holy Women of the Syrian Orient, introduced and translated by Sebastian P. Brock and Susan Ashbrook Harvey
- XIV Gregory the Great: Perfection in Imperfection, by Carole Straw
- XV “Apex Omnium”: Religion in the “Res gestae” of Ammianus, by R. L. Rike
- XVI Dioscorus of Aphroditto: His Work and His World, by Leslie S. B. MacCoull
- XVII On Roman Time: The Codex-Calendar of 354 and the Rhythms of Urban Life in Late Antiquity, by Michele Renee Salzman
- XVIII Asceticism and Society in Crisis: John of Ephesus and The Lives of the Eastern Saints, by Susan Ashbrook Harvey

- XIX Barbarians and Politics at the Court of Arcadius, by Alan Cameron and Jacqueline Long, with a contribution by Lee Sherry
- XX Basil of Caesarea, by Philip Rousseau
- XXI In Praise of Later Roman Emperors: The "Panegyrici Latini," introduction, translation, and historical commentary by C. E. V. Nixon and Barbara Saylor Rodgers
- XXII Ambrose of Milan: Church and Court in a Christian Capital, by Neil B. McLynn
- XXIII Public Disputation, Power, and Social Order in Late Antiquity, by Richard Lim
- XXIV The Making of a Heretic: Gender, Authority, and the Priscillianist Controversy, by Virginia Burrus
- XXV Symeon the Holy Fool: Leontius's Life and the Late Antique City, by Derek Krueger
- XXVI The Shadows of Poetry: Vergil in the Mind of Augustine, by Sabine MacCormack
- XXVII Paulinus of Nola: Life, Letters, and Poems, by Dennis E. Trout
- XXVIII The Barbarian Plain: Saint Sergius between Rome and Iran, by Elizabeth Key Fowden
- XXIX The Private Orations of Themistius, translated, annotated, and introduced by Robert J. Penella
- XXX The Memory of the Eyes: Pilgrims to Living Saints in Christian Late Antiquity, by Georgia Frank
- XXXI Greek Biography and Panegyric in Late Antiquity, edited by Tomas Hägg and Philip Rousseau
- XXXII Subtle Bodies: Representing Angels in Byzantium, by Glenn Peers

GLENN PEERS

Subtle Bodies

Representing Angels in Byzantium

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA PRESS
BERKELEY LOS ANGELES LONDON

University of California Press
Berkeley and Los Angeles, California

University of California Press, Ltd.
London, England

© 2001 by the Regents of the University of California

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Peers, Glenn.

Subtle bodies : representing angels in Byzantium /
Glenn Peers.

p. cm.—(The transformation of the classical heritage ; 32)

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-520-22405-1 (hardcover : alk. paper)

1. Iconoclasm—Byzantine Empire—History.
2. Angels—Biblical teaching. 3. Angels in art.
4. Angels in literature. 5. Byzantine empire—
Church history. 6. Orthodox Eastern Church—
Byzantine Empire—History. 7. Church history—
Middle Ages, 600–1500. I. Title. II. Series.

BR238 .P39 2001

235'.3'088219—dc21

00-055165

Manufactured in the United States of America

9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 0

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

The paper used in this publication meets the minimum requirements of ANSI/NISO Z39.48-1992(R 1997)
(Permanence of Paper) . ☉

CONTENTS

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

IX

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

XI

ABBREVIATIONS

XIII

INTRODUCTION

I

ONE

ISSUES IN REPRESENTING ANGELS

13

TWO

ARGUMENTS AGAINST IMAGES OF ANGELS

61

THREE REPRESENTING ANGELS: IMAGES AND THEORY
	89

FOUR
THE VENERATION OF ANGELS AND THEIR IMAGES
	126

FIVE APPREHENDING THE ARCHANGEL MICHAEL 157

CONCLUSION
	194

BIBLIOGRAPHY
	209

INDEX
	231

ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Icon of the Archangel Michael(?).	18
2. The Israelites at the Twelve Springs.	22
3. Sarigüzel sarcophagus.	25
4. Barberini Diptych.	27
5. Mosaic of the Seasons, detail of Personification of Spring, from Daphne near Antioch.	29
6. The Tomb of Christ, upper register—Soldiers Asleep at the Tomb; lower register—Marys and Angel at Tomb.	34
7. Philoxenia of Abraham, mosaic, S. Vitale, Ravenna.	39
8. Two winged men inscribed “ΕΞΟΥCΙΕ” (“Powers”).	42
9. Angelic Powers, south side, Bema Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea).	44
10. Angelic Powers, north side, Bema Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea).	45
11. Icon of the Virgin and Child, flanked by Saints Theodore and George.	51
12. Archangel Gabriel, Mosaic, Bema arch, Hagia Sophia, Istanbul.	54
13. Virgin and Child, Apse Mosaic, Hagia Sophia, Istanbul.	55
14. Vision of Isaiah, The Christian Topography .	56

15. Icon of the Miracle at Chonae.	57
16. Virgin and Child, Apse Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea).	83
17. René Magritte, The Treachery of Images .	123
18. Sanctuary of the Archangel Michael at Mt. Gargano.	168
19. Icon of the Archangel Michael.	199

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Since this book began its life as a doctoral dissertation, many people should be acknowledged for its conception. Most directly, Herbert Kessler is responsible for the good in this work: he was the exacting midwife for a difficult birth. The help of friends and colleagues at the Johns Hopkins University and at the Villa Spelman was invaluable; I especially thank Ann van Dijk and Irene Kabala for their generous friendship.

The work I did at the doctoral level and since is founded on the training and support I received as an undergraduate, and I never travel far in my studies without silently expressing my gratitude to those teachers who set me on this path. I must single out especially A. Peter Booth (and the rest of the Department of Classics at Acadia University) and John E. Fisher of Wabash College as having provided me with the desire and confidence to pursue this vocation.

I must mention others more briefly but with thanks equally heartfelt: Charles Barber, Stéphane Beauroy, Anthony Bryer, Stephen Campbell, Mark Cheetham, Anthony Cutler and the other, anonymous reader, Georgia Frank, David Jordan and the staff of the Genadius Library, Dirk Krausmüller, Derek Krueger, Nancy Ševčenko, Daniel Weiss and Susan Young. To Kate Toll at the University of California Press and Peter Brown, my debt is great. My thanks, too, to the editor of Byzantion, P. Yannopoulos, and to the editor of Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies, J. Haldon, for allowing me to include here revised versions of the second half of chapter 4 and chapter 5. The University of Texas provided me with a Summer Research Assignment and funds to purchase photographs, and for this help I am grateful. Thanks to Tracy Chapman Hamilton for help with the index; my thanks to the Tommy and Sherry Jacks Fund for making this assistance possible.

Finally, my wife, Cathy, and children, Max and Willah, gave the peace of mind necessary to complete this task; their love is my strength. My parents and my grandparents gave me more than I can express here: with full knowledge of how small it is against their gifts, I dedicate this work to them.

ABBREVIATIONS

AASS	Acta Sanctorum , 71 vols., Paris, 1863–1940.
AB	Analecta Bollandiana
ArtB	Art Bulletin
B	Byzantion
BF	Byzantinische Forschungen
Blondel	Macarii Magnetis quae supersunt ex inedito codice , ed. C. Blondel, Paris, 1876.
BMGS	Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies
Bonnet	M. Bonnet, Narratio de miraculo a Michaelae Archangelo Chonis patrato , Paris, 1890.
BS	Byzantinoslavica
BZ	Byzantinische Zeitschrift .
CA	Cahiers Archéologiques .
Cameron, “The Language of Images”	Averil Cameron, “The Language of Images: The Rise of Icons and Christian Representation,” in The Church and the Arts , Studies in Church History, vol. 25, ed. D. Wood, London, 1992, 1–42.

DACL	Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie , ed. F. Cabrol and H. Leclercq, Paris, 1924–.
DChAE	Δελτίον της Χριστιανικής Ἀρχαιολογικής Ἑταιρείας.
DOP	Dumbarton Oaks Papers .
DTC	Dictionnaire de théologie catholique , ed. A. Vacant and E. Magenot, Paris, 1899–1950.
EEBS	Ἑταιρεία Βυζαντινῶν Σπουδῶν Ἑπετηρίς.
Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae	Michael Psellus, Oratio in Archangelum Michaellem , in Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae , ed. E. A. Fisher, Stuttgart and Leipzig, 1994, 230–56.
GCS	Die griechischen christlichen Schriftsteller der ersten drei Jahrhunderte.
Holl	“Die Schriften des Epiphanius gegen die Bilderverehrung,” ed. K. Holl, Sitzungsberichte der Königlich Preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften 35.2(1916):828–68 [= K. Holl, Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Kirchengeschichte , Tübingen, 1928; rp. Darmstadt, 1964, II:351–87].
HTR	Harvard Theological Review .
JAC	Jahrbuch für Antike und Christentum .
JöB	Jahrbuch der österreichischen Byzantinistik .
JECS	Journal of Early Christian Studies .
JTS	Journal of Theological Studies .
Leanza	S. Leanza, “Una versione greca inedita dell’ Apparitio S. Michaelis in monte Gargano,” VetChr 22(1985):291–316.
Mansi	G. D. Mansi, Sacrorum conciliorum nova et amplissima collectio , 53 vols. in 58 pts., Paris and Leipzig, 1901–1927.

MGH	Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Scriptores rerum Langobardicarum et Italicarum saec. VI-IX , Hannover, 1878.
OCP	Orientalia Christiana Periodica .
PG	Patrologia cursus completus, Series graeca , ed. J.-P. Migne, 161 vols. in 166 pts., Paris, 1857–1866.
Pitra	J. B. Pitra, Spicilegio Solesmense complectens sanctorum patrum scriptorumque ecclesiasticorum anecdota hactenus opera , 4 vols., Paris, 1852–1858.
PL	Patrologia cursus completus, Series latina , ed. J.-P. Migne, 221 vols. in 222 pts., Paris, 1844–1880.
PO	Patrologia Orientalis .
PTS	Patristische Texte und Studien.
RAC	Reallexikon für Antike und Christentum , Stuttgart, 1950–.
RBK	Reallexikon zur byzantinischen Kunst , Stuttgart, 1963–.
REB	Revue des études byzantines .
RivAC	Rivista d'archeologia cristiana .
RQ	Römische Quartalschrift für christliche Altertumskunde und für Kunstgeschichte .
RSBN	Rivista de studi bizantini e neollenico .
SC	Sources Chrétiennes.
Settimane	Settimane di studi del centro italiano di studi sull'alto medioevo.
TM	Travaux et Mémoires .
TU	Texte und Untersuchungen.
VetChr	Vetera Christianorum .

INTRODUCTION

On the Tension between Theology and Cult

Angel, literally “messenger,” can designate all manner of negotiation between heaven and earth and refer to any member of God’s spiritual host. Scripture is unequivocal in stating the existence of an angelic host and is full of diverse examples of the appearance of these transcendental creatures. But the difficulties of perceiving and identifying angels are signaled in scripture simply by the number of guises they assume and impressions they make. Angels appear in scriptural accounts as multiform, awful beings before whom such witnesses as Zacharias are overwhelmed and left speechless (Luke 1:20–22). They appear as clouds and fire (Ex. 13:21–22, 23:20–23), formless voices (Gen. 21:17) and, in the visions of Ezekiel (Ez. 10) and Isaiah (Is. 6), as complex and ultimately unfathomable creatures. The identity of these manifestations in scripture is often obscure; and Christian exegesis with its typological interpretation only compounded the difficulty when it discerned identities not overt in Hebrew scripture.

The scriptural definition of angelic nature as fire and wind (Ps. 104:4) established the belief in the immaterial and enigmatic qualities of angelic beings. Incorporated into the Epistle to Hebrews—“And of the angels he saith, Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire” (1:7)—this definition became the exegetical cornerstone of Christian angelology. But although the general definition was settled by scripture, the precise nature of the proportion and blend of elemental forces was never fully explained; angelic nature was held to be beyond humanity's ken.¹

Angelology—as historians have named patristic scrutiny of angels²—is replete with uncertainties, and these uncertainties were the source of the special problems of access and familiarity in devotion.³ For Christians, many questions persisted about angels' nature, organization, duties and comprehension.⁴ Agreement among theologians about the specifics of angelic nature was not possible given the transcendence of the objects of speculation, but angels figure so large in scripture and devotion that the subject could not be avoided.

The fire and spirit composition posited a relative value for angelic nature that placed the angels somewhere between the radically different natures of humanity and God. Such theologians as Theodotus in the second century called the angels “intellectual fire, intellectual spirit,”⁵ distinct in property from material fire and light.⁶ Theodotus thought that angels did have bodies—at least they were seen as such—although these bodies, compared to ours, were without form and without corporeality.⁷ Methodius (d. ca. 311) said that the angelic

1. See the texts gathered by J. Turmel, “Histoire de l'angélologie des temps apostoliques à la fin du Ve siècle,” Révue d'histoire et de littérature religieuse 3(1898):411ff.

2. See, for instance, Turmel, “Histoire de l'angélologie,” 289–308, 407–34, 533–52, and also his “L'angélologie depuis le faux Denys l'Aréopagite,” Révue d'histoire et de littérature religieuse 4(1899):289–309, 414–34, 536–62.

3. Angelology is the subject of many studies: see, for instance, DACL I.2:2080ff., DTC I:1189ff., RAC V:53ff., RBK III:13ff., and M. Bussagli, “Angeli,” Enciclopedia dell'arte medievale (Rome, 1991–) I:629–38, idem, Storia degli angeli. Racconto di immagini e di idee (Milan, 1991), and Le ali di Dio. Messagerie e guerrieri alati tra oriente e occidente, ed. M. Bussagli and M. D'Onofrio, Milan, 2000.

4. See R. Roques, “Introduction,” in Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, La Hiérarchie Céleste, SC vol. 58, ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac (Paris, 1958) lxxi.

5. Preserved in the writings of Clement of Alexandria (ca. 150–d. before 215). See Excerpta ex scriptis Theodoto, in Stromata Buch VII und VIII. Excerpta ex Theodoto. Eclogae propheticae. Quis dives saluetur. Fragmente, GCS vol. 17, 2d ed., ed. O. Stählin, L. Früchtel and U. Treu (Berlin, 1970) 110.

6. See, for instance, Eusebius, Praeparatio Evangelica, VII.15.15, GCS vol. 43, ed. K. Mras (Berlin, 1956) 393–94. Pseudo-Athanasius, Quaestiones ad Antiochum Ducem, V, PG 28:601C, said that the angels are as different from material creation as the sun from the stars.

7. Excerpta ex scriptis Theodoto, in Stromata Buch VII und VIII, 110–11.

nature is equally composed of air and fire, like souls.⁸ A writer later identified as Macarius the Great (ca. 300–ca. 390) said that the angels have subtle (λεπτὰ) bodies.⁹ Others stated that the angels are beings without body and without matter, but not completely so.¹⁰ Gregory of Nyssa (ca. 330–ca. 394) appears to put the angels out of all contact with matter.¹¹ And Gregory of Nazianzus (329/30–ca. 390) said that the angels can only be perceived by reason because they are composed of pure spirituality or something approaching it—he could not say for certain.¹² Complete agreement concerning the degree of participation of the angels in matter was never possible. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite¹³ and John of Damascus (ca. 675–ca. 750)¹⁴ came down on the side of the essential spirituality of the angels.

Maintaining a distance between the angels and God on the one hand, and angels and humanity on the other, was an important consideration for theologians. In his text praising the Archangel Michael, for example, Chrysippus (ca. 405–479) was careful to establish the similarities and differences of the natures of Michael and God.¹⁵ He deduced the nature of God from Deuteronomy 4:24

8. Photius, Bibliothèque, Tome V ('Codices' 230–241), ed. R. Henry (Paris, 1967) 100.10–13.

9. Homilia, IV.ix, in Die fünfzig geistlichen Homilien des Makarios, PTS vol. 4, ed. H. Dörries, E. Klosterman and M. Kroeger (Berlin, 1964) 33–34.

10. Turmel, "Histoire de l'angélologie," 422ff.

11. Oratio catechetica magna, VI, PG 45:28AB.

12. Orationes xlv, XLV.5, PG 36:629B.

13. See R. Roques, L'univers dionysien. Structure hiérarchique du monde selon le Pseudo-Denys (Paris, 1954; rp. Paris, 1983) 154ff. On the nature of the angels Pseudo-Dionysius himself is almost completely silent. Pseudo-Dionysius took it as an assumption that the angels were essentially spiritual in nature. In the summary of Pseudo-Dionysius's work by George Pachymeres (1242–ca. 1310), angels are described as bodiless and immaterial; they are immaterial, immortal and deiform (De divinis nominibus, VI.2, PG 3:856C); and in De div. nom., IV.1, PG 3:693C he states: "It is as bodiless and immaterial that they are perceived by the intelligence; and inasmuch as they are intelligences, they perceive themselves in a manner not of this world..." A defining characteristic is that the celestial hierarchy is more immaterial and more spiritual than the human (e.g., De ecclesiastica hierarchia, I.4, PG 3:376B). Roques writes (ibid., 155 n9), "C'est surtout par opposition aux caractères de notre hiérarchie humaine que ceux de la hiérarchie céleste prennent tout leur relief."

14. Expositio fidei, II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II Expositio fidei, PTS vol. 12, ed. P.B. Kotter (Berlin, 1973) 45–48.

15. A. Sigalas, "Χρυσίππου πρεσβυτέρου Ἐγκώμιον εἰς Ἀρχάγγελον Μιχαήλ," EEBS 3(1926):85–93.

(“For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire”) and Deuteronomy 9:3, as well as John 4:24 (“God is a spirit”).¹⁶ But even though Psalm 104:4 and Hebrews 1:7 indicate that the angels are also fire and spirit, Chrysippus said that one must not make the mistake of assuming that the angels are the same as God. They are decidedly not equal in nature or honor, since the creator cannot be equal to his creations. God alone is uncircumscribable, unviewable, and of purer flame.

Chrysippus was mindful to base discussion of angels on scriptural reference;¹⁷ scripture, not cult, was the proper guide.¹⁸ The same ostensible dependence on divine revelation in scripture generally characterized theologians’ descriptions of angels, as well as descriptions in miracle tales of angels’ work. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite (fl. ca. 500?), in his elaborate taxonomy of heaven in the Celestial Hierarchy, attempted to set his structure on a scriptural foundation, and yet he found that he had to rely on other sources to answer some questions. In a sense, he derived all his orders for his Celestial Hierarchy from the Bible,¹⁹ and his hierarchy differed from those of his predecessors in the systematic laws applied to the orders, their positions, actions and interactions.²⁰

Pseudo-Dionysius rigorously examined scripture for disclosures of the heavenly hierarchy so that a precise structure of angelic beings might be advanced. He divided the hierarchy into triads, the first consisting of seraphim, cherubim and thrones, the second of virtues,

16. Sigalas, “Χρυσίππου πρεσβυτέρου,” 89.

17. Sigalas, “Χρυσίππου πρεσβυτέρου,” 86.

18. A. Sigalas, Des Chrysippos von Jerusalem Enkomion auf den hl. Johannes den Täufer, Texte und Forschungen zur byzantinisch-neugriechischen Philologie, vol. 20 (Athens, 1937) III.

19. Roques, “Introduction,” lxxxii.

20. See Roques, “Introduction,” lvii ff. Pre-Dionysian attempts include the Life of Peter the Iberian, regarding a vision of John the Eunuch (see E. Honigmann, “Pierre l’Ibérien et les écrits du Pseudo-Denys l’Aréopagite,” in Mémoires de l’Académie Royale de Belgique, Classe des Lettres et des Sciences morales et politiques 47/3 (1952):18–19); Cyril of Jerusalem (ca. 315–386), Catechesis mystagogica, V.6, in Catéchèses mystagogiques, SC vol. 126, ed. A. Piédagnel (Paris, 1966) 154; John Chrysostom, Homiliae 1–67 in Genesim, IV, PG 53:44; and the Constitutiones Apostolicae (second half of the fourth century), VIII.12.8, in Didascalia et Constitutiones apostolorum, ed. F.X. Funk (Paderborn, 1905; rp. Turin, 1962) 498. And see A. Louth, Denys the Areopagite (Wilton, Conn., 1989) 35ff.

dominations and principalities, and the last of powers, archangels and angels. His is the best known and most complete attempt at describing the hierarchy, and his symbolic theology influenced at a fundamental level perception of and approaches to angelology from the sixth century on.

Pseudo-Dionysius necessarily depended to some extent on sources other than scripture for the completeness and symmetry of his hierarchy, notably the tradition of the church, Pseudo-Dionysius's own master, Hierotheus, and even his own opinion at particularly difficult junctures.²¹ At one point, for example, Pseudo-Dionysius had to resort to a divergent reading of scripture. In Pseudo-Dionysius's system, only the archangels and angels are in direct contact with humanity. The appearance of the seraphim to Isaiah is, therefore, a direct contradiction of the hierarchical scheme, and Pseudo-Dionysius had to propose a symbolic reading of Isaiah 6:6 wherein the seraphim is actually an angel appearing under symbolic form.²² Clearly, achieving knowledge of God by this method was conditional and subject to personal interpretation.

Pseudo-Dionysius insisted on the inability of human intelligence to understand divine things fully; for him, knowledge only comes through the "truly mysterious darkness of unknowing."²³ Writing about the exegetical possibilities of Isaiah 6:6, he described the necessary process of gaining knowledge of the unknowable as a personal endeavor that is necessarily incomplete.²⁴ Human knowledge of the divine derives in this process largely from personal contemplation of 21. Roques, "Introduction," lxxx ff.

22. Roques, "Introduction," lxxviii–lxxix.

23. De mystica theologia, I.3, PG 3:1001A; Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, The Complete Works, trans. C. Luibheid and P. Rorem (New York, 1987) 137.

24. De coelesti hierarchia, XIII.4, in La Hiérarchie Céleste, SC vol. 58, ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac (Paris, 1958) 161. Roques, "Introduction," lxxvi, commented on this passage in this way, "Il y aura donc, en matière théologique, une part d'hypothèse et d'estimation humaine. Mais, soulignons-le, la pointe de relativité s'applique ici aux divers types d'explication qui ont essayé de montrer comment le séraphim d'Isaïe pouvait être un ange, mais non point sur le fait même qu'il l'était: aux yeux de Denys et en vertu de la structure et des lois générales de la hiérarchie, c'est là une vérité absolue qui relève de l'enseignement le plus manifest et le plus sûr de l'illumination théarchique."

symbols or sensible phenomena, but contemplation does not provide final answers, only provisional knowledge.²⁵ For Pseudo-Dionysius, “signs and symbols pointed the seeker of truth on his way, not logical argument.”²⁶

In contrast to the circumspect attempts of theologians to come to terms with angelic nature and activity, popular cult attached great, if not overweening, importance to the near-omnipotence of angelic beings. To be sure, the cult of the Archangel Michael—the most popular of the “personalized” angels in the Byzantine world—did not depend upon these theological speculations for its working premise, although it did share in the fundamental difficulties of comprehension and description inherent in angelology.²⁷ The Christian cult of Michael, and of the angels, was founded on Jewish and pagan beliefs, and it burgeoned naturally out of this wide “power base.” But it also thrived because of its animistic roots. Evidence of Jewish belief in angels who have control over certain natural phenomena is found in the Book of Jubilees (ca. 140–100 B.C.E.), which describes angels, for instance, of fire, wind and darkness;²⁸ in the Book of Enoch (third century B.C.E.), angels have control over frost, snow and other phenomena.²⁹ In short, each natural phenomenon had an angel. Texts that cite Michael in this role as “nature angel” specify his special con-

25. See Roques, L'univers dionysien, 158ff.

26. Cameron, “The Language of Images,” 28.

27. L. Heiser, Die Engel im Glauben der Orthodoxie (Trier, 1976) 222, states that the liturgy is no more specific about the angels’ nature than the theologians are. In the liturgy the angels are given the general attributes of “insubstantial,” “bodiless,” “immaterial.” However, as he notes, “Nicht in theoretischen Erörterungen wird die Natur der Engel erkannt, sondern aus der heilgeschichtlichen Erfahrung ihres tätigen, hilfreichen Dienens für Gott und die Menschen” (ibid., 226). Appearances in history are the only really dependable factor in cult practice.

28. The Book of Jubilees or The Little Genesis, trans. R.H. Charles (London, 1902) 40ff. (c.II).

29. The Book of Enoch or 1 Enoch. A New English Edition, ed. M. Black (Leiden, 1985) 57 (60:17–22), 58 (61:10).

And see J. Daniélou, Histoire des doctrines chrétiennes avant Nicée. Vol. 1. Théologie du judéo-christianisme (Tournai, 1958) 140–41; W.v. Rintelen, Kultgeographische Studien in der Italia Byzantina. Untersuchungen über die Kulte des Erzengels Michael und der Madonna di Costantinopoli in Südtalien (Meisenheim am Glan, 1968) 29; W.v. Rintelen, “Kult- und Legendenwanderung von Ost nach West im frühen Mittelalter,” Saeculum 22(1971):84–85; A.L. Williams, “The Cult of the Angels at Colossae,” JTS 10(1909):415–16. The angels are cerns as water and snow.³⁰ In Egypt, Michael “took over” the role of the Nile God so that he was held responsible for the dew and the rain, and he alone was said to go through the veil to provide life.³¹ Similarly, Michael is described in terms of immanent protection unrestrained by anyone but God.

The sun riseth upon all the world through the supplication of Michael. . . . The earth beareth its fruits through the supplication of Michael. The whole world was reconciled again to God [by Michael], and he it is who delivereth everyone from the snares of the Devil. We find the intercession of Michael in the strenuous work of our hands. . . . We find the intercession of Michael in the body of the vine and of the gladness which is in the wine. . . . For the Archangel standeth by every one who crieth up to God with all his heart and helpeth him.³²

Belief in the elemental character of Michael is not restricted to the Coptic church, although Michael was especially venerated in Egypt.³³ Writing in the late ninth/early tenth century, Pantaleon also remarks on this same elemental character of the Archangel.³⁴ And in his work praising the Archangel Michael, Michael Psellus (1018–1081?) noted the benign immanence of Michael near his shrine: “Such things as the zephyr is able to do for us and breezes placed over every phenomenon and if named they can offer protection: for example, E. Legrand, Bibliothèque grecque vulgaire, 9 vols. (Paris, 1881; rp. Athens, 1974) II:xviii ff.

30. See W. Lueken, Michael. Eine Darstellung und Vergleichung der jüdischen und der morgenländisch-christlichen Tradition vom Erzengel Michael (Göttingen, 1898) 52ff., and 131ff.

31. Lueken, Michael, 131–32.

32. E.A.W. Budge, Miscellaneous Coptic Texts in the Dialect of Upper Egypt (London, 1915) 757.

33. See, on Coptic veneration, E. Amélineau, “Le christianisme chez les anciens Coptes,” Revue de l’histoire des religions 15(1887):54ff. He cites a large number of legends in Christian tradition in Egypt concerning the angels and the majority of these are about Michael; Michael’s also are the most varied, “Cet archange était sans cesse en mouvement, tantôt en guerrier, tantôt en batelier, descendant sur la barque aérienne jusqu’au fond des enfers, trempant son aile dans les lacs de feu et en retirant les damnés” (ibid., 56). See further, Lueken, Michael, 70ff., and C.D.G. Müller, Die Engellehre der koptischen Kirche. Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der christlichen Frömmigkeit in Ägypten (Wiesbaden, 1959) 8ff.

34. Encomium in maximum et gloriosissimum Michaellem coelestis militiae principem, PG 98:1265B–8A.

from the north refresh our bodies, these things the Archangel is able to do.”³⁵ Michael is the invisible and propitious force that alleviates heat in this region and lifts the oppression of all kinds of illnesses and sufferings. An important component of the angels’ nature is fire and likewise Michael makes himself manifest in this form, as miracle stories testify.³⁶ In Christian belief, angels command and guard their constituent parts, water, air and fire.

The early Church inherited a flourishing, and in some ways troublesome, cult of angels.³⁷ The warning in the Pauline Epistle to the Colossians about the dangers of untoward worship of the angels is an indication of such a problem.³⁸ The Christian cult of angels seems to have been heavily influenced by certain heterodox Jewish practices, as well as pagan beliefs in divine messengers.³⁹ The famous cult of Michael at Colossae, later Chonae, in western Asia Minor, grew out of this active, syncretistic belief in the angels that was common to Jews and pagans both.⁴⁰

35. Fisher 256.639–43. And see also E.A. Fisher, “Nicomedia or Galatia? Where Was Psellos’ Church of the Archangel Michael?” in Gonimos. Neoplatonic and Byzantine Studies Presented to Leendert G. Westerlink at 75, ed. J. Duffy and J. Peradotto (Buffalo, 1988) 179.

36. See chapter 5.

37. The cult of angels, and specifically of the Archangel Michael, was threatening even to the position of Christ in the church. Lueken, Michael, 133ff., exhaustively described this problem; but see also J. Barbel, Christos Angelos. Die Anschauung von Christos als Bote und Engel in der gelehrten und volkstümlichen Literatur des christlichen Altertums, Theophaneia, vol. 3 (Bonn, 1941) 230ff., Daniélou, Histoire des doctrines chrétiennes, 167ff., J.P. Rohland, Der Erzengel Michael. Arzt und Feldherr. Zwei Aspekte des vor- und frühbyzantinischen Michaelkults (Leiden, 1977) 67ff.

38. Col. 2:18, “Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into these things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshy mind.” This rather obscure prescription has been the subject of debate since the exact nature of this worship at Colossae is not known. R. Reitzenstein, Poimandres. Studien zur griechisch-ägyptischen und frühchristlichen Literatur (Leipzig, 1904) 79ff., thought this warning was directed at a cult of animistic forces.

39. For the pagan cult of angels, see A.R.R. Shepherd, “Pagan Cults of Angels in Roman Asia Minor,” Talanta 12/13(1980/81):77–101; F. Sokolowski, “Sur le culte d’angelos dans le paganisme grec et romain,” HTR 53(1960):225–29; and F. Cumont, “Les anges du paganisme,” Revue de l’histoire des religions 72(1915):159–82.

40. See Williams, “The Cult of the Angels at Colossae,” 435ff. R.L. Fox, Pagans and Christians (Harmondsworth, Middlesex, 1986) 380, 742 n18, suspected “a pagan cult of angels” at Chonae, and he notes indications of worship of angels in pagan contexts nearby. The verb ἐμβατεύειν (“to enter into, to approach something in order to investigate it”) is used at Col. 2:18, and although this verb is also found in the context of the cult of Apollo at Local causes for the cult at Chonae would seem equally important, however. The geography of the region was long noted as particularly fertile for gods—or angels—with awesome power over natural phenomena.⁴¹ Local causes and larger questions of improper worship combined at Colossae to create awkwardness over cult activity directed to the angels. The Epistle to the Colossians seems to have been addressed specifically to the sizable Jewish community at Colossae and in the region of Phrygia, where pagans were also in-Claros, one need not connect its forms of worship with Colossae for that reason alone. F.R. Trombley, Hellenic Religion and Christianization c. 370–529, 2d ed., 2 vols. (Leiden, New York and Köln, 1995) I:153ff., understands a pagan cult of angels behind the worship of Michael at Chonae.

The transition of cult, pagan to Christian, is often difficult to discern and should not be taken at face value, as I have attempted to demonstrate in my “The Sosthenion near Constantinople: John Malalas and Ancient Art,” B 68(1998):110–20.

The likeliest course for Michael at Chonae is through hellenised Jews in the area. As Marcel Simon writes, “la substitution a toutes chances d’être pré-chrétienne, et d’avoir été opérée par ces juifs syncrétisants dont on entrevoit l’influence à travers les développements polémiques de l’épître aux Colossiens.” See Verus Israel. Étude sur le relation entre chrétiens et juifs dans l’empire romain (135–425) (Paris, 1948) 430–31. F.O. Francis claimed that some form of mystery cult took place at Colossae, but the evidence is slim; see “Humility and Angelic Worship in Col. 2:18,” Studia Theologica 16(1963):109–34 [= Conflict at Colossae. A Problem in the Interpretation of Early Christianity Illustrated by Selected Modern Studies, ed. F.O. Francis and W.A. Meeks (Missoula, Mont., 1973) 163–95].

41. For example, Williams, “The Cult of the Angels at Colossae,” 435, “The remarkable natural phenomena at and near Colossae must from remote ages have appealed to the human mind, and provided material to which both primitive and later religions could cling.” See, too, O. Rojdestvensky, Le culte de saint Michel et le moyen âge latin (Paris, 1922) xvi; Rintelen, Kultgeographische Studien, 25; Rintelen, “Kult- und Legendenwanderung,” 85; and O.F.A. Meinardus, “St. Michael’s Miracle of Khonae and Its Geographical Setting,” Εκκλησία καὶ Θεολογία 1(1980):459–69.

R. Chandler noted in his Travels in Asia Minor: Or, an account of a tour made at the expense of the Society of Dilettanti (Dublin, 1775) 230–31, “It is an old observation, that the country about the Maeander, the soil being light and friable, and full of salts generating inflammable matter, was undermined by fire and water. Hence it abounded in hot springs, which, after passing underground from the reservoirs, appeared on the mountain, or were found bubbling up in the plain or in the mud of the river: and hence it was subject to frequent earthquakes; the nitrous vapour, compressed in the cavities, and sublimed by heat or fermentation, bursting its prison with loud explosions, agitating the atmosphere, and shaking the earth and waters with a violence as extensive as destructive; and hence, moreover, the pestilential grottoes, which had subterraneous communications with each other, derived their noisome effluvia; and serving as smaller vents to these furnaces or hollows, were regarded as apertures of hell, as passages for deadly fumes rising up from the realms of Pluto. One or more of these mountains perhaps has burned; and it may be suspected, that the surface of the country has in some places been formed from its own bowels.”

volved in angelolatry.⁴² The local cult of angels was not so easily dislodged, however, and at the Council held in 380 in nearby Laodicea it was singled out for attack:

It is not right for Christians to abandon the church of God and go away and invoke angels and hold conventicles; for these things are forbidden. If, therefore, anyone is found devoting himself to this secret idolatry, let him be anathema, because he abandoned our Lord Jesus Christ and went after idolatry.⁴³

And somewhat later Theodoret of Cyrrhus (ca. 393–ca. 466) again criticized these excesses of angelolatry:

This disease long remained in Phrygia and Pisidia. For this reason also a synod in Laodicea of Phrygia forbade by a decree the offering of prayer to angels; and even to the present time oratories of the holy Michael may be seen among them and their neighbors.⁴⁴

Wilhelm Lueken noted a scholion to this passage that makes it clear that Theodoret was referring to Michael's shrines in and around Colossae.⁴⁵ Evidently, Chonae was the long-standing center of a heterodox devotion to Michael in particular and to angels in general.

42. Williams, "The Cult of the Angels at Colossae," 436ff.; C. Mango, "Germia: A Postscript," JÖB 41(1991):297; on the number of Jews in Phrygia, Lueken, Michael, 80–81, and K. Belke and N. Mersich, Phrygien und Pisidien, Tabula Imperii Byzantini, vol. 7 (Vienna, 1990) 223, for citations.

It can be inferred that the so-called Epistle to the Colossians was directed at angelolatry in Asia Minor in general, even if the Epistle may not have been directed at the eponymous community. H. Koester, History and Literature of Early Christianity (Philadelphia, 1982) 264, denied the possibility of Paul's authorship but still thought that the Epistle was directed to the church at Colossae.

43. See P.-P. Joannou, Discipline generale antique (IVe-IXe siècles). Tome I.2. Les canons des synodes particuliers (Grottaferrata, 1962) 144–45. The translation of Canon 35 of the Council of Laodicea is from J. B. Lightfoot, St. Paul's Epistles to the Colossians and to Philemon (London, 1879) 68. See Williams, "The Cult of the Angels at Colossae," 435; Simon, Verus Israel, 429–30; L. Robert, Hellenica. Recueil d'épigraphie de numismatique et d'antiquités grecques, vol. XI–XII (Paris, 1960) 432ff. And on the anti-Jewish tendencies of the Council of Laodicea, see Rintelen, Kultgeographische Studien, 27, and Lueken, Michael, 81.

44. De providentia orationes x, II, PG 82:613B; trans. Lightfoot, St. Paul's Epistles, 68.

45. Lueken, Michael, 75.

This composite portrait of devotion to angels in the Early Christian and Byzantine world, as outlined above, reveals conflicting elements. On the one hand, popular, sometimes heterodox devotion to elemental, guardian creatures clearly existed, as the troublesome and flourishing history of the devotion to Michael at Chonae demonstrates; and, on the other, there was an abundance of theological speculation that carefully avoided crossing paths with this popular devotion and instead focused on issues of nature and organization—in other words, on decorous angelology. This study, however, explores how these apparently contradictory approaches to God's invisible multitude could intersect. The possibility of idolatry, a fear of the early church that still acted on the consciences of eighth- and ninth-century Byzantines, was never distant from discussion of angels and their representations. It informed the debates over the appropriateness of representing angels, a debate that began in the early church but was not resolved until the ninth century. The course of this debate as it incriminated material images is the subject of the first three chapters of this book. The worship of angels and of their images is the subject of fourth chapter; this chapter examines theology and miracle stories, and discusses the ways in which both of these genres dealt with the danger of worship of angels and presented seemly examples of approach instead. The fifth chapter looks at miracle stories of the Archangel Michael at Chonae to examine their verbal representation, that is, how these texts both make Michael more apprehensible to their audience and manage the difficulties of description with which artists also—in their own way—contended.

While this study deals primarily with textual evidence of attitudes towards angels and their images, it is the work of an art historian. It draws on intellectual history, which includes theology, miracle stories, poetry and sermons, and incorporates them into a history of representation. At the center of the study are the cultural conditions of seeing and understanding: an epistemology for which angels are simply the most trying and dangerous case. Transparent images of formless beings made for especially treacherous rapids, which the Byzantines attempted to stop up; this study looks at the shifting waters and dams that having images of angels necessitated.

One

ISSUES IN REPRESENTING ANGELS

Given the difficult nature of angels and their incorrigible cult, the question arose early in Christianity: How does one make an image of an incorporeal being, and what meaning does that image have for devotion to and comprehension of that being? This question, however, formed part of a larger search for ways of attaining knowledge of God and of things divine. As Averil Cameron's insightful synthesis of different aspects of Byzantine culture demonstrates, it was this search and the distinct approaches to gaining knowledge that led directly to the crisis of Iconoclasm in the eighth and ninth centuries.¹

Iconoclasm arose in the 720s, signaled perhaps by the dramatic destruction of the image of Christ on the Chalke Gate of the imperial palace in Constantinople.² Its direct cause was likely political concerns and the personal inclination of the emperor Leo III

1. Cameron, "The Language of Images"; and also her "Byzantium and the Past in the Seventh Century: The Search for Redefinition," in The Seventh Century. Change and Continuity. Proceedings of a joint French and British Colloquium held at the Warburg Institute 8–9 July 1988, ed. J. Fontaine and J. N. Hillgarth (London, 1992) 250–76.

2. See M.-F. Auzépy, "Le destruction de l'icône du Christ de la Chalce par Léon III: Propagande ou réalité," B 60(1990):445–92, and G. Peers, "Breathless, Speechless Images: On the Chalke Gate Epigram," Hommages Margaret Head Thomson, Cahiers des études anciennes, vol. 34, ed. L. Finnete and A. P. Booth (Trois Rivières, Québec, 1998) 109–12.

(r. 716–740), but its intellectual roots are deep in the early church, in divergent approaches to created matter—primarily images—in Christian life and worship.³ Iconoclasm as imperial policy was continued and reinforced by Leo’s son, Constantine V (r. 740–775) but halted under the regency of Irene who ruled for her son Constantine VI and solely from 797 to 802. Irene convened the last ecumenical council in 787, the second held at Nicaea, which reintroduced image worship in the empire. From 815 to 843, Iconoclasm was again enforced until Michael III (r. 842–867) declared for image worship under the influence of his mother, Theodora. The effect of this prolonged period of Iconoclasm was intense debate over images and worship. This study mines that debate for the information it provides about attitudes towards representing angels.

Cameron’s study provides a framework for a more specific analysis of one aspect of the quest for knowledge of the holy, namely depictions of angels. She delineates the process by which early Byzantine society attempted to define and systematize methods of acquiring knowledge and recognizing truth. In Cameron’s view, Iconoclasm “was a manifestation of an uncertainty which people felt about their own thought world.”⁴ And indeed, the period leading up to Iconoclasm reveals two divergent approaches to gaining knowledge in Byzantine culture: symbolism and literalism in art and worship were the two poles of the debate. These conflicting views on art and worship characterize attitudes toward, and perceptions of, angels and their representations. The debate over symbolism and literalism also involved questions about the place of created things in Christian worship; intellectual devotion and material assistance were mutually exclusive for some of the theologians discussed here. Figurative art

3. On the origins of Iconoclasm under Leo III, see S. Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm during the Reign of Leo III with Particular Attention to the Oriental Sources (Louvain, 1973) and D. Stein, Der Beginn des byzantinischen Bilderstreits und seine Entwicklung bis in der 40er Jahre des 8. Jahrhunderts (Munich, 1980). On the roots of Iconoclasm, see P. C. Finney, The Invisible God. Early Christians on Art (Oxford, 1994), E. Kitzinger, “The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm,” DOP 8(1954):83–150, and Sister Charles Murray, Rebirth and Afterlife. A Study of the Transmutation of Some Pagan Imagery in Early Christian Funerary Art (Oxford, 1981).

4. Cameron, “The Language of Images,” 4.

was one alienating feature within a larger complex of material aids introduced into worship in the period being examined.

The possibility of idolatry that arose from the introduction of material aids into Christian worship was the underlying and central apprehension that united anti-image theologians. The rejection of images of angels was directly related to that fear of idolatry, but it also involved other issues of primary concern in the early church, namely the worship of angels as gods and pagan attempts to equate Christian angels with their own gods. In the late fourth and fifth centuries, canon 35 of the Council of Laodicea and the repeated warning of Theodoret of Cyrillus aimed at increasing awareness of the problem and at extirpating the embarrassing problem from the Christian community.⁵ Macarius Magnes in the fourth century combatted the pagan attempt at a rapprochement by denying any resemblance between Christian worship of angels and pagan devotion to their gods.⁶ John of Thessalonike continued to fend off just such advances from pagan quarters into the seventh century.⁷ Evidently, the issue maintained a shame-inspiring purchase within the church. Christian practice, likely in the region of Chonae and perhaps far beyond, evidently encouraged the expression of such pagan views, and pagans could draw parallels between the two apparently irreconcilable beliefs. The shrine at Chonae was a prime site for overweening angel worship, and the stories describing the miracles of Michael were directed at cleansing a situation mortifying for church authorities; the emphasis on the blameless character at the center of the story of the miracle at Chonae was intended to counter behavior that was perhaps not normal but at least perceived to be possible within the cult of angels.⁸ A literal approach to worship, therefore, implicated other issues in the early church that are not simply theological abstractions

5. See the Introduction.

6. See chapter 2.

7. See the Conclusion, and also G. Peers, "Imagination and Angelic Epiphany," BMGS 21(1997):113–31, and D. Krausmüller, "God or Angels as Impersonators of Saints. A Belief and its Contexts in the 'Refutation' of Eustratius of Constantinople and in the Writings of Anastasius of Sinai," Gouden Hoorn 6 / 2(1998 / 9):5–16.

8. See chapter 4.

but that involved problems of Christian worship within the material, created world and before insubstantial messengers and guardians of that world.

Before such elusive creatures as angels, Christian artists encountered a representational dilemma. Yet they did not consider this problem of depicting spiritual creatures to be insurmountable, as they represented angels from the earliest period. They based their depictions on scriptural description, and, like theologians such as Chrysippus and Pseudo-Dionysius, they prudently stayed on the path scripture had established for angelic appearances. In many ways, artists avoided problems of representations and described angels straightforwardly as men, thereby ignoring the metaphysical qualities of angels altogether. Yet Christian artists did not always show angels as if they were illustrating the Bible literally. Christian artists developed an iconography of angels that commemorated angelic appearances on earth, most often using wings to indicate the symbolic quality of these appearances. In one important sense, the common iconography of the winged man is reductive: it does not describe the bodiless, immaterial nature of angels; rather, it represents God's messengers generically.

The iconography of angels is unique in Christian art in that it described the difficult flashes of epiphany of the formless angels allusively; the iconography of Christ and the saints presented their human forms, derived from corporeal lives on earth, as the iconography of the angels could not. While it is true that angels appropriated human form for some of their appearances on earth, this form was only one among many forms possible for angels. Christ and the saints had secure and comprehensible forms that persisted with a degree of stability throughout their lives on earth; in contrast, angels were unstable and, in the end, unknowable.

Christian images depended on the life that the subject led on earth for their significance in cult since they stated historical likeness and actual presence in the stead of the person represented. As Hans Belting has demonstrated, images of saints grew directly out of the Late Antique practice of honoring the dead through portraits; images became venerated like relics and were treated like vestiges that had contact with the person represented.⁹ Christ and the Virgin were, of course, difficult cases as both rose bodily into heaven; miraculous images, wondrously imprinted with Christ's face or taken from eyewitness observation such as by the Evangelist Luke, fulfilled this desire for verification of earthly being and for contact with the divine.¹⁰

Representing God—that is, the ability to represent absolute transcendence—was the central issue in the period leading to, and including, Iconoclasm, and it determined the selection and introduction of material concerning angels who are also transcendent, though not, like God, absolutely. The central defense for images of God was the incarnation; supreme divinity assumed human form, and lived, suffered and died in that form. Angels also become comprehensible, though not to this same degree, and for this reason were often a corollary for this primary question of Christian representation. But the issue of angels' images diverges immediately from any direct comparison with images of Christ. The angels were never incarnate, only give the illusion of being so—as, for instance, Raphael deluded Tobias into believing him human. Although angels are comprehensible in some fashion, they present a set of problems different from Christ's representability. Their formless nature and illusory apparitions, so well documented in scripture, apocrypha and miracle stories, define the angels' images as allusive to a spiritual reality not altogether apprehensible. Without the anchor of incarnate being that Christ's images refer to, angels' images are symbolic in a distinct way, necessarily referring to the paradox of bodilessness and immateriality made momentarily and partially known.

Angels, it appears, could not participate in the same process of representation as Christ and the saints: they did not manufacture miraculous images, they did not relinquish relics. Altogether their timeless, near-eternal selves denied historical ratification to their like-

9. H. Belting, Bild und Kult. Eine Geschichte des Bildes vor dem Zeitalter der Kunst (Munich, 1990) 42ff., 92ff.

10. On these issues, see the papers in The Holy Face and the Paradox of Representation, Villa Spelman Colloquia, vol. 6, ed. H. L. Kessler and G. Wolf (Bologna, 1998).

Figure 1. Icon of the Archangel Michael (?), Cabinet des Médailles, Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, sixth century.
Photo: Bibliothèque Nationale.

nesses. Painters of icons of angels relied on tried and true modes of representation for depicting these beings. A sixth-century Coptic panel painting of the archangel Michael (?), now in the Cabinet des Médailles, Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (fig. 1), reveals a clear dependence on idealizing funerary portraiture of the Late Antique period: large, staring eyes give a sense of timeless abstraction; the figure faces the viewer frontally, only betraying the impression of immovability by his right hand raised in benediction; the circular nimbus is depicted in front of the rectangular frame in the upper right hand corner, lending a contrapposto effect to the hand below.¹¹ While these elements provide animation, perhaps a notion of activity benevolently directed at the worshipper, the figure itself is anonymous, undistinguished by feature or by inscription; it is so reliant on pagan idealizing portraiture in iconography and style that only the heroic quality of the figure—and not its individuality—is clear. The stumps of wings alone betray a hint of angelic identity and nature; the icon is not, then, unambiguous in its representation of qualities unique to angels.

11. See Belting, Bild und Kult, 110, fig. 47, and J. Durand in Byzance. L'art byzantin dans les collections publiques françaises (Paris, 1992) 144, no. 98.

If Christian artists sidestepped certain problems of angelic nature in frequently representing angels as men, these images of angels raised difficulties of perception and comprehension on the part of the viewer. Angels are formless, bodiless and immaterial, so a true likeness of such beings in material images is impossible. The relation between the image and model is, therefore, problematic, and definition of any relation relied on viewers' ability to discern symbolic rather than literal "likeness." Byzantine viewers did approach images of angels discriminately: the tension between material representation and immaterial nature is the compelling and attractive quality of their images. Indeed, this tension is the defining characteristic of angels' images and distinguishes their images from other Christian representations.

On a literal level, the iconography of the angels presents a faithful rendering of certain appearances that God's messengers had made on earth. In Christian art, angels are depicted as youths, most often winged; they are generalized in appearance to the point of anonymity, and only the Archangels are consistently named by inscription in representations. Cherubim and seraphim are often recognizable, though not always distinguishable from each other, by the many wings and eyes that scripture prescribed. Yet cherubim, seraphim and other angelic beings—that is, the thrones, principalities, powers, virtues and dominations mentioned in scripture—could also be represented by the generalized iconography of the winged youth. Clearly, the form of a man with wings not only commemorated the human aspect occasionally made manifest to humanity but also referred, more broadly, to all angelic beings.

Although a degree of anthropomorphism became a consistent iconographic element for angels, anthropomorphism itself was not predetermined. For instance, scripture advances different agencies behind the cloud of smoke and pillar of fire that led the Israelites out of the desert in Exodus. At one point (13:21–22), “the Lord went before them”; but at other points in the journey, the text specifies that the Lord’s angel guided the people (14:19, 23:20–23, 32:34, 33:2). Although Exodus is ambiguous about these manifestations’ identity, the cloud of smoke and pillar of fire were generally considered to be emanations of God, that is angels.¹² The angels in illustrations of these events in Exodus presented representational possibilities for painters. They could be depicted either in the form made manifest to the Israelites in the desert, or as men, a form revealed elsewhere in scripture.

In the case of the smoke and fire of Exodus, literal adherence to scripture characterizes the depictions of these epiphanies, and painters did not use the iconography of the winged youth to indicate the nature and ultimate identity of the agencies behind the cloud and fire. Frescoes in cubicula C and O in the fourth-century via Latina Catacomb in Rome both represent a column with a blaze on top beside Moses receiving the law; these two columns are placed on a level above a crowd standing before a building.¹³ The Christian Topography, written in the sixth century, shows a different context for representing this manifestation of God’s providence. Illuminations accompany passages from Exodus and other biblical books, collated by the author in an attempt at a Christian history prefigured by events in Hebrew Scripture. The context is primarily narrative, although Christian typology is the final concern. This particular manifestation of divinity, the column and cloud, is depicted with faithful attention to scripture and interpreted as a sign of God’s providence fulfilled with the coming of Christ.

12. See M. Barker, The Great Angel. A Study of Israel’s Second Angel (London, 1992) 32, 86. Eventually, the Archangel Michael became identified with these manifestations on account of his guardianship of Israel stated at Daniel 12:1. See, for instance, Pantaleon, Narratio, IX, PG 140:579C.

13. See W. Tronzo, The Via Latina Catacomb. Imitation and Discontinuity in Fourth-Century Roman Painting (University Park and London, 1986) 1, 59, figs. 4, 5.

Rather than depicting an angelic being or God, the illuminators chose a literal depiction of a cloud and a column with a flame atop it (fig. 2).¹⁴ Yet the depictions, like scripture, ultimately refer to enigmatic revelations of God's emanations, that is angels, as the column and cloud in the manuscripts and the frescoes allude to changeable beings, unclear identities and obscure meanings. Both examples, despite their different contexts and literal attention to text, demand an understanding on the part of the viewer that the column and cloud are symbolic of aspects of divine, multiform beings. By avoiding any attempts at visually referring to the nature of the epiphanies, the painter shifts the burden to the viewer who must supply an interpretation based on his or her knowledge of scripture. While this burden is not exclusive to viewing angels, it has a special role since their mutable nature demands special processes of interpretation.

Angels' metaphysical qualities notwithstanding, during the early centuries of Christian art, painters, mosaicists and sculptors depicted angels as men. They first devised an anthropomorphic iconography because angels are sometimes described in scriptural accounts as having made themselves manifest as men. The earliest extant representation of an anthropomorphic angel appeared in the third century in an Annunciation in the Catacomb of Priscilla in 14. See K. Weitzmann and G. Galavaris, The Monastery of Saint Catherine at Mount Sinai. The Illuminated Greek Manuscripts. Volume One: From the Ninth to the Eleventh Century (Princeton, 1990) 63–64, figs. 141, 142, pls. IXa, Xa; and Cosmas Indicopleustes, Topographie chrétienne, SC vols. 141, 159, 197, ed. W. Wolska-Conus (Paris, 1968–1973) I:47ff.

The column with fire and the cloud are represented in illustrations in the two eleventh-century manuscripts of this sixth-century work at Sinai (cod. 1186, fols. 73r, 73v, 74r) and Florence (Laur. Plut. IX, 28, fols. 103r, 103v, 104r). The illustrations were not invented for these two manuscripts and the eleventh-century recensions rely ultimately on the sixth-century prototype of the Christian Topography for their model. The Sinai and Florence versions more faithfully reproduce the illumination tradition of the Christian Topography than the other member of this manuscript family, the ninth-century Vaticanus graecus 699, and so these illustrations of Exodus can be safely related to a pre-Iconoclastic model.

One should properly follow the identification of the author of the Christian Topography with Constantine of Antioch rather than Cosmas Indicopleustes, as Wanda Wolska-Conus has persuasively argued. See her "Stéphanos d'Athènes et Stéphanos d'Alexandrie. Essai d'identification et de biographie," REB 47(1989):28ff.

Rome. The scriptural narrative (Luke 1:28–38) describes the messenger of God merely as an “angel,” and the painter chose to represent this messenger as a man wearing a tunic and standing firmly on the earth.¹⁵ This solution to the potential difficulties in representing formless beings was used frequently in the first centuries of Christian art and never disappeared from the Byzantine iconographic tradition. Indeed, it shows that describing the special qualities of angels was felt sometimes not to be possible or not to be of paramount concern. In Early Christian art, angels were most often depicted in this earthly guise, as a man either bearded or unbearded,¹⁶ and in this way artists described one comprehensible aspect out of the many that scripture ascribes to angels. However, in the fresco in the Catacomb of Priscilla, the angel is not explicitly identified by inscription or iconographic peculiarity, and the attribution of the scene as the Annunciation is ambivalent. Clearly, the image of a man did not itself indicate the distinct identity of an angel nor could it describe directly any transcendental element in the event.

For some mosaicists, painters and sculptors, the literal depiction of angels as men was restrictive since anthropomorphism could not express qualities peculiar to angels.¹⁷ But in Late Antique art iconographic means that could indicate the distinct identity and metaphysical nature of angels were available to Christian mosaicists, painters and sculptors: by the end of the fourth century, wings were standard—though not exclusive—attributes of angels. They provided the means for referring to supernatural qualities particular to angels that could not be expressed easily in visual terms: transcendence, velocity, ethereality and uncontained activity. For instance, John Chrysostom (ca. 347–407) wrote:

15. See M. Bussagli, Storia degli angeli. Racconto di immagini e di idee (Milan, 1991) 48; and P. Testini, Archeologia cristiana. Nozioni generali dalle origini alla fine del sec. VI (Rome, 1958) 258.

16. The bearded angel is found as late as the fifth century, for example, on an ivory representing the Baptism of Christ in the British Museum; see W.F. Volbach, Elfenbeinarbeiten der Spätantike und des frühen Mittelalters, 3d ed. (Mainz am Rhein, 1976) pl. 60 (#115).

17. G. Berefelt, A Study on the Winged Angel. The Origin of a Motif (Stockholm, 1968) 15.

What do the powers reveal to us by these wings? The exaltedness and ethereality and lightness and speed of their nature. For which reason, Gabriel descends fleet; not that the wings are part of the bodiless power, but that he descends from realms on high and returns to his abode whence he was sent.¹⁸

In Byzantine art, wings became an established and comprehensive distinguishing sign of the offices and nature of angelic beings—and, rarely, of other beings as well, Christ, for instance, or John the Baptist in his angelic guise.¹⁹ In the case of the angels, however, the oc-

18. In Isaiah dominum (Is. 6:1), homiliae 1–6, II, PG 56:137. And, also, Ad eos qui scandalizati, III, PG 52:484, “Therefore when you see the seraphim flying around that exalted and well-fitted throne, their sight walled round by the projection of their wings, hiding their feet, backs and faces, and sending forth fearfully strong cries, do not think wings and feet, and that they are winged. For these are invisible powers. But [it is] on account of the unapproachability of their images, and the incomprehensibility of sitting near an actual throne. For indeed he is incomprehensible and unapproachable to them also, and yet he too condescended.”

19. Christ represented as an angel is a rare iconography based on Isaiah 9:6, “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given ... and his name shall be called the Angel of the Great Counsel (Μεγάλης Βουλῆς Ἀγγέλως), Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.” Christ in this guise is depicted winged, and unbearded, but with cross-nimbus or in a mandorla, thereby differentiating him from the heavenly host proper. On this iconography, see S. Der Nersessian, “Note sur quelques images se rattachant au thème du Christ-ange,” CA 13(1962):209–16; J. Meyendorff, “Iconographie de la Sagesse divine dans la tradition byzantine,” CA 10(1959):269, and also his “Wisdom–Sophia: Contrasting Approaches to a Complex Theme,” DOP 41(1987):391–401; and D.I. Pallas, “Ο Χριστός ὡς ἡ θεία Σοφία. Ἡ Εἰκονογραφικὴ Περιπέτεια μιᾶς θεολογικῆς Ἐννοιᾶς,” DChAE 15(1989–1990):127ff., 137ff.

The first extant representation of the winged John the Baptist is found at the church of Sv. Ahilije in Arlije from ca. 1296 (G. Millet, La peinture du moyen âge en Yougoslavie (Serbie, Macédonie et Monténégro), 4 vols. [Paris, 1954–1969] II: pl. 87.1; and RBK III:623ff.). The iconography may very well predate this representation, as Lossky points out instances of seventh-/eighth-century commentary on the angelic nature of John the Baptist. See L. Ouspensky and W. Lossky, The Meaning of the Icons (Boston, 1952) 108. The iconography has been examined by J. Lafontaine-Dosogne, “Une icône d’Angélos au Musée de Malines et l’iconographie du St Jean-Baptiste ailé,” Bulletin de Musées Royaux d’Art et d’Histoire 48(1976):121–44, and M. Bussagli, “Il Precursore. Giovanni l’angelo, martire della luce,” Abstracta 27(1988):23–29.

Rarely, the Virgin Mary may be depicted winged also, but this is generally late and developed perhaps under the influence of the iconography of the winged Christ; see RBK III:108. Furthermore, the Angeloi family in the Palaiologan period depicted themselves with wings on coins as a kind of heraldic emblem, and also perhaps to invoke angelic protection; see T. Bertelè, L’imperatore alato nella numismatica bizantina (Rome, 1951) 45ff.

Figure 3. Sarigüzel sarcophagus, Archaeological Museum, Istanbul (#5408), late fourth century. Photo: Istanbul Archaeological Museum.

casional need to distinguish these beings iconographically from humanity, including Christ incarnate, was important for the creation of angels' iconography. Angelic beings are distinct from, and servile to, Christ, and they do not participate in human nature. Consequently, the winged, anthropomorphic form became a unique sign for the innumerable, invisible entities that mediate between heaven and earth at God's behest.

The iconographic formulae used to depict angelic beings were derived from pagan models. An important example of this derivation is the late fourth-century Sarigüzel sarcophagus in the Archaeological Museum in Istanbul (fig. 3). It shows both the dependence of Christian angels on pagan figures, in particular winged victories, and also the distinctions between the Christian and pagan beings.²⁰ On the Sarigüzel sarcophagus, two flying male angels, clad in tunic and paludium, bear a wreath containing Christ's monogram ("XP"). The pagan iconography of two horizontal winged beings holding a wreath, medallion or inscribed plaque clearly motivated the disposition of the angels on the Sarigüzel sarcophagus. For instance, on a third-century sarcophagus from the via Aurelia Antica now in the Palazzo dei Conservatori, Rome, two winged female figures hover horizontally and hold a medallion between them in a manner common in pagan funerary art.²¹

20. See N. Firatli, La sculpture byzantine figurée au Musée Archéologique d'Istanbul (Paris, 1990) no. 81.

Nevertheless, individual elements used in depictions of Christian angels belie any generalizations about unmediated transmission of iconography from pagan to Christian art.²² Pagan figures, such as nikes and personifications, are invariably female; Christian angels, male. In Greek, “ho angelos” (ὁ ἄγγελος) is masculine in gender, a distinction always followed in iconography; hence the distinction in dress. The angels on the Sarigüzel sarcophagus wear tunic and pallium, while nikes wear the female peplos, and, in other cases, the chiton, occasionally with one breast exposed.²³

Gender and dress, therefore, constitute the essential identifying features for nike and angel, and the distinctions of nature and function are nowhere more evident than on monuments with both figures. The ivory leaf from the late fifth-/early sixth-century Barberini diptych (Louvre, Paris) shows a female, chiton-clad victory accompanying the emperor; in the register above, two male winged figures wearing tunic and pallium bear aloft a medallion containing the unbearded Christ (fig. 4).²⁴

The pagan iconography provided some of the meaning of the Christian iconography of victory proclaiming angels. The pagan nikes signal worldly acclaim and, in such contexts as the sarcophagus from the via Aurelia Antica, laud the achievements of the 21. See Berefelt, A Study on the Winged Angel, fig. 15.

22. For instance, O. Wulff, Altchristliche und byzantinische Kunst (Munich, 1914) 136; A. C. M. Beck, Genien und Niken als Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst (Giessen, 1936), and E. Panofsky, Tomb Sculpture. Its Changing Aspects from Ancient Egypt to Bernini, ed. H. W. Janson (London, 1964) 43–44: “Victories could become angels without changing in appearance.”

23. G. Stuhlfauth, Die Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst (Freiburg, 1897) 242ff.; K. Felis, “Die Niken und die Engel in altchristlicher Kunst,” RQ 26(1912):3–25; and see Bussagli, Storia degli angeli, 63ff. and 142ff.

24. See R. Delbrueck, Die Consulardiptychen und verwandte Denkmäler, 2 vols. (Berlin and Leipzig, 1929) I:188ff., II: pl. 48, and F. de’ Maffei, “Tradizione ed innovazione nei dittici eburnei: Giuliano, Pulcheria, Giustiniano,” Rivista degli Studi Orientali 40(1986):129ff. Pallados, writing ca. 400, implies a self-conscious, artistic coexistence for angels and nikes when he describes some painted, Christian nikes. See The Greek Anthology, ed. W. R. Paton, 5 vols. (London, 1927), V:282.

Figure 4. Barberini Diptych, Louvre, Paris, sixth century. Photo: Musée du Louvre.

deceased. In distinction, the Christian iconography attempted to demonstrate the universal claims of that faith. Winged angels demonstrate the metaphysical dimension of Christianity and, on the Sarigüzöl sarcophagus, its victory over death. The angels are the otherworldly heralds of the triumph of Christ throughout the universe and are the celestial counterparts to the saints on the end panels of that sarcophagus.

Other pagan personifications besides nikes played a role in the development of the iconography of Christian angels. A common iconographic feature to mark creatures that occupied the intermediate zone between the heavens and earth, wings were attributes of numerous personifications, such as winds, psychopompic figures, souls and astronomical symbols. Christian art assimilated this widespread motif to denote angels' immaterial and superhuman nature.²⁵ For example, set within a swirling carpet of fruits, plants and birds, four angels hold aloft a medallion containing the Lamb of God in the mosaic of the chancel vault of San Vitale (consecrated 548).²⁶ Although distinguished by gender and dress, the angels owe their disposition and activity to representations of seasons in late Roman art. For example, winged, female personifications of seasons are depicted in the Late Antique period in mosaics from Daphne, near Antioch, (fig. 5) and Halicarnassus.²⁷ These personifications of seasons, with

25. On this question of pagan winged beings generally, see the studies of Bussagli, Storia degli angeli, and "Gli angeli e i venti: considerazioni sul simbolismo aereo delle ali angeliche," Arte medievale 5(1991):107ff. Even birds may have influenced the iconography of the angels; and, in fact, bird-footed angels on a Palaiologan icon (#157) in the Byzantine Museum, Athens, show that an iconographic assimilation of birds and angels was at least possible. See M. G. Soteriou, "Ἀμιπρόσωπος εἰκὼν τοῦ Βυζαντινοῦ Μουσείου Ἀθηνῶν ἐκ τοῦ Ἰππεῖου," DChAE 4(1959):137, fig. 54.

26. See H. Maguire, Earth and Ocean. The Terrestrial World in Early Byzantine Art (University Park and London, 1987) 76ff.

27. W. R. Lethaby, "The Painted Book of Genesis in the British Museum," Archaeological Journal 69(1912):94, cites a mosaic of the four seasons from Halicarnassus in the British Museum that shows winged female figures wearing tunics; see R. P. Hinks, Catalogue of the Greek, Etruscan and Roman Paintings and Mosaics in the British Museum (London, 1933) 127ff. (#51 c-d). And for the fourth-century mosaic from Daphne, now in the Louvre, see A. Grabar, Early Christian Art. From the Rise of Christianity to the Death of Theodosius, trans. S. Gilbert and J. Emmons (New York, 1968) fig. 163. Seasons were also depicted as males in pagan art; on an early third-century sarcophagus (Landgrafmuseum, Cassel), and on a sarcophagus dating ca. 300–320 (Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.), the seasons are winged nude males. See, respectively, J. Godwin, Mystery Religions in the Ancient World, San Francisco, 1981, fig. 100, and G. M. A. Hanfmann, The Season Sarcophagus in Dumbarton Oaks, 2 vols. (Cambridge, Mass., 1951). Seasons became a significant element in Roman imperial art in the second century, when they were depicted as young males below the female Victories in the spandrels of the triumphal arch of Trajan at Benevento (114–18); see D. Kleiner, Roman Sculpture (New Haven and London, 1992) figs. 188, 189, and Hanfmann, The Season Sarcophagus, 1:171ff. Wings are found subsequently on personifications of seasons in the second century for the first time; Hanfmann, The Season Sarcophagus, 1:136. And since seasons are also found on sarcophagi from the second century on, an assimilation of arms raised to hold a medallion, clearly influenced the handling of the angels in the chancel vault at San Vitale. Based on this existing iconography, the angels within this area of the church form part of the nude male figures with the winged and clothed female victories, such as is found on Trajan's arch, may well have resulted in the Late Antique examples of personifications of time found at Aphrodisias, Halicarnassus and ultimately in the Cotton Genesis.

Figure 5. Mosaic of the Seasons, detail of Personification of Spring, from Daphne near Antioch, Louvre, Paris, early fourth century. Photo: Musée du Louvre.

the mosaic program in the sanctuary, the rule of Christ over the entire earth.

The dependence of the iconography of Christian angels on pagan models is complex, and certain pagan models maintained their identities in Christian art and did not influence the angels' iconography in any simple or direct manner. For example, the late fifth-century Cotton Genesis includes representations of both personifications and angels. Dress and gender distinguish the personifications of the days in the creation pages from the angels in such narrative scenes as Abraham entertaining the three angels.²⁸ The former are female and wear garlands in their hair and high girdled chitons that leave their arms bare; the angels in the Philoxenia, on the other hand, are male and wear purple and gold chlamys with a silver tablion over a white tunic.

Yet the identity of these winged figures in the creation pages is still debated by scholars. The figures are often called angels by scholars, despite the clear iconographic distinctions the illuminator made between the figures in the creation pages and in the narrative scenes; for this reason, it is useful to examine the literature on these figures to see the reasoning behind their designation as angels. In 1959, Marie-Thérèse D'Alverny published an article in which she examined the exegetical history of angels in creation, and discerned an affinity between the commentary of Augustine (354–430) on Genesis and the representations of the winged figures in the creation pages of the Cotton Genesis.²⁹ Augustine stated that the creation of light was also the moment of creation for the angels, and so the angels are intellectual creatures, days of creation in his view, who witness and glorify the creations of God. From this exegesis, D'Alverny hypothesized that the winged figures in the Cotton Genesis illuminations, 28. See K. Weitzmann and H. L. Kessler, The Cotton Genesis. British Museum Codex Cotton Otho B. VI (Princeton, 1986) 40, 48 (creation pages), 79–80 (Abraham).

Angels are depicted as men in the scene of Jacob's Dream in the third-century fresco in the synagogue at Dura Europos; as in the Cotton Genesis, the psyches are kept distinct from the angels iconographically as they are depicted as small winged females. See K. Weitzmann and H. L. Kessler, The Frescoes of the Dura Europos Synagogue and Christian Art (Washington, D.C., 1990) 17ff., fig. 10, and 135ff., fig. 178, respectively.

29. M.-Th. D'Alverny, "Les anges et les jours," CA 9(1957):271–300.

who increase in number according to the day of creation, find a direct parallel in this unique exegesis of Genesis by Augustine.³⁰ For this reason, she called them angels.

D'Alverny made an exhaustive survey of the textual tradition of creation and angels, but neglected to specify the iconographic precedents for the winged beings in the creation pages. Furthermore, she accepted the traditional provenance of the Cotton Genesis at Alexandria, and so ran aground on the relation of Augustinian exegesis to a Greek manuscript manufactured in Egypt. Maria Marini Clarelli has offered an hypothesis that attempts to reconcile this provenance with an exegetical tradition.³¹ She proposed that the winged females are angels assimilated to the iconography of pagan psyches; psyches in this view were a fundamental influence on the development of angels' iconography. The winged figures in these illustrations of the Cotton Genesis are, for this reason, depicted wearing chitons, unlike the standard angelic dress of dalmatian and pal-lium, in order to state iconographically the connection between soul and angel.³² However, psyches have butterfly wings in pagan iconography, and the winged figures in the Cotton Genesis creation pages have small sickle-shaped wings; the iconographic parallel is not, therefore, convincing.³³

30. References in D'Alverny, "Les anges et les jours," 273ff.

31. See M.V. Marini Clarelli, "I giorni della creazione nel 'Genesi Cotton,'" OCP 50(1984):65–93; and Bussagli, Storia degli angeli, 72ff.

32. Marini Clarelli, "I giorni della creazione nel 'Genesi Cotton,'" 83ff. She attributed this assimilation to exegesis current at Alexandria in the early Christian period, particularly that of Philo (ca. 20 B.C.E.–ca. 50 C.E.) and Clement (ca. 150–ca. 215). According to the exegesis of Clement of Alexandria, the souls of the just participate in a journey of progressive refinement that leads ultimately to an essential assimilation with the seven first-created angels.

33. An apparent strength of Marini Clarelli's hypothesis is a better contextualization of the manuscript in Alexandria, but Martin Büchsel has recently examined further the Augustinian exegesis on creation with regard to the Cotton Genesis. See M. Büchsel, "Die Schöpfungsmosaiken von San Marco. Die Ikonographie der Erschaffung des Menschen in der frühchristlichen Kunst," Städte-Jahrbuch n.s. 13(1991):29–80. Büchsel discerned elements in the creation cycle in the thirteenth-century mosaic program of San Marco, Venice, which is derived from the Cotton Genesis, that are found only in the work of Augustine; this extensive examination advances further the hypothesis of a connection between the Cotton Genesis and Augustine. He also proposed a provenance for the manuscript at Rome, thus taking away an important underpinning of Marini Clarelli's argument and adding strength to the original connection made between Augustine and the Cotton Genesis by D'Alverny. How-

While the manuscript was likely produced in Egypt, either at Alexandria or at Antinoë, the exegetical sources Marini Clarelli adduces have no discernible impact on the invention of the creation day pages.³⁴ Moreover, the iconographic parallels between pagan personifications of days and the winged figures in the creation pages are the most compelling. For example, a panel from a first-century (?) frieze in the north portico of the imperial Sebasteion at Aphrodisias in Asia Minor depicts a personification of Day (Ἡμέρα). The panel shows a woman clad in a high girdled chiton in a manner similar to the winged figures in the creation day pages of the Cotton Genesis.³⁵ The dress, wings and gender of these personifications show the best precedents for the winged figures in the creation day pages of the Cotton Genesis.³⁶ As the Cotton Genesis has other instances of classical borrowings, the most likely solution to the puzzle of the so-called “angels” is the simplest; pagan personifications of time were included to indicate the increase in days of creation as outlined in Genesis.³⁷ ever, the problem of a Greek manuscript produced at Rome but with palaeographic relations to Alexandria (as Büchsel admits) is not dissipated by Büchsel’s hypothesis that the manuscript was a gift from Leo the Great (d. 461) to a Byzantine emperor. The argument for Alexandrian origin, on palaeographic and iconographic grounds, is still the most compelling for this manuscript. See H. L. Kessler, Studies in Pictorial Narrative (London, 1994) 552.

34. See Weitzmann/Kessler, The Cotton Genesis, 30–31, who contend that palaeographic, stylistic and iconographic evidence points to either of these major Egyptian centers.

35. See K. T. Erim, Aphrodisias. Ein Führer durch die antike Stadt und das Museum, trans. E. Alföldi-Rosenbaum (Istanbul, 1990) fig. 90; and also his Aphrodisias. City of Venus-Aphrodite (New York and London, 1986) fig. p. 122; and R. R. R. Smith, “Myth and Allegory in the Sebasteion,” Aphrodisias Papers. Recent Work on Architecture and Sculpture, ed. C. Rouché and K. T. Erim (Ann Arbor, 1990) 89–92. On the iconography of Day, see Lexicon iconographicum mythologiae classicae (Zurich and Munich, 1981–) III, 1:774 (#276, #282), 781 (#299).

36. See K. Weitzmann, “Observations on the Cotton Genesis Fragments,” in Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al. (Princeton, 1955) 127, in which he played down the possibility of the personification of day affecting the manuscript; in “The Genesis Mosaics of San Marco and the Cotton Genesis Miniatures,” in O. Demus, The Mosaics of San Marco. Part 2: The Thirteenth Century. Volume One: Text (Chicago and London, 1984) 109, Weitzmann entertained Ἡμέρα as the more likely influence.

37. On other classical borrowings in the Cotton Genesis, see Weitzmann/Kessler, The Cotton Genesis, 38ff.

The figures in the creation pages of the Cotton Genesis are plainly different from the angels in the other illustrations of the manuscript, and the differences in identities signal to the viewer that a visual gloss is being made on the creation passages. The winged figures in the creation pages allow an indication of time, thereby revealing an ability on the part of the illuminator to express certain Christian concerns through a pagan iconography. Pagan personifications of time were not direct models for the iconography of angels since figures are differentiated in function and appearance in the Cotton Genesis. The distinctions used reveal that while the iconography of angels owed some debts to pagan models as at San Vitale, Christian painters also perceived differences in these figures and maintained these differences for specific narrative ends.³⁸

Despite the clear iconographic parallels between winged pagan beings and Christian angels, some scholars have sought the origins of the winged angel in a purely Christian context independent of pagan inspiration. In support of this opinion, Georg Stuhlfauth adduced as an early example a fifth-century ivory (Castello Sforzesco, Milan), which depicts a winged man and bull, symbols of the evangelists, hovering above an unwinged angel at the tomb of Christ (fig. 6).³⁹ He also cited the apse mosaic at Sta. Pudenziana, Rome, (401–417) in which evangelist symbols hover in the sky above Christ seated amongst his disciples. These two monuments were his primary pieces of evidence for the contention that the Christian iconography of winged angels was dependent on the evangelist symbol of the winged man.⁴⁰ However, chronology makes it difficult to support an

38. Hanfmann, The Season Sarcophagus, I:195ff., believed that little evidence existed for a true iconographic lineage from seasons to angels: “At most, we might allow that the tendency to conceive natural forces as angels and daimones, coupled with the use of pagan types of personifications for the visual rendering of these concepts, led to an art in which some of the long-winged Seasons have a generic resemblance to the Christian angels.”

39. Grabar, The Golden Age of Justinian, fig. 331, and Vollbach, Elfenbeinarbeiten, pl. 60 (#111).

40. Stuhlfauth, Die Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst, 244. The tetramorph cherubim of Ezekiel and Revelation initiated typological interpretation of the Gospels and Evangelists among Christian theologians. This symbolic affiliation of tetramorph and Gospels began as early as the second century; for instance, Irenaeus (ca. 130–ca. 200) wrote: “For the cherubim have four faces, and their faces are the images of the dispensation of the Son of independent development of this iconography since these earliest monuments are later than the fourth-century appearance of winged angels.⁴¹

Figure 6. The Tomb of Christ, upper register—Soldiers Asleep at the Tomb; lower register—Marys and Angel at Tomb. Ivory, Castello Sforzesco, Milan, fifth century. Photo: Foto Marburg/ Art Resource, N.Y.

Given the fragmentary quality of the archaeological record for this period, the hypothesis of a Christian invention of the iconography of the winged angel cannot be dismissed out of hand. Furthermore, scripture does provide the material for an association of man and wings, for instance in Ezekiel (1:5–6) and Revelation (4:7–8), and early exegetical identification of tetramorph and evangelists suggests—though by no means proves—an equally early appearance in art. Scripture mentions wings and flight at Exodus 25:20, Daniel 9:21, Revelation 14:6, for instance, and descriptions elsewhere make it clear that wings were means for mobility for the cherubim and seraphim. Wings were also symbols of God's unapproachability. For instance, Isaiah's seraphim use two of their wings for flying, and the other two pairs to cover their face and feet (Is. 6:1–3). And third- and fourth-century exegesis by theologians such as Tertullian (ca. 160–ca. 240)⁴² and Chrysostom makes it clear that Christians viewed and discussed wings as symbols of the God. The one like the lion indicates the efficacious, royal and authoritative nature. The one like the calf presents the sacerdotal and priestly nature. The manlike form depicts the incarnation, and the one like the eagle represents the visitation of the Holy Spirit." Trans. R. S. Nelson, The Iconography of the Prefaces in Byzantine Gospels (New York, 1980) 6. See also O. Wulff, Cherubim, Throne und Seraphim. Ikonographie der ersten Engelshierarchie in der christlichen Kunst (Altenburg, 1894) 8ff., 37ff.; M. de Grooth and P. van Moorsel, "The Lion, the Calf, the Man and the Eagle in Early Christian and Coptic Art," Bulletin Antieckie Beschaving 52/3(1977/8):233–45; M. Werner, "On the Origin of Zoanthropomorphic Evangelist Symbols: The Early Christian Background," Studies in Iconography 10(1984–1986): 1–35, and also "On the Origin of Zoanthropomorphic Evangelist Symbols: The Early Medieval and Later Coptic, Nubian, Ethiopian and Latin Evidence," ibid. 13(1989–1990): 1–47; and D. Kinney, "The Apocalypse in Early Christian Monumental Decoration," in The Apocalypse in the Middle Ages, ed. R. K. Emerson and B. McGinn (Ithaca and London, 1992) 200–16.

41. See Kinney, "The Apocalypse in Early Christian Monumental Decoration," 208ff.

42. Apologeticum adversus gentes pro Christianis, XXII, 8, in Tertulliani Opera. Pars I. Opera Catholica, Adversus Marcionem. Corpus Christianorum. Series Latina, vol. 1, ed. E. Dekkers (Turnhout, 1954) 129: "Every spirit is winged, both angels and demons. In this way, in a moment they are everywhere: all the world is for them one place; what is taking place everywhere is as easy for them to know as to tell. It is thought that their velocity is divine, because their substance is not known."

angels' transcendental nature.⁴³ These texts reveal that Christians were able to provide their own meanings to angels' wings, and they must have encouraged the manipulation of the iconography of pagan winged beings and made such an iconography acceptable in Christian contexts. In the final analysis, the evidence for a Christian invention of the winged angels is simply too scanty and the influence of pagan iconography too manifest for pagan art to be discounted as the primary model for angels.

Although the debt that Christian iconography owed pagan models is clear, Christian painters and mosaicists were able to judge the appropriateness of depictions of winged figures and did not simply absorb an existing iconography. The addition or omission of wings in depictions of angels in Christian art likewise reveals a symbolic quality of wings and the ability of these appendages to signal terrestrial or celestial modes or sites of activity. Anthropomorphic figures, winged or unwinged, could help express orthodox dogma, as well as Christian interpretations of scripture not overt in Hebrew scripture itself.

Christian painters and mosaicists sometimes contended with the problems of apprehension and description of angels in art, and in this way paralleled the attempts of theologians who were concerned with deciphering the meanings behind the obscure appearances of angels in scripture, particularly in the Hebrew Testament. The appearance of the angels of the Lord as "men" to Abraham (Gen. 18) has an important iconographic history from this point of view. Ambiguities present in the account are difficult to reconcile; within the same chapter, the angels are described as "men," "he" and the "Lord." The Greek fathers offered various interpretations of the puzzling appearance of the angels to Abraham at Mamre: simply as three angels, Christ and two angels, or as the Trinity itself.⁴⁴

43. See also Bussagli, Storia degli angeli, 57ff.; Stuhlfauth, Die Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst, 51ff.; Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie, ed. F. Cabrol and H. Leclercq (Paris, 1924–) I, 2:2080ff.; and the Martyrium Bartholomaei in Acta apostolorum apocrypha, ed. C. Tischendorf (Leipzig, 1861) 257.

44. See, for instance, Justin Martyr (ca. 100–ca. 165), Dialogus cum Tryphone Judaeo, 59, J. Archimbault, ed., Justin. Dialogue avec Tryphon, 2 vols. (Paris, 1909) 276, J. Goodspeed, Die ältesten Apologeten (Göttingen, 1915; rp. New York, 1950) 164; Athanasius (ca. 296–373), Orationes contra Arianos, PG 26:352AB; and Procopius of Gaza (ca. 475–ca. 538), Commen-

Painters and mosaicists also offered various visual interpretations of the true meaning behind this Old Testament epiphany. The first extant example of a representation of the epiphany to Abraham, a fresco in the fourth-century via Latina Catacomb in Rome, simply depicts three young men approaching the seated Abraham.⁴⁵ The painter did not overtly signal the identity of the three men by iconography or inscription. The angels are unwinged, in keeping with the earthly nature of their manifestation to Abraham. The viewer can interpret the fresco literally as describing in a direct fashion the three men who appeared to Abraham; on the other hand, the viewer can infer the spiritual nature of the visitors in the fresco through knowledge of scripture.

In contrast to this literal representation of the three men of the scriptural passage, the mosaicist at Sta. Maria Maggiore, Rome, (ca. 435) offered a more complicated visual exegesis. The middle angel appears in a transparent aureole of light that overlaps and excludes the two flanking angels. By singling out one figure as more powerful and divine than his companions, the mosaicist has signified a Christological interpretation of this epiphany.⁴⁶ The appearance of the “men” to Abraham and Sarah at Mamre is also a typology of the Annunciation to the Virgin. Traditionally, the scene in the upper left-hand portion of the arch mosaic has been interpreted as an Annunciation to the Virgin; in this scene, an angel descends from the sky to announce the news to an enthroned Mary. The angels flanking the Virgin and the angel descending are all shown winged, in distinction to the angels in the Philoxenia scene who are depicted without wings. In providing wings to the angels with the Virgin, the tarii in Genesim, XVIII, PG 87/1:364AB. These various interpretations have been examined more broadly by L. Thunberg, “Early Christian Interpretations of the Three Angels in Gen. 18,” Studia Patristica 8(1966):560–70.

45. See A. Ferrua, La pittura della nuova Catacomba di via Latina, Vatican City, 1960, fig. 24.

46. See C. Cecchelli, I mosaici della Basilica S. Maria Maggiore (Turin, 1956) pl. XV, O. Perler, “Les théophanies dans les mosaïques de Sainte-Marie-Majeure à Rome,” RivAC 50(1974):281ff., B. Brenk, Die frühchristliche Mosaiken in S. Maria Maggiore zu Rom (Wiesbaden, 1975) 108ff., and also W. Loerke, “Observations on the Representation of Doxa in the Mosaics of S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, and St. Catherine’s, Sinai,” Gesta 20(1981):18ff.

mosaicist signifies the overtly spiritual nature of this Annunciation and the eternal setting of the Virgin's court. In contrast, the wingless angels before Abraham and Sarah literally signal the terrestrial quality of that epiphany; the singling out of the central angel reveals that the latent meaning of this appearance is believed to lie in its prophecy of the coming of Christ.⁴⁷

Unlike the mosaicist of the Philoxenia at Sta. Maria Maggiore, the illustrator of the Cotton Genesis chose to depict the angels in the same scene with wings.⁴⁸ The wings, not mentioned in the account, signal to the viewer the identity of Abraham's visitors; believing his visitors to be simply three strangers, Abraham has not yet apprehended that they are angels. Again unlike the case at Sta. Maria Maggiore, the illuminator did not distinguish the angels one from another, and may have wished to express the Trinitarian symbolism often given the event by Christians. Indeed, this same typological interpretation determined other aspects of the manuscript's iconographic program, such as the portrayal of Christ as Logos in the creation pages; in orthodox belief, Christ is co-eternal and consubstantial with God and the Holy Spirit, and by showing Christ at creation, the illuminator stressed this crucial aspect of Trinitarian dogma.⁴⁹

These monuments do not trace a development of an iconography that becomes increasingly settled over the first centuries of Christian art. For example, the sixth-century mosaic of the Philoxenia at San Vitale, Ravenna, also depicts the angels as young, wingless men (fig. 7). The angels are represented seated at table and they indicate the repast Abraham has gathered. Coupled in the same lunette with a depiction of the sacrifice of Isaac, and placed opposite a mosaic of the sacrifices of Abel and Melchizedek, the depiction of the three 47. See S. Spain, "The Promised Blessing: The Iconography of the Mosaics of S. Maria Maggiore," ArtB 61(1979):518–40, especially 537ff.

48. Weitzmann/Kessler, The Cotton Genesis, 79–80.

49. See Weitzmann/Kessler, The Cotton Genesis, 37, and on the Trinitarian issues of the fourth and fifth centuries and art, see C. von Schönborn, L'icône du Christ. Fondements théologiques élaborées entre le Ier et le IIer Concile de Nicée (325–787) (Fribourg, 1976) 22ff.

Figure 7. Philoxenia of Abraham, Mosaic, S. Vitale, Ravenna, ca. 540. Photo: Alinari/Art Resource, N.Y.

men from heaven forms part of a program of eucharistic typology in the sanctuary of the church.⁵⁰

As these examples show, Christian painters and mosaicists determined the appropriateness of wings to represent the epiphany made to Abraham according to the context: they often manipulated iconographic elements in order to express specific interpretations of scriptural passages.⁵¹ In the context of the apse program at San Vitale, God's universal dominion is stated; and the attendance of spiritual servants, their spirituality and distinction from human nature signaled by their wings, is a sign of the all-embracing nature of that dominion. And above the apse, the winged angels on the arch further demonstrate the cosmic acclamation of Christ's rule. While these angels derive their wings and horizontal disposition from pagan triumphal imagery, the winged angels in the chancel vault form part of the program's symbolism of the extent of Christ's mastery over the earth; their wings and unworldly appearance symbolize the ubiquity of Christ's dominion. However, the angels in the Philoxenia scene are distinct from the eternal and metaphysical nature of these angels in the chancel vault, apse and on the principal arch. In contrast, they were depicted without wings, and this distinction provides the viewer with a clue as to the temporal nature of that epiphany. Possi-

50. RBK I:18, and O. von Simson, Sacred Fortress. Byzantine Art and Statecraft in Ravenna, 2d ed. (Chicago, 1976) 25. On the question of this scene's relation to the anti-Arian beliefs of the Byzantine conquerors, see R. Sörries, Die Bilder der Orthodoxen im Kampf gegen den Arianismus. Eine Apologie der orthodoxen Christologie und Trinitätslehre gegenüber der arianischen Häresie dargestellt an den ravenattischen Mosaiken und Bildern des 6. Jahrhunderts (Bern, 1983) 161ff. And on the iconography of the Trinity, see J. Engemann, "Zu den Dreifaltigkeit darstellungen der frühchristlichen Kunst: Gab es in 4. Jahrhundert anthropomorphe Trinitätsbilder?" JAC 19(1976):157–72.

51. Similarly, in the sixth-century Vienna Genesis, as well, the illustration of the calling of Abraham depicts a winged angel descending from the sky (fol. 11r), while Jacob wrestles with a wingless angel on another folio (24r). K. Clausberg, Die Wiener Genesis. Eine Kunstwissenschaftliche Bilderbuchgeschichte (Frankfurt am Main, 1984) 13, figs. 44 and 8, respectively.

It ought to be noted that the iconography of wingless angels is found as late as the Palaiologan period, for instance, in an icon of the Virgin and Child in the Museo di San Giorgio degli Greci in Venice, in which a group of wingless angels clusters in the upper left corner. See N. V. Drandakes, "Παλαιολόγειος εικὼν Βρεφοκρατοῦσης τοῦ εἰς Βενετίου Ἑλληνικοῦ ναοῦ, Θεολογία 28(1957):244, figs. 1, 2 and 5.

bly as foreshadowings of the Trinity and the eucharistic sacrifice, the Philoxenia is depicted literally. The scene's latent meanings are not indicated by the iconographic attributes of the other angels' transcendental guise. The program at San Vitale demonstrates that different modes of presentation of angels can describe their changeable nature and areas of activity.

The iconography of the winged youth, used in these cases just discussed to symbolize otherworldly nature and activity, was used for other angelic beings as well. Scripture mentions other angelic creatures besides archangels and angels, and these led to the depiction of other ranks of an angelic hierarchy.⁵² Yet, because of the lack of full descriptions in scripture of the members of this hierarchy, the iconography of the winged youth was employed to represent any angelic being. The use of this symbolic iconography must have originated at an early point in the creation of a Christian iconography of angels. Methodius of Olympus (d. ca. 311) provided a precedent for extant representations in his description of an image figured with "likenesses fashioned from gold of his angels, who are the Principalities and the Powers, [which] we make in honour and faith in him."⁵³ Paralleling Methodius' description, examples of images survive in which the winged youth serves as a sign for different angelic orders. A seventh-century Constantinopolitan cameo (#119) from the collection of Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C., bears the inscription "ΕΞΟΥΧΙΕ" ("Powers"), and depicts two winged men (fig. 8).⁵⁴

52. See Colossians 1:16 and Ephesians 1:21. Scripture mentions nine orders in total: seraphim (Is. 6), cherubim (Gen. 3:24, Ex. 25:22), thrones (Col. 1:16), virtues (Eph. 1:21), dominations, principalities, powers (Eph. 1:21, Col. 1:16), archangels (1 Thess. 4:16, Jude 9), angels (Gen. 16:7, for example).

53. Preserved in the writings of John of Damascus, Orationes de imaginibus tres, III. 138, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III Contra imaginum calumniatores orationes tres, PTS vol. 17, ed. P.B. Kotter (Berlin, 1975) 200.

54. M. C. Ross, Catalogue of the Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Antiquities in the Dumbarton Oaks Collection. Volume One. Metalwork, Ceramics, Glass, Glyptics, Painting (Washington, D.C., 1962) 98–99, fig. 57. This iconography continues to be used throughout the Byzantine period. For example, among the fifteenth-century frescoes of the church of the Metropolitan at Mistra, the angelic orders are collectively described by winged men, that is, the angel type; see G. Millet, Monuments byzantins de Mistra (Paris, 1910) pl. 64.1.

Figure 8. Two winged men
inscribed “ΕΞΟΥCΙΕ” (“Powers”), Constantinopolitan cameo, Dumbarton Oaks,
Washington, D.C., seventh century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

Faced with a lack of scriptural description—as only the existence of this rank is mentioned—the engraver fell back on this iconography of the winged man; skirting any iconographic complexity or difficulty, the winged man stands in as a generic type.

The mosaics in the bema arch of the destroyed church of the Dormition at Nicaea (Iznik) were an example of this generic iconography of the winged youth within a full-scale program. These original mosaics of the angels have been dated to the late sixth and seventh centuries.⁵⁵ Although the inscriptions state that the figures represented different orders of the angelic hierarchy, the Principalities, Virtues, Dominations and Powers, mentioned together at

55. Fernanda de' Maffei hypothesized that the angelic powers belonged to a different mosaic phase than the Virgin and Child and that they date stylistically to the late sixth century. For this dating, she sought support in the stylistic analysis of G. de Francovich, “I mosaici del bema della chiesa della Dormizione di Nicea,” in Scritti di storia dell'arte in onore di Lionello Venturi, 2 vols. (Rome, 1956) I: 3–27. She conjectured that the mosaics had been covered during Iconoclasm, not erased as is generally thought, and the repair evident is not connected to the restoration of images in 843. See F. de' Maffei, “L'Unigenito consostanziale al Padre nel programma trinitario dei perduti mosaici del bema della Dormizione di Nicea e il Cristo trasfigurato del Sinai I,” Storia dell'arte 45(1982):91ff., and also her Icona, pittore e arte al Concilio Niceno II (Rome, 1974) 99ff. However, the restorations apparent in the areas around the angels and the replacing of the cross in the apse likely belong to the same phase, Colossians 1:16, the angelic beings were depicted as identical winged youths wearing the loros and carrying orbs and standards (figs. 9, 10). Scripture is the primary source for revelation of these divine beings but only the existence of the angels, the Principalities, Virtues, Dominations and Powers, are attested in scripture, not any of their individual qualities. Lacking specific scriptural description, the mosaicists repeated the iconographic type, the winged youth. The angels are nominally different from one another but they share the same nature generally, and they are visually indistinguishable from one another.

Other angelic powers are also represented by an anthropomorphic figure with wings, even the cherubim and seraphim for which extensive scriptural descriptions could be drawn upon. Passages describing the Ark of the Covenant and the Solomonic Temple provide information on representations of cherubim (for example, Ex. 37:7–9, I Kings 6:23–28, Ez. 41:18–20); and the prophets' visions supplied long, if obscure, descriptions of angels. Yet anthropomorphism was used in early Byzantine art to represent these angelic beings in contradiction of scriptural accounts of these angels' appearances. For example, in the sixth-century Vienna Genesis (fol. 2v), a winged man represents the cherubim guarding the gates of paradise with a flaming sword (Gen. 3:24); this winged man diverges from Ezekiel's full description of the cherubim as a six-winged tetramorph (1:4–28, probably post 843, paid for by the otherwise unknown Naukratios, as stated in an inscription between the two angels on the south bema arch.

The precise date of the original foundation by Hyacinthos is not settled. Most scholars prefer the late seventh/early eighth century for the construction of the church and, following this, the mosaics in the apse area. See F.I. Schmit, Die Koimesis-Kirche von Nikaia, das Bauwerk und die Mosaiken (Berlin and Leipzig, 1927), U. Peschlow, "Neue Beobachtungen zur Architektur und Ausstattung der Koimesiskirche in Iznik," Istanbuler Mitteilungen 22(1972):145–87, and C. Barber, "The Koimesis Church, Nicaea: The Limits of Representation on the Eve of Iconoclasm," JöB 41(1991):43–60. However, arguments have been made, through comparisons of sculptural decoration in the church, that the foundation dates to the second half of the sixth century. See C. Barsanti, "Una nota sulle sculture del Tempio di Giacinto nella Chiesa della Dormizione (Koimesis) di Iznik-Nicea," Storia dell'arte 46(1982):210–18, and C. Mango, Byzantine Architecture (London, 1986) 90. Mango has added his voice more recently to the number of scholars who call for a date around 700. See his "Notes d'épigraphie et d'archéologie: Constantinople, Nicée," TM 12(1994):350ff.

Figure 9. Angelic Powers, south side, Bema Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea), ninth century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

10:12).⁵⁶ And, despite Isaiah's revelation (6:1–3), the seraphim were also depicted as winged men in early representations, for example,

56. This anthropomorphic iconography never entirely disappears; see the thirteenth-century sculpted façade of the Church of Hagia Sophia, Trebizond, where an anthropomorphic cherubim guards paradise. See D. Talbot Rice et al., The Church of Hagia Sophia at Trebizond (Edinburgh, 1968) 48, pl. 17d.

Figure 10. Angelic Powers, north side, Bema Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea), ninth century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

on the entrance gate at the fifth-century complex at Alahan in Seleucia in southeast Asia Minor.⁵⁷

57. See Mary Gough, ed., Alahan. An Early Christian Monastery in Southeastern Turkey (Toronto, 1985) 87ff., pl. 20.

Ninth-century examples include the illustration of the appearance of the seraphim as a winged youth to Isaiah in the Vatican “Cosmas Indicopleustes” (Vat. gr. 699, fol. 72v). See

The most exalted members of the hierarchy, the cherubim and seraphim, were most often depicted in Early Christian and Byzantine art in liturgical contexts. Occasionally represented in symbolic form as winged men, despite clear and distinct descriptions in scripture for each creature, cherubim and seraphim also diverge iconographically from scriptural accounts. Christian artists and theologians often used the visions of cherubim and seraphim to express eschatological and cosmological themes. The earliest depiction of the seraphim and the tetramorph cherubim, the fifth-/sixth-century apse mosaic in the church of Hosios David, Thessalonike, conflates the visions of Ezekiel's cherubim (1:4–28, 10:12), Isaiah's seraphim (6:1–3) and the six-winged creatures of Revelation (4:2–10).⁵⁸ Christ appears in a mandorla, supported by the four creatures of Ezekiel and Revelation. The four beasts each have wings with many eyes; yet no fiery wheels are depicted, while the inscription in the scroll held by Christ quotes Isaiah 25:9.⁵⁹ Christa Ihm has called this iconography at Hosios David the liturgical maiestas.⁶⁰

Topographie chrétienne, SC vols. 141, 159, 197, ed. W. Wolska-Conus (Paris, 1968–1973) II:249. See, too, the Reliquary of the True Cross, from Limburg an-der-Lahn, dating in its last reworking to 963, on which the iconography of the four-winged cherubim and the six-winged seraphim applies respectively to the principalities and powers. See J. Rauch, “Die Limburger Staurothek,” Das Münster 8(1955):201ff., especially figs. 5, 16–18, and J.M. Wilm, ibid., 234ff., and H. Wilsdorf, “Zur Staurothek vom Limburg,” BF 18(1992): 197–208. de’ Maffei, “L’Unigenito consustanziale,” 100 n52, cites Gregory of Nyssa on the identification of thrones and powers with seraphim and cherubim (Refutatio confessionis Eunomii, PG 45:556C).

58. See C. Ihm, Die Programme der christlichen Apsismalerei vom vierten Jahrhundert bis zur Mitte des achten Jahrhunderts (Wiesbaden, 1960) 42ff. On the establishment of the Book of Revelation in the eastern Church, see G. Galavaris, The Illustrations of the Prefaces in Byzantine Gospels (Vienna, 1979) 48, especially n49. On Hosios David, see Ihm, Die Programme, 182–84, pl. XIII, 1, and T.F. Mathews, The Clash of Gods. A Reinterpretation of Early Christian Art, rev. ed. (Princeton, 1999) 115ff.

59. The fifth-/seventh-century fresco in the apse niche of Chapel XXVI, Bawīt, also reveals elements of each of these three visions; although the depiction conforms generally to Ezekiel's vision, the cherubim have six wings, one face, and many eyes as in Isaiah and Revelation, rather than Ezekiel's four-winged, four-faced creatures with hands and feet. See Ihm, Die Programme, 202–203, pl. XIII, 2. And in the Monastery of Dodo, David-Garedja, Georgia, dating to the seventh/ninth century, two archangels, Michael and Gabriel, flank the enthroned Christ, while two tetramorphs hover underneath. The tetramorphs have four faces and four wings, and they are standing on fiery wheels, referring to Ezekiel, while a Trisagion inscription recalls Isaiah and the liturgy. See Ihm, Die Programme, pl. XIV, 2, and

The Trisagion, the “Holy, holy, holy” chanted by the seraphim in Isaiah (6:3) and Revelation (4:8), influenced the representations of cherubim and seraphim in artistic milieux strongly influenced by liturgical practice.⁶¹ The liturgy also encouraged a certain amount of

A. Alpag0-Novello et al., Art and Architecture in Medieval Georgia, trans. N. Holloway (Louvain-la-Neuve, 1980) 88, figs. 94, 95. And in the crucifixion in the apse of Sta. Maria Antiqua, Rome (705–707), the cherubim and seraphim are identical in that they both have six wings and stand on flaming wheels; see P. Romanelli and P.J. Nordhagen, S. Maria Antiqua (Rome, 1964) pls. 22, 23.

In the period following Iconoclasm, the liturgical maiestas remained popular, particularly in the monastic setting of the churches of Cappadocia. The fresco in the prothesis apse of the New Church at Tokali Kilise, dating from the middle of the tenth century, is typical of this Cappadocian iconography. See A. Wharton Epstein, Tokali Kilise. Tenth-century Metropolitan Art in Byzantine Cappadocia (Washington, D.C., 1986) 68–69, figs. 102, 103. Christ sits enthroned in the middle of the apse, and he is flanked by two pairs of fiery wheels, a seraphim, a cherubim, and two Archangels, Michael and Gabriel. On either side of Christ is an inscription based on the liturgy, “Holy, holy, holy Lord / of Hosts, Heaven and earth are filled with your glory.” The depictions of the seraphim and cherubim generally follow scripture. The seraphim, to Christ’s right, has six eyeless wings, the face of a man in the center of the wings, and hands and feet protruding from the wings; the cherubim has the heads of an ox and a lion to either side, and a man’s head in the middle of four many-eyed wings. Inscriptions above the seraphim and cherubim provide apocalyptic titles for the beasts, also used in the liturgy, “bellowing” (ΒΩΝΤΑ) and “calling” (ΚΕΛΕΤΟΝΤΑ), which are associated with the ox and man figures, respectively.

On the liturgy and the references to the apocalyptic beasts, see F.E. Brightman, “The Historia Mystagoga and Other Greek Commentaries on the Byzantine Liturgy,” JTS 9(1908):248–67, 387–97; G. de Jerphanion, “Les noms des quatre animaux et le commentaire liturgique de Pseudo-Germain,” in his Les voix des monuments. Notes et études d’archéologie chrétienne (Paris, 1930) 250–59; A. Wharton Epstein, “The Problem of Provincialism: Byzantine Monasteries in Cappadocia and Monks in South Italy,” Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 42(1979):39–40; and Galavaris, The Illustrations of the Prefaces in Byzantine Gospels, 86ff.

60. Mathews has raised objections about the imperial connotations of the term maiestas, but the liturgical function is stressed here, not the pagan antecedents of the iconography. See Mathews, The Clash of Gods, 117.

61. André Grabar noted examples, on the other hand, where Christ is enthroned, with the Trisagion printed on the pages of the book he holds; the cherubim and seraphim are not present in these examples. Grabar stresses the importance of theophanic vision, rather than of liturgical texts, in the formation of the iconography of the maiestas. See Martyrium. Recherches sur le culte des reliques et l’art chrétien antique, 2 vols. (Paris, 1943–1946; rp. London, 1972) II:306ff. Yet the number of examples cited above indicate that liturgy also played a fundamental part in the formation of this iconography.

The Trisagion appears to be a very early element in piety and liturgy. See V. Saxer, “Jalons pour servir à l’histoire du culte de l’archange Saint Michel en orient jusqu’à l’iconoclasm,” in Noscere sancta. Miscellanea in memoria di Agostino Amore (Rome, 1985) 362–63; and, more comprehensively, B.D. Sparks, The Sanctus in the Eucharistic Prayer (Cambridge, 1991).

confusion of these two angelic ranks. For example, Christ is addressed in the liturgy:

... for before thee stand thy two living creatures honourable exceedingly, the sixwinged and manyeyed, seraphim and cherubim, with two wings covering their faces by reason of thy godhead which none can gaze on nor comprehend, and with twain covering their feet, with twain also flying. . . .⁶²

The liturgy of John Chrysostom, which mentions “the cherubim, the seraphim, six-winged and many-eyed” (τὰ Χερουβὶμ καὶ τὰ Σεραφίμ, ἑξαπτέρυγα, πολυόμματα), may also have contributed to the iconographic confusion of seraphim and cherubim, and artists often represented the cherubim and seraphim in identical fashion, with six, many-eyed wings.⁶³

Liturgy, therefore, influenced the development of the Christian iconography of these angelic beings, and furthermore encouraged

62. Translation from F.E. Brightman, Liturgies Eastern and Western, Vol. 1 (Oxford, 1896), 175. And see also the Historia ecclesiastica, a liturgical commentary written by the Patriarch Germanus (ca. 634–ca. 733): “You who sit upon the cherubim, manifest yourself to us” (Brightman, “The Historia Mystagoga,” 387).

63. J. Goar, Euchologion sive rituale graecorum (Venice, 1730; rp. Graz, 1960) 61; Brightman, Liturgies Eastern and Western, 385; Wulff, Cherubim, Throne und Seraphim, 19ff.; RBK III:84.

For example, one must look ahead to the early tenth-century chapel (#3) at Güllü Dere, which contains a composite representation in the apse of visions of the seraphim, cherubim and tetramorphs, deriving from Isaiah, Ezekiel, Daniel and Revelation. The program includes two tetramorphs (ΠΟΛΥΩΜΜΑΤΟΝ [sic]), with eye-filled wings, flanking Christ who is enthroned in a mandorla held by the four beasts of Ezekiel and Revelation; two seraphim (ΕΞΑΠΤΕΡΥΤΟΝ) meanwhile give Isaiah and Ezekiel a coal and a book, respectively, to eat. Both of these seraphim have six many-eyed wings. See J. Lafontaine-Dosogne, “Théophanie-visions auxquelles participent les prophètes dans l’art byzantin après la restauration des images,” in Synthronon. Art et archéologie de la fin de l’Antiquité et du Moyen Âge (Paris, 1968) 138ff.; D.I. Pallas, “Eine Differenzierung unter den himmlischen Ordnungen (Ikonographische Analyse),” BZ 44(1971):55–60; and N. Thierry, Haut moyen-âge en Cappadoce. Les églises de la région de Çavuşin (Paris, 1983) 126ff., and pls. 52, 53.

A six-winged tetramorph guards paradise in the ninth-century Paris Gregory; L. Brubaker, Vision and Meaning in Ninth-Century Byzantium. Image as Exegesis in the Homilies of Gregory of Nazianzus (Cambridge, 1999) fig. 10, and also 282–83. This iconography of a tetramorph with an extra pair of wings is not uncommon; see Wulff, Cherubim, Throne und Seraphim, 32ff.

the iconography's dissemination. Neither Pseudo-Dionysius's speculations on the angelic hierarchy nor the increasing interest in the cherubim found in the contra Judaeos literature reveal any direct influence on the iconography of these beings.⁶⁴ Extant representations of cherubim and seraphim betray direct inspiration from liturgical descriptions. Because of this influence, mixing of the iconography of cherubim and seraphim is the rule by the Middle Byzantine period, and differentiation of the angelic beings is often possible only through inscriptions.⁶⁵ The iconography was, in fact, never settled, and this ambiguity indicates that the patrons and artists did not always see the need to distinguish the beings.

In pre-Iconoclastic art, style was a notable expression of iconographic meaning.⁶⁶ The manipulation of style by Christian painters, mosaicists and sculptors has particular interest in this context as style came to be an important means to communicate the difficult nature of angels. If pagan art provided antecedents for the creation of a Christian iconography of angels, it also furnished diverse stylistic modes.⁶⁷ In particular, stylistic analyses show that in the period before Iconoclasm painters and mosaicists used a more naturalistic "classical" style to indicate the distinct qualities of angels.

An examination of the icon of the Virgin and Child flanked by Saints Theodore and George in the Monastery of St. Catherine at Sinai (sixth/seventh century) reveals stylistic distinctions in the de-

64. The influence of the theological work of Pseudo-Dionysius is clearly perceptible in texts that discuss images in the period before Iconoclasm and is equally prevalent throughout the writings of iconophiles. The cherubim, as cited in the contra Judaeos literature, assumed an equally important place in iconophile theory. Both of these topics are treated in chapter 3.

65. For instance, it is unclear in the fourteenth-century mosaics whether the pendentives of the central dome of Hagia Sophia in Istanbul represented seraphim or cherubim. Although these creatures had six wings, neither the number of wings nor even the presence and absence of wings can be relied upon for general identification. On these mosaics, see C. Mango, Materials for the Study of the Mosaics of St. Sophia at Istanbul (Washington, D.C., 1962) 83ff.; and on this issue of confusion, see Wulff, Cherubim, Throne und Seraphim, 26ff., and RBK III:85.

66. See, for instance, Weitzmann/Kessler, The Cotton Genesis, 32ff., and also E. Kitzinger, Byzantine Art in the Making (London, 1977).

67. See O. J. Brendel, Prolegomena to the Study of Roman Art (New Haven and London, 1979) 125ff., on the use of disparate styles within the same monument in Roman art.

piction of angels and humans that communicate the dissimilar natures of these different categories of beings (fig. 11).⁶⁸ Ernst Kitzinger has considered the stylistic treatment of the angels on the icon who stand behind the Virgin's throne and look over their shoulders at the descent of the Holy Spirit. His interpretation stresses the use of "hellenistic" survivals in the handling of the angels, and the rift between angelic and human natures that this hellenistic style expresses.

At times it appears as though a bold, sketchy manner were, so to speak, in the nature of an "iconographic attribute" of angels. An obvious explanation is that it was a means of expressing the fact that they belong to a different order of beings, that they are incorporeal, ἀσώματοι. Hellenistic pictorial technique in these cases serves as a means not of actualizing physical, but of accentuating spiritual existence.⁶⁹

68. K. Weitzmann, The Monastery of Saint Catherine at Mount Sinai. The Icons. Volume One: From the Sixth to the Tenth Century (Princeton, 1976) 18ff., and pls. IV, V, VI, XLIII, XLIV, XLV, XLVI.

69. Kitzinger, "Byzantine Art in the Period between Justinian and Iconoclasm," in Berichte zum XI. Internationalen Byzantinischen-Kongress, München, 1958 (Munich, 1958) 47. See also his "On Some Icons of the Seventh Century," in Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al. (Princeton, 1955) 134, on the seventh-century fragment of the head of an angel from Sta. Maria Antiqua, Rome. See also H. Maguire, The Icons of Their Bodies. Saints and Their Images in Byzantium (Princeton, 1996) 70–71.

Andrei Cornea offers a complementary interpretation of the meaning of style in this image. See A. Cornea, "On 'Fiction' and 'Authenticity' in Byzantine Pre-Iconoclastic Painting," Revue roumaine d'histoire de l'art 17(1980):6. Cornea questions the assumption that communicating a sense of life and motion is the aim of the "hellenistic pictorial technique" in the depiction of angels. Cornea proposes two different modes of depiction that he calls "a symbol-image based on fiction" and "a history-image based on truth." The Virgin and Child and the saints are depicted in a frontal, hierarchic manner to indicate their essential historicity; this abstract manner is in direct opposition to the fictional, illusionistic depiction of the angels, which signifies their incomprehensibility. For Cornea, artists used this "hellenistic" manner because, "the naturalistic style could automatically awake in the spectators' minds the stereotypic link, indicating that the image was a fiction lacking a real bodily model, as the statues of gods were, according to the Christians, mere fictions having no anthropomorphic referent they could imitate" (ibid., 7). In other words, the fictional quality of naturalistic depiction of the angels is not an "iconographic attribute" for Cornea, but rather a "classification-index" that warns that any relation to reality is purely coincidental. See also the remarks of Belting, Bild und Kult, 148ff.

Figure 11. Icon of the Virgin and Child, flanked by Saints Theodore and George, Monastery of St. Catherine at Sinai, sixth/seventh century. Reproduced through the courtesy of the Michigan–Princeton–Alexandria Expedition to Mount Sinai.

According to this interpretation, the viewer must make a judgment on the distinct handling of the angels compared to the other figures on this icon, and discern differences in nature from differences in style. The delicate handling of the angels' features and their believable turning, even in the small space allowed, distinguishes the angels from the hieratic figures of the saints; as opposed to these static saints, the central figures of the Virgin and Child in the foreground appear more animated, less frontal, and thus more dynamically alert than the mortal saints to the descending Holy Spirit. Ultimately, analysis reveals that, in this case, the relatively naturalistic depiction of the angels has a paradoxical ability to indicate to the viewer a nature different from that of humanity.

In the hands of painters and mosaicists, style continued throughout the Early and Middle Byzantine periods to be a means of establishing a distinction between human and angelic nature. Two examples of middle Byzantine images reveal that a different style was, in fact, used to represent angels for different ends. For instance, Henry Maguire has contrasted the ninth-century mosaic of the Archangel Gabriel, found in the bema arch of Hagia Sophia, Constantinople, with the Virgin and Child in the apse (figs. 12, 13): "the bodies of the archangels in heaven tended to be rendered as flat and without modeling, because of their lack of materiality."⁷⁰ In the mosaic, the Archangel is set within a gold field that dematerializes his form, and his robes are unmodeled sheets, unrevealing of any substantial form beneath. In contrast, the faces of the Virgin and Child in the apse are naturalistically formed, and they are fashioned three-dimensionally, settled coherently on a substantial throne.

The angels are depicted in an abstract manner to denote the impalpable quality of the heavenly realm; conversely, a more naturalistic style in representations is the complement of angelic activity on earth. An example contemporary with the bema mosaic of Hagia Sophia in Constantinople is a depiction of the epiphany of the seraphim to Isaiah in the Vatican “Cosmas” (fig. 14).⁷¹ In contrast to the stationary, flat seraphim flanking Christ, the human, winged seraphim is clearly occupying a different sphere; the single seraphim strides toward Isaiah in a lively manner, and his torso bends at the waist as his outstretched hand inserts the coal into Isaiah’s mouth. The stylistic distinction between the celestial activities of the seraphim and their rare manifestations on earth is convincingly conveyed by the illusionistic handling of the appearance of the angel before Isaiah, distinct from the seraphim hieratically flanking Christ.

70. "Style and Ideology in Byzantine Imperial Art," Gesta 28(1989):223. The dating of the apse mosaics at Hagia Sophia to the ninth century is not uncontested; for an alternate view, see N. Oikonomidès, "Some Remarks on the Apse Mosaics of St. Sophia," DOP 39(1985):111–15.

Painters and mosaicists continued to be able to indicate through style the qualities of angels’ nature, as well as their mode of activity. The illustration of Isaiah’s epiphany in the Vatican “Cosmas” is particularly telling because iconography and style work in unison to suggest the earthly and unearthly activities of formless beings. On earth, the seraphim can take on a guise different from their heavenly “form,” and the difference between the seraphim’s anthropomorphism and their many-winged form reveals their fluid formlessness. Iconography can, therefore, distinguish modes of activity in the same illustration, while abstract and naturalistic styles further demonstrate the angels’ different capacities, both attendance in heaven and service on earth.

A more classical modeling can be employed after the ninth century, just the same, to show the earthly movement and work of the angels. Kurt Weitzmann has described the twelfth-century icon of the miracle of the Archangel Michael at Chonae from the Monastery of St. Catherine, Mount Sinai (fig. 15), as an example of classical modeling indicating corporeality and immediacy:

[Michael is] rendered as a youth of Apollonian beauty, gracious in the movement of the body which is shown in full plasticity under a garment which, in classical fashion, clings to the body and whose folds combine a rhythmic flow with modeling power.⁷²

71. See Topographie chrétienne, ed. Wolska-Conus, II: 249.

72. See K. Weitzmann, “The Classical in Byzantine Art as a Mode of Individual Expression,” in Byzantine Art. An European Art. Lectures (Athens, 1966) 166–67 [= K. Weitzmann, Studies in Classical and Byzantine Manuscript Illumination, ed. H. L. Kessler (Chicago, 1971) 166–67].

Figure 12. Archangel Gabriel, Mosaic, Bema arch, Hagia Sophia, Istanbul, ninth century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

In contrast, cordoned by the ropery water descending, the bantam hermit opposite Michael is insubstantial and hidden within the monastic carapace. The fuller angelic corporeality, perhaps an oxy-moron, lends a sense of presence and actuality, while the self-denial practiced so arduously by the hermit effaces his physical being. The two fields denoted by the joining streams in the middle therefore create two areas of existence, the angelic one occupied by a full-bodied angel and the mortal one almost evacuated by the dematerializing body of the hermit.

Figure 13. Virgin and Child, Apse Mosaic, Hagia Sophia, Istanbul, ninth century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

This brief examination of representation of angels in the early Christian and Byzantine periods has revealed only an occasional engagement on the part of mosaicists, painters and sculptors with issues of nature and identity in art. The issues were never resolved as the subjects, that is the angels, were not open to autopsy by artists, since knowledge of angels was derived primarily through descriptions of their enigmatic epiphanies in scripture. Because of the distance of these subjects, painters, mosaicists and sculptors were forced to sidestep problems of making apprehensible something only partially seen and known in the past. Their circumvention of real description is most clearly evident in the straightforward use of an anthropomorphic form for angels. Evidently, the artist was abdicating responsibility for describing nature or identity and was placing the burden of recognizing the being depicted on the shoulders of the viewer. The iconography of the angels is only, then, occasionally complex in its exegesis of spiritual nature and appearances as in the important series of scenes describing the Philoxenia. This series shows that painters and mosaicists—or programmers—recognized the enigmatic quality of the event and attempted to indicate this quality through the description of the “men” as winged or unwinged.

Figure 14. Vision of Isaiah, The Christian Topography of “Cosmas Indicopleustes,” Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, gr. 699, fol. 72v, ninth century. Photo: Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana.

Figure 15. Icon of the Miracle at Chonae, Monastery of St. Catherine at Sinai, twelfth century. Reproduced through the courtesy of the Michigan–Princeton–Alexandria Expedition to Mount Sinai.

Wings were used throughout as the primary means to communicate the symbolic nature of the iconography of angels. Color and cloud were also used to indicate the fire and wind composition of angels that scripture prescribed but these solutions were not common.⁷³ Preeminently, the winged youth is an expansive iconography that is allusive to all angels, corresponding to the semantic range of the word “angelos” (ἄγγελος), and not descriptive in any essential way of their nature or appearance. Theological writings furthermore show that Christians generally interpreted angelic epiphany as dissimulation, unrelated to the true nature and form of angels.⁷⁴ In the same way, visual representations are allusions to this angelic dissimulation, and the apparently straightforward representation of winged anthropomorphic figures paradoxically signifies the angels' multi-form constitution.

73. For instance, a sixth-century mosaic in the Church of St. Demetrius in Thessalonike shows an angel seamlessly emerging from a cloud; the mosaic does not correspond to any episode in the surviving hagiographic narratives, although it may depict the martyrdom of the saint. See R. Cormack, Writing in Gold. Byzantine Society and Its Icons (London, 1985) 79–80, fig. 22; Bussagli, Storia degli angeli, 97ff. Christian painters, mosaicists and sculptors also attempted to indicate the fiery quality of angels iconographically. For example, an early sixth-century mosaic in the church of San Apollinare Nuovo, Ravenna, represents Christ as the shepherd and judge of Matthew 25. Two standing angels flank the seated Christ, one of whom is red, denoting fire and light, while the other is cobalt blue, denoting the tenebrous nature of a fallen angel. See E. Kirschbaum, “L’angelo rosso e l’angelo turchino,” RivAC 17(1940):209–48, and G. Bovini, Mosaici di S. Apollinare di Ravenna: Il ciclo cristologico (Florence, 1958) 37ff., fig. 4, pl. X. And at Sta. Maria Maggiore, Rome, the hands, feet and faces of the angels are depicted “meravigliosamente rosso” in the fifth-century mosaics; see Kirschbaum, “L’angelo rosso e l’angelo turchino,” 215, C. Cecchelli, I mosaici della Basilica S. Maria Maggiore (Turin, 1956) pls. XLIX, LIII, and Grabar, The Golden Age of Justinian, figs. 157, 161, 162. And, more generally, see A. Petzold, “‘His Face Like Lightning’: Colour as Signifier in Representations of the Holy Women at the Tomb,” Arte medievale 6/2(1992): 149–55.

74. For instance, Basil of Caesarea wrote, “For just as the brand is known through the fire, the one the underlying matter, the other the fire; so with the heavenly powers, they are in essence aerial spirit, if you would, or immaterial fire according to scripture, ‘Who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire’ (Ps. 104:4). Wherefore they are in a place, and become visible, they appear in an image of their own bodies, in this way, to the worthy. But the source of their holiness being outside of their nature is brought to fulfillment by contact with the Spirit” (De Spiritu Sancto, XVI.38, in Traité du Saint-Esprit, SC vol. 17 bis, ed. B. Pruche [Paris, 1968] 380–82).

The assimilation of pagan iconography of winged personifications described in this chapter did not go unnoticed or unopposed by certain figures within the church. Theodoret of Cyrrhus noted that the use of imperial models for Christian art was in keeping with the dignity owed to God.⁷⁵ Although subsequent chapters examine this dialogue in greater depth, the assertion made by the pagan in the pagan-Christian "dialogue," the Apocriticus, is also relevant here. The pagan stated that the gods and the angels were alike in everything, their proximity to God, their spirituality and service; only their names were different.⁷⁶ His opponent, Macarius Magnes, rejected any such connection between the dignity and nature of false gods and true servants; furthermore, he denied the ability of art to depict beings so pure and transcendent.⁷⁷ To Christians who held views similar to Macarius Magnes on angels and art, such connections between pagan and Christian iconography must have appeared as debasing to the spiritual beings and a dangerous invitation to pagan idolatry.

75. Orationes de imaginibus tres, III.80, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 176: "And just as the Romans in painting imperial images surrounded [the emperor] with spear-bearers and depicted subject peoples, so Christians depict by similar means. Since the emperor through his appearance assumes the form of God, as borne upon a throne, they reveal the images to all people on earth, and in his form they confer on him what is fitting, the ruler according to the teachings of God." See de' Maffei, Icona, pittore e arte al Concilio Niceno II, 74.

76. Blondel 200.1–12: "If therefore you say that the angels who are stationed near God are passionless and immortal and by nature incorruptible, which we ourselves call gods, on account of their nearness to God on high, what is there that should be disputed about the name or is it only a distinction brought out in the naming? For as far as the name goes the Romans call Minerva what the Greeks call Athena, and the Egyptians and the Syrians and the Thracians call her something else again. Is it not true that they conform despite the difference in names or removed from the name of the god? Some therefore call these angels, or either some call them gods, but there is not very much difference, since their divine nature is testified for, when Matthew wrote thus, 'But Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as angels in heaven' (22:29–30)."

77. Blondel 214–15.

The assimilation of pagan iconography into Christian art was not, therefore, universally approved, and in the first half of the sixth century Severus of Antioch delivered a sermon against the depiction of angels as “princes or kings, in a purple and royal robe, holding marks of universal power.” Despite the differences between pagan and Christian iconography, he evidently believed that the distinctions were not clear enough. Moreover, according to Severus, worshippers were led to think that these intangible servants were God’s co-rulers.⁷⁸ Depicting angels as terrestrial, temporal creatures appeared to opponents of images of angels to be a humiliation of spiritual qualities, and for some the pagan parallels for winged beings were potentially misleading.

The sixth-century epigrams, examined in chapters 2 and 3, display a degree of defensiveness that would certainly support this conclusion. The occasional attempts by mosaicists, painters and sculptors to come to terms with the nature and identity of angels were apparently not effective in the eyes of all Christians. Although these artists added wings to an anthropomorphic form in order to indicate certain symbolic alterations of form that angels accomplished, they could not describe angels in any definitive sense. Representation of angels potentially involved a number of unpalatable issues, idolatry, angelolatry and, at the very least, disrespect for profoundly spiritual beings. The anti-image accusations and iconophile answers to these accusations and the ways in which writers about angels, particularly in miracle stories, approached these issues are the subjects of the following chapters.

78. See chapter 2.

Two

ARGUMENTS AGAINST IMAGES OF ANGELS

Adherents to a literal interpretation of scripture and to intellectual worship simply could not reconcile angelic nature—which is essentially incomprehensible—with material, allusive representations in art. The best-known opponent of artistic representation in the period leading up to Iconoclasm in the eighth century was Epiphanius of Salamis (ca. 315–403). Epiphanius's theology developed from his anti-allegorical stance; and his opposition to religious imagery later made him a natural champion for the iconoclastic party.¹

Elaborate written defenses of images of angels evidently did not arise in the period between Epiphanius and Iconoclasm. However, epigrams are extant from the sixth century that reveal a development

1. On Epiphanius and Iconoclasm, see P. Maraval, "Épiphanes, 'Docteur des Iconoclastes,'" Nicée II, 787–1987. Douze siècles d'images religieuses. Actes du colloque international Nicée II tenu au Collège de France, Paris les 2, 3, 4 Octobre 1986, ed. F. Boespflug and N. Lossky (Paris, 1987) 51–62; on the anti-Origenist theology of Epiphanius, see E.A. Clark, The Origenist Controversy. The Cultural Construction of an Early Christian Debate (Princeton, 1992) 86ff.

G. Ostrogorsky, Studien zur Geschichte des byzantinischen Bilderstreites (Breslau, 1929) 69ff., doubted the authenticity of some of the texts, while Holl showed that they are all Epiphanius's own writings. This study takes the position that the texts of Epiphanius as collected by iconoclasts and refuted by iconophiles reflects a real concern on the part of the fourth-century theologian concerning material representation.

in a direction quite different from Epiphanius's interpretation of angels' images. These show affinities with a symbolic, materialist theology that finds its most detailed and articulate defense in the eighth and ninth centuries. For instance, Agathias (ca. 532–ca. 580) wrote on an image of the Archangel Michael on the island of Plate in the Sea of Marmara, south of Constantinople:

The wax, greatly daring, has represented the invisible, the incorporeal chief of the angels in the semblance of his form. Yet it was no thankless [task] since the mortal who beholds the image directs his mind to a higher contemplation. His veneration is no longer distracted: engraving within himself the [archangel's] traits, he trembles as if he were in the latter's presence. The eyes encourage deep thoughts, and art is able by means of colours to ferry over [to its object] the prayer of the mind.²

Agathias's description of an approach to images of angels is antithetical to Epiphanius's literal position and reveals an ability to interpret material images as the symbolic means to knowledge of an incomprehensible creature. In this description of the image of the archangel, the difficulty of comprehension derives from the incorporeal nature which would seem to be incompatible with material representation; but in Agathias's conception the image also provides the viewer with the means to approach knowledge of the distant and immaterial archangel by way of contemplation of the colors and outlines on the surface of the image. The material image is therefore the bridge between mundane reality and spiritual truths otherwise unattainable. No less intellectual than Epiphanius's, this approach nonetheless admits and encourages material, symbolic aids for worship and contemplation. These two opposing methods of gaining knowledge of God characterize the two sides of a long-standing debate in Byzantine society leading to the convulsive conflict of the Iconoclastic period.

2. The Greek Anthology, ed. W.R. Paton, 5 vols. (London, 1927) I:34; trans. C. Mango, The Art of the Byzantine Empire. 312–1453. Sources and Documents (Toronto, 1986) 115.

Debate over the proper means to a comprehension of divine things, in this case angels, characterizes the period leading up to Iconoclasm in the eighth century.³ Art was part of this debate because it generated discussion over seemingly worship and appropriate avenues to gaining knowledge. The angels' iconography is essentially symbolic in that it relates a human form sometimes assumed by angels but not descriptive of their real nature. The addition of wings is a significant marker in this iconography since wings signal transcendence and ethereality and inhuman speed, all characteristics of the angelic host. This symbolic iconography was evidently not suitable to all Christians, and texts from the fourth century on reveal that such images of angels had excited opposition. Moreover, the dangers of idolatry that attached to material images and to angels themselves were important considerations. This chapter seeks to isolate these strands of theological discussion concerning images of angels and, furthermore, argues that these strands influenced one aspect of iconoclastic opposition to symbolic images of angels. The extant opposition to images of angels falls into two general categories: fourth-century anti-imagist theology and the Monophysitism of fifth-/sixth-century Syria. This chapter examines the particular historical context for these sources and concludes with an examination of the common concerns that allowed their authors to be harnessed to the iconoclastic cause.

Earlier evidence for opposition to images is known mainly through the marshaling of patristic precedents to support the iconoclasts' position on images. A sifting of iconophile texts provides firm documentation of the nature of pre-Iconoclastic opposition to symbolic images, particularly those of angels. Long-standing theological divisions manifest themselves in part by the choice of patristic precedent in the arguments of the opposing sides of the controversy.⁴ Iconoclasts argued that image worship was a recent re-introduction of the idolatry that Christians had overcome but to which they had again succumbed. Iconophiles, on the other hand, claimed their own patristic support in favor of their position of a long-standing and proper worship of icons, initiated and sanctioned by scripture.⁵ The traditions of the Church were thus understood in completely divergent ways by each camp. Both parties, therefore, claimed a distinct line of tradition within the church, written and unwritten, and this chapter examines the development of an anti-image, intellectual theology that motivated certain iconoclastic beliefs concerning representations of angels.

3. See Cameron, "The Language of Images."

4. See the recent survey by A. Giakalis, Images of the Divine. The Theology of Icons at the Seventh Ecumenical Council (Leiden, New York and Köln, 1994) 22ff.

Evidence for the effects of this theology on material objects is scanty; one assumes that before Iconoclasm some images may have been removed because of philosophical differences but that on the whole images were produced and opponents simply avoided such material aids. However, at the end of this chapter, mosaics of the angelic powers in the bema arch of the church of the Dormition at Nicaea (Iznik) will furnish examples of how iconoclasts viewed—and corrected—angels' images.

Both sides of the Iconoclastic controversy claimed the great father of the early Church and renowned opponent of heretics, Epiphanius of Salamis. Iconoclasts declared him a paragon because of his writings against the manufacture and worship of images.⁶ Epiphanius was a particularly difficult case for iconophiles since he was a theologian of unassailable orthodoxy, having written two influential works, the Panarion, a famous anti-heretical treatise, and the doctrinal study An-

5. A certain disregard for scruples of historical research is evident, and indeed charges of falsification of texts were traded by both sides. P.J. Alexander described the collection and confirmation of patristic sources by the iconoclast faction in the preparation for the iconoclastic Council of Hagia Sophia in 815 as more painstaking and scrupulous than the first iconoclastic Council of Hieria, held in 754. For this reason, the patristic citations of the later council were expanded and more accurately cited than the sources adduced at Hieria. See P.J. Alexander, "Church Councils and Patristic Authority. The Iconoclastic Council of Hieria (754) and St. Sophia (815)," Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 63(1958):493–505.

6. These survive only in the fragments found in the rebuttal of Nicephorus, in the Adversus Epiphaniidem, part of his Antirrhetics, written in the period 818–20; see Pitra IV:292–380. See Maraval, "Épiphanes, 'Docteur des Iconoclastes,'" 61, and H.G. Thümmel, Die Frühgeschichte der ostkirchlichen Bilderlehre. Texte und Untersuchungen zur Zeit vor dem Bilderstreit, TU vol. 139 (Berlin, 1992) 65ff.

coratus, the “Anchor of Faith.” Rather than making a frontal attack, iconophiles leveled the charge, often repeated in this period, of willful falsification.

Epiphanius’s position is the clearest and earliest statement of an opposition to images based on a literal reading of art and a spiritual mode of worship. His active iconoclasm with regard to Christian images is still in doubt,⁷ but his attitude to art is clear from the extant fragments. In short, Epiphanius rejected the ability of art to convey any truth about divine nature: “If someone endeavours to perceive the divine character of the holy Logos in the flesh, out of material colours.... [let him be anathema].”⁸ A corollary for Epiphanius is that angels who are spiritual, bodiless and immaterial—though not to the same extent as God—cannot be depicted materially. As he wrote, images, dead and lifeless matter, debase and diminish the angels.⁹ Epiphanius could not countenance the representation of Christ as man since this representation merely reduced Christ to one aspect of his duophysite nature; nor would he allow angels to be depicted as men with mortal traits of “bone and sinew,” because angels are essentially spiritual beings whose nature is like a “devouring fire.” Representations of angels in dead and lifeless matter degrade the prototypes and diminish their nature.

Furthermore, Epiphanius was a fervent opponent of artists’ “deceptions.” Artists’ handiwork is not purely spiritual and, therefore, misleading in his view. It follows that all worship based on material images is essentially idolatrous. According to Epiphanius, artists created empty inventions according to their own fancies, in a medium

7. The well-known incident of the destruction of a curtain covering a door in a church has been interpreted traditionally as a sign of Epiphanius’s active opposition to Christian art. See, for instance, E. Kitzinger, “The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm,” DOP 8(1954):92ff. However, Sister Charles Murray, Rebirth and Afterlife. A Study of the Transmutation of Some Pagan Imagery in Early Christian Funerary Art (Oxford, 1981) 31ff., convincingly analyzed this passage as proof of Epiphanius’s vigorous antagonism simply towards pagan art. The curtain, in her view, depicted a pagan figure, perhaps a god, that Epiphanius felt to be inconsistent with the decoration of a place of worship. Indeed, the event is related within the context of Epiphanius’s apology for not having sent a replacement sooner.

8. Holl 363 (#34) = Adv. Epi., V.14, Pitra IV:303.18–20.

9. Holl 357 (#4) = Adv. Epi., VI.16, Pitra IV:306.35–307.1.

clearly inadequate to the subject. On the representations of Christ and the saints, all Epiphanius saw was irrelevant whimsy that cannot be substantiated by witness.¹⁰ Epiphanius based his position on images of the saints on a pragmatic distinction: the saints lived on earth, had mortal form and so have a single likeness; nonetheless, artists cannot and do not retrieve this likeness because they did not see the subjects with their own eyes. With regard to angels and Christ, the difficulty is of a different order since they are essentially spiritual and comprehensible only in spiritual terms.¹¹ Furthermore, the images of angels falsely attempt to communicate another level of the unknowable which is misrepresented by anthropomorphic forms on material images. Distinct even from representing Christ as man, artists who attempt to contain angelic nature in “bone and sinew” are guilty of deceit since they are not capable of knowing or seeing angels properly; likeness in any meaningful sense is simply out of reach.

Epiphanius’s position on images was based on an anti-allegorical, anti-Origenist stance that could not conceive of an image relating symbolically to its prototype.¹² For Epiphanius, the image and the 10. Holl 361 (#24) = Adv. Epi., XVIII.79, Pitra IV:352.12–22: “At the same time they misled by their strange notions, representing the appearance of the saints in this or that manner, sometimes as old men and sometimes as youths, such things as they had never seen, they make their own. For they paint the Savior with long hair by some fancy (ὑπονοίας), on account of his being called the Nazarene, as Nazarenes have long hair. And they fail who attempt to bind these types to him. For the Savior drank wine, whereas the Nazarenes did not drink.” And Epiphanius leveled the same accusation at painters of images of the apostles: “And again believing according to their own notions what they make, they deceive. For these deceivers portray Peter the holy apostle as an old man with hair and beard cut close. And also some describe Saint Paul as balding and some bald pated and with a beard, while the other apostles as cropped” (Holl 362 [#26] = Adv. Epi., XIX.86, Pitra IV:357.25–32).

11. Christ’s divine nature made likeness impossible: Epiphanius rejected the ability of art to represent “the unknowable, the inexpressible, the incomprehensible, the unspeakable, whom only Moses was able to face” (Holl 359 [#12]).

12. George Florovsky, in “Origen, Eusebius, and the Iconoclastic Controversy,” Church History 19(1950):77–96, and C. von Schönborn, L’icône du Christ. Fondements théologiques élaborées entre le Ier et le IIer Concile de Nicée (325–787) (Fribourg, 1976) 55ff., 164ff., have described the parallels between iconoclast theology and Origenism. The human nature of Christ was, in Origenist terms, overcome and superseded by the transcendental reality of Christ risen, and so his nature is beyond description in any material depiction or description. Certainly, this position has analogies with that of the iconoclasts, as well as that of prototype were fundamentally distinct and any defense that linked the two would inevitably demean the prototype. The only real worship is founded on intellectual approaches to spiritual truths and not on material aids consisting of images. Images of angels pose particular problems of the relation between material image and immaterial prototype, and seemed to Epiphanius to be more of an obstacle than a clarification and facilitation of worship.

A text relating a dialogue between the fourth-century theologian Macarius Magnes and a pagan opponent shows similar mistrust of material representations, once again in the case of angels.¹³ The exchange over angels formed part of a work known as the Apocriticus, likely an invented dialogue between Macarius and a pagan. The texts of Macarius Magnes and the pagan with whom he is engaged in discussion find their earliest testimony in the work of Nicephorus (ca. 750–828), patriarch of Constantinople at the second outbreak of Iconoclasm in 815.¹⁴ Despite Macarius Magnes's allegiances to the allegorical methods of Origen (ca. 185–254) which iconoclasts es-

Epiphanius; Epiphanius's position, which the iconoclasts found so attractive, was that Christ's divinity is essentially unknowable and can only be demeaned and made separate by merely depicting the human Christ. It must also be said, however, that Epiphanius's anti-Origenism lies primarily in his opposition to Origen's heterodox views on the Trinity; more importantly for this study, Epiphanius's rejection of Origen's method of allegorical interpretation was also an important part of his dissent. On this question, see Clark, The Origenist Controversy, 86ff. Moreover, it is just this openness to symbolic interpretations that characterizes the iconophile approach to images, especially those of angels; see chapter 3.

13. A. Harnack, Kritik des Neues Testaments von einem griechischen Philosophen des 3. Jahrhunderts. Die in Apocriticus des Macarius Magnes enthaltene Streitschrift, TU vol. 37/3 (Leipzig, 1911) and G. Bardy, in DTC IX:1456ff., put Macarius Magnes in the late fourth-century. Harnack identified the opponent as the pagan neo-Platonist Porphyry (ca. 232–ca. 303), the writer of a famous anti-Christian treatise in fifteen volumes, the Κατὰ Χριστιανῶν.

The full text is found in Blondel who reconstructed the original text from a manuscript found in Athens; we can now be certain of the author's original intent. See also L. Duchesne, Macario Magne et scriptis eius (Paris, 1877) and P.J. Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople. Ecclesiastical Policy and Image Worship in the Byzantine Empire (Oxford, 1958) 165ff.

14. De Magne, Pitra I:302–35. Nicephorus apparently knew little of the author and gleaned whatever information he had from internal evidence; he found firm evidence of Origenism in the texts, but he also charged Macarius Magnes with Nestorian and Manichaean sympathies. See T.W. Crafer, "Macarius Magnes, A Neglected Apologist," JTS 8(1907):402.

chewed, iconoclasts had invoked Macarius Magnes for his kindred approach to intellectual and non-material worship.

Two texts in the dialogue, one by the pagan and one by Macarius Magnes himself, have special bearing on this discussion of angels. In this portion of the dialogue, Macarius Magnes defended Christian worship from parallels with paganism that his opponent attempted to draw, particularly with regard to idols and representations of angels. The “angelic way of life,” a common epithet of the followers of the monastic vocation, was introduced by Macarius Magnes as an answer to the pagan opponent who is made to equate the angels and the gods of the Greeks.¹⁵ Macarius Magnes proceeded to counter the pagan’s arguments with a denial of any similarity between Christian angels and pagan gods. Pagan gods simply do not exist and furthermore, he stated, the idols of the pagans have no resemblance to the Christian images because God is incomprehensible, and Christians know better than to think that deity can reside in such matter. Macarius brought up images of angels as a means of providing a concrete example of the distinctions between pagan idolatry and purer Christian veneration. Macarius Magnes wrote:

So that if someone who is right thinking should hear of a spiritual existence in heaven, he rejoices in the word of immortality, [and] he himself emulates [the excellence of angels] in his deeds, and zealously affects their merit, by avoiding marriage and fleeing the symbols of corruption, and coming to the passage of death, he is lifted up in the end into the court of the blessed, that is to say, of the angels. But certainly [the good Christian] does not depict the form [of angels], as you yourself say, and [he] does not speak to the shadow or is delighted with the phantoms, conversing with soulless matter as if it had a soul, delighting in dead visions of forms, directing prayer to voiceless matter, imagining that the divine law giver inhabits stone or wood, or pretending to subjugate the insubjugable being in bronze or iron, thinking to capture the uncapturable, he unthinkingly sketches a vague image in a dead vision.¹⁶

15. Blondel 200.1–12.

16. Blondel 214.10–20.

Later, confronted with this text, clearly antagonistic to material images, Nicephorus argued that it misrepresented Macarius Magnes since iconoclasts had indubitably falsified the text and had confused Macarius Magnes's argument against paganism and idolatry with a denial of Christian images. However, Macarius Magnes clearly stated his opinion in this dialogue that a holy person makes a true and godly image by modeling himself after paragons of holiness in the past. For Macarius, the real image is ethical and not a material representation. Furthermore, false and misleading images made after illusory visions must be shunned.

Both Macarius Magnes and Epiphanius belong to a general debate that took place in the fourth century over images, intellectual and material, in worship. Moreover, both form part of an early tradition of spiritual, anti-image worship that was resurrected in the eighth and ninth centuries during renewed debates over worship. Epiphanius stated that divinity is unrepresentable, and can be worshipped only "in spirit and truth," quoting John 4:24.¹⁷ Both theologians were suspicious of the knowledge derived through sight, especially through the viewing of deceptive images.¹⁸ Epiphanius's strong iconoclastic stance, based on the incomprehensibility of God and the essential deceptiveness of images, has parallels with the anti-image theology of Evagrius Ponticus (ca. 345–399), and Macarius's advocacy of intellectual worship is akin to Evagrius's practice of "pure prayer."¹⁹ Evagrius taught that prayer must be rid of emotions and images that are derived from the sensual world; he called this process "apatheia" (ἀπάθεια), involving a resistance to mental image-making and a worship of God only "in spirit and in truth."²⁰ Evagrius advised dis-

17. See P.J. Alexander, "The Iconoclastic Council of St. Sophia (815) and Its Definition (Horos)," DOP 7(1953):43, on Epiphanius's "Treatise against Those who are engaged in making, after the fashion of idols, images in the likeness of Christ, the Mother of God, Martyrs, Angels and Prophets" (frag. 30b; for text, see 63–64).

18. See, for instance, Holl 363 (#33).

19. See Clark, The Origenist Controversy, 102ff., on Epiphanius, and Schönborn, L'icône du Christ, 168, on the affinities of the anti-image theology of Evagrius and iconoclasts.

20. See Clark, The Origenist Controversy, 60ff.; A. Guillaumont, Les "Képhalaia Gnostica" d'Évagre le Pontique et l'histoire de l'Origénisme chez les Grecs et chez les Syriens, Patristica Sorbonensis, vol. 5 (Paris, 1962) 37ff., 59ff.; Evagrius Ponticus, Traité Pratique ou Le Moine, 2 vols., SC vols. 170, 171, ed. A. Guillaumont and C. Guillaumont (Paris, 1971) I:98ff. Accord-engagement from all distractions: “Do not represent the divine in itself when you pray and do not permit your intellect to receive the impression of any form; but go from immaterial to immaterial, and you will comprehend.”²¹ In this sense, Epiphanius, Evagrius and Macarius share comparable positions with regard to approaches to knowledge of things divine: only intellectual and non-material routes were seemly and fruitful in their view.²²

Elizabeth Clark has described the “constellation” of practice and theory in the late fourth century that connects Epiphanius’s own iconoclasm, Evagrius’s anti-imagistic theology, and the destruction of idols in Egypt led by Theophilus (d. 412), patriarch of Alexandria from 385.²³ Epiphanius’s tearing down of a curtain depicting “some form of a man” and produced perhaps by a pagan workshop, and Macarius’s opposition to parallels made between the images of Christian angels and pagan gods must be seen in this context of the general struggle against the profane art of the pagan religion, as each theologian combated the possibility of idolatry inherent in images. Epiphanius recalled precisely the idolatrous practices censured by the Council of Laodicea in his dismissal of making images; and, indeed, that the writer of the Apocriticus has the pagan equate pagan idols with images of angels reveals the special fear that angels aroused in some theologians. Angels were divine creatures, certainly, but they attracted worship that was too easily equated with pagan practice. In the fourth and fifth centuries, angels and their images posed clear threats to proper approach and seemly worship as the Apocriticus, the Council of Laodicea and Theodoret of Cyrrhus demonstrate.

ing to Evagrius, only Moses had seen God in “his proper form and without enigma” and spoke with him “mouth to mouth”; see R. Dragnet, “L’Histoire Lausiaque: Une oeuvre écrite dans l’esprit d’Evagre,” Revue d’histoire ecclésiastique 41(1946):330ff.

21. De oratione, LXVI, PG 79:1181A.

22. The general affinities are noted by J. Gouillard, “Fragments inédits d’un antirrétique de Jean le Grammairien,” REB 24(1966):174–75, with regard to some fragments attributed to John the Grammarian, the iconoclastic patriarch of Constantinople from 837–43.

23. The Origenist Controversy, 43ff.; the thesis of the interaction of theology, politics and social practice of the fourth/fifth centuries is key to her description of these texts and events.

Some scholars cite Monophysitism as an important element in iconoclastic theology, and the accusations of iconoclastic beliefs leveled against Philoxenus of Mabbug and Severus of Antioch at the Second Council of Nicaea (787) would seem to suggest at least a theological affinity between iconoclasts and these Monophysite theologians.²⁴ Like Epiphanius and Macarius Magnes, Philoxenus of Mabbug (ca. 440–523), a bishop of Hierapolis-Mabbug in Syria, strongly opposed symbolic images in Christian worship. The opposition to allusive representations was consistent with Philoxenus's theology that emphasized the absolute transcendence and incomprehensibility of Christ's divinity; iconophiles often accused iconoclasts of just such an emphasis that led them into Monophysite error.²⁵ As an extension of this belief, Philoxenus appears to have objected to anthropomorphic images of Christ and the angels, as well as to representations of the Holy Spirit as a dove.²⁶ In a passage taken from the lost Ecclesiastical History of Theodore Lector or Anagnostes (d. after 527), Theophanes the Confessor (ca. 760–817/8) described the malignant Monophysite roots of Philoxenus of Mabbug's position on images:

Xenaias, the servant of Satan, taught that images of the Lord and of the angels should not be accepted. He was a Persian by extraction

24. See Mansi XIII:317–18. And secondary sources include Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople, 52, and S. Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm during the Reign of Leo III with Particular Attention to the Oriental Sources (Louvain, 1973) 127. Sebastian Brock argued for a complete dissociation of Monophysitism and iconoclastic theology in "Iconoclasm and Monophysitism," in Iconoclasm. Papers Given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin (Birmingham, 1977) 53–57.

25. On Philoxenus of Mabbug's theology, see A. de Halleux, Philoxène de Mabbog. Sa vie, ses écrits, sa théologie (Louvain, 1963); C. N. Tsirpanlis, "Some Reflections on Philoxenos' Christology," Greek Orthodox Theological Review 25(1980):152–62; R. C. Chesnut, Three Monophysite Christologies: Severus of Antioch, Philoxenus of Mabbug, and Jacob of Sarug (Oxford, 1976) 57ff.; and G. Lardreau, Discours philosophique et discours spirituel. Autour de la philosophie spirituelle de Philoxène de Mabboug (Paris, 1985).

26. See Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople, 44–45, "[Philoxenus of Mabbug's] position on images then was a logical corollary to his theological views: the angels and the Holy Spirit were clearly incorporeal and in Philoxenus' monophysite theology, Jesus Christ was first and foremost God." See also Kitzinger, "The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm," 131, and S. Der Nersessian, "Une apologie des images du septième siècle," B 17(1944/5):70.

and, by station, a slave. Having fled from his master and being unbaptised, although he called himself a cleric, he was at the time of Calandion perverting from the [true] faith the villages around Antioch. He was expelled by Calandion, but Peter the Fuller consecrated him bishop of Hierapolis and renamed him Philoxenus.²⁷

Despite unsympathetic descriptions, no evidence exists in the extant texts ascribed to Philoxenus of an unambiguous iconoclastic position.²⁸ However, other texts of Philoxenus can provide testimony concerning his position regarding images and worship. These at least substantiate the charge of fundamental suspicion of images and perhaps also active iconoclasm described in the text read at Nicaea.

Judging by extant texts, Philoxenus of Mabbug held strong views on the images of Christ, the angels and the Holy Spirit in particular, on account of their essential incomprehensibility. Because of the transcendence of these beings, only worship that is intellectual and

27. Theophanes, Chronographia, ed. C. de Boor, 2 vols. (Leipzig, 1883–1885) I:134; trans. Mango, The Art of the Byzantine Empire, 43. I have changed Mango's "saints" to "angels." This alteration is in accordance with an extract found in J.A. Cramer, Anecdota graeca e codd. manuscriptis Bibliothecae regiae parisiensis, 4 vols. (Oxford, 1839–1841; rp. Hildesheim, 1967) II:109.1–2, and is in agreement with de Halleux, Philoxène de Mabbog, 88 n86, and Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople, 44–45. See also the reading given by E. Miller, "Fragments inédits de Théodore Le Lecteur et de Jean d'Égée," Revue archéologique 26(1873):402, "Ξεναίᾱς ὁ Φιλόξενος οὔτε Χριστοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ οὔτε ἀγγέλου εἰκόνας ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ συνεχώρει ἀνατίθεσθαι."

At the Second Council of Nicaea, an excerpt was read from John Diakrinomenus's Ecclesiastical History of ca. 500 which more fully describes the reasoning behind Philoxenus of Mabbug's opposition to images of incorporeal beings and the affinities he had with Epiphanius and Macarius Magnes before him: "For Philoxenus said that it is not proper to give the angels, who are bodiless, bodies and thus in human-like shapes to depict them in a type of embodiment, and not to believe that one offers honour and faith to Christ through making an inscribed image; only that which is worship in spirit and in truth is acceptable to him. And a few lines below: he says to note this too, that [Philoxenus says] it is a childish mind that fashions the holy and venerable spirit in an image, despite the fact that the Gospels in no place teach that the Holy Spirit became a dove, but that at some point it appeared in the shape of a dove. Because it is by God's dispensation that it appeared one time in this way and not essentially, it is by no means fitting to make images of a body for the faithful. Philoxenus taught these things and followed this teaching in practice, too. In many places, he cast down the images of angels and hid the painted images of Christ in secret places." See Mansi XIII:180E–1B.

28. On this question, see de Halleux, Philoxène de Mabbog, 88ff.

unhindered by material images is possible. By faith alone, Philoxenus wrote, is humanity able to accept and understand the contradictory and difficult nature of angels:

And thus also it is in respect of the spiritual natures and orders of celestial beings, and it is faith which maketh it possible to receive every word which is spoken concerning them; for otherwise there must necessarily be unbelief, since the Book calleth them “absolute spiritual beings” [in one place], and in another it speaketh of them as “compacted bodies” to which it attributeth forms which are different from each other.²⁹

Philoxenus held that angelic appearances were not “real” but of a spiritual nature. These epiphanies consist of an appearance (φαντάσις) or form (σχῆμα) intellectually accessible in some incomplete way. This formulation—in fact, not so very different from iconophile description of angelic appearances—led to a complete disregard for any images of the immaterial angels. Because angels appear in spiritual alterations, images of the angels in symbolic guise can only be defamations and distortions of transcendent, spiritual beings.³⁰

29. From Philoxenus’s sermon “On Faith,” trans. E.A.W. Budge, The Discourses of Philoxenus Bishop of Mabbôgh, A.D. 485–519. Vol. II. Introduction, Translation, etc. (London, 1894) 29–31, which continues, “... but [the angels] possess all the service of the members, although they have no compacted members. And how the operation of the members is established without the members themselves we have no power in our own knowledge to understand; but by this [power] which is given to us by God, I mean faith, we understand these things, and although they do not at all fall under the investigation of human thoughts they are accepted by us without any doubt.”

30. With regard to the particular case of images of Christ, the basis of Philoxenus’s resistance is ethical in that a true Christian ought to make him or herself a true image rather than worship material objects. Brock, “Iconoclasm and Monophysitism,” 54, saw the causes of Philoxenus’s hostility to images rooted in his “puritan asceticism.” Concerning the last charge made by John Diakrinomenos, Philoxenus does state in a commentary on Luke that the Holy Spirit was an intellectual vision, perceived by the intelligence of John the Baptist (Luke 3:22), and was in no way to be interpreted as an essential transformation of the Spirit itself; the Holy Spirit cannot, then, be depicted after John the Baptist’s vision since the vision was spiritual and not material. Brock hypothesized that Philoxenus’s resistance to images of doves was based on an antipathy to the local worship of Atargatis whose cult image was a dove. However, the resistance is theologically consistent with Philoxenus’s position on Philoxenus's theological positions on intellectual worship and ethical guides are fully consistent with charges of antagonism to images, thereby substantiating his opponents' assessments of his position on art. It is noteworthy that the charges center on Philoxenus's rejection of a relation between image and model, and so any honor due the image; the charges also indicate opposition to a symbolic rendering of spiritual creatures which would make this relation of image and model untenable in Philoxenus's eyes. Moreover, writings by Philoxenus on imagination reveal affinities with the anti-image theology of Epiphanius, Macarius Magnes and Evagrius. Philoxenus believed that imagination naturally forms mental images but that these images lead one away from contemplation of true things; imagination must, therefore, be resisted and, by emptying the mind of thought and images, the spiritual path to true things can be opened.³¹ These views of Philoxenus clearly presage iconoclastic tenets. By tarring iconoclasts with the same brush as the Monophysite Philoxenus, iconophiles reinforced the frequently repeated accusation that iconoclasts were new Monophysites who rejected the incarnation in favor of Christ's divinity.³²

More ambiguous is the passage from the Second Council at Nicaea which impugned the Monophysite bishop Severus of Antioch (ca. 465–538) for his disapproval of the iconography of angels. An unsympathetic portrait of Severus's purposes in his homily on the Archangels Michael and Gabriel is given in a fragment taken from a lost Vita of Severus, written by John, bishop of Gabala, and read at Nicaea II. Iconophiles accused Severus of inappropriate attention to the appearance of angels in art, not iconoclasm strictly speaking:

[Severus of Antioch] used to stand in the bema and deliver long addresses, and he often attempted to persuade the multitude in the very church of the most-holy Michael that white vestments, not the incomprehensibility of wholly spiritual entities, like the Holy Spirit and Christ, and, to a lesser degree, angels.

31. See Lardreau, Discours philosophique et discours spirituel, 125ff., and R. Kearney, The Wake of Imagination. Ideas of Creativity in Western Culture (London, 1988) 144ff.

32. See, for example, K. Parry, Depicting the Word. Byzantine Iconophile Thought of the Eighth and Ninth Centuries (Leiden, 1996) 137, 144.

purple ones, were appropriate to angels. He was not ignorant of the fact that the holy [angelic] host had no concern with vestments, but tried by this device to cause division and to urge against one another people who had this or that opinion.³³

Fortunately, the homily to which John of Gabala refers is extant and the nature of Severus's antagonism can be ascertained. Rather than urging outright iconoclasm, the homily was largely concerned with the cult of angels and the unseemly excesses to which this devotion had been prone. Severus is not unusual for having this concern; as the Epistle to the Colossians (2:18), the Council of Laodicea and Theodoret of Cyrrhus bear witness, excessive worship of the angels had created anxiety within the Church since the first centuries of the Christian era. Severus began his sermon by recalling the pagan errors of angelolatry that had been forbidden under both the Old and the New Covenants.

But, forgetting their condition as soldiers and servants, let us not dishonour them for that reason, through a pagan error, by honours which are beyond their due. For all that which is taken from that glory, which alone is God's, is a dishonour to them. That is why the angel who spoke to Manoah said, "... if thou wilt offer a burnt offering, thou must offer it unto the Lord" (Judges 13:16). And this is why also Barnabas and Paul, those servants as faithful as the angels, prevented the Lycaonian worshippers of demons from offering them a sacrifice as to gods (Acts 14).³⁴

33. Mansi XIII:184C; trans. Mango, The Art of the Byzantine Empire, 44. The response to the reading by the patriarch Tarasius (ca. 730?–806) at Nicaea is interesting because it ends in agreement with the heretic Severus of Antioch; Tarasius states that white vestments must be advocated, despite John of Gabala's assertion that iconographic detail is not a concern of the angels: "Tarasius, the holy patriarch, said, We shall consider, because he has been brought to this very thing by [the question of] relics, as he has said, that it is not befitting for angels to wear purple vestments, but they ought to wear white vestments instead" (Mansi XIII:184C). The iconographic particulars are, nonetheless, irrelevant to Tarasius's intention since in his statement he made it clear that the church takes an interest in artistic practice, to the point of managing and determining it. On this issue of ecclesiastical control of artistic production after Iconoclasm, see H. Maguire, "Magic and the Christian Image," in Byzantine Magic, ed. H. Maguire (Washington, D.C., 1995) 51–71.

34. Severus of Antioch, Les homiliae cathedrales, PO vol. 8/2, ed. M. Brière (Paris, 1919; rp. Turnhout, 1971) 82. Severus's work survives only in a Syriac translation by James of Severus of Antioch then lashed out at the effrontery of the painters who lead Christian worshippers to pagan idolatry by their unsuitable depictions of the angels. It is worth noting that the improper worship is the really contentious issue for Severus of Antioch.

But the hand of the painters, which is insolent and which is a law unto itself, favouring the pagan inventions or the imagination and things connected to idolatry and arranging everything to that end, clothe Michael and Gabriel, as princes or kings, with a purple and royal robe, adorning them with a crown and placing in their right hand the mark of authority and universal power. It is for these reasons and others like them that those who honour the angels in such excesses abandon the Church and transgress its laws and are anathematised by those who are ordained and establish the holy canons.³⁵

Although the passage from John of Gabala says that Severus defended white robes over purple for angels, the sermon clearly does not offer an alternative iconography; Severus denigrated the current iconography of purple-clad angels as strictly untoward and overweening for servants. Justinian's garb in the mosaic at San Vitale (consecrated 548), for example, is the same as that worn by the Archangels Michael and Gabriel in mosaics of the bema arch in the contemporary church of Sant' Apollinare in Classe.³⁶ The late fifth-century Cotton Genesis, moreover, shows the angels before Lot dressed in rich vermillion, one with gold highlights.³⁷ The program for which Severus provided his ekphrasis is, of course, lost, but unquestionably Severus was opposing just this kind of incorporation Edessa. On this sermon, see the remarks of C. Mango, "St. Michael and Attis," DChAE 12(1984):39ff.

35. Les homiliae cathedrales, 83–84.

36. See A. Grabar, The Golden Age of Justinian. From the Death of Theodosius to the Rise of Islam, trans. S. Gilbert and J. Emmons (New York, 1967) figs. 171 and 11, respectively, and O. von Simson, Sacred Fortress. Byzantine Art and Statecraft in Ravenna, 2d ed. (Chicago, 1976) 60ff.

37. K. Weitzmann and H. L. Kessler, The Cotton Genesis. British Museum Codex Cotton Otho B. VI (Princeton, 1986) 81–82. For other examples, see RBK III:29–32.

of purple-clad, worldly rulers into the iconography of angels.³⁸ Severus then raised another issue surrounding the dangerous worship of angels, as an inoculation of the cult was also being carried out. The reason for their gathering, Severus went on to state, was the decorous consecration of the new church of the Archangel Michael by means of the introduction of the relics of human saints into the church.³⁹

Severus of Antioch proceeded to the charges of insolence he made against painters of angels. He made it clear that he was only speaking figuratively since the images of the angels are not in any sense representative of the real angelic nature, but only symbols.

No one, in effect, can judge that which has rapport [with the angels] by the aspects under which they appear sometimes to saintly men; for these [aspects] are various and they are known differently according to the time, according to the appropriateness of the circumstance and in some appearances such as the eyes of sensible beings are able to perceive.⁴⁰

As the nature of the angels is so difficult to perceive, their images are in a fundamental sense misleading as well as debasing. Artistic independence, and the presumptions this leads to, is also an important theme of the homily. Severus railed against “the hand of the painters who are insolent and are a law unto themselves,” and the affinities to paganism that this kind of practice encouraged in artists.

38. On the imperial garments worn by archangels, see G. Peers, “Patriarchal Politics in the Paris Gregory (B.N. gr. 510),” JbB 47(1997):53–57, and, covering some similar ground, C. Jolivet-Lévy, “Note sur la représentation des archanges en costume impérial dans l’iconographie byzantine,” CA 46(1998):121–28.

39. Relics of saints were apparently introduced into shrines in order to make more palatable this angelic cult with a dubious history. See P. Maraval, Lieux saints et pèlerinages d’Orient. Histoire et géographie des origines à la conquête arabe (Paris, 1985) 56. And P. Canivet has proposed that a crypt at the fifth-century church of the Archangel Michael at Huarte in Syria had been added to provide relics and stability to a potentially excessive cult. The connection proposed by Canivet, in “Le Michaelion de Huarte (Ve s.) et le culte syrien des anges,” B 50(1980):110ff., must remain tentative.

40. Les homiliae cathedrales, 76–78.

In summation, Severus of Antioch was attacking the worldliness of the angels' iconography, and he concluded that this iconography led worshippers to overlook the angels' bodiless and spiritual qualities. According to Severus, angels alter their forms according to the demands of the occasion in their appearances to just men. They are never seen according to their real nature, in fact, which has nothing of the coarseness of our bodies, but in an alteration of their real form. This alteration is necessary because of the unviewability of the angelic beings. Therefore, Severus is essentially unsympathetic to material images rendered by the artistic means derived from the deceitful pagans.

Severus was not an active iconoclast but, like Philoxenus of Mabbug, interpreted angelic appearances as symbolic transformations; and the natural conclusion holds for Severus, as for Philoxenus, that images cannot express the difficulties of comprehension and nature of angels.⁴¹ Sebastian Brock is right to point out that Severus was not aggressively iconoclastic and that, in fact, his conversion may have been influenced by a fresco of Paradise. However, the principal point of the sermon is not, as Brock maintains, the depiction of angels in purple. Severus had larger issues in mind in this homily, namely the inability of art to represent angels in any essential or descriptive way and art's misleading qualities, therefore, in the context of worship.

The theological perspective represented by these four theologians, Epiphanius, Macarius, Philoxenus and Severus, is based on an ultimate spirituality of angels that cannot be communicated by any material image. Painters cannot provide appropriate means for contemplating divine things since they are misled by pagan practice into producing figured matter wholly inadequate to describe transcendent beings. In this anti-imagistic theology, an emphasis on the ethical mode of worship is characteristic; John's dictum on worship "in spirit and in truth" (4:24) is a leitmotiv in the works of these theologians, as it was for iconoclasts themselves who gathered the writings of these earlier theologians for their own purposes. These theologians, therefore, represent a distinct position with regard to approaches to knowledge of God's bodiless creations; their common approach eschewed tangible, manufactured aids in favor of more intellectual methods that avoided the production of mental or material images.

41. Brock, "Monophysitism and Iconoclasm," 53–54.

In the fragmentary texts of Epiphanius and Philoxenus, angels appear to have been adduced as corollaries to the undepictability of Christ. For Epiphanius, just the same, the angels are differentiated from Christ by their special nature, "a devouring fire," at once less exalted than the divine nature of Christ and less tangible than the human saints. Epiphanius also stated the difficulties of rendering the humanity of Christ since artists describe Christ as man out of caprice rather than out of any attempt at true likeness. The fact that Epiphanius is able to make a double calumny against Christ's images, which are equally unable to manifest any truth about either of Christ's natures, indicates the essential distinction between Christ's and angels' images: to "bone and sinew" they cannot claim any likeness at all, as Christ as human could conceivably, since angels' assumptions of human form have only been momentary and illusory.

In the fuller texts of Macarius and Severus, the special distinctions of angels' images are clearer. These theologians saw angels as unique problems since they were concerned exclusively with the issue of angelic appearances and the manufacture of images deriving from these occasions. Both of these theologians viewed material commemorations of angelic epiphany as diminishing such difficult intellectual experiences to base, misleading caricature. The angels—unlike Christ, it ought to be stressed once again—appear in a semblance of their ethereal nature, and depicting the angels in human form, only one of many forms they have assumed, can in no way communicate their immaterial nature and activity.

The danger of idolatry represented by angels' images is also a common feature of these theologians' concerns. The nature and activities of angels allowed parallels to be drawn by pagans to their own deities. Moreover, Christians themselves were evidently not immune to the attraction that angels held for their direct worship separate from God. Severus certainly feared just this possibility and the deceitful allure that angels depicted as princes possessed.

The approach represented by these four theologians influenced the position taken by iconoclasts in the eighth and ninth centuries and reveals a continuity in this anti-imagistic, intellectual theology from the fourth century on. Therefore, an understanding of the iconoclastic position with respect to angels is properly derived from these theologians; it must, in fact, depend upon their limited testimony, since a particular iconoclastic theology of angels from the eighth and ninth centuries is not extant. As only iconophile rebuttals of certain texts survive, one must assume that iconophile dialogues, for instance Nicephorus against Epiphanius and Macarius Magnes, attack positions taken by iconoclasts, who collected and defended this patristic documentation in the first place.

The theological position that expressed considerable anxiety over both idolatry and angelolatry was the formative background for the eighth-/ ninth-century iconoclastic opposition to depicting angels. It explains the concern the later anti-image theologians had for the inherent difficulties in representing angels, of course, but also for the dangers of worship of created things in general and angels in particular. As created beings, angels were not worthy of worship in and of themselves, but representing angels, as Severus pointed out, increased the likelihood of Christians mistakenly directing veneration at angels. Images in that view were the necessary nexus of idolatry and angelolatry. This association of idolatry with angelolatry reveals the primitive origins of iconoclasm, since an iconoclastic position on angels appears to be firmly rooted not only in an intellectual approach to worship but also in pastoral care for Christians who were easily led to immoderate worship of God's creature servants.⁴²

After 752, Constantine V (r. 740–775) seems to have begun a concerted assault against the iconophile position on both theological and political fronts. The strength of this attack, some twenty years after his father had initiated iconoclasm as government policy, indicates a delay in formulation of any truly radical reform. Constantine V, however, produced in the 750s an articulate expression of icono-

42. That the problem of dangerous devotion to angels still existed during Iconoclasm is likely revealed by the reworking of the Chonae miracle story in this period; see chapter 4.

clastic theology much beyond the apparent literalism and bluster of his father's theological convictions. Nicephorus discussed selections from the iconoclastic Πεύσεις, or "Inquiries," and specifically attributed them to Constantine's pen, and in this way he was able to impute personal initiative to the emperor in formulating an iconoclastic theology.⁴³

The iconoclastic theology revealed through the "Inquiries" and "Definition" of the council convened by iconoclasts in 754 is the culmination of one particular strand of theological interpretation of proper Christian worship and comprehension. Clearly, the common ground of these iconoclastic texts and of the patristic sources iconoclasts adduced is an agreement that the images of angels—like those of Christ—are impossible because of the subjects' immaterial, divine nature. Like Christ's image, an image of the angels' earthly appearance would merely separate one manifestation of their nature from their real formless nature.⁴⁴ Epiphanius made an important distinction since the angels—unlike Christ—cannot be depicted simply as "bones and sinew"; the angels have never taken human form, only assumed it symbolically. Therefore, the image of an angel cannot even have a stable visual relation to its prototype, let alone an essential relation. It is strictly a misleading invention by deceitful artists. Iconoclasts, augured by theologians like Epiphanius and Severus, possessed a fundamental distrust of artistic practice; since the angels are so distant from our comprehension, and indeed so rarely seen at all, artists cannot be expected to represent these spiritual beings in an accurate or meaningful way.⁴⁵

Here the shape of the theological debate may unlock the history of an important set of images, representations of angels significantly altered during Iconoclasm. Admittedly, the evidence for the Church of the Dormition at Nicaea, now Iznik, is not secure: first, destroyed in 1922, the church is lost and so unexaminable, and second, the sequence of creation of mosaics in the seventh century, emendation in the eighth/ninth century and finally restoration in the ninth depends on scholarly argument founded on probabilities. Nonetheless, the position assumed here conforms to general scholarly opinion that the Church of the Dormition reflected the changes in attitudes to images from the seventh to the ninth century. Located on the arch that separates the sanctuary or bema from the nave, these mosaics of angels in the Church of the Dormition have been variously dated in their initial phase to the sixth or seventh century.⁴⁶ Although the inscriptions stated that the figures represented different orders of the angelic hierarchy, the Principalities, Virtues, Dominations and Powers, mentioned together at Colossians 1:16, the angelic beings were depicted as identical winged youths wearing the loros and carrying orbs and standards (figs. 9, 10). A pair occupied both the north and south portion of the arch. The subject of the pre-Iconoclastic mosaic in the apse is still an open question, and an enthroned Christ, an orans Virgin and a seated Virgin and Child have been suggested (fig. 16).⁴⁷

43. Contra Eusebium, III, Pitra I:375–77. On the Peuseis, see S. Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm During the Reign of Constantine V with Particular Attention to the Oriental Sources (Louvain, 1977) 37ff.

44. See Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm During the Reign of Constantine V, 39ff., on iconoclastic Christology.

45. See Mansi XIII:336E; Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm During the Reign of Constantine V, 89, and, also, 91 (#16); M.V. Anastos, "The Argument for Iconoclasm as Presented by the Iconoclastic Council of 754," in Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al. (Princeton, 1955) 185.

46. Fernanda de' Maffei conjectured that the mosaics had been covered during Iconoclasm, not erased as is generally thought, and the repair evident is not connected to the restoration of images in 843. See F. de' Maffei, "L'Unigenito consostanziale al Padre nel programma trinitario dei perduti mosaici del bema della Dormizione di Nicea e il Cristo trasfigurato del Sinai I," Storia dell'arte 45(1982):91ff., and also her Icona, pittore e arte al Concilio Niceno II (Rome, 1974) 99ff. However, the restorations apparent in the areas around the angels and the replacing of the cross in the apse likely belong to the same phase, probably post-843, paid for by the otherwise unknown Naucratis, as stated in an inscription between the two angels on the south bema arch. For discussion and bibliography, see Peers, "Patriarchal Politics in the Paris Gregory," 54–56, and chapter 1.

47. de' Maffei hypothesized an enthroned Christ in the apse of the church at Iznik flanked by angelic powers. See "L'Unigenito consostanziale," 91ff. By tracing the exegetical history of the psalms (110:3, 93:5, 97:7) and Col. 1:16, de' Maffei attempted to reconstruct a christological program in the apse, which centered on an enthroned Christ. While ultimately untenable, her argument is compelling, especially as it is the only one, to my knowledge, to take into consideration the angelic powers and their relation to Christ, but she finds difficulty in overcoming the art-historical evidence. The only parallel she is able to cite is in the ninth-century Chludov Psalter in which the enthroned Christ is approached by

Figure 16. Virgin and Child, Apse Mosaic (destroyed), Church of the Dormition, Iznik (formerly Nicaea), ninth century. Photo: Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C.

David (Moscow, Historical Museum, cod. 129, fol. 114v, ps. 110). See K.A. Corrigan, Visual Polemics in the Ninth-Century Byzantine Psalters (Cambridge, 1992) 44–45, fig. 54.

The illustration in the Chludov Psalter asserts the divinity of Christ, as the inscription accompanying the marginal illustration reads, “David prophesies concerning the son of God.” The assertion of Christ’s divine nature in this typological context derives from contra Judaeos literature of the sixth and seventh centuries, for example the Trophies of Damascus,

Such figured representations as found in the bema arch at Nicaea did not conform to the iconoclastic notion of the proper image of angels, and the figured portions of the bema arch were eliminated during Iconoclasm. Iconoclasts, of course, found representations of angels distasteful, as they found all figural religious imagery to be contrary to their beliefs concerning appropriate worship.⁴⁸ The distinguishing features of the iconoclastic alterations made on the bema arch at Nicaea were that the inscriptions and standards were left untouched. Evidently, iconoclasts did not object to every aspect of the program and felt that with editing the mosaics at Nicaea could provide proper “images” of angels that were non-figurative and relied on inscribed words.

That conversion provides vital information on attitudes toward, and meanings of, material representations of angels from the iconoclastic point of view. The sutures around the restored angelic powers reveal that the figures were erased and the mosaic field was left blank in which the same psalm (110) is adduced to defend the divine nature of Christ. See Les Trophées de Damas, PO vol. 15/2, ed. G. Bardy (Paris, 1920; rp. Turnhout, 1973) 32.12–33.6. Bardy points out that this psalm is a topos of Jewish-Christian debates from an early date. The currency that this psalm had for the defense of Christ's divine nature in the period before Iconoclasm, both in exegesis and apologetic literature, lends support to de' Maffei's reconstruction of the apse program of Christ as Lord surrounded by his heavenly servants.

The general assumption, however—which moreover has the greater attraction of plausibility—is that the Virgin and child placed in the apse after the end of Iconoclasm was a replacement for a pre-Iconoclastic composition with the same subject. This premise informs C. Barber's analysis, for example, in “The Koimesis Church, Nicaea: The Limits of Representation on the Eve of Iconoclasm,” JöB 41(1991):43–60.

48. In a review of T. Schmitz's Die Koimesis-Kirche von Nikaia, das Bauwerk und die Mosaiken (Berlin and Leipzig, 1927), E. Wiegand claimed that making symbolic images of angels did not warrant opprobrium from the iconoclastic point of view and the bema mosaics could have been produced during Iconoclasm; see Deutsche Literaturzeitung 53(1927):2607. E. Kitzinger, “Byzantine Art in the Period between Justinian and Iconoclasm,” in Berichte zum XI. Internationalen Byzantinischen-Kongress, München, 1958 (Munich, 1958) 13, dismissed Wiegand's hypothesis and suggested himself that the angelic powers belonged originally to a pre-iconoclastic phase. P.A. Underwood, “The Evidence of Restorations in the Sanctuary Mosaics of the Church of the Dormition at Nicaea,” DOP 13(1959):235ff., followed up this suggestion and demonstrated conclusively—to my mind—that the church underwent three phases of mosaic decoration: pre-iconoclastic (before the 720s), iconoclastic (that is, without figured images of angels but with inscriptions and standards left intact, likely effected between the 720s and 787 but possibly also between 815 and 843), and post-iconoclastic, that is to say after the “Triumph of Orthodoxy” in 843.

during Iconoclasm. However, the inscriptions designating each of the powers, the standards that bore the inscribed Trisagion and the passage taken from Psalm 97:7 (“To him all the angels of God offer worship”) were apparently left intact and on view during this entire period.⁴⁹ Furthermore, a mosaic cross replaced either the figure of Christ or of the Virgin and Child in the apse.

This iconoclastic program demonstrates the practical limits of the depiction of angels during Iconoclasm and provides concrete form to the iconoclastic theology of angels. Given the preceding discussion of the views of iconoclasts and their predecessors, the elimination of the figural depictions of the angelic powers must be viewed as a natural extension of anti-image theory. The void outlined by the sutures, that is the absence of images, demonstrates iconoclastic belief in the inability of figural description to render angels. The preservation of the inscriptions of the angelic powers, then, marks the limit of representation according to this theory. The presence of the inscriptions, of course, was a happy coincidence for the iconoclasts since it served their purposes so well. The inscription shows that the route to contemplation of these beings must be attempted through meditation on the scriptural designations for angelic powers (Col. 1:16), the nominating inscriptions that signify the beings directly and without figural confusion.

Iconoclasts and their forbears believed that verbal worship was most appropriate.⁵⁰ Words signify purely, with none of the dissimulation or distraction of material images. Iconoclasts held that words were proper signifiers since they were capable of describing intellectually without the contamination and distraction of matter. At the iconoclastic council of 754, iconoclasts stated that “Christ” is a name that refers simultaneously to God and man; therefore, the name “Christ” is an “image” that contains reference to Christ as God and man with none of the futility and deception of the painters’ craft.⁵¹

49. See Underwood, “The Evidence for Restorations,” 240.

50. On this issue, see J.-M. Sansterre, “La parole, le texte et l’image selon les auteurs byzantins des époques iconoclastes et posticonoclastes,” in Testo e immagine nell’alto medioevo, Settimane vol. 41, 2 vols. (Spoleto, 1994) I:197–243.

51. Mansi XIII:252A. See de’ Maffei, Icona, pittore e arte, 26ff.

The names of angels are also images in this view in that they refer as pure signifiers to transcendence and incomprehensibility.

The angels' standards with the Trisagion illustrate—paradoxically—other important tenets of iconoclastic theology. The Trisagion is derived from the seraphim of Isaiah (6:3) and Revelation (4:8), and very early entered Christian piety and liturgy. In the context of Nicaea, it denotes the iconoclastic definition of the seemingly verbal and ethical character of worship that iconoclasts held to be the essential elements in devotion.⁵² Iconoclasts had stated that meditation on scripture and divine words contained therein, at Nicaea Psalm 97:7, was the most appropriate and purest approach to knowledge of divine things. The priests were the fitting custodians of such truths, and iconoclasts cited approvingly Malachi 2:7: "For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts."⁵³ The pastoral care of priests is emphasized here at Nicaea precisely in the public setting once decorated with figural images so denigrated by Severus. The communal aspect ought to be stressed here: the iconoclastic revisionists reveal themselves to be guardians of the "truth," that is, in this church they demonstrate their guidance, not just an intellectual ministering but an active, collective attendance. The danger of idolatry diminished considerably, and, their care therefore demonstrated, the iconoclastic clergy—presumably—at Nicaea also indicated the locus of their power and the source of their authority, the words of the gospels left untouched in the mosaic surface.

Finally, the program centered on a cross placed over earlier figural depiction. The cross has been interpreted as the iconoclastic sign par excellence, although it was not exclusive to the iconoclastic cause.⁵⁴

52. See M. V. Anastos, "The Ethical Theory of Images Formulated by the Iconoclasts in 754 and 815," DOP 8(1954):151–60.

53. See Mansi XIII:229E. On the issue of role of the ecclesiastical hierarchy in disseminating knowledge, see Sansterre, "La parole, le texte et l'image."

54. Bibliography and discussion found in L. Brubaker, "To Legitimize an Emperor: Constantine and Visual Authority in the Eighth and Ninth Centuries," in New Constantines. The Rhythm of Imperial Renewal in Byzantium, 4th–13th Centuries, Papers from the Twenty-sixth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, St. Andrews, March 1992, ed. P. Magdalino (Aldershot, 1994) 139–58.

The cross was a venerable sign of victory established by the unassailable precedent of Constantine the Great.⁵⁵ An epigram later quoted by the iconophile leader Theodore of Stoudios (759–826)⁵⁶ demonstrates both the political and devotional meanings of the cross for iconoclasts.⁵⁷ The epigram stated that the image (εἶδος) of Christ, voiceless, breathless and material has been taken down and replaced with the sign (τύπον) of the cross, thrice-blessed and glory of the faithful.

In this discussion of Nicaea, the opposition of image and sign on the bema arch and in the apse is of particular relevance. The illusionistic image of Christ, in an iconoclast's view, deceives through its attempts at describing a living, breathing being out of matter, and misleads the worshipper into adoring the image itself. The cross is an abstract sign, a true image, with no danger of devotional attachment that would lead to iconophile idolatry. The program in the church of the Dormition was altered in this way so that no risk existed of attachment to figured symbols—a paradoxical affinity that iconoclasts appear to have with the seminal theology of Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite (fl. ca. 500?). And, since no such abstract sign exists for angels, the inscriptions referring to angelic beings provided intellectual modes of comprehension and worship of bodiless beings.

At Nicaea, it is possible to see practice paralleling theory; the illusions of artists abhorred by iconoclasts were displaced in favor of purer signs, inscribed words. According to the iconoclastic definition of the real image, the image must be consubstantial with its prototype and this is clearly not possible for images of angels, given interpretations of their nature; only the eucharist can be a real image in 55. See A. Grabar, L'iconoclisme byzantin. Dossier archéologique (Paris, 1957) 134ff. and J. Moorhead, "Iconoclasm, the Cross, and the Imperial Image," B 55(1985):65–79.

56. Refutatio et subversio impiorum poematum, PG 99:437C.

57. See Grabar, L'iconoclisme byzantin, 130, and Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm during the Reign of Leo III, 113ff.: "The ruler does not tolerate that Christ be depicted [as] a voiceless shape and bereft of breath, with earthly matter, [which is] condemned by the Scriptures; Leo, with his son Constantine, marks the thrice-blessed image of the cross, the glory of the believers, upon the gates of the royal palaces" (trans. ibid., 114–15). The first portion of the epigram is examined briefly in G. Peers, "Breathless, Speechless Images: On the Chalke Gate Epigram," in Hommages Margaret Head Thomson, Cahiers des études anciennes, vol. 32, ed. L. Finnette and A. P. Booth (Trois Rivières, Québec, 1998) 109–12.

this view.⁵⁸ Approach and worship must be intellectual, spiritual and verbal. Symbolic interpretation of images of formless beings has no place in this theology, only direct contemplation and ethical worth. A coherent theology of angels' representations can, therefore, be derived from the fragments of iconoclasts and their forerunners, and the traces of iconoclastic "images" of angelic beings at Nicaea. This theology is literal in its attitude to symbolic manifestation: as Macarius Magnes described it, angelic epiphanies are intellectual and dissembling, and it behooves the good Christian to behave as Abraham and worship these revelations through scripture, inwardly in the soul, and not bow down before any image or creature.

58. Gero, Byzantine Iconoclasm During the Reign of Constantine V, 45ff.

Three

REPRESENTING ANGELS

Images and Theory

The practice of image worship excited opposition in certain quarters, and the theologians examined in the previous chapter were reacting to existing images that they could not reconcile with their beliefs about worship and contemplation. The preceding chapter described a process of gaining knowledge of God and things divine that had great importance for the formation of the intellectual and theological climate in the period leading up to and including Iconoclasm. This process, recounted here in terms of its relation to one kind of image, namely of angels, depended primarily on intellectual, non-material avenues to spiritual truths; it is essentially non-figural.¹ The influential theologian Evagrius Ponticus (ca. 345–399) was convinced that the mind’s impulse to representation was a hindrance to proper devotion. In the opinion of Evagrius—and iconoclasts who belonged to the same theological tradition—material images were insurmountable hurdles to contemplation of divinity.²

1. Contrary to Cameron’s contention in “The Language of Images,” 28, not all Christian discourse was figural. The preceding chapter sought to demonstrate the slippery character of angels’ appearances and nature, and the resistance this excited among certain theologians with regard to figuring angels intellectually and materially.

2. See E. A. Clark, The Origenist Controversy. The Cultural Construction of an Early Christian Debate (Princeton, 1992) 80ff.

Yet many Christians clearly accepted figured, material signs for contemplation and worship. This acceptance represents a mode of approach completely separate from the literalist, intellectual conception described in chapter 2. Moreover, it finds no defender of the magnitude of Epiphanius and, indeed, texts defending images of angels date only to the sixth century, after the death of Severus of Antioch. The development of attitudes to images of angels, then, would appear to conform to a pattern of practice first, followed by opposition and defense.³ However, Methodius of Olympus (d. ca. 311) described images of angels as positive testimony of honor and faith in God.⁴ The pattern of practice, opposition and defense is perhaps too generalized, then, to be allowed to characterize the period of the rise of icons. Nonetheless, this chapter seeks to outline the defense in examining texts concerning images of angels, beginning in the sixth century and concluding with a longer examination of the articulate and extensive justification of images of eighth- and ninth-century iconophiles.

APPROACHES TO SYMBOLIC IMAGES

The most influential theologian for the defense of symbolic images is Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite (fl. ca. 500?). Despite the fact that these writings deal with verbal images and the comprehension of divine things through these images, all subsequent discussion of symbolic images, both verbal and visual, relied on his seminal theology.⁵ Pseudo-Dionysius explored the diverse scriptural passages that mentioned angelic epiphanies for pattern, unity and meaning, and, in his Celestial Hierarchy, he offered a comprehensive examination of God's spiritual creations within a highly structured and essentially allegorical framework. His work helped articulate approaches to material

3. The classic formulation of this point of view is E. Kitzinger, "The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm," DOP 8(1954):83–150.

4. See chapter 1.

5. See the Introduction, and Cameron, "The Language of Images," 24ff., and also her, "Byzantium and the Past in the Seventh Century: The Search for Redefinition," in The Seventh Century. Change and Continuity. Proceedings of a joint French and British Colloquium held at the Warburg Institute 8–9 July 1988, ed. J. Fontaine and J.N. Hillgarth (London, 1992) 268.

images found in the epigrams examined in this chapter, and it provided a framework within which iconophile theologians could rationalize non-representational, symbolic images of angels.

Pseudo-Dionysius stated that the angels are represented in scripture as a “concession to the nature of our own mind.”⁶ He was not speaking of images, but supporters of images understood a clear link between verbal and visual symbolism.⁷ Discussion of both verbal and visual symbolism concerns the negotiation of the means by which a Christian can come to a comprehension of God. Pseudo-Dionysius discussed one such means at great length, that is the symbolic significance of the angels and their appearances. In describing the meaning of Ezekiel’s angel which appeared in the form of four animals, for instance, Pseudo-Dionysius wrote an excursus on the meaning of their appearances as these varied beasts.⁸ The celestial intelligences took these forms, he says, because they intended to communicate obliquely some knowledge of their nature and duty. The angel took the form of a lion, for instance, to express domination, strength and unconquerability; the angel is represented as an ox because it had the “ability to plough deeply the furrows of knowledge”; the form of an eagle was assumed because of the angel’s “contemplation which is freely, directly, and unswervingly turned” to the divine light; and the form of the horse was taken on because of its “obedience and docility” which corresponds to the character of the angels.⁹ By this means, the angels imitate, as much as they are able, the secret of the ineffable divinity, and envelop themselves mysteriously so as to yield divine illumination.

6. De coelesti hierarchia, II.1, La Hiérarchie Céleste, SC vol. 58, ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac (Paris, 1958) 74; Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, The Complete Works, trans. C. Luibheid and P. Rorem (New York, 1987) 148. This contemplation of condescending symbols is also discussed in a question and answer guide from the second half of the sixth century; see J.-C. Guy, “Un Entretien monastique sur la contemplation,” Recherches des sciences religieuses 50 (1962):234–35, 238–39.

7. See, for example, Kitzinger, “The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm,” 137ff., and U. Jeck, “Ps. Dionysios Areopagites und der Bilderstreit in Byzanz: Überlegungen zur Dionysiosrezeption des Johannes von Damaskos,” Hermeneia. Zeitschrift für ostkirchliche Kunst 8 / 2 (1992):71–80.

8. De coel. hier., XV.8, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 184–88.

9. De coel. hier., XV.8, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 185–87.

According to Pseudo-Dionysius, symbols offer the primary access to God, as they are condescendences that render God accessible to incarnate intelligences. The angels then take on forms, figures and schemata that can fall to our senses and be more readily grasped and interpreted.¹⁰

That one has reason to attribute figures to that which is without figure, and forms to that which has no form ... is not sufficient. ... They require some appropriate elevations and that which has some affinity with our nature, so that consequently we are capable of gaining ourselves the figurations, which are accessible for us. ... But it must be said also that the thing which is hidden under unrevealing and sacred enigmas is suited most perfectly to the mysterious words, and to rendering inaccessible to most people, the holy and secret truth of the otherworldly spirits. For all persons are not saints, and, as scripture informs us, not all have knowledge (I Cor. 8:7).¹¹

The symbols provided by the celestial intelligences have, therefore, an educative role for those seeking greater knowledge of God. This process of contemplation is a simultaneous act of resistance to a complacency attached to matter, and it also involves a full engagement with the symbol itself, rather than a literal interpretation of the symbol.¹² By resistance to complacency, Pseudo-Dionysius meant that one must disengage the sensible images from all signification that is base or vulgar or simply natural which could alter or obscure the divine revelation borne by the images.¹³ The correct play of the

10. See R. Roques, "Introduction," in La Hiérarchie Céleste, xxi ff.

11. De coel. hier., II.2, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 76–77.

12. Roques, "Introduction," xxi; A. Louth, Denys the Areopagite (Wilton, Conn., 1989) 46.

13. And see J. Derrida, "How to Avoid Speaking: Denials," in Languages of the Unsayable. The Play of Negativity in Literature and Literary Theory, ed. S. Budick and W. Iser, trans. K. Friedan (New York, 1989) 44: "A predicate can always conceal another predicate, or rather the nakedness of an absence of predicate—as the (sometimes indispensable) veil of a garment can at once dissimulate and reveal the very fact that it dissimulates and renders attractive at the same time. Hence the voice of an utterance can conceal another, which it then appears to quote without quoting it, presenting itself as another form, namely as a quotation of the other."

symbolism demands that the intelligence adhere openly and exclusively to the intelligible richness of the sensible images. This operation requires an effort of lucidity that discerns the true intelligible value of the image.¹⁴

The exigencies of catharsis and anagogy make humanity prefer the dissembling symbols to symbols that resemble.¹⁵ For the latter places humanity in danger of becoming attached to these things and therefore misled. With dissembling symbols, the effort of anagogy is almost inevitable and so there is no seduction or bonding. With these dissembling symbols of the angelic beings the means of interpretation is a prudent but difficult, and necessarily provisional, act of anagogy.

Every being, every element and every sensible quality can serve as a point of departure to intelligible contemplation and reveal some character of the celestial essences. The anthropomorphism of the angels is, properly speaking, a symbolic dissimulation. The angels take human form for symbolic reasons, that is, on account of humanity's powers of intellect.

But [the angels] are described in human form on account of [human] intelligence, and they have powers of sight directed upwards, and because [humans] have the upright . . . form, and the ability to lead and command according to nature, [because humans live] the least according to sensation as opposed to the other powers that lead illogical lives, and [human nature] masters all of it by the strength of its spirit, and by the dominance of the logical knowledge, and according to the free and unfettered nature of [the human] soul.¹⁶

Each symbol, then, is accessible by an act of exegesis and imparts an amount of intelligible information according to the worth and effort of the person contemplating.¹⁷ The value and the level of the symbol

14. Roques, "Introduction," xxii.

15. De coel. hier., II, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 73–87.

16. De coel. hier., XV.3, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 171–73.

17. De coel. hier., XV, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 163–91.

are bound to the value and the level of the intelligence that uses it. Symbols are, therefore, essentially “cursive” and “mobile,” varying according to the order and receptivity of the intelligence.¹⁸ Pseudo-Dionysius’s position is based on an openness to symbolic interpretation; indeed, his theology demands it.

The ultimate goal of this process of symbolic interpretation is the empty and obscure site of incomprehension, “the brilliant darkness of a hidden silence,” “the truly mysterious darkness of unknowing.”¹⁹ The goal of Pseudo-Dionysius’s negative theology has striking parallels with Evagrius’s desired state of “apatheia” (ἀπάθεια).²⁰ Evagrius stated that the proper preparation for true contemplation of God and things divine was a humble emptying of the mind of all emotion and thought, especially of the figural kind.²¹ Pure prayer and contemplation can thus be accomplished in theory but only after all contaminating sensual “images” have been vanquished. For Pseudo-Dionysius, prayer too is necessary, as “a passage, a transfer, a translation.”²² Silent contemplation of scriptural signs, “secret manifestations” of God, is the route to knowledge of transcendent reality.

The two processes of Evagrius and Pseudo-Dionysius share similar goals in silent, empty contemplation of God, but Evagrius’s absolute

18. Roques, “Introduction,” xc.

19. Respectively, De divinis nominibus, XIII.1, PG 3:977B, The Complete Works, trans. C. Luibheid and P. Rorem, 135; and De mystica theologia, I.3, PG 3:1001A, The Complete Works, trans. C. Luibheid and P. Rorem, 137. And see, in general, on the negative theology of Pseudo-Dionysius, R. Mortley, From Word to Silence. Vol. II. The Way of Negation, Christian and Greek, Theophaneia, vol. 31 (Bonn, 1986) 229ff.

20. It might be said that Maximus Confessor (ca. 580–662) was a natural heir to both of these Church Fathers, indicating that the two systems of thought were reconcilable. Maximus was largely responsible for the dissemination of Areopagite theology in the east; see J. Pelikan, “Introduction,” in Maximus Confessor, Selected Writings (New York, 1985) 6. And in his description of the spiritual life and of pure prayer, Maximus clearly owed a debt to Evagrius; see M. Viller, “Aux sources de la spiritualité de S. Maxime: les oeuvres d’Evagre le Pontique,” Revue d’ascétique et de mystique 11(1930):156–84, 239–68, 331–36.

21. See Clark, The Origenist Controversy, 83ff.

22. See, for example, De div. nom., III.1, PG 3:680D. Quote in text from Derrida, “How to Avoid Speaking,” 41, and further: “Here prayer is not a preamble, an accessory mode of access. It constitutes an essential moment, it adjusts discursive asceticism, the passage through the desert of discourse, the apparent referential vacuity which will only avoid empty deliria and prattling by addressing itself from the start to the other, to you. But to you as ‘hyperessential and more than divine Trinity.’” eschewing of signs and images as the steps to this goal is the point of departure from Pseudo-Dionysius's process of meditation on unknowable things. Pseudo-Dionysius marks a distinct path, therefore, in his simultaneous process of engagement with a symbol and denial of its literal worth. The path he described was widely influential in the sixth century and beyond. Indeed, the operations he describes influenced much of the theology developed in subsequent centuries, and later iconophile theories of devotion before material images clearly relied on Pseudo-Dionysius's description of approaches to divine things. Moreover, the influence of Pseudo-Dionysius was not restricted to abstract theological speculation; traces of his theology can also be discerned in actual practice as gleaned from a set of sixth-century epigrams.

Written about images of the Archangel Michael, these epigrams illustrate in a concrete way perceptions of images in the period immediately following Pseudo-Dionysius. They reveal a thematic thread linking Pseudo-Dionysius's theology concerning symbolic approaches to images of angels and perceptions of tangible material images. The theology and more popular understanding represented by these epigrams occupy the same conceptual ground: that an image makes material in a dissembling way an immaterial being for contemplative rather than descriptive purposes. This group of epigrams, therefore, parallels positions described in abstruse terms by iconophile theologians, and taken as a whole these different texts show a mode of gaining knowledge through images common to both theory and practice.

This small group of epigrams was composed as part of a larger anthology, gathered during the reign of Justin II, perhaps around 568, by Agathias (ca. 532–ca. 580).²³ Based on the antique model of the 23. See Alan Cameron, The Greek Anthology from Meleager to Planudes (Oxford, 1993) 16. However, R. C. McCail thought that this group of epigrams on images of angels originated outside of the cycle proper; see his "The Cycle of Agathias: New Identifications Scrutinised," Journal of Hellenic Studies 89(1969):92ff. Furthermore, McCail dates the epigrams from a period ranging from 555 to 570, against Cameron who sees them as a coherent and contemporary group. See R. C. McCail, "On the Early Career of Agathias Scholasticus," REB 28(1970):142.

Garland written by Meleager (fl. ca. 60 B.C.E.), the epigrams were apparently written by a group of educated men on set topics and in similar styles. The collection is extant only because of a compilation made in about 900 by Constantine Cephalas. Its survival is of great importance as this cycle of epigrams provides remarkable evidence of attitudes to images of angels from the period preceding Iconoclasm.

In the first place, an image of the Archangel may be intended as a thank-offering for past benefit and as a request for future aid. Agathias wrote this epigram for an image of the Archangel at the Sosthenium near Constantinople:

Aemilianus of Caria and John with him, Rufinus of Alexandria and Agathias of Asia having completed the fourth year of their legal studies, O Archangel, dedicated to thee, O Blessed One, thy painted image, praying that their future may be happy. Make thyself manifest in the direction of their hopes.²⁴

The question of materiality is raised in this epigram to the extent that the Archangel's benign presence is beseeched through the lawyers' gift of depiction. The aim of materiality, the devotional goal of this epigram, is expressed more forcefully and more paradoxically in another epigram in the group. An epigram by Agathias on another image of the Archangel also expresses gratitude for the Archangel's intervention and protection but raises important issues of perception and depiction not brought up in the Sosthenium epigram:

24. The Greek Anthology, ed. W.R. Paton, 5 vols. (London, 1927) I:35. And see Averil Cameron, Agathias (Oxford, 1970) 5. Robin Cormack has discussed this epigram in connection with a newly discovered fresco from the theatre at Aphrodisias that he dates to the sixth century; see his "The Wall Painting of St. Michael in the Theatre," in Aphrodisias Papers 2. The Theatre, a Sculptor's Workshop, Philosophers, and Coin Types, ed. R. R. R. Smith and K. T. Erim (Ann Arbor, 1991) 115. And T. F. Mathews used this epigram to describe the creation of an "interior imprint" of a spiritual reality in the Byzantine viewer; however, he neglects the symbolic quality of likenesses of angels in favor of visual engagement and involvement. See his "Psychological Dimensions in the Art of Eastern Christendom," in Art and Religion: Faith, Form and Reform, 1984 Paine Lectures in Religion, ed. O. Overby (Columbia, Mo., 1986) 12ff.

“On a picture of Theodorus the Illustrious and twice Proconsul, in which he is shown receiving the insignia of office from the Archangel in Ephesus”: Forgive us, O Archangel, for picturing thee, for thy face is invisible; this is but an offering of men. For by thy grace Theodorus hath his girdle of a Magister, and twice won for his prize the Proconsular chair. The picture testifies to his gratitude, for in return he expressed the image of thy beauty.²⁵

The difficulty inherent in depicting the Archangel, and the referential quality that necessarily results in such depictions, is significant. Although the Archangel is by nature invisible, and in this way unperceivable, the image is made according to the means available to humanity. For this reason, the image is conditional and incomplete, but the image’s provisional quality, which the epigram states, is the crucial issue. The donor apologizes for the presumption of manufacturing an undepictable subject, since the image is only an approximation, but the image was made because the Archangel has made himself manifest, in some fashion, on the donor’s behalf. Commemorating the Archangel’s invisible guidance and protection, the image was clearly an emblem of angelic aid. The iconography of the Archangel—which one may safely assume was of the winged youth as celestial minister—is a sign for this watchful and benevolent presence.

The epigrams’ significant operation is the spiritual or intellectual contemplation that the material image initiates.²⁶ Agathias’s epigram

25. The Greek Anthology, I:36. See also P. Speck, “Ein Bild des Erzengels Michael in Ephesos (Anthologia Palatina I,36),” Varia II, ΠΟΙΚΙΛΑ ΒΥΖΑΝΤΙΝΑ, vol. 6 (Bonn, 1987) 355–62; and also Alan Cameron, The Greek Anthology, 72ff. and 152ff.

26. R.C. McCail, “The Erotic and Ascetic Poetry of Agathias Scholasticus,” B 41(1971):246, rightly questions Kitzinger’s view of the process of comprehension that Agathias describes. For Kitzinger, the viewer looks at the image “as if” the figure represented were there. See “The Cult of Images Before Iconoclasm,” 147 n268. Clearly, however, Agathias’s intellectual approach uses the image as a bridge over which one travels for knowledge and communication, not as an embodiment of the model. McCail also points out that Agathias’s formulation of the passage of honor from image to prototype relies on sound patristic foundations, like the statement of Basil of Caesarea (ca. 329–379), “ἡ τῆς εἰκόνας τιμὴ ἐπὶ τὸ πρῶτότυπον διαβαίνει” (De Spiritu Sancto, XVIII, Traité du Saint-Esprit, SC vol. 17 bis, ed. B. Pruche [Paris, 1968] 406).

is significant in this regard since the image is explicitly said to incite the mind to a “higher contemplation” by means of the image’s colors.²⁷ Agathias’s description of approach is paralleled by a contemporary epigram of Nilus Scholasticus. Nilus is equally aware of the difficulties involved in the capturing of a likeness and notes the “daring” quality of representation: “‘On an image of the Archangel’: How daring it is to picture the incorporeal! But yet the image leads us up to spiritual recollection of celestial beings.”²⁸ The process by which the mind is ferried to higher contemplation is stated succinctly in this epigram. The image, Nilus and Agathias both assert, is not a representation of the form of the Archangel in any essential way, but only an approximation of the formless Archangel. But by this representation of an unviewable being the image allows the viewer to reflect on the being itself. In fact, the image maintains a tentative, intellectual proximity of the ineffable being, otherwise unknowable and unapproachable. The image gives Agathias’s “confused veneration” a focus and an object. The material image provides, therefore, a paradoxical ability to conduct through the eyes a lucid contemplation of the unviewable, incomprehensible Archangel.

These epigrams ought to be seen, moreover, in the context of the increasing number of formulations of art’s role in worship in the course of the sixth century. The anagogical function of images of angels as described in these epigrams parallels the function of images in Christian worship that Hypatius of Ephesus (d. ca. 541) describes in a letter written to Julian, bishop of Atramyntium.²⁹ In Hypatius’s view, images should be admitted, albeit grudgingly, into Christian worship because they are a means by which the weaker and less spiri-

27. The Greek Anthology, I:34. On this epigram, see chapter 2.

28. The Greek Anthology, I:33.

29. See P.J. Alexander, “Hypatius of Ephesus: A Note on Worship in the Sixth Century,” HTR 45(1952):177–84, and S. Gero, “Hypatius of Ephesus on the Cult of Images,” in Christianity, Judaism and Other Greco-Roman Cults. Studies for Morton Smith at Sixty, 4 vols. (Leiden, 1975) II:208–16; and G. Lange, Bild und Wort. Die katechetischen Funktionen des Bildes in der griechischen Theologie des sechsten bis neunten Jahrhunderts, Würzburg, 1969, 44ff. The text is found in F. Diekamp, Analecta patristica. Texte und Abhandlungen zur griechischen Patristik, Orientalia christiana analecta, vol. 117 (Rome, 1938) 127ff., and in H. Thümmel, Die Frühgeschichte der ostkirchlichen Bilderlehre. Texte und Untersuchungen zur Zeit vor dem Bilderstreit, TU vol. 139 (Berlin, 1992) 320–21.

tually advanced in the community might come to some introductory knowledge of divine things. For this reason, Hypatius told his correspondent, he shuns material aids, but admits images into worship,

... because we permit each order of the faithful to be guided and led up to the divine being in a manner appropriate to it [the order] because we think that some people are guided even by these [gold, silver, etc.] towards the intelligible beauty and from the abundant light in the sanctuaries to the intelligible and immaterial light.³⁰

Hypatius also stated that the cherubim on the Ark of the Covenant were one example of God's providence condescending for the sake of the weaker members of his chosen people; in this way, God gave material guidance to know him better.³¹ The anagogical function of images as described in this letter bears striking similarities to the epigrams discussed above, and also in a general way to the neo-Platonism of Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite.³² These texts describe the spiritual elevation to divinity that signs, material and verbal, can provide for Christians. Yet Hypatius clearly saw a dichotomy between more advanced spirituality and the less perfect that depends upon these material signs, which Pseudo-Dionysius does not distinguish.

Evidently, sixth-century ecclesiastics and laymen alike, taking Hypatius and Agathias as examples, were grappling with the function and meaning of images in Christian worship. Hypatius was clearly 30. Diekamp, Analecta patristica, 128.26–30; trans. Alexander, "Hypatius of Ephesus," 180.

31. Alexander, "Hypatius of Ephesus," 179–80. The example of the cherubim presages the iconophile emphasis on God's prescription for the construction of the Ark and the cherubim; see below.

32. Kitzing thought the theology of Pseudo-Dionysius an important factor in the formulation of image theory such as Hypatius expounded in this letter to Julian. See "The Cult of Images Before Iconoclasm," 137–38. Jean Gouillard, "Hypatios d'Éphèse ou du Pseudo-Denys à Théodore Studite," REB 19(1961):72ff., was also struck by the coincidence in thought regarding symbolism and ascent to higher mysteries in both Hypatius and Pseudo-Dionysius. However, Gero sees only a general knowledge of platonic concepts in Hypatius, and concluded that Hypatius was drawing from the same well without direct dependence on Pseudo-Dionysius. See "Hypatius of Ephesus on the Cult of Images," 211–12.

ambivalent on the ultimate value of images but open-minded and willing to admit the usefulness of images in Christian pedagogy. Slightly later, Agathias is quite certain of the purpose of images in the elevation of the Christian mind toward divine things. The use of images as a means by which the worshipper remembers and venerates the person depicted is also a theme of the anti-Jewish literature of the seventh century, and it becomes a standard response to accusations of idolatry from non-Christians and iconoclasts alike. Pseudo-Athanasius, for instance, wrote that Christians do not honor the icons themselves, “But we only show forth our soul’s condition (σχέσιν) and love toward the form seen on the icon.”³³ And in his Disputatio adversus Judaeos, Anastasius Sinaïtes (d. ca. 700) said that Christians honor and imitate Christ and the saints through a material image as the Jews honor the power of the word through a material book.³⁴

The epigrams of Agathias and Nilus take a similar position with regard to honor passing to the prototype. They also show in their emphasis on “higher contemplation” of incomprehensible angels certain affinities with philosophical ideas associated with pagan neo-Platonism. For example, the language used by Porphyry (ca. 232–ca. 303) to rationalize the worship of pagan statues in his treatise

33. Quaestiones ad Antiochum ducem, XXXIX, PG 28:621B–D. See also Leontius of Neapolis, preserved in the writings of John of Damascus, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III Contra imaginum calumniatores orationes tres, PTS vol. 17, ed. P.B. Kotter (Berlin, 1975) 156–58; V. Déroche, “L’Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis,” TM 12(1994):79ff.; On the Divine Images. Three Apologies Against Those Who Attack the Divine Images, trans. D. Anderson (Crestwood, N.Y., 1980) 41–42; Trophies of Damascus (Les Trophées de Damas), PO vol. 15/2, ed. G. Bardy [Paris, 1920; rp. Louvain, 1973] 78.11ff.); the Armenian John Mayragometsi (S. Der Nersessian, “Une apologie des images du septième siècle,” B 17[1944/5]:60; and the Dialogue between the Jews, Papiscus and Philo, and a Monk (Dialogue between a Christian and a Jew entitled ANTIBOLH ΠΑΠΙΣΚΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΦΙΛΩΝΟΥ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ ΗΠΟΣ ΜΟΝΑΧΟΝ ΤΙΝΑ, ed. A.C. McGiffert [Marburg, 1889] 51–52).

See Lange, Bild und Wort, 188ff., K.A. Corrigan, Visual Polemics in the Ninth-Century Byzantine Psalters (Cambridge, 1992) 40ff., and V. Déroche, “L’authenticité de l’Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis,” Bulletin de correspondance hellénique 110(1986):661ff.

34. PG 89:1233C–6A. John Mayragometsi compares the ink used to write scripture and the pigments used to depict the saints. See Der Nersessian, “Une apologie des images du septième siècle,” 66–67.

“Concerning Idols” is closer to the epigrams’ conception of images of angels than the down-to-earth polemic of texts against Jews. Porphyry stated that pagan statues are simply wood and stone, but also images suited for human perception through which the learned are able to comprehend the deity.³⁵ This formulation of the use of images for gaining knowledge of transcendent beings is a clear forerunner of the philosophical defense of images of the sixth-century epigrams.³⁶ As he may well have been Macarius Magnes’s “opponent” in the Apocriticus, Porphyry’s views on symbolic images are directly relevant here. One can clearly discern in this pagan-Christian dialogue of the fourth century the beginnings of the later disagreement between neo-Platonic ideas of symbolic images and intellectual, non-material worship.³⁷ In fact, the differences between Porphyry and Macarius Magnes seen in that dialogue can be taken as emblematic

35. See J. Bidez, Vie de Porphyre. Le philosophe néoplatonicien (Gand and Leipzig, 1913; rpt. Hildesheim and New York, 1980) 143ff., text 1*–23*, F. Börtzler, Porphyrius’ Schrift von den Götterbildern (Erlangen, 1908) and C. Clerc, Les théories relatives au culte des images chez les auteurs grecs du II^e siècle après J.-C. (Paris, 1915) 253ff. The text on pagan statues is preserved in the third book of Eusebius of Caesarea’s Praeparatio Evangelica, GCS vol. 43, 2d ed., ed. K. Mras (Berlin, 1975). The connection between pagan defense of statues and Christian defense of image worship was noted by A. Grabar, L’iconoclasm byzantin. Dossier archéologique (Paris, 1957) 138ff., and P.J. Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople. Ecclesiastical Policy and Image Worship in the Byzantine Empire (Oxford, 1958) 27ff.

36. See Lange, Bild und Wort, 182ff. Leslie Brubaker, “Icons Before Iconoclasm?” in Morfologie sociali e culturali in Europa fra tarda antichità e alto medioevo, Settimane vol. 45, 2 vols. (Spoleto, 1998) II:1226–27, 1231, argues for the increased importance of the transparent image in the mid-sixth century, but a case can surely be made for continuity of this idea in Late Antiquity.

37. A. Harnack, Kritik des Neues Testaments von einem griechischen Philosophen des 3. Jahrhunderts. Die in Apocriticus des Macarius Magnes enthaltene Streitschrift, TU vol. 37/3 (Leipzig, 1911); G. Bardy, in DTC IX:1459. Macarius’s opponent defended pagan statues in this way: “Since it is then acknowledged that the angels share in the divine nature, those that make proper reverence to the respected gods do not think that it is the god, the image that is fashioned out of wood or stone or bronze, nor if some portion of the image should be cut off, do they believe that a portion of God’s power is subtracted. It should be called to mind that the images and temples were constructed by the ancients, that on account of coming hither the believers were brought to remembrance of God, when they go there, and being purified generally and offering devotion and supplication, and for what things they desired they asked from the gods. For even if someone makes an image of a friend, certainly one does not think that his friend is in it nor does one think that a part of the body is enclosed in the sections of the representation, but honour for the friend is shown through the image” (Blondel 200.12–22).

as the conceptual differences generally separating the defenders and opponents of images of angels under discussion in this study. The writers of the epigrams were clearly influenced by neo-Platonic ideas on images in their emphasis on the ascent of the mind to a higher reality through matter; in particular, Pseudo-Dionysius provided these writers with a suitably Christian framework for these neo-Platonic concepts. While these writers of the sixth-century epigrams, as well as Hypatius of Ephesus, have real affinities with the anti-Jewish theologians of the seventh century, they used more rarefied and subtle descriptions of intellectual processes involved in viewing images derived from direct contact with neo-Platonist ideas.³⁸

Agathias's epigrams are also marked by an element of defensiveness that leads one to think that the place of images in worship and devotion was not resolved in every Christian's mind. Images had been perceived more and more as incontrovertible proofs and venerable recollections by some Christians,³⁹ but the opposition discussed in the previous chapter reveals that certain church officials resisted with equal force the use of images in worship.⁴⁰ In this context, Agathias was not alone in seeing the representation of angels as "daring." And in the sixth century, John of Gaza also wrote of the undaunted artists who strove to depict such bodiless beings. In his description of paintings in a bath house at Gaza, John describes the artists as "boiling with boldness" and "made drunk in mind" in delineating the

38. The relation between pagan apologetics, such as Porphyry's defense of images, and Byzantine image theory was described with great economy by N. H. Baynes, "Idolatry and the Early Church," in his Byzantine and Other Studies (London, 1955) 116–43.

39. For example, A. D. Kartsonis, in Anastasis. The Making of an Image (Princeton, 1986) 58–59, discusses Anastasius Sinaïtes's view that images are theological proofs that cannot be falsified. Also, Canon 82 of the Council of Trullo (692) stated a belief in the ability of art to express truths about the divinity and incarnation of Christ: "in order that the perfect should be set down before everybody's eyes even in painting, we decree that [the figure of] the Lamb, Christ our God, who removes the sins of the world, should henceforward be set up in human form on images also, in the place of the ancient lamb, inasmuch as we comprehend thereby the sublimity of the humiliation of God's Word, and are guided to the recollection of His life in flesh, His Passion and His salutary Death and the redemption which has thence accrued to the world." See Mansi XI:977BC; trans. C. Mango, The Art of the Byzantine Empire, 312–1453. Sources and Documents (Toronto, 1986) 139–40.

40. See Kitzinger, "The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm," 139, and McCail, "The Erotic and Ascetic Poetry of Agathias Scholasticus," 241ff.

heavenly powers, that is “to lend body to bodiless nature.”⁴¹ Clearly, in the minds of some Christians, representing angels existed as an issue that was propelled by material images on view and in devotion. The embodying of angelic powers, begun in Christian art as early as the second century, remained an issue into the sixth century and grew in importance as images became increasingly prominent in cult practice. The issue of how one came to knowledge of angelic beings persisted as an element in the debates over worship and images of the period preceding Iconoclasm, and drew particular attention when the debates reached a head in the mid-eighth century as iconophile theologians turned their attention to the theory and practice of devotion to images.

THE ICONOPHILE THEORY OF SYMBOLIC IMAGES OF ANGELS

Commentary on images of angels did not appear again until the eighth-/ninth-century iconophile defense arose in reaction to the iconoclastic attack on religious images. The elaborate defense of images arose as circumstances demanded, but the striking parallels between iconophile theology and the epigrams discussed above must be seen as a sign of continuity in basic approach to images of angels. In the debates over worship and symbolism that were central to the development of Byzantine theology in the sixth and seventh centuries, a consistent feature was an acceptance of images of angels as means, albeit partial, to a comprehension of God’s spiritual servants. Dependent on earlier writings, iconophile theology is the most comprehensive treatment of the significance of such images in worship, and because of its articulation and extensiveness this image theory needs detailed examination. Moreover, theory helps shed light on the meaning of the ninth-century restoration of the mosaics of the angelic powers in the Church of the Dormition at Nicaea (Iznik), and this chapter ends by examining these mosaics with regard to the exchange between word and image.

41. See P. Friedländer, Johannes von Gaza und Paulus Silentarius. Kunstbeschreibungen justinianischer Zeit (Leipzig and Berlin, 1912; rp. Hildesheim and New York, 1969) 135.12–136.25. Abstract theological concepts, like the Trinity, are also depicted in this program. According to John of Gaza, a cross within three concentric circles referred to the Trinity. See Friedländer, Johannes von Gaza und Paulus Silentarius, 137.41–138.44; and H. Maguire, Earth and Ocean. The Terrestrial World in Early Byzantine Art (University Park and London, 1987) 12–13, 20–21. This symbolic mode of depicting the Trinity parallels Philoxenus’s scruples concerning depiction of the Holy Spirit, as discussed in the previous chapter; see McCail, “The Erotic and Ascetic Poetry of Agathias Scholasticus,” 245, who speculated that the misgivings of Philoxenus of Mabbug, Severus of Antioch and John of Gaza concerning images of angels may have derived from the influence of the Christian university at Gaza.

That images could lead viewers from the visible to knowledge of the invisible, however incomplete, was a primary defense of images for iconophiles.⁴² The faculty of sight was a necessary element in iconophile justifications of images in worship, and, although the ultimate goal was to transcend the material assistance that images afforded, vision was defined as a fundamental means of facilitating

42. For instance, in the eighth-century Adversus Constantinum Caballinum, the process is set out in one passage in the form of a fictional dialogue between an iconophile and an iconoclast. In the dialogue, the iconophile rhetorically asks the iconoclast how he himself would teach a stranger all the mysteries of their faith. The iconophile protests that one cannot be led to the higher mysteries of the invisible things without some kind of material prop or demonstration, "For if you said to him, 'It is invisible,' what has he seen that he should put trust in your conscience and faith?" The first thing one must do is build on sensible things so that in this way, little by little, one is led to invisible things. The didactic function of the material image is clearly emphasized in this passage, since the education and conversion of the stranger is accomplished by means of the images themselves. See Adversus Constantinum Caballinum, X, PG 95:325C–8B, and also P. Speck, Ich bin's nicht, Kaiser Konstantin ist es gewesen. Die Legenden vom Einfluß des Teufels, des Juden und des Moslem auf den Ikonoklasmus, ΠΟΙΚΙΛΑ ΒΥΖΑΝΤΙΝΑ, vol. 10 (Bonn, 1990) 402. The text begins this way: "You take him into the church. You reveal to him the world which surrounds him. You open up for him the forms of the figures of the holy icons. This unbeliever sees and he says, 'Who is this crucified? Who is this rising and who is trampling upon the head of this old man?' Do you not teach him from the icons, saying, 'This crucified man, he is the son of God, who was crucified for the sins of the world? This risen man, it is he who raises the forefather of the world, Adam, who fell because of disobedience, and he went into Hades, where he was held these many years kept in chains and by unbreakable bars in these nether regions?' And in this way do you lead this man in to the knowledge of God. Again, you lead him to the font of the baptism. And he sees only water in the font, you the faithful one behold the water, and see light and spirit. When he has partaken of baptism, then he takes the truth from the senses, and applies them to the invisible ungenerated. If you offer the mystery of the body and blood of the Saviour, he sees bread and wine only. And you see the body and blood of Christ which flows from the undefiled source. And if he becomes worthy, he partakes with you." On this text, see also M.-F. Auzépy, "L'Adversus Constantinum Caballinum et Jean de Jérusalem," BS 56(1995):323–38.

knowledge. John of Damascus (ca. 675–ca. 750), for instance, was strongly in favor of the comprehension that comes through the faculty of sight: “Sensation is the strength of the soul returned from matter, and therefore discernment. Sensory moreover are the organs.... The first sense is sight.”⁴³ Hearing and the other faculties follow in descending order of importance. John of Damascus was the first great opponent of iconoclastic doctrine and for that was anathematized at the iconoclastic council of Hiereia in 754. John of Damascus’s image theory was perhaps not as sophisticated as that of such later opponents of iconoclasm as Nicephorus (ca. 750–828), Theodore of Stoudios (759–826) and Photius (ca. 810–d. after 893), but almost all the arguments regarding angels found in these ninth-century theologians can be seen in some form in John of Damascus’s work. Through John of Damascus, the general reliance on the theology of Pseudo-Dionysius is evident in iconophile theory. As John and other iconophiles stated, images may serve as sensible symbols, as Pseudo-Dionysius put it, that lead the worshipper to comprehension of the divine, because of the particular qualities of the sense of the sight.

43. Expositio fidei, II.18, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II Expositio fidei, PTS vol. 12, ed. P.B. Kotter (Berlin, 1973) 83–84. John of Damascus is typical, in this way, of iconophile stress on the importance of the sense of sight. For instance, the author of the Adversus Constantinum Caballinum, again, is explicit about the importance of sight and images for convincing the viewer of the truth and magnitude of doctrine; the means is again an engagement with an “iconic imprint,” but with real emotional compulsion. See VIII, PG 95:324C–5A. The Second Council of Nicaea in 787 was equally explicit about the role of the images and sight in spiritual development. The Fathers of the Council stated that the outlines and the representations of the apostles, martyrs, saints and holy persons are there “so we are led to remember, attend, and participate in their holiness.” See Mansi XIII:132E. Elsewhere it is stated that hearing of the appearance of the angel to the Virgin we call the event to mind, and yet “seeing the icon in this way we consider the consequences of the thing more manifestly.” See Mansi XIII:269C. And, finally, Nicephorus defended visual perception but in a more “scholastic” way, according to his method of discourse, “For we all know that sight is the most honoured and necessary of the senses and it may allow apprehension of what falls under perception more distinctly and sharply; for ‘it is the nature of that which is heard to travel less quickly than that which is seen,’ and seeing will attract faster than the other senses since it also has the attractive power to a larger degree.” See Refutatio et eversio, 119, Nicephori patriarchae constantinopolitani Refutatio et eversio definitionis synodalis anni 815, Corpus Christianorum. Series Graeca, vol. 33, ed. J. Featherstone (Louvain, 1997) 211.56–62, trans. Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople, 211.

If iconophiles considered the anagogical and didactic function of images to be securely established, they needed to address other equally pressing iconoclastic accusations. In particular, Christological issues, which iconoclasts had already raised, became central for iconophiles;⁴⁴ and images of angels were used primarily as supports for the iconophile position on representing Christ. If this central Christological issue was the reason for the introduction of angels into these arguments, defense of images of angels soon diverged from the Christological path into new territory. It will become clear in the course of this chapter that this divergence occurred because of Christ's earthly life which the angels could not share.

In John of Damascus's theology, which typifies iconophile writing, Christ's life incarnate is the primary justification for representation. In turn, the incarnation had renewed a bond between God and humanity and initiated a new dispensation that images of Christ assert. The angels were brought into these arguments because they too appeared on earth and were apprehended in time and place. Description of the means by which their formless and immaterial nature was apprehended is the point at which justification of their images parts from the defense of Christ's images.

Important for the defense of Christ's representability was the definition of circumscription. The opponents of images had equated circumscription and painting so that the two were inseparable. This equation effectively ruled out the possibility of making images of Christ since the making of an image would presume that an essential aspect of the subject had been captured. And for God who is ineffable, capturing any part of his essence on an image is clearly impossible: God is simply uncircumscribable. From the beginning, then, the iconophile counterattack was centered on the definition of circumscription as distinct from painting, and circumscription, therefore, became a primary support in iconophile theory for the ability to represent spiritual beings.

44. Christology was central for western image theory, too, although anagogy was not a prescribed method of viewing. See H. L. Kessler, "Real Absence: Early Medieval Art and the Metamorphosis of Vision," in Morfologie sociali e culturali in Europa fra tarda antichità e alto medioevo, Settimane vol. 45, 2 vols. (Spoleto, 1998) II:1157–1213.

John of Damascus first discussed circumscription as a chief defense for the representations of Christ.⁴⁵ Angels were invoked and discussed in this connection in order to support the Christological argument for images. Angels substantiated the depiction of Christ because they are intellectual and bodiless, but apprehended in time and space, and thus circumscribable. Despite their nature, therefore, they can be depicted. John of Damascus wrote:

They are circumscribable. For when they are in heaven they are not on earth; and when they are sent to earth by God, they do not remain in heaven. They are not bound by walls or doors or keys or seals. For they are unbounded. I say that they are invisible; for not as they are do they appear to the worthy to whom God desires that they appear, but they see [the angels] altered, just as they are able to perceive. For only [God] is truly unbounded, only he is uncreated. For all creation is made finite by being created by God.⁴⁶

However, angels have particular problems attendant upon their nature since they have no visible form and change according to the situation:

God created them in his own image, of nature bodiless, wind, as it were, or immaterial fire, as the divine David said, “[God] who

45. Orationes de imaginibus tres, II.5, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 71–72; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 52–53: “If we attempted to make an image of the invisible God, this would be sinful indeed. It is impossible to portray one who is without body: invisible, uncircumscribed, and without form. Again if we made images of humans and believed them to be gods, and adored them as if they were so, we would be truly impious. We do neither of these things. But we are not mistaken if we make the image of God incarnate, who was seen on earth in the flesh, associated with humanity, and in his unspeakable goodness assumed the nature, feeling, form, and colour of our flesh. For we yearn to see how he looked, as the apostle says, ‘Now we see through a glass darkly’ (I Cor. 13:12). Now the icon is also a dark glass, fashioned according to the limitations of our physical nature.”

46. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II, 45. And also, “Physical things which have shape, bodies which are circumscribed, and have colour, are suitable subjects for image-making. Nevertheless, even if nothing physical or fleshly may be attributed to an angel, or a soul, or a demon, it is still possible to depict and circumscribe them according to their nature. For they are intellectual beings, and are believed to be present invisibly and to operate spiritually” (De imag. or., III.24, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 130–31; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 78).

maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire” (Ps. 104:4).
[And he made them] ethereal, and ardent, and fervent, and incisive, and penetrating, according to the divine will, calling them servants, and ascendent, and free from all knowledge of material things.⁴⁷

According to John of Damascus, the angels are intellects, ceaselessly moving, who are in places which are intelligible. But their nature is such that they cannot be circumscribed corporeally, he said, as they are not formed corporeally by nature, nor are they three dimensional. Rather, they appear and perform intellectually where they are commanded to be by God, and nowhere else.⁴⁸ Unlike Christ they have no stable, earthly form, and yet, since they are still within the boundaries of John of Damascus’s definition of circumscription, they may be depicted. John of Damascus’s definition depends largely on the ability of the angels to occupy place, that is, to be corporeal enough to have limit and circumference:

And the angel while he is contained in a place somatically, has form and outline. It is said that he is in a place, because he is present intellectually and operates according to his nature, and is not elsewhere, but is circumscribed in that way intellectually, there in that place where he operates. For it is not possible according to this for him to operate in different places. Only God can operate everywhere at once. And the angel, quick by nature, and traveling speedily and readily, operates in different places. God being ubiquitous and over everything, by this operates differently by a single, simple operation.⁴⁹

It is characteristic of angelology, and iconophiles were no exception, that the distinction between God and his messengers must be maintained, as well as the discrimination of the nature of humanity and of the angels.

47. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II, 45.

48. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II, 47.

49. Exp. fid., I.13, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II, 38.

Therefore the angel is an intellectual being in perpetual motion, of free will, bodiless, serving God, having received an immortal nature according to grace, of which nature the form and definition is known only to the Creator. It is said that an angel is bodiless and immaterial but only in relation to us. For everything measured against God, who alone is incomparable, is found base and material. God alone is naturally immaterial and bodiless.⁵⁰

Because they share some spiritual characteristics with the divine nature, however, angels were useful parallels for the entry of Christ into the world. This parallel supported the iconophile contention that divinity can be represented because it had appeared on earth. Angels occupy the middle area—as a kind of third body—in nature somewhere between God and humanity, but with a nature not fully determinable. If beings as immaterial and unparticipating as the angels can be circumscribed and depicted, then Christ incarnate should surely be circumscribed as human, and depicted as such.

The notion of circumscribability of the angels was derived from a context not properly concerned with iconophile theology nor properly speaking with Christology, but rather with the problematic nature and role of the angels.⁵¹ John of Damascus's innovation was to

50. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II, 45.

51. For instance, Gennadius of Marseilles, who died between 492 and 505, wrote that all creatures are to some extent corporeal, even the intellectual creatures of God. The proof of this is that all these creatures can be circumscribed in place, just as the soul which is enclosed in flesh and the demons who are in nature similar to the angels. Only God however is truly incorporeal and invisible by nature. God is rightly thought to be incorporeal because he is everywhere and infuses all creation with his presence (De ecclesiasticis dogmatibus, XI, PL 58:984A).

And in the fifth century, Faustus Rhegiensis wrote in a similar vein, "I would not even doubt that the angels are in places, who are certainly now compassed by the heavens, now borne by the empty space of the ether, now descending to earth; who the divine sermon describes in the vision of the patriarch ascending and descending, at any rate as if they were not in one place; but they are not able to be present everywhere and by ascent and descent depart. The most blessed Gabriel himself, who is known to stand before God himself, when he announced to Mary that the Lord was to be mingled with flesh, and when he assisted the mother under divine vigilance, without a doubt he was not in heaven, he was not flying somewhere over Mary, and he was not filling that great diffuse emptiness of the endless ether, but he was occupying that place, in which he was. Since it is like that, anything that occupies space is a body, how could someone not be confined to a place who is sent from recognize the angels and their circumscription as a positive support for Christ's circumscription. The link with these qualities of circumscription and the making of images had not yet been developed to the same degree as it would be by ninth-century theologians, but the essential link had been made by John of Damascus a century or so previously.

The iconophiles arrived at a conclusion concerning the relation of angels' images to their bodiless models by examining art authorized and produced under the Old Covenant. They established an iconophile argument of the divinely ordained worship of images, and the relation of image and prototype that God himself stated, by referring to God's commands to Moses in Exodus. Iconoclasts had cited God's injunction not to make graven images (Ex. 20:4) as an argument against Christian images at the first stage of Iconoclasm in the second quarter of the eighth century. This charge, and the iconophile response, is not particular to the Iconoclast controversy but was an extension of the pagan-Jewish "debates," as argued in such seventh-century anti-Jewish texts of Stephen of Bostra and Leontius of Neapolis.⁵² Indeed, John of Damascus cited both these theologians in his treatise directed against the attackers of images.⁵³ place to place, and as if the body is transported by movement and ascent, descends with effort, moves with mobility, goes, returns, is remote, and descends again" (Epistolae, III, in Fausti Reiensis Praeter sermones pseudo-eusebianos opera, Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum, vol. 21, ed. A. Engelbrecht [Prague, Vienna and Leipzig, 1891] 178).

The issue of circumscription continued to be discussed throughout the Byzantine period in examinations of angels' nature and their role in the cosmic hierarchy. For instance, see Nicetas Stethatos (1005?–ca. 1090), in Opusculi et litterae, SC vol. 81, ed. J. Darrouzès (Paris, 1961) 252, and Symeon of Thessalonike (d. 1429), Responsa ad Gabrielem Pentapolitanum, III, PG 155:841A.

52. See Corrigan, Visual Polemics, 33ff.

53. Stephen of Bostra in De imag. or., III.71–73, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos, III, 174. See also G. Mercati, Opere minori, Studi e testi, vol. 76 (Vatican City, 1937) 202–206, and A. Alexakis, "Stephen of Bostra: Fragmenta Contra Iudaeos (CPG 7790). A New Edition," JöB 43(1993):45–60, text at 51ff.

Leontius of Neapolis in De imag. or., III.84–89, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos, III, 178–81, Déroche, "L'Apologie contre les Juifs," 79ff. Leontius was also cited at Nicaea II; see Mansi XIII:44B ff., and Déroche, "L'Apologie contre les Juifs," 66ff.

See also the seventh-century Armenian defense of John Mayragometsi, in Der Nersessian, "Une apologie des images du septième siècle," 59.

The cherubim, as paradigms of angelic beings, occupy a central place in iconophile rationalizations of images, and angels generally become implicated in these rationalizations because of the cherubim's prominent role in the iconophile version of the Christian history of art. The responses of both the Christian combatants in these anti-Jewish texts and the iconophile theologians directly implicate images of angels and so brought the example of the cherubim to the fore in iconophile responses. The iconophile rebuttal, as in the anti-Jewish texts, was to cite scripture in return, principally God's command to Moses to construct the Ark of the Covenant (Ex. 25:22): "And there will I meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat from between the two cherubims which are upon the Ark of the testimony, of all things which I will give thee in commandment unto the children of Israel." God's specific command for the Ark, with lengthy, explicit instructions on its manufacture, was presented as a typology of Christian art. John of Damascus cited the tabernacle as an injunction for the creation of material images for Christians, and he introduced Bezaleel as the archetypical artist inspired by the spirit of God. John of Damascus referred to Exodus (31:1–5) for support:

And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, See, I have called by name Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, of the tribe of Judah: and I have filled him with the spirit of God, in wisdom, and in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship, to devise cunning works, to work in gold, and in silver and in brass, and in cutting of stones for setting, and in carving of timber, to work in all manner of workmanship.

And John of Damascus continued by citing the gathering of the material for Moses's construction of the Ark (Ex. 35:4–10), and then rhetorically asked if this manufacture of images was not done according to God's will: "Behold the handiwork of humanity becoming the likeness of the cherubim! How can you make the law a reason for refusing to do what the law itself commands?" He concluded that because Christ had become human the ancient commandment against idols had been annulled.⁵⁴

The cherubim were directly mentioned by God in his specifications for the Ark (Ex. 25:18–20), and the cherubim were the most important example for iconophiles generally of an explicit command by God to produce figured images.⁵⁵ Nicephorus used the artistic typology of the Ark as a sign of the divine origins of image making. The cherubim that were placed upon the Ark, in this way, became for Nicephorus a primary focus in the argument for images deriving from scriptural precedent. Moreover, Nicephorus in his discussion of the cherubim used them as the paradigms of the nature of angelic beings. The cherubim were placed high in his heavenly hierarchy by the necessity of his argument, in a position which is closest to God in station and image. At certain points in his discussion of cherubim, Nicephorus skated dangerously close to heretical angelology since Christ was seriously underestimated as the principal agent of mediation between God and humanity.⁵⁶

Yet the consequent immateriality of the cherubim's nature was another way for Nicephorus to bridge the gap between the difficulty of

54. De imag. or., I.16, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 92; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 25. And see also, in the same vein, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 96–101. And on the question of the Tabernacle and the iconophile defense of images, see S. Dufrenne, “Une illustration ‘historique,’ inconnue, du Psautier du Mont-Athos, Pantocrator No. 61,” CA 15(1965):83–95, H. L. Kessler, “Through the Temple Veil: The Holy Image in Judaism and Christianity,” Kairos 32/33(1990/1):60ff., and Corrigan, Visual Polemics, 33ff.

55. For a use of the cherubim to underpin iconophile arguments, beyond those discussed infra, see The Letter of the Three Patriarchs to Emperor Theophilus and Related Texts, ed. J. A. Munitiz, J. Chrysostomides, E. Harvalia-Crook and Ch. Dendrinos (Camberley, 1997) 33.5–16 (7.e).

The cherubim were also a concern of western programmers and theologians. See L. Nees, “Image and Text: Excerpts from Jerome’s ‘De Trinitate’ and the Maiestas Domini Miniature of the Gundohinus Gospels,” Viator 18(1987):11–17, A. Grabar, “Les mosaïques de Germigny-des-Prés,” in his L’art de la fin de l’Antiquité et du Moyen Âge, 3 vols. (Paris, 1968) II:995–1006, and A. Freeman, “Theodulf of Orleans and the Libri Carolini,” Speculum 32(1957):663–705.

56. See V. N. Giannopoulos, “Ἡ περὶ ἁγγέλων διδασκαλία τοῦ Πατριάρχου καὶ Ὁμολογητοῦ Νικηφόρου Α’ (+829),” Θεολογία 44(1973):328. On Nicephorus’s angelology, see also J. Travis, In Defense of the Faith. The Theology of Patriarch Nikephoros of Constantinople (Brookline, Mass., 1984) 30–43.

apprehension, which might seem to be incompatible with circumscription, and the fact of representation as commanded by God himself. The quality of the cherubim, and the rest of the angelic hierarchy, is such that humanity is incapable of perceiving them directly; their true nature is unviewable.⁵⁷ And yet God has allowed them, by means of a divine condescension, to be depicted in a “terrestrial impression.”⁵⁸ These “impressions” are clearly distinct from Christ’s own appearance on earth in which he was really made flesh and suffered as a human being.⁵⁹ In this view, images of angels are transcriptions of angelic appearances in a dissimulating way; they denote only the symbolic condescension and alteration of form for inferior human perception.

Aware of the distinctions between images of angels and Christ, John of Damascus and Nicephorus and other iconophile theologians were compelled to rationalize the obvious disjuncture between angels’ formlessness and their form on images. John of Damascus described the mutability of the angels in this way, “Therefore [the angelic nature] is a logical nature, both intellectual and autonomous, changeable at will or inclination.”⁶⁰ And also, “They are transformed for such things as the Lord God wills, and in this way they appear to humanity and reveal holy mysteries to it.”⁶¹ Despite the fact that the angels are changeable, unpredictable and ultimately un-

57. Apologeticus pro sacris imaginibus, 70, PG 100:769A, “For you might say somehow like this, as we know well, that the godly cherubim since they are invisible by nature, are scarcely perceptible by humanity.”

58. Humanity is incapable of seeing intelligible beings like the angels directly, and out of his beneficence God has commanded, “that the most blessed aspects of the heavenly powers are made manifest in symbolic impressions” (Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:777C). Furthermore the command given to Moses in Ex. 25:40 is an example of God’s providence. The cherubim mediate “the beneficent progressions of divine providence to others positioned below them and take on likenesses because of the function they perform, and in these, which are likenesses made on earth, are allowed due to divine condescension” (Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:776A).

59. On the opacity of images of Christ for Theodore of Stoudios, see G. Peers, “Breathless, Speechless Images: On the Chalke Gate Epigram,” in Hommages Margaret Head Thomson, Cahiers des études anciennes, vol. 32, ed. L. Finneté and A.P. Booth (Trois Rivières, Québec, 1998) 111–12.

60. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos, II, 45.

61. Exp. fid., II.3, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos, II, 47.

knowable, John of Damascus justified their images as allusive and symbolic signs.

God wills that we should not be totally ignorant of bodiless creatures, and so he clothed them with forms and shapes, and used images comprehensible to our nature, material forms which could be seen by the spiritual nature of the mind. From these we make images and representations, for how else could the cherubim be shown as having form?⁶²

According to John of Damascus, images of angels are made with wings because these images are comprehensible to inferior human perception. Human perception is able to approach the image at a spiritual and not a literal level, in order to unlock the meaning behind its enigmatic demonstration of angelic nature. In this passage, John of Damascus gave a definition of relation of image and prototype wherein images have no ability to describe their model visually, only to provide intellectual means for the viewer to apprehend spiritually an otherwise unknowable creature.

Defining the precise quality of the relation between images and their prototypes, and consequently what this quality meant for understanding images, was an especially knotty problem in defending the representations of angels. John of Damascus's definition of relation determined, to a certain extent, the course of the theological discussion. For iconoclasts, of course, any relation of prototype to image was considered impossible because iconoclasts defined a true image as consubstantial with the prototype. John of Damascus, in contrast, denied that the image was able to have any essential relation with its prototype.

An image is of like character with its prototype, but with a certain difference. It is not like the archetype in every way. The Son is the living, essential, and precisely similar image of the invisible God, 62. De imag. or., III.24, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos, 132; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 79.

bearing the entire father within himself, equal to him in all things, except that he is begotten by him, the begetter.⁶³

The first kind of image for John of Damascus is the natural image.⁶⁴ The other images, and John of Damascus enumerated six more, are non-essential, artificial images.⁶⁵ The fourth kind includes the angels who do not relate to their images essentially, but rather symbolically and intangibly:

These [images] give us a faint apprehension of God and the angels where otherwise we would have none, because it is impossible for us to think immaterial things unless we can envision analogous shapes, as the great and holy Dionysius the Areopagite has said.⁶⁶

John of Damascus stated that the image and prototype are related in the case of the angels and God only in an indistinct and referential way, that affords human intellect some glimpse of incomprehensible matters. Images are therefore an important means by which knowledge of God, and of his manifestations and creations, is initiated and increased. According to John of Damascus, images are an incomplete but necessary reference and aid to better knowledge of the unknowable things of God:

Again, visible things are corporeal models which provide a vague understanding of intangible things. Holy scripture describes God and the angels as having descriptive form, and the same blessed Dionysius teaches us why. Anyone would say that our inability im-

63. De imag. or., I.11, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 83–84; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 19.

64. De imag. or., III.15ff., Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 126ff.; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 74ff.

65. On these types, see the remarks of M. Barasch, Icon. Studies in the History of an Idea (New York and London, 1992) 220–36. One should add that his discussion of angels, ibid., 236–43, along with J. Pelikan, Imago Dei. The Byzantine Apologia for Icons (Princeton, 1990) 153–82, has much usefulness.

66. De imag. or., III.21, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 128; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 76.

mediately to direct our thoughts to contemplation of higher things makes it necessary that familiar everyday media be utilized to give suitable form to what is formless, and make visible what cannot be depicted, so that we are able to construct understandable analogies.⁶⁷

Like Pseudo-Dionysius, John of Damascus argued for material signs as a necessary step to intellectual contemplation of immaterial reality. Paradoxically, “descriptive form” which does not have an essential relation to angels or God is provided for humanity’s weak understanding so that analogies proper to human intellect can be made.

Nicephorus asserted a highly intellectualized association of image and angelic prototype that was stricter and more articulated than that offered by John of Damascus.⁶⁸ He defined the angelic nature as “simple and incomposite”;⁶⁹ furthermore, the angels are “unseeable by corporeal eyes,” and bodiless and invisible and without form.⁷⁰ The angels are invisible exactly because they are “beyond and unparticipating in their shapes and forms.”⁷¹ However, the angels’ special quality of unviewability compelled Nicephorus to reconcile the many instances of appearances in scripture and angelic nature.⁷² Nicephorus thus claimed that the angels did not reveal their real nature, but rather effected a symbolic transformation that was analogous to the particular need of the moment.⁷³ God himself has ordained and created the angels because he knows well humanity’s

67. De imag. or., I.11, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 84–85; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 20.

68. See C. von Schönborn, Licône du Christ. Fondements théologiques élaborées entre le Ier et le IIer Concile de Nicée (325–787) (Fribourg, 1976) 206ff.

69. Antirrheticus II adversus Constantinum Copronymum, ix, PG 100:349B. See M.-J. Mondzain[-Baudinet], Nicéphore le Patriarche: Discours contre les iconoclastes (Paris, 1990) and Image, icône, économie. Les sources byzantines de l’imaginaire contemporain (Paris, 1996) 281–92, for translations of this text.

70. Ant. II adv. Const. Cop., xi, PG 100:353A; and see Giannopoulos, “Ἡ περὶ ἀγγέλων διδασκαλία,” 314ff.

71. See Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:769C.

72. Giannopoulos, “Ἡ περὶ ἀγγέλων διδασκαλία,” 329ff.

73. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:781AB, “Yet the holy cherubim, being simple and immaterial, imageless and formless, and therefore bodiless, and circumscribed in a sense perceptible place. . . . For if someone should hear somewhere that at some time the holy angels are weakness; ruling and guiding our affairs he knows fully our capacities for knowledge.⁷⁴ The forms of angels are disguised and vary according to circumstance and occasion. Likewise, the images are equally obscure, since they are unable to correspond visually and essentially.

For it must not be thought that in the forms of wild beasts or oxen or winged birds the nature of the other worldly powers is characterised. Nevertheless, it is by divine commands, because God wished it, that all these things are seen easily and readily, and the angels are depicted and painted.⁷⁵

The forms of angels are symbolic manifestations apprehended intellectually; and in a similar way the images of angels must be perceived symbolically, by intellectual and not only visual processes. Nicephorus described the representations of the angels as an approach to knowledge of God through a contemplation of their invisible formlessness. Furthermore, this approach, he stated, is imperative, in that “the forms of the formless ones and the figures of those without figures are to be laid before us justly.”⁷⁶ Images are non-descriptive but necessary aids to worship and comprehension of God’s formless ministers.

[B]ecause for us the comparison is impossible directly, with respect to an intellectual perception to be offered, . . . [the images of the angels] offer to us attainable forms of the formless and supernatural sights. For this is the work of divine goodness and of fatherly care seen embodied, one should not understand anything but that they manifest themselves symbolically, having transformed themselves, in such forms according to the matter in hand in which they perform their charges on earth; therefore their nature is unknown to us.”

74. Antir. II adv. Const. Cop., ix, PG 100:349C, “Many angelophanies have occurred in the services of God. The angels have not appeared according to their nature, but in the degree of sanctity and purity is it measured for him who is granted so great a vision, or for the matter in hand, necessity, and time required. In this way, the shapes and the forms of the shapeless and formless ones are formed and they make themselves manifest differently to those worthy of the vision with pure eyes of intellect.”

75. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:781B.

76. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:777B.

on our behalf, that the most blessed things are made manifest in the figured symbols of heavenly powers, and made comprehensible for us, matter worked by hand which leads us to an accessible imitation and contemplation of their proper nature.⁷⁷

The “figured symbols” are the means by which comprehension of the angelic powers are then conceded to weaker, mortal intellects by God. The symbols are entirely referential since they cannot capture any truth about the real nature or appearance of the angels. Following Pseudo-Dionysius and John of Damascus, Nicephorus concluded that the representations are an approachable and essential means to a spiritual contemplation of an invisible reality.

Nicephorus went on to state that no essential relationship exists between the prototype and the image, that “pictorial representation is an external factor and has nothing in common with the definition of essence.”⁷⁸ However, a direct relationship between image and prototype can be posited. The image and prototype possess resemblance

77. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:777BC. See, too, John of Damascus in a similar vein: “We know that it is impossible to look upon God, or a spirit, or a demon, as they are by nature. We would be able to see them, however, if they appeared in forms alien to their nature. Therefore God in His providence has clothed in forms and shapes things which are bodiless and without form, in order to lead us to more particular knowledge, lest we should be totally ignorant of God and of bodiless creatures. Only God by nature is utterly without a body, but an angel, or a soul, or a demon, when compared to God (who alone cannot be compared to anything) does have a body, but when these are compared to material bodies, they are bodiless” (De imag. or., III.26, Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III, 130–31; On the Divine Images, trans. Anderson, 79).

78. Antir. I adv. Const. Cop., 29–30, PG 100:277C–80C; trans. Alexander, The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople, 200–201, “Therefore necessarily it belongs to, and is called, a relative [notion].... If somehow the pattern should disappear, the relation does not end together with it: the law of mutual cancellation does not pertain to all such [notions], for sometimes the relations remain and survive although deprived of their object ... for by the similarity and remembrance and form, it [the image] shows even the deceased as if he were present and it preserves the relation as time goes along. Now likeness is an intermediate relation and mediates between the extremes, I mean, the person represented and the representation. It unites and connects [them] through the form even though they differ in nature.... In addition likeness bestows also equivocality, for the appellation is the same for both ... it does not have identity of essence, nor can we in all respects predicate what is predicated of the pattern as pattern also of the image derived from it.”

not through essential relation, materially or visually, but through equivocation. “Although the matter from which an image is made is soulless and senseless and motionless, the image is addressed by the same name as the prototype and so worthy of glory and grace.”⁷⁹ The images, therefore, have an unlikeness to the archetype but have, nonetheless, relational qualities and are not then irrelevant.⁸⁰ It follows from this reasoning that the name determines resemblance for images of angels, and any question of similarity in nature and appearance is beside the point.

It is seen that nothing there is enigma, nothing obscure, nothing presented obliquely or wrapped in allegory, that these things which are soulless, unfeeling, entirely motionless, made out of soulless and illogical matter, merely carved and brilliant in appearance, and in the purest of material, are wisely different from those most holy cherubim, who are living, energised, eternally moving powers, named as the God of all deemed proper. For the images of the cherubim are neither similitudes nor are they direct impressions but God used the name in equivocity by his own command when he called them cherubim by voice purely and directly.⁸¹

As Nicephorus stated, the images of the cherubim are not of the same nature nor do they have any real resemblance, but the images are clearly they, because they are called so by God himself, as Exodus testifies. The images partake of the name of cherubim and also of the glory which is the share of the archetype.⁸² Therefore, “these things made of gold are images of images, quite obscure, quite dissimilar, and very much distinct from the paradigmatic cause.” The images do

79. Antir. II adv. Const. Cop., 8, PG 100:348C.

80. Giannopoulos, “Η περί ἀγγέλων διδασκαλία,” 334ff.

81. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:776CD. And also: “But may it be conceded that the cherubim on the Ark were given their name by God, whence the possession of glory presaged by them?’ Indeed this was the first command of God, which God announced and made venerable. For nothing is in vain or empty that proceeded from him” (Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:777C).

82. Apol. pro sac. imag., 71, PG 100:780AB.

not participate substantially with their prototypes, yet God himself formed the relation.⁸³

The ninth-century mosaics of the angelic powers in the bema arch of the destroyed church of the Dormition at Nicaea (Iznik) demonstrate the relationship of image and inscription discussed in iconophile theory. The mosaics were restored—in all probability—to their original state, a direct consequence of the restoration of images in 843, and this reinstatement attests to active iconophile involvement on both practical and theoretical levels in the mosaic program.⁸⁴ The four angelic powers, identical in appearance, were clearly differentiated by the (imperfect) inscriptions which refer to distinct angelic ranks based on Colossians 1:16: on the south side, the Principality (ΑΡΧΗ) and Power (ΔΥΝΑΜΙΣ) (fig. 9), and on the north side, the Domination (ΚΥΡΙΑΤΗΤΑΣ) and Virtue (ΕΞΟΥΣΙΑ) (fig. 10). As this chapter contends, iconophile theory holds that images of angels cannot claim likeness, only a relation made through equivocation; in fact, the lack of likeness, the symbolic nature of the depiction, is the characteristic that exhorts the viewer to spiritual engagement. The mosaics at Nicaea were demonstrations of this characteristic, developed before Iconoclasm and fully articulated by iconophiles. The redundant and generalized nature of the depictions of these beings might lead the viewer to believe that only one category of angel is represented; yet, the inscriptions deny this interpretation by stating instead that the beings are distinct in office, aspect and character. In other words, with beings who possess no likeness, the inscription does not determine likeness. On the contrary, in representations of different angelic beings with identical forms, the possibility of individual resemblance is constantly thwarted.

83. Apol. pro sac. imag., 70, PG 100:773C.

84. The inscription in the bema stated that Naukratius restored the figural portions of the mosaics. Naukratius has been identified as a disciple of Theodore of Stoudios who died in 848. See E. Wiegand, "Zur Monogramminschrift der Theotokos-(Koimesis)Kirche von Nicaea," B 6(1931):411–20, E. E. Lipsić, "Naukratij i Nikeiskie Mozaikij," Zbornik Radova Vizantoloskog Instituta 8 / 2(1964):241–46, and R. Cormack, "Painting After Iconoclasm," in Iconoclasm. Papers Given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin (Birmingham, 1977) 147.

The meaning of the restoration of the figural portions of this mosaic has been undervalued as an important statement on the significance of the visual in ninth-century Byzantium. Iconophile theory has partly contributed to this misunderstanding; it laid stress on the ability of inscription not only to establish the identity of images but also to maintain an essential distinction between prototype and image. This stress on the policing nature of words has led to a miscomprehension of the value and role of the visual; moreover, it has led to a neglect of the visual quality of the word in actual Byzantine images.

Not only did the mosaics of the angelic powers at Nicaea preserve the marks of restoration, the sutures revealing earlier editing, they also showed material words: on the one hand, the earlier inscriptions (psalms and nominations) and, on the other, a new cluster of letters between the powers on the south side (fig. 9). The latter reveal that a certain Naucratus (d. 848), probably a follower of Theodore of Stoudios, has returned a proper balance of figuration and inscription to the mosaics. This balance is the other important issue the mosaics raise: that the symbiosis of figuration and inscription worked as a negation, mutually denying these visual components any resemblance to the prototype. Unlike the literal—one might even say natural—quality of the images of the Virgin and Child in the apse (fig. 16), the powers were absolutely conventional signs since all aspects of description on the bema arch denied resemblance to their models; instead, they were prospective, transparent to a transcendental reality.

The Byzantine images of angels, such as those at Nicaea, relate to the angels themselves as negations and contradictions: the angels were represented in the mosaics only in a symbolic, allusive sense, and they did not correspond essentially or visually with that mosaic. The nominating inscriptions on these mosaics stated that the image “is” in a relative way an angelic being. At the same time, the inscriptions stated that the image “is not,” indeed cannot be, a likeness of this being. The inscriptions then pronounced a provisional state of correspondence, a series of possible relations between material images and the angels’ immaterial formlessness.

This quality of relation might be construed as an uneven association of text and image since the representation has no independent ability to state a visual resemblance.⁸⁵ Interpreting the iconophile definition of equivocation as logocentric would be mistaken, however, as the iconophile texts adduced at the beginning of this section demonstrate the fundamental importance of vision, of viewing images, for proper teaching and contemplation of God by Christians. Indeed, images of Christ depend primarily on the power of vision, that is, the ability of Christians to see God in his human form; viewing Christ's form literally is essential for understanding its meaning, as Theodore of Stoudios stated.

In contrast, both the epigrams and iconophile theory concerning angels showed that the compelling power of vision leads the viewer of images of angels into higher meditation because of the very lack of any possibility of resemblance in these images. In these cases, the inscriptions were also "images" since iconophiles did not hold to the exclusive notion of images that iconoclasts defended. Inscriptions and representations were brought equally to the fore in this mosaic of the angelic powers since the flat gold ground simulated no depth or, at least, equal depth, on the surface. No division was constructed for real or represented space, for word and image, that might prioritize one or the other.⁸⁶ Both nominating inscription and figures of powers are inclusive, complementary "images."

85. Gilbert Dagron has claimed that the image becomes redundant in iconophile image theory since the word, the name applied to the image, determines the likeness of the image. See G. Dagron, "Mots, images, icônes," Nouvelle revue de psychanalyse 44(1991):160ff. However, Dagron equated this iconophile notion of equivocalness with the earlier handbooks describing "εἰκονισμός." "Εἰκονισμός" involved a process of verbal delineation of visual appearance which relied upon direct equivalences of word and image; in this way, Dagron says one could convert a proper name into a visualizable formula. Yet this parallel only explains one aspect of the iconophile theologians' position since these theologians also viewed images with more complexity and allegorical insight and did not admit a simple equivalency of name and image in every case. The angels, of course, belie any simple equivalence of name and image by which Dagron might characterize the iconophile position and the methods of "εἰκονισμός": verbal delineation of angels, as well as the visual description, is allusive and imprecise.

In short, the image resembles only itself through the inscribed name on the image, "L'image de culte est un nomen sacrum. Elle possède une sacralité intrinsèque." See ibid., 162. Yet this formulation leaves the image as a merely reflexive sign, wholly determined by the inscription's verbal affirmation of likeness.

86. See L. Marin, "The Order of Words and the Order of Things in Painting," Visible Language 23(1989):197ff.

Figure 17. René Magritte, The Treachery of Images (Ceci n'est pas une pipe), c. 1928–29. Photo: Los Angeles County Museum of Art, purchased with funds provided by the Mr. and Mrs. William Preston Harrison Collection.

Looking at similar issues in different periods is sometimes helpful for casting new light on problems, and I propose here to use certain elements of Michel Foucault's analysis of René Magritte's The Treachery of Images from 1929 (fig. 17).⁸⁷ Foucault scrutinized a relationship of word and image that has striking parallels with Byzantine theory and practice of representing angels. In Magritte's painting, the likeness of a pipe is convincing in its realistic depiction of a pipe set against a stark background, but the inscription, "Ceci n'est pas une pipe," obstructs the mimetic quality that the depiction can claim. Foucault maintained that the relation of text and image becomes a 87. M. Foucault, This Is Not a Pipe, trans. J. Harkness (Berkeley, 1982). M.-J. Baudinet, "L'incarnation, l'image, la voix," Esprit (Feb. 1982):194–95, also discerned an affinity between Magritte's painting and the iconophile theory of equivocation.

“subtle and instable dependency” since the image is detached from the possibility of mimesis by the inscription.⁸⁸

On the inscription and representation in Magritte’s painting, Foucault wrote that they “annul the intrinsic resemblance they seem to bear within themselves, and gradually sketch an open network of similitudes.”⁸⁹ The inscribed image of the angelic powers also worked on the level of symbiosis of text and representation, whose mutual denial of real resemblance constituted a meaningful, material referent, at once opposed and complementary to the prototype. Moreover, each element of the inscription and the representation “denies along with resemblance the assertion of reality resemblance conveys,” to use Foucault’s terms,⁹⁰ and so the image provided a material sign which the viewer cannot interpret literally. The representation and inscription do not affirm one another.

Negation in the case of these mosaics was not only a function of language, here inscribed words; figuration was also negative. Distinct from these powers’ representations, resemblance is unavoidable in Magritte’s banal pipe. As Carlo Ginzburg has recently asserted, “In order to say, ‘Ceci n’est pas une pipe,’ we need words. Images are what they are.”⁹¹ Not so for images of angels: both figures and inscriptions are equal, non-resembling referents. All iconophile theory rested on the belief that angels as winged men were simply symbols that relied on their prospective nature to excite the viewer’s desire to explore the enigmatic transparency of the images.⁹²

88. Foucault, This Is Not a Pipe, 29: “No longer can anything pass between them save the decree of divorce, the statement at once contesting the name of the drawing and the reference of the text. Nowhere is there a pipe.”

89. Foucault, This Is Not a Pipe, 47. On this passage, see G. Shapiro, “Pipe Dreams: Eternal Recurrence and Simulacrum in Foucault’s Ekphrasis of Magritte,” Word & Image 13(1997):74, and D. Chateau, “De la ressemblance: un dialogue Foucault-Magritte,” in L’image Deleuze, Foucault, Lyotard, ed. T. Lenain (Paris, 1998), 95–108.

90. Foucault, This Is Not a Pipe, 47.

91. C. Ginzburg, “Idols and Likenesses: Origen, Homilies on Exodus VIII.3, and Its Reception,” in Sight and Insight. Essays in Honour of E. H. Gombrich at 85, ed. J. Onians (London, 1994) 67.

92. See, for instance, L. Marin, To Destroy Painting, trans. M. Hjort (Chicago and London, 1995) 7: “I am thinking of the desire to know the enigma that opens up the space of desire only to withhold all gratification; the desire to decipher the secret, to identify the let-

This definition of a simultaneous act of denying resemblance and engaging symbols is a primary mode of comprehension according to Pseudo-Dionysius, as discussed at the beginning of this chapter.⁹³ For Pseudo-Dionysius, proper symbols are not distracting in their resemblances or material quality, but allow the intelligence to interpret them as it is able. And, moreover, this play of the intelligence on a material image is described in practice outside abstract theological discourse in the epigrams of Agathias and Nilus Scholasticus. In these texts, the dissimilarity of image and model provided the image with a tension by which a “higher contemplation” is encouraged in the viewer. Furthermore, this striving to create a breach between image and model while still maintaining a meaningful relationship between the two has been shown to be of fundamental importance to iconophile theology. Proper worship—in this symbolic theology—is predicated upon the viewer not being seduced into believing that there is a real resemblance between image and model; equivocation provides in this sense a prudent, intellectual relation.

And yet the viewer has to be engaged by the image and believe it has meaning; as the epigrams state, colors and form of the incorporeal being compel the viewer through his or her eyes to direct the “mind to a higher contemplation.” The representation and inscription, rather than affirming one another,⁹⁴ perform just the opposite operation. A viewer of an image of an angel must engage the material object by means of its color and form, and through this engagement realize, in every sense, that “this is not an angel.”

ters (or letter) that constitute(s) the formula providing access to the painting; the desire finally to make explicit the discourse whose origin this formula conceals, the longing to transform the pleasure of painting or its jouissance into a pleasure or jouissance of language.”

93. And the text in praise of Michael and Gabriel by Michael of Stoudios attests to the currency of the thought of Pseudo-Dionysius in the second half of the ninth century. Furthermore, he adduces Pseudo-Dionysius in support of his pro-image orthodoxy. See “Éloge des archanges Michel et Gabriel par Michel le Moine (BHG 1294a),” ed. T. Matantseva, JbB 46(1996):136 (V.4), 145 (XII.1), and 119–20.

94. Dagron, “Mots, images, icônes,” 161.

Four

THE VENERATION OF ANGELS AND THEIR IMAGES

THEOLOGICAL VIEWS

Proper Christian worship was a central issue in the centuries preceding Iconoclasm, and iconophiles and iconoclasts continued this debate during the eighth and ninth centuries. Images dominated discussion during Iconoclasm but the debate naturally implicated long-standing questions of Christian ethics and appropriate devotion. As this chapter will demonstrate, angels figured large in this discussion of images, their worship and function. Iconophiles defended the symbolic representations of angels as a special case, with important historical precedents, both written, as in Hebrew scripture, and unwritten, as ancient Christian practice showed. In keeping with one strand of Christian theology, iconoclasts defended “images” that Christians made by modeling themselves after paragons from the past. The topos of the “angelic life” in monastic practice, as the following section will show, had special meaning in this regard, since an angelic “image” in this context meant a suitably pious life. Iconoclasts abjured worship offered to angels or to their material images, as undesired by these beings and inappropriate for a devout Christian. Miracle stories and theology intersect very intimately, then, in this chapter; both reveal self-conscious concern with the dangers of angelolatry and idolatry that had always been inherent in the cult of angels.

Because iconophile argumentation is extensive, it is possible to follow iconophile reaction to iconoclastic accusations of idolatry as these accusations implicated angels and their images. Iconophiles' understanding of the relation between image and model was a safeguard, in their view, against any risk of idolatry; and iconophiles established this notion on the firm ground of Christian history and custom.

Particular attention to iconophile sources that aim to combat iconoclastic arguments about the proper place of images in devotion, particularly images of angels, illuminates the history of the veneration of angels in Byzantium. The concept of the equivocal relation of image and model was central to iconoclastic objections to iconophile worship and ethics. Because angels, and particularly the cherubim, figured so prominently in iconophile defense, they emerged in a debate over worship and ethics as cornerstones to iconophile image theory. For this reason, discussion of the notional difficulties of this equivocal relation of spiritual angelic beings to their material representations was central to an iconophile defense of image worship. Moreover, further examination of iconophile texts on worship reveals attitudes of iconoclasts and their predecessors concerning images and angels themselves; these attitudes must be reconstructed from fragments and inference but a clear picture of iconoclastic ideas does indeed emerge from these limited sources.

Image worship invited misinterpretation, and iconoclastic charges forced iconophiles to react to accusations of idolatry. In their contentions over what constituted seemly and worthwhile worship, iconophiles used traditional defenses that derived largely from the anti-Jewish texts of the seventh century.¹ These texts comprise a body of polemical material from the sixth and seventh centuries aimed at combating perceived threats to Christian faith; they are often in the form of a dialogue, probably invented in most cases, but corresponding to points of faith which Christian theologians considered misconstrued or misunderstood by outsiders. A principal charge made in this genre was that Christians worship material objects; the authors denied that Christians worship matter, and they answered with the symbolic defense, that honor passed through the object to God.²

1. See K.A. Corrigan, Visual Polemics in the Ninth-Century Byzantine Psalters (Cambridge, 1992) 33ff.

Iconoclasts had consistently advanced charges of idolatry against iconophiles and cited Epiphanius of Salamis (ca. 315–403) as their champion in order to malign iconophiles' base and pointless worship of matter. In the course of his counterattack, the Adversus Epiphaniidem, one of the Antirrhetics written between 818 and 820, Nicephorus, the patriarch of Constantinople at the beginning of Iconoclasm in 815, quoted a number of passages written by Epiphanius that showed the thrust of the iconoclastic argument. The "thoughtless one"—called Epiphaniides, a fourth-century Docetist, by Nicephorus, but in reality Epiphanius—posed this question: "How do you worship the angels, who are spirits and living without end, described in dead matter, since the prophet says, '[God] who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire' (Ps. 104:4)?"³ Against this attack Nicephorus first answered with the standard retort: "From these things who would not realise or discover that these are not the words of the holy Epiphanius, unless he were an exceeding disputatious and contentious person?"⁴

2. See Pseudo-Athanasius, Quaestiones ad Antiochum Ducem, XXXIX, PG 28:621B-D; Leontius of Neapolis, in Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III Contra imaginum calumniatores orationes tres, PTS vol. 17, ed. P.B. Kotter (Berlin, 1975) 156–58, V. Déroche, "L'Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis," TM 12(1994):79ff.; the Trophies of Damascus, Les Trophées de Damas, PO vol. 15/2, ed. G. Bardy (Paris, 1920; rp. Louvain, 1973) 78.11ff.; the Dialogue between the Jews, Papiscus and Philo, and a Monk, Dialogue between a Christian and a Jew entitled ANTIBOLH ΠΑΠΙΣΚΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΦΙΛΩΝΟΥ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ ΠΡΟΣ ΜΟΝΑΧΟΝ ΤΙΝΑ, ed. A.C. McGiffert (Marburg, 1889) 51–52; Hieronymus of Jerusalem, De effectu baptismi et notis Christiani, PG 40:865AB; Anastasius Sinaïtes, Disputatio adversus Judaeos, II, PG 89:1233C–6A; and, finally, the Armenian John Mayragometsi, in S. Der Nersessian, "Une apologie des images du septième siècle," B 17(1944/5):60. The Διδασκαλία Ἰακώβου stated that the wood of the cross was not venerated but that it was a sign, a type for Christ and that honor passes to him through the object; see La Didascalie de Jacob, PO vol. 8/5, ed. F. Nau (Paris, 1912; rp. Turnhout, 1971) 61.12–62.3.

3. In Adversus Epiphaniidem, IX.35, Pitra IV:318.2–7; Holl 358, #7.

4. Adv. Epi., IX.35, Pitra IV:318.8–10.

Iconophiles saw God's command for the manufacture of the Ark of the Covenant as a circumvention of any charge of idolatry. Moving from charges of falsification, Nicephorus cited the authority of Exodus 25:22 and the necessary obedience to its strictures:

For Epiphanius did not ignore the things commanded by God to Moses concerning the cherubim, nor did he thrust away and reject the so-called holy of holies; although fashioned out of soulless matter, it was yet honorable. But indeed he believed and always adhered to these things with diligence and honor, especially what derived from the Jewish people, and he esteemed them as commands of God, passing them on as Christian teachings; unless indeed one supposes that the things written about his life were done mendaciously. This noble man appears to reveal the prophet in his words concerning the angels. Yet he speaks against God, and he speaks against Moses, who makes law in vain, since [Epiphanius] does not consider this legislating to constitute law, and [Moses] complies with it, and so [Moses] in vain toils against the making of the cherubim and of other things, such as God has commanded. Certainly [Epiphanius] would have been worthy if he had adhered at least to the letter and the laws of old. But this one is more disobedient than the Jews and more ignorant, not desiring to know that he who made his angels spirits and his ministers a burning fire, commanded by law that the cherubim be made from the purest gold. What then? Has he discarded it and esteemed it little? Yet he does introduce Paul who called these things the holy of holies and the cherubim of glory, truly extolling these things.⁵

For Nicephorus, the fact that Epiphanius could cite the injunction against the making of "graven images" (Ex. 20:4), while ignoring God's more specific charge to make images of angels, showed willful disregard for distinctions God himself had made. The citation of the Second Commandment was, therefore, a false position which was partially blind and wholly irreverent. Dismissing the express desire of God was heretical, and Nicephorus claimed furthermore that it led to an alignment with the pagans or the heretical Manichaeans.⁶ Iconoclasts questioned the validity of this injunction to construct the Ark for the New Covenant, as well as its applicability for the figurative arts. Iconoclasts—here represented by Epiphanius—regarded art literally and saw that the material outline of an image of the cherubim could in no way conform to, or in any meaningful way convey, the real nature of the angelic host. Conversely, iconophiles read the injunction at Exodus 25:22 literally but were able to view the worked image as a symbol whose value was activated in an intellectual, spiritual approach to worship.

5. Adv. Epi., IX.35, Pitra IV:318.13–319.12.

Iconophiles interpreted the Second Commandment as an injunction against untoward adoration, but at the same time they interpreted it as a law conditional on the initiation of the New Covenant.⁷ In this sense, they again adapted arguments put forward in the anti-Jewish literature of the seventh century. In these texts, the Second Commandment had only been dictated by God because the Jews themselves had been disposed to idolatry, and this Commandment was subsequently made obsolete by the incarnation of Christ.⁸ Iconophiles saw the Second Commandment as a directive from God with a specific historical context. As Ignatius the Deacon (ca. 770/80–d. after 845) wrote in his biography of the patriarch Nicephorus, the patriarch believed that the Second Commandment was addressed to the particular inclinations of the pagan Egyptians by whom the Israelites had been influenced while in captivity.⁹

6. Antirrheticus II, Adversus Constantinum Copronymum, 8, PG 100:348C.

7. On this question, see H.L. Kessler, "Pictures Fertile with Truth: How Christians Managed to Make Images of God without Violating the Second Commandment," The Journal of the Walters Art Gallery 49 / 50 (1991 / 2):53–65.

8. See the Dialogue between a Christian and a Jew, 73–77; Disputation of Sergius the Stylite against a Jew, ed. A. P. Hayman, 2 vols. (Louvain, 1973) II:48, 51–52, 54; and Anastasius Sinaïtes, Dis. adv. Jud., II, PG 89:1236A.

9. Vita Nicephori, VII, PG 100:93A–C: "Since therefore that law giver led the people entrusted to him by God out of Egypt, wishing to purify from their souls and erase the defilements acquired there, in order that human images not conceive of the divine in humanlike images or in other forms of living things. He exhorted them in this way giving this law: Do not according to the custom of the Egyptians, o humanity, nor learning from them absurdly let an image of god be made by us, nor of these things flying through the air, or moving on earth, or swimming the seas. For these things are not God even if the Egyptians say they are, and he must not be depicted by an image, he who cannot be contemplated. For Nicephorus then adduced the examples of the temple of Solomon and the Ark that God commanded, also mentioned in the Epistle to Hebrews (9:2ff.). God's commandment, therefore, did not apply to Christian images, which were sanctified by God's own injunction for their manufacture, but only applied to false idols.

The iconoclastic charge that iconophiles worshipped lifeless matter made it essential for iconophiles to render a counter-argument on a meaningful, though clearly demarcated, relation between image and prototype. Again, Exodus and its description of the cherubim provided the defense. As Nicephorus reasoned, Christians did not worship even the holy representations made out of the purest and brightest material, fabricated by human hands at the command of God himself. And yet the angels, intellectual and invisible beings, were "fashioned out of gold and sitting above the Ark, and these are neither intellects nor intellectual nor do they possess visible appearance. . . ." These material images on the Ark were altogether destitute of life and power and energy, as their bodies are put in matter, even if the plate happens to be the purest and most splendid material. And having been made images and having bodies out of matter, they are alterations and schematisations, and they are not free from corruption and change.¹⁰

Material objects neither distract nor demean Christian worship since the images of angels were simply matter and fundamentally distinct. Nicephorus maintained that good Christians have the ability to discriminate between idols and true images through pious devotion and faith.¹¹ True images were representations of actual beings, ordained

God is unviewable and without form and invisible and is not at all among things seen by human eyes. But he is only perceptible to the mind, if someone somewhere should be capable of this. . . . Therefore, the law giver forbade that images of God alone be made."

10. Both quotations from Apologeticus pro sacris imaginibus, 70, PG 100:769D–72A.

11. Antirr. I, Adv. Const. Copr., 29, PG 100:277B, "An idol is a fictive thing and the representation of a non-existent being, such things as the Hellenes by want of good sense and godlessness make representations of, such as the tritons and the centaurs and other phantasms which do not exist. And in this respect icons and idols are to be distinguished from one another; those not accepting the distinction of these would rightly be called idolaters. And as by God, and securely related by the epigraphy contained on the images. The inscription on the images stabilized the relationship between image and prototype, and safeguarded against any misapprehension concerning the similarities between the two that might lead to inappropriate worship of the image itself. Therefore, in Nicephorus's view, good Christians had the ability to distinguish between worship directed at matter and veneration that ascends to the prototype through the image.

Iconophiles evoked a long-standing Christian tradition of images in worship as further proof of mature and correct discrimination by Christians. Moreover, Nicephorus claimed that this Christian legacy of images in worship was untainted by falsification of texts or misrepresentation of the past. The materialist worship that iconophiles defended was not an invention, as iconoclasts claimed, but an unbroken tradition of seemingly devotion that began in the apostolic era.

Iconophiles fell back on the unwritten tradition that the worship of icons had been practiced and condoned from the church's inception. Against Epiphanius, Nicephorus stated that it was not merely a question of one or two or three or four people who disagreed with Epiphanius's position, but the entire catholic church.¹² Finally, he pointed out that images of angels were found in many churches, and always had been. "Everywhere on earth in the holy churches the stories are full of the powers of the bodiless ones in holy representations, and of the catholic church, through whose strength the tradition was anciently settled."¹³ On the most literal level of defense, Nicephorus offered the indisputable fact of practice: images of the angels exist and have done for the entire history of the Church, "For if someone were not to represent the angels, by reason of their incorporeality, it would have been stated many times previously."¹⁴ Iconoclasts could muster theologians to substantiate their position against for icons, there are icons of good and trifling sorts, and it is important to distinguish. One should honor the good, reject the worthless, and equally shun idolatry."

12. Adv. Epi., IX.35, Pitra IV:318.8–23.

13. Antir. II, Adv. Const. Copr., 7, PG 100:348A.

14. Adv. Epi., VI.17, Pitra IV:307.1–4.

angels' images, notably Epiphanius, but iconophiles considered their own record unblemished by heresy and falsification: both written and unwritten tradition corroborated their interpretation of images as indispensable to proper worship and understanding of God.

Iconophile and iconoclastic conceptions of proper worship were, therefore, fundamentally distinct: one side was able to posit a relation between image and prototype which was ineluctably binding but not essential, while the other saw any image not of the same substance as fraudulent and unnecessary. The divergence in approach was nowhere clearer than in a dialogue between Stephen the Younger (ca. 713–764?) and the emperor Constantine V (r. 740–775), in the Vita of Stephen the Younger written by Stephen the Deacon, perhaps in 806. Although clearly a set piece, as it was preserved in an iconophile saint's vita, this dialogue also gives an indication of the quality and depth of iconoclastic argumentation. The antagonist, Constantine V, offered real intellectual challenges to Stephen; he was not simply a "straw man." In the course of their encounter, Constantine V questioned Stephen about the significance and value of images of unknowable beings:

How is it possible to represent sensually the things announced by humanity to be beyond experience and difficult to see, and not lacking in intellectual quality, and to worship them through matter, when nothing is to be gained by these things in understanding of the being, except the infinity, as Gregory the Theologian said.¹⁵

This question was an example of an iconoclastic equation of prototype and image,¹⁶ and indeed Constantine V had pointed to the really problematic aspect of the iconophile argument, especially as it applied to angels: if material images of immaterial and invisible angels could only indicate their indescribable nature, then what practical use were these images in worship? Searching for the answer to 15. La vie d'Étienne le Jeune, Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Monographs, vol. 3, ed. M.-F. Auzépy (Aldershot, 1997) 156 (ch.55).

16. See A. Kazhdan and H. Maguire, "Byzantine Hagiographical Texts as Sources on Art," DOP 45(1991):9.

Constantine V's intellectually challenging question in the reply of Stephen the Younger is not entirely satisfying:

Indeed who would say, being in control of their own mind, that worshipping the things in the church, whether they be stone or gold or silver, is a worshipping of material things? Wherefore they are altered by name to holy things. You cannot distinguish between holy and profane, nor are you afraid to state in demented folly that the icon of Christ is an idol, as if it were an image of Apollo, or that an image of the Virgin is the same thing as an image of Artemis, and to trample upon these things and to burn them.

This reply was an interesting, if not entirely persuasive, evasion. Stephen the Younger fastened onto one phrase in Constantine V's question, on the worship of divine things through matter, and made the common claim that proper worship exploited material images to pious ends. And he then proceeded to accuse the emperor of confusing pagan and Christian images.¹⁷ This response was not entirely typical of the quality of iconophile debating skills, and yet it highlighted the difficulties involved in answering all of the implications of iconoclastic attacks. Iconophiles commonly accused iconoclasts of not being able to discern which images were worthy of worship, and in this way they sidestepped some of the conceptual difficulties involved in comprehending Christian images of imperceptible beings.

The argument of equivocation posited an intimate relation between image and prototype that was difficult to sustain fully, and the near identity implied in the proposed relation provoked profound puzzlement among iconoclasts. In the vita of Stephen the Younger, after

17. This reply was a standard refutation of the iconoclastic comparison of idols and images. See, for instance, the ninth-century Vita of the Patriarch Tarasius (d. 806) by Ignatius the Deacon: "For, if you compare Zeus to our Saviour in that they are both reverently represented and you affirm that without making any distinction, consider whether you attach to Christ's holy form the insult you bestow upon the false-named Zeus." See The Life of the Patriarch Tarasius by Ignatius the Deacon (BHG 1698), Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Monographs, vol. 4, ed. S. Efthymiadis (Aldershot, 1998) 144.9–12, 197. And see Nicephorus, Antirr. I, Adv. Const. Copr., 28, PG 100:277B, who accused idols of representing what does not exist.

Stephen's claim that trampling upon the image of Christ visits violence upon Christ himself, the emperor exclaimed, "Are you then blinded in your mind, and forget yourself, to say that in treading upon the images of Christ, we are treading upon Christ himself? It would not be so!"¹⁸ Stephen answered him by taking out a coin with a representation of the emperor and his name inscribed, and asked if disrespect directed at the coin was not also directed at the emperor himself.

If Stephen's modest but dramatic act demonstrated that images were related to their prototypes, the iconophile theory of equivocation and relation answered the iconoclastic accusation of full identity of prototype and model with a great deal more philosophical clout. In the Adversus Epiphanidem, after he has cited Epiphanius's charge that the angels' images were misleading and essentially irrelevant, Nicephorus returned with the charge that iconoclasts did not have the necessary capability for discrimination that would enable them to distinguish true and false images.¹⁹ He fell back on an argument similar to Stephen the Younger's, that iconoclasts were without the grace that proper faith provided and so they understood Christian images as pagans would. And for both Stephen and Nicephorus, the name applied altered the image through the forging of an intellectual link independent of the material aspects of the image.

The argument of relation of model and image through equivocation sanctioned by usage answered Constantine V's objection to images of angels as pointless and unenlightening material objects. Essential or visual similarity was not necessary for an evaluation of the worth of images in worship. Likeness was established mainly through veneration offered the prototype by means of the image. In common with other Christian images, the images of the angels did not, therefore, rely on witness and skill of the artist but on the value that society put on such images.²⁰ Despite the dissimilarity and ob-

18. La vie d'Étienne le Jeune, 156 (ch.55).

19. Adv. Epi., VI.17, Pitra IV:306.24–35, "And he then calls the holy icons pseudonymous, attempting by this to destroy the relation (λόγον)." This passage is part of Nicephorus's answer to Epiphanius: see Holl 357, #4.

20. According to iconophiles, relation does not depend on artistic skill in its ability to render likeness. For Theodore of Stoudios, no need existed for similarity between the two, scurity of the images of the angels in comparison to their models, Christians accepted these objects in worship as worthy of devotion and of spiritual contemplation because of convention.²¹ Tradition and Christian custom sanctioned the devotion offered to images of angels as signs of “infinity,” as Constantine phrased it. As iconophile descriptions of symbolic images asserted, the value of images of angels resided in their necessarily incomplete testimony to the incomprehensible nature of the angels.

Against this iconophile idea of Christian custom and practice, iconoclasts cited precedents for their views on idolatry and the misleading worship advocated by iconophiles. Iconoclasts advanced both Epiphanius and the fourth-century theologian Macarius Magnes because of their positions on scrupulous behavior before angels and their images. Both had defended restraint in honor given to angels; and because of the attendant difficulties in witnessing angels, Christians must abstain from the adoration of images since these could only be reductions and caricatures of the experience. For these reasons, iconoclasts recommended the two theologians and, in turn, iconophiles such as Nicephorus refuted and reinterpreted them. These precedents represent the traditional opposition to images preceding Iconoclasm, as well as the position of iconoclasts themselves, since the oppositional texts are only preserved in iconophile rebuttals.

neither regarding substance, size, dimension, nor genuine resemblance. Indeed, resemblance, in any precise visual sense, is entirely unnecessary. Only the equivocation of name need be applied for relation. See Antirrheticus adversus iconomachos, II.iii.5, PG 99:421CD.

Photius argued in the 860s that the recognition of relation was a matter of convention deriving from devotion. He stated that images ought not to be maligned because of dissimilarity in nature or in truth. For resemblance rests not only on the depiction's outline of form and colors of shapes, but also on such things as arrangements and practice and expression of understanding and placement in holy areas, inscription and choice of symbols. See Ad Amphilochium, CCV, PG 101:952AB; Epistulae et Amphilochia, ed. B. Laourdas and L. G. Westerink, 6 vols. in 7 pts. (Leipzig, 1983–1988) I:110. He also considered the definition of similarity in the case of the cross; he concluded that the cross to which worship is offered and from which copies are made is most similar to its prototype. See ibid., PG 101:949BC; Laourdas/Westerink, Epistulae et Amphilochia, I:110. For Photius, and iconophiles generally, a definition of likeness rested on consensus and not on a visual or essential similarity between image and prototype.

21. On this text, see G. Dagron, “Holy Images and Likeness,” DOP 45(1991):24–25.

Judging from the iconophile reaction, iconoclasts had objected that the angels, for one, did not desire worship and raised the ethics of worship of angels—and consequently their images—as important issues. They attempted in this way to undermine the iconophiles' defense of a cultural consensus of worship built around the equivocal images of the angels. Again in the Adversus Epiphaniidem, Nicephorus quoted Epiphanius's objection, "I say that [the angels] do not desire to be worshipped,"²² and exclaimed in response:

Therefore, do they desire to be insulted likewise? And for this reason does the impious one pour down so much scorn on them, at once ordaining these must not be worshipped, on account of his wicked and unthinking view of the glory reserved for them?²³

According to Nicephorus, Epiphanius had associated image and prototype with too little distinction. Indeed, Epiphanius's text revealed iconoclastic prejudices. As iconoclasts believed true images and models to be consubstantial, they had evidently produced Epiphanius's claim that angels did not desire worship as a corollary to their belief that images of angels were likewise not to be worshipped.²⁴ At this point, the intersection of theological discourse with models of worship found in saints' lives becomes clear: iconoclasts had confused angelolatry with idolatry; the two were inseparable in their view because of the belief in the necessary consubstantiality of the model and prototype. This confounding of angel and image into one ethical issue is an interesting strategy by iconoclasts: if angels had always been dangerously venerated, so were their images; if angels do not desire worship, neither do they want images. The answer to this ethical issue—as found in miracle stories of angels—is explored in the following section.

22. Adv. Epi., IX.36, Pitra IV:319.15–16.

23. Adv. Epi., IX.36, Pitra IV:319.17–21.

24. This claim is likely connected with the iconoclast belief in the necessary consubstantiality of image and prototype. Iconoclasts argued that the only true image was of the same matter as its model; therefore, the eucharist was a real image and any image that had only relation to its model was false. On this issue, see K. Parry, Depicting the Word. Byzantine Iconophile Thought of the Eighth and Ninth Centuries (Leiden, 1996) 178–90.

In Nicephorus's view, the angels did not seek veneration for themselves, nor did their images receive it. Epiphanius and his iconoclastic followers simply offered a wrong-headed definition of relation in seeing the angels and their images as equivalent. They sullied the proper non-essential relation of image and model through equivocation that iconophiles defended. Honor given to images did not stop there but proceeded to the prototypes themselves; consequently, "just as the icons are not worshipped, neither are the archetypes honoured."²⁵

A confusion of honor of prototype and image would suggest pagan worship, Nicephorus said. For pagans worship gods that did not exist, so that they were simply worshipping vain objects. In his De Magnete, Nicephorus had also defended Macarius Magnes from the charge pressed by his pagan opponent that Christians worshipped angels. The pagan stated that Christian angels were comparable to gods and that honor bestowed on images of angels and gods were similarly appropriate. Nicephorus supported Macarius by insisting on the fundamental distinction between empty pagan idols and authentic Christian images:

Protecting our own worship from these ignoble mysteries that deserve darkness, he does not consider them worthy of Christians, nor does he desire to make images or honour them, such as [the Hellenes] make images and worship.²⁶

Thus, in theory, honor passed through the image, without material obstacle, directly to the prototype and in a way fundamentally different from pagan misapprehension of idols that were destitute of archetypes.

Despite Nicephorus's defense, an ethical definition of the "true" Christian image guided Epiphanius's and Macarius Magnes's arguments, and this fourth-century advocacy for the ethical image must 25. Adv. Epi., IX.41, Pitra IV:323.39–40; and also 324.4–7, "So that since the image of Christ is not honoured, it follows that he would wish that Christ himself not be honoured." In general, see Adv. Epi., IX.36ff., Pitra IV:319.23ff.

26. De Magnete, I.14, Pitra I:311.19–23.

certainly have been a compelling precedent for iconoclasts. Nicephorus tried consistently to bring Macarius's arguments into line with iconophile concerns, but in fact Macarius had contended that a virtuous Christian did not make material images. In true worship, Macarius wrote, Christians modeled themselves after paragons of Christianity from the Church's teaching, thereby fashioning a true "image." Against the use of Macarius's writings by iconoclasts, Nicephorus responded with the normal accusation of falsification and stated that, in fact, Macarius Magnes was discussing the pagan position on images and not the Christian view.²⁷

Nicephorus attacked further the perverse use of the text by iconoclasts when discussing a passage by Macarius Magnes concerning the appearance of the angels to Abraham: "As the angels appeared often in the form of men, they were not that which appeared, but that which they were, that is, invisible."²⁸ Nicephorus persisted in his belief in the willful tamperings of iconoclasts when he commented on this passage, "as if compensating for the things not adduced, he introduces in the middle of the passage as an example the person of the patriarch Abraham."²⁹ For iconophiles, Abraham was one of the most venerable instances of witness to angelic epiphany.³⁰ But he did

27. De Magnete, I.41, Pitra I:326.35–327.13: "For one must note that after the author has said, 'Certainly [he does not make] their images formed in outline ...' [Blondel 214.15] the Christomachos again willfully takes away the phrase, 'as you yourself say,' [Blondel 214.15–16] in order that he seem credible to the readers. He thereby says that the author believes in the destruction of the holy icons, which the author does not believe. Rather he stands opposed to the faith of the Hellenes, as he said to the Hellene that he did not agree with him, providing the 'as you say' concerning the idols, statues and images of the gods. Moreover, those seeking to imitate the angelic way of life, in this fashion, which forbids and spurns, that is to say, the abominations of the idols, they make an end of the images. For opposing this, they are manifestly taking away the idols, and they have a horror of them, as loathsome and hateful."

28. Blondel 214.21–22, and De Magnete, I.42, Pitra I:327.16–19.

29. See De Magnete, I.43, Pitra I:327.20–37.

30. One might also expect, given the significance of Abraham's hospitality to the three "men" at Mamre for iconophile defense in the eighth and ninth centuries, a commensurate number of representations of the Philoxenia after Iconoclasm. Yet the Philoxenia is represented in the Chludov Psalter once (fol. 49v), in the context of its eucharistic symbolism and not as an epiphany. See Corrigan, Visual Polemics, 52ff. In the Sacra Parallela (Paris. gr. 923, fol. 245r), the middle of the three angels is depicted without a crossed-nimbus and relates the Christological symbolism of the event like the Chludov illustration. See K.

not create a commemorative image, and this oversight needed explaining since iconoclasts could forcefully point to the lack of mention of material testimonial in scripture. Nicephorus explained the lapse between witness in the Old Covenant and their apparent failure to commemorate the event by first citing a passage by Macarius Magnes: "And as these things occurred wisely and in truth, Abraham did not outline the appearance of these visions, nor did he carve an idol in resemblance nor did he paint a panel, thinking to see the strangers in these things."³¹ Nicephorus's subsequent explanation fell back on the belief in a historical lapse into idolatry by the Jews that necessitated the Second Commandment, but ultimately rested on the charge of falsification and misrepresentation of the original text of Macarius's dialogue.³²

Yet the real reason for the discussion of Macarius Magnes must have been iconoclastic emphasis on the ethical, "true" image. According to Milton Anastos, this emphasis dates to the Hieria of 754 and was, therefore, a central argument against material images in worship from the early stages of Iconoclasm.³³ In the iconoclastic formulation of "images," "one should put reliance, not upon pictorial representations, but upon the scriptures and the biographies of the saints."³⁴ As Anastos noted, the Fathers quoted at the Council of 754 dealt primarily with spiritual worship. The Council cited Basil the Great (ca. 330–379):

The study of the holy writings constitutes the best path to the ascertainment of what is proper, because they provide a guide for Weitzmann, The Miniatures of the Sacra Parallela. Parisinus graecus 923 (Princeton, 1979) 40, fig. 27.

31. Blondel 215.30–32.

32. De Magnete, I.43, Pitra I:328.3–17: "For it is not likely that the patriarch being a friend of God would be induced into error of the superstitious persons of that time, only just having risen above the manufacture of idols. And it is necessary to note that one must supply the things there left out, that is to say, 'as you say.' The Hellene, who had been inserted above, after it has, 'Certainly [he does not make] their images formed in outline ...'" (Blondel 214.15–16).

33. See M. V. Anastos, "The Ethical Theory of Images Formulated by the Iconoclasts in 754 and 815," DOP 8(1954):151–60.

34. Anastos, "The Ethical Theory of Images," 153.

conduct, together with the biographies of the blessed ones, that serve as living images of a godly life and the inspiration for the emulation of god-like behaviour.³⁵

Iconophiles did not oppose this emphasis on spiritual worship, and they even interpreted such worship as a commendable mode of adoration of God. However, iconophiles saw the consequent dismissal of images by iconoclasts as obdurate and willful behavior; by dismissing images, iconoclasts were denying an equally venerable means of adoring and comprehending God. Both sides could, in fact, support the importance of the ethical image, but from entirely divergent perspectives. Moreover, these divergent perspectives on ethics and worship of images of angels parallel practice as seen in miracle stories, as the following section will demonstrate. This long-standing concern over angels and their images influenced image theory and practice both, and it led to serious divergences in opinion during Iconoclasm: suspended between humanity and God, angels demanded particular treatment, and iconophile texts clearly reveal the complexities of this peculiar case.

HAGIOGRAPHICAL VIEWS

Miracle stories of the angels produced before, during and after Iconoclasm were directly influenced by this debate over worship proper to angels and their images. By examining the traces of this debate in miracle stories, this section demonstrates that the concerns of image theory extended beyond limited theological circles into the public realm. Miracle stories of angels, in the hands of either iconoclasts or iconophiles, were intended to provide persuasive examples of correct worship of angels and images through forceful and compelling narratives of divine interventions. In this way, these didactic texts parallel the concerns of the more rarefied image theory.

In the period preceding Iconoclasm, proper worship of angels did include images; in practice, images of angels could express both doctrinal concerns and exegesis of nature and identity. This incorporation of images into worship likewise appeared in miracle stories. The Miracles of St. Artemius, written in the 660s about Artemius's shrine in the church of John the Baptist in Oxeia at Constantinople, contained the earliest description of images of angels in a miracle story. It described, moreover, the complete integration by the seventh century of images of the saints into popular piety.³⁶ In one of the episodes, a young girl, Euphemia, saw two angels in a night vision; in the morning, she identified them by reference to icons hanging in the church.³⁷

35. Mansi XIII:300AB; trans. Anastos, "The Ethical Theory of Images," 154–55.

The saints' lives of the sixth and seventh centuries testified to an increased importance of images in miracles of healing and other interventions by saints. The miracle story of Artemius is replete with miracles that occurred at his shrine, often effected through his images.³⁸ And other pre-iconoclastic miracle stories attested further the central role images were assuming in devotion; these texts showed that the faithful increasingly perceived images as signs of the presence of the saint and as a means by which Christians could encourage the saints' activity and protection.³⁹ A seventh-century text, once ascribed to Athanasius of Alexandria (ca. 296–373), for one, defended images on the grounds that the miracles performed by images irrefutably demonstrated images' divine qualities. Furthermore, the author ranked images as a match to relics in sanctity and dignity, and as equally able to perform miracles of healing and exorcism.⁴⁰ This

36. On this question, see V. Déroche, "L'authenticité de l'Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Neapolis," Bulletin de correspondance hellénique 110(1986):658ff., and also his, "L'Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis," TM 12(1994):85ff.; and E. Kitzinger, "The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm," DOP 8(1954):96ff., and, in particular, 107 on Artemius.

37. V. S. Crisafulli and J. W. Nesbitt, The Miracles of St. Artemios. A Collection of Miracle Stories by an Anonymous Author of Seventh-Century Byzantium (Leiden, New York and Köln, 1997) 176–84. And see C. Mango, "On the History of the Templon and the Martyrion of St. Artemios at Constantinople," Zograf 10(1979):40–43.

38. For instance, Crisafulli/Nesbitt, The Miracles of St. Artemios, 88.7 and 108.4.

39. For example, Cosmas and Damian, L. Deubner, Kosmas und Damian. Texte und Einleitung (Leipzig, 1907) 133.23–24, and Theodore of Sykeon, Vie de Théodore de Sykéon, ed. A.-J. Festugière, 2 vols. (Brussels, 1970) I:32.9–13, I:39.5–6.

40. Quaest. ad Ant. Duc., XXXIX, PG 28:621CD.

early devotion included images of angels, as the miracle at the shrine of Artemius showed, but the lives of saints of the eighth and ninth centuries offered alternate models of access to angels, and to the saints more generally.

The miracle story of the Archangel Michael at Chonae, the Narration of the Miracle Accomplished at Chonae by the Archangel Michael, re-worked in the eighth century, related a pattern of worship that conformed to the ethical models stressed in the Iconoclastic debates.⁴¹ In so doing, it avoided patterns found in the Miracles of St Artemius which relied upon images for access to, and provisional identification of, spiritual beings. The Chonae text offered a paradigm of behavior for approaching an angel and receiving the benefits of that proper approach. The miracle story, and its message, were neither overtly iconoclastic nor iconophile. Yet it has common elements with “non-iconophile” miracle stories analyzed by Marie-France Auzépy, and these common elements provided a discrete iconoclastic context for the Chonae miracle story.⁴²

41. The first recension of the Chonae hagiography, and clearly the model for later texts, was edited with commentary by Bonnet [= AB 8(1889):289–307]. Bonnet placed the hagiography between the fifth and seventh century. Examining Bonnet’s evidence, William Ramsay thought the anonymous text was not earlier than the ninth century, citing the local names employed in the text as proof of this date. See W. Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire Before 170 A.D. (New York and London, 1893) 468, 478. However, the name change sometime in the course of the eighth century is the terminus post quem because the miracle is said to have occurred at Chonae itself, and the hagiography is most likely from an eighth-century milieu. Other versions survive: Symeon Metaphrastes (d. ca. 1000) produced a version (Bonnet, 20–28 = AB 8(1889):308–16), and Sissinius wrote a hagiography of Michael at Chonae in the late tenth century, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, in AASS, Sept. 8:41–49). And Pantaleon (late ninth/early tenth century) mentioned the miracle in his Sermo festo S. Michaelis Archangelis (PG 98:1264A). See, for complete references for the hagiographies of Michael, Bibliotheca hagiographica graeca, ed. F. Halkin, 3 vols. (Brussels, 1957) II:118–21, nos. #1282ff.

42. M.-F. Auzépy, “L’analyse littéraire et l’historien: l’exemple des vies de saints iconoclastes,” BS 53(1992):57–67. She analyzed four hagiographies: the lives of Philaretus (702–792), George of Amastris (d. 802–807), Eudocimus (807–840) and Leo of Catania (fl. second half of the eighth century). The first three were discussed by I. Ševčenko, “Hagiography of the Iconoclast Period,” in Iconoclasm. Papers given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin (Birmingham, 1977) 113–31. The last life has been edited by A. Acconcia Longo, “La vita de S. Leone di Catania e gli incantesimi del mago Eliodoro,” RSBN 26(1989):3–98; subsequently, she refuted Auzépy’s interpretations in “A proposito di un articolo recente sul-

The miracle story of the Archangel Michael at Chonae was an apologetic text intended to communicate models of proper and successful devotion to an audience. In the tale, a group of pagans threatened the hermit Archippus and the shrine of the Archangel Michael with a series of destructive plots; eventually, they dammed two local rivers in order to flood the area and overwhelm shrine and inhabitant. With the waters approaching, the Archangel Michael appeared, addressed the hermit and, by striking the rock before the shrine, created a source for the famous healing spring (fig. 15). The miracle story had the basic goal of glorification, edification and conversion of the worshipper to an orthodox position. It lauded the work of the leader of the heavenly host in this world and established a framework of approach for the common worshipper.

The text also worked to convince an audience of access to Michael, and, through Michael, to God. A key term in the text was “parrêsia” (παρρησία), which can be rendered as “familiarity” or “patronage” or even “boldness.”⁴³ The classical meaning was “freedom of speech,” but by the Byzantine period the word had taken on a broader meaning that in the devotional context implied mediation between divinity and humanity made successful by proper preparation. At Chonae, the miracle was accomplished “through the grace and familiarity (παρρησία)” (1.6) of Michael with God; at a later stage in the miracle story, the same familiarity was passed on to the distraught hermit, when Michael commanded Archippus, “Be bold, and come towards me so that the approaching rivers will not devour you” (15.11–12).⁴⁴ Thus, the miracle story signaled the completion of the hierarchy, ascending from the holy man to the Archangel to God. To a lesser degree, this familiarity or access was offered to the reader/listener according to his or her worthiness and ability to comprehend.

l’agiografia iconoclasta,” RSBN 29(1992):3–17. Auzépy and Acconcia Longo offered final defenses in RSBN 30(1993):3–15.

See also V. Déroche, “L’autorité des moines à Byzance du VIII^e siècle au Xe siècle,” Revue Bénédictine 103(1993):241–54, on related issues.

43. On parrêsia, see C. Mango, Byzantium. The Empire of New Rome (London, 1980) 159.

44. All citations in the text refer to Bonnet.

Although this “familiarity” or “boldness” (παρρησία) was not peculiar to the cult of the Archangel Michael,⁴⁵ the incomprehensible nature of the Archangel made “access” more difficult than to the mortal saints. The unique nature of the angels and the archangels, hovering between heaven and earth, was the basis for this difficulty. The incomprehensible nature of the appearances and the miracles of the Archangel must be understood in ways outside of the purely rational.⁴⁶ As Philoxenus of Mabbug (ca. 440–523) wrote concerning angels, faith was paradoxically the first step to comprehension.⁴⁷ The angels clearly were a special problem in terms of devotion and approach. The angels’ particular nature and qualities demanded individual treatment in theological texts, and miracle stories also acknowledged these distinctions.

In the miracle story, jealous rumblings began among the locals on account of the great success of the spring, and open insurrection against the shrine was not long in appearing. In the meantime, the miracle story introduced a “dishonourable and idolatrous” pagan, from the nearby city of Laodicea (3.14ff.). This pagan had a daughter who was deaf and dumb. Michael appeared in a dream and told him to go to the shrine, and “by my name, if you believe, you will not leave disappointed” (4.5). The pagan then traveled to the spring and questioned those at the spring about the healing process. He was told that one must call on the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, 45. For instance, see Kazhdan / Maguire, “Byzantine Hagiographical Texts,” 14.

46. See Metrophanes, Metropolitan of Smyrna ca. 857–880, who says that the Archangel Michael and Gabriel are great, but small are the means to describe them, “Your [Michael and Gabriel’s] image is broad and elevated in being and manifold in its bodiless and immaterial and entirely splendid shape, but the word, coming from our hearts through corporeal organs, is narrow and humble and artless.” A little below he adds that it is necessary for the archangels “to illuminate the intellectual eyes of our hearts.” The text is found in Εκκλησιαστική Αληθεία 7(1887):390.

47. See his sermon “On Faith,” trans. E.A.W. Budge, The Discourses of Philoxenus Bishop of Mabbugh, A.D. 485–519. Vol. II. Introduction, Translation, etc. (London, 1894) 29–31. For Pantaleon, the process of apprehension is also indirect, “You illuminate our intellectual eyes of the heart, so that we should know, and apprehend in the mind and pronounce ... the miracles of your majesty.” See his Nar. mir. max. Arch. Mich., II, PG 140: 575A. Much later, Damaskenos Stoudite (sixteenth century) wrote, “On account of this, open your spiritual and corporeal eyes, so that you can understand precisely what I am about to say.” (See his Θησαυρός [Venice, 1838] 185.)

and to Michael, and then raising one's hands and eyes to heaven say, "O Father, O Son, O Holy Ghost, through the ministry of Michael, help me, a sinful person" (4.11–13). He then poured water into the mouth of his child saying, rather alarmingly, "The God of the Christians, your power is truly great, Michael Archistrategos" (4.15–16).⁴⁸ The daughter of the pagan was forthwith healed, and the pagan with his entire household was baptized on the spot. Finally, he built there a small chapel in the name of Michael in order to shelter the holy source.

The statement of the subservience of Michael to God in the prayers of the pagan was part of the appeal of the miracle story in the eighth- and ninth-century "non-iconophile" context of debate over proper worship. Michael himself at a later point stated the source of his own power as he commanded the water to flow harmlessly into the chasm that he had opened in the name of the Trinity. Michael had made the water halt moments before by making the sign of the cross in the face of the rushing waters. These were statements then of a scale of access or "parrêsia" that communicated to the audience of the miracle story where Michael stood in the divine hierarchy, that is, under the command of God.

The holy man, Archippus, was at the ethical center of the miracle story in the sense that he described, in his faultless way of life and correct appeal to God, the proper model of behavior for the audience. This ethical model was fundamental to the structure of the miracle story in that the large part of the miracle story described the hermit's way of life and qualifications. Moreover, this character study provided the miracle story's "image" for Christians to try to imitate. The epiphany of the Archangel Michael in comparison was not described to the same degree as the character of the hermit, and Archippus also figured significantly in the encounter between angel and man after the epiphany. Nonetheless, nothing about Archippus would appear to be individualized. Even his name would seem to be borrowed from the Epistle to the Colossians (4:17).⁴⁹ Archippus came to the shrine of the Archangel, the narrator of the miracle story stated (5.6ff.), when he was only a precocious ten-year-old, having left his parents in Laodicea to take up the ascetic way of life.⁵⁰ In this way, ninety years after its foundation, the shrine got its first caretaker, Archippus.⁵¹ The description of his life after his commitment to Michael's shrine was largely undistinguished. It was apparently cobbled together from various ascetic sources and was mainly a remembrance of other familiar texts.⁵² Archippus's anonymity made him an "everyman" that all Christians could aspire to imitate.⁵³

48. See the Introduction on the overweening position Michael was put in by certain heterodox adherents at Chonae.

The Chonae miracle story described a way of life familiar to miracle stories for its guileless devotion and comfortless longevity. The narrator clearly wanted to convince the audience of Archippus's worthiness. Archippus spent the next sixty years perfecting himself in his vocation, his angelic way of life ("ἄσκησις ἀγγελική," 7.11 and 8.7).⁵⁴ He never ate bread or meat, nor did he bathe; he ate boiled wild plants without salt; he sprinkled his honorable body with three

49. Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire Before 170 A.D., 469. According to P. Bati-fol, Studiorum patristicorum. Études d'ancienne littérature chrétienne, 2 vols. (Paris, 1889–1890) I:33, this hermit in the hagiography is perhaps a true survival of the real Archippus mentioned at Col. 4:17.

50. A.G. Elliott, Roads to Paradise. Reading the Lives of the Early Saints (Hanover and London, 1987) 77ff., has described certain characteristics of the childhood of hagiographic heroes.

51. See C. Mango, "Germia: A Postscript," in JöB 41(1991):298–99, on προσμονᾶριος.

52. Some examples taken from the Lausiac History of Palladius (ca. 363–ca. 431): The Lausiac History of Palladius, ed. C. Butler, 2 vols. (Cambridge, 1898–1904) II:15–16, 16–17, 29, 48, 60–61, and Bonnet xxii n1, for others.

53. I follow this idea in hagiography, liturgy and art in my "Holy Man, Supplicant and Donor: On Representations of the Miracle of the Archangel Michael at Chonae," Mediaeval Studies 59(1997):173–82.

54. Elliott, Roads to Paradise, 132ff., has noted the opposition of nature and culture with regard to the position of the hermit. On the topos of monks as angels, see P.S. Frank, ΑΓΓΕΛΙΚΟΣ ΒΙΟΣ. Begriffsanalytische und begriffsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zum "Engelgleichen Leben" im frühen Mönchtum (Münster, 1964). And Peter Brown's remarks on the de-gendering of monks through the simile of angelic qualities has interesting possibilities. See "The Rise and Function of the Holy Man in Late Antiquity, 1971–1997," J ECS 6(1998): 371–72. The confrontation of monk and angel at Chonae, in literature and art, also has a potential for elevation of the everyman Archippus. Raised to exalted company, he joins these celestial ranks through his extra-terrestrial vocation.

measures of water one day out of three, and in this way refreshed his soul; for clothing he wore two sacks and he slept on stones with a pillow filled with thorns; never did he relax, or reveal his body, all the while guarding his stainless soul from belonging to the other one (that is, the devil). The value of such an anonymous portrait at the center of this text lay in Archippus's quality as a model for imitation. Not everyone would be capable of this demanding way of life. At an elevated level, Archippus figured as an exemplar who might be out of reach to many in his worthiness but who at least presented an ideal of approach to the Archangel and, most important, of answered prayer.⁵⁵

Archippus's reaction to the threat of the pagans is instructive. The group of several thousand, seething with hatred and envy of Archippus, the shrine, and their patron, were impressively bestial, and were thus fundamentally distinct from the holy man. They roared like lions (8.15) and gnashed their teeth in working out their wicked designs.⁵⁶ As Archippus saw the designs of the devil and the unclean things of the idolaters, he attempted to counter the base workings of the pagans by going into the church where he fell as if dead. He beseeched God and the Archangel Michael to guard the shrine from the approaching water, and spent ten days neither eating nor drinking nor raising himself from the floor. He said,

I do not depart from this church nor do I leave off from prayer but I will die by this water. For I believe that my God will save me from faintness and tempestuousness through the agency of the Archangel Michael so that it will make no mark either on this holy shrine or on this land . . . (13.10–14).⁵⁷

55. The idea of the holy man as exemplar, of course, has deep roots in Late Antique and Byzantine society, and it also informed the iconoclastic image of the ideal Christian discussed in chapter 2. On the holy man in Late Antiquity, see M. Vessey, "The Demise of the Christian Writer and the Remaking of 'Late Antiquity': From H.-I. Marrou's Saint Augustine (1938) to Peter Brown's Holy Man (1983)," JECs 6(1998):403–11.

56. In the Menologium Basilianum (late tenth/early eleventh century), PG 117:33C. Also, Bonnet 3.9 and 5.3.

57. Chrysippus (ca. 405–479) described Daniel and his preparations for the epiphany (Dan. 10:2–3): "In those days I Daniel was in mourning three whole weeks. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till

For ten days, the pagans stored up the water behind their dams and on the tenth day they unleashed the rivers. Archippus, hearing the advancing waters crush the rocks, intensified his prayers, and wet with tears called on God once more, reciting Psalm 93, particularly lines 3–5:

The floods have lifted up, O Lord, the floods have lifted up their voice; the floods lift up their waves. The Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea. Thy testimonies are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O Lord for ever.⁵⁸

When Archippus had finished the Psalm, there came from outside a great clap of thunder and the Archistrategos came “to that place, standing on the head of the impenetrable rock” (14.17–18). Archippus’s access to the Archangel, his recommendation to “parrêsia,” was founded on his unimpeachable way of life, and proved by the Archangel’s intervention on his behalf. Archippus “pursues the angelic life while in the flesh” and, therefore, was worthy of visions (24.7).⁵⁹

The goal in devotion to Michael was an access from which benefit derives, and this access was made possible through the paradigm of approach present in the miracle story. This conclusion was latent in the anonymous version and explicit in later versions of the miracle. “Therefore truly we shall imitate this wondrous Archippus, this worthy one himself, [who] on account of his excellence was made most familiar to the great Archangel Michael and was revealed a vision....”⁶⁰ Only the just and righteous were allowed into the presence of the angels, for protection and revelation, as Paul warned in three whole weeks were fulfilled.” He then went on to describe what Daniel saw at Dan. 10:5, 12:5, and Michael’s identification at 10:12–13. See A. Sigalas, “Χρυσίππου πρεσβυτέρου Ἐγκώμιον εἰς Ἀρχάγγελον Μιχαήλ,” EEBS 3(1926):90.17ff.

58. In the Theodore Psalter (1066), British Museum Add. 19.352, fol. 125r, the scene of the miracle at Chonae illustrates just this passage from Psalm 93. See S. Der Nersessian, L’illustration des psautiers grecs du Moyen Age. II. Londres, Add. 19.352 (Paris, 1970) 46, fig. 203.

59. Here Sissinius, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 9, AASS Sept. 8:44F, “βίον ἰσάγγελον ἐν σαρκὶ μετερχόμενος.”

60. Sissinius, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 18, AASS Sept. 8:47B.

1 Corinthians 11:10.⁶¹ The miracle was proof of the promise made on proper approach for all worshippers, exemplified by the generalized but scrupulous Archippus. The only miracle performed by Archippus was the successful answering of his extensive prayer, and for that one power he was worthy of emulation.⁶²

Auzépy has noted the lack of miracles performed by subjects of saints' lives of the eighth and ninth centuries.⁶³ Although Archippus was not himself active in good works in a community, the legend dated from before Iconoclasm, and must have retained some of its original elements. Its rewriting and elaboration in the eighth century must have been connected to the contemporary appeal of the legend. In the Chonae miracle story, it is significant that the central character lacks any miraculous power. Archippus's abilities were restricted to, and made laudable by, a holy life and energetic prayer.

Some modern commentators, typically historians of the nineteenth century, have criticized the miracle story of Chonae for its lack of inventiveness, focusing on the generalized portrait of Archippus, a holy man with no real personality. This generalization works to a purpose, however, presenting a behavior meant to persuade its audience of the best route to fulfilled entreaty. Commentators have accused the narrator of the anonymous version of being artless, rude in style, and incomplete in knowledge of the event and region.⁶⁴ However, repetition of details in miracle stories and saints' lives, often cited derogatorily by modern commentators, comply with audience expectations of recognizable patterns.⁶⁵ In the mind of the writ-

61. See J.A. Fitzmeyer, "A New Feature of Qumrân Angelology and the Angels of 1 Cor. XI:10," New Testament Studies n.s. 4(1957/8):55–56. The idea of the unblemished being allowed into the presence of the angels is one found in Jewish apocrypha and the Qumran texts, although with a visionary quality not often found in the Christian texts; see G. Vermes, The Dead Sea Scrolls in English (Harmondsworth, Middlesex, 1962) 76.

62. Contrast the lack of Archippus's own power with examples of the might some saints do exhibit given by R. Browning, "The 'Low Level' Saint's Life in the Early Byzantine World," in The Byzantine Saint, ed. S. Hackel (London, 1981) 122.

63. Auzépy, "L'analyse littéraire et l'historien," 60, and Ševčenko, "The Hagiography of the Iconoclast Period," 120ff.

64. For example, see Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire Before 170 A.D., 468, and Bonnet vi.

65. See Elliott, Roads to Paradise, and also Holy Women of the Syrian Orient, ed. S.A. Harvey and S. Brock (Berkeley, 1987) 13ff.

ers of miracle stories and saints' lives, edification—as well as “access”—was the key to these texts, and ethical truth was far more important than historical accuracy. The aim of the miracle story of Chonae was not to provide a topographical survey or an historically accurate document: rather it was to provide a model for imitation in veneration and a confirmation of the proximity of the Archangel at a given site. For this reason, the later writers of the miracle at Chonae of the ninth and tenth centuries did not alter the basic structure of the anonymous version but merely added their own flourishes to a successful text.⁶⁶ And it must also be stressed that the miracle story could have posed no threat to the church after 843; images and idolatry do not figure, but the text provided a portrait of a holy way of life and seemly angel worship which became very popular indeed after Iconoclasm.⁶⁷

A further similarity of the Chonae miracle story with “non-iconophile” saints' lives was the importance placed on references to Hebrew scripture. The prophets, patriarchs, and kings of Hebrew scripture figured in the texts Auzépy discussed, rather than models derived from the saints of Church tradition.⁶⁸ The encounter of holy man and angel at Chonae, as described in the miracle story, was very

66. See Bonnet xii, on the working methods of Metaphrastes and Sissinius.

67. Archippus's prayer is a fruitful act for angelic intervention and the active element in his piety is recognized in depictions by his gesture of imprecation, as well as the accompanying inscription. In the representation of the scene in the Church of the Asomatoi at Archanes on Crete from 1315/6, the inscription accompanying the image states that the miracle occurred “because of Archippus's prayers.” See S. Koukiales, Τὰ θαύματα—Εμφάνσεις τῶν Ἀγγέλων καὶ Ἀρχαγγέλων στὴν Βυζαντινὴ Τέχνη τῶν Βαλκανίων (Athens, 1989) 70, “ΘΑΥΜΑ ΤΟ ΤΩΝ ΕΝ Τ(ΑΙΣ) ΧΩΝΑΙΣ <ΝΑΟΝ ΤΟΤ> ΜΙΧΑΗΛ/ΤΟΤ ΑΡΧΙ-ΣΤΡΑΤΗ-ΓΟΥ> ΔΙ ΕΤΧΩΝ ΑΡΧΙΠΠΟΥΤ.”

Ironically, the sixteenth-century hagiographer, Damaskenos Stoudite, states that Archippus prayed to an icon for the intervention of the Archangel in the face of the pagan floods. See his Θησαυρός, 198.

A further irony is evident in the frescoes, ca. 1500, in the Church of Cosmas and Damian, Palaiochorio in the Troodos, Cyprus. In these frescoes, the donor has supplanted Archippus and is represented before the Archangel in the miracle at Chonae. See S. Gabelić, “The Iconography of the Miracle at Chonae. An Unusual Example from Cyprus,” Zograf 20(1989):95–103, and Peers, “Holy Man, Supplicant and Donor.”

68. Auzépy, “L'analyse littéraire et l'historien,” 58ff. See, however, the remarks of D. Krueger, “Typological Figuration in Theodoret of Cyrrhus's Historia Religiosa and the Art of Postbiblical Narrative,” J ECS 5(1997):393–417.

much within the scriptural structure of divine epiphany as found in the accounts of Moses, Joshua, Daniel and Isaiah in Hebrew scripture.⁶⁹ Furthermore, the encounter indicated the difficulties—often described in Hebrew scripture—attendant in confronting and perceiving an angelic being. Archippus weathered this confrontation and emerged as not unworthy of comparison to ancient examples of witnesses to epiphany; he did not worship the Archangel but humbly followed orders, and afterwards expressed gratitude for the safeguarding of the shrine and his own escape.

The Vita of Leo of Catania, dating to the first half of the ninth century, presented behavior which contrasts starkly with Archippus's propriety. In this miracle story, a magus by the name of Heliodorus introduced idolatry into the city in the form of an idol (ξόανον) of an aerial deity; the idol was also designated as a "sign" (στοιχεῖον), recalling a talisman through which a demon works and, more generally, the magic arts Heliodorus practiced.⁷⁰ Auzépy interpreted this episode as an inversion whereby the iconoclastic sympathies of the saint's life were revealed.⁷¹ The antagonist of the saint's life, Heliodorus, was a magician, that is, one who worked wonders or even miracles; significantly, he also worshipped idols. Auzépy sees idols in this context to mean any image, and so denoting all image worshippers, since Heliodorus was intended as an iconophile anti-hero in the saint's life; the aerial deity was also strikingly suggestive of all images of winged beings, notably angels. Although not delineated to the same degree as Heliodorus, Leo of Catania, the real hero of the text, derived his sanctity from his social standing as priest and his good deeds which did not include miracles or image worship. Moreover, Leo replaced the statue which Heliodorus worshipped with a cross, the favored iconoclastic sign.⁷²

69. On this structural similarity, see also chapter 5.

70. Acconcia Longo, "La vita de S. Leone di Catania," 89.21–26 (#8). And see also C. Blum, "The Meaning of στοιχεῖον and its Derivatives in the Byzantine Age. A Study in Byzantine Magic," Eranos 44(1946):315–25.

71. Auzépy, "L'analyse littéraire et l'historien," 62ff.

72. Acconcia Longo, "La vita de S. Leone di Catania," 97.1–7 (#18).

In this sense, too, Archippus could be considered to be a hero of the iconoclastic cause: his way of life was the focus of the miracle story rather than any miraculous deeds or interventions. The standard of behavior and the rigor of his prayer were clearly the persuasive means by which the audience was meant to be won over to a proper and efficacious worship. Moreover, like Abraham, Archippus did not make an image in commemoration.⁷³ He guarded the memory of a difficult but enlightening experience in his soul. Finally, he did not lapse into worship of the Archangel himself, and fall into pagan ways, as iconoclastic sources forewarned.

The patriarch Nicephorus (ca. 750–828) fully agreed with the position on idols and worship expressed by the fourth-century anti-image theologians Macarius Magnes and Epiphanius: one should not make idols of angels after the pagan fashion, neither should one worship them. Yet Nicephorus was unwilling to dismiss images commemorating interventions from worship on this account. On the one hand, for Nicephorus and other iconophiles, material objects were appropriate intermediaries for directing honor toward such spiritual beings as angels. Iconoclasts, on the other hand, denied the value of such distracting intermediaries, particularly in the case of such unrepresentable entities. For them, angels and their images had too many inherent dangers for Christians to negotiate. Rather, listening to the text—scripture or, as here, miracle stories—and hearkening to its message was proper and intellectual worship that allowed the reader/listener to ascend to spiritual truths without hindrance. Iconoclastic theology simply could not countenance any mediating steps, especially material ones, between worshipper and spiritual reality. Ethical instruction through persuasive texts such as miracle stories and saints' lives created a “true image” for the behavior and beliefs of conscientious Christians.

73. According to Sissinius, after Michael's disappearance Archippus retired to the shrine and returned to prayer. "The venerable one saw him as if a flame of fire streamed up into the heavens, [and] filled with puzzlement and fear, he went back to sing psalms in the holy shrine, 'God has sent his angel and liberated and saved me from the snares of the beasts, and he guarded his sacred shrine from the inundation of the waters.'" See Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 18, AASS Sept. 8:47AB.

Although the Chonae miracle story must have been written or reworked as a consequence of the debates over worship in the eighth century, it was not dismissed after Iconoclasm. The text provided valid models of worship within the iconophile position as well. Indeed, the miracle was retold by Pantaleon in the late ninth/early tenth century and Sissinius and Symeon Metaphrastes in the tenth century; all of these redactions depended upon the anonymous text of the eighth century. Furthermore, the iconography of the miracle is first found in the tenth century, and it became popular thereafter, as the gorgeous twelfth-century icon from Sinai can attest (fig. 15).⁷⁴ The text did not dismiss images, but did describe a successful and orthodox form of worship; in this sense, Archippus was the miracle story’s “true image.” The Chonae story’s models of worship had relevance for both sides of this controversy, and, like the Vita of Leo of Catania, they must be seen within the context of debates over images of aerial deities and angels both. And the issue of angelolatry and idolatry are also present in this text as at Chonae since for iconoclasts the two forms of unsuitable worship were inseparable.

One final example of a miracle story including angels serves to show that in the period following Iconoclasm proper worship was again integrated with images, thereby coming full circle with the means of healing described in the seventh-century collection of miracles by Artemius. A miracle that occurred at the church of Michael at Eusebios in Constantinople, described by Pantaleon in his Narration of the Miracles of the Mighty Archangel Michael, illustrated this transition from the behavioral model of the Chonae miracle story to orthodox worship that includes icons.⁷⁵ The miracle occurred immediately following the reintroduction of images in the reign of Michael III (842–867) under the regency of his mother, Theodora.

74. The first extant representation of the miracle is found in the Church of St. John, north chapel #4, at Güllü Dere (ca. 900). See N. Thierry, Haut moyen-âge en Cappadoce. Les églises de la région de Cavusin (Paris, 1983) 155–56, pl. 71; C. Jolivet-Lévy, Les églises byzantines de Cappadoce. Le programme iconographique de l’abside et ses abords (Paris, 1991) 37ff. The earliest example of an illustration of the miracle at Chonae, in the canonical scheme, is found in the late tenth-/early eleventh-century Menologium of Basil II (Vat. gr. 1613, page 17). The iconography of the miracle is treated thoroughly by Gabelić, “The Iconography of the Miracle at Chonae,” 96–98.

The story described Marcianus, a candle maker, and a godly servant of the shrine of Michael. Marcianus was never ill, according to the miracle story, but if he felt the slightest pain he needed only go into the church in order to recover. Once, however, Marcianus became ill and went to the shrine, but not before he was convinced by one of the doctors who congregated around the church to wear a poultice with some medicine. That night Marcianus slept in the church, as was the custom at this shrine, and, as in an ecstasy, he saw a terrifying vision. All the doors of the church were suddenly flung open and towards him came “a fearful man as out of the heaven, with a rush descending on a white and terrible steed.” This man got down from the horse and entered the church with an escort, dressed in the costume of court officials. The church also became suffused with an unworldly odor. After a moment, the man came to Marcianus’s cot and inspecting the recumbent man found the doctor’s medicine. He asked Marcianus what it was and identified himself by demanding who had dared bring such medicine into his house. Marcianus told him, and Michael sent his minions off to find the unfortunate doctor. Michael then took Marcianus to a candle hanging before an icon of the Archangel, dipped his finger in the oil, and made the sign of the cross on the patient’s forehead. Michael got back on his horse and rode off into the heavens. Straightaway all the doors of the church closed by themselves and Marcianus was left to marvel.

In the morning, Marcianus told his vision to the deacon who, seeing the cross on the man’s forehead, believed all he had been told. The deacon then sent to discover what had happened to the doctor

75. Pantaleon, Narr. mir. max. Arch. Mich., XXVI–XXVIII, PG 140:586A–8A, and F. Halkin, Inédits byzantins d’Ochrida, Candie et Moscou (Brussels, 1963) 147ff.

The text in praise of the Archangels Michael and Gabriel by Michael of Stoudios (late ninth century) also described the connection between icons and healing. See “Éloge des archanges Michel et Gabriel par Michel le Moine (BHG 1294a),” ed. T. Matantseva, JbB 46(1996):145 (XI.8).

and learned that the doctor had taken gravely ill during the night. Marcianus went to the doctor, saw his suffering, and ordered that the doctor be brought on his bed to the shrine of Michael to beg forgiveness and mercy. Marcianus re-enacted the method of healing with the oil and icon shown to him by Michael, and so offered the shrine's model for successful healing; forthwith, the doctor was miraculously relieved of his suffering.

Clearly, this text fully integrated images and worship, a remarkable development when compared to the image-less miracle story of Michael at Chonae, and to the unflattering portrait of iconophile worship of angels' images in the Vita of Leo of Catania. Behavior was not in the first place the means of gaining an epiphany in the episode described by Pantaleon, but the Archangel himself demonstrated the methods of efficacious healing; this method of approach was convincing by its results and was henceforth reproduced (we are led to believe) at the shrine of Michael at Eusebios. In fact, the shrine with its icon and oil provided the only proper method, as the unfortunate doctor learned.

The assimilation of proper behavior and images was the outcome of this long-standing debate on worship. Icons did not exclude other approaches, like Christian virtue as a "true image," but they were now an inextricable component in a complete Christian ethic. Indeed, the ancient Christian custom of accepting images in worship that iconophiles defended in the ninth century has been seen in practice through these miracle stories and saints' lives: despite inherent difficulties in gaining likeness in art, images were granted relation to their models through practice, through the consensus of worship and, most dramatically, through the miraculous example of Michael himself in the shrine at Eusebios.

Five

APPREHENDING THE ARCHANGEL MICHAEL

MANUFACTURING SIGNS OF PRESENCE

This chapter examines the means by which hagiographical writings, that is, miracle stories, attempt to describe the presence and appearances of the Archangel Michael. Dealing with several miracle stories at some length demonstrates the ways in which each text persuades its audience of the Archangel's benign proximity. The tales of the miracle at Chonae contribute particularly in this examination since the "pre-history" of this cult is relatively clear and the shrine's activities during the Byzantine period were famous. Discussing other miracle stories, namely of the sanctuary at Monte Gargano in southern Italy and of the shrine in Asia Minor described by Michael Psellus (1018–1081?), allows certain structural similarities to emerge: the miracle stories reveal the Archangel Michael's elusive, elemental force active in a landscape and consequently bind him to places to strengthen expectation of worshippers' devotional return.

Several tales of the miracle at Chonae are extant, and, as accounts of the most popular miracle of Michael in the Byzantine world, they deserve special attention. All narrate the same series of events: a group of pagans attempt to destroy the shrine of Michael at Chonae along with the guardian, Archippus, by flooding the vicinity. At the last moment, Michael appears and creates a chasm into which the water is forced to flow. The shrine and its newly fashioned spring henceforth work wonders.

The dating of the earliest miracle story cannot be decided with any finality, but more weight should be given to a late date, preferably in the eighth century, since the “lapses” in topographic detail in the miracle story point to a place of composition distant from the shrine itself and a time after the cult has been firmly established. This anonymous text, Narration of the Miracle Accomplished at Chonae by the Archangel Michael, was surely a reworking, however, of an early legend, since the cult of angels, and especially Michael, had an ancient history around Chonae. That the miracle story was re-worked in the eighth century attests to the popularity of the cult in the Byzantine world, but also to a contemporary relevance of its subject.¹

One can be certain, just the same, that the “inconsistencies” and “lapses” in the miracle story work to a purpose and communicate important information about the cult of the Archangel. Indeed, the stories of the miracle of the Archangel Michael at Chonae were persuasive texts, intended to communicate models of proper and successful devotion to an audience. The texts also worked to convince an audience of access to Michael, and through him God, guaranteed by the miracle and appearance of the Archangel at a holy place.

The quality of familiarity with the Archangel, however, is of a different order than that derived from “lives” of the mortal ranks of saints. As Symeon Metaphrastes (d. ca. 1000) wrote in the prologue to his version of the miracle at Chonae (20.8–12),

It is a great deal more beneficial to describe the details of the bodiless powers, to proclaim their heavenly portents and marvels. For by this how much more is familiarity and consort with God and these [powers] increased, by this how much greater the beneficence we harvest in these narratives concerning these [powers].²

1. See chapter 4.

2. All citations in the text refer to Bonnet.

The key term in this passage is “parrêsia” (παρρησία), which I have translated here as “consort” but which could also be rendered as “access” or “patronage” or even “boldness.”³ Although this “access” is not unique to the cult of the Archangel Michael, the incomprehensible nature of the Archangel made “access” more difficult than to the mortal saints. The cult of the Archangel Michael posed special problems for all aspects of devotion, based upon the unique, difficult nature of the angels and the archangels. The elemental qualities of Michael, which removed him from the more easily understood traits and operations of the once human saints, compounded this difficulty.

A topos of texts about the angels is the incomprehensibility of angelic beings and the insuperable distance that separates the angels from humanity. Despite its commonplace aspect, the topos has real meaning as a defining characteristic of the angels and archangels. Michael Psellus in his narrative in praise of the Archangel Michael stated that it is difficult to describe the deeds of humanity, but having surpassed any of these deeds the Archangel lies above in measure.⁴ Moreover, the Archangel remains beyond the praise deriving from speech, and is beyond the power of both the artful and artless.

3. On parrêsia, see E. Peterson, “Zur Bedeutungsgeschichte von παρρησία,” in Reinhold Seeberg Festschrift, ed. W. Koepf, 2 vols. (Leipzig, 1929) I:283–97; G. Scarpata, Parresia. Storia del termine e delle sue traduzioni in latino (Brescia, 1963); P. S. Frank, ΑΓΓΕΛΙΚΟΣ ΒΙΟΣ. Begriffsanalytische und begriffsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zum “Engelgleichen Leben” im frühen Mönchtum (Münster, 1964) 67–68; G. J. M. Bartelink, “Quelques observations sur ΠΑΡΡΗΣΙΑ dans la littérature paléo-chrétienne,” in Graecitas et latinitas christianorum primaeva, suppl. 3 (Nijmegen, 1970) 5–57, 155–57; C. Mango, Byzantium. The Empire of New Rome (London, 1980) 159.

4. On this encomium, see Michael Psellus, Oratio in Archangelum Michaellem, in Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, ed. E. A. Fisher (Stuttgart and Leipzig, 1994) 230–56, as well as E. A. Fisher, “Nicomedia or Galatia? Where Was Psellus’ Church of the Archangel Michael?” in Gonimos. Neoplatonic and Byzantine Studies Presented to Leendert G. Westerlink at 75, ed. J. Duffy and J. Peradotto (Buffalo, 1988) 175–87, and C. Mango, “La croix dite de Michel le Cérulaire et la croix de Saint-Michel de Sykéôn,” CA 36(1988): 41–49.

This topos of the author avowing inability to describe is also “an aesthetic choice bearing moral value.” See D. Krueger, “Hagiography as an Ascetic Practice in the Early Christian East.” The Journal of Religion 79(1999):216. But “authorial self-denigration” goes one step further for angels.

In other words, Michael surpasses the abilities of language to describe and honor. The difficulties of understanding are crucial since, as Psellus stated, the seeing and the hearing of a paradoxical, incomprehensible event establishes true faith.⁵ The incomprehensible nature of the appearances and the miracles of the Archangel must be understood in ways outside of the purely logical. Faith, in the face of the inexplicable event communicated by the miracle story, is the first step to comprehension. For Pantaleon, the process of apprehension is also indirect, “You illuminate our intellectual eyes of the heart, so that we should know, and apprehend in the mind and pronounce . . . the miracles of your majesty.”⁶ The difficulties inherent in the nature of the Archangel made for special problems of apprehension. For this reason, a textual and devotional footing distinct from the mortal saints determined access (παρρησία) to the Archangel.

Focusing on the generalized portrait of Archippus, a holy man with no real personality, some modern commentators have criticized the anonymous text describing the miracle at Chonae for its lack of inventiveness. Archippus came to the shrine as a boy and, as the miracle story describes it, he led an austere and, with one exception, an uneventful life. This generalization works to a purpose, however, in that it presents a behavior meant to persuade its audience of the best route to fulfilled entreaty. The narrator of the anonymous version has also been charged with being artless, rude in style, and incomplete in knowledge of the event and region.⁷ The burden of nineteenth-century rationalism doubtless blinkered these scholars to some of the positive aspects of the literary tradition of the Chonae miracle. Hopefully, some of these aspects will emerge from the discussion to follow.

5. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 231.3ff. and 240.224–26.

6. Narratio miraculorum maximi archangeli Michaelis, II, PG 140:575AB.

7. W. Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire Before 170 a.d. (New York and London, 1893) 468. See also Bonnet, who comments on the lack of coherence and the implausible additions: “nec arte nec ingenio excellentis nec omnino tamen utroque carentis” (vi), and “Genus dicendi tale est fere quale ab eiusmodi narratore expectes, rude et impolitum, modo tritum et volgare modo arcessitum, modo humile et abiectum modo poeticis verbis infucatum, nonnullis locis etiam soloecum aut barbarum” (vii). The hagiography is not, however, without “viribus et nervis” (vii).

The manner in which the anonymous miracle story described the topography of the area of Chonae is undeniably imprecise. For example, the apostles Philip and John appear at Chairitopa, a town otherwise without importance,⁸ and predict the Archangel's appearance in the future; the story places Chairitopa some miles to the southeast of the shrine and is too far distant to be the site where Michael appeared and the famous church was built. The anonymous redactor of the miracle story evidently assumed that Chairitopa was in the vicinity of Chonae.⁹ Yet the etymology of the toponym may be worth remarking because the place name may then refer generally to the place of the encounter, a station then proleptic to the meeting of Michael and his client. Egregious, too, is the way in which the redactor describes the rivers in the area of Chonae.¹⁰ For example, the Lykokapros is a nonsensical combination of two rivers, and the Lykos itself is said to flow in a direction which is clearly errant. Because of these errors, William Ramsay and others have been willing to accept this miracle story as a kind of naive aetiology of a half-forgotten event concerning earthquake and water supplies.¹¹

8. K. Belke and N. Mersich, Phrygien und Pisidien, Tabula Imperii Byzantini, vol. 7 (Vienna, 1990) 221.

9. And this must have been the case, despite the inexactitude of the redactor's description. Chairitopa may have been to the south or west of Colossae. See L. Robert, Villes d'Asie Mineure. Études de géographie antique (Paris, 1935) 105ff., and further 105–106 n4: "Il n'y a rien à tirer de précis, pour la topographie, de cet absurde babillage; le rédacteur ne connaissait évidemment pas les lieux de façon précise. Sur la valeur topographique nulle de ce récit [cf. Bonnet and Ramsay]. Une fois que j'ai fixé le site de Keretapa, la question ne se pose plus tout à fait de la même manière; l'hypothèse qu'avait d'abord envisagée M. Bonnet ... s'adapte de façon curieuse à la localisation qu'il ne soupçonnait pas; mais je ne crois pas que ce petit problème vaille la peine d'être repris. De ce Miracle on conclura seulement que Chonae et Keretapa devaient être voisines."

10. Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire, 470–71, and see Bonnet xxviii ff.

11. Ramsay, The Church in the Roman Empire, 471–72, offers three possibilities for the writing of this legend. First, "Some are mere inventions to explain a name. In this way a tale might be made to explain the name Khonai, 'funnels,' as derived from a channel or funnel through which a neighbouring river flows." Second, "In many cases old legends, told originally of some pagan deity, were transferred to a Christian saint." Third, "Some legends were founded on historical facts, which occurred in Christian times." Ramsay favors the last and cites ancient authors on his behalf. Herodotus described Colossae as a place "wherein the

Regardless of the possible historicity of events giving rise to the cult, the anonymous account of the miracle is clearly dependent upon an amount of artifice for its persuasive power.¹² Its purpose is to provide the Archangel with a comprehensive history, an apostolic initiation, and an open ending; in this view, the text is notably successful. The tale takes place in a plausible geography—despite the apparent inconsistencies—which in the course of the story is miraculously altered to a form more or less familiar to contemporaries. At the end of the miracle story, the rivers ran their proper course, the places had the right names, the crevices spewed their healing water—in other words, the actions of the Archangel completely transformed and purified the area (in the text's terms). The text, then, is not a failed document of unlikely aetiology but rather a reinforcement of the object of Michael's cult, which was to make the angel apprehensible and grounded in a specific place from which his bodiless might emanates. Michael assumes, therefore, a "power base" for his cult.¹³ river Lycus plunges into a cleft in the earth out of sight, till it appears again about five furlongs away and issues like the other river into the Maeander" (7.30; trans. A. D. Godley, 7 vols. [London, 1922] III:345). Pliny wrote in the Natural History, "At Colossae is a river, and bricks when cast into it are of stone when taken out" (31.20; trans. W. H. S. Jones, 10 vols. [London, 1963] VIII:395).

And Bonnet xxvi, says that this hagiography is not only a fable (of which this is an example "luculentissimum") but also an "αἰτιολογικόν." It is not just for admiration and exhortation, "sed ab uno aliquo homine excogitari, qui, cum ad miraculum aliquod mens conversa sit et causae cognoscendae studio capta, non rem ipsam qualem oculis adspexit et animo exornavit verbis splendidis exprimit, sed quod quaerendo et ratiocinando de rei cause effecisse sibi videtur quasi memoriae proditum et certum exploratumque credulis auditoribus proponit."

12. Evelyne Patlagean warned against those who use a literal approach, seen to some extent in Ramsay's approach to the hagiography, and who see hagiographies "as a mere stringing together, with some variations in their order, of a limited number of legendary themes, among which the authors, who were both stupid and truthful, had inserted certain facts which were the only elements worthy of attention." Using this method exclusively, she adds, "substitutes for the dynamic coherence of a living work a fictive chimera in which cock-and-bull stories and reliable observations are inexplicably interwoven." See E. Patlagean, "Ancient Byzantine Hagiography and Social History," in Saints and Their Cults. Studies in Religion, Sociology, Folklore, and History, ed. S. Wilson, trans. J. Hodgkin (Cambridge, 1983) 101 [= "Ancien hagiographie byzantine et histoire sociale," Annales 23(1968):106–26, and Structure sociale, famille, chrétienté à Byzance, IXe-XIe siècle (London, 1981) item V].

13. See Mango, Byzantium, 157.

Localizing the immaterial Archangel was a goal of cult practice, a strategy reflected in the texts of the miracle in several ways. For instance, the miracle takes place at Colossae or Chairitopa, but miracle stories inevitably describe the change of the name of the site. In the so-called Menologium of Basil II (late tenth/early eleventh century), a compilation of brief saints' lives according to the liturgical calendar, the tale begins in a deceptively colorless manner. The narrator says, "in a town called Chonae, once Colossae ..." and he then proceeds to explain how this name change took place.¹⁴ Michael appears to his hermit and creates a cleft in the rock into which the water flows, more miraculously than before. The final sentence is, "Thereafter the place was called Chonae." This text is a condensed version of the transformational capabilities of the Archangel, in this case for landscape. The two topographical markers, the setting stated at the outset which signals a change and the final sentence which signals the reason for the change, are parentheses within which Michael's safeguarding of shrine and hermit take place. These markers, furthermore, give the narrative a sense of coherence and, importantly for a healing shrine, continuity.

In the texts, furthermore, the sense of place is also determined at a more fundamental level than narrative. The semantic play on "chone" (funnel) and its verbal form "choneuo" plant Michael's action firmly in the landscape from the moment of his intervention and into the future.¹⁵ The anonymous redactor has Michael commanding the water into its course at the height of the drama, "Fling yourself into this funnel, and be funnelled into this chasm, and the splendour of this holy place will be throughout ..." (19.5–7). In the version of the miracle written by Symeon Metaphrastes, Michael, before striking the rock, says to the water, "Funnel yourself into the funnel" (27.24). In the Menologium text, Michael in the penultimate sentence "funnels the water," and in the last the narrator tells us that the place was henceforth called "funnels" or Chonae.

14. Menologium Basilianum, PG 117:33CD: "In a town called Chonae, once Colossae, there was a man by the name of Archippos, prudent and God fearing. He settled at the spring, which gushed forth on account of the guardianship of the Archistrategos, and because of the many miracles, and conversions and baptisms which occurred at the spring, Archippos provoked the jealousy of the Hellenes, who could not bear to see the wonderful miracles. Gnashing their teeth over the venerable agiasma and over Archippos they gathered a great many sympathisers, and damned two rivers, and mixing them together, unleashed them directly to overturn the church, agiasma and Archippos. As Archippos heard the roaring of the waters, he called on the Archistrategos to help. And straightaway he appeared and struck the rock with his staff which he held and he funneled the water into the opening. Thereafter the place was called Chonae."

15. See H.G. Liddell and R. Scott, A Greek-English Lexicon (Oxford, 1968) s.v. χονεύω, iv [= χονεύω].

This play is common, in some form, to all versions of the miracle. The pun binds Michael's act precisely to exact properties of the site, in a region known for its uncertain geology, with fissures and hidden sources, now controlled and marked by Michael, as well as signifying an exact quality of the site as a place made salutary and benign by the extraordinary act of the Archangel.¹⁶ The nature of the act appears to create the name of the site, that is, Michael creates funnels and the place is henceforth known as "funnels." However, the miracle story's pseudo-etymology of "funnels," in linguistic terms, is "retro-motivated."¹⁷ The process of "retro-motivation" implies a paradoxical inversion since the name, here Chonae, determines the character of the event. The place, given new significance in the text, in fact limits Michael's own movements. The paradoxical operation

16. For E. Gothein, "L'arcangelo Michele, santo popolare dei Longobardi," Rassegna Pugliese di scienze, lettere ed arte 13(1896):108–109, the chasm created in the hagiography is the reason for the entire cult. It was the work of a demigod, and the impression "che qui si tratti di un culto naturale, è prodotta anche da tutto il resto: dalla sacra fonte e dalla figura fiammeggiante dell'angelo. È un fatto caratteristico, che solo la trasformazione ecclesiastica posteriore delle leggende, la quale va sotto il nome di Metafrasto, gli faccia sedere e respingere l'onde furiose col segno della croce. ... Appunto la potenza personale dell'angelo e la trasformazione arbitraria della natura, per la qual cosa egli, più che qualunque santo umano, avvicinavasi alla natura divina, costituiva l'attrattiva per la fantasia popolare."

Similarly, F. W. Hasluck, Letters on Religion and Folklore (London, 1926) 85ff., stated that Michael's connection with Chonae was with the chasm and not the spring. He saw Michael's role as primarily a "devil-dompter" at the mouth of hell; as the opponent of the devil, Michael took care of healings and madness.

17. P. Guiraud, "Étymologie et ethymologia (Motivation et rétro-motivation)," Poétique 11(1972):408: "Mais dans tous les exemples ici en cause le nom reprend ses droits et c'est lui qui motive le statut sémiologique du signifié: la forme crée le fond, le mot engendre la chose, par un procédé que l'on pourrait appeler 'rétro-motivation.'" And also, N. Struever, "Fables of Power," Representations 4(1983):112: "In retro-motivation, names create situations, narratives generate structures, words engender things ... the newly endowed word is then used as a proof of phenomenal character or event..."

both situates him and deprives him of initiative at the heart of his own act. Moreover, the predetermined quality of Michael's act is typologically reinforced by a parallel overtly made to Moses's miracle at Horeb (Ex. 17:6). This retro-motivation and typology indicate the inherent difficulties of describing an indescribable being and the processes by which he made his presence known.

Michael's imprint on the material world, here the physical realignment of his shrine and renewal of the miraculous qualities of the inexhaustible spring, is the only possible relic for a bodiless angel. The relic of an angel can only be negative, as the common epithets of the angels, bodiless (ἄσώματος) or immaterial (ἄύλος), are only negative attributes. At Chonae, the relic is not additive since nothing is left behind; Michael alters the landscape and in that way leaves traces of his immaterial presence. In the face of the natural uncertainties surrounding the Archangel, this alteration is the only positive proof possible. Moreover, the text promotes a place where regular exchange with the incomprehensible Archangel is possible and where a balance of prayer and reward is effected.¹⁸ Cult binds Michael to the site as the retro-motivated act embeds him within the very topography.

This structure of transformation and imprint is common to miracle stories concerning the Archangel Michael and is often an attribute of Michael's successful sanctuaries. For this reason, an examination of other miracle shrines and their texts situates this structure further in the cult of the Archangel Michael. The shrine of the Archangel Michael on Monte Gargano in Apulia in southern Italy has long been recognized as a descendant of the cult of Michael at Chonae.¹⁹ The miracle story of Michael at Gargano dates in its pres-

18. J. Walter, "St Demetrius: The Myroblytos of Thessalonika," Eastern Churches Review 5(1973):158 [= C. Walter, Studies in Byzantine Iconography (London, 1977) item V], notes the difficulties in dislodging Demetrius from his shrine at Thessalonike, and ventures that, paradoxically, this may have arisen from the fact that Demetrius was not there. The cult relied on proofs deriving from the ex voto images set up in his church. In contrast, Michael's cult relied on different kinds of material proofs commensurate with his formless nature.

19. See Gothein, "L'arcangelo Michele, santo popolare dei Longobardi," 111ff.; W.v. Rintelen, Kultgeographische Studien in der Italia Byzantina. Untersuchungen über die Kulte des Erzengels Michael und der Madonna di Constantinopli in Süditalien (Meisenheim am Glan, 1968) 3ff.; idem, "Kult- und Legendenwanderung von Ost nach West in frühen Mittelalter," Saeculum 22(1971):98; G. Otranto, "Il 'Liber de apparitione,' il santuario di San Michele sul ent form to the eighth or ninth century,²⁰ and a Greek version was written in the late ninth or early tenth century, a time of the Byzantine re-conquest of the region.²¹

The Monte Gargano miracle story comprises three distinct, and rather disjointed, sections. At the beginning of the tale, a bull strayed from the herd of a wealthy local landowner, Garganus, on the slopes of the mountain. Garganus set out in search of the animal himself and eventually found the bull in a cave. The hot-headed squire, Garganus, became incensed at the animal and fired an arrow at it, but this arrow inexplicably returned “as if breathed upon by wind,” and struck the sender instead.²² Garganus returned to town and told his story to the locals, who were astounded by the incident. When canvassed, the bishop undertook a fast of three days and nights to discover the hidden cause. On the third night, a vision of the Archangel Michael visited the bishop, and it told the bishop that Michael had returned the arrow. At this Michael identified himself,²³ and said that the reason for his intervention was that he wished “to dwell in this place on earth and guard all.” Going to the mountainside the next day the bishop and townsfolk found that two doors were cut into the face of the mountain.

In the next episode, Michael appeared in another dream of the bishop and predicted the victory of the Sipontini, and their allies the Beneventi, over their enemies, the “heathen” Neapolitans. The next Gargano e i Longobardi del Ducato di Benevento,” in Santuari e politica nel mondo antico, ed. M. Sordi (Milan, 1983) 241ff.

20. G. Otranto, “Il ‘Liber de apparitione’ e il culto di San Michele sul Gargano nella documentazione liturgica altomedievale,” VetChr 18(1981):440ff.

21. This text was first reported by A. Petrucci, Una versione greco-bizantina dell'Apparitione Sancti Michaelis in Monte Gargano (Rome, 1955) and has been subsequently edited by Sandro Leanza. See also G. Otranto, “Per una metodologia della ricerca storico-agiografica: Il Santuario micalico del Gargano tra Bizantini e Longobardi,” VetChr 25(1988):400ff.

22. Leanza 301.38–39, AASS Sept. 8:61C, and MGH 541.28–31. Otranto, “Il ‘Liber de apparitione,’” 217ff., sees a trace of the defeat of paganism in this episode, a kind of battle between Garganus, a local god perhaps, and the new occupant, Michael. Although it is true that Garganus is not called vir in the texts, neither is paganism mentioned; in the text's terms, Michael's redirection of the arrow is a sign of presence and also nomination.

23. Leanza 315, on ll.48–49, where terms very close to Matt. 2:13 are used, and the Greek text simply substitutes “ἀρχάγγελος” for “ἄγγελος,” and “ἁγιοτάτῳ ἐπισκόπῳ” for “Ἰωσήφ.”

day strange things happened on the mountain, amongst them rumblings like thunder, lightning and darkness.²⁴ The “pagan” enemies were frightened off by these inexplicable signs and the Sipontini enjoyed an “angelic victory.”²⁵ Ascending to the site of the doors, the locals entered the cave and found traces there of the Archangel’s presence—“a small trace, as if the footstep of a man, struck there in the marble.”²⁶ By means of the signs of his tracings, this church was called the “place of the footprints.”²⁷

After the third visitation of the Archangel, the shrine was completed. The bishop, wondering about the proper way to consecrate this unparalleled chapel, had another vision, and the Archangel himself told the bishop not to consecrate the church because, “I myself have put it in order and consecrated it. You need only come and approach with your entreaties since I am attending as master in that place.”²⁸ Michael told him to come the next day and he would at that time show them how that place would guide them. The bishop visited the next day and found at the same spot a chapel ready made, carved out of the living rock “as if by the hands of the Archangel” (fig. 18). The chapel was clearly not produced by human hands, the narrator remarks, because the chapel was so irregular and rough, so full of corners and angles, that only an Archangel could have manufactured it.²⁹ They also found there a red cloak covering the altar—recollecting Elijah’s abandoned mantle (2 Kings 2:13)—and a spring erupted nearby which became a famous healing source.³⁰

The structural similarities, in the means by which the immaterial Archangel is grounded and made more really present, are striking in

24. Leanza 303.83ff. and 315–16; AASS Sept. 8:61D.

25. Leanza 302.81–303.2.

26. AASS Sept. 8:61E, MGH 542.23–24, and Leanza 303.98ff.

27. Leanza 303.105–304.107. In Greek, the allusion to the imprint of the feet is more obvious since Apodonia is clearly a loan word within the Latin text. See Leanza 313.

28. Leanza 305.139–42. Compare MGH 542.39–543.3.

29. Leanza 306.156ff.; AASS Sept. 8:62AB; MGH 543.4–14.

30. Leanza 307.182–83, which recalls Matthew 4:24 (“And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them”); AASS Sept. 8:62BC; MGH 543.19ff.

Figure 18. Sanctuary of the Archangel Michael at Mt. Gargano, Apulia, Italy.
Photo: Biblioteca Comunale, Città di Monte Sant'Angelo.

the cases of Chonae and Gargano.³¹ In the Gargano miracle story, the first appearance of the Archangel brings about a renaming of the mountain, for now, “ex eventu,”³² the mountain is named after the wealthy Garganus. As at Chonae, Michael works at this nominative level and also transforms the holy site in a manner that specifically signals archangelic agency. The gradual construction of the chapel and his own heavenly consecration confirm Michael’s voluntary presence. The impression of Michael’s “body” is, furthermore, a dynamic relic, reductive and yet stamped at the focus of cult, the altar, a sign of immanence contained.³³ Footprints are an ancient sign of pres-

31. Rintelen, Kultgeographische Studien, 15.

32. AASS Sept. 8:60B. The identity of the figure of Garganus has been the source of much speculation. Most authors see Garganus as a remnant of some uncertain pagan deity Michael supplants. See, for an overview, Otranto, “Il ‘Liber de apparitione,’” 213ff., and especially 220ff., on the interesting parallels of the episode with Barlaam and the ass (Numbers 22:22ff.).

33. Footprints are common signs of presence in Greco-Roman sanctuaries throughout the Mediterranean, either of the divinity or of the worshipper (ambivalence is built into ence, and at Gargano the assurance is essential for an incorporeal being who has chosen a place on earth for his “fleeting abode.”³⁴ Furthermore, the inscription over the door of the church at Gargano reinforces the notion of the spot hallowed by contact with Michael by recalling Exodus 3:5, where Moses is ordered to take off his shoes on account of the holy ground.³⁵

As at Chonae, a moral directive functions in the miracle story that describes the behavior proper to receiving revelation and epiphany of angels. God has sent Michael, the Greek miracle story of Gargano states, as guardian for those who were worthy.³⁶ Inevitably the text presents a moral program for devotees to follow in order to be considered deserving. When Garganus descended with his mysteriously inflicted wound, he naturally appealed to the bishop.³⁷ The bishop then fasted in order to learn the cause, since, as in the case of Archippus, the rules for this kind of appeal were well established in scripture and in other texts. After the bishop had completed the fast, the Archangel visited the bishop in a dream, and he said, “let it be known to you that it occurred because I willed it. For I am the Arch-these signs). On this, see K.M.D. Dunbabin, “‘Ipsa deae vestigiae ...’ Footprints Divine and Human on Graeco-Roman Monuments,” Journal of Roman Archaeology 3(1990): 85–109. Christianity absorbed this feature of pagan religions by the fourth century, at least, as the shrine on the Mount of Olives built for the footprints of Christ shows. See B. Köting, “Fußspuren als Zeichen göttlicher Anwesenheit,” Boreas 6(1983):200–201.

For angels the sign of footsteps has a different meaning. The footsteps describe a fleeting presence made imminent and concrete. For instance, at Santa Maria in Aracoeli, Rome, the marble footsteps of the angel who appeared to Gregory the Great are kept. See M.M. Guarducci, “Le impronte del ‘Quo vadis’ e monumenti affini, figurati ed epigrafici,” Rendiconti. Pontificia Accademia Romana di Archeologia 19(1942/4):315; and B. Pesci, “Il problema cronologico della Madonna di Aracoeli alla luce delle fonti,” RivAC 18(1941):53ff. In the case of the angels, footprints serve to give form to formless beings; they are simple, visible signs of past manifestation and constant presence.

34. Gothein, “L’arcangelo Michele,” 142; and see C. Angelillis, Il santuario del Gargano e il culto di S. Michele nel mondo, 2 vols. (Foggia, 1956) I:231.

35. Angelillis, Il santuario del Gargano, I:47.

36. Leanza 300.9–10. At 311, he also remarks on the same effacement of ancient heresy found in the Chonae hagiographies. In the Latin text Michael is moved in favor of the Sipontini because of his compassion for human frailty, while in the Greek text it is God who has compassion for human fragility and this in turn moves Michael on the behalf of the Sipontini. Leanza plausibly suggests the modification is due to theological preoccupations with making Michael’s intervention subservient to God’s will.

37. Leanza 301.39ff.

angel Michael, he who always stands in the presence of God.”³⁸ The bishop fasted a second time, “so as to be worthy of Michael’s aid and presence,”³⁹ and had a second vision. Michael’s appearances and construction henceforth miraculously transformed the site, and the access given to the bishop was opened, in lesser degrees, to all those far and wide who were worthy.⁴⁰

Important for devotional ends, however, was the emphasis on presence. The prologue to the Greek text specifies the “digging” and manufacture of the cave-church as an incontrovertible sign of the Archangel’s visitation and presence. The miracle story remarks on the very roughness and oddity of the construction as a mark of the benevolence and heartfelt solicitation of devotion. Michael’s presence infuses every corner and crevice of the chapel because of the superhuman technique of construction, as Michael’s extraordinary act of intervention at Chonae impressed his presence on the spring and chasm. Since Gargano was the radiating point for the cult of Michael for the West, other shrines in Italy and the rest of Europe consistently imitated the idiosyncratic invention and shape of the church.⁴¹ The foundation of the monastery at Mt. Tumba in Normandy self-consciously modeled itself after the Gargano sanctuary, down to the importation of monks and a piece of the altar stone as a relic from Gargano.⁴² In western Europe roughly designed churches

38. Leanza 301.47ff.

39. Leanza 302.66ff.

40. Leanza 307.188.

41. Gothein, “L’arcangelo Michele,” 141: “questa sua miracolosa abitazione terrena lo fece apparir sempre come una specie di divinità naturale”; and in time, Gothein says, the irregularity and the roughness of the shrine became “un simbolo prediletto dall’arcangelo.” He adds that the candles which burn during the day in the grotto are allowed to snuff out at dusk because it is then that the archangel is believed to enter his sanctuary. And see G. Otranto and C. Carletti, Il santuario di S. Michele arcangelo sul Gargano dalle origine al X secolo (Bari, 1990) 57–71, and O. Campagna, “La grotta di S. Michele alla Serra di Grisolia,” Bolletino della Badia Greca di Grottaferrata n.s. 40(1986):57–65, on the typology of Michael’s cave sanctuaries.

42. The similarities between Tumba and Gargano are striking and indeed entirely purposeful. Michael makes his will known through signs and visions and more importantly in his reshaping of the holy sanctuary. See AASS Sept. 8:75E, 77C, and Millénaire monastique du Mont-St.-Michel, 3 vols. (Paris, 1971).

placed on mountain tops became a symbol of the Archangel's presence.⁴³

These palpable signs are momentous within the cult of Michael since, as the narrator of the Greek miracle story states, "order is made through signs and heavenly power."⁴⁴ These signs are more apprehensible when made materially and dramatically. The first incident on Gargano was really a signal of Michael's intent; the returned arrow is noteworthy in the miracle story because of its ambiguity and fleeting quality. Further, the dreams of the bishop are transitory visions in the murky realms of the unconscious, and they are restricted to one person. The irrefutable physical impressions made by the Archangel inspired the collective imagination and other sanctuaries reproduced them. The miracle story presents these marks of voluntary presence as ways in which they bridle Michael so that material signs mediate his immaterial being and make him comprehensible.⁴⁵

Psellus's eleventh-century narrative praising the Archangel Michael provides an important contrast to the stories of the miracles at Chonae and Gargano and their cult certainties. The precise location of the shrine described by Psellus is not known, since he presented little topographical detail, but it may well have been in Galatia in Asia Minor, perhaps in the city of Sykeon.⁴⁶ In the prologue, Psellus extolled the Archangel's splendid qualities. Michael surpasses in mea-

43. See T. Baumeister, "Religionsgeschichtliche und kultgeographische Aspekte der westlichen Michaelsverehrung," in Memoriam sanctorum venerantes: miscellanea in onore di Monsignor Victor Saxer, Studi di antichità cristiana, vol. 48 (Vatican City, 1992) 11–19.

44. Leanza 300.5–7.

45. Michael's immanent protection was held to be magically ensured by means of images and names in some popular legends. See, for example, E. Amélineau, Contes et romans de l'Égypte chrétienne (Paris, 1888) 41, on the Coptic legend of Euphemia. In the legend, Satan says to Michael, "O Monseigneur l'archange, aie pitié de moi; j'ai eu l'audace de commettre la faute d'entrer dans une chambre où se trouvaient ton nom et ton image: je t'en supplie, ne me fais pas périr avant que le terme de mon existence soit arrivé.... Je vais te promettre devant Dieu de ne plus entrer dans un endroit où sera ton nom."

46. On the topography, see Fisher, "Nicomedia or Galatia?" 170ff.; Mango, "La croix dite le Cerulaire," 48; V. Ruggieri, Byzantine Religious Architecture (582–867): Its History and Structural Elements, Orientalia christiana analecta, vol. 237 (Rome, 1991) 242ff., on the village of Sykeon in Galatia, but especially 249; R. Volk, Der medizinische Inhalt der Schriften des Michael Psellos (Munich, 1990) 196ff.

sure and magnitude the nature and deeds of humanity. One must “announce the great things of the nature over us” and proclaim the miracles of the Archangel even more than those of the human saints.

Psellus then proceeded to narrate the events that led up to the foundation of the church of Michael. Heraclius (ca. 575–641) was in the course of returning to Constantinople after a triumphant campaign against the Persians in the Holy Land.⁴⁷ His victories were aided in no small part by a miraculous cross, which had powers against unseen hateful ones and all other battling powers. The emperor had decided to rest on this return journey in the vicinity of a church dedicated to the Theotokos, and he deposited the cross on the altar of that church for the duration of the stay. When it was time to recommence the journey, Heraclius sent some soldiers to collect the cross at the church. However, the cross refused to be moved and could not be dislodged from the altar no matter what effort was applied to it, “just as some rocky outcrop is unshaken by waves falling upon it.”⁴⁸ Almost immediately the soldiers were distracted by a second and more wondrous miracle when the cross kindled into strange flame.

The sparks of an unseen fire shone forth at first. Thereupon, the cross caught fire entirely. And the kindling increased a little, and with a little help it, having been brought altogether to a head, also spread through the whole building and around the church. And now [the fire] was thrown from the building and it seemed that the whole thing was about to be burned. . . . But the fire was consumed in the same way as the ancient bush. Whence it burned, it did not consume the church, but rather the church burning to ashes was beaming with light. And in the same way that it had been attacked invisibly, in this same way it was again extinguished with the flames quenched, and the church showed forth as before, only more pure than it had been. But at least I do not suppose that this was a somatic fire, though it had been seen and considered by many in this way, but the divine Archangel decided to appear out of immaterial-

47. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 233.50ff.

48. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 238.158ff.

ity possessing a being of fire, in the church of the Mother of God, since the intelligible lightning of burning heat was being made manifest to the onlookers as sensual burning heat.⁴⁹

When the emperor heard of this miracle, he was greatly moved and he commissioned churches for the Archangel and the Mother of God as well as providing monks for the foundation, thereby “making an angelic order on earth for the Archangel.”⁵⁰ And Psellus concluded by saying that the former flame still burns in the hearts of those practicing there and the Archangel oversees them still.

This is a remarkable miracle not least because of the inscrutability of the cause. Psellus did not declare Michael’s agency except by the nature of the miracle, which itself has congruity with Michael’s own nature. Michael’s fiery and spiritual constitution seems to have been the only possible means by which such a paradoxical miracle could have been accomplished. Psellus, moreover, could not state the reason for Michael’s intervention in a church of the Theotokos through an object which he himself said is inextricably linked to Christ. Psellus offered two possibilities: “Either he wanted to take up residence in this sacred church and to perform miracles there, or honouring the image of the Virgin, he desired to serve under the personal command of the queen there.”⁵¹ Psellus confessed he did not know for certain. He continued his miracle story with descriptions of some of the miracles that followed on this miraculous enunciation of intent by the Archangel. Michael brings about cures and miracles in a number of ways, either through the agency of the cross, or by a person’s simply being in the church or taking sacraments. By these means, Michael shows his “great power” and his “overshadowing presence.”⁵² The inscrutability of Michael’s presence is noteworthy when 49. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 238.179–239.192. The icon that is not consumed by fire also has a history. See O. Meinardus, “A Typological Analysis of the Traditions Pertaining to Miraculous Icons,” in Wegzeichen. Festgabe zum 60. Geburtstag von Prof. Dr. Hermangild M. Lieberman OSA, ed. E. C. Suttner and C. Patock (Würzburg, 1971) 220–21.

50. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 239.203ff.

51. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 239.198–201.

52. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 247.404–406.

compared to the direct, unmistakable traces left at Chonae and Gargano. And yet the cross contained and channeled Michael's presence through the cross there. This object is in some sense a conduit for Michael's activity "by which and in which the great Archistrategos works miracles."⁵³ Michael's immanence has thereby found some kind of cast.

These miracle stories all display the extraordinary means necessary for the foundation of cult shrines of the bodiless Archangel. These special strategies are even more evident when contrasted to miracle stories of the mortal saints. For example, in the ninth century, Nicephorus, a priest at the church of the Virgin in Blachernai at Constantinople, wrote an encomium in honor of Theodore of Sykeon (d.613) in which he described the procession of the body of Theodore from his home province of Galatia to Constantinople. A miracle which has striking similarities to Michael's initial miracle described by Psellus occurred in the course of that procession.⁵⁴ Theodore of Sykeon's bier halted of its own accord outside the walls of the capital and could not be moved. A second miracle followed this first as one of the team of animals drawing the cart spoke in order to make the saint's will known. Reminiscent of Balaam's ass (Numbers 22:22ff.), the animal said that the saint wished to reside in this place and work wonders there.⁵⁵ The immovable object followed by a more fantastic miracle constitutes a striking similarity between the miracles of Theodore of Sykeon and Michael.⁵⁶

53. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 244.319ff.

54. K. Kirch, "Nicephori Sceuphyllacis encomium in S. Theodorum Siceotam," AB 20(1901):269.22–32.

55. Similar foundation legends are noted by G. Dagron, "Constantinople. Les sanctuaires et l'organisation de la ville religieuse," Actes du XIe congrès international d'archéologie chrétienne. Lyons, Vienne, Grenoble, Genève et Aoste (21–28 Septembre 1986), 3 vols. (Vatican City, 1989) II:1072–73.

56. Fisher, "Nicomedia or Galatia?" 182. She sees several elements in common between the two hagiographies: first, a sudden and persistent immovability and, second, a greater miracle which serves to confirm the first. Moreover, Fisher posits the dependence of the hagiography of Psellus on that of Theodore of Sykeon on account of local competitiveness between the two local cults. She also sees significance, in both instances, of an offering of an explanation for the incidents, even though Psellus's interpretation is notably vague. Michael is connected to the phenomenon at the church because of its elemental force, the natural association of Michael with fire. Fisher also sees "imagery of flashing light associated with the Important, however, are the differences which do show the particular character of Michael's cult. In the narrative of Psellus, Michael works through the cross. By contrast, Theodore of Sykeon continued to operate after his death through his corporeal relics, thus making his presence known on earth thereafter. In fact, relics are key in the cult of most mortal saints and serve to distinguish them from the cult activity of the Archangel.⁵⁷ Moreover, as the sermon of Severus of Antioch (ca. 465–538) shows, the church often introduced relics of mortal saints into shrines of angels in order to make the cult of angels palatable to authorities.⁵⁸

With or without a relic, Michael's presence at the church Psellus described is simply inexplicable and unpredictable, but undeniably there. The ambiguity of Michael's appearance is also noteworthy in comparison to the unmistakable communication of Theodore of Sykeon's will concerning his earthly remains. Michael's will, on the other hand, asserts itself through a kind of immanence and an effect on the shrine that purifies through invisible contact with the Archangel. Michael has left traces on the site in that he has perceptibly altered the church, and the subsequent thaumaturgic character of the shrine proves this alteration.

holy one," although I do not see this figuring in the Theodore text in the same way. What seems more important, then, are the factors not shared, notably relics, an unambiguous revelation of will and the incomprehensible angelic manifestation. On the textual level, moreover, one can make an equally strong case for scriptural precedents as providing clearer paradigms for the Psellus hagiography.

57. M. Rouche, "Le combat des saintes anges et des démons: La victoire de Saint Michel," Santi e demoni nell'alto medioevo occidentale (secoli v–xi), Settimane vol. 36, 2 vols. (Spoleto, 1989) 1:534.

58. See chapter 2 for the sermon, but see also the Council of Carthage (ca. 400?) which ruled that churches and shrines of the saints themselves must not be founded without relics. The Fathers of this Council decided against the custom of establishing shrines by the faithful who invoke some apparition of saints or of the martyrs in dreams or revelations. See G.A. Ralles and M. Potles, Σύνταγμα τῶν θείων καὶ ἱερῶν κανόνων, 6 vols. (Athens, 1852–1859) III:508ff. On relics and angels, see P. Canivet, "Le Michaelion de Huarte (Ve s.) et le culte syrien des anges," B 50 (1980):110ff.; P. and M. T. Canivet, Huarte. Sanctuaire chrétien d'Apamène (IVe–VIe s.), 2 vols. (Paris, 1987) I:279ff.; Severus of Antioch (ca. 465–538), Les homiliae cathedrales, PO vol. 8/2, ed. M. Brière (Paris, 1919; rp. Turnhout, 1971) 84ff.; and P. Maraval, Lieux saints et pèlerinages d'Orient. Histoire et géographie des origines à la conquête arabe (Paris, 1985) 56. And see Vie de Théodore de Sykéon, ed. A.-J. Festugière, 2 vols. (Brussels, 1970) I:36 (40.10ff.), 57 (70.1ff.), 80 (100.1ff.), 82–83 (103.1ff.), 140 (161.51ff.), on the association of St. George and Michael in Galatia.

Another telling comparison can be made to the “life” and cult of Thecla.⁵⁹ The saint, according to her miracle story, appears in dreams and in other ways beyond her shrine at Seleucia in southeastern Asia Minor. The “life” states that the shrine is located on the site of her descent into the living rock. According to the “life,” God opened the rock in order to engulf her, saying,

“Do not fear ... behold how it has opened up before you, for there shall be your eternal dwelling place, and there you shall receive shelter.” And ... Thecla beheld the rock opening up, as much as made room for a person to enter ... and she entered the rock. And the rock closed straightaway. ...⁶⁰

The legend is clearly charged with explaining the lack of actual relics or known grave site. The rock simply split at the altar and all suffering and illness were dispelled at that spot. Gilbert Dagron saw this as an alternate tradition that arose locally in Seleucia, orally perhaps, in order to compensate for the absence of relics.⁶¹ For the locals, he proposed, Thecla continued to inhabit the place, eternally resting and alive, like Enoch. Indeed, Severus of Antioch wrote in his homily on Thecla that the saint’s body was entrusted to the earth whence her miracles and healings continue.⁶²

The relics of Cyrus and John, on the other hand, are witness to the authenticity of the cult, at Menuthis near Alexandria.⁶³ The relics had been found by Cyril of Alexandria (378–444),⁶⁴ though they were previously unknown, and brought to the sanctuary at Menuthis. The author of the “life,” Sophronius (ca. 560–638), would brook no doubt on the subject of the relics’ worth and veracity. In one of the miracles, a woman called Athanasia from Alexandria re-

59. L. Deubner, De incubatione capita quattuor (Leipzig, 1900) 98ff.

60. Deubner, De incubatione, 102.

61. Vie et miracles de sainte Thècle. Texte grec, traduction et commentaire, ed. G. Dagron (Brussels, 1978) 50ff.

62. Les homiliae cathedrales, 136–37.

63. Maraval, Lieux saints et pèlerinages d'Orient, 384ff.

64. Homilia xviii. Fragmenta de translatione reliquiarum martyrum Cyri et Joannis, PG 77:1100C ff.

fused the title of martyr to Cyrus and John because no documents existed to satisfy her concerning the saints' deeds and the provenance of their relics.⁶⁵ Sophronius observed that many martyrs do not have documentation for their relics and that devotees piously venerated them for their qualities as intercessors. He further claimed that Cyril of Alexandria's texts are documentation enough for the relics' authenticity. Even without this indisputable fact, he continued, the martyrs' bona fides is the number of miracles, which exceeds those of certain other martyrs. Athanasia was willfully deaf to any argument and was struck by paralysis as punishment; only with her repentance was the affliction lifted. With mortal saints, the traces of activity constituted a partial proof of their existence; and yet the infallible proof was their relics.

In contrast to the mortal saints, the bodiless Archangel, who has no earthly existence, is made known by imprints and transformations of the perceptible world; remnants of a physical, mundane past are not possible. The relative stability of the effects, and the wonders deriving from them, is a necessary counterbalance to the essentially incomprehensible nature of the cause, the Archangel Michael. The invisible movements and inscrutable purposes of the angels are sometimes manifest, however, and in a way recognizable and approachable even to humanity. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite described the invisible, intellectual life of the angels using the metaphor of the lion who walks towards the sun without leaving any trace.⁶⁶ In this manner, the angels themselves imitate divine discretion in dissimulating the traces of their intelligence. The angels are permitted a divine illumination in enveloping mysteriously and without arrogance this ascension towards the Thearchy. The intellectual nature of the angels' activities necessitates that unmistakable tracks be left behind to signal the protective presence of Michael, or any other angel, for cult. The abstract and recondite nature of the theology of Pseudo-Dionysius could not have satisfied any desire for devotional certainties. Just the same, these passages on the intellectual life of the angels describe the remoteness and incomprehensibility of the angelic host. This theological conception, then, is the counterpoint to the miracle stories' descriptions of Michael's effect on place. The continuing guardianship manifest in Michael's traces, and underlined in the miracle stories, maintain his immanence in the wake of his difficult epiphany.

65. Homilia xviii, XXIX, PG 87.3:3508A–13C.

66. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, La Hiérarchie Céleste, SC vol. 58, ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac (Paris, 1958) 185 nt.

The Archangel's own promise of intent in the accounts of the Chonae miracle underlines the importance of place in his cult. At the climax of the miracle story, with the water standing before them to the height of ten persons, Michael struck the impenetrable rock, which resounded throughout the land like thunder. Michael then made his vow (18.8–12): "In this very place will be crushed all suffering and every evil and illness and enchantment and poison and all workings of wickedness. Here all fetters will be loosened and the troubled and the feeble will be healed."

At Gargano also Michael made explicit the motive behind his appearances. He appeared to Garganus and to the bishop, and constructed the chapel, in order that he might make known his will to remain present with benevolent purpose at that site. The material traces of this difficult presence at a blessed place are the signs the cult depended upon and are the common structure of these texts and the cult the texts relate.

Pilgrimage is an extension of this basic impulse to find ongoing testimony of Michael's benevolent activity. The hope of finding deliverance is greater at places where presence is promised and proven.⁶⁷ Victor and Mary Turner have written, "All sites of pilgrimage have this in common: they are believed to be places where miracles once happened, still happen and may happen again."⁶⁸ The shrine at Chonae was the site of pilgrimage and famous festivals in honor of the saint, at least until the late twelfth century and possibly 67. V. Turner and M. Turner, Image and Pilgrimage in Christian Culture. Anthropological Perspectives (New York, 1978) 6.

68. Turner / Turner, Image and Pilgrimage, 6.

beyond.⁶⁹ Testimony establishes that pilgrims came to Chonae for the efficacious quality of a site where the presence of the bodiless Archangel was tangible, visible and constant.⁷⁰

The difficulties of perception and comprehension of the angels, particularly of the active and popular Michael, made certain strategies desirable in cult and its textual manifestations. The enigmatic nature of the Archangel found counterbalances in the positive proofs of cult, that is, material traces of the bodiless Archangel. On a textual level, the miracle stories underscore the importance of material traces by such devices as retro-motivation and re-nomination. Pilgrims sought the Archangel's favor, and healing and other assistances were expressions of his material interventions of a benevolent character: these were the cult certainties that the devotion to an immaterial being demanded. According to the stories of the miracle at Chonae, the landscape witnessed in a crucial sense Michael's presence and still contains the effects of that intervention. In a more radical, more thoroughgoing way, the landscape is a witness, since—as will be seen in the following section—autopsy is elusive and illusory.

69. Michael Choniates (ca. 1138–ca. 1222) described the gatherings for the shrine of Michael in this way: “The miracles in the church gave rise to a festival, a multitudinous festival, about it. It is multitudinous, indeed very multitudinous, for it draws, not to exaggerate, all the neighbouring towns, but also in addition the Lydians, Carians, Paphlagonians, and Lycians from beyond, and in addition barbarian Iconiotes, in order to buy and sell.” See Μιχαὴλ Ἀκομινάτου τοῦ Χωνιάτου τὰ Σωζόμενα, ed. S. P. Lampros, 2 vols. (Athens, 1879–1880) I:56; trans. S. Vryonis, Jr., “The Panegyris of the Byzantine Saint: A Study in the Nature of a Medieval Institution, Its Origins and Fate,” in The Byzantine Saint, ed. S. Hackel (London, 1981) 216.

70. On the pilgrimage to Chonae, see S. Vryonis, Jr., The Decline of Medieval Hellenism in Asia Minor and the Process of Islamization from the Eleventh through the Fifteenth Century, Berkeley, 1971, 20, 33 n165, and B. Kötting, Peregrinatio religiosa. Wallfahrten in der Antike und das Pilgerwesen in der alten Kirche (Münster, 1950; rp. Münster, 1980) 166ff., Belke/Mersich, Phrygien und Pisidien, 223, and Maraval, Lieux saints et pèlerinages d'Orient, 385.

Pilgrims also made their way to the shrine of Michael described by Psellus. He mentions a panegyros held for Michael there (Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 246.388), and a pilgrims' hostel (Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 246.368–72). And for Gargano, the long and well-documented history of pilgrimage is outlined by Angelillis, Il santuario del Gargano, II:163–250.

By their use of metaphor and scriptural model, miracle stories reveal the distance that separates human comprehension from full knowledge of the Archangel. The disparity between this desire for a greater apprehension and the ultimate failure to describe marks the verbal impasse in reports of the Archangel and his activities. Material images also share in this impasse. They normally show a winged youth, as in the Sinai icon of the Chonae miracle (fig. 15), but such a representation is simply an allusion to a transcendent nature rather than a literal rendering of an angel's appearance. Descriptions from miracle stories examined here do not provide stable models for representing the Archangel as they can for human saints. Like images, miracle stories provide a means for apprehension that not only compels contemplation but also denies resemblance and complete discernment of the archangelic subject.

Pre-existing structures derived from scripture and other texts determine to a large extent verbal descriptions in miracle stories of angels, including the Archangel Michael. These descriptions are recognizably "borrowed" and thus venerable because of their origins. They create familiarity and persuade the audience as to the miracle story's verity. At the same time, the unoriginal quality of the descriptions work to another purpose: descriptions of the Archangel obtained from scriptural passages reporting epiphanies indicate the impossibility of language truly rendering an Archangel or angel.

The encounter of holy man and angel at Chonae, as described in the miracle stories, is very much within the scriptural structure of divine epiphany. Furthermore, the encounter indicates the difficulties attendant upon confronting and perceiving an angelic being. Archippus had no sooner finished his Psalm than there arose a great peal of thunder outside the chapel and the Archistrategos appeared (14.16ff.). In the dialogue that ensues, Michael tries to calm the shaken monk. This structure of awful epiphany and conciliation—not to mention the preparations—has an obvious antecedent in the appearance of the "one like the similitude of the sons of men" to Daniel (Dan. 10:1ff.). Michael called out to the monk in a "great voice” to leave the shrine before he is plunged in the water. Archippus came out very cautiously and saw a vision “glancing like lightning,” and he fell to the ground “as if dead.”⁷¹

At this moment Archippus is given a full vision of the power of his protector, and of his faith: the Archangel is a pillar of fire from earth to heaven.⁷² Exodus described the Angel of the Lord who led the Israelites out of the desert identically, “through the pillar of fire and of the cloud” (Ex. 14:24).⁷³ Moreover, Michael’s fiery nature, established by scripture, Psalm 104:4 most notably, often manifests itself in texts on epiphanies. Fire is a textual veil referring to the difficult nature and aspect established by scripture.

The Archangel thereupon told Archippus to stand firm and witness the power of God. Michael commanded the still approaching rivers to stop, and the waters stood to the height of ten persons. And then, Sissinius says, Michael acted just as Moses at the Red Sea: “For as Moses once formed walls of the waters when he struck them with his staff, and led the people to the promised land out of Egypt, why not even (greater) by the word of the Taxiarch Michael, leader of the entire host of heaven?”⁷⁴ Michael is able to stop the waters with a 71. Sissinius, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 15, AASS Sept. 8:46EF, describes Michael further as a “flashing forth of angelic glory,” an implicit comparison to Moses at Exodus 34:29ff. For instance, Gregory of Nyssa (ca. 330–ca. 395), In Canticum Canticorum homiliae xv, XII, PG 44:1025C, says that Moses was like the sun, with “the light flashing forth from his face.”

Archippus’s reaction is not untypical of such a dreadful epiphany: see C. Rowland, The Open Heaven. A Study of Apocalyptic in Judaism and Early Christianity (New York, 1982) 367.

72. The same description is found in the Metaphrastic version (Bonnet 27.8–9). Sissinius, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 15, AASS Sept. 8:46E, signals the indescribable nature of the vision with ὥσεὶ στύλος πυρὸς ἀπὸ γῆς εἰς οὐρανὸν standing on the hard rock near the shrine. The “just as” (ὥσεὶ) is a significant marker of an approximate description.

A fiery nature is one of the aspects of the angels’ being naturally. See, for instance, Pseudo-Dionysius, De coelestii hierarchia, XV.2, La Hiérarchie Céleste, 166–71.

The importance of the fiery nature in theology is translated into hagiographical description as seen in the Chonae hagiographies. See also T. Preger, Scriptores originum Constantinopolitanarum, 2 vols. (Leipzig, 1901–1907; rp. New York, 1975) I:87.

73. See Theodore of Stoudios (759–826), In sanctos angelos, 3, PG 99:733CD, on this passage: the “divine angel transformed himself into a pillar of fire,” and “the beauty of the countenance took on the image of a cloud.”

74. Sissinius, Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 16, AASS Sept. 8:46F–7A.

word, Sissinius also says, while Moses had to use his staff. The first miracle of stopping the water, then, is comparable to Moses's, but the second is even greater. Michael struck the impenetrable rock which resounded like thunder and shook the entire land, leaving the inhabitants in the surrounding area panic-stricken. At the creation of the chasm Michael made his important promise, that his benign presence would overshadow that place (18.8–17).⁷⁵

The encounter clearly owes some of its structure of awful epiphany, incomprehensible vision, and comforting and revelations to the Book of Daniel, as well as to the Gospel according to Matthew (28:2ff., for example). The identification of the vision is equally fraught. Michael asks, "Do you know who I am, that you shudder at my sight?" To this Archippus can only deny knowledge. Michael thereupon states his identity in terms that evoke the meeting of Joshua and the angel before the battle of Jericho (Joshua 5:14).⁷⁶ Like Joshua, Archippus misapprehends the nature of the epiphany but he saves the situation by not falling on his face and worshipping the "captain of the host of the Lord" as Joshua did. The appearance of the angel to Joshua occurs on holy ground for he tells Joshua, "Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy" (5:15). This comparison is not explicit in the miracle story but the appearance of Michael at Chonae is also the marking of a permanently hallowed spot, as his promises indicate. In other words, the sanctification of the site, and the identification of the agent of that sanctification, is predetermined.

Michael's appearances at Chonae in the miracle story are multi-form. His first appearance is in a dream to the Laodicean pagan. The story described Michael as merely a "night vision" (4.2ff.) in the 75. Μηναία τῷ ὅλῳ ἐνιαυτοῦ, 6 vols. (Rome, 1888–1901) I:71 on Moses and Michael at Horeb (Ex. 17:6), and, 73, at the Red Sea. Michael is at the Burning Bush (Ex. 3:2), as described in the Analecta hymnica graeca, ed. A. Kominis (Rome, 1972) 232; the text also suggests a comparison between Moses who parted the sea with his staff (Ex. 14:16.21) and Michael's own similar deed (237). See Pantaleon, Narratio miraculorum maximi archangeli Michaelis, XIII, PG 140:580C–1A, on Michael's role in the engulfing of Pharaoh's army in the Red Sea (Ex. 14:1ff.).

76. Elliott, Roads to Paradise, 116ff., notes that in the Book of Tobias Raphael identifies himself in this way: Ego enim sum Raphael angelus (12:15).

anonymous version; in the Metaphrastian version, the pagan saw “a more Godly vision announcing better goodnesses” (22.13ff.). The Laodicean pagan is granted an incomplete glimpse of the Archangel, although his vision, according to Metaphrastes again, was a vision of some intellectual being standing beside him (22.22–23). “For he was not worthy of being a spectator of such things, how then can he see with the eyes of his soul, embracing as he did, an unbeliever, that gloom of the faithless” (22.18–20)? And the apparition told the pagan to go to the spring, and the result was the new chapel for Michael’s shrine (22.23ff.).

Later, in the destructive schemes of the local pagans, Michael makes his presence known in several different ways. The first plan of the pagans was direct assault, but this went wrong when they encountered at the source an inexplicable phenomenon: “Those who came saw flames of fire reflecting from the water in their own faces. And in this way the disbelievers were turned back, having been overpowered” (9.2–5). After this the pagans determined an indirect approach would accomplish their ends better and they diverted the Chryses; but Michael’s invisible intervention subverted that plot as well: the river divided in two and missed the shrine altogether. The pagans then decided to go one better; they dammed the Lykokaphros and the Kouphos until the rivers should have enough power to overwhelm the shrine, the hermit and the holy spring. At this point the most dramatic epiphany occurs:

In order therefore that the just be safeguarded, and the site of his holy spring, and church . . . and that God be extolled, he who makes great and inscrutable miracles, the Archangel Michael acting as servant was seen just as a pillar of fire reaching from the earth to the heavens and standing on the immovable rock by the shrine. . . .⁷⁷

77. Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 15, AASS Sept. 8:46E. According to Sissinius, Michael disappeared as incomprehensibly as he arrived, “The venerable one saw him as if a flame of fire streamed up into the heavens, filled with puzzlement and fear, he went back to sing psalms in the holy shrine, ‘God has sent his angel and liberated and saved me from the snares of the beasts, and he guarded his sacred shrine from the inundation of the waters’” (Acta apparitionis in Chonis, 18, AASS Sept. 8:47AB).

The miracle story describes, then, a progression of revelation, all of a difficult and incomprehensible nature. Michael's mutability is an inescapable aspect of his appearances, as well as the manner in which human comprehension and description come up short in the face of such epiphanies. The security of angelic epiphanies from Hebrew scripture offers a kind of textual anchor in these miracle stories for otherwise impossible descriptions.

The epiphany on the mountainside at Gargano, for instance, uses direct borrowings from scripture to describe Michael's terrible appearance. The day after he had appeared in a dream to the bishop predicting "angelic victory" of the Sipontini, Michael made his presence on the mountain known through rumblings, darkness and lightning, which borrow directly from Exodus 19:16: "And it came to pass on the third day, when it was morning, that there were thunders and lightnings, and a thick cloud upon the mount, and the voice of a trumpet exceeding loud; and all the people that were in the camp trembled." The Greek text is more overt than the Latin version about its scriptural models and also calls up images from Isaiah 60:2 ("For behold, darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the peoples; but upon thee the Lord will arise, and His glory shall be seen upon thee").⁷⁸ The fire that mysteriously announces the presence of Michael at the shrine of Psellus has appropriated the particulars of the textual description from the scene of Moses and the Burning Bush in Exodus (3:2ff.). Michael as the fire which does not consume the bush, as the pillar of fire that led the Israelites, as the lightning and darkness on Sinai, are all sanctioned allusions to incomprehensible epiphanies of divine power.⁷⁹

78. Leanza 303.83ff. and 315; AASS Sept. 8:61D.

79. One further example is the appearance of Michael to Gregory the Great (ca. 540–604) on top of Hadrian's Mausoleum, subsequently Castel San Angelo, in 590 (AASS Sept. 8:72BC). Michael appears and silently returns his sword to its sheath, thereby signaling the reconciliation between God and the people of Rome. This reconciliation is effected through the disclosure of the source of the affliction and of the cessation of its attack. Michael is the bearer of reconciliation, not particularly benign, and of the abeyance of heavenly wrath, which is very much in the tradition of an Old Testament appearance. Rome is likened implicitly to Jerusalem, and Gregory to David, as the appearance has an antecedent at 1 Chronicles 21:15–27: "And God sent an angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the Lord beheld, and he repented him of the evil, and said to the angel

The miracle stories did not efface Michael's character as an angel of nature or as an elemental force. The choice of texts from scripture emphasizes this aspect of the Archangel's nature while also pointing to the Archangel's essential indescribability. The miracle stories describe Michael's appearance at Chonae as fire, thunder and lightning. Miracle stories often express Michael's character by such naturalistic metaphors, and, as Olga Rojdestvensky wrote, Michael is typically described in such elemental terms as "flashes of lightning, explosions of thunder, babbling of springs, sound of water falls, mystery of abyss and of grottoes, eternal silence of summits."⁸⁰ The descriptions of Michael are in an essential way profoundly dissembling, and the revelation at Chonae and his personal intervention in the local geography were strategies by which Michael's expansive and elusive character gained delineation and real presence.⁸¹

The topos concerning the distance between humanity and the angels common to theological speculation is equally present in the descriptions in miracle stories of the acts of the angels in this world. Pantaleon, in his miracle story of the Archangel Michael, is explicit about the inability of words to convey, and human comprehension to embrace, the nature of the angels.

How therefore shall we undertake to praise you according to your excellence, by what means shall we aspire to your praises, O Leader of the Host of the almighty God? What incorporeal voice, accord-that destroyed, It is enough, stay now thine hand. . . . And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the angel of the Lord stand between the earth and the heaven, having a sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem. . . . And the Lord commanded the angel; and he put his sword again into the sheath thereof." Again, scripture provides the structure for these difficult epiphanies.

This connection of the appearance of Michael to Gregory and 1 Chronicles was noted by Hasluck, Letters on Religions and Folklore, 84–85.

80. O. Rojdestvensky, Le culte de saint Michel et le moyen âge latin (Paris, 1922) 54, and also 53: "La dramatique légende de saint Michel, pleine de jeux de lumière et d'ombre, devait ressusciter avec une puissance toute particulière là où les forces volcaniques et neptuniennes creusaient les précipices, faisaient jaillir les cascades, là où les vapeurs, fumées et flammes sulfuriques faisaient irruption." See also W. Lueken, Michael. Eine Darstellung und Vergleichung der jüdischen und der morganländisch-christlichen Tradition vom Erzengel Michael (Göttingen, 1898) 73–74.

81. Gothein, "L'arcangelo Michele," 108–109.

ing with the level of your incorporeal intelligence, shall we offer by means of our material and corporeal lips? What sounds shall we use to signify the ineffability and inexplicability of your glory? It is doubtful in truth that the collective nature of all earth born creation could laud and praise you, you who are the Leader of the Heavenly Host. For the matter of your divine beauty and splendor cannot be narrated and told by words. For in this way marvelous knowledge of God was made by us. . . . It is not possible by human comprehension for him to be apprehended and discovered.⁸²

If real description is therefore impossible, then recognition and identification of angelic epiphany is equally laden with risk of failure. As noted above, Archippus was completely at a loss until Michael revealed his identity in terms comprehensible to a man—and to the listener—thanks to the scriptural meaning behind this particular identification. At Gargano, Michael was identified subsequently by dream revelation and more securely by the material effects. Pantaleon also relates a miracle at the church of Michael at Eusebios, Constantinople, concerning a certain candle-maker Marcianus. All the doors of the church were suddenly flung open and towards him came “a fearful man as out of the heaven, with a rush descending on horseback on a white and terrible steed.”⁸³ Michael is dressed in the robe of a praepositus, or court official.⁸⁴ Marcianus knew only the terrifying aspect of his ecstatic vision until Michael declared his proprietorship of the shrine. Although Michael led Marcianus to the candle before his own icon, the icon plays no role in determining the identity of the vision but only the place and means of real healing.

82. Narr. mir. max. arch. Mich., I, PG 140:573B–4B.

83. The parallel with the appearance of the angels to drive Apollonius out of the temple in the Third Book of Maccabees is striking: “there appeared from heaven angels, with flashing armour, who filled them with dread and terror. Then did Apollonius fall half dead in the court of the Gentiles and he stretched his hands to heaven. . . .” See The Third and Fourth Book of Maccabees, trans. M. Hadas (New York, 1953; rp. New York, 1976) 164 (4:9–14).

84. F. Halkin, Inédits byzantins d'Ochrida, Candie et Moscou (Brussels, 1963) 149–50; the other comes from the Life of Andrew the Fool (seventh century?), 233–36, PG 111:877A–80C. Other examples are found in Ch. Angelidi, “La version longue de la Vision du moine Cosmas,” AB 101(1983):86.188–187.196; Preger, Scriptores originum Constantinopolitanarum, I:86.8ff.; and Achmet ibn Sirin (late eighth/early ninth century), Oneirocriticon, ed. F. Drexel (Leipzig, 1925) 5–6 (#10).

Visual identification of an Archangel is not possible since miracle stories and theology both agree that he has no form fully comprehensible to humans. Consequently, any stable resemblance in images of such a being remains out of reach. Cyril Mango has written that the angels are represented as they are, that is, as beardless, winged young men, because that is how they generally appear. "Whenever angels and archangels make themselves manifest in the Lives of saints and other edifying texts they do so in the guise of eunuchs or imperial cubicularii, not that of emperors."⁸⁵ Instances of the angels appearing as eunuchs are not uncommon.⁸⁶ Yet the texts are not homogeneous in this regard, as the miracle stories of the Archangel Michael discussed above show.⁸⁷ Moreover, the relation between description in miracle stories and the images of angels is not straightforward. Making images of angels is not a matter of transcription of visual information (or even textual description), since visions of these beings are clearly difficult to process, comprehend and render.

85. C. Mango, "St. Michael and Attis," DChAE 12(1984):44.

86. The post-Iconoclastic assimilation of court officials, particularly eunuchs, and angels, and the incongruities of that assimilation, have been examined recently by E. V. Maltese, "Gli angeli in terra: sull'immaginario dell'angelo bizantino," Materiali e discussioni per l'analisi dei testi classici 24(1990):111–32 [= Dimensione bizantine. Donne, angeli e demoni nel medioevo greco (Turin, 1995) 69–92].

87. Finally, one need only browse through the many texts concerning Michael and the other angels collected by Amélineau, Contes et romans de l'Égypte chrétienne, to realize the endless variations possible. For instance, Michael appears to Donatius, in "Comment se convertit la ville d'Athènes," as "un homme lumineux sous l'apparence d'un général d'armée, tenant un sceptre d'or à la main" (ibid., 2). And in the "Vision de Saint Jean l'Évangile racontée par le patriarche Timothée," Michael "descendit du ciel monté sur sa barque de chérubims, escorté de tous les anges, des saints, des plus grands parmi les prophètes et les martyrs: ils étaient tous enveloppés d'une gloire indescriptable" (ibid., 13–14). And the Archangel Gabriel in the "Histoire d'Aour" appeared to the young Aour in another fashion: "Depuis le jour de ma naissance, le vingt-deuxième jour de chaque mois, il vient à moi vers le matin un oiseau dont le face brille comme le soleil; il est ceint d'une ceinture dorée, coiffée d'une couronne d'émerande et tient à sa maison une baguette d'or rouge. Son corps semble du feu, ses pieds du cuivre brillant, sa figure est celle d'un homme, ses traits étincellent et le son de sa voix est comme le bruit des flots de la mer quand elle est agitée. Toutes les fois que je l'ai vu . . . je suis tombé à ses pieds rempli d'effroi et il m'a relevé en disant: Ne crains pas! je suis l'archange Gabriel que me tiens devant le trône de Dieu . . ." (ibid., 112–13).

Identification of an angel by means of the description on an image is theoretically possible, however, if not in any way definitive. In the text praising Michael written by Psellus, a monk named Ephraim was able to recognize Michael because the Archangel had chosen the form manifested on his image for this epiphany in the monastery's church.⁸⁸ And the miracle story of Artemius, written in the 660s about his shrine in the church of John the Baptist in Oxeia at Constantinople, describes an identification of an angel.⁸⁹ One of the stories in the miracle story describes the night vision of a young girl, Euphemia.⁹⁰ In her vision angels led her to the lead coffin of the eponymous saint of the shrine, Artemius, and made her lie down in it. The coffin was then locked by the saint, trapping her inside. When she awoke, recovered from her illness, she gave an account of her vision. Her mother asked her if she had seen the angels, and Euphemia replied that she had. Her mother then asked her in what form had they appeared.⁹¹ The girl answered by indicating the images of the angels found in that church.⁹²

The mother's question is telling. In asking what form the angels appeared, she was acknowledging the possibility of other guises. And in voluntarily making themselves commensurate with their appearance on images in the church, the angels revealed their ability to condescend in form for human comprehension. In other words, angels manifest their terrible elemental force in famous instances of awesome intervention but for this girl the angels took a benign aspect in keeping with her youth and fitness.

The topos of recognition of a holy person by means of his or her image, therefore, has relevance for discussion of miracle story de-

88. Fisher, Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, 253, 565–69. On this episode, see A. Cutler and R. Browning, "In the Margins of Byzantium? Some Icons in Michael Psellos," BMGS 16(1992):24–25.

89. C. Mango, "On the History of the Templon and the Martyrion of St. Artemios at Constantinople," Zograf 10(1979):40ff.

90. V. S. Crisafulli and J. W. Nesbitt, The Miracles of St. Artemios. A Collection of Miracle Stories by an Anonymous Author of Seventh-Century Byzantium (Leiden, New York and Köln, 1997) 176–84, and Mango, "On the History of the Templon," 43.

91. Crisafulli/Nesbitt, The Miracles of St. Artemios, 180.23.

92. Crisafulli/Nesbitt, The Miracles of St. Artemios, 180.23–24.

scriptions of angels. For Gilbert Dagron, images play a central role in the identification of saints in miracle stories, to the point of fundamentally determining the manner in which Byzantines visually perceived their saints.⁹³ For example, Cosmas and Damian approach the bed of a supplicant “in the form in which they are outlined.”⁹⁴ A letter of Nilus of Ankara (d. ca. 430) describes an episode of St. Platon’s life in which he freed a monk’s son from prison. Platon was recognized by the son through the saint’s image.⁹⁵ A similar episode exists in the tenth-century Vita of Irene of Chrysobalanton: “... while the holy woman stood interceding with her hands lifted up, she saw Basil the Great standing before her, looking such as the icons represent him.”⁹⁶

The second way miracle stories can state resemblance are instances where the saint appears to provide a perfect model for a painter, effectively taking the brush out of the painter’s hand. For instance, the “life” of Cornelius the Centurion emphasized the fidelity of the saint’s image, which was venerated at Skepis in the Hellespont. The exactitude of the copy, after the archetype, was particularly commended. The painter Egratius was hired by the bishop to make a copy of this image in order to send it from Skepis to Caesarea in

93. G. Dagron, “Holy Images and Likeness,” DOP 45(1991):30ff.; and idem, “Rêver de Dieu et parler de soi. Le rêve et son interprétation d’après les sources byzantines,” in I sogni nel medioevo, ed. T. Gregory (Rome, 1985) 42ff.

94. L. Deubner, Kosmas und Damian. Texte und Einleitung (Leipzig, 1907) 133.23–24.

95. See Mansi XIII:32C–3C.

96. The Life of St Irene Abbess of Chrysobalanton. A Critical Edition with Introduction, Translation, Notes and Indices, ed. J. O. Rosenqvist (Uppsala, 1986) 56.9–13: “... τοιοῦτον οἶον αἱ εἰκόνες γράφουσιν.”

Other examples are found in the seventh-century Vita of Theodore of Sykeon, written by his disciple George; see Vie de Théodore de Sykéôn, I:34 (39.5–6): “The two saints were seen by him according to the likeness therefore of that which is seen in divine worship.” Festugière translates this as “sous l’aspect qu’ils avaient en cette image de culte.” The monk is said to be praying beneath the icon of Cosmas and Damian. And also at I:29 (32.9–13), Theodore’s mother has a vision of George according to the depicted story of the martyr George. George is described as a golden youth with curly hair and shining aspect.

And from the tenth-century “Vision of Cosmas the Monk”: “And suddenly, as if sent by someone, two men appeared with white robes and very venerable, and I recognised them to be the apostles Andrew and John, as I was put in mind (ἀναλογιζόμενος) of their appearances on the holy icons.” See Angelidi, “La version longue de la Vision du moine Cosmas,” 4.125–28.

Palestine. Egratius was then afflicted and healed by the saint, and with thanks he made an image “just he had seen him.” The portrait was then sent to Palestine and valued, the narrator says, because of the exactitude of its copying.⁹⁷ From examples such as these, Dagron concludes that the relationship between images and their models is reversed and “that [images] are no longer attached to the past but to the future.”⁹⁸ And further, “It is no longer the image that resembles the saint, but the saint who resembles his image.”⁹⁹

The number of examples in which the image determines the nature of the vision is, however, quite limited. The majority of examples of appearances of saints, by far, is in forms of disguise, if the miracle story provides a description at all. Artemius appears as a butcher, sailor, patrician, and in other guises.¹⁰⁰ Cosmas and Damian appear in many different guises (in the form of clerics, for example), alone or with a third person; they do their work either by “invisible hands” or “their own hands.”¹⁰¹ This last denotes the really important aspect: their activity and traces of their activity radiate from the center of their cult, that is, their bodies and relics. Nevertheless, the most significant admission concerning the nature of the saints’ appearances is that they appear “in a form not their own,”¹⁰² as the miracle story states. The miracle story of Cyrus and John furnishes another important example. It describes the two saints as appearing fulgent, in white robes, in a monk’s habit, as doctors, as the deacon Julian and in various other guises, but also, significantly, in

97. F. Halkin, “Un abrégé inédit de la vie ancienne et disparue de Corneille le Centurion,” RSBN n.s. 1(1964):37 (#6). And other examples are found in the Vita S. Mariae Iunoris (before 866?–ca. 902/3), AASS Nov. 4:699BC, and the life of Athanasius the Athonite (925/30–ca. 1001), Vitae duae antiquae Sancti Athanasii Athonitae, Corpus Christianorum, Series Graeca, vol. 9, ed. J. Noret (Turnhout, 1982) 122 (#254).

98. Dagron, “Holy Images and Likeness,” 31.

99. Dagron, “Holy Images and Likeness,” 31, and also: “more than ever it is [the saints’] cult image that serves as a reference.”

100. Crisafulli/Nesbitt. The Miracles of St. Artemios, 88.15–16, 96.22, 104.12–13, 144.21, 194.15–16.

101. See Deubner, De incubatione, 68ff.

102. Deubner, Kosmas und Damian, 99.21 (my emphasis). And other examples of guises: 135.25, “appearing in the form of a περιχύτος,” and 145.43–44, “the two appeared to him in the forms of clerics.”

their own form.¹⁰³ Again, the saints must acknowledge an earthly existence, even after death, that determines the essential nature of their being, even if this does not altogether regulate their subsequent manifestations. Angels have no such mooring. They are changeable by nature and essentially unknowable—all their outward forms are not their own.

This chapter has sought to indicate the means by which miracle stories, and cult as well, made the Archangel Michael more apprehensible and proximate. For a being that is bodiless, immaterial and elemental, the signs of appearance and presence made apparent in the texts are tangible and incontrovertible. Moreover, because of Michael's uncontainable nature, they are impressions; Michael does not relinquish anything of his "body," only indications of attendance. These signs that are both tangible and provisional give the texts and cult their special tension in that they simultaneously assert that he is really present but also powerfully immanent. By means of retro-motivation, indeed, Michael's acts, and even his will, are superseded by the texts' logic. The place name engenders its own sequence of activities and the text works backwards from "the place was thereafter known as Chonae" to create Michael's seminal act preset by language itself.

This desire for more apprehensibility is the complement of the other textual device examined in this chapter, that is, how miracle stories "got round" the difficulties of expressing the inexpressible nature of Michael. The seamless application of scriptural description to this task of expression is the clearest sign of descriptive impasse. On an overt level, the scriptural passages indicate enigmatic theophanies and venerable acts that parallel and prefigure Michael's own appearances and acts. Michael is like Moses in the miraculous manipulation of water for the protection of God's chosen people. Michael's manifestations recall the phenomena revealed to the prophets during sacred disclosures in the past. And the scriptural structures of receiving epiphany found in Daniel, Joshua and Matthew provide a mold within which witness under the New Covenant can be cast. In this sense, the narrators of these miracle stories of Michael provided scriptural models of revelation that were recognizable and accessible descriptions of the Archangel's famous moments on earth.

103. Deubner, De incubatione, 80ff.

On the level of latent meaning, the arrogation of description signals at important points the lack of ability, or even intent, of speech and text to render in an original or descriptive fashion a being like the Archangel Michael. On this level, recognition of the original site of the text, in Exodus or Matthew for instance, is not essential for the audience. The descriptions of Michael as fire and earthquake and lightning do not rely for their full meaning on the audience's identifying the original context of the description. They signal the difficulty of comprehension, just the same, in their evocation of grand, irrational phenomena: the formless Archangel assumes all of these elements as his cloak but none are his own, none make him fully known.

Material images are likewise allusive to difficult nature, and this allusive quality makes angels' images incapable of possessing real likeness. Beings as transcendental as angels possess no definitive likeness inherently, and images partake equally of this indefinable resemblance. Recalling the theology of Pseudo-Dionysius, images are dissembling signs which the viewer engages in intellectually and without adherence. Describing an approach to images of angels, Agathias's epigram reveals an ability to interpret material images as the symbolic means to knowledge of an incomprehensible creature.¹⁰⁴ In this description of the image of the Archangel, the difficulty of comprehension derives from the incorporeal nature which would seem to be incompatible with material representation; but in Agathias's conception, the image also provides the viewer with the means to approach knowledge of the distant and immaterial Archangel by way of contemplation of the colors and outlines on the surface of the image. The material image is, therefore, the bridge between mundane reality and spiritual truths otherwise unattainable.

Michael's bodiless, relic-less existence provides such signs for human comprehension; less ambiguous material effects such as 104. Discussed in chapters 2 and 3.

Michael's transformations of landscape, imprints of invisibility, are essential proofs for a degree of knowledge of his activity and nature. Miracle stories and images work subtly. Texts exploit recognizable patterns from scripture to give the descriptions of events and appearances structure but at the same time deny any essential descriptiveness in their evocation of elemental and multiform wonders. In a comparable way, images depend on their non-resembling qualities to attract and lead the viewer to recognition of a higher, invisible reality. Michael transcends the ability of words and images to describe such a reality but it is this inability that attracts and compels contemplation.

CONCLUSION

This study has been concerned with representation in the widest sense. Examinations of material images notwithstanding, it has primarily explored conceptual problems involved in representing angels that arise from the unquantifiable nature of the bodiless host. “Subtle bodies” was a favored theological formulation for the nature of angels. The formulation was ascribed to Macarius the Great,¹ but it was the primary definition used by John of Thessalonike (d. 649?) in his defense of the worship of angels’ images ostensibly before a pagan opponent.² Moreover, the fathers of the Second Council of Nicaea in 787 included the “dialogue” between John of Thessalonike and the pagan in the conciliar acts, and so the definition—slippery, imprecise, but apt—became the basic definition of the nature of God’s messengers. Complementary to its examination of the representational problems of angels, this study has also examined the “image” of the holy man who sought the intercession of the Archangel

1. See the Introduction.

2. Mansi, XIII:164–65; H. Thümmel, Die Frühgeschichte der ostkirchlichen Bilderlehre. Texte und Untersuchungen zur Zeit vor dem Bilderstreit, Texte und Untersuchungen, vol. 139 (Berlin, 1992) 327–28. And see G. Peers, “Imagination and Angelic Epiphany,” BMGS 21(1997):113–31, on this text.

Michael and witnessed the awful result of that prayer. Clearly, worship of angels, their “persons” and their images both, was a divisive issue in the Byzantine world, and the story of the miracle at Chonae was an attempt to establish a basis for a more seemly and more orthodox worship.

Evidently, then, angels raised issues that writers of theology and miracle stories tried to resolve. Many of the difficulties arose from the pagan antecedents to angel worship and, indeed, their iconography in Christian art. The “dialogue” of John of Thessalonike reveals just this difficulty as late as the seventh century, and its resolution by this earlier theologian still had relevance for the Council at Nicaea in the following century. The pagan, with whom John was in theory debating, had no difficulty in seeing the parallels between pagan worship of gods and Christian worship of angels. In a most polite manner, he observed that Christians paint the angels as human and worship them through these paintings, despite the belief that these beings were not human but incorporeal and spiritual. Surely, he reasoned, like Porphyry long before, this practice is no different than the pagan worship of their gods. John, of course, sidestepped the parallel drawn and offered a complete rebuttal to this possible rapprochement. He based his position primarily on the truth of the Christian pantheon versus the falseness of the pagan gods, but the fact that such a rebuttal was necessary as late as the seventh century shows that perceived parallels between angels and pagan beings were still possible.

The miracle story of Michael’s appearances at Chonae is further proof of an ongoing problem that the church thought necessary to combat. The story itself reveals that in the eighth century the issue of proper approach to angels was still alive. The caretaker Archippus is a prescriptive “image” of the appropriate manner of praying to the Archangel, and his answered prayer is the clearest indication of its appropriateness. The Archangel nonetheless revealed his origins as an angel of uncontrollable natural forces—earthquake, lightning, thunder and water—and, although the story sublimates these forces in scriptural allusions, Michael still had some of the overweening characteristics that made an orthodox presentation of angelology necessary in the miracle story. The miracle story could not altogether efface Michael the Nile god of the Coptic text examined in the Introduction.

This study has also sought to demonstrate that representing angels—in miracle stories and material images—was part of a desire to make these bodiless beings more comprehensible and proximate. As theological discussion of angels had antecedents in pagan vocabulary and concepts, and contended with these antecedents, so self-conscious continuity from the Classical past was a characteristic of descriptions of angels in the visual arts. Sculptors, painters and mosaicists clearly were aware of models available in pagan art that could aid them in their search for an iconography capable of describing, albeit partially, the special immaterial, formless nature of angels. As seen on the Sarigüzel sarcophagus (fig. 3), they borrowed iconographic elements from pagan art, most notably wings, to this end, but maintained at the same time the angels' peculiarity as Christian beings.

Most Christian viewers evidently found this iconography sufficiently expressive of angelic nature and activity. On the evidence of sixth-century epigrams, painted panels with single figures of angels or Archangels became more common in devotion in this period. As a way of communicating the nature and activities of this invisible host, many Christians perceived these icons as "guarantors of knowledge,"³ even if images of angels ultimately frustrated full comprehension of the models.

In the period preceding Iconoclasm, sources dealing with images of angels reveal an increasing desire to regulate and define the place of images in Christian worship.⁴ For some Christians, the break with the Classical past in the visual arts was not clear enough, and the iconography of angels, though consciously distanced from its antecedents, was sullied by any association with pagan art. From the fourth to the seventh century, the writings of Macarius Magnes, Severus of Antioch and John of Thessalonike reveal a defensiveness on the part of Christians concerning the iconography of these bodi-

3. Cameron, "The Language of Images," 2.

4. See Cameron, "The Language of Images," 30.

less beings. The writings of opponents to angels' images also show dissent over the route to knowledge that images provide. For these opponents, material signs were clearly inadequate to describe the transcendental nature of angels.

Yet the increasing importance that images came to have in the period preceding Iconoclasm attests to a wide acceptance of material images as a means to understand divine things. The divergence shown in these two positions stands for a fundamental divide in Byzantine society over appropriate commemoration and worship. This study has attempted to describe the long-standing debate over the conceptual problems of representing angels, both visually and verbally. In the course of the sixth and seventh centuries, as Christian images became more common in devotion, these debates became more acute. This study has traced the "realignment" in Byzantine society that Averil Cameron describes but with specific regard to angels in texts of this period, taking passages from theological writings on images, question and answer guides and anti-Jewish tracts.⁵ All of these writings showed an increased concern over the meaning and nature of angelic signs, appropriate commemoration and material worship. This struggle over worship and images only became more acute in the eighth and ninth centuries, when this crisis came to a head with the declaration of Iconoclasm in the 720s, and the sources from the period of Iconoclasm attest to the role angels and their images played in this conflict.

The end of Iconoclasm in 843 effectively resolved the debate over the role of images of angels that had been decided in favor of a careful and abundant synthesis of material signs in spiritual worship. Just the same, images of angels always partake of a measure of ambiguity despite their full acceptance into Byzantine worship. Cameron writes, "Religious images ... fell naturally into place as one of the signs by which the impossibility of understanding God through language could be circumvented."⁶ This statement implies, however, that the debates over images that lasted from the sixth to the ninth century were resolved in favor of images that were explicit and literal in their description of spiritual reality.⁷ Rather, the tension between manifest form and incomprehensible nature, evident in the texts—epigrams, theology and miracle stories—is a defining characteristic of images of angels throughout the Byzantine period. This tension continued to determine the production and perception of images of angels long after the end of Iconoclasm. This Conclusion also aims, then, to examine briefly the tension between presence and transcendence, description and incomprehensibility, in images and texts of the middle and late Byzantine periods.

5. See Cameron, "The Language of Images," 3–4.

6. Cameron, "The Language of Images," 30; and see L. Brubaker, "Byzantine Art in the Ninth Century: Theory, Practice, and Culture," BMGS 13(1989):75ff.

A Palaiologan icon of the Archangel Michael in the Byzantine Museum, Athens, is a particularly fine example of the pull between materiality and incorporeality that images of angels can communicate (fig. 19).⁸ This icon, in fact, manifests an especially subtle manipulation of style and iconography. Michael's spiritual qualities were made immediately clear to the Byzantine viewer since the Archangel is winged. Michael gracefully holds a staff and an orb in his hands, and a delicate fillet, tied at the back, is visible in his shoulder-length hair. The face of the Archangel is handled with great refinement. Indeed, the qualities of his face and expression, the full mouth, finely modeled cheeks and chin and detailed shaping of luxuriant hair, show a desire on the part of the painter to manifest a degree of sensuality in this image. Yet the painter at the same time denies the apparently terrestrial presence of the Archangel, in particular through his treatment of the eyes which are large and focused directly on the beholder. The Archangel's piercing eyes create a distance from the realm of the viewer that the sensual handling of the Archangel para-

7. This position is taken also by H. L. Kessler, "Real Absence: Early Medieval Art and the Metamorphosis of Vision," in Morfologie sociali e culturali in Europa fra tarda antichità e alto medioevo, Settimane vol. 45 (Spoleto, 1998) II:1157–70. But as C. von Schönborn, L'icône du Christ. Fondements théologiques élaborées entre le Ier et le IIer Concile de Nicée (325–787) (Fribourg, 1976) 217ff., has demonstrated, the characteristic of an image of Christ is opacity and particularity.

8. See M. Soteriou, "Παλαιολογεῖος εἰκὼν τοῦ Ἀρχαγγελοῦ Μιχαήλ," DChAE 1(1959): 80ff., M. Alpatov, "Sur l'iconographie des anges dans l'art de Byzance et de l'ancienne Russie," Zograf 11(1980):6, and Conversation with God. Icons from the Byzantine Museum of Athens (9th–15th Centuries). The Hellenistic Centre, London, 22 May–20 June 1998 (Athens, 1998) 65–69.

Figure 19. Icon of the Archangel Michael, Byzantine Museum, Athens, Palaiologan. Photo: Byzantine Museum, Athens.

doxically encourages. But the eyes also impart a sense of presence since the archangel is not gazing frontally out of the icon. In order to accommodate the equipment he presents, he has his right shoulder pushed closer to the picture plane than the left, and consequently his head turns slightly back to the left. This turning, found in some early icons also (fig. 1), gives the impression of animation, of the body and eyes swiveling in order to take the viewer into account. So the eyes have the ability to create distance and presence at the same time, both through the penetrating scrutiny and the illusion of alertness which the sidelong stare implies. On this icon, style and iconography form a conjunction of corporeality and transcendence that encourages approach but thwarts familiarity: ultimately, the icon describes a nature contingent upon our material world, a nature that is only partially described and describable.⁹

While a formal analysis of this particularly fine example shows that painters could communicate the conditional quality of human comprehension of angelic nature, epigrams and ekphraseis from the Middle and Late Byzantine periods demonstrate that this quality was fully appreciated by the Byzantine viewer. The contingency of angelic nature, which images can state so subtly and compellingly, evoked articulate responses in writers on images and these responses show a striking continuity in writings about images of angels from the sixth century on. The persistence of these responses could be interpreted as normative, that is, as literary topoi that reappear periodically in Byzantine culture without demonstrable connection to real images.¹⁰ Yet formal analyses of images of angels show that painters did sometimes employ elements of style and iconography to attempt description of the problems of angelic nature. Texts about images of angels demonstrate that Byzantine viewers were fully engaged with these artistic attempts. The allusive, contingent quality of such images was a significant intellectual and devotional assumption that had real and ongoing meaning for the Byzantine viewer. Noteworthy, too, is the continuity from iconophile descriptions of angelic appearance and images to these later texts; evidently, iconophile image theory did have a degree of influence over the perpetuation of certain

9. Charles Barber has described the non-representational quality of Byzantine art as its primary attractive component; that is, the tension between reality and abstraction draws the viewer to contemplate the image in a more active manner. See C. Barber, "From Transformation to Desire: Art and Worship after Byzantine Iconoclasm," ArtB 75(1993):12: "one could argue that the formal practices employed in Byzantine art draw attention to the pictorial field itself as an autonomous significant space rather than as a representational space."

10. A problem addressed in D. Freedberg, The Power of Images. Studies in the History and Theory of Response (Chicago and London, 1989) 291–94.

perceptions of images after the issues had been decided in the mid-ninth century.

Several epigrams on images of angels by John Mavropus (ca. 1000–ca. 1075/81), Metropolitan of Euchaita, reveal continuity with earlier epigrams and image theory, and also a meaningful engagement with conceptual problems raised by material images of immaterial beings. Like the epigram of Agathias on the icon given in thanksgiving to the Archangel Michael, Mavropus also described an icon vowed because of particular devotion to the Archangel:

“On the bodiless one”: Who can give shape to the shapeless nature?
The faithful Theodora [has provided] a crown. And how does one depict the unknowable sight? Faith easily reconciles all these things.
And what reward does this most pious woman desire? She yearns after the spiritual saviour of all things. Archistrategos, hasten, fulfill the yearning. This faithful woman will hold to this desire especially.¹¹

In relating Theodora’s longing for the protection of the Archangel, Mavropus played on the idea of Michael’s immanence. The epigram noted the transcendence of Michael’s nature, the “shapeless” and “bodiless” quality of the Archangel, that is essentially “unknowable.” The gap between this unknowable nature and human comprehension is bridged by two complementary means: the tension between the material shaping of “the shapeless nature” and “the unknowable sight,” and the faith of the viewer that leads him or her to contemplation and conviction. This process is a remarkable condensation of the elaborate image theory of the Iconoclastic period. The need to prove the circumscribability of a formless, immaterial host and the subsequent defense of the symbolic, non-resembling iconography of angels had lost any urgency that the eighth-/ninth-century context demanded; yet this same theoretical construct that justified the making of images of angels and the value they have for Christians was still valid in the eleventh century.

11. Versus iambici, PG 120:1177AB; Iohannis Euchaitorum metropolitae quae in codice vaticano graeco 676 supersunt, ed. P. de Lagarde (Göttingen, 1882; rp. Amsterdam, 1979) 38 (#73).

Another epigram by Mavropus also described the tension between matter and immateriality that is the defining characteristic of images of angels; while this tension was common in some form to other religious images, capturing ethereal formlessness on a material image is an act peculiar to representing angels. In this epigram, Mavropus recounted the unresolved coincidence of color and formlessness on an image of the Archangel Michael:

“On the Archangel Michael”: Light, spirit and fire, we know the angels to be altogether above baseness and feeling; but the leader of immaterial host is set here formed out of colours. O faith, such wonders have you the power to bring about, so easily [you give] shapeless nature in shapes. Yet the representation reveals what is represented, not as he is by nature, but as he was made manifest many times.¹²

The irresolution that such an image manifests is, in fact, its compelling feature. As the subject is transcendent “light, spirit and fire,” delineating the Archangel does not capture his nature in any essential way; rather, this act shows him in one of his forms made manifest in the past. Moreover, the sense that such an image is contingent on this partial disclosure of the Archangel’s true nature lends the image its attractive quality to the viewer. As Mavropus said, the fact that the bodiless Archangel has condescended to assume a form comprehensible to humanity in material colors and lines makes Michael paradoxically present: in these shapes, Michael’s presence is somehow brought nearer, made more proximate. Like the neo-Platonic descriptions of Agathias and the iconophiles on the apprehension of such images, the material image is conceived as a non-resembling symbol that paradoxically makes the object of desire proximate.

12. Anthologia graeca, ed. E. Cougny, 3 vols. (Paris, 1871–1890) III:413; very like the epigram at Versus iambici, PG 120:1139A, Iohannis Euchaïtorum metropolitae, 11–12 (#24). See also Anthologia graeca, III:361–63; III:415, “On the Archistrategos: In gold, like fire, from silver, as light, I shape you, light to me, flames to enemies”; and III:401: “On the Archistrategos: How does a material hand render the immaterial? The spirit the spirit renders, the hand the sign.” On some of these epigrams, see H. G. Thümmel, Bilderlehre und Bilderstreit. Arbeiten zur Auseinandersetzung über die Ikone und ihre Begründung vornehmlich im 8. und 9. Jahrhundert (Würzburg, 1991) 161ff.

If Mavropus described the compelling paradox of angels' images, Michael Psellus—who, incidentally, knew Mavropus—attempted an interpretation of the appearance and attributes used to render angelic nature and activity. In an analysis of the iconography of angels, Psellus separated the appearance of angels in images into its component parts. The most notable aspect is their anthropomorphic form: “this shows them to be rational beings; for man alone among all living creatures has been enriched with intellect and reason.”¹³ The puzzling quality of the angels' appearances in images had profoundly discomfited such theologians as Epiphanius of Salamis and Severus of Antioch; that is, the depiction of angels as men with pagan-style dress and attributes was manifestly incommensurate with the angels' spiritual quality. Like the iconophiles, Psellus accepted the distance between angelic nature and material representation as a positive provision of incomplete knowledge of angels for humanity. Psellus's description is strikingly close in detail to the Palaiologan icon discussed above. While this icon is an especially fine example, and so worthy of examination, it is not exceptional iconographically, and clearly Psellus was examining an image very similar to that Palaiologan icon of the Archangel Michael. An ekphrasis closer in time to this Palaiologan icon is not lacking, however. For example, Symeon of Thessalonike, who died in 1429, responded in a similarly symbolic vein before just such an image.¹⁴ Both Psellus and Symeon, it should be

13. The individual attributes also hold clues for understanding the angels' being. The wings indicate “their exalting and heavenly upward motion”; the sphere often placed in one hand “suggests their quickness of movement: for the sphere is such that, touching a tiny portion of the ground, it is able to arrive independently of time and in less than an instant wherever it wishes”; the fillet denotes “the purity and chastity of their undefiled nature.” See K. Snipes, “An Unedited Treatise of Michael Psellos on the Iconography of Angels and on the Religious Festivals Celebrated on Each Day of the Week,” in Gonimos. Neoplatonic and Byzantine Studies Presented to Leendert G. Westerlink at 75, ed. J. Duffy and J. Peradotto (Buffalo, 1988) 200ff.

14. Responsa ad Gabrielem Pentapolitanum, PG 155:869B–D. He was asked the reason why the angels wear the fillet in images, why the angels and saints have nimbi, and why in the hands of the angels there are circular, cloudy forms. With regard to the fillet, he an-noted, took seriously the iconography of the angels as imparting, or showing covertly, the divine truths which are otherwise difficult of access.¹⁵

As these two ekphrasises show a continuity in engagement with the iconography of angels, so Palaiologan epigrams consistently reveal an appreciation of the tension between materiality and immateriality that images of angels play on. Nicephorus Kallistus Xanthopoulos (before 1256?–ca. 1335?) wrote specifically on the presence evoked through representation, and, while the paradoxical quality of the description of immateriality in colors is raised, this quality is left at the level of an irreconcilable contradiction. Michael's presence is someswered, "In examining the images of the holy angels, one surmises that the fillet worn round their heads shows covertly (ὕπεμφαίνει) the purity of their intellect, since it is worn round the place of the intellect, so that they are even bonded intellectually to God, and by these things are offered [such] for our contemplation and care in a fine appearing manner (ἀγαθοειδῶς). And moreover, as they are pure and immaterial beings, they wear [the fillet] just as a crown of their endless and heavenly virtue. And they have worn this (δεδεμένως) about their hair, so that they do not move confusedly or superfluously, but only concerning divine compulsion, and their intellect is speeded from above." Furthermore, the nimbi of the angels and of the saints "show covertly" the grace and radiance and action descended from God. Lastly, he addressed the reason for the orb carried by the angels, "And the cloudy and circular thing that the angels hold in their hands symbolises the consecration by the Spirit, and that they have been fixed immobile in the dispensation of the Saviour. In the midst of the circle is seen written this figure, X, so that by this Christ is revealed. But the form of the circle is also a theological sign. For if Christ teaches that he was made flesh, he also teaches that as God he has neither beginning nor end, and that Christ rules the universe, and has the whole cosmos in his hand, as David says." The orb is not the symbol of fleetness that it was for Psellus but a sign of Christ's duophysite nature, and of the delegation of offices to the angels in the new dispensation brought about through the incarnation. In contrast to the incorruptibility that the fillet denoted for Psellus, the fillet was a sign of the angels' intellectual unity with God for Symeon of Thessalonike.

15. See, however, the negative remarks of C. Mango, "St. Michael and Attis," DChAE 12(1984):39, on these texts. But see, too, H. Saradi-Mendelovici, "Christian Attitudes toward Pagan Monuments in Late Antiquity and Their Legacy in Later Byzantine Centuries," DOP 44(1990):58, who describes how far Byzantine viewers were from understanding pagan statues. She cites the interpretation of the iconography of a statue of Athena from the eighth-century Parastaseis as an example: Athena is represented without helmet because her wisdom is invisible, the gorgon on her chest is to show the speed of her mind, and so on. See Constantinople in the Eighth Century. The "Parastaseis Syntomoi Chronikai," ed. Averil Cameron, J. Herrin et al. (Leiden, 1984) #3; and see 215–16. The text does not demonstrate detachment or ignorance since indeed it is following a literary tradition from antiquity, as in the writings of Porphyry on statues (see chapters 2 and 3). Likewise, Psellus's and Symeon's interpretations are not banal or without real explanatory power but take their form from ancient topoi and newly apply them to symbolic, Christian images of angels.

how alluded to by the representation, for he is by some inexplicable means made present in this ambiguous image:

“On the Archangel Michael, a work of art by the famous painter, master Eulalios”: It seems either that the painter has dipped his brush in immateriality to delineate a spirit, or else the spirit remains unobserved in his picture, hiding in colours his incorporeal nature. How is it that matter can drag the spirit down and encompass the immaterial by means of colours? This is [a work] of ardent love (as shown by the facts), and it kindles the heart.¹⁶

The “kindling of the heart” implicitly refers to the intellectual or spiritual process which, paradoxically, the material image initiates. The closing sentence, then, indicates an important function of images of the Archangel as it was described in the sixth-century epigrams of Agathias and Nilus, and in the elaborate image theory of the iconophile theologians. Indeed, as stated in chapter 3, the conceptual framework established by Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite determined subsequent approaches to symbolic images of divine things, namely angels. In this framework, the symbols best suited for contemplation of divinity are non-resembling, since the intellect cannot adhere to these symbols and become simply mired in its material reality. Xanthopoulos’s epigram describes this very process: either matter has overcome its limitations and ascended to spirit or spirit has condescended to be captured in matter; the issue is not resolved, in fact is unresolvable, and leaves the image as allusive to the model in some indeterminate but compelling way. By this lack of essential likeness, the viewer is forced beyond the material surface to contemplation of a transcendent reality. In other words, images of angels remained fine examples of areopagite symbols.

The numerous epigrams of Manuel Philes (ca. 1275–ca. 1345) on images of angels exhibit the same basic dependence upon this neo-Platonic framework. Like other epigram writers, Philes engaged the incongruity of matter attempting to capture a spiritual creature. Writing on an image of an Archangel, Philes noted that paradoxically the matter of the image contains intellect, spirit, light and fire; the image is “intellect visible, spirit caught fast.”¹⁷ More strangely, he wrote, the flame submitted to be captured in human form, clothed, with hair and feathers, but marvelously the icon does not burn. The face ought to be red to indicate that fiery nature but, instead, the painter has used clever artifice and manipulated material color, that is yellow, to show the fire of the model. Like Xanthopoulus’s epigram, this epigram reveals an awareness of the distance between craft that deceitfully manifests an angelic form and the reality that is unknowable and uncontainable; in fact, this tension makes these images remarkable and compelling for the writers. At the same time as the images appear to make the Archangel apprehensible, they declare his transcendence:

16. “Νικηφόρος Κάλλιςτος Ξανθόπουλος,” ed. A. Papadopoulos-Kerameus, BZ 11(1902):46–47 (#16); trans. C. Mango, The Art of the Byzantine Empire. 312–1453. Sources and Documents (Toronto, 1986) 231.

Just now we see a strange blending in life. The painter mingles the flame with water. For having described the immaterial nature by means of flesh, he provides water to the faithful [to quench] the flames of desire.¹⁸

As the texts adduced in this Conclusion show, the irresolvable problem of depicting angels became a determining and compelling feature that always made their images a distinctive kind of representation. Representing angels brought angels nearer to their desiring worshippers, as Xanthopoulus averred, but not so near as to satisfy

17. Manuelis Philae carmina ex codicibus Escorialensis, Florentinis, Parisinis et Vaticanis, ed. E. Miller, 2 vols. (Paris, 1855–1857) II:202 (CLXXXVII).

18. Manuelis Philae carmina, II:415 (XLVIII). Philes also wrote the following two epigrams: “‘On an icon of the Archangel Michael’: If you desire to depict animation, Why do you depict, painter, a winged man, But not the intellect and spirit and light and flames? If not for the fact that no one can depict the immaterial in matter?” (ibid., I:357–58 [CXCII]) and, “‘On the guardian in stone’: You (are) spirit and flame, but behold, before me you do not burn. And you are found as a guard armed for us. Michael, loosening all darkening of sufferings into stony fire, you return to the light” (ibid., II:158–59 [CXVIII]). See also Manuelis Philae carmina graeca, ed. G. Wernsdorf (Leipzig, 1768) 28ff. (I.109ff.). Philes also wrote an epigram on the miracle at Chonae; see Manuelis Philae carmina, II:236 (CCXXVI).

that desire; as all writers on images of angels maintained, the angels are always absent from their images. But, by representing these creatures materially as well as verbally, Byzantines felt this spiritual world was made tantalizingly near and an immanence was provisionally contained.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PRIMARY SOURCES

- Achmet ibn Sirin. Oneirocriticon. Ed. F. Drexl. Leipzig, 1925.
Acta apostolorum apocrypha. Ed. C. Tischendorf. Leipzig, 1861.
Acta Sanctorum. 71 vols. Paris, 1863–1940.
Adversus Constantinum Caballinum. PG 95:309–44.
Analecta hymnica graeca. Ed. A. Kominis. Rome, 1972.
Anastasius Sinaïtes. Disputatio adversus Judaeos. PG 89:1203–81.
Anthologia graeca. Ed. E. Cougny. 3 vols. Paris, 1871–1890.
Athanasius. Orationes contra Arianos. PG 26:12–468.
Basil of Caesarea. Traité du Saint-Esprit. SC vol. 17 bis. Ed. B. Pruche. Paris, 1968.
The Book of Enoch or 1 Enoch. A New English Edition. Ed. M. Black. Leiden, 1985.
The Book of Jubilees or The Little Genesis. Trans. R. H. Charles. London, 1902.
Chrysippus. Des Chrysippos von Jerusalem Enkomion auf den hl. Johannes den Täufer. Texte und Forschungen zur byzantinisch-neugriechischen Philologie, vol. 20. Ed. A. Sigalas. Athens, 1937.
——— “Χρυσίππου πρεσβυτέρου Ἐγκώμιον εἰς Ἀρχάγγελον Μιχαήλ.” Ed. A. Sigalas. EEBS 3(1926):85–93.
Clement of Alexandria. Excerpta ex scriptis Theodoto. Stromata Buch VII und VIII. Excerpta ex Theodoto. Eclogae prophetae. Quis dives saluetur. Fragmente. GCS vol. 17. 2d ed. Ed. O. Stählin, L. Früchtel and U. Treu. Berlin, 1970.
Constantinople in the Eighth Century. The “Parastaseis Syntomoi Chronikai.” Ed. Averil Cameron, J. Herrin et al. Leiden, 1984.
Constitutiones Apostolicae. In Didascalia et Constitutiones apostolorum. Ed. F.X. Funk. Paderborn, 1905; rp. Turin, 1962.

- "Cosmas Indicopleustes." Topographie chrétienne. SC vols. 141, 159, 197. Ed. W. Wolska-Conus. Paris, 1968–1973.
- Cyril of Alexandria. Homilia xviii. Fragmenta de translatione reliquiarum martyrum Cyri et Joannis. PG 77:1100–1105.
- Cyril of Jerusalem. Catéchèses mystagogiques. SC vol. 126. Ed. A. Piédagnel. Paris, 1966.
- Damaskenos Stoudite. Θησαυρός. Venice, 1838.
- Dialogue between a Christian and a Jew entitled ANTIBOLH ΠΑΠΙΣΚΟΥ ΚΑΙ ΦΙΛΩΝΟΥ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ ΠΡΟΣ ΜΟΝΑΧΟΝ ΤΙΝΑ*. Ed. A. C. McGiffert. Marburg, 1889.
- La Didascalie de Jacob*. PO vol. 8/5. Ed. F. Nau. Paris, 1912; rp. Turnhout, 1971.
- Disputation of Sergius the Stylite against a Jew*. Corpus Scriptorum Christianorum Orientalium, vol. 339, 2 vols. Ed. A. P. Hayman. Louvain, 1973.
- Epiphanius of Salamis. "Die Schriften des Epiphanius gegen die Bilderverehrung." Ed. K. Holl. Sitzungsberichte der Königlich Preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften 35.2(1916):828–68. [= K. Holl. Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Kirchengeschichte, II:351–87. Tübingen, 1928; rp. Darmstadt, 1964.]
- Eusebius of Caesarea. Praeparatio Evangelica. GCS vol. 43. 2d ed. Ed. K. Mras. Berlin, 1975.
- Evagrius Ponticus. De oratione. PG 79:1165–1200.
- . Euagrius Ponticus. Ed. W. Frankenberg. Berlin, 1912.
- . Traité Pratique ou Le Moine. SC vols. 170, 171. Ed. A. Guillaumont and C. Guillaumont. Paris, 1971.
- Faustus Rhegiensis. Epistolae. In Fausti Reiensis Praeter sermones pseudo-eusebianos opera. Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum, vol. 21, ed. A. Engelbrecht, 159–220. Prague, Vienna and Leipzig, 1891.
- Gennadius of Marseilles. De ecclesiasticis dogmatibus. PL 58:979–1054.
- The Greek Anthology*. Ed. W. R. Paton. 5 vols. London, 1927.
- Gregory of Nazianzus. Orationes xlv. PG 36:12–664.
- Gregory of Nyssa. The Catechetical Orations of Gregory of Nyssa. Cambridge Patristic Texts, vol. 2. Ed. J. H. Srawley. Cambridge, 1903; rp. Cambridge, 1956.
- . In Canticum Canticorum homiliae xv. PG 44:756–1120.
- . Gregorii Nysseni opera. II. Contra Eunomium Libri. Ed. W. Jaeger. 2d ed. Leiden, 1960.
- . Oratio catechetica magna. PG 45:11–105.
- Hieronymus of Jerusalem. De effectu baptisimi et notis Christiani. PG 40:860–66.
- Ignatius the Deacon. The Life of the Patriarch Tarasius by Ignatius the Deacon (BHG 1698). Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Monographs, vol. 4. Ed. S. Efthymiadis. Aldershot, 1998.
- . Vita Nicephori. PG 100:41–160.
- John Chrysostom. Ad eos qui scandalizati. PG 52:479–528.
- . Homiliae 1–67 in Genesim. PG 53:21–54, 580.
- . In Isaiah dominum (Is. 6:1), homiliae 1–6. PG 56:97–142.

- John Mavropus. Iohannis Euchaitorum metropolitae quae in codice vaticano graeco 676 supersunt. Ed. P. de Lagarde. Göttingen, 1882; rp. Amsterdam, 1979.
- . Versus iambici. PG 120:1149–1200.
- John of Damascus. Expositio fidei. Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. II Expositio fidei. PTS vol. 12. Ed. P.B. Kotter. Berlin, 1973.
- . Orationes de imaginibus tres. Die Schriften des Johannes von Damaskos. III Contra imaginum calumniatores orationes tres. PTS vol. 17. Ed. P.B. Kotter. Berlin, 1975.
- Justin Martyr. Dialogus cum Tryphone Iudaeo. Ed. J. Goodspeed, Die ältesten Apologeten, 90–265. Göttingen, 1915; rp. New York, 1950.
- . Justin. Dialogue avec Tryphon. Ed. J. Archimbault. 2 vols. Paris, 1909.
- The Letter of the Three Patriarchs to Emperor Theophilus and Related Texts*. Ed. J.A. Munitiz, J. Chrysostomides, E. Harvalia-Crook and Ch. Dendrinios. Camberley, 1997.
- The Life of St Irene Abbess of Chrysobalanton. A Critical Edition with Introduction, Translation, Notes and Indices*. Ed. J.O. Rosenqvist. Uppsala, 1986.
- The Life of Saint Nikon*. Ed. D.F. Sullivan. Brookline, Mass., 1987.
- Macarius Magnes. Macarii Magnetis quae supersunt ex inedito codice. Ed. C. Blondel. Paris, 1876.
- Manuel Philes. Manuelis Philae carmina ex codicibus Escorialensis, Florentinis, Parisinis et Vaticanis. Ed. E. Miller. 2 vols. Paris, 1855–1857.
- . Manuelis Philae carmina graeca. Ed. G. Wernsdorf. Leipzig, 1768.
- Μηναία τοῦ ὁλοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ*. 6 vols. Rome, 1888–1901.
- Menologium Basilianum*. PG 117:20–613.
- Metrophanes, Metropolitan of Smyrna. “Προσφωνητικὸς εἰς τοὺς ἀγίους Ἀρχαγγέλους Μιχαὴλ καὶ Γαβριήλ.” In Ἐκκλησιαστικὴ Ἀληθεία 7(1887): 386–93.
- Michael Akominatus. Μιχαὴλ Ἀκομινανοῦ τοῦ Χωνιατοῦ τὰ Σωξόμενα. Ed. S.P. Lampros. 2 vols. Athens, 1879–1880.
- Michael Psellus. Oratio in Archangelum Michaellem. In Michaelis Pselli Orationes Hagiographicae, ed. E.A. Fisher, 230–56. Stuttgart and Leipzig, 1994.
- Michael of Stoudios. “Éloge des archanges Michel et Gabriel par Michel le Moine (BHG 1294a).” Ed. T. Matantseva. JöB 46(1996):97–155.
- Monumenta Germaniae Historica: Scriptores rerum Langobardicarum et Italicarum saec. VI–IX*. Hannover, 1878.
- Narratio de miraculo a Michaelae Archangelo Chonis patrato*. Ed. M. Bonnet. Paris, 1890.
- Nicephorus, Patriarch of Constantinople. Adversus Epiphanidem. In Pitra IV: 292–380.
- . Antirrheticus adversus Constantinum Copronymum. PG 100:205–533.
- . Apologeticus pro sacris imaginibus. PG 100:533–850.
- . Contra Eusebium. In Pitra I:371–503.
- . De Magnete. In Pitra I:302–35.

- . Nicephori patriarchae constantinopolitani Refutatio et eversio definitionis synodalis anni 815. Corpus Christianorum. Series Graeca, vol. 33. Ed. J. Featherstone. Louvain, 1997.
- Nicephorus, Priest of Hagia Sophia. Vita S. Andreae Sali. PG 111:628–888.
- Nicephorus Skeuophylactus. “Nicephori Sceuophylacis encomium in S. Theodorum Siceotam.” Ed. K. Kirch. AB 20(1901):248–72.
- Nicetas Stethatos. Opusculum et lettres. SC vol. 81. Ed. J. Darrouzès. Paris, 1961.
- Palladius. The Lausiaca History of Palladius. Ed. C. Butler. 2 vols. Cambridge, 1898–1904.
- Pantaleon. Encomium in maximum et gloriosissimum Michaellem coelestis militiae principem. PG 98:1259–66.
- . Narratio miraculorum maximi archangeli Michaelis. PG 140:573–92.
- Philoxenus of Mabbug. The Discourses of Philoxenus Bishop of Mabbôgh, A.D. 485–519. Vol. II. Introduction, Translation, etc. Ed. E. A. W. Budge. London, 1894.
- Photius. Bibliothèque, Tome V (“Codices” 230–241). Ed. R. Henry. Paris, 1967.
- . Epistulae et Amphiloquia. Ed. B. Laourdas and L. G. Westerink. 6 vols. in 7 pts. Leipzig, 1983–1988.
- Procopius of Gaza. Commentarii in Genesim. PG 87.1:21–512.
- Pseudo-Athanasius. Quaestiones ad Antiochum Ducem. PG 28:597–700.
- Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite. De divinis nominibus. PG 3:585–984.
- . De ecclesiastica hierarchia. PG 3:369–569.
- . De mystica theologia. PG 3:997–1048.
- . La Hiérarchie Céleste. SC vol. 58. Ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac. Paris, 1958.
- Pseudo-Macarius. Die fünfzig geistlichen Homilien des Makarios. PTS vol. 4. Ed. H. Dörries, E. Klosterman and M. Kroeger. Berlin, 1964.
- Severus of Antioch. Les homiliae cathedrales. PO vol. 8/2. Ed. M. Brière. Paris, 1919; rp. Turnhout, 1971.
- Sissinius. Acta apparitionis in Chonis. AASS Sept. 8:41–49.
- Sophronius. Narratio miraculorum Ss. Cyri et Joannis. PG 87.3:3424–3676.
- Stephen the Deacon. La vie d'Étienne le Jeune. Birmingham Byzantine and Ottoman Monographs, vol. 3. Ed. M.-F. Auzépy. Aldershot, 1997.
- Symeon of Thessalonike. Responsa ad Gabrielem Pentapolitanum. PG 155:829–952.
- Tertullian. Apologeticum adversus gentes pro Christianis. In Tertulliani Opera. Pars I. Opera Catholica, Adversus Marcionem. Corpus Christianorum. Series Latina, vol. 1, ed. E. Dekkers, 85–171. Turnhout, 1954.
- Theodore of Stoudios. Antirrheticus adversus iconomachos. PG 99:328–436.
- . In sanctos angelos. PG 99:729–48.
- . Refutatio et subversio impiorum poematum. PG 99:436–77.
- Theodoret of Cyrrhus. De providentia orationes x. PG 82:556–773.
- Theophanes. Chronographia. Ed. C. de Boor. 2 vols. Leipzig, 1883–1885.
- The Third and Fourth Book of Maccabees*. Trans. M. Hadas. New York, 1953; rp. New York, 1976.

- Les Trophées de Damas*. PO vol. 15 / 2. Ed. G. Bardy. Paris, 1920; rp. Turnhout, 1973.
- Vie de Théodore de Sykéôn*. Ed. A.-J. Festugière. 2 vols. Brussels, 1970.
- Vita S. Mariae Iunoris*. AASS Nov. 4:692–705.
- Vitae duae antiquae Sancti Athanasii Athonitae*. Corpus Christianorum, Series Graeca, vol. 9. Ed. J. Noret. Turnhout, 1982.
- Xanthopoulos, Nicephorus Kallistus. “Νικηφόρος Κάλλιστος Ξανθόπουλος.” Ed. A. Papadopoulos-Kerameus. BZ 11(1902):38–46.

SECONDARY SOURCES

- Alexakis, A. “Stephen of Bostra: Fragmenta Contra Judaeos (CPG 7790). A New Edition.” JöB 43(1993):45–60.
- Alexander, P.J. “Church Councils and Patristic Authority. The Iconoclastic Council of Hiereia (754) and St. Sophia (815).” Harvard Studies in Classical Philology 63(1958):493–505.
- . “Hypatius of Ephesus: A Note on Worship in the Sixth Century.” HTR 45(1952):177–84.
- . “The Iconoclastic Council of St. Sophia (815) and Its Definition (Horos).” DOP 7(1953):35–66.
- . The Patriarch Nicephorus of Constantinople. Ecclesiastical Policy and Image Worship in the Byzantine Empire. Oxford, 1958.
- Le ali di Dio. Messagerie e guerrieri alati tra oriente e occidente*. Ed. M. Bussagli and M. D’Onofrio. Milan, 2000.
- Alpago-Novello, A., et al. Art and Architecture in Medieval Georgia. Trans. N. Holloway. Louvain-la-Neuve, 1980.
- Alpatov, M. “Sur l’iconographie des anges dans l’art de Byzance et de l’ancienne Russie.” Zograf 11(1980):5–15.
- Amélineau, E. “Le christianisme chez les anciens Coptes.” Revue de l’histoire des religions 14(1886):308–45, 15(1887):52–87.
- . Contes et romans de l’Égypte chrétienne. Paris, 1888.
- Anastos, M.V. “The Argument for Iconoclasm as Presented by the Iconoclastic Council of 754.” In Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al., 177–88. Princeton, 1955.
- . “The Ethical Theory of Images Formulated by the Iconoclasts in 754 and 815.” DOP 8(1954):151–60.
- Angelidi, Ch. “La version longue de la Vision du moine Cosmas.” AB 101(1983):73–99.
- Angelillis, C. Il santuario del Gargano e il culto di S. Michele nel mondo. 2 vols. Foggia, 1956.
- Auzépy, M.-F. “L’Adversus Constantinum Caballinum et Jean de Jérusalem.” BS 56(1995):323–38.
- . “L’analyse littéraire et l’historien: l’exemple des vies de saints iconoclastes.” BS 53(1992):57–67.

- . "Le destruction de l'icône du Christ de la Chalcé par Léon III: Propagande ou réalité." B 60(1990):445–92.
- . "À propos des vies de saints iconoclastes." RSDN 30(1993):3–5.
- Barasch, M. Icon. Studies in the History of an Idea. New York and London, 1992.
- Barbel, J. Christos Angelos. Die Anschauung von Christos als Bote und Engel in der gelehrten und volkstümlichen Literatur des christlichen Altertums. Theophaneia, vol. 3. Bonn, 1941.
- Barber, C. "From Transformation to Desire: Art and Worship after Byzantine Iconoclasm." ArtB 75(1993):7–16.
- . "The Koimesis Church, Nicaea. The Limits of Representation on the Eve of Iconoclasm." JöB 41(1991):43–60.
- Barker, M. The Great Angel. A Study of Israel's Second God. London, 1992.
- Barsanti, C. "Una nota sulle sculture del Tempio di Giacinto nella Chiesa della Dormizione (Koimesis) di Iznik-Nicea." Storia dell'arte 46(1982):210–18.
- Bartelink, G.J.M. "Quelques observations sur ΠΑΡΡΗΣΙΑ dans la littérature paléo-chrétienne." In Graecitas et latinitas christianorum primaeva, suppl. 3, 5–57, 155–57. Nijmegen, 1970.
- Battifol, P. Studiorum patristicorum. Études d'ancienne littérature chrétienne. 2 vols. Paris, 1889–1890.
- Baumeister, T. "Religionsgeschichtliche und kultgeographische Aspekte der westlichen Michaelsverehrung." In Memoriam sanctorum venerantes: miscellanea in onore di Monsignor Victor Saxer, Studi di antichità cristiana, vol. 48, 11–19. Vatican City, 1992.
- Baynes, N.H. "Idolatry and the Early Church." In N.H. Baynes, Byzantine and Other Studies, 116–43. London, 1955.
- Beck, A.C.M. Genien und Niken als Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst. Giessen, 1936.
- Belke, K., and N. Mersich. Phrygien und Pisidien. Tabula Imperii Byzantini, vol. 7. Vienna, 1990.
- Belting, H. Bild und Kult. Eine Geschichte des Bildes vor dem Zeitalter der Kunst. Munich, 1990.
- Berefelt, G. A Study on the Winged Angel. The Origin of a Motif. Stockholm, 1968.
- Bertelè, T. L'imperatore alato nella numismatica bizantina. Rome, 1951.
- Bibliotheca hagiographica graeca*. Ed. F. Halkin. 3 vols. Brussels, 1957.
- Bidez, J. Vie de Porphyre. Le philosophe néoplatonicien. Gand and Leipzig, 1913; rp. Hildesheim and New York, 1980.
- Blum, C. "The Meaning of στοιχεῖον and its Derivatives in the Byzantine Age. A Study in Byzantine Magic." Eranos 44(1946):315–25.
- Börtzler, F. Porphyrius' Schrift von den Götterbildern. Erlangen, 1908.
- Bovini, G. Mosaici di S. Apollinare di Ravenna: Il ciclo cristologico. Florence, 1958.
- Brendel, O.J. Prolegomena to the Study of Roman Art. New Haven and London, 1979.
- Brenk, B. Die frühchristliche Mosaiken in S. Maria Maggiore zu Rom. Wiesbaden, 1975.

- Brightman, F.E. "The Historia Mystagogica and Other Greek Commentaries on the Byzantine Liturgy." JTS 9(1908):248–67, 387–97.
- . Liturgies Eastern and Western, Vol. 1. Oxford, 1896.
- Brock, S. "Iconoclasm and Monophysitism." In Iconoclasm. Papers Given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin, 53–57. Birmingham, 1977.
- Brown, P. "The Rise and Function of the Holy Man in Late Antiquity, 1971–1997." J ECS 6(1998):353–76.
- Browning, R. "The 'Low Level' Saint's Life in the Early Byzantine World." In The Byzantine Saint, ed. S. Hackel, 117–27. London, 1981.
- Brubaker, L. "Byzantine Art in the Ninth Century: Theory, Practice, and Culture." BMGS 13(1989):23–93.
- . "Icons Before Iconoclasm?" In Morfologie sociali e culturali in Europa fra tarda antichità e alto medioevo. Settimane vol. 45, II:1215–54. Spoleto, 1998.
- . "To Legitimize an Emperor: Constantine and Visual Authority in the Eighth and Ninth Centuries." In New Constantines. The Rhythm of Imperial Renewal in Byzantium, 4th–13th Centuries, Papers from the Twenty-sixth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, St. Andrews, March 1992, ed. P. Magdalino, 139–58. Aldershot, 1994.
- . Vision and Meaning in Ninth-Century Byzantium. Image as Exegesis in the Homilies of Gregory of Nazianzus. Cambridge, 1999.
- Büchsel, M. "Die Schöpfungs mosaiken von San Marco. Die Ikonographie der Erschaffung des Menschens in der frühchristlichen Kunst." Städel-Jahrbuch n.s. 13(1991):29–80.
- Budge, E.A.W. Miscellaneous Coptic Texts in the Dialect of Upper Egypt. London, 1915.
- Bussagli, M. "Angeli." Enciclopedia dell'arte medievale, I:629–38. Rome, 1991–.
- . "Gli angeli e i venti: considerazioni sul simbolismo aereo delle ali angeliche." Arte medievale 5/2(1991):107–26.
- . "Il Precursore. Giovanni l'angelo, martire della luce." Abstracta 27(1988): 23–29.
- . Storia degli angeli. Racconto di immagini e di idee. Milan, 1991.
- . Byzance. L'art byzantin dans les collections publiques françaises. Paris, 1992.
- Cameron, Alan. The Greek Anthology from Meleager to Planudes. Oxford, 1993.
- Cameron, Averil. Agathias. Oxford, 1970.
- . "Byzantium and the Past in the Seventh Century: The Search for Redefinition." In The Seventh Century. Change and Continuity. Proceedings of a joint French and British Colloquium held at the Warburg Institute 8–9 July 1988, ed. J. Fontaine and J. N. Hillgarth, 250–76. London, 1992.
- . "The Language of Images: The Rise of Icons and Christian Representation." In The Church and the Arts, Studies in Church History, vol. 25, ed. D. Wood, 1–42. London, 1992.

- Campagna, O. "La grotta di S. Michele alla Serra di Grisolia." Bolletino della Badia Greca di Grottaferrata n.s. 40(1986):57–65.
- Canivet, P. "Le Michaelion de Huarte (Ve s.) et le culte syrien des anges." B 50(1980):85–117.
- Canivet, P., and M. T. Canivet. Huarte. Sanctuaire chrétien d'Apamène (IVe-VIe s.). 2 vols. Paris, 1987.
- Cecchelli, C. I mosaici della Basilica S. Maria Maggiore. Turin, 1956.
- Chandler, R. Travels in Asia Minor: Or, an account of a tour made at the expense of the Society of Dilettanti. Dublin, 1775.
- Chateau, D. "De la ressemblance: un dialogue Foucault-Magritte." In L'image Deleuze, Foucault, Lyotard, ed. T. Lenain, 95–108. Paris, 1998.
- Chesnut, R. C. Three Monophysite Christologies: Severus of Antioch, Philoxenus of Mabbug, and Jacob of Sarug. Oxford, 1976.
- Clark, E. A. The Origenist Controversy. The Cultural Construction of an Early Christian Debate. Princeton, 1992.
- Clausberg, K. Die Wiener Genesis. Eine Kunstwissenschaftliche Bilderbuchgeschichte. Frankfurt am Main, 1984.
- . Conversation with God. Icons from the Byzantine Museum of Athens (9th–15th Centuries). The Hellenistic Centre, London, 22 May–20 June, 1998. Athens, 1998.
- Cormack, R. "Painting After Iconoclasm." In Iconoclasm. Papers Given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin, 147–63. Birmingham, 1977.
- . "The Wall Painting of St. Michael in the Theatre." In Aphrodisias Papers 2. The Theatre, a Sculptor's Workshop, Philosophers, and Coin Types, ed. R. R. R. Smith and K. T. Erim, 109–22. Ann Arbor, 1991.
- . Writing in Gold. Byzantine Society and Its Icons. London, 1985.
- Cornea, A. "On 'Fiction' and 'Authenticity' in Byzantine Pre-Iconoclastic Painting." Revue roumaine d'histoire de l'art 17(1980):3–11.
- Corrigan, K. A. Visual Polemics in the Ninth-Century Byzantine Psalters. Cambridge, 1992.
- Crafer, T. W. "Macarius Magnes, A Neglected Apologist." JTS 8(1907):401–23, 546–71.
- Cramer, J. A. Anecdota graeca e codd. manuscriptis Bibliothecae regiae parisiensis. 4 vols. Oxford, 1839–1841; rp. Hildesheim, 1967.
- Crisafulli, V. S., and J. W. Nesbitt. The Miracles of St. Artemios. A Collection of Miracle Stories by an Anonymous Author of Seventh-Century Byzantium. Leiden, New York and Köln, 1997.
- Cumont, F. "Les anges du paganisme." Revue de l'histoire des religions 72(1915):159–82.
- Cutler, A., and R. Browning. "In the Margins of Byzantium? Some Icons in Michael Psellos." BMGS 16(1992):21–32.
- Dagron, G. "Constantinople. Les sanctuaires et l'organisation de la ville religieuse." Actes du XIe congrès international d'archéologie chrétienne. Lyons, Vienne,

- Grenoble, Genève et Aoste (21–28 Septembre 1986), II:1069–85. Vatican City, 1989.
- . “Holy Images and Likeness.” DOP 45(1991):23–33.
- . “Mots, images, icônes.” Nouvelle revue de psychanalyse 44(1991):151–68.
- . “Rêver de Dieu et parler de soi. Le rêve et son interprétation d’après les sources byzantines.” In I sogni nel medioevo, ed. T. Gregory, 37–55. Rome, 1985.
- . Vie et miracles de sainte Thècle. Texte grec, traduction et commentaire. Brussels, 1978.
- D’Alverny, M.-Th. “Les anges et les jours.” CA 9(1957):271–300.
- Daniélou, J. Histoire des doctrines chrétiennes avant Nicée. Vol. 1. Théologie du judéo-christianisme. Tournai, 1958.
- Delbrueck, R. Die Consulardiptychen und verwandte Denkmäler. 2 vols. Berlin and Leipzig, 1929.
- Der Nersessian, S. “Une apologie des images du septième siècle.” B 17(1944/5):58–87.
- . L’illustration des psautiers grecs du Moyen Age. II. Londres, Add. 19.352. Paris, 1970.
- . “Note sur quelques images se rattachant au thème du Christ-ange.” CA 13(1962):209–16.
- Déroche, V. “L’Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis.” TM 12(1994):45–104.
- . “L’authenticité de l’Apologie contre les Juifs de Léontios de Néapolis.” Bulletin de correspondance hellénique 110(1986):655–69.
- . “L’autorité des moines à Byzance du VIII^e siècle au Xe siècle.” Revue Bénédictine 103(1993):241–54.
- Derrida, J. “How to Avoid Speaking: Denials.” In Languages of the Unsayable. The Play of Negativity in Literature and Literary Theory, ed. S. Budick and W. Iser, trans. K. Friedan, 3–70. New York, 1989.
- Deubner, L. De incubatione capita quattuor. Leipzig, 1900.
- . Kosmas und Damian. Texte und Einleitung. Leipzig, 1907.
- Dictionnaire d’archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie*. Ed. F. Cabrol and H. Leclercq. Paris, 1924–.
- Dictionnaire de théologie catholique*. Ed. A. Vacant and E. Magenot. Paris, 1899–1950.
- Diekamp, F. Analecta patristica. Texte und Abhandlungen zur griechischen Patristik. Orientalia christiana analecta, vol. 117. Rome, 1938.
- Draguet, R. “L’Histoire Lausaque: Une oeuvre écrite dans l’esprit d’Evagre.” Revue d’histoire ecclésiastique 41(1946):321–64, 42(1947):5–49.
- Drandakes, N. V. “Παλαιολόγειος εἰκὼν Βρεφοκρατοῦσης τοῦ εἰς Βενετίου Ἐλληνηκοῦ ναοῦ.” Θεολογία 28(1957):238–51.
- Duchesne, L. Macario Magnete et scriptis eius. Paris, 1877.
- Dufrenne, S. “Une illustration ‘historique,’ inconnue, du Psautier du Mont-Athos, Pantocrator No. 61.” CA 15(1965):83–95.

- Dunbabin, K. M. D. "Ipsa deae vestigiaie ...' Footprints Divine and Human on Graeco-Roman Monuments." Journal of Roman Archaeology 3(1990):85–109.
- Elliott, A. G. Roads to Paradise. Reading the Lives of the Early Saints. Hanover and London, 1987.
- Engemann, J. "Zu den Dreifaltigkeit darstellungen der frühchristlichen Kunst: Gab es in 4. Jahrhundert anthropomorphe Trinitätsbilder?" JAC 19(1976):157–72.
- Erim, K. T. Aphrodisias. City of Venus—Aphrodite. New York and London, 1986.
- . Aphrodisias. Ein Führer durch die antike Stadt und das Museum. Trans. E. Alföldi-Rosenbaum. Istanbul, 1990.
- Felis, K. "Die Niken und die Engel in altchristlicher Kunst." RQ 26(1912):3–25.
- Ferrua, A. La pittura della nuova Catacomba di via Latina. Vatican City, 1960.
- Finney, P. C. The Invisible God. Early Christians on Art. Oxford, 1994.
- Firatli, N. La sculpture byzantine figurée au Musée Archéologique d'Istanbul. Paris, 1990.
- Fisher, E. A. "Nicomedia or Galatia? Where Was Psellos' Church of the Archangel Michael?" In Gonimos. Neoplatonic and Byzantine Studies Presented to Leendert G. Westerlink at 75, ed. J. Duffy and J. Peradotto, 175–87. Buffalo, 1988.
- Fitzmeyer, J. A. "A New Feature of Qumrân Angelology and the Angels of I Cor. XI:10." New Testament Studies n.s. 4(1957/8):48–58.
- Florovsky, G. "Origen, Eusebius, and the Iconoclastic Controversy." Church History 19(1950):77–96.
- Foucault, M. This Is Not a Pipe. Trans. J. Harkness. Berkeley, 1982.
- Fox, R. L. Pagans and Christians. Harmondsworth, Middlesex, 1986.
- Francis, F. O. "Humility and Angelic Worship in Col. 2:18." Studia Theologica 16(1963):109–34. [= Conflict at Colossae. A Problem in the Interpretation of Early Christianity Illustrated by Selected Modern Studies, ed. F. O. Francis and W. A. Meeks, 163–95. Missoula, Mont., 1973.]
- Francovich, G. de. "I mosaici del bema della chiesa della Dormizione di Nicea." In Scritti di storia dell'arte in onore di Lionello Venturi, 1:3–27. Rome, 1956.
- Frank, P. S. ΑΤΤΕΛΙΚΟΣ ΒΙΟΣ. Begriffsanalytische und begriffsgeschichtliche Untersuchung zum "Engelgleichen Leben" im frühen Mönchtum. Münster, 1964.
- Freedberg, D. The Power of Images. Studies in the History and Theory of Response. Chicago and London, 1989.
- Freeman, A. "Theodulf of Orleans and the Libri Carolini." Speculum 32(1957):663–705.
- Friedländer, P. Johannes von Gaza und Paulus Silentarius. Kunstbeschreibungen justinianischer Zeit. Leipzig and Berlin, 1912; rp. Hildesheim and New York, 1969.
- Gabelić, S. "The Iconography of the Miracle at Chonae. An Unusual Example from Cyprus." Zograf 20(1989):95–103.
- Galavaris, G. The Illustrations of the Prefaces in Byzantine Gospels. Vienna, 1979.
- Gero, S. Byzantine Iconoclasm During the Reign of Constantine V with Particular Attention to the Oriental Sources. Louvain, 1977.

- . Byzantine Iconoclasm during the Reign of Leo III with Particular Attention to the Oriental Sources. Louvain, 1973.
- . "Hypatius of Ephesus on the Cult of Images." In Christianity, Judaism and Other Greco-Roman Cults. Studies for Morton Smith at Sixty, II:208–16. Leiden, 1975.
- Giakalis, A. Images of the Divine. The Theology of Icons at the Seventh Ecumenical Council. Leiden, New York and Köln, 1994.
- Giannopoulos, V.N. "Ἡ περὶ ἁγγέλων διδασκαλία τοῦ Πατριαρχοῦ καὶ Ὁμολογητοῦ Νικηφόρου Α' (+829)." Θεολογία 44(1973):312–38.
- Ginzburg, C. "Idols and Likenesses: Origen, Homilies on Exodus VIII.3, and Its Reception." In Sight and Insight. Essays in Honour of E. H. Gombrich at 85, ed. J. Onians, 55–72. London, 1994.
- Goar, J. Euchologion sive rituale graecorum. Venice, 1730; rp. Graz, 1960.
- Godwin, J. Mystery Religions in the Ancient World. San Francisco, 1981.
- Gothein, E. "L'arcangelo Michele, santo popolare dei Longobardi." Rassegna Pugliese di scienze, lettere ed arte 13(1896):81–89, 107–12, 137–46, 162–68.
- Gough, Mary, ed. Alahan. An Early Christian Monastery in Southeastern Turkey. Toronto, 1985.
- Gouillard, J. "Fragments inédits d'un antirrhétique de Jean le Grammairien." REB 24(1966):171–81.
- . "Hypatios d'Éphèse ou du Pseudo-Denys à Théodore Studite." REB 19(1961):63–75.
- Grabar, A. The Golden Age of Justinian. From the Death of Theodosius to the Rise of Islam. Trans. S. Gilbert and J. Emmons. New York, 1967.
- . L'iconoclasm byzantin. Dossier archéologique. Paris, 1957.
- . Martyrium. Recherches sur le culte des reliques et l'art chrétien antique. 2 vols. Paris, 1943–1946; rp. London, 1972.
- . "Les mosaïques de Germigny-des-Prés." In A. Grabar, L'art de la fin de l'Antiquité et du Moyen Âge, II:995–1006. Paris, 1968.
- Grooth, M., and P. van Moorsel. "The Lion, the Calf, the Man and the Eagle in Early Christian and Coptic Art." Bulletin Antieckie Beschaving 52/3(1977/8): 233–45.
- Guarducci, M.M. "Le impronte del 'Quo vadis' e monumenti affini, figurati ed epigrafici." Rendiconti. Pontificia Accademia Romana di Archeologia 19(1942/4): 305–44.
- Guillaumont, A. Les "Képhalaia Gnostica" d'Évagre le Pontique et l'histoire de l'Origenisme chez les Grecs et chez les Syriens. Patristica Sorbonensis, vol. 5. Paris, 1962.
- Guiraud, P. "Étymologie et ethymologia (Motivation et rétro-motivation)." Poétique 11(1972):405–13.
- Guy, J.-C. "Un Entretien monastique sur la contemplation." Recherches des sciences religieuses 50(1962):230–41.
- Halkin, F. "Un abrégé inédit de la vie ancienne et disparue de Corneille le Centurion." RSBN n.s. 1(1964):31–39.

- . Inédits byzantins d'Ochrida, Candie et Moscou. Brussels, 1963.
- Halleux, A. de. Philoxène de Mabbog. Sa vie, ses écrits, sa théologie. Louvain, 1963.
- Hanfmann, G.M.A. The Season Sarcophagus in Dumbarton Oaks. 2 vols. Cambridge, Mass., 1951.
- Harnack, A. Kritik des Neues Testaments von einem griechischen Philosophen des 3. Jahrhunderts. Die in Apocriticus des Macarius Magnes enthaltene Streitschrift. TU vol. 37 / 3. Leipzig, 1911.
- Hasluck, F.W. Letters on Religion and Folklore. London, 1926.
- Heiser, L. Die Engel im Glauben der Orthodoxie. Trier, 1976.
- Hinks, R.P. Catalogue of the Greek, Etruscan and Roman Paintings and Mosaics in the British Museum. London, 1933.
- The Holy Face and the Paradox of Representation*. Villa Spelman Colloquia, vol. 6, ed. H. L. Kessler and G. Wolf. Bologna, 1998.
- Holy Women of the Syrian Orient*. Ed. S.A. Harvey and S. Brock. Berkeley, 1987.
- Honigmann, E. "Pierre l'Ibérien et les écrits du Pseudo-Denys l'Aréopagite." Mémoires de l'Académie Royale de Belgique, Classe des Lettres et des Sciences morales et politiques 47 / 3(1952):3–57.
- Ihm, C. Die Programme der christlichen Apsismalerei vom vierten Jahrhundert bis zur Mitte des achten Jahrhunderts. Wiesbaden, 1960.
- Jeck, U. "Ps. Dionysios Areopagites und der Bilderstreit in Byzanz: Überlegungen zur Dionysiosrezeption des Johannes von Damaskos." Hermeneia. Zeitschrift für ostkirchliche Kunst 8 / 2(1992):71–80.
- Jerphanion, G. de. "Les noms des quatre animaux et le commentaire liturgique de Pseudo-Germain." In G. de Jerphanion, Les voix des monuments. Notes et études d'archéologie chrétienne, 250–59. Paris, 1930.
- Joannou, P.-P. Discipline generale antique (IVe-IXe siècles). Tome I.2. Les canons des synodes particuliers. Grottaferrata, 1962.
- Jolivet-Lévy, C. "Culte et iconographie de l'archange Michel dans l'orient byzantin: le témoignage de quelques monuments de Cappadoce." Cahiers de Saint-Michel de Cuixà 28(1997):187–98.
- . Les églises byzantines de Cappadoce. Le programme iconographique de l'abside et ses abords. Paris, 1991.
- . "Note sur la représentation des archanges en costume impérial dans l'iconographie byzantine." CA 46(1998):121–28.
- Kartsonis, A. D. Anastasis. The Making of an Image. Princeton, 1986.
- Kazhdan, A., and H. Maguire. "Byzantine Hagiographical Texts as Sources on Art." DOP 45(1991):1–22.
- Kearney, R. The Wake of Imagination. Ideas of Creativity in Western Culture. London, 1988.
- Kessler, H.L. "'Pictures Fertile with Truth': How Christians Managed to Make Images of God without Violating the Second Commandment." The Journal of the Walters Art Gallery 49 / 50(1991 / 2):53–65.

- . "Real Absence: Early Medieval Art and the Metamorphosis of Vision." In Morfologie sociali e culturali in Europa fra tarda antichità e alto medioevo. Settimane vol. 45, II:1157–1213. Spoleto, 1998.
- . Studies in Pictorial Narrative. London, 1994.
- . "Through the Temple Veil: The Holy Image in Judaism and Christianity." Kairos 32/33(1990/1):53–77.
- Kinney, D. "The Apocalypse in Early Christian Monumental Decoration." In The Apocalypse in the Middle Ages, ed. R. K. Emerson and B. McGinn, 200–16. Ithaca and London, 1992.
- Kirschbaum, E. "L'angelo rosso e l'angelo turchino." RivAC 17(1940):209–48.
- Kitzinger, E. Byzantine Art in the Making. London, 1977.
- . "Byzantine Art in the Period between Justinian and Iconoclasm." In Berichte zum XI. Internationalen Byzantinischen-Kongress, München, 1958, 1–50. Munich, 1958.
- . "The Cult of Images in the Age Before Iconoclasm." DOP 8(1954):83–150.
- . "On Some Icons of the Seventh Century." In Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al., 132–50. Princeton, 1955.
- Kleiner, D. Roman Sculpture. New Haven and London, 1992.
- Koester, H. History and Literature of Early Christianity. Philadelphia, 1982.
- Kötting, B. "Fußspuren als Zeichen göttlicher Anwesenheit." Boreas 6(1983):197–201.
- . Peregrinatio religiosa. Wallfahrten in der Antike und das Pilgerwesen in der alten Kirche. Münster, 1950; rp. Münster, 1980.
- Koukiales, S. Tà θαύματα—Εμφάνισεις τῶν Ἀγγέλων καὶ Ἀρχαγγέλων στὴν Βυζαντινὴ Τέχνη τῶν Βαλκανίων. Athens, 1989.
- Krausmüller, D. "God or Angels as Impersonators of Saints. A Belief and its Contexts in the "Refutation" of Eustratius of Constantinople and in the Writings of Anastasius of Sinai." Gouden Hoorn 6/2(1998/9):5–16.
- Krueger, D. "Hagiography as an Ascetic Practice in the Early Christian East." The Journal of Religion 79(1999):216–32.
- . "Typological Figuration in Theodoret of Cyrillus's Historia Religiosa and the Art of Postbiblical Narrative." J ECS 5(1997):393–417.
- Ladner, G. "The Concept of the Image in the Greek Fathers and the Byzantine Iconoclastic Controversy." DOP 7(1953):1–34.
- Lafontaine-Dosogne, J. "Une icône d'Angélos au Musée de Malines et l'iconographie du saint Jean-Baptiste ailé." Bulletin de Musées Royaux d'Art et d'Histoire 48(1976):121–44.
- . "Théophanie—visions auxquelles participent les prophètes dans l'art byzantin après la restauration des images." In Synthronon. Art et archéologie de la fin de l'Antiquité et du Moyen Âge, 135–43. Paris, 1968.

- Lange, G. Bild und Wort. Die katechetischen Funktionen des Bildes in der griechischen Theologie des sechsten bis neunten Jahrhunderts. Würzburg, 1969.
- Lardreau, G. Discours philosophique et discours spirituel. Autour de la philosophie spirituelle de Philoxène de Mabboug. Paris, 1985.
- Leanza, S. "Una versione greca inedita dell'Apparitio S. Michaelis in monte Gargano." VetChr 22(1985):291–316.
- Legrand, E. Bibliothèque grecque vulgaire. 9 vols. Paris, 1881; rp. Athens, 1974.
- Lethaby, W. R. "The Painted Book of Genesis in the British Museum." Archaeological Journal 69(1912):88–111.
- Lexicon iconographicum mythologiae classicae*. Zurich and Munich, 1981–.
- Liddell, H. G., and R. Scott. A Greek-English Lexicon. Oxford, 1968.
- Lightfoot, J. B. St. Paul's Epistles to the Colossians and to Philemon. London, 1879.
- Lipsić, E. E. "Naukratij i Nikeiskie Mozaikij." Zbornik Radova Vizantoloskog Instituta 8/2(1964):241–46.
- Loerke, W. "Observations on the Representation of Doxa in the Mosaics of S. Maria Maggiore, Rome, and St. Catherine's, Sinai." Gesta 20(1981):15–22.
- Longo, A. A. "A proposito di un articolo recente sull'agiografia iconoclasta." RSBN 29(1992):3–17.
- . "Di nuovo sull'agiografia iconoclasta." RSBN 30(1993):7–15.
- . "La vita de S. Leone di Catania e gli incantesimi del mago Eliodoro." RSBN 26(1989):3–98.
- Louth, A. Denys the Areopagite. Wilton, Conn., 1989.
- Lueken, W. Michael. Eine Darstellung und Vergleichung der jüdischen und der morgenländisch-christlichen Tradition vom Erzengel Michael. Göttingen, 1898.
- McCail, R. C. "The Cycle of Agathias: New Identifications Scrutinised." Journal of Hellenic Studies 89(1969):87–96.
- . "The Erotic and Ascetic Poetry of Agathias Scholasticus." B 41(1971):205–67.
- . "On the Early Career of Agathias Scholasticus." REB 28(1970):141–51.
- Maffei, F. de'. Icona, pittore e arte al Concilio Niceno II. Rome, 1974.
- . "Tradizione ed innovazione nei dittici eburnei: Giuliano, Pulcheria, Giustiniano." Rivista degli Studi Orientali 40(1986):89–139.
- . "L'Unigenito consostanziale al Padre nel programma trinitario dei perduti mosaici del bema della Dormizione di Nicea e il Cristo trasfigurato del Sinai." Storia dell'arte 45(1982):91–116, 46(1982):185–200.
- Maguire, H. Earth and Ocean. The Terrestrial World in Early Byzantine Art. University Park and London, 1987.
- . The Icons of Their Bodies. Saints and Their Images in Byzantium. Princeton, 1996.
- . "Magic and the Christian Image." In Byzantine Magic, ed. H. Maguire, 51–71. Washington, D.C., 1995.
- . "Style and Ideology in Byzantine Imperial Art." Gesta 28(1989):217–31.

- Maltese, E. V. Dimensione bizantine. Donne, angeli e demoni nel medioevo greco. Turin, 1995.
- . “Gli angeli in terra: sull’immaginario dell’angelo bizantino.” Materiali e discussioni per l’analisi dei testi classici 24(1990):111–32.
- Mango, C. The Art of the Byzantine Empire. 312–1453. Sources and Documents. Toronto, 1986.
- . Byzantine Architecture. London, 1986.
- . Byzantium. The Empire of New Rome. London, 1980.
- . “La croix dite de Michel le Cérulaire et la croix de Saint-Michel de Sykéôn.” CA 36(1988):41–49.
- . “Germia: A Postscript.” JöB 41(1991):297–300.
- . Materials for the Study of the Mosaics of St. Sophia at Istanbul. Washington, D.C., 1962.
- . “Notes d’épigraphie et d’archéologie: Constantinople, Nicée.” TM 12(1994):343–57.
- . “On the History of the Templon and the Martyrion of St. Artemios at Constantinople.” Zograf 10(1979):40–43.
- . “St. Michael and Attis.” DChAE 12(1984):39–62.
- Mansi, G. D. Sacrorum conciliorum nova et amplissima collectio. 53 vols. in 58 pts. Paris and Leipzig, 1901–1927.
- Maraval, P. “Épiphané, ‘Docteur des Iconoclastes.’” In Nicée II, 787–1987. Douze siècles d’images religieuses. Actes du colloque international Nicée II tenu au Collège de France, Paris les 2, 3, 4 Octobre 1986, ed. F. Boespflug and N. Lossky, 51–62. Paris, 1987.
- . Lieux saints et pèlerinages d’Orient. Histoire et géographie des origines à la conquête arabe. Paris, 1985.
- Marin, L. “The Order of Words and the Order of Things in Painting.” Visible Language 23(1989):189–203.
- . To Destroy Painting. Trans. M. Hjort. Chicago and London, 1995.
- Marini Clarelli, M. V. “I giorni della creazione nel ‘Genesi Cotton.’” OCP 50(1984):65–93.
- Mathews, T. F. The Clash of Gods. A Reinterpretation of Early Christian Art. Rev. ed. Princeton, 1999.
- . “Psychological Dimensions in the Art of Eastern Christendom.” In Art and Religion: Faith, Form and Reform, 1984 Paine Lectures in Religion, ed. O. Overby, 1–21. Columbia, Mo., 1986.
- Meinardus, O. F. A. “St. Michael’s Miracle of Khonae and Its Geographical Setting.” Εκκλησια καὶ Θεολογία 1(1980):459–69.
- . “A Typological Analysis of the Traditions Pertaining to Miraculous Icons.” In Wegzeichen. Festgabe zum 60. Geburtstag von Prof. Dr. Hermangild M. Lieberman OSA, ed. E. C. Suttner and C. Patock, 201–32. Würzburg, 1971.
- Mercati, G. Opere minori. Studi e testi, vol. 76. Vatican City, 1937.

- Meyendorff, J. "Iconographie de la Sagesse divine dans la tradition byzantine." CA 10(1959):259–77.
- . "Wisdom–Sophia: Contrasting Approaches to a Complex Theme." DOP 41(1987):391–401.
- Millénaire monastique du Mont-St.-Michel. 3 vols. Paris, 1971.
- Miller, E. "Fragments inédits de Théodore Le Lecteur et de Jean d'Égée." Revue archéologique 26(1873):393–403.
- Millet, G. Monuments byzantins de Mistra. Paris, 1910.
- . La peinture du moyen âge en Yougoslavie (Serbie, Macédonie et Monténégro). 4 vols. Paris, 1954–1969.
- Mondzain-Baudinet, M.-J. Image, icône, économie. Les sources byzantines de l'imaginaire contemporain. Paris, 1996.
- . "L'incarnation, l'image, la voix." Esprit (Feb. 1982):188–99.
- . Nicéphore le Patriarche: Discours contre les iconoclastes. Paris, 1990.
- Moorhead, J. "Iconoclasm, the Cross, and the Imperial Image." B 55(1985):65–79.
- Mortley, R. From Word to Silence. Vol. II. The Way of Negation, Christian and Greek. Theophaneia, vol. 31. Bonn, 1986.
- Müller, C.D.G. Die Engellehre der koptischen Kirche. Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der christlichen Frömmigkeit in Ägypten. Wiesbaden, 1959.
- Murray, Sister Charles. Rebirth and Afterlife. A Study of the Transmutation of Some Pagan Imagery in Early Christian Funerary Art. Oxford, 1981.
- Nees, L. "Image and Text: Excerpts from Jerome's 'De Trinitate' and the Maiestas Domini Miniature of the Gundohinus Gospels." Viator 18(1987):1–21.
- Nelson, R.S. The Iconography of the Prefaces in Byzantine Gospels. New York, 1980.
- Oikonomidès, N. "Some Remarks on the Apse Mosaics of St. Sophia." DOP 39(1985):111–15.
- Ostrogorsky, G. Studien zur Geschichte des byzantinischen Bilderstreites. Breslau, 1929.
- Otranto, G. "Il 'Liber de apparitione' e il culto di San Michele sul Gargano nella documentazione liturgica altomedievale." VetChr 18(1981):423–42.
- . "Il 'Liber de apparitione,' il santuario di San Michele sul Gargano e i Longobardi del Ducato di Benevento." In Santuari e politica nel mondo antico, ed. M. Sordi, 210–45. Milan, 1983.
- . "Per una metodologia della ricerca storico-agiografica: il Santuario micaelico del Gargano tra Bizantini e Longobardi." VetChr 25(1988):381–405.
- Otranto, G., and C. Carletti. Il santuario di S. Michele arcangelo sul Gargano dalle origine al X secolo. Bari, 1990.
- Ouspensky, L., and W. Lossky. The Meaning of the Icons. Boston, 1952.
- Pallas, D.I. "Eine Differenzierung unter den himmlischen Ordnungen (Ikono-graphische Analyse)." BZ 44(1971):55–60.
- . "Ο Χριστός ὡς ἡ Θεία Σοφία. Ἡ Εἰκονογραφικὴ Περιπέτεια μιᾶς θεολογικῆς Ἐννοιάς." DChAE 15(1989/90):119–42.

- Parry, K. Depicting the Word. Byzantine Iconophile Thought of the Eighth and Ninth Centuries. Leiden, 1996.
- Patlagean, E. "Ancient Byzantine Hagiography and Social History." In Saints and Their Cults. Studies in Religion, Sociology, Folklore, and History, ed. S. Wilson, trans. J. Hodgkin, 101–21. Cambridge, 1983. [= "Ancien hagiographie byzantine et histoire sociale." Annales 23(1968):106–26, and Structure sociale, famille, chrétienté à Byzance, IXe-XIe siècle. London, 1981. Item V.]
- Patrologia cursus completus, Series graeca*. Ed. J.-P. Migne. 161 vols. in 166 pts. Paris, 1857–1866.
- Patrologia cursus completus, Series latina*. Ed. J.-P. Migne. 221 vols. in 222 pts. Paris, 1844–1880.
- Peers, G. "Breathless, Speechless Images: On the Chalke Gate Epigram." In Hommages Margaret Head Thomson. Cahiers des études anciennes, vol. 32, ed. L. Finnete and A. P. Booth, 109–12. Trois Rivières, Québec, 1998.
- . "Holy Man, Supplicant and Donor: On Representations of the Miracle of the Archangel Michael at Chonae." Mediaeval Studies 59(1997):173–82.
- . "Imagination and Angelic Epiphany." BMGS 21(1997):113–31.
- . "Patriarchal Politics in the Paris Gregory (B.N. gr. 510)." JöB 47(1997): 51–71.
- . "The Sosthenion near Constantinople: John Malalas and Ancient Art." B 68(1998):110–20.
- Pelikan, J. Imago Dei. The Byzantine Apologia for Icons. Princeton, 1990.
- . Introduction to Maximus Confessor. Selected Writings, 1–13. New York, 1985.
- Perler, O. "Les théophanies dans les mosaïques de Sainte-Marie-Majeure à Rome." RivAC 50(1974):275–93.
- Peschlow, U. "Neue Beobachtungen zur Architektur und Ausstattung der Koimesiskirche in Iznik." Istanbuler Mitteilungen 22(1972):145–87.
- Pesci, B. "Il problema cronologico della Madonna di Aracoeli alla luce delle fonti." RivAC 18(1941):51–64.
- Peterson, E. "Zur Bedeutungsgeschichte von παρρησία." In Reinhold Seeberg Festschrift, ed. W. Koepf, 1:283–97. Leipzig, 1929.
- Petrucchi, A. Una versione greco-bizantina dell'Apparitio Sancti Michaelis in Monte Gargano. Rome, 1955.
- Petzold, A. "'His Face Like Lightning': Colour as Signifier in Representations of the Holy Women at the Tomb." Arte medievale 6/2(1992):149–55.
- Pitra, J. B. Spicilegio Solesmense complectens sanctorum patrum scriptorumque ecclesiasticorum anecdota hactenus opera. 4 vols. Paris, 1852–1858.
- Preger, T. Scriptores originum Constantinopolitanarum. 2 vols. Leipzig, 1901–1907; rp. New York, 1975.
- Ralles, G. A., and M. Potles. Σύνταγμα τῶν θείων καὶ ἱερῶν κανόνων. 6 vols. Athens, 1852–1859.

- Ramsay, W. The Church in the Roman Empire Before 170 A.D. New York and London, 1893.
- Rauch, J., F. Schenk zu Schweinsberg, and J.M. Wilm. "Die Limburger Stau-rothek." Das Münster 8(1955):201–40.
- Reallexikon für Antike und Christentum.* Stuttgart, 1950–.
- Reallexikon zur byzantinischen Kunst.* Stuttgart, 1963–.
- Reitzenstein, R. Poimandres. Studien zur griechisch- ägyptischen und frühchristlichen Literatur. Leipzig, 1904.
- Rintelen, W. v. Kultgeographische Studien in der Italia Byzantina. Untersuchungen über die Kulte des Erzengels Michael und der Madonna di Costantinopoli in Süd-italien. Meisenheim am Glan, 1968.
- . "Kult- und Legendenwanderung von Ost nach West im frühen Mittelal-ter." Saeculum 22(1971):71–100.
- Robert, L. Hellenica. Recueil d'épigraphie de numismatique et d'antiquités grecques, vol. XI–XII. Paris, 1960.
- . Villes d'Asie Mineure. Études de géographie antique. Paris, 1935.
- Rohland, J. P. Der Erzengel Michael. Arzt und Feldherr. Zwei Aspekte des vor- und frühbyzantinischen Michaelkults. Leiden, 1977.
- Rojdestvensky, O. Le culte de saint Michel et le moyen age latin. Paris, 1922.
- Romanelli, P., and P.J. Nordhagen. S. Maria Antiqua. Rome, 1964.
- Roques, R. Introduction to Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, La Hiérarchie Céleste. SC vol. 58, ed. G. Heil and M. de Gandillac, v–xcvi. Paris, 1958.
- . L'univers dionysien. Structure hiérarchique du monde selon le Pseudo-Denys. Paris, 1954; rp. Paris, 1983.
- Ross, M. C. Catalogue of the Byzantine and Early Mediaeval Antiquities in the Dum-barton Oaks Collection. Volume One. Metalwork, Ceramics, Glass, Glyptics, Paint-ing. Washington, D.C., 1962.
- Rouche, M. "Le combat des saintes anges et des démons: La victoire de Saint Michel." In Santi e demoni nell'alto medioevo occidentale (secoli v–xi), Settimane vol. 26, I:533–71. Spoleto, 1989.
- Rowland, C. The Open Heaven. A Study of Apocalyptic in Judaism and Early Chris-tianity. New York, 1982.
- Ruggieri, V. Byzantine Religious Architecture (582–867): Its History and Structural Elements. Orientalia christiana analecta, vol. 237. Rome, 1991.
- Sansterre, J.-M. "La parole, le texte et l'image selon les auteurs byzantins des épo-ques iconoclastes et posticonoclastes." In Testo e immagine nell'alto medioevo, Settimane vol. 41, I:197–243. Spoleto, 1994.
- Saradi-Mendelovici, H. "Christian Attitudes toward Pagan Monuments in Late Antiquity and Their Legacy in Later Byzantine Centuries." DOP 44(1990): 47–61.
- Saxer, V. "Jalons pour servir à l'histoire du culte de l'archange Saint Michel en ori-ent jusqu'à l'iconoclasme." In Noscere sancta. Miscellanea in memoria di Agostino Amore, 357–426. Rome, 1985.

- Scarpata, G. Parrësia. Storia del termine e delle sue traduzione in latino. Brescia, 1963.
- Schmit, F. I. Die Koimesis-Kirche von Nikaia, das Bauwerk und die Mosaiken. Berlin and Leipzig, 1927.
- Schönborn, C. von. L'icône du Christ. Fondements théologiques élaborées entre le Ier et le IIer Concile de Nicée (325–787). Fribourg, 1976.
- Ševčenko, I. "Hagiography of the Iconoclast Period." In Iconoclasm. Papers given at the Ninth Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies, University of Birmingham, March 1975, ed. A. Bryer and J. Herrin, 113–31. Birmingham, 1977.
- Shapiro, G. "Pipe Dreams: Eternal Recurrence and Simulacrum in Foucault's Ekphrasis of Magritte." Word & Image 13(1997):69–76.
- Shepherd, A. R. R. "Pagan Cults of Angels in Roman Asia Minor." Talanta 12 / 13 (1980 / 1):77–101.
- Simon, M. Verus Israel. Étude sur le relation entre chrétiens et juifs dans l'empire romain (135–425). Paris, 1948.
- Simson, O. von. Sacred Fortress. Byzantine Art and Statecraft in Ravenna. 2d ed. Chicago, 1976.
- Smith, R. R. R. "Myth and Allegory in the Sebasteion." Aphrodisias Papers. Recent Work on Architecture and Sculpture. Ed. C. Rouché and K. T. Erim, 89–100. Ann Arbor, 1990.
- Snipes, K. "An Unedited Treatise of Michael Psellos on the Iconography of Angels and on the Religious Festivals Celebrated on Each Day of the Week." In Gonimos. Neoplatonic and Byzantine Studies Presented to Leendert G. Westerlink at 75, ed. J. Duffy and J. Peradotto, 189–205. Buffalo, 1988.
- Sokolowski, F. "Sur le culte d'angelos dans le paganisme grec et romain." HTR 53(1960):225–29.
- Sörries, R. Die Bilder der Orthodoxen im Kampf gegen den Arianismus. Eine Apologie der orthodoxen Christologie und Trinitätslehre gegenüber der arianischen Häresie dargestellt an den ravenattischen Mosaiken und Bildern des 6. Jahrhunderts. Bern, 1983.
- Soteriou, M. "Ἀμιπρόσωπος εἰκὼν τοῦ Βυζαντινοῦ Μουσείου Ἀθηνῶν ἐκ τοῦ Ἡπειροῦ." DChAE 4(1959):135–43.
- . "Παλαιολογεῖος εἰκὼν τοῦ Ἀρχαγγελοῦ Μιχαήλ." DChAE 1(1959):80–86.
- Spain, S. "'The Promised Blessing': The Iconography of the Mosaics of S. Maria Maggiore." ArtB 61(1979):518–40.
- Sparks, B. D. The Sanctus in the Eucharistic Prayer. Cambridge, 1991.
- Speck, P. "Ein Bild des Erzengels Michael in Ephesos (Anthologia Palatina I,36)." In Varia II, ΠΟΙΚΙΛΑ ΒΥΖΑΝΤΙΝΑ, vol. 6, 355–62. Bonn, 1987.
- . Ich bin's nicht, Kaiser Konstantin ist es gewesen. Die Legenden vom Einfluß des Teufels, des Juden und des Moslem auf den Ikonoklasmus. ΠΟΙΚΙΛΑ ΒΥΖΑΝΤΙΝΑ, vol. 10. Bonn, 1990.
- Stein, D. Der Beginn des byzantinischen Bilderstreits und seine Entwicklung bis in der 40er Jahre des 8. Jahrhunderts. Munich, 1980.

- Struever, N. "Fables of Power." Representations 4(1983):108–27.
- Stuhlfauth, G. Die Engel in der altchristlichen Kunst. Freiburg, 1897.
- Talbot Rice, D., et al. The Church of Haghia Sophia at Trebizond. Edinburgh, 1968.
- Testini, P. Archeologia cristiana. Nozioni generali dalle origini alla fine del sec. VI. Rome, 1958.
- Thierry, N. Haut moyen-âge en Cappadoce. Les églises de la région de Çavuşin. Paris, 1983.
- Thümmel, H. Bilderlehre und Bilderstreit. Arbeiten zur Auseinandersetzung über die Ikone und ihre Begründung vornehmlich im 8. und 9. Jahrhundert. Würzburg, 1991.
- . Die Frühgeschichte der ostkirchlichen Bilderlehre. Texte und Untersuchungen zur Zeit vor dem Bilderstreit. TU vol. 139. Berlin, 1992.
- Thunberg, L. "Early Christian Interpretations of the Three Angels in Gen. 18." Studia Patristica 8(1966):560–70.
- Travis, J. In Defense of the Faith. The Theology of Patriarch Nikephoros of Constantinople. Brookline, Mass., 1984.
- Trombley, F. R. Hellenic Religion and Christianization c. 370–529. 2d ed. 2 vols. Leiden, New York and Köln, 1995.
- Tronzo, W. The Via Latina Catacomb. Imitation and Discontinuity in Fourth-Century Roman Painting. University Park and London, 1986.
- Tsirpanlis, C. N. "Some Reflections on Philoxenos' Christology." Greek Orthodox Theological Review 25(1980):152–62.
- Turmel, J. "L'angélogologie depuis le faux Denys l'Aréopagite." Révue d'histoire et de littérature religieuse 4(1899):289–309, 414–34, 536–62.
- . "Histoire de l'angélogologie des temps apostoliques à la fin du Ve siècle." Révue d'histoire et de littérature religieuse 3(1898):289–308, 407–34, 533–52.
- Turner, V., and M. Turner. Image and Pilgrimage in Christian Culture. Anthropological Perspectives. New York, 1978.
- Underwood, P. A. "The Evidence of Restorations in the Sanctuary Mosaics of the Church of the Dormition at Nicaea." DOP 13(1959):235–44.
- Vessey, M. "The Demise of the Christian Writer and the Remaking of 'Late Antiquity': From H.-I. Marrou's Saint Augustine (1938) to Peter Brown's Holy Man (1983)." J ECS 6(1998):377–411.
- Viller, M. "Aux sources de la spiritualité de S. Maxime: les oeuvres d'Evagre le Pontique." Revue d'ascétique et de mystique 11(1930):156–84, 239–68, 331–36.
- Volbach, W. F. Early Christian Art. Trans. C. Ligota. New York, 1961.
- . Elfenbeinarbeiten der Spätantike und des frühen Mittelalters. 3d ed. Mainz am Rhein, 1976.
- Volk, R. Der medizinische Inhalt der Schriften des Michael Psellos. Munich, 1990.
- Vryonis, S., Jr. The Decline of Medieval Hellenism in Asia Minor and the Process of Islamization from the Eleventh through the Fifteenth Century. Berkeley, 1971.

- . "The Panegyris of the Byzantine Saint: A Study in the Nature of a Medieval Institution, Its Origins and Fate." In The Byzantine Saint, ed. S. Hackel, 196–226. London, 1981.
- Walter, J. "St. Demetrius: The Myroblytos of Thessalonika." Eastern Churches Review 5(1973):157–78. [= C. Walter. Studies in Byzantine Iconography. London, 1977. Item V.]
- Weitzmann, K. "The Classical in Byzantine Art as a Mode of Individual Expression." In Byzantine Art. An European Art. Lectures, 149–77. Athens, 1966. [= K. Weitzmann, Studies in Classical and Byzantine Manuscript Illumination, ed. H. L. Kessler, 151–75. Chicago, 1971.]
- . "The Genesis Mosaics of San Marco and the Cotton Genesis Miniatures." In O. Demus, The Mosaics of San Marco. Part 2: The Thirteenth Century. Volume One: Text, 105–42. Chicago and London, 1984.
- . The Miniatures of the Sacra Parallela. Parisinus graecus 923. Princeton, 1979.
- . The Monastery of Saint Catherine at Mount Sinai. The Icons. Volume One: From the Sixth to the Tenth Century. Princeton, 1976.
- . "Observations on the Cotton Genesis Fragments." In Late Classical and Mediaeval Studies in Honor of Albert Mathias Friend, Jr., ed. K. Weitzmann et al., 112–31. Princeton, 1955.
- Weitzmann, K., and G. Galavaris. The Monastery of Saint Catherine at Mount Sinai. The Illuminated Greek Manuscripts. Volume One: From the Ninth to the Eleventh Century. Princeton, 1990.
- Weitzmann, K., and H. L. Kessler. The Cotton Genesis. British Museum Codex Cotton Otho B.VI. Princeton, 1986.
- . The Frescoes of the Dura Europos Synagogue and Christian Art. Washington, D.C., 1990.
- Werner, M. "On the Origin of Zoanthropomorphic Evangelist Symbols: The Early Christian Background." Studies in Iconography 10(1984–1986):1–35.
- . "On the Origin of Zoanthropomorphic Evangelist Symbols: The Early Medieval and Later Coptic, Nubian, Ethiopian and Latin Evidence." Studies in Iconography 13(1989–1990):1–47.
- Wharton Epstein, A. "The Problem of Provincialism: Byzantine Monasteries in Cappadocia and Monks in South Italy." Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes 42(1979):28–46.
- . Tokali Kilise. Tenth-century Metropolitan Art in Byzantine Cappadocia. Washington, D.C., 1986.
- Wiegand, E. Review of T. Schmit, Die Koimesis-Kirche von Nikaia, das Bauwerk und die Mosaiken, Berlin and Leipzig, 1927. Deutsche Literaturzeitung 53(1927): 2601–11.
- . "Zur Monogramminschrift der Theotokos-(Koimesis)Kirche von Nicaea." B 6(1931):411–20.

- Williams, A. L. "The Cult of the Angels at Colossae." JTS 10(1909):413–38.
- Wilsdorf, H. "Zur Staurothek vom Limburg." BF 18(1992):197–208.
- Wolska-Conus, W. "Stéphanos d'Athènes et Stéphanos d'Alexandrie. Essai d'identification et de biographie." REB 47(1989):5–89.
- Wulff, O. Altchristliche und byzantinische Kunst. Munich, 1914.
- . Cherubim, Throne und Seraphim. Ikonographie der ersten Engelshierarchie in der christlichen Kunst. Altenburg, 1894.

INDEX

- Abraham, 30, 88, 139–40, 153; and Philoxenia, 36–41, 58
Adversus Constantinum Caballinum, 104n42, 105n43
 Agathias, 62, 95–98, 99, 100, 102, 125, 192, 201, 202, 205
 Alahan (Seleucia), 45
 Alexandria, 30, 32
 Anastasius Sinaïtes, 100
 Anastos, Milton, 140
 “angelic life,” 68, 126, 147, 149 angelolatry, 8–11, 60, 75, 80, 127, 137–40, 153, 154 angelology, heretical, 112
 angels: anthropomorphism of, 93, 187–93; changeability of, 16, 17, 19, 21, 28, 107–8, 113–14, 116–8, 184–5; devotion to, Christian, 4, 6–11, 13, 15, 16, 17, 126; —, Coptic, 7; —, Jewish, 6, 8; —, pagan, 6, 8, 9–10; elemental, 6–8, 9, 11, 90, 102, 106, 107, 108, 109, 113, 116, 117, 128, 129, 144, 146, 149, 157, 158, 159, 163, 164, 167, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 177, 178, 179, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 192, 193, 195–96; epigrams on, 60, 61–62, 95–103, 122, 196, 201–202, 204–06; epiphany of, 1, 5, 16, 56, 58, 73, 77, 78, 79, 88, 149–52, 155–56, 157–93; as gods, 15, 59, 68, 70, 79, 138, 168n32, 195; hagiographies of, 141–56, 157–93; and healing, 142, 145–46, 154, 155–56, 178, 179; hierarchy of, 4–5, 11, 41, 112–13, 120; iconography of (see iconography of angels); and liturgy, 47–49; materiality of, 9698, 102–3, 107–8; nature of, 1–6, 11, 16, 17, 19, 20, 58, 107–9, 112–13, 116, 159–60; and relics, 17, 77, 119, 120, 123, 142, 165, 167, 168–69, 175–78, 192–93; in scripture, 1–2, 3–4, 5, 6, 16, 17, 19, 20, 23, 35, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 56, 139, 140, 180, 181, 182, 184, 191, 193; symbolic images of, 90–125; symbolic interpretation of, 91–99, 100, 103, 104, 105, 113–19, 121, 124, 125, 130, 131, 136–39, 141, 180, 192
 Antinoë, 32
 Apatheia, 69, 94
 Aphrodisias, Imperial Sebasteion, 32;
 Theatre, 96n24
 Archanes (Crete), Church of the Archangels, 151n67
 Archippus, 144, 146–52, 153, 154, 158, 160, 180–82, 186, 195

- Ark of the Covenant, 43, 99, 111–12, 129–31
- Athanasius of Alexandria, 36n44, 142
- Augustine, 30, 31
- Auzépy, Marie-France, 143, 150, 151, 152
- Basil of Caesarea, 58n74, 97n26, 140–41, 189
- Bawīt, Chapel XXVI, 46n59
- Belting, Hans, 16
- Bezaleel, 111
- Brock, Sebastian, 78
- Cameron, Averil, 13, 14, 197
- Carthage, Council of (ca. 400?), 175n58
- Chairetopa, 161, 163
- cherubim, 4, 19, 35, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 91, 99, 111–13, 114, 119–20, 127, 129–31; confusion with seraphim, 48
- Chonae, 8, 9–10, 11, 15, 53, 143–51, 154, 156, 157–93, 195, 206n1; icon of miracle of, 53–55, 154, 180; pilgrimage to, 178–79
- Christian Topography*. See ‘Cosmas Indicopleustes’
- Christology, 66–67n12, 106–7, 112
- Chrysippus, 3–4, 16, 148n57
- Chrysostom, John, 4n20, 23–24, 35–36, 48
- circumscription, 106–110, 113
- Clark, Elizabeth, 70
- Clement of Alexandria, 2n5, 31n32
- Colossae, 8–10, 163. See also Chonae
- Colossians, Epistle to, 8, 9, 43, 75, 147
- Constantine V, 14, 80, 133–36
- Constantine VI, 14
- Constantine Cephalas, 96
- Constantinople (Istanbul): Chalke Gate, 13, 87n57; Council of Hagia Sophia (815), 64n5; Eusebios, Church of the Archangel Michael, 154–56, 186–87; Hagia Sophia, 49n65, 52; Oxeia, Church of St. John the Baptist, 142, 188; Sosthenium, 96
- Constitutiones Apostolicae*, 4n20
- Contra Judaeos literature, 49, 83–84n47, 100–101, 110–11, 127–28, 130, 197
- I Corinthians, 149–50
- Cornelius the Centurion, 189
- Cosmas and Damian, Sts., 189, 190
- ‘Cosmas Indicopleustes,’ 20–21, 45–46n57, 52–53
- Cotton Genesis, 30–33, 38, 76
- Council of Trullo (692), 102n39
- cross, and Iconoclasm, 85, 86–87, 152
- Cyril of Alexandria, 176
- Cyril of Jerusalem, 4n20
- Cyrus and John, Sts., 176–77, 190–91
- Dagron, Gilbert, 176, 189, 190
- D’Alverny, Marie-Thérèse, 30, 31
- Damaskenos Stoudite, 145n47, 151n67
- Daniel, Book of, 35, 148–49n57, 152, 180, 182, 191
- David-Garedja, Georgia, Monastery of Dodo, 46n59
- Deuteronomy, 3–4
- Diakrinomenus, John, 72n27
- dominations, 5, 19, 42, 43, 82
- Egratius, 189–90
- Eikonismos, 122n85
- Elijah, 167
- Enoch, Book of, 6
- Epiphanides, 128
- Epiphanius of Salamis, 61–62, 64–67, 69, 74, 78–81, 90, 128–33, 135, 136, 137–39, 153, 203
- equivocation, 119–25, 127
- Eusebius of Caesarea, 2n6, 101n35
- Evagrius Ponticus, 69–70, 74, 89, 94–95
- Exodus, 20, 35, 110, 111, 119, 129–31, 169, 181, 184
- Ezekiel, 1, 35, 43, 46, 91
- Faustus Rhegiensis, 109–10n51
- Foucault, Michel, 123–24
- Gabriel, Archangel, 76, 145n46
- Gargano, Monte, 157, 165; miracle of Michael at, 165–71, 178, 184, 186
- Gennadius of Marseilles, 109n51
- Ginzburg, Carlo, 124
- Gregory I (Pope), 184n79
- Gregory of Nazianzus, 3, 48n63

Gregory of Nyssa, 3, 181n71

Güllü Dere, 48n63, 154n74

Hebrews, Epistle to, 1, 131

Heraclius, 172

Hiereia, Iconoclastic council of (754),

64n5, 81, 85, 105, 140

Hierotheus, 5

Holy Spirit, symbolic representation of, 71, 103n41

Hyacinthus, 43n55

Hypatius of Ephesus, 98–100, 102

Iconoclasm, 13–14, 17, 61, 62–65, 74–75,

80–88, 89, 90, 96, 102, 103, 104, 106,

110, 120, 126–28, 130–41, 143, 150, 151,

153, 154, 96, 197, 201

iconoclasts, 15, 59, 60, 67, 68, 80–88, 89,

100, 102, 103, 105, 106, 110, 114, 120, 122,

126–28, 130–41, 151, 153, 154

iconography of angels, 16–59, 63, 76–77, 96, 198–205; as anthropomorphic (without wings), 21–23, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40n51,

41, 46, 58; as bearded, 23; and birds,

28n25; Christian invention, 33–36; as cloud, 58; as color, 58; as days, 30, 31, 32, 33; literal interpretation of, 61–88; as nikes, 25, 26, 28–29n27; pagan models,

25–33, 34, 36, 40, 59, 60, 126; as pagan princes, 76–77; pagan style, 49, 50, 53;

as personifications, 26, 28, 29n27, 30,

33n38, 59; Philoxenia, 30, 36–41, 58; as psyches, 30n28, 31; as seasons, 28, 29;

style as, 49–55; symbolic interpretation of, 19, 21, 36, 37, 40, 41, 58, 61–62, 77,

88; as winged men, 16, 18, 19–20,

23–25, 26–27, 30, 33, 35, 36, 37–38, 40,

41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 56, 58, 60, 96, 97,

124, 180, 187

iconophiles, 14, 62, 64, 65, 74, 90, 91, 95,

97, 98, 99, 101, 102, 103–41, 143, 152, 153,

154, 156

idolatry, 10, 11, 15, 60, 63, 68, 79, 80, 86,

89, 100, 112, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, 134,

137–40, 151, 152, 153, 154

Ignatius the Deacon, 130, 134n17

Ihm, Christa, 46

images: in Christian history, 132–33, 136;

consubstantial, 137; of emperor, 135; ethical, 69, 73n30, 78, 86, 138–41, 153–54, 156; eucharist as, 87–88, 137n24; and healing, 142–56; likeness in, 16, 19, 66,

113–25, 135–36; and prototype, 66–67,

114–25, 127, 131–35; and relics, 142; and text, 84–86, 121–25, 131–32; in worship, 11, 14–16, 64, 67, 99–100, 104, 125,

126–42, 154–55, 196–97

Irene (empress), 14

Irenaeus, 33–35n40

Irene of Chrysobalanton, 189

Isaiah, 1, 5, 35, 44, 46, 53, 86, 152, 184

James of Edessa, 75–76n34

John of Damascus, 3, 41n53, 105–15,

113–16, 118

John of Gabala, 74–75, 76

John of Gaza, 102–3

John of Thessalonike, 15, 194, 195, 196

John the Grammarian, 70n20

Joshua, 152, 182, 191

Jubilees, Book of, 6

Justin Martyr, 36n44

Kitzinger, Ernst, 50

Laodicea, 147; Council of, 10, 15, 70, 75

Leo I (pope), 32n33

Leo III (emperor), 13, 14

Leontius of Neapolis, 110

Leo of Catania, 152, 154, 156

Leuken, Wilhelm, 10

Limburg, Reliquary of the True Cross,
46n57

Macarius Magnes, 15, 59, 67–70, 74, 78,

79, 80, 88, 101–2, 136–40, 153, 196

Macarius the Great, 3, 194

Maccabees, Book of, 186n83

Magritte, René, 123–24

Maguire, Henry, 52

Malachi, 86

Mango, Cyril, 187

Manichaeans, 130

Marini Clarelli, Maria, 31, 32

- Matthew, Gospel of, 191, 192
 Mavropus, John, 201–3
 Mayragometsi, John, 100n34, 110n53
 Meleager, 96
 Menologium of Basil II, 154n74, 163, 164
 Methodius of Olympus, 2–3, 41, 90
 Metrophanes of Smyrna, 145n46
 Michael III, 14, 155
 Michael, Archangel, 3–4, 6, 7–11, 15, 17, 18, 53, 54, 62, 76, 77, 95, 96–98, 143–56, 157–93, 201–3; and fire, 8, 172–74, 181, 183; icons of, 18, 53–55, 198–200, 203, 204, 205
 Michael Choniates, 179n69
 Michael of Stoudios, 125n93, 155n75
Miracles of St. Artemius, 142, 143, 154, 188, 190
 Monophysitism, 63, 71, 74
 Moscow, Chludov Psalter (Historical Museum cod. 139), 82–83n47, 139n30
 Moses, 110–11, 152, 165, 169, 181, 182, 184

Narration of the Miracle Accomplished at Chonae by the Archangel Michael, 143–52, 158, 161–65, 178
 Naucratus, 82n46, 121
 Nicaea (Iznik), Church of the Dormition, 42–43, 64, 82–88, 104, 120–24; Second Council of, 14, 71, 72, 74, 75n33, 105n43, 194, 195
 Nicephorus, patriarch, 64n5, 67, 69, 80, 81, 105, 105n43, 112–13, 116–20, 128–33, 135, 136, 137–40, 153, 174
 Nicetas Stethatos, 110n51
 Nilus of Ankyra, 189
 Nilus Scholasticus, 98, 100, 125, 205

 Origen, 67

 Pachymeres, George, 3n13
 Palaiochorio (Cyprus), Church of Sts. Cosmas and Damian, 151n67
 Pantaleon, 7, 143n41, 145n47, 154–56, 160, 185–86 parrêsia, 144, 145, 146, 149, 159
 Philes, Manuel, 205–6

 Philo, 31n32
 Philoxenus of Mabbug, 71–74, 78, 79, 103n41, 145
 Photius, 105, 136n20
 Porphyry, 100–102, 195
 powers, 5, 19, 41, 42, 43, 82, 120, 121 principalities, 5, 19, 41, 42, 43, 82
 Procopius of Gaza, 36–37n44 psalms, 1, 3, 85, 86, 149
 Psellus, Michael, 7–8, 157, 159–60, 171–75, 179n70, 184, 188, 203–4
 Pseudo-Athanasius, 2n6, 100, 142
 Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, 3, 4–6, 16, 49, 87, 90–95, 99, 102, 105, 115, 116, 118, 125, 177, 192, 205

 Qumran, 150n61

 Ramsey, William, 161
 Raphael, Archangel, 17
 Ravenna, S. Apollinare in Classe, 76; S. Apollinare Nuovo, 58n73; S. Vitale, 28–30, 33, 38–40, 76 retro-motivation, 164–65, 179, 191
 Revelation, Book of, 35, 46, 86
 Rojdestvensky, Olga, 185
 Rome, Catacomb of Priscilla, 21–23; Sta. Maria Antiqua, 47n59; Sta. Maria Maggiore, 37; Sta. Pudenziana, 33; Via Latina Catacomb, 20, 37

 Sacra Parallela (B. N. Gr. 923), 139–40n30
 Second Commandment, 110, 129–30
 seraphim, 4, 5, 19, 35, 43, 44, 46–49, 53, 86; confusion with cherubim, 48 Severus of Antioch, 60, 71, 74–77, 78, 81, 90, 103n41, 176, 196, 203 sight, importance for iconophiles, 104–5, 125
 Sissinius, 143n41, 153n73, 154, 181, 182, 183n77
 Sophronius, 176–77
 Stephen of Bostra, 110
 Stephen the Deacon, 133
 Stephen the Younger, 133–35
 Stuhlfauth, Georg, 33

Sykeon (Galatia), 171
 Symeon Metaphrastes, 143n41, 154, 158,
 164, 183
 Symeon of Thessalonike, 110n51, 203–4n14

 Tarasius, 75n33, 134n17
 Temple of Solomon, 43, 131
 Tertullian, 35
 tetramorph, 35, 43, 46
 Thecla, 176
 Theodora, Mother of Michael III, 14, 155
 Theodore Lector/Anagnostes, 71
 Theodore of Stoudios, 87, 105, 113n59, 121,
 122, 135–36n20
 Theodore of Sykeon, 174–75, 189n96
 Theodore Psalter (B. L. Add. 19.352),
 149n58
 Theodoret of Cyrrhus, 10, 15, 59, 70, 75
 Theodotus, 2
 Theophanes the Confessor, 71
 Theophilus (patriarch) 70
 Thessalonike, H. David, 46; H.
 Demetrius, 58n73

Tobias, 17 thrones, 4, 19
 Tokali Kilise, 47n59
 Trebizond, H. Sophia, 44n56
 Trisagion, 47–48, 85, 86
 Tumba, Mt. (Normandy), 170
 Turner, Victor and Mary, 178

 Venice, S. Marco, 31n33
 Vienna Genesis, 40n51, 43 virtues, 4, 19, 42, 43, 82

 Weitzmann, Kurt, 53
 wings, meaning of, 23–25, 28, 35–36, 40, 58, 60, 63; on Christ, 24; on John the Baptist, 24; on the Virgin Mary, 24n19

 Xanthopoulos, Nicephorus Kallistus, 204–5, 206

 Zacharias, 1

Text: 12 / 14.5 Adobe Garamond
Display: Perpetua and Adobe Garamond
Composition: Impressions Book and Journal Services, Inc.
Printing and binding: Malloy Lithographing, Inc.

The Books of Enoch

The Book of Enoch (Enoch 1)

The book of the secrets of Enoch (Enoch 2)

The hebrew book of Enoch (Enoch 3)

Introduction

The Book of Enoch (also 1 Enoch[1]) is an ancient Jewish religious work, ascribed to Enoch, the great-grandfather of Noah. It is not regarded as scripture by Jews or any Christian group, apart from the Ethiopian Orthodox Church, which to this day regards it to be canonical.

Western scholars currently assert that its older sections (mainly in the Book of the Watchers) date from about 300 BC and the latest part (Book of Parables) probably was composed at the end of the 1st century BC.[2] However, Ethiopian scholars generally hold that Ge'ez is the language of the original from which the Greek and Aramaic copies were made, pointing out that it is the only language in which the complete text has yet been found[3].

It is wholly extant only in the Ge'ez language, with Aramaic fragments from the Dead Sea Scrolls and a few Greek and Latin fragments. There is no consensus among Western scholars about the original language: some propose Aramaic, others Hebrew, while the probable thesis according to E. Isaac is that 1 Enoch, as Daniel, was composed partially in Aramaic and partially in Hebrew[4]:6.

A short section of 1 Enoch (1En1:9) is quoted in the New Testament (Letter of Jude 1:14-15), and there apparently attributed to "Enoch the Seventh from Adam" (1En60:8). It is argued that all the writers of the New Testament were familiar with it and were influenced by it in thought and diction.[5] The first part of Book of Enoch describes the fall of the Watchers, the angels who fathered the Nephilim. The remainder of the book describes Enoch's visits to Heaven in the form of travels, visions and dreams, and his revelations.

The book consists of five quite distinct major sections (see each section for details):

The Book of the Watchers (1 Enoch 1 – 36)

The Book of Parables of Enoch (1 Enoch 37 – 71) (Also called the Similitudes of Enoch)

The Astronomical Book (1 Enoch 72 – 82) (Also called the Book of the Heavenly Luminaries or Book of Luminaries.)

The Book of Dream Visions (1 Enoch 83 – 90) (Also called the Book of Dreams)

The Epistle of Enoch (1 Enoch 91 – 108)

The shared view[6] is that these five sections were originally independent works (with different dates of composition), themselves a product of much editorial arrangement, and were only later redacted into what we now call 1 Enoch. This view is now opposed only by a few authors who maintain the literary integrity of the Book of Enoch, one of the most recent (1990) being the Ethiopian Wossenie Yifru[3]. Józef Milik has suggested that the Book of Giants found amongst the Dead Sea Scrolls should be part of the collection, appearing after the Book of Watchers in place of the Book of Parables, but for various reasons Milik's theory has not been widely accepted.

Canonicity in Judaism

Although evidently widely known at the time of the Development of the Jewish Bible canon, 1Enoch was excluded from both the formal canon of the Tanakh and the typical canon of the Septuagint and therefore also the writings known today as the Apocrypha.[7] [8] One possible reason for Jewish rejection of the book might be the textual nature of several early sections of the book which make use of material from the Torah, for example 1En1 is a midrash of Deuteronomy 33. [9][10]. The content, particularly detailed description of fallen angels, would also be a reason for rejection from the Hebrew canon at this period - as illustrated by the comments of Trypho the Jew when debating with Justin Martyr on this subject. Trypho: "The utterances of God are holy, but your expositions are mere contrivances, as is plain from what has been explained by you; nay, even blasphemies, for you assert that angels sinned and revolted from God." (Dialogue 79) [11]

THE BOOK OF ENOCH

translation by M. Knibb of the Ethiopian text in the S.O.A.S. Library at the University of London.

Section I. Chapters I-XXXVI

BOOK OF THE WATCHERS

1.1 These are the words of the blessing of Enoch; according to which he blessed the chosen and righteous who must be present on the day of distress, which is appointed, for the removal of all the wicked and impious.

1.2 And Enoch began his story and said:

-

There was a righteous man whose eyes were opened by the Lord, and he saw a Holy vision in the Heavens, which the Angels showed to me. And I heard everything from them, and I understood what I saw: but not for this generation, but for a distant generation that will come.

1.3 Concerning the Chosen I spoke; and I uttered a parable concerning them: The Holy and Great One will come out of his dwelling.

1.4 And the Eternal God will tread from there upon Mount Sinai, and he will appear with his Host, and will appear in the strength of his power from Heaven.

1.5 And all will be afraid, and the Watchers will shake, and fear and great trembling will seize them, up to the ends of the earth.

1.6 And the high mountains will be shaken; and the high hills will be laid low and will melt like wax in a flame.

1.7 And the earth will sink, and everything that is on the earth will be destroyed, and there will be judgment upon all, and upon all the righteous.

1.8 But for the righteous: He will make peace, and He will keep safe the Chosen, and mercy will be upon them.

They will all belong to God, and will prosper and be blessed, and the light of God will shine on them.

1.9 And behold! He comes with ten thousand Holy Ones; to execute judgment upon them and to destroy the impious, and to contend with all flesh concerning everything that the sinners and the impious have done and wrought against Him.

2.1 Contemplate all the events in the sky; how the lights in the sky do not change their courses, how each rises and sets in order, each at its proper time, and they do not transgress their law.

2.2 Consider the earth and understand from the work that is done upon it, from the beginning to the end, that no work of God changes as it becomes manifest.

2.3 Consider the summer and the winter; how the whole earth is full of water and the clouds and dew and rain rest upon it.

3.1 Contemplate and see how all the trees appear withered and all their leaves are stripped - with the exception of the fourteen trees, which are not stripped, which remain with the old leaves until the new come after two or three years.

4.1 And, again, contemplate the days of summer; how at its beginning the Sun is above it. You seek shelter and shade because of the heat of the Sun and the earth burns with scorching heat, and you cannot tread upon the earth or upon a rock, because of its heat.

5.1 Contemplate how the trees are covered with green leaves and bear fruit. And understand, in respect of everything, and perceive how He Who Lives Forever made all these things for you.

5.2 And how His works are before Him in each succeeding year, and all His works serve Him and do not change; but as God has decreed - so everything is done.

5.3 And consider how the seas and rivers together complete their tasks.

5.4 But you have not persevered in, nor observed, the Law of the Lord. But you have transgressed and have spoken proud and hard words with your unclean mouth against his majesty. You hard of heart! You will not have peace!

5.5 And because of this you will curse your days, and the years of your life you will destroy. And the eternal curse will increase and you will not receive mercy.

5.6 In those days, you will transform your name into an eternal curse to all the righteous. And they will curse you sinners forever.

5.7 For the chosen; there will be light, joy, and peace, and they will inherit the earth. But for you, the impious, there will be a curse.

5.8 When wisdom is given to the chosen they will all live, and will not again do wrong, either through forgetfulness, or through pride. But those who possess wisdom will be humble.

5.9 They will not again do wrong, and they will not be judged in all the days of their life, and they will not die of wrath or anger. But they will complete the number of the days of their life. And their life will grow in peace, and the years of their joy will increase in gladness and eternal peace; all the days of their life.

6.1 And it came to pass, when the sons of men had increased, that in those days there were born to them fair and beautiful daughters.

6.2 And the Angels, the sons of Heaven, saw them and desired them. And they said to one another: "Come, let us choose for ourselves wives, from the children of men, and let us beget, for ourselves, children."

6.3 And Semyaza, who was their leader, said to them:

"I fear that you may not wish this deed to be done and that I alone will pay for this great sin."

6.4 And they all answered him, and said:

"Let us all swear an oath, and bind one-another with curses, so not to alter this plan, but to carry out this plan effectively."

6.5 Then they all swore together and all bound one another with curses to it.

6.6 And they were, in all, two hundred and they came down on Ardis, which is the summit of Mount Hermon. And they called the mountain Hermon because on it they swore and bound one another with curses.

6.7 And these are the names of their leaders:

Semyaza, who was their leader, Urakiba (Araziel) , Rameel, Kokabiel, Tamiel, Ramiel, Daniel, Ezeqiel, Baraqiel, Asael, Armaros, Batariel, Ananel, Zaqiel, Samsiel, Satariel, Turiel, Yomiel, Sariel. (see Ch 8 & Ch 69)

6.8 These are the leaders of the two hundred Angels and of all the others with them.

7.1 And they took wives for themselves and everyone chose for himself one each. And they began to go into them and were promiscuous with them. And they taught them charms and spells, and they showed them the cutting of roots and trees.

7.2 And they became pregnant and bore large giants. And their height was three thousand cubits.

7.3 These devoured all the toil of men; until men were unable to sustain them.

7.4 And the giants turned against them in order to devour men.

7.5 And they began to sin against birds, and against animals, and against reptiles, and against fish, and they devoured one another's flesh, and drank the blood from it.

7.6 Then the Earth complained about the lawless ones.

8.1 And Azazel taught men to make swords, and daggers, and shields, and breastplates. And he showed them the things after these, and the art of making them; bracelets, and ornaments, and the art of making up the eyes, and of beautifying the eyelids, and the most precious stones, and all kinds of coloured dyes. And the world was changed.

8.2 And there was great impiety, and much fornication, and they went astray, and all their ways became corrupt.

8.3 Amezarak taught all those who cast spells and cut roots, Armaros the release of spells, and Baraqiel astrologers, and Kokabiel portents, and Tamiel taught astrology, and Asradel taught the path of the Moon.

8.4 And at the destruction of men they cried out; and their voices reached Heaven.

9.1 And then Michael, Gabriel, Suriel and Uriel, looked down from Heaven and saw the mass of blood that was being shed on the earth and all the iniquity that was being done on the earth.

9.2 And they said to one another: "Let the devastated Earth cry out with the sound of their cries, up to the Gate of Heaven.

9.3 And now to you, Oh Holy Ones of Heaven, the souls of men complain, saying: "Bring our complaint before the Most High."

9.4 And they said to their Lord, the King: "Lord of Lords, God of Gods, King of Kings! Your glorious throne endures for all the generations of the world, and blessed and praised!

9.5 You have made everything, and power over everything is yours. And everything is uncovered, and open, in front of you, and you see everything, and there is nothing that can be hidden from you.

9.6 See then what Azazel has done; how he has taught all iniquity on the earth and revealed the eternal secrets that are made in Heaven.

9.7 And Semyaza has made known spells, he to whom you gave authority to rule over those who are with him.

9.8 And they went into the daughters of men together, lay with those women, became unclean, and revealed to them these sins.

9.9 And the women bore giants, and thereby the whole Earth has been filled with blood and iniquity.

9.10 And now behold the souls which have died cry out and complain unto the Gate of Heaven, and their lament has ascended, and they cannot go out in the face of the iniquity which is being committed on the earth.

9.11 And you know everything, before it happens, and you know this, and what concerns each of them. But you say nothing to us. What ought we to do with them, about this?"

10.1 And then the Most High, the Great and Holy One, spoke and sent Arsyalalyur to the son of Lamech, and said to him:

10.2 "Say to him in my name; hide yourself! And reveal to him the end, which is coming, because the whole earth will be destroyed. A deluge is about to come on all the earth; and all that is in it will be destroyed.

10.3 And now teach him so that he may escape and his offspring may survive for the whole Earth."

10.4 And further the Lord said to Raphael: "Bind Azazel by his hands and his feet and throw him into the darkness. And split open the desert, which is in Dudael, and throw him there.

10.5 And throw on him jagged and sharp stones and cover him with darkness. And let him stay there forever. And cover his face so that he may not see the light.

10.6 And so that, on the Great Day of Judgment, he may be hurled into the fire.

10.7 And restore the Earth which the Angels have ruined. And announce the restoration of the Earth. For I shall restore the Earth so that not all the sons of men shall be destroyed because of the knowledge which the Watchers made known and taught to their sons.

10.8 And the whole Earth has been ruined by the teaching of the works of Azazel; and against him write: ALL SIN."

10.9 And the Lord said to Gabriel: "Proceed against the bastards, and the reprobates, and against the sons of the fornicators. And destroy the sons of the fornicators, and the sons of the Watchers, from amongst men. And send them out, and send them against one another, and let them destroy themselves in battle; for they will not have length of days.

10.10 And they will petition you, but the petitioners will gain nothing in respect of them, for they hope for eternal life, and that each of them will live life for five hundred years."

10.11 And the Lord said to Michael: "Go, inform Semyaza, and the others with him, who have associated with the women to corrupt themselves with them in all their uncleanness.

10.12 When all their sons kill each other, and when they see the destruction of their loved ones, bind them for seventy generations, under the hills of the earth, until the day of their judgment and of their consummation, until the judgment, which is for all eternity, is accomplished.

10.13 And in those days, they will lead them to the Abyss of Fire; in torment, and in prison they will be shut up for all eternity.

10.14 And then Semyaza will be burnt, and from then on destroyed with them; together they will be bound until the end of all generations.

10.15 And destroy all the souls of lust, and the sons of the Watchers, for they have wronged men.

10.16 Destroy all wrong from the face of the Earth and every evil work will cease.

10.17 And now all the righteous will be humble, and will live until they beget thousands. And all the days of their youth, and their sabbaths, they will fulfill in peace.

10.18 And in those days the whole earth will be tilled in righteousness and all of it will be planted with trees; and it will be filled with blessing.

10.19 And all the pleasant trees they will plant on it and they will plant on it vines. And the vine that is planted on it will produce fruit in abundance; and every seed that is sown on it, each measure will produce a thousand, and each measure of olives will produce ten baths of oil.

10.20 And you cleanse the Earth from all wrong, and from all iniquity, and from all sin, and from all impiety, and from all the uncleanness which is brought about on the earth.

10.21 And all the sons of men shall be righteous, and all the nations shall serve and bless me and all shall worship me.

10.22 And the Earth will be cleansed from all corruption, and from all sin, and from all wrath, and from all torment; and I will not again send a flood upon it, for all generations, forever.

11.1 And in those days, I will open the Storehouses of Blessing, which are in Heaven, so that I may send them down upon the Earth, upon the work, and upon the toil, of the sons of men.

11.2 Peace and truth will be united, for all the days of eternity, and for all the generations of eternity.

12.1 And then Enoch disappeared and none of the sons of men knew where he was hidden, where he was, or what had happened.

12.2 And all his doings were with the Holy Ones, and with the Watchers, in his days.

12.3 And I Enoch, was blessing the Great Lord and the King of Eternity. And behold, the Watchers called to me - Enoch the scribe - and said to me:

12.4 "Enoch, scribe of righteousness. Go and inform the Watchers of Heaven, who have left the High Heaven and the Holy Eternal Place, and have corrupted themselves with women, and have done as the sons of men do and have taken wives for themselves, and have become completely corrupt on the earth.

12.5 They will have on Earth, neither peace, nor forgiveness of sin, for they will not rejoice in their sons.

12.6 The slaughter of their beloved ones they will see; and over the destruction of their sons they will lament and petition forever. But they will have neither mercy nor peace."

13.1 And Enoch went and said to Azazel: "You will not have peace. A severe sentence has come out against you that you should be bound.

13.2 And you will have neither rest nor mercy, nor the granting of any petitions, because of the wrong which you have taught, and because of all the works of blasphemy and wrong and sin which you have shown to the sons of men."

13.3 And then I went and spoke to them all together, and they were all afraid; fear and trembling seized them.

13.4 And they asked me to write out for them the record of a petition, so that they might receive forgiveness, and to take a record of their petition up to the Lord in Heaven.

13.5 For they were not able, from then on, to speak, and they did not raise their eyes to Heaven, out of shame for the sins, for which they had been condemned.

13.6 And then I wrote out the record of their petition, and their supplication in regard to their spirits, and the deeds of each one of them, and in regard to what they asked; that they should obtain absolution and forbearance.

13.7 And I went and sat down by the waters of Dan, in Dan, which is southwest of Hermon; and I read out the record of their petition, until I fell asleep.

13.8 And behold a dream came to me, and visions fell upon me, and I saw a vision of wrath; that I should speak to the sons of Heaven and reprove them.

13.9 And I woke up and went to them, and they were all sitting gathered together as they mourned, in Ubelseyael, which is between Lebanon and Senir, with their faces covered.

13.10 And I spoke in front of them all; the visions that I had seen in my sleep, and I began to speak these words to reprove the Watchers of Heaven.

14.1 This book is the word of righteousness, and of reproof, for the Watchers who are from Eternity; as the Holy and Great One commanded in that vision.

14.2 I saw in my sleep what I will now tell, with the tongue of flesh, and with my breath, which the Great One has given men in the mouth, so that they might speak with it, and understand with the heart.

14.3 As He has created, and appointed, men to understand the word of knowledge, so He created and appointed me to reprove the Watchers, the sons of Heaven.

14.4 And I wrote out your petition, but in my vision, thus it appeared, that your petition would not be granted to you, for all the days of eternity; and complete judgment has been decreed against you, and you will not have peace.

14.5 And from now on, you will not ascend into Heaven, for all eternity, and it has been decreed that you will be bound on Earth for all the days of eternity.

14.6 And before this, you will have seen the destruction of your beloved sons, and you will not be able to enjoy them, but they will fall before you by the sword.

14.7 And your petition will not be granted in respect of them or in respect of yourselves. And while you weep and supplicate you do not speak a single word from the writings which I have written.

14.8 And the vision appeared to me, as follows: - Behold; clouds called me in the vision, and mist called me. And the path of the stars, and flashes of lightning, hastened me and drove me. And in the vision winds caused me to fly, and hastened me, and lifted me up into the sky.

14.9 And I proceeded until I came near a wall which was made of hailstones, and a tongue of fire surrounded it, and it began to make me afraid.

14.10 And I went into the tongue of fire and came near to a large house, which was built of hailstones, and the wall of that house was like a mosaic of hailstones and its floor was snow.

14.11 Its roof was like the path of the stars and flashes of lightning, and among them was fiery cherubim, and their sky was like water.

14.12 And there was a fire burning around its wall and its door was ablaze with fire.

14.13 And I went into that house, and it was as hot as fire and as cold as snow, and there was neither pleasure nor life in it. Fear covered me and trembling took hold of me.

14.14 And as I was shaking and trembling, I fell on my face.

14.15 And I saw in the vision, and behold, another house which was larger than the former and all its doors were open before me, and it was built of a tongue of fire.

14.16 And in everything, it so excelled in glory and splendor and size, so that I am unable to describe to you its glory and its size.

14.17 And its floor was fire, and above lightning and the path of the stars, and its roof also was a burning fire.

14.18 And I looked, and I saw in it, a high throne, and its appearance was like ice, and its surrounds like the shining Sun and the sound of cherubim.

14.19 And from underneath the high throne there flowed out rivers of fire so that it was impossible to look at it.

14.20 And He who is Great in Glory sat upon it, and his raiment was brighter than the Sun, and whiter than any snow.

14.21 And no Angel could enter, and at the appearance of the face of Him who is Honoured and Praised, no creature of flesh could look.

14.22 A sea of fire burnt around Him, and a great fire stood in front of Him, and none of those around Him came near to Him. Ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him but He needed no Holy Council.

14.23 And the Holy Ones who were near to Him did not leave by night or day and did not depart from Him.

14.24 And until then I had a covering on my face, as I trembled. And the Lord called me with his own mouth, and said to me: "Come here, Enoch, to my Holy Word."

14.25 And He lifted me up and brought me near to the door. And I looked, with my face down.

15.1 And He answered me, and said to me with His voice: "Hear! Do not be afraid, Enoch, you righteous man, and scribe of righteousness. Come here and hear my voice.

15.2 And go say to the Watchers of Heaven, who sent you to petition on their behalf: You ought to petition on behalf of men, not men on behalf of you.

15.3 Why have you left the High, Holy and Eternal Heaven, and lain with women, and become unclean with the daughters of men, and taken wives for yourselves, and done as the sons of the earth, and begotten giant sons?

15.4 And you were spiritual, Holy, living an eternal life, but you became unclean upon the women, and begot children through the blood of flesh, and lusted after the blood of men, and produced flesh and blood, as they do, who die and are destroyed.

15.5 And for this reason I give men wives; so that they might sow seed in them, and so that children might be born by them, so that deeds might be done on the Earth.

15.6 But you, formerly, were spiritual, living an eternal, immortal life, for all the generations of the world.

15.7 For this reason I did not arrange wives for you; because the dwelling of the spiritual ones is in Heaven.

15.8 And now, the giants who were born from body and flesh will be called Evil Spirits on the Earth, and on the Earth will be their dwelling.

15.9 And evil spirits came out from their flesh, because from above they were created, from the Holy Watchers was their origin and first foundation. Evil spirits they will be on Earth and 'Spirits of the Evil Ones' they will be called.

15.10 And the dwelling of the Spirits of Heaven is Heaven, but the dwelling of the spirits of the Earth, who were born on the Earth, is Earth.

15.11 And the spirits of the giants do wrong, are corrupt, attack, fight, break on the Earth, and cause sorrow. And they eat no food, do not thirst, and are not observed.

15.12 And these spirits will rise against the sons of men, and against the women, because they came out of them during the days of slaughter and destruction.

16.1 And the death of the giants, wherever the spirits have gone out from their bodies, their flesh will be destroyed, before the Judgment. Thus they will be destroyed until the Day of the Great Consummation is accomplished, upon the Great Age, upon the Watchers and the impious ones."

16.2 And now to the Watchers, who sent you to petition on their behalf, who were formerly in Heaven:

16.3 "You were in Heaven but its secrets had not yet been revealed to you; and a worthless mystery you knew. This you made known to women, in the hardness of your hearts. And through this mystery the women and the men cause evil to increase on the Earth."

16.4 Say to them therefore: "You will not have peace."

17.1 And they took me to a place where they were like burning fire, and, when they wished, they made themselves look like men.

17.2 And they led me to a place of storm, and to a mountain, the tip of whose summit reached to Heaven.

17.3 And I saw lighted places, and thunder in the outermost ends, in its depths a bow of fire, and arrows and their quivers, and a sword of fire, and all the flashes of lightning.

17.4 And they took me to the Water of Life, as it is called, and to the Fire of the West, which receives every setting of the Sun.

17.5 And I came to a river of fire, whose fire flows like water, and pours out into the Great Sea, which is towards the west.

17.6 And I saw all the great rivers, and I reached the Great Darkness, and went where all flesh walks.

17.7 And I saw the Mountains of the Darkness of Winter and the place where the water of all the deeps pours out.

17.8 And I saw the mouths of all the rivers of the Earth, and the mouth of the deep.

18.¹ And I saw the storehouses of all the winds, and I saw how with them He has adorned all creation, and I saw the foundations of the Earth.

18.2 And I saw the cornerstone of the Earth. And I saw the four winds which support the Earth and the sky.

18.3 And I saw how the winds stretch out the height of Heaven, and how they position themselves between Heaven and Earth; they are the Pillars of Heaven.

18.4 And I saw the winds which turn the sky and cause the disc of the Sun and all the stars to set.

18.5 And I saw the winds on the Earth which support the clouds and I saw the paths of the Angels. I saw at the end of the Earth; the firmament of Heaven above.

18.6 And I went towards the south, and it was burning day and night, where there were seven mountains of precious stones, three towards the east and three towards the south.

18.7 And those towards the east were of coloured stone, and one was of pearl, and one of healing stone; and those towards the south, of red stone.

18.8 And the middle one reached to Heaven, like the throne of the Lord, of stibium, and the top of the throne was of sapphire.

18.9 And I saw a burning fire, and what was in all the mountains.

18.10 And I saw a place there, beyond the great earth; there the waters gathered together.

18.11 And I saw a deep chasm of the earth, with pillars of heavenly fire, and I saw among them fiery pillars of Heaven, which were falling, and as regards both height and depth, they were immeasurable.

18.12 And beyond this chasm, I saw a place, and it had neither the sky above it, nor the foundation of earth below it; there was no water on it, and no birds, but it was a desert place.

18.13 And a terrible thing I saw there, seven stars, like great burning mountains.

18.14 And like a spirit questioning me, the Angel said: "This is the place of the end of Heaven and Earth; this is the prison for the Stars of Heaven and the Host of Heaven.

18.15 And the stars which roll over the fire, these are the ones which transgressed the command of the Lord, from the beginning of their rising, because they did not come out at their proper times.

18.16 And He was angry with them, and bound them until the time of the consummation of their sin, in the Year of Mystery."

19.¹ And Uriel said to me: "The spirits of the Angels who were promiscuous with women will stand here; and they, assuming many forms, made men unclean and will lead men astray so that they sacrifice to demons as gods. And they will stand there until the great judgment day, on which they will be judged, so that an end will be made of them.

19.2 And their wives, having led astray the Angels of Heaven, will become peaceful."

19.3 And I, Enoch, alone saw the sight, the ends of everything; and no man has seen what I have seen.

20.1 And these are the names of the Holy Angels who keep watch.

20.2 Uriel, one of the Holy Angels; namely the Holy Angel of the Spirits of Men.

20.4 Raguel, one of the Holy Angels; who takes vengeance on the world, and on the lights.

20.5 Michael, one of the Holy Angels, namely the one put in charge of the best part of humankind, in charge of the nation.

20.6 Saraqael, one of the Holy Angels; who is in charge of the spirits of men who cause the spirits to sin.

20.7 Gabriel, one of the Holy Angels, who is in charge of the Serpents, and the Garden, and the Cherubim.

21.1 And I went round to a place where nothing was made.

21.2 And I saw a terrible thing, neither the High Heaven nor the firm ground, but a desert place, prepared and terrible.

21.3 And there, I saw seven Stars of Heaven, bound on it together, like great mountains, and burning like fire.

21.4 Then I said: "For what sin have they been bound, and why have they been thrown here?"

21.5 And Uriel, one of the Holy Angels, who was with me and led me, spoke to me and said: "Enoch, about whom do you ask? About whom do you inquire, ask, and care?"

21.6 These are some of the stars which transgressed the command of the Lord Most High, and they have been bound here until ten thousand ages are completed; the number of days of their sin."

21.7 And from there I went to another place, more terrible than this. And I saw a terrible thing: there was a great fire there, which burnt and blazed. And the place had a cleft reaching into the abyss, full of great pillars of fire, which were made to fall; neither its extent nor its size could I see, nor could I see its source.

21.8 Then I said: "How terrible this place is, and how painful to look at!"

21.9 Then Uriel, one of the Holy Angels, who was with me, answered me. He answered me and said to me: "Enoch, why do you have such fear and terror because of this terrible place, and before this pain?"

21.10 And he said to me: "This place is the prison of the Angels, and there they will be held for ever."

22.1 And from there, I went to another place, and he showed me in the west a large and high mountain, and a hard rock, and four beautiful places.

22.2 And inside, it was deep, wide, and very smooth. How smooth is that which rolls, and deep and dark to look at!

22.3 Then Raphael, one of the Holy Angels who was with me, answered me, and said to me: "These beautiful places are there so that the spirits, the souls of the dead, might be gathered into them. For them they were created; so that here they might gather the souls of the sons of men.

22.4 And these places they made, where they will keep them until the Day of Judgment, and until their appointed time, and that appointed time will be long, until the great judgment comes upon them.

22.5 And I saw the spirits of the sons of men who were dead and their voices reached Heaven and complained.

22.6 Then I asked Raphael, the Angel who was with me, and said to him: "Whose is this spirit, whose voice thus reaches Heaven and complains?"

22.7 And he answered me, and said to me, saying: "This spirit is the one that came out of Abel, whom Cain, his brother, killed. And he will complain about him until his offspring are destroyed from the face of the Earth, and from amongst the offspring of men, his offspring perish."

22.8 Then I asked about him, and about judgment on all, and I said: "Why is one separated from another?"

22.9 And he answered me, and said to me: "These three places were made, in order that they might separate the spirits of the dead. And thus the souls of the righteous have been separated; this is the spring of water, and on it the light.

22.10 Likewise, a place has been created for sinners, when they die, and are buried in the earth, and judgment has not come upon them during their life.

22.11 And here their souls will be separated for this great torment, until the Great Day of Judgment and Punishment and Torment for those who curse, forever, and of vengeance on their souls. And there he will bind them forever. Verily, He is, from the beginning of the world.

22.12 And thus a place has been separated for the souls of those who complain, and give information about their destruction, about when they were killed, in the days of the sinners.

22.13 Thus a place has been created, for the souls of men who are not righteous, but sinners, accomplished in wrongdoing, and with the wrongdoers will be their lot. But their souls will not be killed on the day of judgment, nor will they rise from here."

22.14 Then I blessed the Lord of Glory, and said: "Blessed be my Lord, the Lord of Glory and Righteousness, who rules everything forever."

23.¹ And from there I went to another place, towards the west, to the ends of the Earth.

23.2 And I saw a fire that burnt and ran, without resting or ceasing from running, by day or by night, but continued in exactly the same way.

23.3 And I asked saying: "What is this which has no rest?"

23.4 Then Raguel, one of the Holy

Angels, who was with me, answered me, and said to me: "This burning fire, whose course you saw towards the west, is the fire of all the Lights of Heaven."

24.¹ And from there I went to another place of the Earth and he showed me a mountain of fire that blazed day and night.

24.2 And I went towards it and saw seven magnificent mountains. And all were different from one another, and precious and beautiful stones, and all were precious, and their appearance glorious, and their form was beautiful. Three towards the east one fixed firmly on another and three towards the south one on another, and deep and rugged valleys, no one of which was near another.

24.3 And there was a seventh mountain, in the middle of these, and in their height they were all like the seat of a throne and fragrant trees surrounded it.

24.4 And there was among them a tree such as which I have never smelt, and none of them, or any others, were like it. It smells more fragrant than any fragrance, and its leaves, and its flowers, and its wood never wither. Its fruit is good, and its fruit is like bunches of dates on a palm.

24.5 And then I said: "Behold, this beautiful tree! Beautiful to look at, and pleasant are its leaves, and its fruit very delightful in appearance."

24.6 And then Michael, one of the Holy and Honoured Angels, who was with me, and was in charge of them,

25.¹ answered me and said to me: "Enoch, why do you ask me about the fragrance of this tree, and why do you inquire to learn?"

25.2 Then I, Enoch, answered him saying: "I wish to learn about everything, but especially about this tree.”

25.3 And he answered me, saying: “This high mountain, which you saw, whose summit is like the Throne of the Lord, is the throne where the Holy and Great One, the Lord of Glory, the Eternal King, will sit, when he comes down to visit the Earth for good.

25.4 And this beautiful and fragrant tree, and no creature of flesh has authority to touch it until the great judgment, when he will take vengeance on all and bring everything to a consummation forever, this will be given to the righteous and the humble.

25.5 From its fruit, life will be given to the chosen; towards the north it will be planted, in a Holy place, by the house of the Lord, the Eternal King.

25.6 Then they will rejoice with joy and be glad in the Holy place. They will each draw the fragrance of it into their bones, and they will live a long life on earth, as your fathers lived. And in their days sorrow and pain, and toil and punishment, will not touch them.”

25.7 Then I blessed the Lord of Glory, the Eternal King, because he has prepared such things for righteous men, and has created such things, and said that they are to be given to them.

26.¹ And from there, I went to the middle of the earth, and saw a blessed, well watered place, which had branches which remained alive, and sprouted from a tree which had been cut down.

26.2 And there I saw a holy mountain, and under the mountain, to the east of it, there was water, and it flowed towards the south.

26.3 And I saw towards the east, another mountain, which was of the same height, and between them, there was a deep and narrow valley; and in it, a stream ran by the mountain.

26.4 And to the west of this one, was another mountain, which was lower than it was and not high; and under it, there was a valley between them. And there were other deep and dry valleys at the end of the three mountains.

26.5 And all the valleys were deep and narrow, of hard rock, and trees were planted on them.

26.6 And I was amazed at the rock, and I was amazed at the valley; I was very much amazed.

27.¹ Then I said: "What is the purpose of this blessed land, which is completely full of trees, and of this accursed valley in the middle of them?"

27.2 Then Raphael, one of the Holy Angels who was with me, answered me, and said to me: "This accursed valley, is for those who are cursed for ever. Here will be gathered together all who speak with their mouths against the Lord - words that are not fitting, and say hard things about His Glory. Here they will gather them together, and here will be their place of judgment.

27.3 And in the last days there will be the spectacle of the righteous judgment upon them, in front of the righteous, forever. For here, the merciful will bless the Lord of Glory the Eternal King.

27.4 And in the days of the judgment on them they will bless Him, on account of his mercy, according as He has assigned to them their lot."

27.5 Then I myself blessed the Lord of Glory, I addressed Him, and I remembered His majesty, as was fitting.

28.¹ And from there, I went towards the east, to the middle of the mountain of the wilderness, and I saw only desert.

28.2 But it was full of trees from this seed and water gushed out over it from above.

28.3 The torrent, which flowed towards the northwest, seemed copious, and from all sides, there went up spray and mist.

29.¹ And I went to another place, away from the wilderness; I came near to the east of this mountain.

29.2 And there I saw Trees of Judgment, especially vessels of the fragrance of incense and myrrh, and the trees were not alike.

30.1 And above it, above these, above the mountains of the east, and not far away, I saw another place, valleys of water, like that which does not fail.

30.2 And I saw a beautiful tree, and its fragrance was like that of the mastic.

30.3 And by the banks of these valleys I saw fragrant cinnamon. And beyond those valleys I came towards the east.

31.1 And I saw another mountain on which there were trees, and there flowed out water, and there flowed out from it, as it were, a nectar whose name is styrax and galbanum.

31.2 And beyond this mountain I saw another mountain, and on it there were aloe trees, and those trees were full of a fruit, which is like an almond, and is hard.

31.3 And when they take this fruit it is better than any fragrance.

32.1 And after these fragrances, to the north, as I looked over the mountains, I saw seven mountains full of fine nard, and fragrant trees of cinnamon and pepper.

32.2 And from there, I went over the summits of those mountains, far away to the east, and I went over the Red Sea, and I was far from it, and I went over the Angel Zotiel.

32.3 And I came to the Garden of Righteousness, and I saw beyond those trees many large trees growing there, sweet smelling, large, very beautiful and glorious, the Trees of Wisdom, from which they eat and know great wisdom.

32.4 And it is like the carob tree, and its fruit is like bunches of grapes on a vine, very beautiful, and the smell of this tree spreads and penetrates afar.

32.5 And I said: "This tree is beautiful! How beautiful and pleasing is its appearance!"

32.6 And the Holy Angel Raphael, who was with me, answered me and said to me: "This is the Tree of Wisdom, from which your ancient father and ancient mother, who were before you, ate and learnt wisdom; and their eyes were opened, and they knew that they were naked. And they were driven from the garden."

33.1 And from there I went to the ends of the earth, and I saw there large animals, each different from the other, and also birds, which differed in form, beauty, and call - each different from the other.

33.2 And to the east of these animals, I saw the ends of the Earth, on which Heaven rests, and the open Gates of Heaven.

33.3 And I saw how the stars of Heaven come out, and counted the Gates out of which they come, and wrote down all their outlets, for each one, individually, according to their number. And their names, according to their constellations, their positions, their times, and their months, as the Angel Uriel, who was with me, showed me.

33.4 And he showed me everything, and wrote it down, and also their names he wrote down for me, and their laws and their functions.

34.1 And from there I went towards the north, to the ends of the Earth, and there I saw a great and glorious wonder at the ends of the whole Earth.

34.2 And there I saw three Gates of Heaven; through each of them north winds go out; when they blow there is cold, hail, hoarfrost, snow, fog, and rain.

34.3 And from one Gate, it blows for good; but when they blow through the other two Gates, it is with force, and it brings torment over the earth, and they blow with force.

35.1 And from there I went towards the west, to the ends of the Earth, and I saw there, as I saw in the east, three open Gates - as many Gates and as many outlets.

36.1 And from there I went towards the south, to the ends of the Earth, and there I saw three Gates of Heaven open; and the south wind, the mist, and the rain, and wind, come out from there.

36.2 And from there I went towards the east of the ends of Heaven, and there I saw the three eastern Gates of Heaven open, and above them, there were smaller Gates.

36.3 Through each of these smaller Gates, the stars of Heaven pass, and go towards the west, on the path that has been shown to them.

36.4 And when I saw, I blessed, and I will always bless the Lord of Glory, who has made Great and Glorious Wonders so that he might show the greatness of His Work, to His Angels, and to the souls of men, so that they might praise His Work. And so that all his creatures might see the work of His Power, and praise the great work of His Hands, and bless Him forever!

Section II. Chapters XXXVII-

LXXI

The Parables

37.1 The second vision that he saw, the vision of wisdom, which Enoch, the son of Jared, the son of Malalel, the son of Cainan, the son of Enosh, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, saw.

37.2 And this is the beginning of the words of wisdom, which I raised my voice to speak, and say. "To those who dwell on dry ground: - Hear, you men of old, and see, those who come after; the words of the Holy One, which I will speak, in front of the Lord of Spirits."

37.3 "It would have been better to have said these things before, but from those who come after, we will not withhold the beginning of wisdom."

37.4 Until now, there has not been given, by the Lord of Spirits, such wisdom as I have received. In accordance with my insight, in accordance with the wish of the Lord of Spirits: by whom the lot of eternal life has been given to me.

37.5 And the three parables were imparted to me and I raised my voice, and said to those who dwell on the dry ground: -

38.1 The First Parable.

When the community of the righteous appears and the sinners are judged for their sins and are driven from the face of the dry ground.

38.2 And when the Righteous One appears, in front of the chosen righteous, whose works are weighed by the Lord of Spirits. And when light appears to the righteous and chosen who dwell on the dry ground. Where will be the dwelling of the sinners? And where will be the resting-place of those who denied the Lord of Spirits? It would have been better for them, if they had not been born.

38.3 And when the secrets of the righteous are revealed, the sinners will be judged, and the impious driven from the presence of the righteous and the chosen.

38.4 And from then on, those who possess the earth will not be mighty and exalted. Nor will they be able to look at the face of the Holy ones, for the light of the Lord of the Spirits will have appeared on the face of the Holy, the righteous, and the chosen.

38.5 And the mighty kings will at that time be destroyed and given into the hand of the righteous and the Holy.

38.6 And from then on no one will be able to seek the Lord of Spirits for their life will be at an end.

39.1 And it will come to pass in these days that the chosen and holy children will come down from the high Heavens and their offspring will become one with the sons of men.

39.2 In those days Enoch received books of indignation and anger and books of tumult and confusion. And there will be no mercy for them, says the Lord of Spirits.

39.3 And at that time clouds and a storm wind carried me off from the face of the earth and set me down at the end of Heaven.

39.4 And there I saw another vision; the Dwelling of the Righteous and the Resting-Places of the Holy.

39.5 There my eyes saw their dwelling with the Angels, and their resting places with the Holy Ones, and they were petitioning and supplicating and praying, on behalf of the sons of men; and righteousness, like water, flowed in front of them, and mercy like dew on the ground. Thus it is among them forever and ever.

39.6 And in those days my eyes saw the Place of the Chosen Ones of Righteousness and Faith; and there will be righteousness in their days, and the righteous and chosen will be without number, in front of him, forever and ever.

39.7 And I saw their dwelling, under the Wings of the Lord of Spirits, and all the righteous and chosen shone in front of him, like the light of fire. And their mouths were full of blessing, and their lips praised the name of the Lord of Spirits. And righteousness will not fail in front of him, and truth will not fail in front of him.

39.8 There I wished to dwell, and my soul longed for that dwelling; there had my lot been assigned before, for thus it was decided about me, in front of the Lord of Spirits.

39.9 And in those days I praised and exalted the name of the Lord of Spirits, with blessing and praise, for he has destined me for blessing and praise, in accordance with the Lord of Spirits.

39.10 And for a long time my eyes looked at that place, and I blessed him and praised him, saying: "Blessed is He, and may He be blessed from the beginning and for ever!"

39.11 And in his presence there is no end. He knew before the world was created what the world would be, even for all the generations that are to come.

39.12 Those who do not sleep bless you, and they stand before Your Glory, and bless and praise and exalt, saying: "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord of Spirits; he fills the earth with spirits."

39.13 And there, my eyes saw all those who do not sleep; standing in front of Him, and blessing, and saying: "Blessed are you, and blessed is the name of the Lord, for ever and ever!"

39.14 And my face was transformed until I was unable to see.

40.1 And after this I saw a thousand thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand! A multitude beyond number, or reckoning, who stood in front of the Glory of the Lord of Spirits.

40.2 I looked, and on the four sides of the Lord of Spirits, I saw four figures, different from those who were standing; and I learnt their names, because the Angel who went with me made known their names, and showed me all the secret things.

40.3 And I heard the voices of those four figures as they sang praises in front of the Lord of Glory.

40.4 The first voice blesses the Lord of Spirits forever and ever.

40.5 And the second voice I heard blessing the Chosen One and the chosen who depend on the Lord of Spirits.

40.6 And the third voice I heard, petitioned, and prayed, on behalf of those who dwell on dry ground and supplicate in the name of the Lord of Spirits.

40.7 And the fourth voice I heard driving away the Satans and not allowing them to come in front of the Lord of Spirits to accuse those who dwell on the high ground.

40.8 And after this I asked the Angel of Peace, who went with me, and showed me everything which is secret: "Who are those four figures, whom I have seen, and whose words I have heard and written down?"

40.9 And he said to me: "This first one, is the Holy Michael, the merciful and long-suffering. And the second, who is in charge of all the diseases, and in charge of all the wounds of the sons of men, is Raphael. And the third, who is in charge of all the powers, is the Holy Gabriel. And the fourth, who is in charge of repentance and hope of those who will inherit eternal life, is Phanuel."

40.10 And these are the four Angels of the Lord Most High; and the four voices that I heard in those days.

41.1 And after this, I saw all the secrets of Heaven, and how the Kingdom is divided, and how the deeds of men are weighed in the Balance.

41.2 There I saw the Dwelling of the Chosen, and the Resting Places of the Holy; and my eyes saw there all the sinners who deny the name of the Lord of Spirits being driven from there. And they dragged them off, and they were not able to remain, because of the punishment that went out from the Lord of Spirits.

41.3 And there my eyes saw the secrets of the flashes of lightning and of the thunder. And the secrets of the winds, how they are distributed in order to blow over the earth, and the secrets of the clouds, and of the dew; and there I saw from where they go out, in that place. And how, from there, the dust of the earth is saturated.

41.4 And there I saw closed storehouses from which the winds are distributed, and the storehouse of the hail, and the storehouse of the mist, and the storehouse of the clouds; and its cloud remained over the earth, from the beginning of the world.

41.5 And I saw the Chambers of the Sun and the Moon, where they go out, and where they return. And their glorious return; and how one is more honoured than the other is. And their magnificent course, and how they do not leave their course, neither adding nor subtracting from their course. And how they keep faith in one another, observing their oath.

41.6 And the Sun goes out first, and completes its journey at the command of the Lord of Spirits - and his Name endures forever and ever.

41.7 And after this is the hidden, and visible, path of the Moon, and it travels the course of its journey, in that place, by day and by night. One stands opposite the other, in front of the Lord of Spirits, and they give thanks, and sing praise, and do not rest, because their thanksgiving is like rest to them.

41.8 For the shining Sun makes many revolutions; for a blessing and for a curse. And the path of the journey of the Moon is for the righteous light but for the sinners; darkness. In the Name of the Lord, who has created a division between light and darkness, and has divided the spirits of men, and has established the spirits of the righteous, in the name of His Righteousness.

41.9 For no Angel hinders, and no power is able to hinder, because the judge sees them all, and judges them all Himself.

42.1 Wisdom found no place where she could dwell, and her dwelling was in Heaven.

42.2 Wisdom went out, in order to dwell among the sons of men, but did not find a dwelling; wisdom returned to her place, and took her seat in the midst of the Angels.

42.3 And iniquity came out from her chambers; those whom she did not seek she found, and dwelt among them, like rain in the desert, and like dew on the parched ground.

43.¹ And again I saw flashes of lightning and the stars of Heaven, and I saw how He called them all by their names, and they obeyed Him.

43.2 And I saw the Balance of Righteousness, how they are weighed according to their light, according to the width of their areas, and the day of their appearing. And how their revolutions produce lightning, and I saw their revolutions, according to the number of the Angels, and how they keep faith with one another.

43.3 And I asked the Angel, who went with me and showed me what is secret: "What are these?"

43.4 And he said to me: "Their likeness, the Lord of Spirits has shown to you; these are the names of the righteous who, dwell on the dry ground and believe in the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever."

44.¹ And other things I saw concerning lightning, how some of the stars rise and become lightning but cannot lose their form.

45.¹ And this is The Second Parable. About those who deny the Name of the Dwelling of the Holy Ones and of the Lord of Spirits.

45.2 They will not ascend into Heaven nor will they come upon the earth; such will be the lot of the sinners who deny the Name of the Lord of Spirits who will thus be kept for the Day of Affliction and Distress.

45.3 "On that day the Chosen One will sit on the Throne of Glory and will choose their works. And their resting places will be without number and their spirits within them will grow strong when they see My Chosen One and those who appeal to My Holy and Glorious Name.

45.4 And on that day I will cause My Chosen One to dwell among them and I will transform Heaven and make it an Eternal Blessing and Light.

45.5 And I will transform the dry ground and make it a blessing, and I will cause My Chosen Ones to dwell upon it; but those who commit sin and evil will not tread upon it.

45.6 For I have seen, and have satisfied with peace, My Righteous Ones, and have placed them in front of Me; but for the sinners My Judgement draws near so that I may destroy them from the face of the earth."

46.¹ And there I saw one who had a 'Head of Days' and his head was white like wool. And with him there was another whose face had the appearance of a man and his face was full of grace like one of the Holy Angels.

46.2 And I asked one of the Holy Angels, who went with me and showed me all the secrets, about that Son of Man, who he was, and from where he was, and why he went with the Head of Days.

46.3 And he answered me, and said to me:

"This is the Son of Man who has righteousness and with whom righteousness dwells. He will reveal all the treasures of that which is secret, for the Lord of Spirits has chosen him, and through uprightness his lot has surpassed all others, in front of the Lord of Spirits, forever.

46.4 And this Son of Man, who you have seen, will rouse the kings and the powerful from their resting places, and the strong from their thrones, and will loose the reins of the strong, and will break the teeth of the sinners.

46.5 And he will cast down the kings from their thrones, and from their kingdoms, for they do not exalt him, and do not praise him, and do not humbly acknowledge from where their kingdom was given to them.

46.6 And he will cast down the faces of the strong and shame will fill them, and darkness will be their dwelling, and worms will be their resting place. And they will have no hope of rising from their resting-places, for they do not exalt the name of the Lord of Spirits.

46.7 And these are they who judge the Stars of Heaven, and raise their hands against the Most High, and trample upon the dry ground, and dwell upon it. And all their deeds show iniquity, and their power rests on their riches, and their faith is in their gods that they have made with their hands, and they deny the name of the Lord of Spirits.

46.8 And they will be driven from the houses of his congregation, and of the faithful, who depend on the Name of the Lord of Spirits.

47.1 And in those days, the prayer of the righteous, and the blood of the righteous will have ascended from the Earth in front of the Lord of Spirits.

47.2 In these days the Holy Ones who live in Heaven above will unite with one voice, and supplicate, and pray, and praise, and give thanks, and bless, in the name of the Lord of Spirits. Because of the blood of the righteous that has been poured out. And because of the prayer of the righteous, so that it may not cease in front of the Lord of Spirits, so that justice might be done to them, and that their patience may not have to last forever."

47.3 And in those days, I saw the Head of Days sit down on the Throne of his Glory and the Books of the Living were opened in front of him and all His Host, which dwell in the Heavens above, and his Council were standing in front of Him.

47.4 And the hearts of the Holy Ones were full of joy that the number of righteousness had been reached, and the prayer of the righteous had been heard, and the blood of the righteous had not been required in front of the Lord of Spirits.

48.1 And in that place I saw an inexhaustible spring of righteousness and many springs of wisdom surrounded it, and all the thirsty drank from them and were filled with wisdom, and their dwelling was with the Righteous and the Holy and the Chosen.

48.2 And at that hour that Son of Man was named, in the presence of the Lord of Spirits, and his name brought to the Head of Days.

48.3 Even before the Sun and the constellations were created, before the Stars of Heaven were made, his name was named in front of the Lord of Spirits.

48.4 He will be a staff to the righteous and the Holy, so that they may lean on him and not fall, and he will be the Light of the Nations, and he will be the hope of those who grieve in their hearts.

48.5 All those who dwell upon the dry ground will fall down and worship in front of him, and they will bless, and praise, and celebrate with psalms, the name of the Lord of Spirits.

48.6 And because of this he was chosen, and hidden in front of Him, before the World was created, and forever.

48.7 But the wisdom of the Lord of Spirits has revealed him to the Holy and the righteous, for he has kept safe the lot of the righteous, for they have hated and rejected this world of iniquity. And all its works and its ways they have hated in the name of the Lord of Spirits. For in His name they are saved and he is the one who will require their lives.

48.8 And in those days the kings of the Earth, and the strong who possess the dry ground, will have downcast faces because of the works of their hands, for on the day of their distress and trouble they will not save themselves.

48.9 And I will give them into the hands of my chosen ones; like straw in the fire, and like lead in water, so they will burn in front of the righteous, and sink in front of the Holy, and no trace will be found of them.

48.10 And on the day of their trouble there will be rest on the earth and they will fall down in front of him and will not rise. And there will be no one who will take them with his hands and raise them for they denied the Lord of Spirits and his Messiah. May the name of the Lord of Spirits be blessed!

49.¹ For wisdom has been poured out like water and glory will not fail in front of Him forever and ever.

49.2 For He is powerful in all the secrets of righteousness and iniquity will pass away like a shadow, and will have no existence; for the Chosen One stands in front of the Lord of Spirits and His Glory is for ever and ever, and His Power for all generations.

49.3 And in Him dwell the spirit of wisdom, and the spirit that gives understanding, and the spirit of knowledge and of power, and the spirit of those who sleep in righteousness.

49.4 And he will judge the things that are secret, and no one will be able to say an idle word in front of him, for he has been chosen in front of the Lord of Spirits, in accordance with His wish.

50.¹ And in those days a change will occur for the Holy and the chosen; the Light of Days will rest upon them, and glory and honour will return to the Holy.

50.2 And on the day of trouble, calamity will be heaped up over the sinners, but the righteous will conquer in the Name of the Lord of Spirits and He will show this to others so that they might repent and abandon the works of their hands.

50.3 And they will have no honour in front of the Lord of Spirits, but in His Name they will be saved and the Lord of Spirits will have mercy on them, for his mercy is great.

50.4 And He is righteous in His judgment, and in front of His Glory iniquity will not be able to stand against His Judgment; he who does not repent will be destroyed.

50.5 "And from then on I will not have mercy on them," says the Lord of Spirits.

51.¹ And in those days the Earth will return that which has been entrusted to it, and Sheol will return that which has been entrusted to it and that which it has received. And destruction will return what it owes.

51.2 And He will choose the Righteous and the Holy from among them; for the day has come near when they must be saved.

51.3 And in those days, the Chosen One will sit on his throne, and all the Secrets of Wisdom will flow out from the council of his mouth, for the Lord of Spirits has appointed him and glorified him.

51.4 And in those days the mountains will leap like rams, and the hills will skip like lambs satisfied with milk, and all will become Angels in Heaven.

51.5 Their faces will shine with joy, for in those days the Chosen One will have risen and the earth will rejoice. And the righteous will dwell upon it and the chosen will walk upon it.

52.¹ And after those days, in that place where I had seen all the visions of that which is secret, for I had been carried off by a whirlwind, and they had brought me to the west.

52.2 There my eyes saw the secrets of Heaven; everything that will occur on Earth: a mountain of iron, and a mountain of copper, and a mountain of silver, and a mountain of gold, and a mountain of soft metal, and a mountain of lead.

52.3 And I asked the Angel who went with me, saying:

"What are these things which I have seen in secret?"

52.4 And he said to me: "All these things which you have seen serve the authority of His Messiah, so that he may be strong and powerful on the Earth."

52.5 And that Angel of Peace answered me, saying: "Wait a little and you will see, and everything which is secret, which the Lord of Spirits has established, will be revealed to you.

52.6 And these mountains, that you have seen; the mountain of iron, and the mountain of copper, and the mountain of silver, and the mountain of gold, and the mountain of soft metal, and the mountain of lead. All these in front of the Chosen One will be like wax before fire, and like the water that comes down from above onto these mountains they will be weak under his feet.

52.7 And it will come to pass in those days, that neither by gold, nor by silver, will men save themselves; they will be unable to save themselves, or to flee.

52.8 And there will be neither iron for war nor material for a breastplate; bronze will be no use, and tin will be of no use and will count for nothing, and lead will not be wanted.

52.9 All these will be wiped out and destroyed from the face of the earth when the Chosen One appears in front of the Lord of Spirits."

53.1 And there my eyes saw a deep valley, and its mouth was open; and all those who dwell upon dry ground and the sea and the islands will bring gifts and presents and offerings to him, but that deep valley will not become full.

53.2 And their hands commit evil, and everything at which the righteous toil the sinners evilly devour; and so the sinners will be destroyed from in front of the Lord of Spirits, and will be banished from the face of His Earth, unceasingly for ever and ever.

53.3 For I saw the Angels of Punishment going and preparing all the instruments of Satan.

53.4 And I asked the Angel of Peace, who went with me, and I said to him: "These instruments - for whom are they preparing them?"

53.5 And he said to me: "They are preparing these for the kings and the powerful of this Earth, so that by means of them they may be destroyed.

53.6 And after this the Righteous and Chosen One will cause the house of his congregation to appear; from then on, in the name of the Lord of Spirits, they will not be hindered.

53.7 And in front of him these mountains will not be firm like the earth, and the hills will be like a spring of water; and the righteous will have rest from the ill-treatment of the sinners."

54.1 And I looked, and turned to another part of the Earth, and I saw there a deep valley with burning fire.

54.2 And they brought the kings and powerful and threw them into that valley.

54.3 And there my eyes saw how they made instruments for them - iron chains of immeasurable weight.

54.4 And I asked the Angel of Peace, who went with me, saying: "These chain instruments - for whom are they being prepared?"

54.5 And he said to me: "These are being prepared for the hosts of Azazel, so that they may take them, and throw them into the lowest part of hell; and they will cover their jaws with rough stones, as the Lord of Spirits commanded.

54.6 And Michael and Gabriel, Raphael and Phanuel - these will take hold of them on that great day. And throw them, on that day, into the furnace of burning fire, so that the Lord of Spirits may take vengeance on them for their iniquity, in that they became servants of Satan, and led astray those who dwell upon the dry ground.

54.7 And in those days, the punishment of the Lord of Spirits will go out, and all the storehouses of the waters which are above the sky and under the earth, will be opened.

54.8 And all the waters will be joined with the waters that are above the sky. The water that is above the sky is male and the water that is under the Earth is female.

54.9 And all those who dwell upon the dry ground, and those who dwell under the ends of Heaven, will be wiped out.

54.10 And because of this they will acknowledge their iniquity which they have committed on the Earth and through this they will be destroyed."

55.1 And after this, the Head of Days repented, and said:

"I have destroyed to no purpose all those who dwell upon the dry ground."

55.2 And he swore by His Great Name: "From now on I will not act like this towards all those who dwell upon the dry ground. And I will put a sign in Heaven, and it will be a pledge of faith between me and them forever, so long as Heaven is above the Earth.

55.3 And this will be in accordance with my command. When I want to take hold of them with the hands of the Angels, on the day of distress and pain, in the face of my anger and my wrath, my wrath and anger will remain upon them" says the Lord, The Lord of Spirits.

55.4 "You powerful kings who dwell upon the dry ground will be obliged to watch my Chosen One sit down on the throne of My Glory, and judge, in the Name of the Lord of Spirits, Azazel and all his associates and all his hosts."

56.1 And I saw there the hosts of the Angels of Punishment, as they went, and they were holding chains of iron and bronze.

56.2 And I asked the Angel of Peace, who went with me, saying:

"To whom are those who are holding the chains going?"

56.3 And he said to me: "Each to his own chosen ones, and to their beloved ones, so that they may be thrown into the chasm, in the depths of the valley."

56.4 And then, that valley will be filled with their chosen and beloved ones, and the days of their life will be at an end, and the days of their leading astray will no longer be counted.

56.5 And in those days, the Angels will gather together, and will throw themselves towards the east, upon the Parthians and Medes. They will stir up the kings so that a disturbing spirit will come upon them, and they will drive them from their thrones; and they will come out like lions from their lairs, and like hungry wolves in the middle of their flocks.

56.6 And they will go up and trample on the Land of My Chosen Ones, and the land of my chosen ones will become before them a tramping-ground and a beaten track.

56.7 But the City of My Righteous Ones will be a hindrance to their horses, and they will stir up slaughter amongst themselves, and their own right hand will be strong against them. And a man will not admit to knowing his neighbour, or his brother, nor a son his father, or his mother, until, through their death, there are corpses enough; and their punishment - it will not be in vain.

56.8 And in those days Sheol will open its mouth and they will sink into it and their destruction; Sheol will swallow up the sinners in front of the faces of the chosen."

57.1 And it came to pass, after this, that I saw another host of chariots with men riding on them, and they came upon the wind from the east and from the west, to the south.

57.2 And the sound of the noise of their chariots was heard. And when this occurred the Holy Ones observed it from Heaven and the Pillars of the Earth were shaken from their foundations. And the sound was heard from the ends of the Earth to the ends of Heaven throughout one day.

57.3 And all will fall down and worship the Lord of Spirits. And this is the end of the second parable.

58.1 And I began to speak The Third Parable. About The Righteous and about The Chosen.

58.2 Blessed are you, the righteous and the chosen, for your lot will be glorious!

58.3 And the righteous will be in the light of the Sun and the chosen in the light of eternal life. And there will be no end to the days of their life and the days of the Holy will be without number.

58.4 And they will seek the light and will find righteousness with the Lord of Spirits. Peace be to the righteous with the Lord of the World!

58.5 And after this it will be said to the Holy that they should seek in Heaven the secrets of righteousness, the lot of faith; for it has become bright as the Sun upon the dry ground, and darkness has passed away.

58.6 And there will be ceaseless light, and to a limit of days, they will not come, for darkness will have been destroyed previously. And the light will endure in front of the Lord of Spirits, and the light of uprightness will endure in front of the Lord of Spirits, forever.

59.1 And in those days my eyes saw the secrets of the flashes of lightning, and the lights, and the regulations governing them; and they flash for a blessing or a curse, as the Lord of Spirits wishes.

59.2 And there I saw the secrets of the thunder and how when it crashes in Heaven above the sound of it is heard. And they showed me the dwellings of the dry ground, and the sound of the thunder, for peace, and for blessing, or for a curse, according to the word of the Lord of Spirits.

59.3 And after this all the secrets of the lights, and of the flashes of lightning, were shown to me. They flash to bring blessing and satisfaction.

60.1 In the fiftieth year, in the seventh month, on the fourteenth day of the month of the life of Enoch. In that parable, I saw how the Heaven of Heavens was shaken violently, and the Host of the Most High and the Angels, a thousand thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand, were extremely disturbed.

60.2 And then I saw the Head of Days sitting on the throne of his glory and the Angels and righteous were sitting around him.

60.3 And a great trembling seized me, and fear took hold of me, and my loins collapsed and gave way, and my whole being melted, and I fell upon my face.

60.4 And the Holy Michael sent another Holy Angel, one of the Holy Angels, and he raised me; and when he raised me my spirit returned, for I had been unable to endure the sight of that host, and the disturbance, and the shaking of Heaven.

60.5 And the Holy Michael said to me: "What sight has disturbed you like this? Until today has the day of His mercy lasted and He has been merciful and long suffering towards those who dwell upon the dry ground.

60.6 And when the Day, and the Power, and the Punishment, and the Judgment come that the Lord of Spirits has prepared for those who worship the Righteous Judgment, and for those who deny the Righteous Judgment, and for those who take His name in vain - and that Day has been prepared. For the chosen a covenant, but for the sinners a visitation."

60.7 And on that day two monsters will be separated from one another, a female monster whose name is Leviathan, to dwell in the depths of the sea, above the springs of the waters.

60.8 And the name of the male is Behemoth who occupies with his breast an immense desert named Dendayn on the east of the Garden where the chosen and the righteous dwell. Where my great-grandfather was received, who was seventh from Adam, the first man whom the Lord of Spirits made.

60.9 And I asked that other Angel to show me the power of those monsters, how they were separated on one day, and thrown, one into the depths of the sea and the other on to the dry ground of the desert.

60.10 And he said to me: "Son of man, you here wish to know what is secret."

60.11 And the other Angel spoke to me, the one who went with me and showed me what is secret; what is first and last in Heaven, in the heights, and under the dry ground, in the depths, and at the Ends of Heaven, and at the Foundations of Heaven, and in the Storehouses of the Winds.

60.12 And how the spirits are distributed, and how they are weighed. And how the springs, and the winds, are counted according to the power of their spirit. And the power of the light of the Moon. And the divisions of the stars according to their names. And how all the divisions are made.

60.13 And the thunder - according to the places where it falls. And all the divisions that are made in lightning - so that it may flash. And its hosts - how they quickly obey.

60.14 For the thunder have fixed intervals, which have been given to its sound, for waiting. And the thunder and the lightning are not separate although not the same. Through a spirit the two of them move inseparably.

60.15 For when the lightning flashes the thunder utters its voice, and the spirit, at the proper time, causes it to rest, and divides equally between them because the storehouse of the times for their occurrence is like that of the sand. And each of them, at the proper time, is held by a rein, and turned back by the power of the spirit, and likewise driven forward, according to the number of the regions of the Earth.

60.16 And the spirit of the sea is male and strong, and according to the power of its strength, the spirit turns it back with a rein, and likewise it is driven forward, and scattered amongst all the mountains of the Earth.

60.17 And the spirit of the hoarfrost is its own Angel; and the spirit of the hail, is a good Angel.

60.18 And the spirit of the snow has withdrawn because of its power, and it has a special spirit, and that which rises from it is like smoke and its name is frost.

60.19 And the spirit of the mist is not associated with them in their storehouse but has a special storehouse; for its course is glorious both in light and darkness, and in winter and in summer, and its storehouse is an Angel.

60.20 The spirit of the dew has its dwelling at the ends of Heaven and is connected with the storehouses of the rain. And its course is in winter and in summer and its clouds. And the clouds of the mist are associated and one gives to the other.

60.21 And when the spirit of the rain moves from its storehouse the Angels come and open the storehouse and bring it out. And when it is scattered over all the dry ground it joins with all the water that is on the dry ground. And whenever it joins with the water that is on the dry ground.(.....)

60.22 For the waters are for those who dwell upon the dry ground, for they are nourishment for the dry ground, from the Most High who is in Heaven. Therefore there is a fixed measure for the rain and the Angels comprehend it.

60.23 All these things, I saw towards the Garden of Righteousness.

60.24 And the Angel of Peace who was with me, said to me: "These two monsters, prepared in accordance with the greatness of the Lord, will feed them that Punishment of the Lord. And children will be killed with their mothers and sons with their fathers.

60.25 When the punishment of the Lord of Spirits rests upon them it will remain resting so that the punishment of the Lord of Spirits may not come in vain upon these. Afterwards, the judgment will be according to His mercy and His patience."

61.1 And in those days, I saw long cords given to those Angels and they acquired wings for themselves, and flew, and went towards the north.

61.2 And I asked the Angel, saying: "Why did these take the long cords, and go?" And he said to me: "They went so that they may measure."

61.3 And the Angel who went with me, said to me:

"These will bring the measurements of the righteous, and the ropes of the righteous, to the righteous, that they may rely on the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever.

61.4 The chosen will begin to dwell with the chosen, and these measurements will be given to faith, and will strengthen righteousness.

61.5 And these measurements will reveal all the secrets of the depths of the Earth, and those who were destroyed by the desert, and those who were devoured by the fish of the sea, and by animals, that they may return and rely on the Day of the Chosen One. For no one will be destroyed in front of the Lord of Spirits, and no one can be destroyed."

61.6 And all those in the Heavens above received a command, and power, and one voice, and one light like fire was given to them.

61.7 And Him, before everything, they blessed, and exalted, and praised in wisdom. And they showed themselves wise in speech and in the spirit of life.

61.8 And the Lord of Spirits set the Chosen One on the throne of his glory, and he will judge all the works of the Holy ones in Heaven above, and in the Balance he will weigh their deeds.

61.9 And when he lifts his face to judge their secret ways according to the word of the name of the Lord of Spirits, and their path according to the way of the Righteous Judgment of the Lord Most High, they will all speak with one voice and bless, and praise, and exalt, and glorify, the Name of the Lord of Spirits.

61.10 And he will call all the Host of the Heavens and all the Holy Ones above, and the Host of the Lord, the Cherubim, and the Seraphim, and the Ophannim, and all the Angels of Power, and all the Angels of the Principalities, and the Chosen One, and the other host that is upon the dry ground, and over the water, on that Day.

61.11 And they will raise one voice, and will bless, and praise, and glorify, and exalt, in the spirit of faith, and in the spirit of wisdom, and of patience, and in the spirit of mercy, and in the spirit of justice, and of peace, and in the spirit of goodness. And they will all say with one voice: "Blessed is He, and blessed be the name of the Lord of Spirits for ever and ever."

61.12 All Those Who Do Not Sleep in Heaven above will bless him. All His Holy Ones who are in Heaven, will bless Him, and all the chosen ones who dwell in the Garden of Life, and every spirit able to bless, and praise and exalt, and hallow your Holy Name. And all flesh which to the limit of its power, will praise, and bless, your Name forever and ever.

61.13 For great is the mercy of the Lord of Spirits, and he is long-suffering; and all his works and all his forces, as many as he has made, he has revealed to the righteous and the chosen, in the Name of the Lord of Spirits.

62.1 And thus the Lord commanded the kings, and the mighty and the exalted, and those who dwell upon the earth, and said: "Open your eyes and raise your horns if you are able to acknowledge the Chosen One."

62.2 And the Lord of Spirits sat on His Throne of Glory, and the spirit of righteousness was poured out on him, and the word of his mouth kills all the sinners and all the lawless, and they are destroyed in front of him.

62.3 And on that Day, all the kings and the mighty and the exalted, and those who possess the earth, will stand up and they will see and recognize how he sits on the Throne of His Glory. And the righteous are judged in righteousness, in front of him, and no idle word is spoken in front of him.

62.4 And pain will come upon them as upon a woman in labour, for whom giving birth is difficult when her child enters the mouth of the womb, and she has difficulty giving birth.

62.5 And one half of them will look at the other, and they will be terrified, and will cast down their faces, and pain will take hold of them when they see that son of a woman sitting on the throne of His Glory.

62.6 And the mighty kings, and all those who possess the earth, will praise and bless and exalt Him who rules everything that is hidden.

62.7 For from the beginning that Son of Man was hidden, and the Most High kept him in the presence of His power, and revealed him only to the chosen.

62.8 And the community of the Holy and the chosen will be sown and all the chosen will stand before him on that day.

62.9 And all the mighty kings, and the exalted, and those who rule the dry ground, will fall down before him, on their faces, and worship; and they will set their hopes on that Son of Man, and will entreat him, and will petition for mercy from him.

62.10 But the Lord of Spirits will then so press them that they will hasten to go out from before Him, and their faces will be filled with shame, and the darkness will grow deeper on their faces.

62.11 And the Angels of Punishment will take them so that they may repay them for the wrong that they did to His children and to His chosen ones.

62.12 And they will become a spectacle to the righteous and to His chosen ones; they will rejoice over them, for the anger of the Lord of Spirits will rest upon them, and the sword of the Lord of Spirits will be drunk with them.

62.13 And the righteous and the chosen will be saved on that Day and they will never see the faces of the sinners and the lawless from then on.

62.14 And the Lord of Spirits will remain over them and with that Son of Man they will dwell, and eat, and lie down, and rise up, forever and ever.

62.15 And the righteous and chosen will have risen from the earth, and will have ceased to cast down their faces, and will have put on the Garment of Life.

62.16 And this will be a Garment of Life from the Lord of Spirits; and your garments will not wear out, and your glory will not fail, in front of the Lord of Spirits.

63.1 In those days, the mighty kings who possess the dry ground will entreat the Angels of His Punishment to whom they have been handed over so that they might give them a little respite. And so that they might fall down and worship in front of the Lord of Spirits, and confess their sins in front of Him.

63.2 And they will bless and praise the Lord of Spirits, and say: "Blessed be the Lord of Spirits, and the Lord of Kings, the Lord of the Mighty, and the Lord of the Rich, and the Lord of Glory, and the Lord of Wisdom!

63.3 And everything secret is clear, in front of You, and your power is for all generations, and your glory is forever and ever. Deep and without number are all your secrets and your righteousness is beyond reckoning.

63.4 Now we realize that we ought to praise and bless the Lord of Kings and the one who is King over all Kings."

63.5 And they will say: "Would that we might be given a respite, so that we might praise and thank and bless him, and make our confession in front of His Glory.

63.6 And now we long for a respite, but do not find it; we are driven off and do not obtain it; and the light has passed away from before us, and darkness will be our dwelling forever and ever.

63.7 For we have not made our confession before him, and we have not praised the name of the Lord of Kings, and we have not praised the Lord for all his works, but our hopes have been on the sceptre of our kingdom, and of our glory.

63.8 And on the day of our affliction and distress he does not save us, and we find no respite to make our confession that our Lord is faithful in all his doings, and in all his judgments and his justice, and that his judgments show no respect for persons.

63.9 And we pass away from in front of him because of all our works and all our sins have been counted exactly."

63.10 Then they will say to them: "Our souls are sated with possessions gained through iniquity, but they do not prevent our going down into the flames of the torment of Sheol."

63.11 And after this their faces will be filled with darkness and shame, in front of that Son of Man, and they will be driven away from him. And the sword will dwell among them - in front of Him.

63.12 And thus says the Lord of Spirits: "This is the Law and the Judgment for the mighty, and the kings, and the exalted, and for those who possess the dry ground, in front of the Lord of Spirits."

64.1 And I saw other figures hidden in that place.

64.2 I heard the voice of the Angel saying: "These are the Angels who came down from Heaven onto the Earth and revealed what is secret to the sons of men, and led astray the sons of men, so that they committed sin."

65.1 And in those days, Noah saw the Earth had tilted and that its destruction was near.

65.2 And he set off from there and went to the ends of the Earth and cried out to his great-grandfather Enoch; and Noah said three times in a bitter voice: "Hear me, hear me, hear me!"

65.3 And he said to him: "Tell me, what is it that is being done on the Earth, that the Earth is so afflicted and shaken, lest I be destroyed with it!"

65.4 And immediately there was a great disturbance on the Earth and a voice was heard from Heaven and I fell upon my face.

65.5 And my great-grandfather Enoch came, stood by me, and said to me: "Why did you cry out to me, with such bitter crying and weeping?"

65.6 And a command has gone out from the Lord against those who dwell upon the dry ground that this must be their end. For they have learnt all the secrets of the Angels, and all the wrongdoings of the satans, and all their secret power, and all the power of those who practice magic arts, and the power of enchantments, and the power of those who cast molten images for all the Earth.

65.7 And further, how silver is produced from the dust of the earth and how soft metal occurs on the earth.

65.8 For lead and tin are not produced from the earth, like the former; there is a spring which produces them, and an Angel who stands in it, and that Angel distributes them."

65.9 And after this, my great-grandfather Enoch took hold of me with his hand, and raised me, and said to me: "Go, for I have asked the Lord of Spirits about this disturbance on the earth."

65.10 And he said to me: "Because of their iniquity, their judgment has been completed, and they will no longer be counted before me; because of the sorceries they have searched out and learnt, the Earth and those who dwell upon it will be destroyed.

65.11 And for these, there will be no place of refuge, for ever, for they showed to them what is secret, and they have been condemned; but not so for you, my son; the Lord of Spirits knows that you are pure and innocent of this reproach concerning the secrets.

65.12 And he has established your name among the Holy, and will keep you from amongst those who dwell upon the dry ground; and he has destined your offspring in righteousness, to be kings, and for great honours. And from your offspring will flow out a spring of the Righteous and Holy, without number forever."

66.1 And after this, he showed me the Angels of Punishment, who were ready to come and release all the forces of the water, which is under the earth, in order to bring judgment and destruction on all those who reside and dwell upon the dry ground.

66.2 And the Lord of Spirits commanded the Angels who were coming out, not to raise their hands, but to keep watch; for those Angels were in charge of the forces of the waters.

66.3 And I came out from before Enoch.

67.1 And in those days, the word of the Lord came to me, and he said to me: "Noah, behold; your lot has come up before me, a lot without reproach, a lot of love and uprightness.

67.2 And now the Angels are making a wooden structure, and when the Angels come out from that task, I will put my hand on it, and keep it safe. And a change shall take place so that the dry ground may not remain empty.

67.3 And I will establish your offspring before me, forever and ever, and I will scatter those who dwell with you, over the face of the dry ground. I will not again put them to the test, on the face of the Earth, but they will be blessed and increase on the dry ground in the name of the Lord."

67.4 And they will shut up those Angels, who showed iniquity, in that burning valley, which my great-grandfather Enoch had shown to me previously, in the west, near the mountains of gold and silver and iron and soft metal and tin.

67.5 And I saw that valley, in which there was a great disturbance, and a heaving of the waters.

67.6 And when all this happened, from the fiery molten metal, and the disturbance, which disturbed the waters in that place, a smell of sulphur was produced, and it was associated with those waters. And that valley of the Angels, who led men astray, burns under the ground.

67.7 And through the valleys of that same area, flow out rivers of fire where those Angels will be punished, who led astray those on the dry ground.

67.8 And in those days, those waters will serve the kings, and the mighty, and the exalted, and those who dwell upon dry ground, for the healing of soul and body, but also for the punishment of the spirit. And their spirits are so full of lust that they will be punished in their bodies, for they denied the Lord of Spirits. And they see their punishment every day yet they do not believe in His Name.

67.9 And the more their bodies are burnt, the more a change will come over their spirits, for ever and ever; for no one can speak an idle word in front of the Lord of Spirits.

67.10 For judgment will come upon them, for they believe in the lust of their bodies, but deny the spirit of the Lord.

67.11 And those same waters will undergo a change in those days; for when those Angels are punished in those days, the temperature of those springs of water will change, and when the Angels come up, that water of the springs will change, and become cold.

67.12 And I heard the Holy Michael answering and saying: "This judgment, with which the Angels are judged, is a testimony for the kings and the mighty who possess the dry ground.

67.13 For these waters of judgment serve for the healing of the bodies of the kings, and for the lust of their bodies; but they do not see, and do not believe, that these waters will change, and will become a fire which burns forever."

68.¹ And after this, my great-grandfather Enoch gave me the explanation of all the secrets, in a book, and the parables that had been given to him; and he put them together for me, in the words of the Book of Parables.

68.2 And on that day the Holy Michael answered Raphael, saying: "The power of the spirit seizes me and makes me tremble because of the harshness of the judgment of the Angels. Who can endure the harshness of the judgment which has been executed and before which they melt with fear?"

68.3 And the Holy Michael answered Raphael again, and said to him: "Who would not soften his heart over it, and whose mind would not be disturbed by this word? Judgment has gone out against them, upon those whom they have led out like this."

68.4 But it came to pass, when he stood before the Lord of Spirits, that the Holy Michael spoke as follows to Raphael: "I will not take their part under the eye of the Lord, for the Lord of Spirits is angry with them, because they act as if they were the Lord.

68.5 Because of this the hidden judgment will come upon them for ever and ever; for neither any other Angel, nor any man, will receive their lot, but they alone have received their judgment for ever and ever.

69.¹ And after this judgment I will terrify them, and make them tremble, for they have shown this to those who dwell upon the dry ground."

69.2 And behold, the names of those Angels: - The first of them is Semyaza (Azza), and the second Artaqifa, and the third Armen, and the fourth Kokabiel, and the fifth Turiel, and the sixth Ramiel, and the seventh Daniel, and the eighth Nuqaël, and the ninth Baraqiel, and the tenth Azazel, and the eleventh Armaros, the twelfth Batriel, the thirteenth Basasael, the fourteenth Ananel, the fifteenth Turiel, the sixteenth Samsiel, the seventeenth Yetarel, the eighteenth Tumiel, the nineteenth Turiel, the twentieth Rumiel, the twenty-first Azazel.

69.3 And these are the chiefs of their Angels, and the names of the leaders of hundreds, and their leaders of fifties, and their leaders of tens.

69.4 The name of the first is Yequn; this is the one who led astray all the children of the Holy Angels, and he brought them down onto the dry ground, and led them astray through the daughters of men.

69.5 And the name of the second is Asbeel; this one suggested an evil plan to the children of the Holy Angels, and led them astray, so that they corrupted their bodies with the daughters of men.

69.6 And the name of the third is Gadreel; this is the one that showed all the deadly blows to the sons of men. And he led astray Eve. And he showed the weapons of death to the children of men, the shield and the breastplate, and the sword for slaughter, and all the weapons of death to the sons of men.

69.7 And from his hand they have gone out against those who dwell the dry ground from that time and forever and ever.

69.8 And the name of the fourth is Penemue; this one showed the sons of men the bitter and the sweet and showed them all the secrets of their wisdom.

69.9 He taught men the art of writing with ink and paper, and through this many have gone astray, from eternity to eternity, and to this day.

69.10 For men were not created for this, that they should confirm their faith like this, with pen and ink.

69.11 For men were created no differently from the Angels, so that they might remain righteous and pure, and death, which destroys everything, would not have touched them; but through this knowledge of theirs they are being destroyed and through this power death consumes them.

69.12 And the name of the fifth is Kasdeyae; this one showed the sons of men all the evil blows of the spirits and of the demons, and the blows that attack the embryo in the womb so that it miscarries. And the blows that attack the soul: the bite of the serpent. And the blows that occur at midday, and the son of the serpent - who is strong.

69.13 And this is the task of Kesbeel, the chief of the oath, who showed the oath to the Holy ones when he dwelt on high in glory. And his name is Beqa.

69.14 And this one told the Holy Michael that he should show him the secret name so that they might mention it in the oath, so that those, who showed the sons of men everything that is secret, trembled before that name and oath.

69.15 And this is the power of this oath, for it is powerful and strong, and he placed this oath, Akae, in the charge of the Holy Michael.

69.16 And these are the secrets of this oath, and they are strong through this oath, and Heaven was suspended, before the world was created, and forever.

69.17 And through it the earth was founded upon the water, and from the hidden recesses of the mountains come beautiful waters, from the creation of the world and for ever.

69.18 And through that oath the sea was created, and as its foundation, for the time of anger, he placed for it the sand, and it does not go beyond it, from the creation of the world and for ever.

69.19 And through that oath the deeps were made firm, and they stand and do not move from their place, from the creation of the world and for ever.

69.20 And through that oath the Sun and the Moon complete their course and do not transgress their command, from the creation of the world and for ever.

69.21 And through that oath the stars complete their course, and he calls their names, and they answer him, from the creation of the world and for ever.

69.22 And likewise the spirits of the water, of the winds, and of all the breezes, and their paths, according to all the groups of the spirits.

69.23 And there are kept the storehouses of the sound of thunder, and of the light of the lightning; and there are kept the storehouses of the hail, and the hoarfrost, and the storehouses of the mist, and the storehouses of the rain and dew.

69.24 And all these make their confession and give thanks in front of the Lord of Spirits and sing praises with all their power. And their food consists of all their thanksgiving and they give thanks, praise, and exalt, in the name of the Lord of Spirits, forever and ever.

69.25 And this oath is strong over them and through it they are kept safe and their courses are not disturbed.

69.26 And they had great joy and they blessed, praised, and exalted, because the name of that Son of Man had been revealed to them.

69.27 And he sat on the Throne of His Glory and the whole judgment was given to the Son of Man and he will cause the sinners to pass away and be destroyed from the face of the Earth.

69.28 And those who led astray the world will be bound in chains and will be shut up in the assembly-place of their destruction, and all their works will pass away from the face of the earth.

69.29 And from then on there will be nothing corruptible. For that Son of Man has appeared, and has sat on the Throne of His Glory, and everything evil will pass away and go from in front of Him; and the word of that Son of Man will be strong in front of the Lord of Spirits.

This is the Third Parable of Enoch.

70.1 And it came to pass, after this, that while he was living his name was lifted from those who dwell upon the dry ground to the presence of that Son of Man, and to the presence of the Lord of Spirits.

70.2 And he was lifted on the chariots of the spirit, and his name vanished from among them.

70.3 And from that day I was not counted among them, and He placed me between two winds, between the north and the west, where the Angels took the cords to measure for me the place for the chosen and the righteous.

70.4 And there I saw the First Fathers and the righteous who from the beginning of the world dwelt in that place.

71.1 And it came to pass, after this, that my spirit was carried off, and it went up into the Heavens. I saw the sons of the Holy Angels treading upon flames of fire their garments were white, and their clothing, and the light of their face, was like snow.

71.2 And I saw two rivers of fire, and the light of that fire shone like a hyacinth, and I fell upon my face in front of the Lord of Spirits.

71.3 And the Angel Michael, one of the Archangels, took hold of me by my right hand, and raised me and led me out to all the secrets of mercy, and the secrets of righteousness.

71.4 And he showed me all the secrets of the Ends of Heaven and all the Storehouses of the Stars and the Lights from where they come out from below the Holy Ones.

71.5 And the Spirit carried Enoch off to the Highest Heaven, and I saw there, in the middle of that Light, something built of crystal stones, and in the middle of those stones tongues of living fire.

71.6 And my spirit saw a circle of fire, which surrounded that house; from its four sides came rivers, full of living fire, and they surrounded that house.

71.7 And round about were the Seraphim and the Cherubim, and the Ophannim; these are They Who Do Not Sleep but keep watch over the Throne of His Glory.

71.8 And I saw Angels, who could not be counted, a thousand thousands and ten thousand times ten thousand, surrounding that house. And Michael, and Raphael, and Gabriel, and Phanuel, and the Holy Angels who are in the Heavens above, went in and out of that house.

71.9 And Michael, and Raphael, and Gabriel, and Phanuel, and many Holy Angels without number, came out from that house.

71.10 And with them the Head of Days, his head white, and pure, like wool and his garments - indescribable.

71.11 And I fell upon my face, and my whole body melted, and my spirit was transformed; and I cried out in a loud voice, in the spirit of power, and I blessed, praised, and exalted.

71.12 And these blessings, which came out from my mouth, were pleasing before that Head of Days.

71.13 And that Head of Days came with Michael, Gabriel, Raphael and Phanuel, and thousands and tens of thousands of Angels without number.

71.14 And that Angel, came to me, and greeted me with his voice, and said to me: "You are the son of man who was born to righteousness and righteousness remains over you and the righteousness of the Head of Days, will not leave you."

71.15 And he said to me: "He proclaims peace to you in the name of the world which is to come, for from there peace has come out from the creation of the world and so you will have it for ever and for ever and ever.

71.16 And all will walk according to your way, inasmuch as righteousness will never leave you. With you will be their dwelling, and with you their lot, and they will not be separated from you for ever and for ever and ever.

71.17 And so there will be length of days with that Son of Man, and the righteous will have peace, and the righteous will have an upright way in the name of the Lord of Spirits, for ever and ever."

Section I I I. Chapters LXXII-

LXXXII

The Book of the Heavenly

Luminaries

72.1 The Book of the Revolutions of the Lights of Heaven.

Each as it is; according to their classes, according to their period of rule and their times, according to their names and places of origin, and according to their months. That Uriel, the Holy Angel who was with me, and is their leader, showed to me. And he showed me all their regulations, exactly as they are, for each year of the world and for ever, until the new creation shall be made which will last forever.

72.2 And this is the First Law of the Lights. The light called the Sun; its rising is in the Gates of Heaven that are towards the east, and its setting is in the western Gates of Heaven.

72.3 And I saw six Gates from which the Sun rises, and six Gates in which the Sun sets, and the Moon also rises and sets in those Gates, and the leaders of the stars together with those whom they lead. There are six in the east and six in the west, all exactly in place, one next to the other; and there are many windows to the south and the north of those Gates.

72.4 And first there rises the greater light, named the Sun, and its disc is like the disc of Heaven, and the whole of it is full of a fire which gives light and warmth.

72.5 The wind blows the chariots on which it ascends, and the Sun goes down in the sky and returns through the north in order to reach the east, and is led so that it comes to the appropriate Gate and shines in the sky.

72.6 In this way it rises in the first month, in the large Gate, namely; it rises through the fourth of those six Gates that are towards the east.

72.7 And in that fourth Gate, through which the Sun rises in the first month, there are twelve window-openings from which, whenever they are opened, flames come out.

72.8 When the Sun rises in Heaven it goes out through that fourth Gate for thirty days, and exactly in the fourth Gate, in the west of Heaven, it goes down.

72.9 And in those days the day grows daily longer, and the night grows nightly shorter, until the thirtieth morning.

72.10 And on that day the day becomes longer than the night by a double part, and the day amounts to exactly ten parts, and the night amounts to eight parts.

72.11 And the Sun rises from that fourth Gate, and sets in the fourth Gate, and returns to the fifth Gate in the east for thirty mornings; and it rises from it and sets in the fifth Gate.

72.12 And then the day becomes longer by two parts, and the day amounts to eleven parts, and the night becomes shorter and amounts to seven parts.

72.13 And the Sun returns to the east and comes to the sixth Gate, and rises and sets in the sixth Gate for thirty-one mornings, because of its sign.

72.14 And on that day the day becomes longer than the night, and the day becomes double the night; and the day amounts to twelve parts, and the night becomes shorter and amounts to six parts.

72.15 And the Sun rises up so that the day may grow shorter, and the night longer; and the Sun returns to the east, and comes to the sixth Gate, and rises from it, and sets, for thirty mornings.

72.16 And when thirty mornings have been completed the day becomes shorter, by exactly one part; and the day amounts to eleven parts, and the night to seven parts.

72.17 And the Sun goes out from the west, through that sixth Gate, and goes to the east, and rises in the fifth Gate for thirty mornings and it sets in the west again, in the fifth Gate in the west.

72.18 On that day the day becomes shorter by two parts, and the day amounts to ten parts, and the night to eight parts.

72.19 And the Sun rises from that fifth Gate, and sets in the fifth Gate in the west, and rises in the fourth Gate for thirty-one mornings because of its sign, and sets in the west.

72.20 On that day the day becomes equal with the night, and is of equal length; and the night amounts to nine parts, and the day to nine parts.

72.21 And the Sun rises from that Gate and sets in the west, and returns to the east, and rises in the third Gate for thirty mornings, and sets in the west in the third Gate.

72.22 And the Sun rises from that third Gate, and sets in the third Gate in the west, and returns to the east; and the Sun rises in the second Gate in the east for thirty mornings, and likewise, it sets in the second Gate, in the west of Heaven.

72.24 And on that day the night amounts to eleven parts and the day to seven parts.

72.25 And the Sun rises, on that day, from the second Gate, and sets in the west in the second Gate, and returns to the east to the first Gate for thirty-one mornings, then sets in the west in the first Gate.

72.26 And on that day the night becomes longer, and becomes double the day; and the night amounts to exactly twelve parts, and the day to six parts.

72.27 And with this, the Sun has completed the divisions of its journey, and it turns back again, along these divisions of its journey; and it comes through that first Gate for thirty mornings, and sets in the west opposite it.

72.28 And on that day the night becomes shorter in length by one part, and amounts to eleven parts, and the day to seven parts.

72.29 And the Sun returns, and comes to the second Gate in the east, and it returns along those divisions of its journey for thirty mornings, rising and setting.

72.30 And on that day the night becomes shorter in length and the night amounts to ten parts and the day to eight parts.

72.31 And on that day, the Sun rises from the second Gate, and sets in the west, and returns to the east, and rises in the third Gate for thirty one mornings, and sets in the west of the sky.

72.32 And on that day the night becomes shorter, and amounts to nine parts, and the day amounts to nine parts, and the night becomes equal with the day. And the year amounts to exactly 364 days.

72.33 And the length of the day and the night, and the shortness of the day and the night - they are different because of the journey of the Sun.

72.34 Because of it, its journey becomes daily longer, and nightly shorter.

72.35 And this is the law and the journey of the Sun and its return, as often as it returns; sixty times it returns and rises, that is the great eternal light, which for ever and ever is named the Sun.

72.36 And this that rises is the great light, which is named after its appearance, as the Lord commanded.

72.37 And thus it rises and sets; it neither decreases, nor rests, but runs day and night in its chariot. And its light is seven times brighter than that of the Moon but in size the two are equal.

73.1 And after this law I saw another law, for the lesser light, named the Moon.

73.2 And its disc is like the disc of the Sun, and the wind blows its chariot on which it rides, and in fixed measure light is given to it.

73.3 And every month it's rising and setting change, and its days are as the days of the Sun, and when its light is uniformly full, it is a seventh part the light of the Sun.

73.4 And thus it rises, and its first phase is towards the east; it rises on the thirtieth morning. And on that day it appears, and becomes for you the first phase of the Moon, on the thirtieth morning, together with the Sun in the Gate through which the Sun rises.

73.5 And a half.(.....) .with a seventh part, and its entire disc is empty, without light, except for a seventh part, a fourteenth part of it's light.

73.6 And on the day that it receives a seventh part and a half of its light, its light amounts to a seventh, and a seventh part and a half.

73.7 It sets with the Sun, and when the Sun rises, the Moon rises with it, and receives a half of one part of light. And on that night at the beginning of its morning, at the beginning of the Moon's day, the Moon sets with the Sun, and is dark on that night in six and seven parts and a half.

73.8 And it rises on that day, with exactly a seventh part, goes out, recedes from the rising of the Sun, and becomes bright on the remainder of its days, in the other six and seven parts.

74.1 And another journey, and law, I saw for it, in that according to this law it makes its monthly journey.

74.2 And Uriel, the Holy Angel who is leader of them all, showed me everything, and I wrote down their positions as he showed them to me. And I wrote down their months, as they are, and the appearance of their light, until fifteen days have been completed.

74.3 In seventh parts it makes all its darkness full, and in seventh parts it makes all its light full, in the east and in the west.

74.4 And in certain months, it changes its setting, and in certain months, it follows its own individual course.

74.5 In two months it sets with the Sun, in those two Gates that are in the middle, in the third and in the fourth Gate.

74.6 It goes out for seven days and turns back, and returns again to the Gate from which the Sun rises. And in that Gate it makes all its light full, and it recedes from the Sun, and comes, in eight days, to the sixth Gate from which the Sun rises.

74.7 And when the Sun rises from the fourth Gate, the Moon goes out for seven days, until it rises from the fifth Gate. And again it returns in seven days to the fourth Gate, makes all its light full, recedes, and comes to the first Gate in eight days.

74.8 And again it returns in seven days to the fourth Gate from which the Sun rises.

74.9 Thus I saw their positions; how the Moon rose and the Sun set in those days.

74.10 And if five years are added together, the Sun has an excess of thirty days. For each year, of the five years, there are three hundred and sixty four days.

74.11 And the excess, of the Sun and the stars, comes to six days. In five years, with six days each, they have an excess of thirty days, and the Moon falls behind the Sun and the stars by thirty days.

74.12 And the Moon conducts the years exactly, all of them according to their eternal positions; they are neither early nor late, even by one day, but change the year in exactly 364 days.

74.13 In three years, there are 1,092 days, and in five years 1,820 days, so that in eight years there are 2,912 days.

74.14 For the Moon alone, the days in three years come to 1,062 days, and in five years it is fifty days behind.

74.15 And there are 1,770 days in five years so that for the Moon the days in eight years amount to 2,832 days.

74.16 For the difference in eight years is eighty days, and all the days that the Moon is behind, in eight years, are eighty days.

74.17 And the year is completed exactly, in accordance with their positions, and the positions of the Sun, in that they rise from the Gates from which the Sun rises and sets for thirty days.

75.¹ And the leaders of the tens of thousands, who are in charge of the whole of creation, and in charge of all the stars, and also the four days which are added, and are not separated from their position, according to the whole reckoning of the year. And these serve on the four days that are not counted in the reckoning of the year.

75.2 And because of them men go wrong in them. For these lights really serve in the stations of the world, one in the first Gate, and one in the third Gate, and one in the fourth Gate, and one in the sixth Gate. And the exact harmony of the world is completed in the separate 364 stations of the world.

75.3 For the signs, and the times, and the years, and the days, were showed to me by the Angel Uriel whom the Lord of Eternal Glory has placed in charge of all the Lights of Heaven. In Heaven and in the world, so that they might rule on the Face of Heaven, and appear over the earth, and be leaders of day and night; the Sun, the Moon, the stars, and all the serving creatures who revolve in all the Chariots of Heaven.

75.4 Likewise, Uriel showed to me twelve Gate-openings in the disc of the chariot of the Sun, in the sky, from which the rays of the Sun come out. And from them heat comes out over the Earth when they are opened at the times that are appointed for them.

75.5 And there are openings for the winds, and for the spirit of the dew, when they are opened at their times, opened in Heaven, at the ends of the earth.

75.6 I saw twelve Gates in Heaven, at the ends of the earth, from which the Sun, and the Moon, and the stars, and all the works of Heaven, go out in the east and in the west.

75.7 And there are many window-openings to the north and to the south, and each window, at its appointed time, sends out heat corresponding to those Gates, from which the stars go out, in accordance with His command to them, and in which they set according to their number.

75.8 And I saw chariots in Heaven, running through the region above those Gates, in which the stars that never set rotate.

75.9 And one is bigger than all the others. And it goes round through the whole world.

76.1 And at the ends of the earth, I saw twelve Gates open to all the winds, from which the winds come out and blow over the earth.

76.2 Three of them open in the front of Heaven, and three in the back, and three on the right of Heaven, and three on the left.

76.3 And the three first are those towards the east, and then the three towards the north, and the three after these towards the south, and the three in the west.

76.4 Through four of them come winds of blessing and peace. And from the other eight come winds of punishment; when they are sent they bring devastation to the whole Earth, and to the water which is on it, and to all those who dwell upon it, and to everything that is in the water and on dry ground.

76.5 And the first wind from those Gates, called the east wind, comes out through the first Gate, which is towards the east. The one that comes from the south brings devastation, drought, heat, and destruction.

76.6 And through the second Gate, in the middle, comes what is right. And from it come rain, and fruitfulness, and prosperity, and dew. And through the third Gate, which is towards the north, comes cold and drought.

76.7 And after these, the winds towards the south come out, through three Gates. First, through the first of the Gates, which inclines towards the east, comes a hot wind.

76.8 And through the middle Gate, which is next to it, come pleasant fragrances, and dew, and rain, and prosperity, and life.

76.9 And through the third Gate, which is towards the west, come dew, and rain, and locusts, and devastation.

76.10 And after these, the winds towards the north...(…)from the seventh Gate, which is towards the east, come dew and rain, locusts and devastation.

76.11 And through the Gate exactly in the middle, come rain, and dew, and life, and prosperity. And through the third Gate, which is towards the west come mist and hoarfrost, and snow, and rain, and dew, and locusts.

76.12 And after these the winds towards the west. Through the first Gate, which inclines towards the north, come dew, and rain, and hoarfrost, and cold, and snow, and frost.

76.13 And from the middle Gate, come dew and rain, prosperity and blessing. And through the last Gate, which is towards the south, come drought and devastation, burning and destruction.

76.14 And thus the twelve Gates, of the four quarters of Heaven are complete. And all their laws, and all their punishments, and all their benefits, I have shown to you, my son Methuselah.

77.1 They called the first quarter eastern because it is the first, and they call the second the south because there the Most High descends, and there especially the one who is blessed forever descends.

77.2 And the western quarter is called waning because there all the lights of Heaven wane and go down.

77.3 And the fourth quarter, named the north, is divided into three parts. And the first of them is the dwelling place for men; and the second contains seas of water, and the deeps, and the forests, and rivers, and darkness and mist; and the third part contains the Garden of Righteousness.

77.4 I saw seven high mountains, which were higher than all other mountains on the earth; and from them snow comes. And days and times and years, pass away and go by.

77.5 I saw seven rivers on the earth, larger than all the other rivers; one of them comes from the east and pours out its waters into the Great Sea.

77.6 And two of them come from the north to the sea and pour out their water into the Erythraean Sea in the east.

77.7 And the remaining four flow out on the side of the north, to their seas, two to the Erythraean Sea, and two into the Great Sea, and they discharge themselves there, and not into the wilderness, as some say.

77.8 I saw seven large islands, in the sea and on the land, two on the land, and five in the Great Sea.

78.¹ The names of the Sun are as follows: The first Oryares, and the second Tomases.

78.2 The Moon has four names: The first name is Asonya, and the second Ebla, and the third Benase, and the fourth Era'e.

78.3 These are the two great lights; their disc is like the disc of Heaven and in size the two are equal.

78.4 In the disc of the Sun, are seven parts of light, which are added to it more than to the Moon, and in fixed measure light is transferred to the Moon until a seventh part of the Sun is exhausted.

78.5 And they set, go into the Gates of the west, go round through the north, and rise through the Gates of the east, on the face of Heaven.

78.6 And when the Moon rises, it appears in the sky, and has a half of a seventh part of light, and on the fourteenth day it makes all its light full.

78.7 And fifteen parts of light are transferred to it, until on the fifteenth day its light is full, according to the sign of the year, and amounts to fifteen parts. And the Moon comes into being by halves of a seventh part.

78.8 And in its waning on the first day, it decreases to fourteen parts of its light. And on the second to thirteen parts, and on the third to twelve parts, on the fourth to eleven parts, and on the fifth to ten parts, and on the sixth to nine parts, and on the seventh to eight parts, and on the eighth to seven parts, and on the ninth to six parts, and on the tenth to five parts, and on the eleventh to four parts, and on the twelfth to three, and on the thirteenth to two, and on the fourteenth to half of a seventh part. And all the light that remains from the total disappears on the fifteenth day.

78.9 And in certain months the Moon has twenty-nine days and once twenty-eight.

78.10 And Uriel showed me another law: - when light is transferred to the Moon, and on which side it is transferred from the Sun.

78.11 All the time that the Moon is increasing in its light, it transfers as it becomes opposite the Sun, until in fourteen days it's light is full in the sky; and when it is all ablaze, it's light is full in the sky.

78.12 And on the first day it is called the New Moon, for on that, daylight rises on it.

78.13 And its light becomes full exactly on the day that as the Sun goes down in the west it rises from the east for the night. And the Moon shines for the whole night until the Sun rises opposite it, and the Moon is seen opposite the Sun.

78.14 And on the side on which the light of the Moon appears, there again it wanes, until all its light disappears, and the days of the Moon end and its disc remains empty without light.

78.15 And for three months, at its proper time, it achieves thirty days, and for three months, it achieves twenty-nine days, during which it completes its waning, in the first period, in the first Gate, 127 days.

78.16 And in the time of it's rising, for three months, it appears in each month with thirty days. And for three months it appears in each month with twenty-nine days

78.17 By night, for twenty days each time, it looks like a man, and by day like Heaven, for there is nothing else in it except it's light.

79.1 And now, my son Methuselah, I have shown you everything, and the whole Law of the Stars of Heaven is complete.

79.2 And he showed me the whole law for these, for every day, and for every time, and for every rule, and for every year, and for the end thereof, according to its command, for every month and every week.

79.3 And the waning of the Moon, which occurs in the sixth Gate, for in that sixth Gate it's light becomes full, and after that it is the beginning of the month.

79.4 And the waning, which occurs in the first Gate, at its proper time, until 127 days are complete, or by weeks; twenty-five weeks and two days.

79.5 And how it falls behind the Sun, according to the law of the stars, by exactly five days in one period of time, when it has completed the pathway you have seen.

79.6 Such is the appearance, and likeness, of every light, which Uriel, the great Angel who is their leader, showed to me.

80.1 And in those days Uriel answered me and said to me: "Behold, I have shown you everything, Oh Enoch. And I have revealed everything to you, so that you may see this Sun, and this Moon, and those who lead the Stars of Heaven, and all those who turn them, their tasks and their times and their rising.

80.2 But in the days of the sinners the years will become shorter, and their seed will be late on their land, and on their fields. And all things on the earth will change and will not appear at their proper time. And the rain will be withheld and Heaven will retain it.

80.3 And in those times the fruits of the earth will be late, and will not grow at their proper time, and the fruits of the trees will be withheld at their proper time.

80.4 And the Moon will change its customary practice and will not appear at its proper time.

80.5 But in those days it will appear in Heaven, come on top of a large chariot in the west, and shine with more than normal brightness.

80.6 And many heads of the stars, in command, will go astray. And these will change their courses and their activities and will not appear at the times that have been prescribed for them.

80.7 And the entire law of the stars will be closed to the sinners, and the thoughts of those who dwell upon the Earth will go astray over them, and they will turn from all their ways and will go astray, and will think them gods.

80.8 And many evils will overtake them and punishment will come upon them to destroy them all."

81.1 And he said to me: “Oh Enoch, look at the book of the Tablets of Heaven and read what is written upon them, and note every individual fact.”

81.2 And I looked at everything that was written and I noted everything. And I read the book and everything that was written in it, all the deeds of men, and all the children of flesh who will be upon the Earth, for all the generations of eternity.

81.3 And then I immediately blessed the Lord, the Eternal King of Glory, in that he has made all the works of the world, and I praised the Lord because of his patience, and I blessed him on account of the sons of Adam.

81.4 And at that time I said: “Blessed is the man who dies righteous and good, concerning whom no book of iniquity has been written, and against whom no guilt has been found.”

81.5 And these three Holy ones brought me and set me on the earth in front of the door of my house, and said to me: “Tell everything to your son Methuselah, and show all your children that no flesh is righteous, before the Lord, for He created them.

81.6 For one year we will leave you with your children, until you have regained your strength, so that you may teach your children and write these things down for them, and testify to all your children. And in the second year we will take you from amongst them.

81.7 Let your heart be strong, for the good will proclaim righteousness to the good, the righteous will rejoice with the righteous and they will wish each other well.

81.8 But the sinner will die with the sinner and the apostate will sink with the apostate.

81.9 And those who practice righteousness will die because of the deeds of men, and will be gathered in because of the deeds of the impious.”

81.10 And in those days they finished speaking to me and I went to my family as I blessed the Lord of Ages.

82.1 And now, my son Methuselah, all these things I recount to you, and write down for you. I have revealed everything to you, and have given you books about all these things. Keep, my son Methuselah, the books from the hand of your father so that you may pass them on to the generations of eternity.

82.2 I have given wisdom to you, and to your children, and to those who will be your children, that they may give it to their children, for all the generations, forever, this wisdom that is beyond their thoughts.

82.3 And those who understand it will not sleep, but will incline their ears that they may learn this wisdom, and it will be better for those who eat from it than good food.

82.4 Blessed are all the righteous, blessed are all those who walk in the way of righteousness and do not sin like the sinners.

In the numbering of all their days in which the Sun journeys in Heaven, coming in and out, through the Gates of Heaven, for thirty days.

With the leaders of the thousands, of this order of stars, and with the four which are added, and divided between the four seasons of the year, which lead them and appear with them on four days.

82.5 Because of them men go wrong, and they do not reckon them in the reckoning of the whole year; for men go wrong in respect of them and do not know them exactly.

82.6 For they belong in the reckoning of the year, and are truly recorded forever, one in the first Gate, and one in the third, and one in the fourth and one in the sixth. And the year is completed in 364 days.

82.7 And the account of it is true, and the recorded reckoning of it is exact, for the lights, and the months, and the feasts, and the years, and the days. Uriel showed me, and inspired me; he to whom the Lord of the whole created world gave commands about the Host of Heaven for me.

82.8 And he has power in Heaven, over night and day, to cause light to shine on men; the Sun, the Moon, and the stars, and all the Powers of Heaven, which rotate in their orbits.

82.9 And this is the Law of the Stars, which set in their places, at their times, and at their feasts, and in their months.

82.10 And these are the names of those who lead them, who keep watch, so that they appear at their times, and in their orders, and in their months, and in their periods of rule, and in their positions.

82.11 Their four leaders, who divide the four parts of the year, appear first; and after them the twelve leaders of the orders, who divide the months and the years into 364 days, with the heads over thousands, who separate the days. And for the four days, that are added to them, there are the leaders who separate the four parts of the year.

82.12 And as for these heads over thousands, one is added between the leader and the led, but their leaders make the separation.

82.13 And these are the names of the leaders who separate the four appointed parts of the year: Melkiel, Helemmelek, Meleyal, and Narel.

82.14 And the names of those whom they lead: Adnarel, Iyasusael, Iylumiel; these three follow behind the leaders of the orders. And all others follow behind the three leaders of the orders, who follow behind those leaders of positions, who separate the four parts of the year.

82.15 In the beginning of the year, Melkiel rises first and rules, who is called the southern Sun - and all the days of his period, during which he rules, are ninety-one.

82.16 And these are the signs of the days that are to be seen on the earth, in the days of his period of rule; sweat, and heat, and calm. And all the trees bear fruit, and leaves appear on all the trees, and the wheat harvest, and rose flowers. And all the flowers bloom in the field but the trees of winter are withered.

82.17 And these are the names of the leaders who are under them: Berkeel, Zelebsael, and another one who is added, a head over a thousand, named Heloyaseph. And the days of the period of rule, of this one, are complete.

82.18 The second leader, after him, is Helemmelec, whom they call the Shining Sun; and all the days of his light are ninety-one.

82.19 And these are the signs of the days on earth: heat, and drought. And the trees bring their fruit to ripeness and maturity and make their fruit dry. And the sheep mate and become pregnant. And men gather all the fruits of the earth, and everything that is in the fields, and the vats of wine. And these things occur in the days of his period of rule.

82.20 And these are the names, and the orders, and the leaders of these heads over thousands: Gedaeyal, Keel, and Heel. And the name of the head-over-a-thousand, who is added to them, is Asfael. And the days of his period of rule are complete.

Section IV. Chapters LXXXIII- XC.

The Dream-Visions.

83.¹ And now, my son Methuselah, I will show you all the visions that I saw, recounting them before you.

83.2 Two visions I saw, before I took a wife, and neither one was like the other. For the first time, when I learnt the art of writing, and for the second time, before I took your mother. I saw a terrible vision and concerning this I made supplication to the Lord.

83.3 I had lain down in the house of my grandfather, Malalel, when I saw in a vision how Heaven was thrown down, and removed, and it fell upon the Earth.

83.4 And when it fell upon the Earth, I saw how the earth was swallowed up in a great abyss, and mountains were suspended on mountains, and hills sank down upon hills, and tall trees were torn up by their roots, and were thrown down, and sank into the abyss.

83.5 And then speech fell into my mouth, and I raised my voice to cry out, and said: "The earth is destroyed!"

83.6 And my grandfather, Malalel, roused me, since I lay near him, and said to me: "Why did you cry out so, my son, and why do you moan so?"

83.7 And I recounted to him the whole vision, which I had seen, and he said to me: "A terrible thing you have seen, my son! Your dream vision concerns the secrets of all the sin of the Earth; it is about to sink into the abyss and be utterly destroyed.

83.8 And now, my son, rise and make supplication to the Lord of Glory, for you are faithful, that a remnant may be left on the Earth and that he may not wipe out the whole Earth.

83.9 My son, from Heaven all this will come upon the Earth, and upon the Earth there will be great destruction."

83.10 And then I rose and prayed, and made supplication, and wrote my prayer down for the generations of eternity, and I will show everything to you my son Methuselah.

83.11 And, when I went out below and saw the sky, and the Sun rising in the east, and the Moon setting in the west, and some stars, and the whole Earth, and everything as He knew it since the beginning. Then I blessed the Lord of Judgment and ascribed Majesty to him, for he makes the Sun come out from the windows of the east, so that it ascends and rises on the face of Heaven, and follows the path which has been shown to it.

84.1 And I raised my hands in righteousness and I blessed the Holy and Great One. And I spoke with the breath of my mouth, and with the tongue of flesh, which God has made for men born of flesh so that they might speak with it; and he has given them breath, and a tongue, and a mouth, so that they might speak with them.

84.2 "Blessed are you, Oh Lord King, and great and powerful in your majesty, Lord of the whole Creation of Heaven, King of Kings, and God of the whole world! And your kingly authority, and your Sovereignty and your Majesty will last forever, and forever and ever, and your power, for all generations. And all the Heavens are your throne, forever, and the whole Earth your footstool forever, and ever and ever.

84.3 For you made, and you rule, everything, and nothing is too hard for you, and no wisdom escapes you; it does not turn away from your throne nor from your presence. And you know, and see, and hear, everything, and nothing is hidden from you, for you see everything.

84.4 And now the Angels of your Heaven are doing wrong and your anger rests upon the flesh of men until the day of the great judgment.

84.5 And now, Oh God, Lord, and Great King, I entreat and ask that you will fulfill my prayer to leave me a posterity on Earth and not to wipe out all the flesh of men and make the earth empty so that there is destruction forever.

84.6 And now, my Lord, wipe out from the earth the flesh that has provoked your anger, but the flesh of righteousness and uprightness establish as a seed bearing plant forever. And do not hide your face from the prayer of your servant, Oh Lord."

85.1 And after this I saw another dream, and I will show it all to you, my son.

85.2 And Enoch raised his voice and said to his son Methuselah: "To you I speak, my son. Hear my words, and incline your ear to the dream vision of your father.

85.3 Before I took your mother, Edna, I saw a vision on my bed: - and behold - a bull came out of the earth, and that bull was white.

And, after it, a heifer came out, and with the heifer came two bullocks, and one of them was black and the other red.

85.4 And that black bullock struck the red one, and pursued it over the earth, and from then on I could not see that red bullock.

85.5 But that black bullock grew, and a heifer went with it; and I saw that many bulls came out from it, which were like it, and followed behind it.

85.6 And that cow, that first one, came from the presence of that first bull, seeking that red bullock, but did not find it. And then it moaned bitterly and continued to seek it.

85.7 And I looked until that first bull came to it, and calmed it, and from that time it did not cry out.

85.8 And after this, she bore another white bull, and after this she bore many black bulls and cows.

85.9 And I saw, in my sleep, that white bull, how it likewise grew and became a large white bull. And from it came many white bulls, and they were like it.

85.10 And they began to beget many white bulls that were like them - one following another.

86.1 And again, I looked with my eyes as I was sleeping, and I saw Heaven above, and behold, a star fell from Heaven, and it arose and ate and pastured amongst those bulls.

86.2 And, after this, I saw the large and the black bulls, and behold, all of them changed their pens, and their pastures, and their heifers. And they began to moan, one after another.

86.3 And, again, I saw in the vision and looked up at Heaven, and behold, I saw many stars, how they came down, and were thrown down from Heaven to that first star, and fell amongst those heifers and bulls. They were with them pasturing amongst them.

86.4 And I looked at them and saw, and behold, all of them let out their private parts, like horses, and began to mount the cows of the bulls. And they all became pregnant and bore elephants, camels, and asses.

86.5 And all the bulls were afraid of them, and were terrified in front of them. And they began to bite with their teeth, and to devour, and to gore with their horns.

86.6 And so they began to devour those bulls, and behold, all the sons of the Earth began to tremble and shake before them and to flee.

87.1 And again I saw them, how they began to gore one another, and to devour one another, and the Earth began to cry out.

87.2 And I raised my eyes again to Heaven, and saw in the vision, and behold, there came from Heaven beings that were like white men. And four came from that place, and three others with them.

87.3 And those three, who came out last, took hold of me by my hand and raised me from the generations of the Earth, and lifted me up onto a high place, and showed me a tower high above the earth, and all the hills were lower.

87.4 And one said to me: "Remain here until you have seen everything which is coming upon these elephants, and camels, and asses, and upon the stars, and upon all the bulls."

88.¹ And I saw one of those four who had come out first, how he took hold of that first star, which had fallen from Heaven, and bound it by its hands and feet, and threw it into an abyss. And that abyss was narrow, and deep, and horrible, and dark.

88.2 And one of them drew his sword, and gave it to those elephants, camels, and asses; and they began to strike one another, and the whole Earth shook because of them.

88.3 And as I looked in the vision, behold, one of those four who had come out cast a line from Heaven and gathered and took all the large stars; those whose private parts were like the private parts of horses, and bound them all by their hands and their feet, and threw them into a chasm of the Earth.

89.¹ And one of those four, went to a white bull, and taught him a mystery, trembling as he was. He was born a bull, but became a man, and built for himself a large vessel, and dwelt on it, and three bulls went with him in that vessel, and they were covered over.

89.2 And, again, I raised my eyes to Heaven and saw a high roof with seven water channels on it, and those channels discharged much water into an enclosure.

89.3 And I looked again, and behold, springs opened on the floor of that large enclosure, and water began to bubble up, and to rise above the floor. And I looked at that enclosure until its whole floor was covered by water.

89.4 And water, darkness, and mist increased on it, and I looked at the height of that water, and that water had risen above that enclosure and was pouring out over the enclosure, and it remained on the earth.

89.5 And all the bulls of that enclosure were gathered together, until I saw how they sank, and were swallowed up, and destroyed, in that water.

89.6 And that vessel floated on the water, but all the bulls, elephants, camels, and asses sank to the bottom, together with all the animals, so that I could not see them. And they were unable to get out, but were destroyed, and sank into the depths.

89.7 And, again, I looked at that vision until those water channels were removed from that high roof, and the chasms of the Earth were made level, and other abysses were opened.

89.8 And the water began to run down into them, until the earth became visible, and that vessel settled on the earth and the darkness departed, and light appeared.

89.9 And that white bull, who became a man, went out from that vessel, and the three bulls with him. And one of the three bulls was white, like that bull, and one of them was red as blood, and one was black. And that white bull passed away from them.

89.10 And they began to beget wild animals and birds, so that there arose from them every kind of species: lions, tigers, wolves, dogs, hyenas, wild-boars, foxes, badgers, pigs, falcons, vultures, kites, eagles, and ravens. But amongst them was born a white bull.

89.11 And they began to bite one another but that white bull, which was born amongst them, begat a wild ass and a white bull with it, and the wild asses increased.

89.12 But that bull, which was born from it, begat a black wild boar and a white sheep, and that wild-boar begat many boars and that sheep begat twelve sheep.

89.13 And when those twelve sheep had grown, they handed one of their number over to the asses, and those in turn, handed that sheep over to the wolves; and that sheep grew up amongst the wolves.

89.14 And the Lord brought the eleven sheep to dwell with it, and to pasture with it amongst the wolves, and they increased and became many flocks of sheep.

89.15 And the wolves began to make them afraid, and they oppressed them until they made away with their young, and then they threw their young into a river with much water; but those sheep began to cry out because of their young, and to complain to their Lord.

89.16 But a sheep, which had been saved from the wolves, fled and escaped to the wild asses. And I saw the sheep moaning and crying out, and petitioning the Lord with all their power, until that Lord of the sheep came down at the call of the sheep, from a high room, and came to them, and looked at them.

89.17 And he called that sheep, which had fled from the wolves, and spoke to it about the wolves, that it should warn them that they should not touch the sheep.

89.18 And the sheep went to the wolves, in accordance with the Word of the Lord, and another sheep met that sheep and went with it. And the two of them together, entered the assembly of those wolves, spoke to them, and warned them that from then on, they should not touch those sheep.

89.19 And after this, I saw the wolves, how they acted even more harshly towards the sheep, with all their power, and the sheep called out.

89.20 And their Lord came to the sheep and began to beat those wolves; and the wolves began to moan, but the sheep became silent and from then on they did not cry out.

89.21 And I looked at the sheep until they escaped from the wolves; but the eyes of the wolves were blinded, and those wolves went out in pursuit of the sheep with all their forces.

89.22 And the Lord of the sheep went with them, as he led them, and all his sheep followed him; and his face was glorious, and his appearance terrible and magnificent.

89.23 But the wolves began to pursue those sheep until they met them by a stretch of water.

89.24 And that stretch of water was divided, and the water stood on one side, and on the other, before them. And their Lord as he led them, stood between them and the wolves.

89.25 And while those wolves had not yet seen the sheep, they went into the middle of that stretch of water; but the wolves pursued the sheep, and those wolves ran after them into that stretch of water.

89.26 But when they saw the Lord of the sheep they turned to flee in front of him; but that stretch of water flowed together again, and suddenly resumed its natural form, and the water swelled up, and rose until it covered those wolves.

89.27 And I looked until all the wolves that had pursued those sheep were destroyed and drowned.

89.28 But the sheep escaped that water, and went to a desert, where there was neither water, nor grass. And they began to open their eyes and see, and I saw the Lord of the sheep pasturing them, and giving them water and grass, and that sheep going and leading them.

89.29 And that sheep went up to the summit of a high rock and the Lord of the sheep sent it to them.

89.30 And after this, I saw the Lord of the sheep standing before them, and his appearance was terrible and majestic, and all those sheep saw him and were afraid of him.

89.31 And all of them were afraid and trembled before him; and they cried out to that sheep, with those who were in their midst: "We cannot stand before our Lord nor look at him."

89.32 And that sheep, which led them, again went up to the summit of that rock; and the sheep began to be blinded, and go astray from the path which had been shown to them, but that sheep did not know.

89.33 And the Lord of the sheep was extremely angry with them, and that sheep knew, and went down from the summit of the rock, and came to the sheep, and found the majority of them, with their eyes blinded, and going astray from his path.

89.34 And when they saw it they were afraid and trembled before it and wished that they could return to their enclosure. And that sheep took some other sheep with it, and went to those sheep that had gone astray, and then began to kill them; and the sheep were afraid of it. And that sheep brought back those sheep that had gone astray, and they returned to their enclosures.

89.36 And I looked there at the vision, until that sheep became a man, and built a house for the Lord of the sheep, and made all the sheep stand in that house.

89.37 And I looked until that sheep, which had met that sheep that led the sheep, fell asleep. And I looked until all the large sheep were destroyed and small ones arose in their place, and they came to a pasture, and drew near a river of water.

89.38 And that sheep that led them, which had become a man, separated from them and fell asleep, and all the sheep sought it, and cried out very bitterly over it.

89.39 And I looked until they left off crying for that sheep, and crossed that river of water. And there arose all the sheep that led them, in place of those which had fallen asleep; and they led.

89.40 And I looked until the sheep came to a good place and a pleasant and glorious land, and I looked until those sheep were satisfied. And that house was in the middle of them in that green and pleasant land.

89.41 And sometimes their eyes were opened, and sometimes blinded, until another sheep rose up, led them, and brought them all back. And their eyes were opened.

89.42 And the dogs, and the foxes, and the wild boars, began to devour those sheep until the Lord of the sheep raised up a ram from among them, which led them.

89.43 And that ram began to butt those dogs, foxes, and wild boars, on one side and on the other until it had destroyed them all.

89.44 And the eyes of that sheep were opened, and it saw that ram in the middle of the sheep, how it renounced its glory, and began to butt those sheep, and how it trampled on them and behaved unbecomingly.

89.45 And the Lord of the sheep sent the sheep to another sheep and raised it up to be a ram and to lead the sheep in place of that sheep which had renounced its glory.

89.46 And it went to it, and spoke with it alone, and raised up that ram, and made it the prince and leader of the sheep. And, during all this, those dogs oppressed the sheep.

89.47 And the first ram pursued that second ram and that second ram rose and fled before it. And I looked until those dogs made the first ram fall.

89.48 And that second ram rose up and led the small sheep, and that ram begat many sheep, and fell asleep. And a small sheep became a ram, in place of it, and became the prince and leader of those sheep.

89.49 And those sheep grew and increased; but all the dogs, and foxes, and wild boars, were afraid and fled from it. And that ram butted and killed all the animals, and those animals did not again prevail amongst the sheep, and did not seize anything further from them.

89.50 And that house became large and broad, and for those sheep a high tower was built on that house for the Lord of the sheep. And that house was low but the tower was raised up and high. And the Lord of the sheep stood on that tower and they spread a full table before him.

89.51 And I saw those sheep again, how they went astray, and walked in many ways, and left that house of theirs; and the Lord of the sheep called some of the sheep, and sent them to the sheep, but the sheep began to kill them.

89.52 But one of them was saved, and was not killed, and it sprang away and cried out against the sheep. And they wished to kill it but the Lord of the sheep saved it from the hands of the sheep, brought it up to me, and made it stay.

89.53 And he sent many other sheep to those sheep, to testify to them and to lament over them.

89.54 And after this, I saw how when they left the house of the Lord of the sheep, and his tower, they went astray in everything, and their eyes were blinded. And I saw how the Lord of the sheep wrought much slaughter among them, in their pastures, until those sheep invited that slaughter, and betrayed his place.

89.55 And he gave them into the hands of the lions, and the tigers, and the wolves, and the hyenas, and into the hands of the foxes, and to all the animals. And those wild animals began to tear those sheep in pieces.

89.56 And I saw how he left that house of theirs, and their tower, and gave them all into the hands of the lions so that they might tear them in pieces and devour them, and into the hands of all the animals.

89.57 And I began to cry out with all my power, to call the Lord of the sheep, and to represent to him concerning the sheep; that all the wild animals were devouring them.

89.58 But he remained still, although he saw, and he rejoiced that they were devoured, swallowed up and carried off. And he gave them into the hands of all the animals for food.

89.59 And he called seventy shepherds, and cast off those sheep, so that they might pasture them. And he said to the shepherds and to their companions:

“Each one of you, from now on, is to pasture the sheep and do whatever I command you.

89.60 And I will hand them over to you, duly numbered, and I will tell you which of them are to be destroyed, and destroy them.” And he handed those sheep over to them.

89.61 And he called another, and said to him: “Observe and see everything that these shepherds do against these sheep for they will destroy from among them more than I have commanded them.

89.62 And write down all the excess and destruction, which is wrought by the shepherds; how many they destroy at my command and how many they destroy of their own volition. Write down against each shepherd, individually, all that he destroys.

89.63 And read out in front of me exactly how many they destroy of their own volition and how many are handed over for destruction so that this may be a testimony for me against them. So that I may know all the deeds of the shepherds in order to hand them over for judgment. And I will see what they do, whether they abide by my command with which I have commanded them, or not.

89.64 But they must not know this, and you must not show this to them, but only write down against each individual in his time all that the shepherds destroy, and bring it all up to me.”

89.65 And I looked until those shepherds pastured at their times, and they began to kill and destroy more than they were commanded, and they gave those sheep into the hands of the lions.

89.66 And the lions and the tigers devoured and swallowed up the majority of those sheep, and the wild boars devoured with them; and they burnt down that tower and demolished that house.

89.67 And I was extremely sad about that tower because that house of the sheep had been demolished; and after that I was unable to see whether those sheep went into that house.

89.68 And the shepherds and their companions handed those sheep over to all the animals so that they might devour them. Each one of them, at his time, received an exact number, and for each of them, one after the other, there was written in a book how many of them were destroyed.

89.69 And each one killed and destroyed more than was prescribed and I began to weep and moan very much because of those sheep.

89.70 And likewise, in the vision, I saw that one who wrote, how each day, he wrote down each one that was destroyed by those shepherds. And he brought up, and presented, the whole book to the Lord of the sheep, everything they had done and all that each one of them had made away with, and all that they had handed to destruction.

89.71 And the book was read out in front of the Lord of the sheep, and he took the book in his hand, read it, sealed it, and put it down.

89.72 And after this I saw how the shepherds pastured for twelve hours, and behold three of those sheep returned, and arrived, and came and began to build up all that had fallen down from that house; but the wild boars hindered them so that they could not.

89.73 And they again began to build, as before, and they raised up that tower, and it was called the high tower. And they began again to place a table before the tower but all the bread on it was unclean and was not pure.

89.74 And, besides all this, the eyes of these sheep were blinded so that they could not see, and their shepherds likewise. And they handed yet more of them over to destruction, and they trampled on the sheep with their feet, and devoured them.

89.75 But the Lord of the sheep remained still, until all the sheep were scattered abroad, and had mixed with them, and they did not save them from the hands of the animals.

89.76 And that one who wrote the book brought it up, showed it, and read it out in the dwelling of the Lord of the sheep. And he entreated Him on behalf of them, and petitioned Him, as he showed Him all the deeds of their shepherds and testified in front of Him against all the shepherds.

89.77 And he took the book, put it down by Him, and went out.

90.1 And I looked until the time that thirty-five shepherds had pastured the sheep the same way, and, each individually; they all completed their time like the first ones. And others received them into their hands to pasture them, at their time, each shepherd at his own time.

90.2 And after this, I saw in the vision, all the birds of the sky coming: - The eagles, the vultures, and the kites, and the ravens. But the eagles led all the birds, and they began to devour those sheep, to peck out their eyes, and to devour their flesh.

90.3 And the sheep cried out because the birds devoured their flesh. And I cried out and lamented in my sleep because of that shepherd who pastured the sheep.

90.4 And I looked until those sheep were devoured by those dogs, and by the eagles, and by the kites, and they left them neither flesh nor skin, nor sinew, until only their bones remained. And their bones fell upon the ground and the sheep became few.

90.5 And I looked until the time that twenty-three shepherds had pastured, and they completed, each in his time, fifty eight times.

90.6 And small lambs were born from those white sheep, and they began to open their eyes, to see, and to cry to the sheep.

90.7 But the sheep did not cry to them, and did not listen to what they said to them, but were extremely deaf, and their eyes were extremely and excessively blinded.

90.8 And I saw in the vision, how the ravens flew upon those lambs, and took one of those lambs, and dashed the sheep in pieces and devoured them.

90.9 And I looked until horns came up on those lambs but the ravens cast their horns down. And I looked until a big horn grew on one of those sheep, and their eyes were opened.

90.10 And it looked at them and their eyes were opened. And it cried to the sheep, and the rams saw it, and they all ran to it.

90.11 And, besides all this, those eagles, and vultures, and ravens, and kites, were still continually tearing the sheep in pieces, and flying upon them and devouring them. And the sheep were silent but the rams lamented and cried out.

90.12 And those ravens battled and fought with it, and wished to make away with its horn, but they did not prevail against it.

90.13 And I looked at them until the shepherds and the eagles, and those vultures, and kites, came and cried to the ravens that they should dash the horn of that ram in pieces. And they fought and battled with it, and it fought with them and cried out so that its help might come to it.

90.14 And I looked until that man, who wrote down the names of the shepherds and brought them up before the Lord of the sheep, came, and he helped that ram and showed it everything; its help was coming down.

90.15 And I looked until that Lord of the sheep came to them in anger, all those who saw him fled, and they all fell into the shadow in front of Him.

90.16 All the eagles and vultures and ravens and kites, gathered together and brought with them all the wild sheep, and they all came together and helped one another in order to dash that horn of the ram in pieces.

90.17 And I looked at that man, who wrote the book at the command of the Lord, until he opened that book of the destruction that those last twelve shepherds had wrought. And he showed, in front of the Lord of the sheep, that they had destroyed even more than those before them had.

90.18 And I looked until the Lord of the sheep came to them and took the Staff of His Anger and struck the Earth. And the Earth was split. And all the animals, and the birds of the sky, fell from those sheep and sank in the earth; and it closed over them.

90.19 And I looked until a big sword was given to the sheep. And the sheep went out against all the wild animals to kill them. And all the animals, and birds of the sky, fled before them.

90.20 And I looked until a throne was set up in a pleasant land and the Lord of the sheep sat on it. And they took all the sealed books and opened the books in front of the Lord of the sheep.

90.21 And the Lord called those men, the seven first white ones, and commanded them to bring in front of Him the first star, which went before those stars whose private parts were like horses, and they brought them all in front of Him.

90.22 And He said to that man who wrote in front of Him, who was one of the seven white ones, He said to him: "Take those seventy shepherds, to whom I handed over the sheep, and who, on their own authority, took and killed more than I commanded them."

90.23 And behold, I saw them all bound, and they all stood in front of Him.

90.24 And the judgment was held, first on the stars, and they were judged and found guilty, and they went to the place of damnation, and were thrown into a deep place full of fire burning, and full of pillars of fire.

90.25 And those seventy shepherds were judged, and found guilty, and they also were thrown into that abyss of fire.

90.26 And I saw at that time, how a similar abyss was opened in the middle of the Earth which was full of fire, and they brought those blind sheep and they were all judged, and found guilty, and thrown into that abyss of fire and they burned. And that abyss was on the south of that house.

90.27 And I saw those sheep burning and their bones were burning.

90.28 And I stood up to look until he folded up that old house, and they removed all the pillars, and all the beams and ornaments of that house were folded up with it. And they removed it and put it in a place in the south of the land.

90.29 And I looked until the Lord of the sheep brought a new house, larger and higher than the first one, and he set it up on the site of the first one that had been folded up. And all its pillars were new, and its ornaments were new and larger than those of the first one - the old one that had been removed. And the Lord of the sheep was in the middle of it.

90.30 And I saw all the sheep that were left, and all the animals of the earth, and all the birds of the sky, falling down and worshipping those sheep, and entreating them and obeying them in every command.

90.31 And after this, those three who were dressed in white and had taken hold of my hand, the ones who had brought me up at first. They, with the hand of that ram also holding me, took me up, and put me down in the middle of those sheep before the judgment was held.

90.32 And those sheep were all white and their wool thick and pure.

90.33 And all those which had been destroyed and scattered, and all the wild animals, and all the birds of the sky, gathered together in that house, and the Lord of the sheep rejoiced very much because they were all good, and had returned to His house.

90.34 And I looked until they had laid down that sword, which had been given to the sheep, and they brought it back into his house, and it was sealed in front of the Lord. And all the sheep were enclosed in that house but it did not hold them.

90.35 And the eyes of all of them were opened, and they saw well, and there was not one among them that did not see.

90.36 And I saw that that house was large, broad, and exceptionally full.

90.37 And I saw how a white bull was born, and its horns were big, and all the wild animals, and all the birds of the sky, were afraid of it, and entreated it continually.

90.38 And I looked until all their species were transformed and they all became white bulls. And the first among them was a wild-ox. And that wild-ox was a large animal and had big black horns on its head. And the Lord of the sheep rejoiced over them, and over all the bulls.

90.39 And I was asleep in the middle of them and I woke up and saw everything.

90.40 And this is the vision which I saw while I was asleep, and I woke up, blessed the Lord of Righteousness, and ascribed glory to him.

90.41 But after this I wept bitterly and my tears did not stop until I could not endure it. When I looked, they ran down, because of what I saw, for everything will come to pass and be fulfilled, and all the deeds of men, in their order, were shown to me.

90.42 That night I remembered my first dream, and because of it I wept, and was disturbed, because I had seen that vision.

Section V. XCI-CIV

A Book of Exhortation and Promised Blessing for the Righteous and of Malediction and Woe for the Sinners.

91.1 And now my son Methuselah, call to me all your brothers, and gather to me all the children of your mother. For a voice calls me, and a spirit has been poured over me, so that I may show you everything that will come upon you forever.

91.2 And after this Methuselah went and called his brothers to him and gathered his relations.

91.3 And he spoke about righteousness to all his sons, and said:

“Hear, my children, all the words of your father, and listen properly to the voice of my mouth, for I will testify and speak to you - my beloved. Love uprightness and walk in it!

91.4 And do not draw near to uprightness with a double heart, and do not associate with those of a double heart, but walk in righteousness my children and it will lead you in good paths, and righteousness will be your companion.

91.5 For I know that the state of wrongdoing will continue on Earth, and a great punishment will be carried out on the Earth, and an end will be made of all iniquity. And it will be cut off at its roots and its whole edifice will pass away.

91.6 And iniquity will again be complete on the Earth, and all the deeds of iniquity, and the deeds of wrong, and of wickedness, will prevail for a second time.”

91.7 And when iniquity, and sin, and blasphemy, and wrong, and all kinds of evil deeds increase, and when apostasy, wickedness, and uncleanness increase, a great punishment will come from Heaven upon all these. And the Holy Lord will come in anger, and in wrath, to execute judgment on the Earth.

91.8 In those days wrongdoing will be cut off at its roots, and the roots of iniquity, together with deceit, will be destroyed from under Heaven.

91.9 And all the idols of the nations will be given up, their towers will be burnt in fire, and they will remove them from the whole Earth. And they will be thrown down into the Judgment of Fire, and will be destroyed in anger, and in the severe judgment that is forever.

91.10 And the righteous will rise from sleep, and wisdom will rise, and will be given to them.

91.11 And after this the roots of iniquity will be cut off and the sword will destroy the sinners. The blasphemers will be cut off; in every place blasphemy will be destroyed by the sword.

91.12 And after this there will be another week; the eighth, that of righteousness, and a sword will be given to it so that the Righteous Judgment may be executed on those who do wrong, and the sinners will be handed over into the hands of the righteous.

91.13 And, at its end, they will acquire Houses because of their righteousness, and a House will be built for the Great King in Glory, forever.

91.14 And after this, in the ninth week, the Righteous Judgment will be revealed to the whole world. And all the deeds of the impious will vanish from the whole Earth. And the world will be written down for destruction and all men will look to the Path of Uprightness.

91.15 And, after this, in the tenth week, in the seventh part, there will be an Eternal Judgment that will be executed on the Watchers and the Great Eternal Heaven that will spring from the midst of the Angels.

91.16 And the First Heaven will vanish and pass away and a New Heaven will appear, and all the Powers of Heaven will shine forever, with sevenfold light.

91.17 And after this, there will be many weeks without number, forever, in goodness and in righteousness. And from then on sin will never again be mentioned.

91.18 And now I tell you, my children, and show you the paths of righteousness, and the paths of wrongdoing. And I will show you again so that you may know what is to come.

91.19 And now listen, my children, walk in the paths of righteousness and do not walk in the paths of wrongdoing, for all those who walk in the path of iniquity will be destroyed forever.

92.¹ Written by Enoch-the-Scribe, this complete wisdom and teaching, praised by all men and a judge of the whole Earth.

For all my sons who dwell on Earth. And for the last generations who will practice justice and peace.

92.2 Let not your spirit be saddened by the times for the Holy and Great One has appointed days for all things.

92.3 And the righteous man will rise from sleep, will rise and will walk in the path of righteousness, and all his paths, and his journeys, will be in eternal goodness and mercy.

92.4 He will show mercy to the righteous man and to him give eternal uprightness, and to him give power. And he will live in goodness, and righteousness, and will walk in eternal light.

92.5 And sin will be destroyed in darkness, forever, and from that day will never again be seen.

93.¹ And, after this, Enoch began to speak from the books:

93.2 And Enoch said: "Concerning the sons of righteousness, and concerning the chosen of the world, and concerning the plant of righteousness and uprightness, I will speak these things to you, and make them known to you, my children.

I, Enoch, according to that which appeared to me in the Heavenly vision, and that which I know from the words of the Holy Angels, and understanding from the Tablets of Heaven."

93.3 And Enoch then began to speak from the books, and said: "I was born the seventh, in the first week, while justice and righteousness still lasted.

93.4 And, after me, in the second week, great injustice will arise, and deceit will have sprung up. And in it there will be the First End, and in it, a man will be saved. And after it has ended, iniquity will grow, and He will make a law for the sinners.

93.5 And after this in the third week, at its end, a man will be chosen as the Plant of Righteous Judgment, and after him will come the Plant of Righteousness, forever.

93.6 And after this, in the fourth week, at its end, visions of the righteous and Holy will be seen, and a Law for All Generations, and an enclosure will be made for them.

93.7 And after this, in the fifth week, at its end, a House of Glory and Sovereignty will be built forever.

93.8 And after this, in the sixth week, all those who live in it will be blinded. And the hearts of them all, lacking wisdom, will sink into impiety. And in it, a man will ascend, and at its end the House of Sovereignty will be burnt with fire. And in it the whole race of the chosen root will be scattered.

93.9 And after this, in the seventh week, an apostate generation will arise. And many will be its deeds - but all its deeds will be apostasy.

93.10 And at its end, the Chosen Righteous, from the Eternal Plant of Righteousness, will be chosen, to whom will be given sevenfold teaching, concerning his whole creation.

93.11 For is there any man who can hear the voice of the Holy One and not be disturbed? And who is there who can think his thoughts? And who is there who can look at all the works of Heaven?

93.12 And how should there be anyone who could understand the works of Heaven, and see a soul, or a spirit, and tell about it, or ascend and see all their ends and comprehend them, or make anything like them?

93.13 And is there any man who could know the length and breadth of the Earth? And to who has all its measurements been shown?

93.14 Or is there any man who could know the length of Heaven, and what is its height, and on what is it fixed, and how large is the number of stars, and where do all the lights rest?

94.¹ And now I say to you, my children, love righteousness and walk in it; for the paths of righteousness are worthy of acceptance, but the paths of iniquity will quickly be destroyed and vanish.

94.2 And to certain men, from a future generation, the paths of wrongdoing and of death will be revealed; and they will keep away from them and will not follow them.

94.3 And now I say to you, the righteous: do not walk in the wicked path, or in wrongdoing, or in the paths of death, and do not draw near to them or you may be destroyed.

94.4 But seek, and choose for yourself, righteousness, and a life that is pleasing and walk in the paths of peace so that you may live and prosper.

94.5 And hold my words firmly in the thoughts of your heart, and do not let them be erased from your heart, for I know that sinners will tempt men to debase wisdom, and no place will be found for it, and temptation will in no way decrease.

94.6 Woe to those who build iniquity and found deceit for they will quickly be thrown down and will not have peace.

94.7 Woe to those who build their houses with sin, for from their whole foundation they will be thrown down, and by the sword they shall fall, and those who acquire gold and silver will quickly be destroyed in the judgment.

94.8 Woe to you, you rich, for you have trusted in your riches, but from your riches you will depart for you did not remember the Most High in the days of your riches.

94.9 You have committed blasphemy, and iniquity, and are ready for the days of the outpouring of blood, and for the day of darkness, and for the day of the Great Judgment.

94.10 Thus I say, and make known to you, that He who created you will throw you down, and over your fall there will be no mercy, but your creator will rejoice at your destruction.

94.11 And your righteousness in those days will be a reproach to the sinners and to the impious.

95.¹ Would that my eyes were a rain-cloud, so that I might weep over you, and pour out my tears like rain, so that I might have rest from the sorrow of my heart!

95.2 Who permitted you to practice hatred and wickedness? May judgment come upon you, the sinners!

95.3 Do not be afraid of the sinners, you righteous, for the Lord will again deliver them into your hands, so that you may execute judgment on them as you desire.

95.4 Woe to you who pronounce anathema that you cannot remove.. Healing will be far from you because of your sin.

95.5 Woe to you who repay your neighbours with evil for you will be repaid according to your deeds.

95.6 Woe to you, you lying witnesses, and to those who weigh out iniquity, for you will quickly be destroyed.

95.7 Woe to you, you sinners, because you persecute the righteous, for you yourselves will be handed over and persecuted, you men of iniquity, and their yoke will be heavy on you.

96.1 Be hopeful, you righteous, for the sinners will quickly be destroyed before you, and you will have power over them, as you desire.

96.2 And in the day of the distress of the sinners, your young will rise up, like eagles, and your nest will be higher than that of vultures. And you will go up, and like badgers, enter the crevices of the earth, and the clefts of the rock, forever, before the lawless, but they will groan and weep because of you, like satyrs.

96.3 And do not be afraid you who have suffered, for you will receive healing, and a bright light will shine upon you, and the Voice of Rest you will hear from Heaven.

96.4 Woes to you, you sinners, for your riches make you appear righteous, but your hearts prove you to be sinners. And this word will be a testimony against you as a reminder of your evil deeds.

96.5 Woe to you who devour the finest of the wheat, and drink the best of the water, and trample upon the humble through your power.

96.6 Woe to you who drink water all the time, for you will quickly be repaid, and will become exhausted and dry for you have left the spring of life.

96.7 Woe to you who commit iniquity, and deceit, and blasphemy, it will be a reminder of evil against you.

96.8 Woe to you, you powerful, who through power oppress the righteous; for the day of your destruction will come.

In those days many good days will come for the righteous in the day of your judgment.

97.1 Believe, you righteous, that the sinners will become an object of shame and will be destroyed on the Day of Judgment.

97.2 Be it known to you, sinners, that the Most High remembers your destruction and that the Angels rejoice over your destruction.

97.3 What will you do, you sinners, and where will you flee on that day of judgment when you hear the sound of prayer of the righteous?

97.4 But you will not be like them against whom this word will be a testimony:

“You have been associated with the sinners.”

97.5 And in those days, the prayer of the Holy will be in front of the Lord, and for you will come the days of your judgment.

97.6 And the words of your iniquity will be read out before the Great and Holy One, and your faces will blush with shame, and every deed which is founded upon iniquity will be rejected.

97.7 Woe to you, you sinners, who are in the middle of the sea, or on dry ground, their memory will be harmful to you.

97.8 Woe to you who acquire silver and gold, but not in righteousness, and say: “We have become very rich and have possessions, and have acquired everything that we desired.

97.9 And now let us do what we planned, for we have gathered silver and filled our storehouses, and as many as water are the servants of our houses.”

97.10 And like the water your life will flow away, for your riches will not stay with you, but will quickly go up from you, for you acquired everything in iniquity and you will be given over to a great curse.

98.1 Now I swear to you, the wise, and the foolish, that you will see many things on the earth.

98.2 For you men will put on yourselves more adornments than a woman, and more coloured garments than a girl, clothed in sovereignty, and in majesty, and in power, and silver, and gold, and purple, and honours, - and food will be poured out like water.

98.3 Because of this they will have neither knowledge nor wisdom. And through this, they will be destroyed, together with their possessions, and with all their glory and their honour. And in shame, and in slaughter, and in great destitution, their spirits will be thrown into the fiery furnace.

98.4 I swear to you, you sinners, that as a mountain has not, and will not, become a slave, nor a hill a woman's maid, so sin was not sent on the Earth but man, of himself, created it. And those who commit it will be subject to a great curse.

98.5 And barrenness has not been given to a woman but because of the deeds of her hand she dies without children.

98.6 I swear to you, you sinners, by the Holy and Great One, that all your evil deeds are revealed in Heaven and that your wrongdoing is not covered or hidden.

98.7 And do not think in your spirit nor say in your heart, that you do not know, or do not see, every sin is written down every day in Heaven in front of the Most High.

98.8 From now on, you know that all your wrongdoing that you do will be written down every day, until the day of your judgment.

98.9 Woe to you, you fools, for you will be destroyed through your folly. And you do not listen to the wise and good will not come upon you.

98.10 And now know that you are ready for the day of destruction. And do not hope that you will live, you sinners; rather you will go and die, for you know no ransom. You are ready for the Day of the Great Judgment and for the day of distress and great shame for your spirits.

98.11 Woe to you, you stubborn of heart who do evil and eat blood, from where do you have good things to eat and drink and to be satisfied? From all the good things which our Lord the Most High has placed in abundance on the earth. Therefore you will not have peace.

98.12 Woe to you who love deeds of iniquity. Why do you hope for good for yourselves? Know that you will be given into the hands of the righteous, and they will cut your throats and kill you, and will not have mercy on you.

98.13 Woe to you who rejoice in the distress of the righteous for graves will not be dug for you.

98.14 Woe to you who declare the words of the righteous empty for you will have no hope of life.

98.15 Woe to you who write lying words, and the words of the impious, for they write their lies so that men may hear and continue their folly. And they will not have peace but will die a sudden death.

99.1 Woe to you who do impious deeds and praise and honour lying words; you will be destroyed and will not have a good life.

99.2 Woe to you who alter the words of truth, and they distort the eternal law and count themselves as being without sin; they will be trampled underfoot on the ground.

99.3 In those days make ready, you righteous, to raise your prayers as a reminder and lay them as a testimony before the Angels, that they may lay the sin of the sinners before the Most High as a reminder.

99.4 In those days the nations will be thrown into confusion and the races of the nations will rise on the Day of Destruction.

99.5 And in those days, those who are in need will go out, seize their children, and cast out their children. And their offspring will slip from them, and they will cast out their children while they are still sucklings, and will not return to them, and will not have mercy on their beloved ones.

99.6 And again I swear to you, the sinners, that sin is ready for the Day of Unceasing Bloodshed.

99.7 And they worship stone, and some carve images of gold and of silver, and of wood and of clay. And some, with no knowledge, worship unclean spirits and demons, and every kind of error. But no help will be obtained from them.

99.8 And they will sink into impiety because of the folly of their hearts, and their eyes will be blinded through the fear of their hearts, and through the vision of their ambitions.

99.9 Through these they will become impious and fearful, for they do all their deeds with lies, and worship stones, and they will be destroyed at the same moment.

99.10 And in those days, blessed are those who accept the words of wisdom, and understand them, and follow the paths of the Most High, and walk in the path of righteousness, and do not act impiously with the impious, for they will be saved.

99.11 Woe to you who extend evil to your neighbours; for you will be killed in Sheol.

99.12 Woe to you who lay foundations of sin and deceit, and who cause bitterness on the Earth, for because of this an end will be made of them.

99.13 Woe to you who build your houses with the toil of others, and all their building materials are the sticks and stones of sin; I say to you: "You will not have peace."

99.14 Woe to those who reject the measure, and the eternal inheritance of their fathers, and cause their souls to follow error, for they will not have rest.

99.15 Woe to those who commit iniquity, and help wrong, and kill their neighbours, until the Day of the Great Judgment; for he will throw down your glory.

99.16 And you put evil into your hearts, and rouse the spirit of his anger, so that he may destroy you all with the sword. And all the righteous and the Holy will remember your sin.

100.¹ And in those days, and in one place, fathers and sons will strike one another, and brothers will together fall in death, until their blood flows as if it were a stream.

100.2 For a man will not, in mercy, withhold his hand from his sons, nor from his son's sons, in order to kill them. And the sinner will not withhold his hand from his honoured brother from dawn until the Sun sets they will kill one another.

100.3 And the horse will walk up to its chest in the blood of sinners and the chariot will sink up to its height.

100.4 And in those days the Angels will come down into the hidden places, and gather together in one place all those who have helped sin, and the Most High will rise on that day to execute the Great Judgment on all the sinners.

100.5 And he will set guards, from the Holy Angels, over all the righteous and Holy, and they will guard them like the apple of an eye, until an end is made of all evil and all sin. And even if the righteous sleep a long sleep they have nothing to fear.

100.6 And the wise men will see the truth, and the sons of the Earth will understand all the words of this book, and they will know that their riches will not be able to save them or overthrow their sin.

100.7 Woe to you, you sinners, when you afflict the righteous on the day of severe trouble, and burn them with fire, you will be repaid according to your deeds.

100.8 Woe to you, you perverse of heart who watch to devise evil; fear will come upon you and there is no one who will help you.

100.9 Woe to you, you sinners, for an account of the words of your mouth, and for an account of the deeds of your hands that you have impiously done; you will burn in blazing flames of fire.

100.10 And now know that the Angels will inquire in Heaven into your deeds, from the Sun and the Moon and the Stars, into your sins, for on earth you execute judgment on the righteous.

100.11 And all the clouds and mist and dew and rain will testify against you, for they will be withheld from you so that they do not fall on you, and they will think about your sins.

100.12 And now give gifts to the rain, so that it may not be withheld from falling on you, and so that the dew, if it has accepted gold and silver from you, may fall.

100.13 When the hoarfrost and snow, with their cold, and all the snow-winds with their torments fall on you. In those days, you will not be able to stand before them.

101.1 Contemplate Heaven, all you sons of Heaven, and all the works of the Most High, and fear him, and do not do evil in front of Him.

101.2 If He closes the Windows of Heaven, and withholds the rain and the dew, so that it does not fall on the earth because of you, what will you do?

101.3 And if he sends his anger upon you, and upon all your deeds, will you not entreat him? For you speak proud and hard against his righteousness. And you will not have peace.

101.4 And do you not see the captains of the ships; how their ships are tossed by the waves and rocked by the winds and are in distress?

101.5 And because of this they are afraid, for all their good possessions that go out on the sea with them, and they think nothing good in their hearts, only that the sea will swallow them up, and that they will be destroyed in it.

101.6 Is not all the sea, and all its waters, and all its movement, the work of the Most High, and did he not seal all it's doings and bind it all with sand?

101.7 And at his rebuke it dries up and becomes afraid, and all its fish die, and everything in it; but you sinners who are on Earth do not fear him.

101.8 Did he not make Heaven, Earth, and everything that is in them? And who gave knowledge, and wisdom, to all things that move on the ground and in the sea?

101.9 And do not those captains of the ships fear the sea?

Yet, sinners do not fear the Most High.

102.1 And in those days, if he brings a fierce fire upon you, where will you flee, and where will you be safe? And when he utters his voice against you will you not be terrified and afraid?

102.2 And all the Lights will shake with great fear, and the whole Earth will be terrified, and will tremble and quail.

102.3 And all the Angels will carry out their commands, and will seek to hide from the One who is Great in Glory, and the children of the Earth will tremble and shake; and you sinners will be cursed forever and will not have peace.

102.4 Do not be afraid you souls of the righteous, and be hopeful, you who have died in righteousness.

102.5 And do not be sad that your souls have gone down into Sheol in sadness and that your bodies did not obtain during your life a reward in accordance with your goodness.

102.6 But when you die the sinners will say about you: "As we die, the righteous have also died, and of what use to them were their deeds?"

102.7 "Behold, like us they have died in sadness and in darkness, and what advantage do they have over us? From now on we are equal."

102.8 "And what will they receive and what will they see forever? For behold, they too have died, and from now on they will never again see the light.”

102.9 And I say to you, you sinners: “You are content to eat and drink, and strip men naked, and steal, and sin, and acquire possessions, and see good days.

102.10 But you saw the righteous, how their end was peace, for no wrong was found in them until the day of their death.”

102.11 “But they were destroyed and became as though they had not been and their souls went down to Sheol in distress.”

103.1 And now I swear to you, the righteous, by His Great Glory and His Honour, and by His Magnificent Sovereignty, and by His Majesty: - I swear to you that I understand this mystery.

103.2 And I have read the Tablets of Heaven and seen the writing of the Holy Ones. And I found written and engraved in it, concerning them, that all good, and joy, and honour, have been made ready, and written down, for the spirits of those who died in righteousness.

103.3 And much good will be given to you in recompense for your toil and that your lot will be more excellent than the lot of the living.

103.4 And the spirits of you who have died in righteousness will live, and your spirits will rejoice and be glad, and the memory of them will remain in front of the Great One for all the generations of eternity. Therefore do not fear their abuse.

103.5 Woe to you, you sinners, when you die in your sin, and those who are like you say about you: “Blessed were the sinners they saw their days.

103.6 And now they have died in prosperity and wealth, distress and slaughter they did not see during their life, but they have died in glory, and judgment was not executed on them in their life.”

103.7 Know that their souls will be made to go down into Sheol, they will be wretched, and their distress will be great.

103.8 And in darkness, and in chains, and in burning flames, your spirits will come to the Great Judgment. And the Great Judgment will last for all generations, forever. Woe to you for you will not have peace.

103.9 Do not say, the righteous and the good who were alive; “In the days of our affliction we toiled laboriously, and saw every affliction, and met many evils. We were spent and became few and our spirit small.

103.10 We were destroyed and there was no one who helped us with words or with deeds. We were powerless and found nothing. We were tortured and destroyed and did not expect to see life from one day to the next.

103 11 We hoped to become the head but became the tail. We toiled and laboured, but were not masters of the fruits of our toil; we became food for the sinners, and the lawless made their yoke heavy upon us.

103.12 Those who hated us, those who goaded us, were masters of us. And to those who hated us we bowed our necks but they did not have mercy on us.

103.13 We sought to escape from them so that we might flee and be at rest. But we found no place where we might flee and be safe from them.

103.14 We complained about them to the rulers, in our distress, and cried out against those who devoured us, but they took no notice of our cries, and did not wish to listen to our voice.

103.15 And they helped those who plundered us and devoured us, and those who made us few, and they concealed their wrongdoing, and did not remove from us the yoke of those who devoured us, and scattered us, and killed us. And they concealed our slaughter and did not remember that they had raised their hands against us.”

104.1 I swear to you, you righteous, that in Heaven the Angels remember you for good in front of the Glory of the Great One, and that your names are written down in front of the Glory of the Great One.

104.2 Be hopeful! For you were formerly put to shame through evils and afflictions, but now you will shine like the Lights of Heaven, and will be seen, and the Gate of Heaven will be opened to you.

104.3 And persevere in your cry for judgment and it will appear to you, for justice will be exacted from the rulers for all your distress, and from all those who helped those who plundered you.

104.4 Be hopeful, and do not abandon your hope, for you will have great joy like the Angels of Heaven.

104.5 What will you have to do? You will not have to hide on the day of the Great Judgment, nor will you be found to be sinners. The Eternal Judgment will be upon you for all the generations of eternity.

104.6 And now do not be afraid, you righteous, when you see the sinners growing strong and prospering in their desires, and do not be associated with them but keep far away from their wrongdoing, for you will be associates of the Host of Heaven.

104.7 For you sinners say: “None of our sins will be inquired into and written down!” But they will write down your sins every day.

104.8 And now I show you that light and darkness, day and night, see all your sins.

104.9 Do not be impious in your hearts, and do not lie, and do not alter the words of truth, nor say that the words of the Holy and Great One are lies, and do not praise your idols. For all your lies, and all your impiety, lead not to righteousness but to great sin.

104.10 And now I know this mystery; that many sinners will alter and distort the words of truth, and speak evil words, and lie, and concoct great fabrications, and write books in their own words.

104.11 But when they write my words exactly in their languages, and do not alter or omit anything from my words, but write everything exactly, everything that I testified about before; then I know another mystery:

104.12 That books will be given to the righteous and wise and will be a source of joy and truth and much wisdom.

104.13 And books will be given to them, and they will believe in them and rejoice over them; and all the righteous who have learnt from them all the ways of truth will be glad.

105.1 And in those days, says the Lord, they shall call and testify to the sons of the Earth about the wisdom in them. Show it to them for you are their leaders and the rewards will be over all the Earth.

105.2 For my son and I will join ourselves with them, forever, in the paths of uprightness during their lives.

And you will have peace.

Rejoice - you sons of uprightness!

Amen

Fragment of the Book of Noah

106.1 And after those days my son Methuselah chose a wife for his son Lamech and she became pregnant by him and bore a son.

106.2 And his body was white like snow, and red like the flower of a rose, and the hair of his head was white like wool. And his eyes were beautiful and when he opened his eyes he made the whole house bright, like the Sun, so that the whole house was exceptionally bright.

106.3 And when he was taken from the hand of the midwife he opened his mouth and spoke to the Lord of Righteousness.

106.4 And his father Lamech was afraid of him, and fled, and went to his father Methuselah.

106.5 And he said to him: "I have begotten a strange son; he is not like a man but is like the children of the Angels of Heaven, of a different type and not like us. And his eyes are like the rays of the Sun and his face glorious.

106.6 And it seems to me that he is not sprung from me but from the Angels and I am afraid that something extraordinary may be done on the earth in his days.

106.7 And now, my father, I am entreating you and petitioning you, to go to our father Enoch, and learn from him the truth, for his dwelling is with the Angels."

106.8 And when Methuselah heard the words of his son he came to me, at the ends of the Earth, for he had heard that I was there. And he cried out, and I heard his voice and went to him. And I said to him: "Behold I am here my son, for you have come to me."

106.9 And he answered me, and said: "Because of a great matter I have come to you, and because of a disturbing vision, have I come near.

106.10 And now hear me, my father, for a child has been born to my son Lamech, whose form and type are not like the type of a man. His colour is whiter than snow, and redder than the flower of the rose, and the hair of his head is whiter than white wool. And his eyes are like the rays of the Sun; and he opened his eyes and made the whole house bright.

106.11 And he was taken from the hand of the midwife, and he opened his mouth, and blessed the Lord of Heaven.

106.12 And his father Lamech was afraid and fled to me. And he does not believe he is sprung from him but thinks him to be from the Angels of Heaven. And behold, I have come to you, so that you may make known to me the truth."

106.13 And I, Enoch, answered and said to him: "The Lord will do new things on Earth, and this I have already seen in a vision, and made known to you. For in the generation of my father, Jared, some from the height of Heaven transgressed the word of the Lord.

106.14 And behold, they commit sin and transgress the law, and have been promiscuous with women, and commit sin with them, and have married some of them, and have begotten children by them.

106.15 And there will be great destruction over the whole Earth, and there will be a deluge, and there will be great destruction for one year.

106.16 But this child, who has been born to you, will be left on the Earth, and his three sons will be saved with him. When all the men who are on the Earth die he and his sons will be saved.

106.17 They will beget on the Earth giants, not of spirit, but of flesh, and there will be great wrath on Earth, and the Earth will be cleansed of all corruption.

106.18 And now make known to your son Lamech that the one who has been born is truly his son. And call his name Noah, for he will be a remnant for you and he and his sons will be saved from the destruction which is coming on the earth because of all the sin and all the iniquity, which will be committed on the Earth in his days.

106.19 But after this, there will be yet greater iniquity than that which was committed on the earth before. For I know the mysteries of the Holy Ones, for the Lord showed them to me and made them known to me, and I read them in the Tablets of Heaven.

107.¹ And I saw written on them, that generation upon generation will do wrong, until a generation of righteousness shall arise, and wrongdoing shall be destroyed, and sin shall depart from the earth, and everything good shall come upon it.

107.2 And now, my son, go, make known to your son Lamech, that this child that has been born, is truly his son, and this is no lie.

107.3 And when Methuselah had heard the words of his father Enoch - for he showed him everything which is secret - he returned, having seen him, and called the name of that child Noah; for he will comfort the Earth after all the destruction.

108.1 Another book which Enoch wrote for his son Methuselah and for those who should come after him and keep the law in the last days.

108.2 You who have observed, and are waiting in these days, until an end shall be made of those who do evil, and an end shall be made of the power of the wrongdoers.

108.3 Do indeed wait until sin shall pass away, for their names shall be erased from the Books of the Holy Ones, and their offspring will be destroyed forever. And their spirits will be killed, and they will cry out and moan in a chaotic desert place, and will burn in fire, for there is no Earth there.

108.4 And there I saw something like a cloud, which could not be discerned, for because of its depth I was not able to look into it. And the flames of a fire I saw, burning brightly, and things like bright mountains revolved and shook from side to side.

108.5 And I asked one of the Holy Angels, who were with me, and I said to him: "What is this bright place? For there is no sky, but only the flames of a burning fire, and the sounds of crying, and weeping, and moaning, and severe pain."

108.6 And he said to me: "This place which you see; here will be thrown the spirits of the sinners, and of the blasphemers, and of those who do evil. And of those who alter everything that the Lord has spoken through the mouths of the prophets about the things that shall be done.

108.7 For there are books, and records, about them in Heaven above so that the Angels may read them and know what is about to come upon the sinners. And upon the spirits of the humble, and of those who afflicted their bodies and were recompensed by God, and of those who were abused by evil men.

108.8 Those who loved God and did not love gold, or silver, or any possessions, but gave up their bodies to torment.

108.9 Those who, from the moment they existed, did not desire earthly food, but counted themselves as a breath which passes away, and kept to this. And the Lord tested them much, and their spirits were found pure, so that they might bless His Name."

108.10 And all their blessings I have recounted in the books, and he has assigned them their reward, for they were found to be such that they loved Heaven more than their life in the world. And although they were trampled underfoot by evil men, and had to listen to reviling and reproach from them, and were abused, yet they blessed their Lord.

108.11 And the Lord said: "And now I will call the spirits of the good, who are of the Generation of Light, and I will transform those who were born in darkness, who in the flesh were not recompensed with honour as was fitting to their faith.

108.12 And I will bring out into the shining light those who love my Holy Name and I will set each one on the throne of his honour."

108.13 And they will shine for times without number, for righteous is the Judgment of God, for with the faithful He will keep faith in the dwelling of upright paths.

108.14 And they will see those who were born in darkness thrown into the darkness while the righteous shine.

108.15 And the sinners will cry out as they see them shining but they themselves will go where days and times have been written down for them.

The Book of the Secrets of Enoch

INTRODUCTION

The Second Book of Enoch (usually abbreviated 2 Enoch, and otherwise variously known as Slavonic Enoch or The Secrets of Enoch) is a pseudepigraphic (a text whose claimed authorship is unfounded) of the Old Testament. It is usually considered to be part of the Apocalyptic literature. Late 1st century CE is the dating often preferred. The text has been preserved in full only in Slavonic, but in 2009 it was announced that Coptic fragments of the book had been identified. Greek is indicated as the language behind the Slavonic version[1]. It is not regarded as scripture by Jews or any Christian group. It was rediscovered and published at the end of 19th century.

Most scholars consider 2 Enoch to be composed by an unknown Jewish sectarian group, while some authors think it is a 1st century Christian text[2][3]. A very few scholars consider it a later Christian work[4]. This article discusses 2 Enoch. It is distinct from the Book of Enoch, known as 1 Enoch. There is also an unrelated 3 Enoch. The numbering of these texts has been applied by scholars to distinguish the texts from one another.

Dates ranging from the 1st century BC to the 10th century CE have been proposed, with the late 1st century CE often preferred. The date of the text can be deduced solely on the basis of the internal evidence since the book has survived only in the medieval manuscripts (even if a reference of 2 Enoch could be found in Origen's De Principis i, 3:3). Composition shall be later than the Book of the Watchers in 1 Enoch (about III century BCE). The crucial arguments for the early dating of the text have very largely been linked to the themes of the Temple in Jerusalem and its ongoing practices and customs. Scholarly efforts have been in this respect mostly directed toward finding hints that the Sanctuary was still standing when the original text was composed. Scholars noted that the text gives no indication that the destruction of the Temple had already occurred at the time of the book's composition. Critical readers of the pseudepigraphic would have some difficulties finding any explicit expression of feelings of sadness or mourning about the loss of the sanctuary.

Affirmations of the value of animal sacrifice and Enoch's halakhic instructions found in 2 Enoch 59 also appear to be fashioned not in the "preservationist," mishnaic-like mode but rather as if they reflected sacrificial practices that still existed when the author was writing his book. The author tries to legitimize the central place of worship, which through the reference to the place Ahuzan, which is a cryptic name for a Jewish Temple.

Scholars have also previously noted in the text some indications of the ongoing practice of pilgrimage to the central place of worship. These indications could be expected in a text written in the Alexandrian Diaspora. Thus in his instructions to the children, Enoch repeatedly encourages them to bring the gifts before the face of God for the remission of sins, a practice which appears to recall well-known sacrificial customs widespread in the Second Temple period. Further, the Slavonic apocalypse also contains a direct command to visit the Temple three times a day, an inconsistency if the sanctuary had been already destroyed.

The Book of the Secrets of Enoch

Also known as Slavonic Enoch or 2 Enoch

Translated from the Slavonic by W. R. Morfill, M.A.

1.1 There was a wise man, a great artificer, and the Lord conceived love for him and received him, that he should behold the uppermost dwellings and be an eye-witness of the wise and great and inconceivable and immutable realm of God Almighty, of the very wonderful and glorious and bright and many-eyed station of the Lord's servants, and of the inaccessible throne of the Lord, and of the degrees and manifestations of the incorporeal hosts, and of the ineffable ministration of the multitude of the elements, and of the various apparition and inexpressible singing of the host of Cherubim, and of the boundless light.

2 At that time, he said, when my one hundred and sixty-fifth year was completed, I begat my son Mathusal (Methuselah).

3 After this too I lived two hundred years and completed of all the years of my life three hundred and sixty-five years.

4 On the first day of the month I was in my house alone and was resting on my bed and slept.

5 And when I was asleep, great distress came up into my heart, and I was weeping with my eyes in sleep, and I could not understand what this distress was, or what would happen to me.

6 And there appeared to me two men, exceeding big, so that I never saw such on earth; their faces were shining like the sun, their eyes too (were) like a burning light, and from their lips was fire coming forth with clothing and singing of various kinds in appearance purple, their wings brighter than gold, their hands whiter than snow.

7 They were standing at the head of my bed and began to call me by my name.

8 And I arose from my sleep and saw clearly those two men standing in front of me.

9 And I saluted them and was seized with fear and the appearance of my face was changed from terror, and those men said to me:

10 Have courage, Enoch, do not fear; the eternal God sent us to you, and lo! You shalt to-day ascend with us into heaven, and you shall tell your sons and all your household all that they shall do without you on earth in your house, and let no one seek you till the Lord return you to them.

11 And I made haste to obey them and went out from my house, and made to the doors, as it was ordered me, and summoned my sons Mathusal (Methuselah) and Regim and Gaidad and made known to them all the marvels those (men) had told me.

2 1. Listen to me, my children, I know not whither I go, or what will befall me; now therefore, my children, I tell you: turn not from God before the face of the vain, who made not Heaven and earth, for these shall perish and those who worship them, and may the Lord make confident your hearts in the fear of him. And now, my children, let no one think to seek me, until the Lord return me to you.

3.1 It came to pass, when Enoch had told his sons, that the angels took him on to their wings and bore him up on to the first heaven and placed him on the clouds. And there I looked, and again I looked higher, and saw the ether, and they placed me on the first heaven and showed me a very great Sea, greater than the earthly sea.

4.1 They brought before my face the elders and rulers of the stellar orders, and showed me two hundred angels, who rule the stars and (their) services to the heavens, and fly with their wings and come round all those who sail.

5.1 And here I looked down and saw the treasure-houses of the snow, and the angels who keep their terrible store-houses, and the clouds whence they come out and into which they go.

6.1 They showed me the treasure-house of the dew, like oil of the olive, and the appearance of its form, as of all the flowers of the earth; further many angels guarding the treasure-houses of these (things), and how they are made to shut and open.

7.1 And those men took me and led me up on to the second heaven, and showed me darkness, greater than earthly darkness, and there I saw prisoners hanging, watched, awaiting the great and boundless judgment, and these angels (spirits) were dark-looking, more than earthly darkness, and incessantly making weeping through all hours.

2 And I said to the men who were with me: Wherefore are these incessantly tortured? They answered me: These are God's apostates, who obeyed not God's commands, but took counsel with their own will, and turned away with their prince, who also (is) fastened on the fifth heaven.

3 And I felt great pity for them, and they saluted me, and said to me: Man of God, pray for us to the Lord; and I answered to them: Who am I, a mortal man, that I should pray for angels (spirits)? Who knows whither I go, or what will befall me? Or who will pray for me?

8.1 And those men took me thence, and led me up on to the third heaven, and placed me there; and I looked downwards, and saw the produce of these places, such as has never been known for goodness.

2 And I saw all the sweet-flowering trees and beheld their fruits, which were sweet-smelling, and all the foods borne (by them) bubbling with fragrant exhalation.

3 And in the midst of the trees that of life, in that place whereon the Lord rests, when he goes up into paradise; and this tree is of ineffable goodness and fragrance, and adorned more than every existing thing; and on all sides (it is) in form gold-looking and vermilion and fire-like and covers all, and it has produce from all fruits.

4 Its root is in the garden at the earth's end.

5 And paradise is between corruptibility and incorruptibility.

6 And two springs come out which send forth honey and milk, and their springs send forth oil and wine, and they separate into four parts, and go round with quiet course, and go down into the PARADISE OF EDEN, between corruptibility and incorruptibility.

7 And thence they go forth along the earth, and have a revolution to their circle even as other elements.

8 And here there is no unfruitful tree, and every place is blessed.

9 And (there are) three hundred angels very bright, who keep the garden, and with incessant sweet singing and never-silent voices serve the Lord throughout all days and hours.

10 And I said: How very sweet is this place, and those men said to me:

9.1 This place, O Enoch, is prepared for the righteous, who endure all manner of offence from those that exasperate their souls, who avert their eyes from iniquity, and make righteous judgment, and give bread to the hungering, and cover the naked with clothing, and raise up the fallen, and help injured orphans, and who walk without fault before the face of the Lord, and serve him alone, and for them is prepared this place for eternal inheritance.

10.1 And those two men led me up on to the Northern side, and showed me there a very terrible place, and (there were) all manner of tortures in that place: cruel darkness and unilluminated gloom, and there is no light there, but murky fire constantly flaming aloft, and (there is) a fiery river coming forth, and that whole place is everywhere fire, and everywhere (there is) frost and ice, thirst and shivering, while the bonds are very cruel, and the angels (spirits) fearful and merciless, bearing angry weapons, merciless torture, and I said:

2 Woe, woe, how very terrible is this place.

3 And those men said to me: This place, O Enoch, is prepared for those who dishonour God, who on earth practice sin against nature, which is child-corruption after the sodomitic fashion, magic-making, enchantments and devilish witchcrafts, and who boast of their wicked deeds, stealing, lies, calumnies, envy, rancour, fornication, murder, and who, accursed, steal the souls of men, who, seeing the poor take away their goods and themselves wax rich, injuring them for other men's goods; who being able to satisfy the empty, made the hungering to die; being able to clothe, stripped the naked; and who knew not their creator, and bowed to the soulless (and lifeless) gods, who cannot see nor hear, vain gods, (who also) built hewn images and bow down to unclean handiwork, for all these is prepared this place among these, for eternal inheritance.

11.1 Those men took me, and led me up on to the fourth heaven, and showed me all the successive goings, and all the rays of the light of sun and moon.

2 And I measure their goings, and compared their light, and saw that the sun's light is greater than the moon's.

3 Its circle and the wheels on which it goes always, like the wind going past with very marvellous speed, and day and night it has no rest.

4 Its passage and return (are accompanied by) four great stars, (and) each star has under it a thousand stars, to the right of the sun's wheel, (and by) four to the left, each having under it a thousand stars, altogether eight thousand, issuing with the sun continually.

5 And by day fifteen myriads of angels attend it, and by night A thousand.

6 And six-winged ones issue with the angels before the sun's wheel into the fiery flames, and a hundred angels kindle the sun and set it alight.

12.1 And I looked and saw other flying elements of the sun, whose names (are) Phoenixes and Chalkydri, marvellous and wonderful, with feet and tails in the form of a lion, and a crocodile's head, their appearance (is) empurpled, like the rainbow; their size (is) nine hundred measures, their wings (are like) those of angels, each (has) twelve, and they attend and accompany the sun, bearing heat and dew, as it is ordered them from God.

2 Thus (the sun) revolves and goes, and rises under the heaven, and its course goes under the earth with the light of its rays incessantly.

13.¹ Those men bore me away to the east, and placed me at the sun's gates, where the sun goes forth according to the regulation of the seasons and the circuit of the months of the whole year, and the number of the hours day and night.

2 And I saw six gates open, each gate having sixty-one stadia and A quarter of one stadium, and I measured (them) truly, and understood their size (to be) so much, through which the sun goes forth, and goes to the west, and is made even, and rises throughout all the months, and turns back again from the six gates according to the succession of the seasons; thus (the period) of the whole year is finished after the returns of the four seasons.

14.¹ And again those men led me away to the western parts, and showed me six great gates open corresponding to the eastern gates, opposite to where the sun sets, according to the number of the days three hundred and sixty-five and A quarter.

2 Thus again it goes down to the western gates, (and) draws away its light, the greatness of its brightness, under the earth; for since the crown of its shining is in heaven with the Lord, and guarded by four hundred angels, while the sun goes round on wheel under the earth, and stands seven great hours in night, and spends half (its course) under the earth, when it comes to the eastern approach in the eighth hour of the night, it brings its lights, and the crown of shining, and the sun flames forth more than fire.

15.¹ Then the elements of the sun, called Phoenixes and Chalkydri break into song, therefore every bird flutters with its wings, rejoicing at the giver of light, and they broke into song at the command of the Lord.

2 The giver of light comes to give brightness to the whole world, and the morning guard takes shape, which is the rays of the sun, and the sun of the earth goes out, and receives its brightness to light up the whole face of the earth, and they showed me this calculation of the sun's going.

3 And the gates which it enters, these are the great gates of the calculation of the hours of the year; for this reason the sun is a great creation, whose circuit (lasts) twenty-eight years, and begins again from the beginning.

16.¹ Those men showed me the other course, that of the moon, twelve great gates, crowned from west to east, by which the moon goes in and out of the customary times.

2 It goes in at the first gate to the western places of the sun, by the first gates with (thirty)-one (days) exactly, by the second gates with thirty-one days exactly, by the third with thirty days exactly, by the fourth with thirty days exactly, by the fifth with thirty-one days exactly, by the sixth with thirty-one days exactly, by the seventh with thirty days exactly, by the eighth with thirty-one days perfectly, by the ninth with thirty-one days exactly, by the tenth with thirty days perfectly, by the eleventh with thirty-one days exactly, by the twelfth with twenty-eight days exactly.

3 And it goes through the western gates in the order and number of the eastern, and accomplishes the three hundred and sixty-five and a quarter days of the solar year, while the lunar year has three hundred fifty-four, and there are wanting (to it) twelve days of the solar circle, which are the lunar epacts of the whole year.

4 Thus, too, the great circle contains five hundred and thirty-two years.

5 The quarter (of a day) is omitted for three years, the fourth fulfills it exactly.

6 Therefore they are taken outside of heaven for three years and are not added to the number of days, because they change the time of the years to two new months towards completion, to two others towards diminution.

7 And when the western gates are finished, it returns and goes to the eastern to the lights, and goes thus day and night about the heavenly circles, lower than all circles, swifter than the heavenly winds, and spirits and elements and angels flying; each angel has six wings.

8 It has a sevenfold course in nineteen years.

17.¹ In the midst of the heavens I saw armed soldiers, serving the Lord, with tympana and organs, with incessant voice, with sweet voice, with sweet and incessant (voice) and various singing, which it is impossible to describe, and (which) astonishes every mind, so wonderful and marvellous is the singing of those angels, and I was delighted listening to it.

18.¹ The men took me on to the fifth heaven and placed me, and there I saw many and countless soldiers, called Grigori, of human appearance, and their size (was) greater than that of great giants and their faces withered, and the silence of their mouths perpetual, and there was no service on the fifth heaven, and I said to the men who were with me:

2 Wherefore are these very withered and their faces melancholy, and their mouths silent, and (wherefore) is there no service on this heaven?

3 And they said to me: These are the Grigori, who with their prince Satanail (Satan) rejected the Lord of light, and after them are those who are held in great darkness on the second heaven, and three of them went down on to earth from the Lord's throne, to the place Ermon, and broke through their vows on the shoulder of the hill Ermon and saw the daughters of men how good they are, and took to themselves wives, and befouled the earth with their deeds, who in all times of their age made lawlessness and mixing, and giants are born and marvellous big men and great enmity.

4 And therefore God judged them with great judgment, and they weep for their brethren and they will be punished on the Lord's great day.

5 And I said to the Grigori: I saw your brethren and their works, and their great torments, and I prayed for them, but the Lord has condemned them (to be) under earth till (the existing) heaven and earth shall end for ever.

6 And I said: Wherefore do you wait, brethren, and do not serve before the Lord's face, and have not put your services before the Lord's face, lest you anger your Lord utterly?

7 And they listened to my admonition, and spoke to the four ranks in heaven, and lo! As I stood with those two men four trumpets trumpeted together with great voice, and the Grigori broke into song with one voice, and their voice went up before the Lord pitifully and affectingly.

19.¹ And thence those men took me and bore me up on to the sixth heaven, and there I saw seven bands of angels, very bright and very glorious, and their faces shining more than the sun's shining, glistening, and there is no difference in their faces, or behaviour, or manner of dress; and these make the orders, and learn the goings of the stars, and the alteration of the moon, or revolution of the sun, and the good government of the world.

2 And when they see evil-doing they make commandments and instruction, and sweet and loud singing, and all (songs) of praise.

3 These are the archangels who are above angels, measure all life in heaven and on earth, and the angels who are (appointed) over seasons and years, the angels who are over rivers and sea, and who are over the fruits of the earth, and the angels who are over every grass, giving food to all, to every living thing, and the angels who write all the souls of men, and all their deeds, and their lives before the Lord's face; in their midst are six Phoenixes and six Cherubim and six six-winged ones continually with one voice singing one voice, and it is not possible to describe their singing, and they rejoice before the Lord at his footstool.

20.1 And those two men lifted me up thence on to the seventh heaven, and I saw there a very great light, and fiery troops of great archangels, incorporeal forces, and dominions, orders and governments, Cherubim and seraphim, thrones and many-eyed ones, nine regiments, the Ioanit stations of light, and I became afraid, and began to tremble with great terror, and those men took me, and led me after them, and said to me:

2 Have courage, Enoch, do not fear, and showed me the Lord from afar, sitting on His very high throne. For what is there on the tenth heaven, since the Lord dwells there?

3 On the tenth heaven is God, in the Hebrew tongue he is called Aravat.

4 And all the heavenly troops would come and stand on the ten steps according to their rank, and would bow down to the Lord, and would again go to their places in joy and felicity, singing songs in the boundless light with small and tender voices, gloriously serving him.

21.1 And the Cherubim and seraphim standing about the throne, the six-winged and many-eyed ones do not depart, standing before the Lord's face doing his will, and cover his whole throne, singing with gentle voice before the Lord's face: Holy, holy, holy, Lord Ruler of Sabaoth, heavens and earth are full of Your glory.

2 When I saw all these things, those men said to me: Enoch, thus far is it commanded us to journey with you, and those men went away from me and thereupon I saw them not.

3 And I remained alone at the end of the seventh heaven and became afraid, and fell on my face and said to myself: Woe is me, what has befallen me?

4 And the Lord sent one of his glorious ones, the archangel Gabriel, and (he) said to me: Have courage, Enoch, do not fear, arise before the Lord's face into eternity, arise, come with me.

5 And I answered him, and said in myself: My Lord, my soul is departed from me, from terror and trembling, and I called to the men who led me up to this place, on them I relied, and (it is) with them I go before the Lord's face.

6 And Gabriel caught me up, as a leaf caught up by the wind, and placed me before the Lord's face.

7 And I saw the eighth heaven, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Muzaloth, changer of the seasons, of drought, and of wet, and of the twelve constellations of the circle of the firmament, which are above the seventh heaven.

8 And I saw the ninth heaven, which is called in Hebrew Kuchavim, where are the heavenly homes of the twelve constellations of the circle of the firmament.

22.1 On the tenth heaven, (which is called) Aravoth, I saw the appearance of the Lord's face, like iron made to glow in fire, and brought out, emitting sparks, and it burns.

2 Thus (in a moment of eternity) I saw the Lord's face, but the Lord's face is ineffable, marvellous and very awful, and very, very terrible.

3 And who am I to tell of the Lord's unspeakable being, and of his very wonderful face? And I cannot tell the quantity of his many instructions, and various voices, the Lord's throne (is) very great and not made with hands, nor the quantity of those standing round him, troops of Cherubim and seraphim, nor their incessant singing, nor his immutable beauty, and who shall tell of the ineffable greatness of his glory.

4 And I fell prone and bowed down to the Lord, and the Lord with his lips said to me:

5 Have courage, Enoch, do not fear, arise and stand before my face into eternity.

6 And the archistrateger Michael lifted me up, and led me to before the Lord's face.

7 And the Lord said to his servants tempting them: Let Enoch stand before my face into eternity, and the glorious ones bowed down to the Lord, and said: Let Enoch go according to Your word.

8 And the Lord said to Michael: Go and take Enoch from out (of) his earthly garments, and anoint him with my sweet ointment, and put him into the garments of My glory.

9 And Michael did thus, as the Lord told him. He anointed me, and dressed me, and the appearance of that ointment is more than the great light, and his ointment is like sweet dew, and its smell mild, shining like the sun's ray, and I looked at myself, and (I) was like (transfigured) one of his glorious ones.

10 And the Lord summoned one of his archangels by name Pravuil, whose knowledge was quicker in wisdom than the other archangels, who wrote all the deeds of the Lord; and the Lord said to Pravuil: Bring out the books from my store-houses, and a reed of quick-writing, and give (it) to Enoch, and deliver to him the choice and comforting books out of your hand.

23.1 And he was telling me all the works of heaven, earth and sea, and all the elements, their passages and goings, and the thunderings of the thunders, the sun and moon, the goings and changes of the stars, the seasons, years, days, and hours, the risings of the wind, the numbers of the angels, and the formation of their songs, and all human things, the tongue of every human song and life, the commandments, instructions, and sweet-voiced singings, and all things that it is fitting to learn.

2 And Pravuil told me: All the things that I have told you, we have written. Sit and write all the souls of mankind, however many of them are born, and the places prepared for them to eternity; for all souls are prepared to eternity, before the formation of the world.

3 And all double thirty days and thirty nights, and I wrote out all things exactly, and wrote three hundred and sixty-six books.

24.1 And the Lord summoned me, and said to me: Enoch, sit down on my left with Gabriel.

2 And I bowed down to the Lord, and the Lord spoke to me: Enoch, beloved, all (that) you see, all things that are standing finished I tell to you even before the very beginning, all that I created from non-being, and visible (physical) things from invisible (spiritual).

3 Hear, Enoch, and take in these my words, for not to My angels have I told my secret, and I have not told them their rise, nor my endless realm, nor have they understood my creating, which I tell you to-day.

4 For before all things were visible (physical), I alone used to go about in the invisible (spiritual) things, like the sun from east to west, and from west to east.

5 But even the sun has peace in itself, while I found no peace, because I was creating all things, and I conceived the thought of placing foundations, and of creating visible (physical) creation.

25.¹ I commanded in the very lowest (parts), that visible (physical) things should come down from invisible (spiritual), and Adoil came down very great, and I beheld him, and lo! He had a belly of great light.

2 And I said to him: Become undone, Adoil, and let the visible (physical) (come) out of you.

3 And he came undone, and a great light came out. And I (was) in the midst of the great light, and as there is born light from light, there came forth a great age, and showed all creation, which I had thought to create.

4 And I saw that (it was) good.

5 And I placed for myself a throne, and took my seat on it, and said to the light: Go thence up higher and fix yourself high above the throne, and be A foundation to the highest things.

6 And above the light there is nothing else, and then I bent up and looked up from my throne.

26.¹ And I summoned the very lowest a second time, and said: Let Archas come forth hard, and he came forth hard from the invisible (spiritual).

2 And Archas came forth, hard, heavy, and very red.

3 And I said: Be opened, Archas, and let there be born from you, and he came undone, an age came forth, very great and very dark, bearing the creation of all lower things, and I saw that (it was) good and said to him:

4 Go thence down below, and make yourself firm, and be a foundation for the lower things, and it happened and he went down and fixed himself, and became the foundation for the lower things, and below the darkness there is nothing else.

27.¹ And I commanded that there should be taken from light and darkness, and I said: Be thick, and it became thus, and I spread it out with the light, and it became water, and I spread it out over the darkness, below the light, and then I made firm the waters, that is to say the bottomless, and I made foundation of light around the water, and created seven circles from inside, and imaged (the water) like crystal wet and dry, that is to say like glass, (and) the circumcession of the waters and the other elements, and I showed each one of them its road, and the seven stars each one of them in its heaven, that they go thus, and I saw that it was good.

2 And I separated between light and between darkness, that is to say in the midst of the water hither and thither, and I said to the light, that it should be the day, and to the darkness, that it should be the night, and there was evening and there was morning the first day.

28.¹ And then I made firm the heavenly circle, and (made) that the lower water which is under heaven collect itself together, into one whole, and that the chaos become dry, and it became so.

2 Out of the waves I created rock hard and big, and from the rock I piled up the dry, and the dry I called earth, and the midst of the earth I called abyss, that is to say the bottomless, I collected the sea in one place and bound it together with a yoke.

3 And I said to the sea: Behold I give you (your) eternal limits, and you shalt not break loose from your component parts.

4 Thus I made fast the firmament. This day I called me the first-created [Sunday].

29.¹ And for all the heavenly troops I imaged the image and essence of fire, and my eye looked at the very hard, firm rock, and from the gleam of my eye the lightning received its wonderful nature, (which) is both fire in water and water in fire, and one does not put out the other, nor does the one dry up the other, therefore the lightning is brighter than the sun, softer than water and firmer than hard rock.

2 And from the rock I cut off a great fire, and from the fire I created the orders of the incorporeal ten troops of angels, and their weapons are fiery and their raiment a burning flame, and I commanded that each one should stand in his order.

3 And one from out the order of angels, having turned away with the order that was under him, conceived an impossible thought, to place his throne higher than the clouds above the earth, that he might become equal in rank to my power.

4 And I threw him out from the height with his angels, and he was flying in the air continuously above the bottomless.

30.¹ On the third day I commanded the earth to make grow great and fruitful trees, and hills, and seed to sow, and I planted Paradise, and enclosed it, and placed as armed (guardians) flaming angels, and thus I created renewal.

2 Then came evening, and came morning the fourth day.

3 [Wednesday]. On the fourth day I commanded that there should be great lights on the heavenly circles.

4 On the first uppermost circle I placed the stars, Kruno, and on the second Aphrodit, on the third Aris, on the fifth Zoues, on the sixth Ermis, on the seventh lesser the moon, and adorned it with the lesser stars.

5 And on the lower I placed the sun for the illumination of day, and the moon and stars for the illumination of night.

6 The sun that it should go according to each constellation, twelve, and I appointed the succession of the months and their names and lives, their thunderings, and their hour-markings, how they should succeed.

7 Then evening came and morning came the fifth day.

8 [Thursday]. On the fifth day I commanded the sea, that it should bring forth fishes, and feathered birds of many varieties, and all animals creeping over the earth, going forth over the earth on four legs, and soaring in the air, male sex and female, and every soul breathing the spirit of life.

9 And there came evening, and there came morning the sixth day.

10 [Friday]. On the sixth day I commanded my wisdom to create man from seven consistencies: one, his flesh from the earth; two, his blood from the dew; three, his eyes from the sun; four, his bones from stone; five, his intelligence from the swiftness of the angels and from cloud; six, his veins and his hair from the grass of the earth; seven, his soul from my breath and from the wind.

11 And I gave him seven natures: to the flesh hearing, the eyes for sight, to the soul smell, the veins for touch, the blood for taste, the bones for endurance, to the intelligence sweetness [enjoyment].

12 I conceived a cunning saying to say, I created man from invisible (spiritual) and from visible (physical) nature, of both are his death and life and image, he knows speech like some created thing, small in greatness and again great in smallness, and I placed him on earth, a second angel, honourable, great and glorious, and I appointed him as ruler to rule on earth and to have my wisdom, and there was none like him of earth of all my existing creatures.

13 And I appointed him a name, from the four component parts, from east, from west, from south, from north, and I appointed for him four special stars, and I called his name Adam, and showed him the two ways, the light and the darkness, and I told him:

14 This is good, and that bad, that I should learn whether he has love towards me, or hatred, that it be clear which in his race love me.

15 For I have seen his nature, but he has not seen his own nature, therefore (through) not seeing he will sin worse, and I said After sin (what is there) but death?

16 And I put sleep into him and he fell asleep. And I took from him A rib, and created him a wife, that death should come to him by his wife, and I took his last word and called her name mother, that is to say, Eva (Eve).

31.¹ Adam has life on earth, and I created a garden in Eden in the east, that he should observe the testament and keep the command.

2 I made the heavens open to him, that he should see the angels singing the song of victory, and the gloomless light.

3 And he was continuously in paradise, and the devil understood that I wanted to create another world, because Adam was lord on earth, to rule and control it.

4 The devil is the evil spirit of the lower places, as a fugitive he made Sotona from the heavens as his name was Satanail (Satan), thus he became different from the angels, (but his nature) did not change (his) intelligence as far as (his) understanding of righteous and sinful (things).

5 And he understood his condemnation and the sin which he had sinned before, therefore he conceived thought against Adam, in such form he entered and seduced Eva (Eve), but did not touch Adam.

6 But I cursed ignorance, but what I had blessed previously, those I did not curse, I cursed not man, nor the earth, nor other creatures, but man's evil fruit, and his works.

32.¹ I said to him: Earth you are, and into the earth whence I took you you shalt go, and I will not ruin you, but send you whence I took you.

2 Then I can again receive you at My second presence.

3 And I blessed all my creatures visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual). And Adam was five and half hours in paradise.

4 And I blessed the seventh day, which is the Sabbath, on which he rested from all his works.

33.¹ And I appointed the eighth day also, that the eighth day should be the first-created after my work, and that (the first seven) revolve in the form of the seventh thousand, and that at the beginning of the eighth thousand there should be a time of not-counting, endless, with neither years nor months nor weeks nor days nor hours.

2 And now, Enoch, all that I have told you, all that you have understood, all that you have seen of heavenly things, all that you have seen on earth, and all that I have written in books by my great wisdom, all these things I have devised and created from the uppermost foundation to the lower and to the end, and there is no counsellor nor inheritor to my creations.

3 I am self-eternal, not made with hands, and without change.

4 My thought is my counsellor, my wisdom and my word are made, and my eyes observe all things how they stand here and tremble with terror.

5 If I turn away my face, then all things will be destroyed.

6 And apply your mind, Enoch, and know him who is speaking to you, and take thence the books which you yourself have written.

7 And I give you Samuil and Raguil, who led you up, and the books, and go down to earth, and tell your sons all that I have told you, and all that you have seen, from the lower heaven up to my throne, and all the troops.

8 For I created all forces, and there is none that resists me or that does not subject himself to me. For all subject themselves to my monarchy, and labour for my sole rule.

9 Give them the books of the handwriting, and they will read (them) and will know me for the creator of all things, and will understand how there is no other God but me.

10 And let them distribute the books of your handwriting—children to children, generation to generation, nations to nations.

11 And I will give you, Enoch, my intercessor, the archistrateger Michael, for the handwritings of your fathers Adam, Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahaleleel, and Jared your father.

34.1 They have rejected my commandments and my yoke, worthless seed has come up, not fearing God, and they would not bow down to me, but have begun to bow down to vain gods, and denied my unity, and have laden the whole earth with untruths, offences, abominable lecheries, namely one with another, and all manner of other unclean wickedness, which are disgusting to relate.

2 And therefore I will bring down a deluge upon the earth and will destroy all men, and the whole earth will crumble together into great darkness.

35.1 Behold from their seed shall arise another generation, much afterwards, but of them many will be very insatiate.

2 He who raises that generation, (shall) reveal to them the books of your handwriting, of your fathers, (to them) to whom he must point out the guardianship of the world, to the faithful men and workers of my pleasure, who do not acknowledge my name in vain.

3 And they shall tell another generation, and those (others) having read shall be glorified thereafter, more than the first.

36.1 Now, Enoch, I give you the term of thirty days to spend in your house, and tell your sons and all your household, that all may hear from my face what is told them by you, that they may read and understand, how there is no other God but me.

2 And that they may always keep my commandments, and begin to read and take in the books of your handwriting.

3 And after thirty days I shall send my angel for you, and he will take you from earth and from your sons to me.

37.1 And the Lord called upon one of the older angels, terrible and menacing, and placed him by me, in appearance white as snow, and his hands like ice, having the appearance of great frost, and he froze my face, because I could not endure the terror of the Lord, just as it is not possible to endure A stove's fire and the sun's heat, and the frost of the air.

2 And the Lord said to me: Enoch, if your face be not frozen here, no man will be able to behold your face.

38.1 And the Lord said to those men who first led me up: Let Enoch go down on to earth with you, and await him till the determined day.

2 And they placed me by night on my bed.

3 And Mathusal (Methuselah) expecting my coming, keeping watch by day and by night at my bed, was filled with awe when he heard my coming, and I told him, Let all my household come together, that I tell them everything.

39.1 Oh my children, my beloved ones, hear the admonition of your father, as much as is according to the Lord's will.

2 I have been let come to you to-day, and announce to you, not from my lips, but from the Lord's lips, all that is and was and all that is now, and all that will be till judgment-day.

3 For the Lord has let me come to you, you hear therefore the words of my lips, of a man made big for you, but I am one who has seen the Lord's face, like iron made to glow from fire it sends forth sparks and burns.

4 You look now upon my eyes, (the eyes) of a man big with meaning for you, but I have seen the Lord's eyes, shining like the sun's rays and filling the eyes of man with awe.

5 You see now, my children, the right hand of a man that helps you, but I have seen the Lord's right hand filling heaven as he helped me.

6 You see the compass of my work like your own, but I have seen the Lord's limitless and perfect compass, which has no end.

7 You hear the words of my lips, as I heard the words of the Lord, like great thunder incessantly with hurling of clouds.

8 And now, my children, hear the discourses of the father of the earth, how fearful and awful it is to come before the face of the ruler of the earth, how much more terrible and awful it is to come before the face of the ruler of heaven, the controller (judge) of quick and dead, and of the heavenly troops. Who can endure that endless pain?

40.1 And now, my children, I know all things, for this (is) from the Lord's lips, and this my eyes have seen, from beginning to end.

2 I know all things, and have written all things into books, the heavens and their end, and their plenitude, and all the armies and their marchings.

3 I have measured and described the stars, the great countless multitude (of them).

4 What man has seen their revolutions, and their entrances? For not even the angels see their number, while I have written all their names.

5 And I measured the sun's circle, and measured its rays, counted the hours, I wrote down too all things that go over the earth, I have written the things that are nourished, and all seed sown and unsown, which the earth produces and all plants, and every grass and every flower, and their sweet smells, and their names, and the dwelling-places of the clouds, and their composition, and their wings, and how they bear rain and raindrops.

6 And I investigated all things, and wrote the road of the thunder and of the lightning, and they showed me the keys and their guardians, their rise, the way they go; it is let out (gently) in measure by a chain, lest by A heavy chain and violence it hurl down the angry clouds and destroy all things on earth.

7 I wrote the treasure-houses of the snow, and the store-houses of the cold and the frosty airs, and I observed their season's key-holder, he fills the clouds with them, and does not exhaust the treasure-houses.

8 And I wrote the resting-places of the winds and observed and saw how their key-holders bear weighing-scales and measures; first, they put them in (one) weighing-scale, then in the other the weights and let them out according to measure cunningly over the whole earth, lest by heavy breathing they make the earth to rock.

9 And I measured out the whole earth, its mountains, and all hills, fields, trees, stones, rivers, all existing things I wrote down, the height from earth to the seventh heaven, and downwards to the very lowest hell, and the judgment-place, and the very great, open and weeping hell.

10 And I saw how the prisoners are in pain, expecting the limitless judgment.

11 And I wrote down all those being judged by the judge, and all their judgment (and sentences) and all their works.

41.1 And I saw all forefathers from (all) time with Adam and Eva (Eve), and I sighed and broke into tears and said of the ruin of their dishonour:

2 Woe is me for my infirmity and (for that) of my forefathers, and thought in my heart and said:

3 Blessed (is) the man who has not been born or who has been born and shall not sin before the Lord's face, that he come not into this place, nor bring the yoke of this place.

42.1 I saw the key-holders and guards of the gates of hell standing, like great serpents, and their faces like extinguishing lamps, and their eyes of fire, their sharp teeth, and I saw all the Lord's works, how they are right, while the works of man are some (good), and others bad, and in their works are known those who lie evilly.

43.1 I, my children, measured and wrote out every work and every measure and every righteous judgment.

2 As (one) year is more honourable than another, so is (one) man more honourable than another, some for great possessions, some for wisdom of heart, some for particular intellect, some for cunning, one for silence of lip, another for cleanliness, one for strength, another for comeliness, one for youth, another for sharp wit, one for shape of body, another for sensibility, let it be heard everywhere, but there is none better than he who fears God, he shall be more glorious in time to come.

44.1 The Lord with his hands having created man, in the likeness of his own face, the Lord made him small and great.

2 Whoever reviles the ruler's face, and abhors the Lord's face, has despised the Lord's face, and he who vents anger on any man without injury, the Lord's great anger will cut him down, he who spits on the face of man reproachfully, will be cut down at the Lord's great judgment.

3 Blessed is the man who does not direct his heart with malice against any man, and helps the injured and condemned, and raises the broken down, and shall do charity to the needy, because on the day of the great judgment every weight, every measure and every makeweight (will be) as in the market, that is to say (they are) hung on scales and stand in the market, (and every one) shall learn his own measure, and according to his measure shall take his reward.

45.1 Whoever hastens to make offerings before the Lord's face, the Lord for his part will hasten that offering by granting of his work.

2 But whoever increases his lamp before the Lord's face and make not true judgment, the Lord will (not) increase his treasure in the realm of the highest.

3 When the Lord demands bread, or candles, or (the)flesh (of beasts), or any other sacrifice, then that is nothing; but God demands pure hearts, and with all that (only) tests the heart of man.

46.1 Hear, my people, and take in the words of my lips.

2 If any one bring any gifts to an earthly ruler, and have disloyal thoughts in his heart, and the ruler know this, will he not be angry with him, and not refuse his gifts, and not give him over to judgment?

3 Or (if) one man make himself appear good to another by deceit of tongue, but (have) evil in his heart, then will not (the other) understand the treachery of his heart, and himself be condemned, since his untruth was plain to all?

4 And when the Lord shall send a great light, then there will be judgment for the just and the unjust, and there no one shall escape notice.

47.1 And now, my children, lay thought on your hearts, mark well the words of your father, which are all (come) to you from the Lord's lips.

2 Take these books of your father's handwriting and read them.

3 For the books are many, and in them you will learn all the Lord's works, all that has been from the beginning of creation, and will be till the end of time.

4 And if you will observe my handwriting, you will not sin against the Lord; because there is no other except the Lord, neither in heaven, nor in earth, nor in the very lowest (places), nor in the (one) foundation.

5 The Lord has placed the foundations in the unknown, and has spread forth heavens visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual); he fixed the earth on the waters, and created countless creatures, and who has counted the water and the foundation of the unfixed, or the dust of the earth, or the sand of the sea, or the drops of the rain, or the morning dew, or the wind's breathings? Who has filled earth and sea, and the indissoluble winter?

6 I cut the stars out of fire, and decorated heaven, and put it in their midst.

48.1 That the sun go along the seven heavenly circles, which are the appointment of one hundred and eighty-two thrones, that it go down on a short day, and again one hundred and eighty-two, that it go down on a big day, and he has two thrones on which he rests, revolving hither and thither above the thrones of the months, from the seventeenth day of the month Tsivan it goes down to the month Thevan, from the seventeenth of Thevan it goes up.

2 And thus it goes close to the earth, then the earth is glad and makes grow its fruits, and when it goes away, then the earth is sad, and trees and all fruits have no florescence.

3 All this he measured, with good measurement of hours, and fixed A measure by his wisdom, of the visible (physical) and the invisible (spiritual).

4 From the invisible (spiritual) he made all things visible (physical), himself being invisible (spiritual).

5 Thus I make known to you, my children, and distribute the books to your children, into all your generations, and amongst the nations who shall have the sense to fear God, let them receive them, and may they come to love them more than any food or earthly sweets, and read them and apply themselves to them.

6 And those who understand not the Lord, who fear not God, who accept not, but reject, who do not receive the (books), a terrible judgment awaits these.

7 Blessed is the man who shall bear their yoke and shall drag them along, for he shall be released on the day of the great judgment.

49.¹ I swear to you, my children, but I swear not by any oath, neither by heaven nor by earth, nor by any other creature which God created.

2 The Lord said: There is no oath in me, nor injustice, but truth.

3 If there is no truth in men, let them swear by the words, Yea, yea, or else, Nay, nay.

4 And I swear to you, yea, yea, that there has been no man in his mother's womb, (but that) already before, even to each one there is a place prepared for the repose of that soul, and a measure fixed how much it is intended that a man be tried in this world.

5 Yea, children, deceive not yourselves, for there has been previously prepared a place for every soul of man.

50.¹ I have put every man's work in writing and none born on earth can remain hidden nor his works remain concealed.

2 I see all things.

3 Now therefore, my children, in patience and meekness spend the number of your days, that you inherit endless life.

4 Endure for the sake of the Lord every wound, every injury, every evil word and attack.

5 If ill-requitals befall you, return (them) not either to neighbour or enemy, because the Lord will return (them) for you and be your avenger on the day of great judgment, that there be no avenging here among men.

6 Whoever of you spends gold or silver for his brother's sake, he will receive ample treasure in the world to come.

7 Injure not widows nor orphans nor strangers, lest God's wrath come upon you.

51.¹ Stretch out your hands to the poor according to your strength.

2 Hide not your silver in the earth.

3 Help the faithful man in affliction, and affliction will not find you in the time of your trouble.

4 And every grievous and cruel yoke that come upon you bear all for the sake of the Lord, and thus you will find your reward in the day of judgment.

5 It is good to go morning, midday, and evening into the Lord's dwelling, for the glory of your creator.

6 Because every breathing (thing) glorifies him, and every creature visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual) returns him praise.

52.¹ Blessed is the man who opens his lips in praise of God of Sabaoth and praises the Lord with his heart.

2 Cursed every man who opens his lips for the bringing into contempt and calumny of his neighbour, because he brings God into contempt.

3 Blessed is he who opens his lips blessing and praising God.

4 Cursed is he before the Lord all the days of his life, who opens his lips to curse and abuse.

5 Blessed is he who blesses all the Lord's works.

6 Cursed is he who brings the Lord's creation into contempt.

7 Blessed is he who looks down and raises the fallen.

8 Cursed is he who looks to and is eager for the destruction of what is not his.

9 Blessed is he who keeps the foundations of his fathers made firm from the beginning.

10 Cursed is he who perverts the decrees of his forefathers.

11 Blessed is he who imparts peace and love.

12 Cursed is he who disturbs those that love their neighbours.

13 Blessed is he who speaks with humble tongue and heart to all.

14 Cursed is he who speaks peace with his tongue, while in his heart there is no peace but a sword.

15 For all these things will be laid bare in the weighing-scales and in the books, on the day of the great judgment.

53.¹ And now, my children, do not say: Our father is standing before God, and is praying for our sins, for there is there no helper of any man who has sinned.

2 You see how I wrote all works of every man, before his creation, (all) that is done amongst all men for all time, and none can tell or relate my handwriting, because the Lord see all imaginings of man, how they are vain, where they lie in the treasure-houses of the heart.

3 And now, my children, mark well all the words of your father, that I tell you, lest you regret, saying: Why did our father not tell us?

54.¹ At that time, not understanding this let these books which I have given you be for an inheritance of your peace.

2 Hand them to all who want them, and instruct them, that they may see the Lord's very great and marvellous works.

55.¹ My children, behold, the day of my term and time have approached.

2 For the angels who shall go with me are standing before me and urge me to my departure from you; they are standing here on earth, awaiting what has been told them.

3 For to-morrow I shall go up on to heaven, to the uppermost Jerusalem to my eternal inheritance.

4 Therefore I bid you do before the Lord's face all (his) good pleasure.

56.¹ Mathosalam having answered his father Enoch, said: What is agreeable to your eyes, father, that I may make before your face, that you may bless our dwellings, and your sons, and that your people may be made glorious through you, and then (that) you may depart thus, as the Lord said?

2 Enoch answered to his son Mathosalam (and) said: Hear, child, from the time when the Lord anointed me with the ointment of his glory, (there has been no) food in me, and my soul remembers not earthly enjoyment, neither do I want anything earthly.

57.¹ My child Methosalam, summon all your brethren and all your household and the elders of the people, that I may talk to them and depart, as is planned for me.

2 And Methosalam made haste, and summoned his brethren, Regim, Riman, Uchan, Chermion, Gaidad, and all the elders of the people before the face of his father Enoch; and he blessed them, (and) said to them:

58.1 Listen to me, my children, to-day.

2 In those days when the Lord came down on to earth for Adam's sake, and visited all his creatures, which he created himself, after all these he created Adam, and the Lord called all the beasts of the earth, all the reptiles, and all the birds that soar in the air, and brought them all before the face of our father Adam.

3 And Adam gave the names to all things living on earth.

4 And the Lord appointed him ruler over all, and subjected to him all things under his hands, and made them dumb and made them dull that they be commanded of man, and be in subjection and obedience to him.

5 Thus also the Lord created every man lord over all his possessions.

6 The Lord will not judge a single soul of beast for man's sake, but adjudges the souls of men to their beasts in this world; for men have a special place.

7 And as every soul of man is according to number, similarly beasts will not perish, nor all souls of beasts which the Lord created, till the great judgment, and they will accuse man, if he feed them ill.

59.1 Whoever defiles the soul of beasts, defiles his own soul.

2 For man brings clean animals to make sacrifice for sin, that he may have cure of his soul.

3 And if they bring for sacrifice clean animals, and birds, man has cure, he cures his soul.

4 All is given you for food, bind it by the four feet, that is to make good the cure, he cures his soul.

5 But whoever kills beast without wounds, kills his own souls and defiles his own flesh.

6 And he who does any beast any injury whatsoever, in secret, it is evil practice, and he defiles his own soul.

60.1 He who works the killing of a man's soul, kills his own soul, and kills his own body, and there is no cure for him for all time.

2 He who puts a man in any snare, shall stick in it himself, and there is no cure for him for all time.

3 He who puts a man in any vessel, his retribution will not be wanting at the great judgment for all time.

4 He who works crookedly or speaks evil against any soul, will not make justice for himself for all time.

61.1 And now, my children, keep your hearts from every injustice, which the Lord hates. Just as a man asks something for his own soul from God, so let him do to every living soul, because I know all things, how in the great time to come there is much inheritance prepared for men, good for the good, and bad for the bad, without number many.

2 Blessed are those who enter the good houses, for in the bad houses there is no peace nor return from them.

3 Hear, my children, small and great! When man puts a good thought in his heart, brings gifts from his labours before the Lord's face and his hands made them not, then the Lord will turn away his face from the labour of his hand, and (that) man cannot find the labour of his hands.

4 And if his hands made it, but his heart murmur, and his heart cease not making murmur incessantly, he has not any advantage.

62.¹ Blessed is the man who in his patience brings his gifts with faith before the Lord's face, because he will find forgiveness of sins.

2 But if he take back his words before the time, there is no repentance for him; and if the time pass and he do not of his own will what is promised, there is no repentance after death.

3 Because every work which man does before the time, is all deceit before men, and sin before God.

63.¹ When man clothes the naked and fills the hungry, he will find reward from God.

2 But if his heart murmur, he commits a double evil; ruin of himself and of that which he gives; and for him there will be no finding of reward on account of that.

3 And if his own heart is filled with his food and his own flesh, clothed with his own clothing, he commits contempt, and will forfeit all his endurance of poverty, and will not find reward of his good deeds.

4 Every proud and magniloquent man is hateful to the Lord, and every false speech, clothed in untruth; it will be cut with the blade of the sword of death, and thrown into the fire, and shall burn for all time.

64.¹ When Enoch had spoken these words to his sons, all people far and near heard how the Lord was calling Enoch. They took counsel together:

2 Let us go and kiss Enoch, and two thousand men came together and came to the place Achuzan where Enoch was, and his sons.

3 And the elders of the people, the whole assembly, came and bowed down and began to kiss Enoch and said to him:

4 Our father Enoch, (may) you (be) blessed of the Lord, the eternal ruler, and now bless your sons and all the people, that we may be glorified to-day before your face.

5 For you shalt be glorified before the Lord's face for all time, since the Lord chose you, rather than all men on earth, and designated you writer of all his creation, visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual), and redeemed of the sins of man, and helper of your household.

65.¹ And Enoch answered all his people saying: Hear, my children, before that all creatures were created, the Lord created the visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual) things.

2 And as much time as there was and went past, understand that after all that he created man in the likeness of his own form, and put into him eyes to see, and ears to hear, and heart to reflect, and intellect wherewith to deliberate.

3 And the Lord saw all man's works, and created all his creatures, and divided time, from time he fixed the years, and from the years he appointed the months, and from the months he appointed the days, and of days he appointed seven.

4 And in those he appointed the hours, measured them out exactly, that man might reflect on time and count years, months, and hours, (their) alternation, beginning, and end, and that he might count his own life, from the beginning until death, and reflect on his sin and write his work bad and good; because no work is hidden before the Lord, that every man might know his works and never transgress all his commandments, and keep my handwriting from generation to generation.

5 When all creation visible (physical) and invisible (spiritual), as the Lord created it, shall end, then every man goes to the great judgment, and then all time shall perish, and the years, and thenceforward there will be neither months nor days nor hours, they will be adhered together and will not be counted.

6 There will be one aeon, and all the righteous who shall escape the Lord's great judgment, shall be collected in the great aeon, for the righteous the great aeon will begin, and they will live eternally, and then too there will be amongst them neither labour, nor sickness, nor humiliation, nor anxiety, nor need, nor brutality, nor night, nor darkness, but great light.

7 And they shall have a great indestructible wall, and a paradise bright and incorruptible (eternal), for all corruptible (mortal) things shall pass away, and there will be eternal life.

66.¹ And now, my children, keep your souls from all injustice, such as the Lord hates.

2 Walk before his face with terror and trembling and serve him alone.

3 Bow down to the true God, not to dumb idols, but bow down to his similitude, and bring all just offerings before the Lord's face. The Lord hates what is unjust.

4 For the Lord sees all things; when man takes thought in his heart, then he counsels the intellects, and every thought is always before the Lord, who made firm the earth and put all creatures on it.

5 If you look to heaven, the Lord is there; if you take thought of the sea's deep and all the under-earth, the Lord is there.

6 For the Lord created all things. Bow not down to things made by man, leaving the Lord of all creation, because no work can remain hidden before the Lord's face.

7 Walk, my children, in long-suffering, in meekness, honesty, in provocation, in grief, in faith and in truth, in (reliance on) promises, in illness, in abuse, in wounds, in temptation, in nakedness, in privation, loving one another, till you go out from this age of ills, that you become inheritors of endless time.

8 Blessed are the just who shall escape the great judgment, for they shall shine forth more than the sun sevenfold, for in this world the seventh part is taken off from all, light, darkness, food, enjoyment, sorrow, paradise, torture, fire, frost, and other things; he put all down in writing, that you might read and understand.

67.¹ When Enoch had talked to the people, the Lord sent out darkness on to the earth, and there was darkness, and it covered those men standing with Enoch, and they took Enoch up on to the highest heaven, where the Lord (is); and he received him and placed him before his face, and the darkness went off from the earth, and light came again.

2 And the people saw and understood not how Enoch had been taken, and glorified God, and found a roll in which was traced The Invisible (spiritual) God; and all went to their dwelling places.

68.¹ Enoch was born on the sixth day of the month Tsivan, and lived three hundred and sixty-five years.

2 He was taken up to heaven on the first day of the month Tsivan and remained in heaven sixty days.

3 He wrote all these signs of all creation, which the Lord created, and wrote three hundred and sixty-six books, and handed them over to his sons and remained on earth thirty days, and was again taken up to heaven on the sixth day of the month Tsivan, on the very day and hour when he was born.

4 As every man's nature in this life is dark, so are also his conception, birth, and departure from this life.

5 At what hour he was conceived, at that hour he was born, and at that hour too he died.

6 Methosalam and his brethren, all the sons of Enoch, made haste, and erected an altar at that place called Achuzan, whence and where Enoch had been taken up to heaven.

7 And they took sacrificial oxen and summoned all people and sacrificed the sacrifice before the Lord's face.

8 All people, the elders of the people and the whole assembly came to the feast and brought gifts to the sons of Enoch.

9 And they made a great feast, rejoicing and making merry three days, praising God, who had given them such a sign through Enoch, who had found favour with him, and that they should hand it on to their sons from generation to generation, from age to age.

10 Amen.

INTRODUCTION

ENOCK 3

3 Enoch is an Old Testament Apocryphal book. 3 Enoch purports to have been written in the second century CE, but its origins can only be traced to the fifth century.[1] Other names for 3 Enoch include "The Third Book of Enoch", "The Book of the Palaces", "The Book of Rabbi Ishmael the High Priest" and "The Revelation of Metatron".

Content

Modern scholars describe this book as pseudepigraphal, as it says it is written by Rabbi Ishmael who became a 'high priest' after visions of ascension to Heaven, 90 AD - 135 AD.[1] Rabbi Ishmael is a leading figure of Merkabah literature.

The name Sefer Hekhalot (Hekhalot meaning Palaces/Temples), along with its proposed author, places this book as a member of Hekhalot/Merkabah lore. Its contents suggest that 3 Enoch's contents and ideas are newer than those shown in other Merkabah texts.[4] The book does not contain Merkabah hymns,[5] it has unique layout[6] and adjuration.[7] All these facts make 3 Enoch unique not just among Merkabah writings, but also within the writings of Enoch.

3 Enoch contains a number of Greek and Latin words. This book, unlike 1 Enoch, appears to have been originally written in Hebrew. There are a number of indications suggesting that the writers of 3 Enoch had knowledge of, and most likely read, 1 Enoch.

Some points that appear in Enoch 1 and Enoch 3 are:

Enoch ascends to Heaven in a storm chariot (3 Enoch 6:1; 7:1)

Enoch is transformed into an angel (3 Enoch 9:1-5; 15:1-2)

Enoch as an exalted angel is enthroned in Heaven (3 Enoch 10:1-3; 16:1)

Enoch receives a revelation of cosmological secrets of creation (3 Enoch 13:1-2)

The story about precious metals and how they will not avail their users and those that make idols from them (3 Enoch 5:7-14)

One of the characters is a hostile angel named Azaz'el/Aza'el (3 Enoch 4:6; 5:9)

The main themes running through 3 Enoch are the ascension of Enoch into Heaven and his transformation into the angel Metatron.

ENOCH 3

THE BOOK OF ENOCH

BY R. ISHMAEL BEN ELISHA
THE HIGH PRIEST

EDITED AND TRANSLATED BY HUGO ODEBERG

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION :

R. Ishmael ascends to heaven to behold the vision of the Merkaba and is given in charge to Metatron

AND ENOCH WALKED WITH GOD : AND HE WAS NOT ; FOR GOD TOOK HIM (Gen. v. 24)

Rabbi Ishmael said :

(1) When I ascended on high to behold the vision of the Merkaba and had entered the six Halls, one within the other:

(2) as soon as I reached the door of the seventh Hall I stood still in prayer before the Holy One, blessed be He, and, lifting up my eyes on high (i.e. towards the Divine Majesty), I said :

(3) " Lord of the Universe, I pray thee, that the merit of Aaron, the son of Amram, the lover of peace and pursuer of peace, who received the crown of priesthood from Thy Glory on the mount of Sinai, be valid for me in this hour, so that Qafsiel*, the prince, and the angels with him may not get power over me nor throw me down from the heavens ".

(4) Forthwith the Holy One, blessed be He, sent to me Metatron, his Servant ('Ebed) the angel, the Prince of the Presence, and he, spreading his wings, with great joy came to meet me so as to save me from their hand.

(5) And he took me by his hand in their sight, saying to me: "Enter in peace before the high and exalted King³ and behold the picture of the Merkaba".

(6) Then I entered the seventh Hall, and he led me to the camp(s) of Shekina and placed me before the Holy One, blessed be He, to behold the Merkaba.

(7) As soon as the princes of the Merkaba and the flaming Seraphim perceived me, they fixed their eyes upon me. Instantly trembling and shuddering seized me and I fell down and was benumbed by the radiant image of their eyes and the splendid appearance of their faces; until the Holy One, blessed be He, rebuked them, saying:

(8) "My servants, my Seraphim, my Kerubim and my 'Ophannim! Cover ye your eyes before Ishmael, my son, my friend, my beloved one and my glory, that he tremble not nor shudder !"

(9) Forthwith Metatron the Prince of the Presence, came and restored my spirit and put me upon my feet.

(10) After that (moment) there was not in me strength enough to say a song before the Throne of Glory of the glorious King, the mightiest of all kings, the most excellent of all princes, until after the hour had passed.

(11) After one hour (had passed) the Holy One, blessed be He, opened to me the gates of Shekina, the gates of Peace, the gates of Wisdom, the gates of Strength, the gates of Power, the gates of Speech (Dibbur), the gates of Song, the gates of Qedushsha, the gates of Chant.

(12) And he enlightened my eyes and my heart by words of psalm, song, praise, exaltation, thanksgiving, extolment, glorification, hymn and eulogy. And as I opened my mouth, uttering a song before the Holy One, blessed be He, the Holy Chayyoth beneath and above the Throne of Glory answered and said : "HOLY " and "BLESSED BE THE GLORY OF YHWH FROM HIS PLACE !" (i.e. chanted the Qedushsha).

CHAPTER II

The highest classes of angels make inquiries about R. Ishmael which are answered by Metatron

R. Ishmael said:

(1) In that hour the eagles of the Merkaba, the flaming 'Ophannim and the Seraphim of consuming fire asked Metatron, saying to him:

(2) "Youth ! Why sufferest thou one born of woman to enter and behold the Merkaba? From which nation, from which tribe is this one? What is his character?"

(3) Metatron answered and said to them : "From the nation of Israel whom the Holy One, blessed be He, chose for his people from among seventy tongues (nations), from the tribe of Levi, whom he set aside as a contribution to his name and from the seed of Aaron whom the Holy One, blessed be He, did choose for his servant and put upon him the crown of priesthood on Sinai".

(4) Forthwith they spake and said : "Indeed, this one is worthy to behold the Merkaba ". And they said: "Happy is the people that is in such a case!".

CHAPTER III

Metatron has 70 names, but God calls him 'Youth'

R. Ishmael said:

(1) In that hour I asked Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence: "What is thy name?"

(2) He answered me: "I have seventy names, corresponding to the seventy tongues of the world and all of them are based upon the name Metatron, angel of the Presence; but my King calls me 'Youth' (Na'ar)"

CHAPTER IV

Metatron is identical with Enoch who was translated to heaven at the time of the Deluge

R. Ishmael said :

(1) I asked Metatron and said to him: "Why art thou called by the name of thy Creator, by seventy names? Thou art greater than all the princes, higher than all the angels, beloved more than all the servants, honoured above all the mighty ones in kingship, greatness and glory : why do they call thee ' Youth ' in the high heavens ?"

(2) He answered and said to me: " Because I am Enoch, the son of Jared.

(3) For when the generation of the flood sinned and were confounded in their deeds, saying unto God: 'Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways' (Job xxi. 14), then the Holy One, blessed be He, removed me from their midst to be a witness against them in the high heavens to all the inhabitants of the world, that they may not say: 'The Merciful One is cruel'".

(4) What sinned all those multitudes, their wives, their sons and their, daughters, their horses, their mules and their cattle and their property, and all the birds of the world, all of which the Holy One, blessed be He, destroyed from the world together with them in the waters of the flood?

(5) Hence the Holy One, blessed be He, lifted me up in their lifetime before their eyes to be a witness against them to the future world. And the Holy One, blessed be He, assigned me for a prince and a ruler among the ministering angels.

(6) In that hour three of the ministering angels, 'UZZA, 'AZZA and 'AZZAEL came forth and brought charges against me in the high heavens, saying before the Holy One, blessed be He:

"Said not the Ancient Ones (First Ones) rightly before Thee: < Do not create man! ' ' ' The Holy One, blessed be He, answered and said unto them: "I have made and I will bear, yea, I will carry and will deliver". (Is. xlv. 4.)

(7) As soon as they saw me, they said before Him: "Lord of the Universe ! What is this one that he should ascend to the height of heights? Is not he one from among the sons of [the sons of] those who perished in the days of the Flood? "What doeth he in the Raqia?"

(8) Again, the Holy One, blessed be He, answered and said to them: "What are ye, that ye enter and speak in my presence? I delight in this one more than in all of you, and hence he shall be a prince and a ruler over you in the high heavens."

(9) Forthwith all stood up and went out to meet me, prostrated themselves before me and said: "Happy art thou and happy is thy father for thy Creator doth favour thee".

(10) And because I am small and a youth among them in days, months and years, therefore they call me "Youth" (Na'ar).

CHAPTER V

The idolatry of the generation of Enosh causes God to remove the Shekina from earth. The idolatry inspired by 'Azza, 'Uzza and 'Azziel

R.Ishmael said: Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

(1) From the day when the Holy One, blessed be He, expelled the first Adam from the Garden of Eden (and onwards), Shekina was dwelling upon a Kerub under the Tree of Life.

(2) And the ministering angels were gathering together and going down from heaven in parties, from the Raqia in companies and from the heavens in camps to do His will in the whole world.

(3) And the first man and his generation were sitting outside the gate of the Garden to behold the radiant appearance of the Shekina.

(4) For the splendour of the Shekina traversed the world from one end to the other (with a splendour) 365,000 times (that) of the globe of the sun. And everyone who made use of the splendour of the Shekina, on him no flies and no gnats did rest, neither was he ill nor suffered he any pain. No demons got power over him, neither were they able to injure him.

(5) When the Holy One, blessed be He, went out and went in: from the Garden to Eden, from Eden to the Garden, from the Garden to Raqia and from Raqia to the Garden of Eden then all and everyone beheld the splendour of His Shekina and they were not injured;

(6) until the time of the generation of Enosh who was the head of all idol worshippers of the world. (7) And what did the generation of Enosh do? They went from one end of the world to the other, and each one brought silver, gold, precious stones and pearls in heaps like unto mountains and hills making idols out of them throughout all the world. And they erected the idols in every quarter of the world: the size of each idol was 1000 parasangs.

(8) And they brought down the sun, the moon, planets and constellations, and placed them before the idols on their right hand and on their left, to attend them even as they attend the Holy One, blessed be He, as it is written (1 Kings xxii. 19): "And all the host of heaven was standing by him on his right hand and on his left".

(9) What power was in them that they were able to bring them down? They would not have been able to bring them down but for 'Uzza, 'Azza and 'Azziel who taught them sorceries whereby they brought them down and made use of them

(10) In that time the ministering angels brought charges (against them) before the Holy One, blessed be He, saying before him: "Master of the World! What hast thou to do with the children of men? As it is written (Ps. viii. 4) 'What is man (Enosh) that thou art mindful of him?' 'Mah Adam' is not written here, but 'Mah Enosh', for he (Enosh) is the head of the idol worshippers.

(11) Why hast thou left the highest of the high heavens, the abode of thy glorious

Name, and the high and exalted Throne in 'Araboth Raqia' in the highest and art gone and dwellest with the children of men who worship idols and equal thee to the idols.

(12) Now thou art on earth and the idols likewise. What hast thou to do with the inhabitants of the earth who worship idols?"

(13) Forthwith the Holy One, blessed be He, lifted up His Shekina from the earth, from their midst. (14) In that moment came the ministering angels, the troops of hosts and the armies of 'Araboth in thousand camps and ten thousand hosts : they fetched trumpets and took the horns in their hands and surrounded the Shekina with all kinds of songs. And He ascended to the high heavens, as it is written (Ps. xlvii. 5): "God is gone up with a shout, the Lord with the sound of a trumpet".

CHAPTER VI

Enoch lifted up to heaven together with the Shekina.

Angels protests answered by God

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) When the Holy One, blessed be He, desired to lift me up on high, He first sent 'Anaphiel H (H = Tetragrammaton) the Prince, and he took me from their midst in their sight and carried me in great glory upon a fiery chariot with fiery horses, servants of glory. And he lifted me up to the high heavens together with the Shekina.

(2) As soon as I reached the high heavens, the Holy Chayyoth, the 'Ophannim, the Seraphim, the Kerubim, the Wheels of the Merkaba (the Galgallim), and the ministers of the consuming fire, perceiving my smell from a distance of 365,000 myriads of parasangs, said: "What smell of one born of woman and what taste of a white drop (is this) that ascends on high, and (lo, he is merely) a gnat among those who 'divide flames (of fire)'?"

(3) The Holy One, blessed be He, answered and spake unto them: "My servants, my hosts, my Kerubim, my 'Ophannim, my Seraphim! Be ye not displeased on account of this! Since all the children of men have denied me and my great Kingdom and are gone worshipping idols, I have removed my Shekina from among them and have lifted it up on high. But this one whom I have taken from among them is an ELECT ONE among (the inhabitants of) the world and he is equal to all of them in faith, righteousness and perfection of deed and I have taken him for (as) a tribute from my world under all the heavens".

CHAPTER VII

Enoch raised upon the wings of the Shekina to the place of the Throne, the Merkaba and the angelic hosts

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

(1) When the Holy One, blessed be He, took me away from the generation of the Flood, he lifted me on the wings of the wind of Shekina to the highest heaven and brought me into the great palaces of the 'Araboth Raqia' on high, where are the glorious Throne of Shekina, the Merkaba, the troops of anger, the armies of vehemence, the fiery Shin'anin', the flaming Kerubim, and the burning 'Ophannim, the flaming servants, the flashing Chashmattim and the lightening Seraphim. And he placed me (there) to attend the Throne of Glory day after day.

CHAPTER VIII

The gates (of the treasures of heaven) opened to Metatron

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Before He appointed me to attend the Throne of Glory, the Holy One, blessed be He, opened to me three hundred thousand gates of Understanding three hundred thousand gates of Subtlety three hundred thousand gates of Life three hundred thousand gates of grace and loving-kindness three hundred thousand gates of love three hundred thousand gates of Tora three hundred thousand gates of meekness

 three hundred thousand gates of maintenance three hundred thousand gates' of mercy three hundred thousand gates of fear of heaven

(2) In that hour the Holy One, blessed be He, added in me wisdom unto wisdom, understanding unto understanding, subtlety unto subtlety, knowledge unto knowledge, mercy unto mercy, instruction unto instruction, love unto love, loving-kindness unto loving-kindness, goodness unto goodness, meekness unto meekness, power unto power, strength unto strength, might unto might, brilliance unto brilliance, beauty unto beauty, splendour unto splendour, and I was honoured and adorned with all these good and praiseworthy things more than all the children of heaven.

CHAPTER IX

Enoch receives blessings from the Most High and is adorned with angelic attributes

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) After all these things the Holy One, blessed be He, put His hand upon me and blessed me with 5360 blessings.
 (2) And I was raised and enlarged to the size of the length and width of the world.
 (3) And He caused 72 wings to grow on me, 36 on each side. And each wing was as the whole world.
 (4) And He fixed on me 365 eyes : each eye was as the great luminary.
 (5) And He left no kind of splendour, brilliance, radiance, beauty in (of) all the lights of the universe that He did not fix on me.

CHAPTER X

God places Metatron on a throne at the door of the seventh Hall and announces through the Herald, that Metatron henceforth is God's representative and ruler over all the princes of kingdoms and all the children of heaven, save the eight high princes called YHWH by the name of their King

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) All these things the Holy One, blessed be He, made for me:He made me a Throne, similar to the Throne of Glory. And He spread over me a curtain of splendour and brilliant appearance, of beauty, grace and mercy, similar to the curtain of the Throne of Glory; and on it were fixed all kinds of lights in the universe.

(2) And He placed it at the door of the Seventh Hall and seated me on it.

(3) And the herald went forth into every heaven, saying:This is Metatron, my servant. I have made him into a prince and a ruler over all the princes of my kingdoms and over all the children of heaven, except the eight great princes, the honoured and revered ones who are called YHWH, by the name of their King.

(4) And every angel and every prince who has a word to speak in my presence (before me) shall go into his presence (before him) and shall speak to him (instead).

(5)And every command that he utters to you in my name do ye observe and fulfil. For the Prince of Wisdom and the Prince of Understanding have I committed to him to instruct him in the wisdom of heavenly things and of earthly things, in the wisdom of this world and of the world to come.

(6) Moreover, I have set him over all the treasures of the palapes of Araboih and over all the stores of life that I have in the high heavens.

CHAPTER XI

God reveals all mysteries and secrets to Metatron

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

(1) Henceforth the Holy One, blessed be He, revealed to me all the mysteries of Tora and all the secrets of wisdom and all the depths of the Perfect Law; and all living beings' thoughts of heart and all the secrets of the universe and all the secrets of Creation were revealed unto me even as they are revealed unto the Maker of Creation.

(2) And I watched intently to behold the secrets of the depth and the wonderful mystery. Before a man did think in secret, I saw (it) and before a man made a thing I beheld it.

(3) And there was no thing on high nor in the deep hidden from me.

CHAPTER XII

God clothes Metatron in a garment of glory, puts a royal crown on his head and calls him "the Lesser YHWH"

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

(1) By reason of the love with which the Holy One, blessed be He, loved me more than all the children of heaven, He made me a garment of glory on which were fixed all kinds of lights, and He clad me in it.

(2) And He made me a robe of honour on which were fixed all kinds of beauty, splendour, brilliance and majesty.

(3) And he made me a royal crown in which were fixed forty-nine costly stones like unto the light of the globe of the sun.

(4) For its splendour went forth in the four quarters of the 'Araboth Raqia', and in (through) the seven heavens, and in the four quarters of the world. And he put it on my head.

(5) And He called me THE LESSER YHWH in the presence of all His heavenly household; as it is written (Ex. xxiii. 21): "For my name is in him".

CHAPTER XIII

God writes with a flaming style on Metatron's crown the cosmic letters by which heaven and earth were created

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, the Glory of all heavens, said to me :

(1) Because of the great love and mercy with which the Holy One, blessed be He, loved and cherished me more than all the children of heaven, He wrote with his ringer with a flaming style upon the crown on my head the letters by which were created heaven and earth, the seas and rivers, the mountains and hills, the planets and constellations, the lightnings, winds, earthquakes and voices (thunders), the snow and hail, the storm-wind and the tempest ; the letters by which were created all the needs of the world and all the orders of Creation.

(2) And every single letter sent forth time after time as it were lightnings, time after time as it were torches, time after time as it were flames of fire, time after time (rays) like [as] the rising of the sun and the moon and the planets.

CHAPTER XIV

All the highest princes, the elementary angels and the planetary and sideric angels fear and tremble at the sight of Metatron crowned

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) When the Holy One, blessed be He, put this crown on my head, (then) trembled before me all the Princes of Kingdoms who are in the height of 'Araboth Raqiaf and all the hosts of every heaven; and even the princes (of) the 'Elim, the princes (of) the 'Er'ellim and the princes (of) the Tafsarim, who are greater than all the ministering angels who minister before the Throne of Glory, shook, feared and trembled before me when they beheld me.

(2) Even Sammael, the Prince of the Accusers, who is greater than all the princes of kingdoms on high; feared and trembled before me.

(3) And even the angel of fire, and the angel of hail, and the angel of the wind, and the angel of the lightning, and the angel of anger, and the angel of the thunder, and the angel of the snow, and the angel of the rain; and the angel of the day, and the angel of the night, and the angel of the sun and the angel of the moon, and the angel of the planets and the angel of the constellations who rule the world under their hands, feared and trembled and were affrighted before me, when they beheld me.

(4) These are the names of the rulers of the world: Gabriel, the angel of the fire, Baradiel, the angel of the hail, Ruchiel who is appointed over the wind, Baraqiel who is appointed over the lightnings, Za'amiel who is appointed over the vehemence, Ziqiel who is appointed over the sparks, Zi'iel who is appointed over the commotion, Zdaphiel who is appointed over the storm-wind, Ra'amiel who is appointed over the thunders, Rctashiel who is appointed over the earthquake, Shalgiel who is appointed over the snow, Matariel who is appointed over the rain, Shimshiel who is appointed over the day, Lailiel who is appointed over the night, Galgalliel who is appointed over the globe of the sun, 'Ophanniel who is appointed over the globe of the moon, Kokbiel who is appointed over the planets, Rahatiel who is appointed over the constellations.

(5) And they all fell prostrate, when they saw me. And they were not able to behold me because of the majestic glory and beauty of the appearance of the shining light of the crown of glory upon my head.

CHAPTER XV

Metatron transformed into fire

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, the Glory of all heavens, said to me :

(1) As soon as the Holy One, blessed be He, took me in (His) service to attend the Throne of Glory and the Wheels (Galgallim) of the Merkaba and the needs of Shekina, forthwith my flesh was changed into flames, my sinews into flaming fire, my bones into coals of burning juniper, the light of my eyelids into splendour of lightnings, my eyeballs into fire-brands, the hair of my head into dot flames, all my limbs into wings of burning fire and the whole of my body into glowing fire.

(2) And on my right were divisions 6 of fiery flames, on my left fire-brands were burning, round about me stormwind and tempest were blowing and in front of me and behind me was roaring of thunder with earthquake.

FRAGMENT OF 'ASCENSION OF MOSES'

(1) R. Ishmael said: Said to me Metatron, the Prince of the Presence and the prince over all the princes and he stands before Him who is greater than all the Elohim. And he goes in under the Throne of Glory. And he has a great tabernacle of light on high. And he brings forth the fire of deafness and puts (it) into the ears of the Holy Chayyoth, that they may not hear the voice of the Word (Dibbur) that goes forth from the mouth of the Divine Majesty.

(2) And when Moses ascended on high, he fasted 121 fasts, till the habitations of the chashmal were opened to him; and he saw the heart within the heart of the Lion and he saw the innumerable companies of the hosts Around about him. And they desired to burn him. But Moses prayed for mercy, first for Israel and after that for himself: and He who sitteth on the Merkaba opened the windows that are above the heads of the Kerubim. And a host of 1800 advocates and the Prince of the Presence, Metatron, with them went forth to meet Moses. And they took the prayers of Israel and put them as a crown on the head of the Holy One, blessed be He.

(3) And they said (Deut. vi. 4): "Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord" and their face shone and rejoiced over Shekina and they said to Metatron: "What are these? And to whom do they give all this honour and glory?" And they answered: "To the Glorious Lord of Israel". And they spake: "Hear, O Israel: the Lord, our God, is one Lord. To whom shall be given abundance of honour and majesty but to Thee YHWH, the Divine Majesty, the King, living and eternal".

(4) In that moment spake Akatriel Yah Yehod Sebaoth and said to Metatron, the Prince of the Presence: "Let no prayer that he prayeth before me return (to him) void. Hear thou his prayer and fulfil his desire whether (it be) great or small".

(5) Forthwith Metatron, the Prince of the Presence, said to Moses:

"Son of Amram! Fear not, for now God delights in thee. And ask thou thy desire of the Glory and Majesty. For thy face shines from one end of the world to the other". But Moses answered him: "(I fear) lest I bring guiltiness upon myself". Metatron said to him: "Receive the letters of the oath, in (by) which there is no breaking the covenant" (which precludes any breach of the covenant).

CHAPTER XVI 1

Probably additional

Metatron divested of his privilege of presiding on a Throne of his own on account of Acher's misapprehension in taking him for a second Divine Power

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, the Glory of all heaven, said to me:

(1) At first I was sitting upon a great Throne at the door of the Seventh Hall ; and I was judging the children of heaven, the household on high by authority of the Holy One, blessed be He. And I divided Greatness, Kingship, Dignity, Rulership, Honour and Praise, and Diadem and Crown of Glory unto all the princes of kingdoms, while I was presiding (lit. sitting) in the Celestial Court (Yeshiba), and the princes of kingdoms were standing before me, on my right and on my left by authority of the Holy One, blessed be He.

(2) But when Acher came to behold the vision of the Merkaba and fixed his eyes on me, he feared and trembled before me and his soul was affrighted even unto departing from him, because of fear, horror and dread of me, when he beheld me sitting upon a throne like a king with all the ministering angels standing by me as my servants and all the princes of kingdoms adorned with crowns surrounding me:

(3) in that moment he opened his mouth and said: "Indeed, there are two Divine Powers in heaven!" (4) Forthwith Bath Qol (the Divine Voice) went forth from heaven from before the Shekina and said: "Return, ye backsliding children (Jer. iii. 22), except Acher!"

(5) Then came 'Aniyel, the Prince, the honoured, glorified, beloved, wonderful, revered and fearful one, in commission from the Holy One, blessed be He and gave me sixty strokes with lashes of fire and made me stand on my feet.

CHAPTER XVII

The princes of the seven heavens, of the sun, moon, planets and constellations and their suites of angels

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, the glory of all heavens, said to me:

(1) Seven (are the) princes, the great, beautiful, revered, wonderful and honoured ones who are appointed over the seven heavens. And these are they : MIKAEL, GABRIEL, SHATQIEL, SHACHAQIEL, BAKARIEL, BADARIEL, PACHRIEL.

(2) And every one of them is the prince of the host of (one) heaven. And each one of them is accompanied by 496,000 myriads of ministering angels.

(3) MIKAEL, the great prince, is appointed over the seventh heaven, the highest one, which is in the 'Araboth. GABRIEL, the prince of the host, is appointed over the sixth heaven which is in Makon.

SHATAQIEL, prince of the host, is appointed over the fifth heaven which is in Ma'on.

SHAHQI'EL, prince of the host, is appointed over the fourth heaven which is in Zebul.

BADARIEL, prince of the host, is appointed over the third heaven which is in Shehaqim.

BARAKIEL, prince of the host, is appointed over the second heaven which is in the height of (Merom) Raqia.

PAZRIEL, prince of the host, is appointed over the first heaven which is in Wilon, which is in Shamayim.

(4) Under them is GALGALLIEL, the prince who is appointed over the globe (galgal) of the sun, and with him are 96 great and honoured angels who move the sun in Raqia'.

(5) Under them is 'OPHANNIEL, the prince who is set over the globe ('ophari) of the moon. And with him are 88 angels who move the globe of the moon 354 thousand parasangs every night at the time when the moon stands in the East at its turning point. And when is the moon sitting in the East at its turning point? Answer: in the fifteenth day of every month.

(6) Under them is RAHATIEL, the prince who is appointed over the constellations. And he is accompanied by 72 great and honoured angels. And why is he called RAHATIEL? Because he makes the stars run (marhit) in their orbits and courses 339 thousand parasangs every night from the East to the West, and from the West to the East. For the Holy One, blessed be He, has made a tent for all of them, for the sun, the moon, the planets and the stars in which they travel at night from the West to the East.

(7) Under them is KOKBIEL, the prince who is appointed over all the planets. And with him are 365,000 myriads of ministering angels, great and honoured ones who move the planets from city to city and from province to province in the Raqia' of heavens.

(8) And over them are SEVENTY-TWO PRINCES OF KINGDOMS on high corresponding to the 72 tongues of the world. And all of them are crowned with royal crowns and clad in royal garments and wrapped in royal cloaks. And all of them are riding on royal horses and they are holding royal sceptres in their hands. And before each one of them when he is travelling in Raqia' , royal servants are running with great glory and majesty even as on earth they (princes) are travelling in chariot(s) with horsemen and great armies and in glory and greatness with praise, song and honour.

CHAPTER XVIII

The order of ranks of the angels and the homage received by the higher ranks from the lower ones

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, the glory of all heaven, said to me:

(1) THE ANGELS OF THE FIRST HEAVEN, when(ever) they see their prince, they dismount from their horses and fall on their faces.

And THE PRINCE OF THE FIRST HEAVEN, when he sees the prince of the second heaven, he dismounts, removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

And THE PRINCE OF THE SECOND HEAVEN, when he sees the Prince of the third heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

And THE PRINCE OF THE THIRD HEAVEN, when he sees the prince of the fourth heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

And THE PRINCE OF THE FOURTH HEAVEN, when he sees the prince of the fifth heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

xAnd THE PRINCE OF THE FIFTH HEAVEN, when he sees the prince of the sixth heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

And THE PRINCE OF THE SIXTH HEAVEN, when he sees the prince of the seventh heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(2) And THE PRINCE OF THE SEVENTH HEAVEN, when he sees THE SEVENTY-TWO PRINCES OF KINGDOMS, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

2

(3) And the seventy-two princes of kingdoms, when they see THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE FIRST HALL IN THE ARABOTH RAQIA in the highest, they remove the royal crown from their head and fall on their faces.

3And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE FIRST HALL, when they see the door keepers of the second Hall, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE SECOND HALL, when they see the door keepers of the third Hall, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE THIRD HALL, when they see the door keepers of the fourth Hall, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE FOURTH HALL, when they see the door keepers of the fifth Hall, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE FIFTH HALL, when they see the door keepers of the sixth Hall, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

And THE DOOR KEEPERS OF THE SIXTH HALL, when they see the DOOR KEEPERS OF THE SEVENTH HALL, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

(4) And the door keepers of the seventh Hall, when they see THE FOUR GREAT PRINCES, the honoured ones, WHO ARE APPOINTED OVER THE FOUR CAMPS OF SHEKINA, they remove the crown(s) of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

(5) And the four great princes, when they see TAG'AS, the prince, great and honoured with song (and) praise, at the head of all the children of heaven, they remove the crown of glory from their head and fall on their faces.

(6) And Tag' as, the great and honoured prince, when he sees BARATTIEL, the great prince of three fingers in the height of 'Araboth, the highest heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(7) And Barattiel, the great prince, when he sees HAMON, the great prince, the fearful and honoured, pleasant and terrible one who maketh all the children of heaven to tremble, when the time draweth nigh (that is set) for the saying of the '(Thrice) Holy', as it is written (Isa. xxxiii. 3): "At the noise of the tumult (hamon) the peoples are fled; at the lifting up of thyself the nations are scattered" he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(8) And Hamon, the great prince, when he sees TUTRESIEL, the great prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(9) And Tutresiel H', the great prince, when he sees ATRUGIEL, the great prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(10) And Atrugiel the great prince, when he sees NA'ARIRIEL H', the great prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(n) And Na'aririel H', the great prince, when he sees SASNIGIEL H', the great prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(12) And Sasnigiel H', when he sees ZAZRIEL H', the great prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(13) And Zazriel H', the prince, when he sees GEBURATIEL H', the prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(14) And Geburatiel H', the prince, when he sees 'ARAPHIEL H', the prince, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(15) And 'Araphiel H', the prince, when he sees 'ASHRUYLU, the prince, who presides in all the sessions of the children of heaven, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(16) And Ashruylu H', the prince, when he sees GALLISUR H', THE PRINCE, WHO REVEALS ALL THE SECRETS OF THE LAW (Tora), he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(17) And Gallisur H', the prince, when he sees ZAKZAKIEL H', the prince who is appointed to write down the merits of Israel on the Throne of Glory, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face.

(18) And Zakzakiel H', the great prince, when he sees 'ANAPHIEL H', the prince who keeps the keys of the heavenly Halls, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face. Why is he called by the name of 'Anaphiel ? Because the bough of his honour and majesty and his crown and his splendour and his brilliance covers (overshadows) all the chambers of 'Araboth Raqia on high even as the Maker of the World (doth overshadow them). Just as it is written with regard to the Maker of the World (Hab. iii. 3): "His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise", even so do the honour and majesty of 'Anaphiel cover all the glories of 'Araboth the highest.

(19) And when he sees SOTHER 'ASHIEL H', the prince, the great, fearful and honoured one, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face. Why is he called Sother Ashiel? Because he is appointed over the four heads of the fiery river over against the Throne of Glory; and every single prince who goes out or enters before the Shekina, goes out or enters only by his permission.

For the seals of the fiery river are entrusted to him. And furthermore, his height is 7000 myriads of parasangs. And he stirs up the fire of the river ; and he goes out and enters before the Shekina to expound what is written (recorded) concerning the inhabitants of the world. According as it is written (Dan. vii. 10) : "the judgement was set, and the books were opened".

(20) And Sother 'Ashiel the prince, when he sees SHOQED CHOZI, the great prince, the mighty, terrible and honoured one, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls upon his face.

And why is he called Shoqed Chozi? Because he weighs all the merits (of man) in a balance in the presence of the Holy One, blessed be He.

(21) Andwhen he sees ZEHANPURYU H',the great prince, the mighty and terrible one, honoured, glorified and feared in all the heavenly household, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face. Why is he called Zehanpuryu? Because he rebukes the fiery river and pushes it back to its place.

(22) Andwhen he sees 'AZBUGA H', the great prince, glorified, revered, honoured, adorned, wonderful, exalted, beloved and feared among allthe great princes who know the mystery of the Throne of Glory, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face. Why is he called 'Azbuga? Because in the future he will gird (clothe) the righteous and pious of the world with the garments of life and wrap them in the cloak of life, that they may live in them an eternal life.

(23) And when he sees the two great princes, the strong and glorified ones who are standing above him, he removes the crown of glory from his head and falls on his face. And these are the names of the two princes:

SOPHERIEL H' (WHO) KILLETH, (Sopheriel H' the Killer), the great prince, the honoured, glorified, blameless, venerable, ancient and mighty one; (and) SOPHERIEL H' (WHO) MAKETH ALIVE (Sopheriel H' the Lifegiver), the great prince, the honoured, glorified, blameless, ancient and mighty one.

(24) Why is he called Sopheriel H' who killeth (Sopheriel H' the Killer)? Because he is appointed over the books of the dead : [so that] everyone, when the day of his death draws nigh, he writes him in the books of the dead.

Why is he called Sopheriel H' who maketh alive (Sopheriel H' the Lifegiver)? Because he is appointed over the books of the living (of life), so that every one whom the Holy One, blessed be He, will bring into life, he writes him in the book of the living (of life), by authority of MAQOM. Thou might perhaps say: "Since the Holy One, blessed be He, is sitting on a throne, they also are sitting when writing". (Answer): The Scripture teaches us (1 Kings xxii. 19, 2 Chron. xviii. 18) : "And all the host of heaven are standing by him ".

"The host of heaven " (it is said) in order to show us, that even the Great Princes, none like whom there is in the high heavens, do not fulfil the requests of the Shekina otherwise than standing. But how is it (possible that) they (are able to) write, when they are standing?

It is like this :

(25) One is standing on the wheels of the tempest and the other is standing on the wheels of the storm-wind.

The one is clad in kingly garments, the other is clad in kingly garments.

The one is wrapped in a mantle of majesty and the other is wrapped in a mantle of majesty.

The one is crowned with a royal crown, and the other is crowned with a royal crown.

The one's body is full of eyes, and the other's body is full of eyes.

The appearance of one is like unto the appearance of lightnings, and the appearance of the other is like unto the appearance of lightnings.

The eyes of the one are like the sun in its might, and the eyes of the other are like the sun in its might.

The one's height is like the height of the seven heavens, and the other's height is like the height of the seven heavens.

The wings of the one are as (many as) the days of the year, and the wings of the other are as (many as) the days of the year.

The wings of the one extend over the breadth of Raqia', and the wings of the other extend over the breadth of Raqia.

The lips of the one, are as the gates of the East, and the lips of the other are as the gates of the East.

The tongue of the one is as high as the waves of the sea, and the tongue of the other is as high as the waves of the sea.

From the mouth of the one a flame goes forth, and from the mouth of the other a flame goes forth.

From the mouth of the one there go forth lightnings and from the mouth of the other there go forth lightnings.

From the sweat of the one fire is kindled, and from the perspiration of the other fire is kindled.

From the one's tongue a torch is burning, and from the tongue of the other a torch is burning.

On the head of the one there is a sapphire stone, and upon the head of the other there is a sapphire stone.

On the shoulders of the one there is a wheel of a swift cherub, and on the shoulders of the other there is a wheel of a swift cherub.

One has in his hand a burning scroll, the other has in his hand a burning scroll.

The one has in his hand a flaming style, the other has in his hand a flaming style.

The length of the scroll is 3000 myriads of parasangs ; the size of the style is 3000 myriads of parasangs; the size of every single letter that they write is 365 parasangs.

CHAPTER XIX

Rikbiel, the prince of the wheels of the Merkaba. The surroundings of the Merkaba. The commotion among the angelic hosts at the time of the Qedushsha

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above 2 these three angels, these great princes there is one Prince, distinguished, honoured, noble, glorified, adorned, fearful, valiant, strong, great, magnified, glorious, crowned, wonderful, exalted, blameless, beloved, lordly, high and lofty, ancient and mighty, like unto whom there is none among the princes. His name is RIKBIEL H', the great and revered Prince who is standing by the Merkaba.

(2) And why is he called RIKBIEL? Because he is appointed over the wheels of the Merkaba, and they are given in his charge.

(3) And how many are the wheels? Eight; two in each direction. And there are four winds compassing them round about. And these are their names: "the Storm-Wind", "the Tempest", "the Strong Wind", and "the Wind of Earthquake".

(4) And under them four fiery rivers are continually running, one fiery river on each side. And round about them, between the rivers, four clouds are planted (placed), and these they are: "clouds of fire", "clouds of lamps", "clouds of coal", "clouds of brimstone" and they are standing over against [their] wheels.

(5) And the feet of the Chayyoth are resting upon the wheels. And between one wheel and the other earthquake is roaring and thunder is thundering.

(6) And when the time draws nigh for the recital of the Song, (then) the multitudes of wheels are moved, the multitude of clouds tremble, all the chieftains (shallishim) are made afraid, all the horsemen (parashim) do rage, all the mighty ones (gibborim) are excited, all the hosts (seba'im) are afrighted, all the troops (gedudim) are in fear, all the appointed ones (memunnim) haste away, all the princes (sarim) and armies (chayyelim) are dismayed, all the servants (mesharetim) do faint and all the angels (mal'akim) and divisions (degalim) travail with pain.

(7) And one wheel makes a sound to be heard to the other and one Kerub to another, one Chayya. to another, one Seraph to another (saying) (Ps. Ixviii. 5) "Extol to him that rideth in 'Araboth, by his name Jah and rejoice before him!"

CHAPTER XX

CHAYYELIEL, the prince of the Chayyoth

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above these there is one great and mighty prince. His name is CHAYYELIEL H', a noble and revered prince, a glorious and mighty prince, a great and revered prince, a prince before whom all the children of heaven do tremble, a prince who is able to swallow up the whole earth in one moment (at a mouthful).

(2) And why is he called CHAYYELIEL H'? Because he is appointed over the Holy Chayyoth and smites the Chayyoth with lashes of fire: and glorifies them, when they give praise and glory and rejoicing and he causes them to make haste to say "Holy" and "Blessed be the Glory of H' from his place!" (i.e. the Qedushshd).

CHAPTER XXI

The Chayyoth

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Four (are) the Chayyoth corresponding to the four winds. Each Chayya is as the space of the whole world. And each one has four faces ; and each face is as the face of the East.

(2) Each one has four wings and each wing is like the cover (roof) of the universe.

(3) And each one has faces in the middle of faces and wings in the middle of wings. The size of the faces is (as the size of) 248 faces, and the size of the wings is (as the size of) 365 wings.

(4) And every one is crowned with 2000 crowns on his head. And each crown is like unto the bow in the cloud. And its splendour is like unto the splendour of the globe of the sun. And the sparks that go forth from every one are like the splendour of the morning star (planet Venus) in the East.

CHAPTER XXII 1

KERUBIEL, the Prince of the Kerubim.

Description of the Kerubim

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above these there is one prince, noble, wonderful, strong, and praised with all kinds of praise. His name is KERUBIEL H', a mighty prince, full of power and strength a prince of highness, and Highness (is) with him, a righteous prince, and righteousness (is) with him, a holy prince, and holiness (is) with him, a prince glorified in (by) thousand hosts, exalted by ten thousand armies.

(2) At his wrath the earth trembles, at his anger the camps are moved, from fear of him the foundations are shaken, at his rebuke the 'Araboth do tremble.

(3) His stature is full of (burning) coals. The height of his stature is as the height of the seven heavens the breadth of his stature is as the wideness of the seven heavens and the thickness of his stature is as the seven heavens.

(4) The opening of his mouth is like a lamp of fire. His tongue is a consuming fire. His eyebrows are like unto the splendour of the lightning. His eyes are like sparks of brilliance. His countenance is like a burning fire.

(5) And there is a crown of holiness upon his head on which (crown) the Explicit Name is graven, and lightnings go forth from it. And the bow of Shekina is between his shoulders.

(6) And his sword is like unto a lightning; and upon his loins there are arrows like unto a flame, and upon his armour and shield there is a consuming fire, and upon his neck there are coals of burning juniper and (also) round about him (there are coals of burning juniper).

(7) And the splendour of Shekina is on his face ; and the horns of majesty on his wheels; and a royal diadem upon his skull.

(8) And his body is full of eyes. And wings are covering the whole of his high stature (lit. the height of his stature is all wings).

(9) On his right hand a flame is burning, and on his left a fire is glowing; and coals are burning from it. And firebrands go forth from his body. And lightnings are cast forth from his face. With him there is alway thunder upon (in) thunder, by his side there is ever earthquake upon (in) earthquake.

(10) And the two princes of the Merkaba are together with him.

(11) Why is he called KERUBIEL H', the Prince. Because he is appointed over the chariot of the Kerubim. And the mighty Kerubim are given in his charge. And he adorns the crowns on their heads and polishes the diadem upon their skull.

(12) He magnifies the glory of their appearance. And he glorifies the beauty of their majesty. And he increases the greatness of their honour. He causes the song of their praise to be sung. He intensifies their beautiful strength. He causes the brilliance of their glory to shine forth. He beautifies their goodly mercy and lovingkindness. He frames the fairness of their radiance. He makes their merciful beauty even more beautiful. He glorifies their upright majesty. He extols the order of their praise, to stablish the dwellingplace of him "who dwelleth on the Kerubim".

(13) And the Kerubim are standing by the Holy Chayyoth, and their wings are raised up to their heads (lit. are as the height of their heads) and Shekina is (resting) upon them and the brilliance of the Glory is upon their faces and song and praise in their mouth and their hands are under their wings and their feet are covered by their wings and horns of glory are upon their heads and the splendour of Shekina on their face and Shekina is (resting) upon them and sapphire stones are round about them and columns of fire on their four sides and columns of firebrands beside them.

(14) There is one sapphire on one side and another sapphire on another side and under the sapphires there are coals of burning juniper.

(15) And one Kerub is standing in each direction but the wings of the Kerubim compass each other above their skulls in glory; and they spread them to sing with them a song to him that inhabiteth the clouds and to praise with them the fearful majesty of the king of kings.

(16) And KERUBIEL H', the prince who is appointed over them, he arrays them in comely, beautiful and pleasant orders and he exalts them in all manner of exaltation, dignity and glory. And he hastens them in glory and might to do the will of their Creator every moment. For above their lofty heads abides continually the glory of the high king "who dwelleth on the Kerubim".

CHAPTER XXII b (ADDITIONAL)

- (1) And there is a court before the Throne of Glory,
- (2) which no seraph nor angel can enter, and it is 36,000 myriads of parasangs, as it is written (Is.vi.2): "and the Seraphim are standing above him" (the last word of the scriptural passage being 'Lamech-Vav' [numerical value: 36]).
- (3) As the numerical value Lamech-Vav (36) the number of the bridges there.
- (4) And there are 24 myriads of wheels of fire. And the ministering angels are 12,000 myriads. And there are 12,000 rivers of hail, and 12,000 treasuries of snow. And in the seven Halls are chariots of fire and flames, without reckoning, or end or searching.

R. Ishmael said to me: Metatron, the angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

- (1) How are the angels standing on high? Pie said: Like a bridge that is placed over a river so that every one can pass over it, likewise a bridge is placed from the beginning of the entry to the end.
- (2) And three ministering angels surround it and utter a song before YHWH, the God of Israel. And there are standing before it lords of dread and captains of fear, thousand times thousand and ten thousand times ten thousand in number and they sing praise and hymns before YHWH, the God of Israel.
- (3) Numerous bridges are there: bridges of fire and numerous bridges of hail. Also numerous rivers of hail, numerous treasuries of snow and numerous wheels of fire.
- (4) And how many are the ministering angels? 12,000 myriads: six (thousand myriads) above and six (thousand myriads) below. And 12,000 are the treasuries of snow, six above and six below. And 24 myriads of wheels of fire, 12 (myriads) above and 12 (myriads) below. And they surround the bridges and the rivers of fire and the rivers of hail. And there are numerous ministering angels, forming entries, for all the creatures that are standing in the midst thereof, corresponding to (over against) the paths of Raqia Shamayim.

(5) What doeth YHWH, the God of Israel, the King of Glory? The Great and Fearful God, mighty in strength, doth cover his face.

(6) In Araboth are 660,000 myriads of angels of glory standing over against the Throne of Glory and the divisions of flaming fire. And the King of Glory doth cover His face; for else the (Araboth Raqia¹ would be rent asunder in its midst because of the majesty, splendour, beauty, radiance, loveliness, brilliancy, brightness and excellency of the appearance of (the Holy One,) blessed be He.

(7) There are numerous ministering angels performing his will, numerous kings, numerous princes in the 'Araboth of his delight, angels who are revered among the rulers in heaven, distinguished, adorned with song and bringing love to remembrance: (who) are affrighted by the splendour of the Shekina, and their eyes are dazzled by the shining beauty of their King, their faces grow black and their strength doth fail.

(8) There go forth rivers of joy, streams of gladness, rivers of rejoicing, streams of triumph, rivers of love, streams of friendship (another reading:) of commotion and they flow over and go forth before the Throne of Glory and wax great and go through the gates of the paths of 'Araboth Raqia at the voice of the shouting and music of the CHAYYOTH, at the voice of the rejoicing of the timbrels of his 'OPHANNIM and at the melody of the cymbals of His Kerubim. And they wax great and go forth with commotion with the sound of the hymn: "HOLY, HOLY, HOLY, IS THE LORD OF HOSTS; THE WHOLE EARTH IS FULL OF HIS GLORY!"

CHAPTER XXII c

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Prince of the Presence said to me:

- (1) What is the distance between one bridge and another? 12 myriads of parasangs. Their ascent is 12 myriads of parasangs, and their descent 12 myriads of parasangs.

(2) (The distance) between the rivers of dread and the rivers of fear is 22 myriads of parasangs; between the rivers of hail and the rivers of darkness 36 myriads of parasangs; between the chambers of lightnings and the clouds of compassion 42 myriads of parasangs; between the clouds of compassion and the Merkaba 84 myriads of parasangs; between the Merkaba and the Kerubim 148 myriads of parasangs; between the Kerubim and the 'Ophannim 24 myriads of parasangs; between the 'Ophannim and the chambers of chambers 24 myriads of parasangs; between the chambers of chambers and the Holy Chayyoth 40,000 myriads of parasangs; between one wing (of the Chayyoth) and another 12 myriads of parasangs; and the breadth of each one wing is of that same measure; and the distance between the Holy Chayyoth and the Throne of Glory is 30,000 myriads of parasangs.

(3) And from the foot of the Throne to the seat there are 40,000 myriads of parasangs. And the name of Him that sitteth on it: let the name be sanctified!

(4) And the arches of the Bow are set above the 'Araboth, and they are 1000 thousands and 10,000 times ten thousands (of parasangs) high. Their measure is after the measure of the 'Irin and Qaddishin (Watchers and Holy Ones). As it is written (Gen. ix. 13) "My bow I have set in the cloud". It is not written here "I will set" but "I have set", (i.e.) already; clouds that surround the Throne of Glory. As His clouds pass by, the angels of hail (turn into) burning coal.

(5) And a fire of the voice goes down from by the Holy Chayyoth. And because of the breath of that voice they "run" (Ezek. i. 14) to another place, fearing lest it command them to go; and they "return" lest it injure them from the other side. Therefore "they run and return" (Ezek. i. 14).

(6) And these arches of the Bow are more beautiful and radiant than the radiance of the sun during the summer solstice. And they are whiter than a flaming fire and they are great and beautiful.

(7) Above the arches of the Bow are the wheels of the 'Ophannim. Their height is 1000 thousand and 10,000 times 10,000 units of measure after the measure of the Seraphim and the Troops (Gedudim).

CHAPTER XXIII

The winds blowing under the wings of the Kerubim

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) There are numerous winds blowing under the wings of the Kerubim.

There blows "the Brooding Wind", as it is written (Gen. i. 2): "and the wind of God was brooding upon the face of the waters".

(2) There blows "the Strong Wind", as it is said (Ex. xiv. 21): "and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night".

(3) There blows "the East Wind" as it is written (Ex. x. 13): "the east wind brought the locusts".

(4) There blows "the Wind of Quails" as it is written (Num. xi. 31): "And there went forth a wind from the Lord and brought quails".

(5) There blows "the Wind of Jealousy" as it is written (Num.v.14): "And the wind of jealousy came upon him".

(6) There blows the "Wind of Earthquake" as it is written (i Kings .xix. 1 1): "and after that the wind of the earthquake ; but the Lord was not in the earthquake".

(7) There blows the "Wind of H' " as it is written (Ex. xxxvii. i) : "and he carried me out by the wind of H' and set me down".

(8) There blows the "Evil Wind " as it is written (i Sam. xvi. 23): "and the evil wind departed from him".

(9) There blow the "Wind of Wisdom" and the "Wind of Understanding" and the "Wind of Knowledge" and the "Wind of the Fear of H'" as it is written (Is. xi. 2): "And the wind of H'shall rest upon him; the wind of wisdom and understanding, the wind of counsel and might, the wind of knowledge and of the fear.

(10) There blows the "Wind of Rain", as it is written (Prov. xxv. 23): "the north wind bringeth forth rain".

(11) There blows the "Wind of Lightnings ", as it is written (Jer.x.13, li. 16): "he maketh lightnings for the rain and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures ".

(12) There blows the "Wind, Breaking the Rocks", as it is written (1 Kings xix. n): "the Lord passed by and a great and strong wind rent the mountains and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord)".

(13) There blows the "Wind of Assuagement of the Sea", as it is written (Gen. viii. i): "and God made a wind to pass over the earth, and the waters assuaged".

(14) There blows the "Wind of Wrath", as it is written (Job i. 19) : "and behold there came a great wind from the wilderness and smote the four corners of the house and it fell".

(15) There blows the " Storm-Wind ", as it is written (Ps. cxlviii. 8) : "Storm-wind, fulfilling his word".

(16) And Satan is standing among these winds, for "storm-wind " is nothing else but "Satan", and all these winds do not blow but under the wings of the Kerubim, as it is written (Ps. xviii. n) : "and he rode upon a cherub and did fly, yea, and he flew swiftly upon the wings of the wind".

(17) And whither go all these winds? The Scripture teaches us, that they go out from under the wings of the Kerubim and descend on the globe of the sun, as it is written (Eccl. i. 6) : " The wind goeth toward the south and turneth about unto the north ; it turneth about continually in its course and the wind 14 returneth again to its circuits ". And from the globe of the sun they return and descend upon the rivers and the seas, upon] the mountains and upon the hills, as it is written (Am.iv.13): "For lo, he that formeth the mountains and createth the wind".

(18) And from the mountains and the hills they return and descend to the seas and the rivers ; and from the seas and the rivers they return and descend upon (the) cities and provinces ; and from the cities and provinces they return and descend into the Garden, and from the Garden they return and descend to Eden, as it is written (Gen.iii. 8): "walking in the Garden in the wind of day". And in the midst of the Garden they join together and blow from one side to the other and are perfumed with the spices of the Garden even from its remotest parts, until they separate from each other, and, filled with the scent of the pure spices, they bring the odour from the remotest parts of Eden and the spices of the Garden to the righteous and godly who in the time to come shall inherit the Garden of Eden and the Tree of Life, as it is written (Cant. iv. 16) : "Awake, O north wind; and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden and eat his precious fruits".

CHAPTER XXIV

The different chariots of the Holy One, blessed be He

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, the glory of all heaven, said to me :

(1) Numerous chariots has the Holy One, blessed be He:

He has the "Chariots of (the) Kerubim", as it is written (Ps.xviii.11, 2 Sam.xxii.11): "And he rode upon a cherub and did fly".

(2) He has the "Chariots of Wind", as it is written (ib.) : "and he flew swiftly upon the wings of the wind ".

(3) He has the "Chariots of (the) Swift Cloud", as it is written (Is. xix. i): "Behold, the Lord rideth upon a swift cloud".

(4) He has "the Chariots of Clouds", as it is written (Ex. xix. 9): "Lo, I come unto thee in a cloud".

(5) He has the "Chariots of the Altar", as it is written (Am. ix. i) : "I saw the Lord standing upon the Altar".

(6) He has the "Chariots of Ribbotaim", as it is written (Ps.Ixviii. 18) : "The chariots of God are Ribbotaim ; thousands of angels ".

(7) He has the "Chariots of the Tent", as it is written (Deut.xxxi. 15) : "And the Lord appeared in the Tent in a pillar of cloud ".

(8) He has the "Chariots of the Tabernacle", as it is written (Lev. i. 1): "And the Lord spake unto him out of the tabernacle".

(9) He has the "Chariots of the Mercy-Seat", as it is written (Num. vii. 89): "then he heard the Voice speaking unto him from upon the mercy-seat".

(10) He has the "Chariots of Sapphire Stone", as it is written (Ex. xxiv. 10) : "and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of sapphire stone".

(11) He has the "Chariots of Eagles ", as it is written (Ex. xix. 4) : "I bare you on eagles' wings". Eagles literally are not meant here but "they that fly swiftly as eagles".

(12) He has the "chariots of Shout", as it is written (Ps. xlvii. 6) : "God is gone up with a shout".

(13) He has the "Chariots of 'Araboth", as it is written (Ps. lxxviii. 5): "Extol Him that rideth upon the 'Araboth".

(14) He has the "Chariots of Thick Clouds", as it is written (Ps. civ. 3): "who maketh the thick clouds His chariot".

(15) He has the "Chariots of the Chayyoth", as it is written (Ezek. i. 14) : "and the Chayyoth ran and returned". They run by permission and return by permission, for Shekina is above their heads.

(16) He has the "Chariots of Wheels (Galgallim)", as it is written (Ezek. x. 2): "And he said: Go in between the whirling wheels".

(17) He has the "Chariots of a Swift Kerub", as it is written (Ps. lxxviii. 10 & Is. xix. 1): "riding on a swift cherub".

And at the time when He rides on a swift kerub, as he sets one of His feet upon him, before he sets the other foot upon his back, he looks through eighteen thousand worlds at one glance. And he discerns and sees into them all and knows what is in all of them and then he sets down the other foot upon him, according as it is written (Ezek. xlvi. 35): "Round about eighteen thousand".

Whence do we know that He looks through every one of them every day? It is written (Ps. xiv. 2): "He looked down from heaven upon the children of men to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek after God".

(18) He has the "Chariots of the 'Ophannim", as it is written

(Ezek. x. 12): "and the 'Ophannim were full of eyes round about". 12

(19) He has the "Chariots of His Holy Throne", as it is written (Ps. xlvii. 8) : " God sitteth upon his holy throne ".

(20) He has the "chariots of the Throne of Yah", as it is written (Ex. xvii. 16) : "Because a hand is lifted up upon the Throne of Jah".

(21) He has the "Chariots of the Throne of Judgement", as it is written (Is. v. 16): "but the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment".

(22) He has the "Chariots of the Throne of Glory ", as it is written (Jer. xvii. 12) : "The Throne of Glory, set on high from the beginning, is the place of our sanctuary".

(23) He has the "Chariots of the High and Exalted Throne", as it is written (Is. vi. i): "I saw the Lord sitting upon the high and exalted throne".

CHAPTER XXV

'Ophanniel, the prince of the 'Ophannim.

Description of the 'Ophannim

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above these there is one great prince, revered, high, lordly, fearful, ancient and strong. 'OPHPHANNIEL H is his name.

(2) He has sixteen faces, four faces on each side, (also) hundred wings on each side. And he has 8466 eyes, corresponding to the days of the year. [2190 –and some say 2116- on each side.] [2191 /2196 and sixteen on each side.]

(3) And those two eyes of his face, in each one of them lightnings are flashing, and from each one of them firebrands are burning ; and no creature is able to behold them : for anyone who looks at them is burnt instantly.

(4) His height is (as) the distance of 2500 years' journey. No eye can behold and no mouth can tell the mighty power of his strength save the King of kings, the Holy One, blessed be He, alone.

(5) Why is he called 'OPHPHANNIEL ?

Because he is appointed over the 'Ophannim and the 'Ophannim are given in his charge. He stands every day and attends and beautifies them. And he exalts and orders their apartment and polishes their standing-place and makes bright their dwellings, makes their corners even and cleanses their seats. And he waits upon them early and late, by day and by night, to increase their beauty, to make great their dignity and to make them "diligent in praise of their Creator.

(6) And all the 'Ophannim are full of eyes, and they are all full of brightness; seventy two sapphire stones are fixed on their garments on their right side and seventy two sapphire stones are fixed on their garments on their left side.

(7) And four carbuncle stones are fixed on the crown of every single one, the splendour of which proceeds in the four directions of 'Araboth even as the splendour of the globe of the sun proceeds in all the directions of the universe. And why is it called Carbuncle (Bareqet)? Because its splendour is like the appearance of a lightning (Baraq). And tents of splendour, tents of brilliance, tents of brightness as of sapphire and carbuncle inclose them because of the shining appearance of their eyes.

CHAPTER XXVI

SERAPHIEL, the Prince of the Seraphim.

Description of the Seraphim

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above these there is one prince, wonderful, noble, great, honourable, mighty, terrible, a chief and leader 1 and a swift scribe, glorified, honoured and beloved.

(2) He is altogether filled with splendour, full of praise and shining; and he is wholly full of brilliance, of light and of beauty; and the whole of him is filled with goodness and greatness.

(3) His countenance is altogether like (that of) angels, but his body is like an eagle's body.

(4) His splendour is like unto lightnings, his appearance like fire brands, his beauty like unto sparks, his honour like fiery coals, his majesty like chashmals, his radiance like the light of the planet Venus.

The image of him is like unto the Greater Light. His height is as the seven heavens. The light from his eyebrows is like the sevenfold light.

(5) The sapphire stone upon his head is as great as the whole universe and like unto the splendour of the very heavens in radiance.

(6) His body is full of eyes like the stars of the sky, innumerable and unsearchable. Every eye is like the planet Venus. Yet, there are some of them like the Lesser Light and some of them like unto the Greater Light. From his ankles to his knees (they are) like unto stars of lightning, from his knees to his thighs like unto the planet Venus, from his thighs to his loins like unto the moon, from his loins to his neck like the sun, from his neck to his skull like unto the Light Imperishable. (Cf. Zeph. iii. 5.)

(7) The crown on his head is like unto the splendour of the Throne of Glory. The measure of the crown is the distance of 502 years' journey. There is no kind of splendour, no kind of brilliance, no kind of radiance, no kind of light in the universe but is fixed on that crown.

(8) The name of that prince is SERAPHIEL H". And the crown on his head, its name is "the Prince of Peace". And why is he called by the name of SERAPHIEL '? Because he is appointed over the Seraphim. And the flaming Seraphim are given in his charge. And he presides over them by day and by night and teaches them song, praise, proclamation of beauty, might and majesty; that they may proclaim the beauty of their King in all manner of Praise and Sanctification (Qedushsha).

(9) How many are the Seraphim? Four, corresponding to the four winds of the world. And how many wings have they each one of them? Six, corresponding to the six days of Creation. And how many faces have they? Each one of them four faces.

(10) The measure of the Seraphim and the height of each one of them correspond to the height of the seven heavens. The size of each wing is like the measure of all Raqia' . The size of each face is like that of the face of the East.

(11) And each one of them gives forth light like unto the splendour of the Throne of Glory: so that not even the Holy Chayyoth, the honoured 'Ophannim, nor the majestic KeruUm are able to behold it. For everyone who beholds it, his eyes are darkened because of its great splendour.

(12) Why are they called Seraphim? Because they burn (saraph) the writing tables of Satan : Every day Satan is sitting, together with SAMMAEL, the Prince of Rome, and with DUBBIEL, the Prince of Persia, and they write the iniquities of Israel on writing tables which they hand over to the Seraphim, in order that they may present them before the Holy One, blessed be He, so that He may destroy Israel from the world. But the Seraphim know from the secrets of the Holy One, blessed be He, that he desires not, that this people Israel should perish. What do the Seraphim? Every day do they receive (accept) them from the hand of Satan and burn them in the burning fire over against the high and exalted Throne in order that they may not come before the Holy One, blessed be He, at the time when he is sitting upon the Throne of Judgement, judging the whole world in truth.

CHAPTER XXVII

RADWERIEL, the keeper of the Book of Records

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel of H', the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above the Seraphim there is one prince, exalted above all the princes, wondrous more than all the servants. His name is RADWERIEL H' who is appointed over the treasures of the books.

(2) He fetches forth the Case of Writings (with) the Book of Records in it, and brings it before the Holy One, blessed be He. And he breaks the seals of the case, opens it, takes out the books and delivers them before the Holy One, blessed be He. And the Holy One, blessed be He, receives them of his hand and gives them in his sight to the Scribes, that they may read them in the Great Beth Din (The court of justice) in the height of 'Araboth Raqia', before the heavenly household.

(3) And why is he called RADWERIEL? Because out of every word that goes forth from his mouth an angel is created : and he stands in the songs (in the singing company) of the ministering angels and utters a song before the Holy One, blessed be He when the time draws nigh for the recitation of the (Thrice) Holy.

CHAPTER XXVIII

The 'Irin and Qaddishin

R. Ishmael said : Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Above all these there are four great princes, Irin and Qaddishin by name: high, honoured, revered, beloved, wonderful and glorious ones, greater than all the children of heaven. There is none like unto them among all the celestial princes and none their equal among all the Servants. For each one of them is equal to all the rest together.

(2) And their dwelling is over against the Throne of Glory, and their standing place over against the Holy One, blessed be He, so that the brilliance of their dwelling is a reflection of the brilliance of the Throne of Glory. And the splendour of their countenance is a reflection of the splendour of Shekina.

(3) And they are glorified by the glory of the Divine Majesty (Gebura) and praised by (through) the praise of Shekina.

(4) And not only that, but the Holy One, blessed be He, does nothing in his world without first consulting them, but after that he doeth it. As it is written (Dan. iv. 17) : "The sentence is by the decree of the 'Irin and the demand by the word of the Qaddishin."

(5) The Irin are two and the Qaddishin are two. And how are they standing before the Holy One, blessed be He? It is to be understood, that one 'Ir is standing on one side and the other 'Ir on the other side, and one Qaddish is standing on one side and the other on the other side.

(6) And ever do they exalt the humble, and they abase to the ground those that are proud, and they exalt to the height those that are humble.

(7) And every day, as the Holy One, blessed be He, is sitting upon the Throne of Judgement and judges the whole world, and the Books of the Living and the Books of the Dead are opened before Him, then all the children of heaven are standing before him in fear, dread, awe and trembling. At that time, (when) the Holy One, blessed be He, is sitting upon the Throne of Judgement to execute judgement, his garment is white as snow, the hair on his head as pure wool and the whole of his cloak is like the shining light. And he is covered with righteousness all over as with a coat of mail.

(8) And those 'Irm and Qaddishin are standing before him like court officers before the judge. And they raise and argue every case and close the case that comes before the Holy One, blessed be He, in judgement, according as it is written (Dan. iv. 17) : "The sentence is by the decree of the 'Irm and the demand by the word of the Qaddishin"

(9) Some of them argue and others pass the sentence in the Great Beth Din in 'Araboth. Some of them make the requests from before uthe Divine Majesty and some close the cases before the Most High. Others finish by going down and (confirming) executing the sentences on earth below. According as it is written (Dan. iv. 13 , 14) : " Behold an 'Ir and a Qaddishcame down from heaven and cried aloud and said thus, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches ".

(10) Why are they called 'Irin and Qaddishint By reason that they sanctify the body and the spirit with lashes of fire on the third day of the judgement, as it is written (Hos. vi. 2): "After two days will he revive us : on the third he will raise us up, and we shall live before him."

CHAPTER XXIX

Description of a class of angels

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence,said to me:

(1) Each one of them has seventy names corresponding to the seventy tongues of the world. And all of them are (based) upon the name of the Holy One, blessed be He. And every several name is written with a flaming style upon the Fearful Crown (Keiher Nora) which is on the head of the high and exalted King.

(2) And from each one of them there go forth sparks and lightnings. And each one of them is beset with horns of splendour round about. From each one lights are shining forth, and each one is surrounded by tents of brilliance so that not even the Seraphim and the Chayyoth who are greater than all the children of heaven are able to behold them.

CHAPTER XXX

The 72 princes of Kingdoms and the Prince of the World officiating at the Great Sanhedrin in heaven

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me:

(1) Whenever the Great Beth Din is seated in the 'Araboth Raqia' on high there is no opening of the mouth for anyone in the world save those great princes who are called H' by the name of the Holy One, blessed be He.

(2) How many are those princes? Seventy-two princes of the kingdoms of the world besides the Prince of the World who speaks (pleads) in favour of the world before the Holy One, blessed be He, every day, at the hour when the book is opened in which are recorded all the doings of the world, according as it is written (Dan.vii.10) : "The judgement was set and the books were opened."

CHAPTER XXXI
(The attributes of) Justice, Mercy and Truth
by the Throne of Judgement

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) At the time when the Holy One, blessed be He, is sitting on the Throne, of Judgement, (then) Justice is standing on His right and Mercy on His left and Truth before His face.

(2) And when man enters before Him to judgement, (then) there comes forth from the splendour of the Mercy towards him as (it were) a staff and stands in front of him. Forthwith man falls upon his face, (and) all the angels of destruction fear and tremble before him, according as it is written (Is. xvi. 5): "And with mercy shall the throne be established, and he shall sit upon it in truth."

CHAPTER XXXII
The execution of judgement on the wicked. God's sword

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) When the Holy One, blessed be He, opens the Book half of which is fire and half flame, (then) they go out from before Him in every moment to execute the judgement on the wicked by His sword

(that is) drawn forth out of its sheath and the splendour of which shines like a lightning and pervades the world from one end to the other, as it is written (Is. lxvi. 16): "For by fire will the Lord plead (and by his sword with all flesh)."

(2) And all the inhabitants of the world (lit. those who come into the world) fear and tremble before Him, when they behold His sharpened sword like unto a lightning from one end of the world to the other, and sparks and flashes of the size of the stars of Raqia' going out from it; according as it is written (Deut. xxxii. 41): "If I whet the lightning of my sword".

CHAPTER XXXIII
The angels of Mercy, of Peace and of Destruction by the Throne of Judgement. The scribes, (vss. i, 2)
The angels by the Throne of Glory and the fiery rivers under it. (vss. 3-5)

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) At the time that the Holy One, blessed be He, is sitting on the Throne of Judgement, (then) the angels of Mercy are standing on His right, the angels of Peace are standing on His left and the angels of Destruction are standing in front of Him.

(2) And one scribe is standing beneath Him, and another scribe above Him.

(3) And the glorious Seraphim surround the Throne on its four sides with walls of lightnings, and the 'Ophannim. surround them with fire-brands round about the Throne of Glory. And clouds of fire and clouds of flames compass them to the right and to the left; and the Holy Chayyoth carry the Throne of Glory from below: each one with three fingers. The measure of the fingers of each one is 800,000 and 700 times hundred, (and) 66,000 parasangs.

(4) And underneath the feet of the Chayyoth seven fiery rivers are running and flowing. And the breadth of each river is 365 thousand parasangs and its depth is 248 thousand myriads of parasangs. Its length is unsearchable and immeasurable.

(5) And each river turns round in a bow in the four directions of 'Araboth Raqict , and (from there) it falls down to Ma'on and is stayed, and from Ma'1 on to Zebul, from Zebul to Shechaqim, from Shechaqim to Raqia' , from Raqia' to Shamayim and from Shamayim upon the heads of the wicked who are in Gehenna, as it is written (Jer. xxiii. 19): "Behold a whirlwind of the Lord, even his fury, is gone, yea, a whirling tempest; it shall burst upon the head of the wicked".

CHAPTER XXXIV

The different concentric circles round the Chayyoth, consisting offire, water, hailstones etc. and of the angels uttering the Qedushsha responsorium

R. Ishmael said: Metatron; the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) The hoofs of the Chayyoth are surrounded by seven clouds of burning coals. The clouds of burning coals are surrounded on the outside by seven walls of flame(s). The seven walls of flame(s) are surrounded on the outside by seven walls of hailstones (stones of 'Et-gabish, Ezek. xiii. 11,13, xxviii. 22). The hailstones are surrounded on the outside by xstones of hail (stone of Barad). The stones of hail are surrounded on the outside by stones of "the wings of the tempest ".

The stones of "the wings of the tempest" are surrounded on the outside by flames of fire. The flames of fire are surrounded by the chambers of the whirlwind. The chambers of the whirlwind are surrounded on the outside by the fire and the water.

(2) Round about the fire and the water are those who utter the "Holy". Round about those who utter the "Holy" are those who utter the "Blessed". Round about those who utter the "Blessed" are the bright clouds. The bright clouds are surrounded on the outside by coals of burning juniper ; and on the outside surrounding the coals of burning juniper there are thousand camps of fire and ten thousand hosts of flame(s). And between every several camp and every several host there is a cloud, so that they may not be burnt by the fire.

CHAPTER XXXV

The camps of angels in 'Araboth Raquia: angels, performing the Qedushsha

1 R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) 506 thousand myriads of camps has the Holy One, blessed be He, in the height of 'Araboth Raquia. And each camp is (composed of) 496 thousand angels.

(2) And every single angel, the height of his stature is as the great sea; and the appearance of their countenance as the appearance of the lightning, and their eyes as lamps of fire, and their arms and their feet like in colour to polished brass and the roaring voice of their words like the voice of a multitude.

(3) And they are all standing before the Throne of Glory in four rows. And the princes of the army are standing at the head of each row.

(4) And some of them utter the "Holy" and others utter the "Blessed", some of them run as messengers, others are standing in attendance, according as it is written (Dan. vii. 10): "Thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him : the judgment was set and the books were opened ".

(5) And in the hour, when the time draws nigh for to say the "Holy", (then) first there goes forth a whirlwind from before the Holy One, blessed be He, and bursts upon the camp of Shekina and there arises a great commotion among them, as it is written (Jer.xxx. 23): "Behold, the whirlwind of the Lord goeth forth with fury, a continuing commotion".

(6) At that moment 4thousand thousands of them are changed into sparks, thousand thousands of them into firebrands, thousand thousands into flashes, thousand thousands into flames, thousand thousands into males, thousand thousands into females, thousand thousands into winds, thousand thousands into burning fires, thousand thousands into flames, thousand thousands into sparks, thousand thousands into chashmals of light; until they take upon themselves the yoke of the kingdom of heaven, the high and lifted up, of the Creator of them all with fear, dread, awe and trembling, with commotion, anguish, terror and trepidation. Then they are changed again into their former shape to have the fear of their King before them always, as they have set their hearts on saying the Song continually, as it is written (Is. vi. 3): "And one cried unto another and said (Holy, Holy, Holy, etc.)".

CHAPTER XXXVI

The angels bathe in the fiery river before reciting the 'Song'

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) At the time when the ministering angels desire to say (the) Song, (then) Nehar di-Nur (the fiery stream) rises with many thousand thousands and myriads of myriads" (of angels) of power and strength of fire and it runs and passes under the Throne of Glory, between the camps of the ministering angels and the troops of 'Araboth.

(2) And all the ministering angels first go down into Nehar di-Nur, and they dip themselves in the fire and dip their tongue and their mouth seven times ; and after that they go up and put on the garment of 'Machaqe Samal' and cover themselves with cloaks of chashmal and stand in four rows over against the Throne of Glory, in all the heavens.

CHAPTER XXXVII

The four camps of Shekina and their surroundings

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) In the seven Halls there are standing four chariots of Shekina, and before each one are standing the four camps of Shekina. Between each camp a river of fire is continually flowing.

(2) Between each river there are bright clouds [surrounding them], and between each cloud there are put up pillars of brimstone. Between one pillar and another there are standing flaming wheels, surrounding them. And between one wheel and another there are flames of fire round about. Between one flame and another there are treasuries of lightnings; behind the treasuries of lightnings are the wings of the stormwind. Behind the wings of the stormwind are the chambers of the tempest; behind the chambers of the tempest there are winds, voices, thunders, sparks [upon] sparks and earthquakes [upon] earthquakes.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

The fear that befalls all the heavens at the sound of the 'Holy? esp. the heavenly bodies. These appeared by the Prince of the World

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) At the time, when the ministering angels utter (the Thrice) Holy, then all the pillars of the heavens and their sockets do tremble, and the gates of the Halls of Araboth Raqia' are shaken and the foundations of Shechaqim and the Universe (Tebel) are moved, and the orders of Ma'on and the chambers of Makon quiver, and all the orders of Raqia and the constellations and the planets are dismayed, and the globes of the sun and the moon haste away and flee out of their courses and run 12,000 parasangs and seek to throw themselves down from heaven,

(2) by reason of the roaring voice of their chant, and the noise of their praise and the sparks and lightnings that go forth from their faces; as it is written (Ps. Ixxvii. 18): "The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven (the lightnings lightened the world, the earth trembled and shook) ".

(3) Until the prince of the world calls them, saying: "Be ye quiet in your place ! Fear not because of the ministering angels who sing the Song before the Holy One, blessed be He". As it is written (Job.xxxviii. 7): "When the morning stars sang together and all the children of heaven shouted for joy".

CHAPTER XXXIX
The explicit names fly off from the Throne and all the various angelic hosts prostrate themselves before it at the time of the Qedushsha

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) When the ministering angels utter the "Holy" then all the explicit names that are graven with a flaming style on the Throne of Glory fly off like eagles, with sixteen wings. And they surround and compass the Holy One, blessed be He, on the four sides of the place of His Shekina¹.

(2) And the angels of the host, and the flaming Servants, and the mighty 'Ophannim, and the Kerubim of the Shekina, and the Holy Chayyoth, and the Seraphim, and the 'Er'ellim, and the Taphsarim and the troops of consuming fire, and the fiery armies, and the flaming hosts, and the holy princes, adorned with crowns, clad in kingly majesty, wrapped in glory, girt with loftiness, 4 fall upon their faces three times, saying: "Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever".

CHAPTER XL
The ministering angels rewarded with crowns, when uttering the "Holy" in its right order, and punished by consuming fire if not. New ones created in the stead of the consumed angels

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) When the ministering angels say "Holy" before the Holy One, blessed be He, in the proper way, then the servants of His Throne, the attendants of His Glory, go forth with great mirth from under the Throne of Glory.

(2) And they all carry in their hands, each one of them thousand thousand and ten thousand times ten thousand crowns of stars, similar in appearance to the planet Venus, and put them on the ministering angels and the great princes who utter the "Holy". Three crowns they put on each one of them: one crown because they say "Holy", another crown, because they say "Holy, Holy", and a third crown because they say "Holy, Holy, Holy, is the Lord of Hosts" .

(3) And in the moment that they do not utter the "Holy" in the right order, a consuming fire goes forth from the little finger of the Holy One, blessed be He, and falls down in the midst of their ranks and is divided into 496 thousand parts corresponding to the four camps of the ministering angels, and consumes them in one moment, as it is written (Ps. xcvi. 3): "A fire goeth before him and burneth up his adversaries round about".

(4) After that the Holy One, blessed be He, opens His mouth and speaks one word and creates others in their stead, new ones like them. And each one stands before His Throne of Glory, uttering the "Holy", as it is written (Lam. iii. 23): "They are new every morning; great is thy faithfulness".

CHAPTER XLI
Metatron shows R. Ishmael the letters engraved on the Throne of Glory by which letters everything in heaven and earth has been created

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Come and behold the letters by which the heaven and the earth were created, the letters by which were created the mountains and hills, the letters by which were created the seas and rivers, the letters by which were created the trees and herbs, the letters by which were created the planets and the constellations, the letters by which were created the globe of the moon and the globe of the sun, Orion, the Pleiades and all the different luminaries of Raqia' .

(2) the letters by which were created the Throne of Glory and the Wheels of the Merkaba, the letters by which were created the necessities of the worlds,

 (3) the letters by which were created wisdom, understanding, knowledge, prudence, meekness and righteousness by which the whole world is sustained.
 (4) And I walked by his side and he took me by his hand and raised me upon his wings and showed me those letters, all of them, that are graven with a flaming style on the Throne of Glory : and sparks go forth from them and cover all the chambers of 'Araboth.

CHAPTER XLII

Instances of polar opposites kept in balance by several Divine Names and other similar wonders

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Come and I will show thee, where the waters are suspended in the highest, where fire is burning in the midst of hail, where lightnings lighten out of the midst of snowy mountains, where thunders are roaring in the celestial heights, where a flame is burning in the midst of the burning fire and where voices make themselves heard in the midst of thunder and earthquake.

(2) Then I went by his side and he took me by his hand and lifted me up on his wings and showed me all those things. I beheld the waters suspended on high in 'Araboth Raqia' by (force of) the name YAH 'EHYE 'ASHER 'EHYE (Jah, I am that I am), And their fruits going down from heaven and watering the face of the world, as it is written (Ps.civ.13): "(He watereth the mountains from his chambers :) the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy work".

(3) And I saw fire and snow and hailstone that were mingled together within each other and yet were undamaged, by (force of) the name 'ESH 'OKELA (consuming fire), as it is written (Deut. iv. 24) : "For the Lord, thy God, is a consuming fire".

(4) And I saw lightnings that were lightening out of mountains of snow and yet were not damaged (quenched), by (force of) the name YAH SUR 'OLAMIM (Jah, the everlasting rock), as it is written (Is. xxvi. 4): "For in Jah, YHWH, the everlasting rock".

(5) And I saw thunders and voices that were roaring in the midst of fiery flames and were not damaged (silenced), by (force of) the name 'EL-SHADDAI RABBA (the Great God Almighty) as it is written (Gen. xvii. i): "I am God Almighty".

(6) And I beheld a flame (and) a glow (glowing flames) that were flaming and glowing in the midst of burning fire, and yet were not damaged (devoured), by (force of) the name YAD 'AL KES YAH

(the hand upon the Throne of the Lord) as it is written (Ex. xvii. 16) : " And he said: for the hand is upon the Throne of the Lord ".

(7) And I beheld rivers of fire in the midst of rivers of water and they were not damaged (quenched) by (force of) the name 'OSE SHALOM (Maker of Peace) as it is written (Job xxv. 2): "He maketh peace in his high places". For he makes peace between the fire and the water, between the hail and the fire, between the wind and the cloud, between the earthquake and the sparks.

CHAPTER XLIII

Metatron shows R. Ishmael the abode of the unborn spirits and of the spirits of the righteous dead

R. Ishmael said: Metatron said to me:

(1) Come and I will show thee 1where are1 the spirits of the righteous that have been created and have returned, and the spirits of the righteous that have not yet been created.

(2) And he lifted me up to his side, took me by his hand and lifted me up near the Throne of Glory by the place of the Shekina ; and he revealed the Throne of Glory to me, and he showed me the spirits that have been created and had returned : and they were flying above the Throne of Glory before the Holy One, blessed be He.

(3) After that I went to interpret the following verse of Scripture and I found in what is written (Isa. Ivii. 16): "for the spirit clothed itself before me, and the souls I have made" that ("for the spirit was clothed before me") means the spirits that have been created in the chamber of creation of the righteous and that have returned before the Holy One, blessed be He; (and the words:) "and the souls I have made" refer to the spirits 4 of the righteous that have not yet been created in the chamber (GUPH).

CHAPTER XLIV
Metatron shows R. Ishmael the abode of the wicked and the intermediate in Sheol. (vss.
1-6)
The Patriarchs pray for the deliverance of Israel
(vss. 7-10)

R. Ishmael said: Metatron, x the Angel, the Prince of the Presence, said to me :

(1) Come and I will show thee the spirits of the wicked and the spirits of the intermediate where they are standing, and the spirits of the intermediate, whither they go down, 3and the spirits of the wicked, where they go down.

(2) And he said to me : The spirits of the wicked go down to She'ol by the hands of two angels of destruction: ZA'APHIEL and SIMKIEL are their names.

(3) SIMKIEL is appointed over the intermediate to support them and purify them because of the great mercy of the Prince of the Place (Maqom). ZA'APHIEL is appointed over the spirits of the wicked in order to cast them down from the presence of the Holy One, blessed be He, and from the splendour of the Shekina to She'ol, to be punished in the fire of Gehenna with staves of burning coal.

(4) And I went by his side, and he took me by his hand and showed me all of them with his fingers.

(5) And I beheld the appearance of their faces (and, lo, it was) as the appearance of children of men, and their bodies like eagles.

And not only that but (furthermore) the colour of the countenance of the intermediate was like pale grey on account of their deeds, for there are stains upon them until they have become cleaned from their iniquity in the fire.

(6) And the colour of the wicked was like the bottom of a pot on account of the wickedness of their doings.

(7) And I saw the spirits of the Patriarchs Abraham Isaac and Jacob and the rest of the righteous whom they have brought up out of their graves and who have ascended to the Heaven (Raqirf). And they were praying before the Holy One, blessed be He, saying in their prayer: "Lord of the Universe! How long wilt thou sit upon (thy) Throne like a mourner in the days of his mourning with thy right hand behind thee 7and not7 deliver thy children and reveal thy Kingdom in the world? And for how long wilt thou have no pity upon thy children who are made slaves among the nations of the world? Nor upon thy right hand that is behind thee wherewith thou didst stretch out the heavens and the earth and the heavens of heavens? When wilt thou have compassion?"

(8) Then the Holy One, blessed be He, answered every one of them, saying: "Since these wicked do sin so and so, and transgress with such and such transgressions against me, how could I deliver my great Right Hand in the downfall by their hands (caused by them).

(9) In that moment Metatron called me and spake to me: "My servant! Take the books, and read their evil doings!" Forthwith I took the books and read their doings and there were to be found 36 transgressions (written down) with regard to each wicked one and besides, that they have transgressed all the letters in the Tora, as it is written (Dan. ix. u) : "Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy Law". It is not written 'al torateka but 'et (JIN) torateka, for they have transgressed from 'Aleph to Taw, 40 statutes have they transgressed for each letter.

(10) Forthwith Abraham, Isaac and Jacob wept. Then said to them the Holy One, blessed be He: "Abraham, my beloved, Isaac, my Elect one, Jacob, my firstborn!

How can I now deliver them from among the nations of the world?" And forthwith MIKAEL, the Prince of Israel, cried and wept with a loud voice and said (Ps. x. i) : "Why standest thou afar off, O Lord?"

CHAPTER XLV

Metatron shows R. Ishmael past and future events recorded on the Curtain of the Throne

R. Ishmael said: Metatron said to me:

(1) Come, and I will show thee the Curtain of MAQOM (the Divine Majesty) which is spread before the Holy One, blessed be He, (and) whereon are graven all the generations of the world and all their doings, both what they have done and what they will do until the end of all generations.

(2) And I went, and he showed it to me pointing it out with his fingers Mike a father who teaches his children the letters of Tora. And I saw each generation, the rulers of each generation, and the heads of each generation, the shepherds of each generation, the oppressors (drivers) of each generation, the keepers of each generation, the scourgers of each generation, the overseers of each generation, the judges of each generation, the court officers of each generation, the teachers of each generation, the supporters of each generation, the chiefs of each generation, the presidents of academies of each generation, the magistrates of each generation, the princes of each generation, the counsellors of each generation, the nobles of each generation, and the men of might of each generation, the elders of each generation, and the guides of each generation.

(3) And I saw Adam, his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Noah and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, and the generation of the flood, their doings and their thoughts, Shem and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Nimrod and the generation of the confusion of tongues, and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Abraham and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Isaac and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Ishmael and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Jacob and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Joseph and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, the tribes and their generation, their doings and their thoughts, Amram and his generation, their doings and their thoughts, Moses and his generation, their doings and their thoughts,

(4) Aaron and Mirjam their works and their doings, the princes and the elders, their works and doings, Joshua and his generation, their works and doings, the judges and their generation, their works and doings, Eli and his generation, their works and doings, "Phinehas, their works and doings, Elkanah and his generation, their works and their doings, Samuel and his generation, their works and doings, the kings of Judah with their generations, their works and their doings, the kings of Israel and their generations, their works and their doings, the princes of Israel, their works and their doings; the princes of the nations of the world, their works and their doings, the heads of the councils of Israel, their works and their doings ; the heads of (the councils in) the nations of the world, their generations, their works and their doings; the rulers of Israel and their generation, their works and their doings ; the nobles of Israel and their generation, their works and their doings ; the nobles of the nations of the world and their generation(s), their works and their doings; the men of reputation in Israel, their generation, their works and their doings ; the judges of Israel, their generation, their works and their doings ; the judges of the nations of the world and their generation, their works and their doings ; the teachers of children in Israel, their generations, their works and their doings ; the teachers of children in the nations of the world, their generations, their works and their doings; the counsellors (interpreters) of Israel, their generation, their works and their doings ; the counsellors (interpreters) of the nations of the world, their generation, their works and their doings ; all the prophets of Israel, their generation, their works and their doings ; all the prophets of the nations of the world, their generation, their works and their doings ;

(5) and all the fights and wars that the nations 16 of the world wrought against the people of Israel in the time of their kingdom. And I saw Messiah, son of Joseph, and his generation "and their" works and their doings that they will do against the nations of the world. And I saw Messiah, son of David, and his generation, and all the fights and wars, and their works and their doings that they will do with Israel both for good and evil. And I saw all the fights and wars that Gog and Magog will fight in the days of Messiah, and all that the Holy One, blessed be He, will do with them in the time to come.

(6) And all the rest of all the leaders of the generations and all the works of the generations both in Israel and in the nations of the world, both what is done and what will be done hereafter to all generations until the end of time, (all) were graven on the Curtain of MAQOM. And I saw all these things with my eyes; and after I had seen it, I opened my mouth in praise of MAQOM (the Divine Majesty) (saying thus, Eccl. viii. 4, 5): "For the King's word hath power (and who may say unto him: What doest thou?) Whoso keepeth the commandments shall know no evil thing". And I said: (Ps. civ. 24) "O Lord, how manifold are thy works!".

CHAPTER XLVI

The place of the stars shown to R. Ishmael

R. Ishmael said : Metatron said to me :

(1) (Come and I will show thee) the space of the stars that are standing in Raqia' night by night in fear of the Almighty (MAQOM) and (I will show thee) where they go and where they stand.

(2) I walked by his side, and he took me by his hand and pointed out all to me with his fingers. And they were standing on sparks of flames round the Merkaba of the Almighty (MAQOM). What did Metatron do? At that moment he clapped his hands and chased them off from their place. Forthwith they flew off on flaming wings, rose and fled from the four sides of the Throne of the Merkaba, and (as they flew) he told me the names of every single one. As it is written (Ps. cxlvii. 4) : "He telleth the number of the stars ; he giveth them all their names", teaching, that the Holy One, blessed be He, has given a name to each one of them.

(3) And they all enter in counted order under the guidance of (lit. through, by the hands of) RAHATIEL to Raqia' ha-shSHamayim to serve the world. And they go out in counted order to praise the Holy One, blessed be He, with songs and hymns, according as it is written (Ps. xix. i): "The heavens declare the glory of God".

(4) But in the time to come the Holy One, blessed be He, will create them anew, as it is written (Lam. iii. 23): "They are new every morning". And they open their mouth and utter a song.

Which is the song that they utter? (Ps. viii. 3): "When I consider thy heavens".

CHAPTER XLVII

Metatron shows R. Ishmael the spirits of the punished angels

R. Ishmael said: Metatron said to me:

(1) Come and I will show thee the souls of the angels and the spirits of the ministering servants whose bodies have been burnt in the fire of MAQOM (the Almighty) that goes forth from his little finger. And they have been made into fiery coals in the midst of the fiery river (Nehar di-Nur). But their spirits and their souls are standing behind the Shekina.

(2) Whenever the ministering angels utter a song at a wrong time or as not appointed to be sung they are burnt and consumed by the fire of their Creator and by a flame from their Maker, in the places (chambers) of the whirlwind, for it blows upon them and drives them into the Nehar di-Nur; and there they are made into numerous mountains of burning coal. But their spirit and their soul return to their Creator, and all are standing behind their Master.

(3) And I went by his side and he took me by his hand ; and he showed me all the souls of the angels and the spirits of the ministering servants who were standing behind the Shekina upon wings of the whirlwind and walls of fire surrounding them.

(4) At that moment Metatron opened to me the gates of the walls within which they were standing behind the Shekina, And I lifted up my eyes and saw them, and behold, the likeness of every one was as (that of) angels and their wings like birds' (wings), made out of flames, the work of burning fire. In that moment I opened my mouth in praise of MAQOM and said (Ps. xcii. 5): "How great are thy works, O Lord ".

CHAPTER XLVIII (A)

Metatron shows R. Ishmael the Right Hand of the Most High, now inactive behind Him, but in the future destined to work the deliverance of Israel

R. Ishmael said : Metatron said to me :

(1) Come, and I will show thee the Right Hand of MAQOM, laid behind (Him) because of the destruction of the Holy Temple ; from which all kinds of splendour and light shine forth and by which the 955 heavens were created ; and whom not even the Seraphim and the 'Ophannim are permitted (to behold), until the day of salvation shall arrive.

(2) And I went by his side and he took me by his hand and showed me (the Right Hand of MAQOM), with all manner of praise, rejoicing and song; and no mouth can tell its praise, and no eye can behold it, because of its greatness, dignity, majesty, glory and beauty.

(3) And not only that, but all the souls of the righteous who are counted worthy to behold the joy of Jerusalem, they are standing by it, praising and praying before it three times every day, saying (Is. li. 9): "Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord" according as it is written (Is. lxiii. 12): "He caused his glorious arm to go at the right hand of Moses".

(4) In that moment the Right Hand of MAQOM was weeping. And there went forth from its five fingers five rivers of tears and fell down into the great sea and shook the whole world, according as it is written (Is. xxiv. 19, 20): "The earth is utterly broken (1), the earth is clean dissolved (2), the earth is moved exceedingly (3), the earth shall stagger like a drunken man (4) and shall be moved to and fro like a hut (5)", five times corresponding to the fingers of his Great Right Hand.

(5) But when the Holy One, blessed be He, sees, that there is no righteous man in the generation, and no pious man (Chasid] on earth, and no justice in the hands of men ; and (that there is) no man like unto Moses, and no intercessor as Samuel who could pray before MAQOM for the salvation and for the deliverance, and for His Kingdom, that it be revealed in the whole world; and for His great Right Hand that He put it before Himself again to work great salvation by it for Israel,

(6) then forthwith will the Holy One, blessed be He, remember His own justice, favour, mercy and grace : and He will deliver His great Arm by himself, and His righteousness will support Him. According as it is written (Is. lix. 16): "And he saw, that there was no man" (that is:) like unto Moses who prayed countless times for Israel in the desert and averted the (Divine) decrees from them" and he wondered, that there was no intercessor" like unto Samuel who intreated the Holy One, blessed be He, and called unto Him and he answered him and fulfilled his desire, even if it was not fit (in accordance with the Divine plan), according as it is written (i Sam. xii. 17) : "Is it not wheat-harvest to-day? I will call unto the Lord".

(7) And not only that, but He joined fellowship with Moses in every place, as it is written (Ps.xcix.6): "Moses and Aaron among His priests." And again it is written (Jer. xv. i): "Though Moses and Samuel stood before me" (Is. Ixiii. 5): "Mine own arm brought salvation unto me".

(8) Said the Holy One, blessed be He in that hour: " How long shall I wait for the children of men to work salvation according to their righteousness for my arm? For my own sake and for the sake of my merit and righteousness will I deliver my arm and by it redeem my children from among the nations of the world.

As it is written (Is. xlvi. n): "For my own sake will I do it. For how should my name be profaned".

(9) In that moment will the Holy One, blessed be He, reveal His Great Arm and show it to the nations of the world: for its length is as the length of the world and its breadth is as the width of the world. And the appearance of its splendour is like unto the splendour of the sunshine in its might, in the summer solstice.

(10) Forthwith Israel will be saved from among the nations of the world. And Messiah will appear unto them and He will bring them up to Jerusalem with great joy. And not only that but Israel will come from the four quarters of the World and eat with Messiah. But the nations of the world shall not eat with them, as it is written (Is. Hi. 10): "The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations ; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God". And again (Deut. xxxii. 12): "The Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him". (Zech. xiv. 9) : "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth".

CHAPTER XLVIII (cont.) (B)

The Divine Names that go forth from the Throne of Glory, crowned and escorted by numerous angelic hosts through the heavens and back again to the Throne the angels sing the 'Holy' and the 'Blessed'

These are the seventy-two names written on the heart of the Holy One, blessed be He: SS, SeDeQ {righteousness}, SaHPeL SUR {Is. xxvi. 4}, SBI, SaDdlQ{righteous}, S'Ph, SHN, SeBa'oTh {Lord of Hosts},ShaDdaY {God Almighty}, 'eLoHIM {God}, YHWH, SH, DGUL, W'DOM, SSS", 'YW, 'F, 'HW, HB, YaH, HW, WWW, SSS, PPP, NN, HH, HaY {living}, HaY, ROKeB 'aRaBOTH {riding upon the 'Araboth', Ps. Ixviii. 5}, YH, HH, WH, MMM, NNN, HWW, YH, YHH, HPhS, H'S, 'I, W, S", 'Z', '"', QQQ {Holy, Holy, Holy}, QShR, BW, ZK, GINUR, GINURYa', Y', YOD, 'aLePh, H'N, P'P, R'W, YYWy YYW, BBS, DDD, TTT, KKK, KLL, SYS, 'XT', BShKMLW {= blessed be the Name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever}, completed for MeLeK HalOLaM {the King of the Universe}, JBRH LB' {the beginning of Wisdom for the children of men}, BNLK W" Y {blessed be He who gives strength to the weary and increaseth strength to them that have no might, Is. xl. 29}that go forth (adorned) with numerous crowns of fire with numerous crowns of flame, with numerous crowns of chashmal, with numerous crowns of lightning from before the Throne of Glory. And with them (there are) thousand hundreds of power (i.e. powerful angels) who escort them like a king with trembling and dread, with awe and shivering, with honour and majesty andfear, with terror, with greatness and dignity, with glory and strength, with understanding and knowledge and with a pillar of fire and a pillar of flame and lightning and their light is as lightnings of light and with the likeness of the chashmal.

(2) And they give glory unto them and they answer and cry before them: Holy, Holy, Holy.

And they roll (convoy) them through every heaven as mighty and honoured princes. And when they bring them all back to the place of the Throne of Glory, then all the Chayyoth by the Merkaba open their mouth in praise of His glorious name, saying: "Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever".

CHAPTER XLVIII (cont.) (c) An Enoch-Metatron piece

ALT 1

(1) "I seized him, and I took him and I appointed him" that is Enoch, the son of Jared, whose name is Metatron

(2) and I took him from among the children of men

(5) and made him a Throne over against my Throne. Which is the size of that Throne? Seventy thousand parasangs (all) of fire.

(9) I committed unto him 70 angels corresponding to the nations (of the world) and I gave into his charge all the household above and below.

(7) And I committed to him Wisdom and Intelligence more than (to) all the angels. And I called his name "the LESSER YAH", whose name is by Gematria 71. And I arranged for him all the works of Creation. And I made his power to transcend (lit. I made for him power more than) all the ministering angels.

ALT 2

(3) He committed unto Metatron that is Enoch, the son of Jared all treasures. And I appointed him over all the stores that I have in every heaven. And I committed into his hands the keys of each heavenly store.

(4) I made (of) him the prince over all the princes, and I made (of) him a minister of my Throne of Glory, to provide for and arrange the Holy Chayyoth, to wreathe crowns for them (to crown them with crowns), to clothe them with honour and majesty to prepare for them a seat when he is sitting on his throne to magnify his glory in the height.

(5) The height of his stature among all those (that are) of high stature (is) seventy thousand parasangs. And I made his glory great as the majesty of my glory.

(6) and the brilliance of his eyes as the splendour of the Throne of Glory.

(7) his garment honour and majesty, his royal crown 500 by 500 parasangs.

ALT 3

(1) Aleph1 I made him strong, I took him, I appointed him: (namely) Metatron, my servant who is one (unique) among all the children of heaven. I made him strong in the generation of the first Adam. But when I beheld the men of the generation of the flood, that they were corrupt, then I went and removed my Shekina from among them. And I lifted it up on high with the sound of a trumpet and with a shout, as it is written (Ps.xlvii. 6): "God is gone up with a shout, the Lord with the sound of a trumpet".

(2) "And I took him": (that is) Enoch, the son of Jared, from among them. And I lifted him up with the sound of a trumpet and with a tera'a (shout) to the high heavens, to be my witness together with the Chayyoth by the Merkaba in the world to come.

(3) I appointed him over all the treasures and stores that I have in every heaven. And I committed into his hand the keys of every several one.

(4) I made (of) him the prince over all the princes and a minister of the Throne of Glory (and) the Halls of 'Araboth: to open their doors to me, and (of) the Throne of Glory, to exalt and arrange it; (and I appointed him over) the Holy Chayyot to wreathe crowns upon their heads; the majestic 'Ophannim, to crown them with strength and glory; the; honoured Kerubim, to clothe: them in majesty; over the radiant sparks, to make them to shine with splendour and brilliance; over the flaming Seraphim, to cover them with highness; the Chashmallim of light, to make them radiant with Light and to prepare the seat for me every morning as I sit upon the Throne of Glory. And to extol and magnify my glory in the height of my power; (and I have committed unto him) the secrets of above and the secrets of below (heavenly secrets and earthly secrets).

(5) I made him higher than all. The height of his stature, in the midst of all (who are) high of stature (I made) seventy thousand parasangs. I made his Throne great by the majesty of my Throne. And I increased its glory by the honour of my glory.

(6) I transformed his flesh into torches of fire, and all the bones of his body into fiery coals; and I made the appearance of his eyes as the lightning, and the light of his eyebrows as the imperishable light. I made his face bright as the splendour of the sun, and his eyes as the splendour of the Throne of Glory.

(7) I made honour and majesty his clothing, beauty and highness his covering cloak and a royal crown of 500 by (times) 500 parasangs (his) diadem. And I put upon him of my honour, my majesty and the splendour of my glory that is upon my Throne of Glory. I called him the LESSER YHWH, the Prince of the Presence, the Knower of Secrets: for every secret did I reveal to him as a father and all mysteries declared I unto him in uprightness.

(8) I set up his throne at the door of my Hall that he may sit and judge the heavenly household on high. And I placed every prince before him, to receive authority from him, to perform his will.

(9) Seventy names did I take from (my) names and called him by them to enhance his glory.

Seventy princes gave I into his hand, to command unto them my precepts and my words in every language:

to abase by his word the proud to the ground, and to exalt by the utterance of his lips the humble to the height; to smite kings by his speech, to turn kings away from their paths, to set up(the) rulers over their dominion as it is written (Dan.ii. 21): "and he changeth the times and the seasons, and to give wisdom unto all the setwise of the world and understanding (and) knowledge to all who understand knowledge, as it is written (Dan. ii. 21): " and knowledge to them that know understanding", to reveal to them the secrets of my words and to teach the decree of my righteous judgement,

(10) as it is written (Is.Iv. n): "so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void but shall accomplish (that which I please)". 'E'eseh' (I shall accomplish) is not written here, but "asdh' (he shall accomplish), meaning, that whatever word and whatever utterance goes forth from before the Holy One, blessed be He, Metatron stands and carries it out. And he establishes the decrees of the Holy One, blessed be He.

CHAPTER XLVIII (D)

The names of Metatron. The treasuries of Wisdom opened to Moses on mount Sinai. The angels protest against Metatron for revealing the secrets to Moses and are answered and rebuked by God. The chain of tradition and the power of the transmitted mysteries to heal diseases

(1) Seventy names has Metatron which the Holy One, blessed be He, took from his own name and put upon him. And these they are: YeHOEL, YaH, YeHOEL, YOPHIEL and Yophphiel, and 'APHPHIEL and MaRGeZIEL, GIPpUYEL, Pa'aZIEL, 'A'aH, PeRIEL, TaTRIEL, TaBKIEL, 'W, YHWH, DH, WHYH, 'eBeD, DiBbURIEL, 'aPh'aPIEL, SPPIEL, PaSPaSIEL, SeNeGRON, MeTaTRON, SOGDIN, 'ADRIgon, ASUM, SaQPAM, SaQTAM, MIGON MITTON, MOTTRON, ROSPHIM, QINOTH, ChaTaTYaH, DeGaZYaH, PSPYaH, BSKNYH, MZRG, BaRaD., MKRKK, MSPRD, ChShG, ChShB, MNRTTT, BSYRYM, MITMON, TITMON, PiSQON, SaPhSaPhYaH, ZRCh, ZRChYaH, B', BeYaH, HBH BeYaH, PeLeT, PLTYaH, RaBRaBYaH, ChaS, ChaSYaH, TaPhTaPhYaH, TaMTaMYaH, SeHaSYaH, IRURYaH, 'aL'aLYaH, BaZRIDYaH, SaTSaTKYaH, SaSDYaH, RaZRaZYAH, BaZRaZYaH, 'aRIMYaH, SBHYaH, SBIBKHYYH, SiMKaM, YaHSeYaH, SSBIBYaH, SaBKaSBeYaH, QeLILQaLYaH, fKIHHH, HHYH, WH, WHYH, ZaKklKYaH, TUTRISYaH, SURYaH, ZeH, PeNIRHYaH, Z1Z'H, GaL RaZaYYa, MaMLIKYaH, TTYaH, eMeQ, QaMYaH, MeKaPpeRYaH, PeRISHYaH, SePhaM, GBIR, GiBbORYaH, GOR, GORYaH, ZIW, 'OKBaR, the LESSER YHWH, after the name of his Master, (Ex. xxiii. 21) "for my name is in him", RaBIBIEL, TUMIEL, Segansakkiel ('Sagnezagiel' / 'Neganzegael), the Prince of Wisdom.

(2) And why is he called by the name Sagnesakiel? Because all the treasures of wisdom are committed in his hand.

(3) And all of them were opened to Moses on Sinai, so that he learnt them during the forty days, while he was standing (remaining}: the Torah in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues, the Prophets in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues, the Writings in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues, "the Halakas in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues, the Traditions in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues, the Haggadas in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues and the Toseftas in the seventy aspects of the seventy tongues'.

(4) But as soon as the forty days were ended, he forgot all of them in one moment. Then the Holy One, blessed be He, called Yephiphyah, the Prince of the Law, and (through him) they were given to Moses as a gift. As it is written (Deut. x. 4): "and the Lord gave them unto me". And after that it remained with him. And whence do we know, that it remained (in his memory) ? Because it is written (Mai. iv. 4): "Remember ye the Law of Moses my servant which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, even my statutes and judgements". The Law of Moses': that is the Tora, the Prophets and the Writings, 'statutes': that is the Halakas and Traditions, 'judgements': that is the Haggadas and the Toseftas. And all of them were given to Moses on high on Sinai.

(5) These seventy names (are) a reflection of the Explicit Name(s) on the Merkaba which are graven upon the Throne of Glory. For the Holy One, blessed be He, took from His Explicit Name(s) and put upon the name of Metatron: Seventy Names of His by which the ministering angels call the King of the kings of kings, blessed be He, in the high heavens, and twenty-two letters that are on the ring upon his finger with which are sealed the destinies of the princes of kingdoms on high in greatness and power and with which are sealed the lots of the Angel of Death, and the destinies of every nation and tongue.

(6) Said Metatron, the Angel, the Prince of the Presence; the Angel, the Prince of the Wisdom; the Angel, the Prince of the Understanding; the Angel, the Prince of the Kings; the Angel, the Prince of the Rulers; the angel, the Prince of the Glory; the angel, the Prince of the high ones, and of the princes, the exalted, great and honoured ones, in heaven and on earth:

(7) "H, the God of Israel, is my witness in this thing, (that] when I revealed this secret to Moses, then all the hosts in every heaven on high raged against me and said to me:

(8) Why dost thou reveal this secret to son of man, born of woman, tainted and unclean, a man of a putrefying drop, the secret by which were created heaven and earth, the sea and the dry land, the mountains and hills, the rivers and springs, Gehenna of fire and hail, the Garden of Eden and the Tree of Life; and by which were formed Adam and Eve, and the cattle, and the wild beasts, and the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and Behemoth and Leviathan, and the creeping things, the worms, the dragons of the sea, and the creeping things of the deserts; and the Tora and Wisdom and Knowledge and Thought and the Gnosis of things above and the fear of heaven. Why dost thou reveal this to flesh and blood?

I answered them: Because the Holy One, blessed be He, has given me authority, And furthermore, I have obtained permission from the high and exalted Throne, from which all the Explicit Names go forth with lightnings of fire and flaming chashmallim.

(9) But they were not appeased, until the Holy One, blessed be He, rebuked them and drove them away with rebuke from before him, saying to them: "I delight in, and have set my love on, and have entrusted and committed unto Metatron, my Servant, alone, for he is One (unique) among all the children of heaven.

(10) And Metatron brought them out from his house of treasures and committed them to Moses, and Moses to Joshua, and Joshua to the elders, and the elders to the prophets and the prophets to the men of the Great Synagogue, and the men of the Great Synagogue to Ezra and Ezra the Scribe to Hillel the elder, and Hillel the elder to R. Abbahu and R. Abbahu to R. Zera, and R. Zera to the men of faith, and the men of faith (committed them) to give warning and to heal by them all diseases that rage in the world, as it is written (Ex. xv. 26): "If thou wilt diligently hearken to the voice of the Lord, thy God, and wilt do that which is right in his eyes, and wilt give ear to his commandments, and keep all his statutes, I will put none of the diseases upon thee, which I have put upon the Egyptians : for I am the Lord, that healeth thee".

(Ended and finished. Praise be unto the Creator of the World.)

SLAVONIC VITA ADAE ET EVAE

by R.H. Charles

Scanned and Edited by Joshua Williams

1995 from The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament Website

xxviii 1 And we sat together before the gate of paradise, Adam weeping with his face bent down to the earth, lay on the ground lamenting. And seven days passed by and we had nothing 2 to eat and were consumed with great hunger, and I Eve cried with a loud voice: 'Pity me, O Lord, My Creator; for my sake Adam suffereth thus!'

xxxix 1 And I said to Adam: 'Rise up! my lord, that we may seek us food; for now my spirit faileth me and my heart within me is brought low.' Then Adam spake to me: 'I have thoughts of 2 killing thee, but I fear since God created thine image and thou showest penitence and criest to God; hence my heart hath not departed from thee.'

xxx 1 And Adam arose and we roamed through all lands and found nothing to eat save nettles (and) grass of the field. And we returned again to the gates of paradise and cried aloud and entreated: 'Have compassion on thy creature.
2 O Lord Creator, allow us food.'

xxxi 1 And for fifteen days continuously we entreated. Then we heard Michael the archangel and Joel 2 praying for us, and Joel the archangel was commanded by the Lord, and he took a seventh part of paradise and gave it to us. Then the 3 Lord said: 'Thorns and thistles shall spring up from under thy hands; and from thy sweat shalt thou eat (bread), and thy wife shall tremble when she looketh upon thee.'

xxxii 1 The archangel Joel said to Adam: 'Thus saith the Lord; I did not create thy wife to command thee, but to obey; why art thou obedient to thy wife?' Again Joel the archangel bade Adam separate the cattle and all kinds of flying and creeping things and animals, both wild and tame; and to give names to all things. Then indeed 3 he took the oxen and began to plough.

xxxiii 1 Then the devil approached and stood before the oxen, and hindered Adam in tilling the field and said to Adam: 'Mine are the things of 2 earth, the things of Heaven are God's; but if thou wilt be mine, thou shalt labour on the earth; but if thou wilt be God's, (pray) go away to paradise.' Adam said: 'The things
3 of Heaven are the Lord's, and the things of earth and Paradise and the whole Universe.'

xxxiv 1 The devil said: 'I do not suffer thee to till the field, except thou write the bond that thou art mine.' Adam replied: 'Whosoever is lord of 2 the earth, to the same do I (belong) and my children.' Then the devil was overcome with joy. (But Adam was not ignorant that the Lord
3 would descend on earth and tread the devil under foot.) The devil said: 'Write me thy 4 bond.' And Adam wrote: 'Who is lord of the earth, to the same do I belong and my children.'

xxxv 1 Eve said to Adam, 'Rise up, my lord, let us pray to God in this cause that He set us free from that devil, for thou art in this strait on my account.'

But Adam said: 'Eve, since thou repentest of 2 thy misdeed, my heart will hearken to thee, for the Lord created thee out of my ribs. Let us fast forty days perchance the Lord will have pity on us and will leave us understanding and life.' I, for my part, said: 'Do thou, (my) lord, 3 fast forty days, but I will fast forty-four.'

xxxvi 1 And Adam said to me: 'Haste thee to the river, named Tigris, and take a great stone and place it under thy feet, and enter into the stream and clothe thyself with water, as with a cloak, up to the neck, and pray to God in thy heart and let no word proceed out of thy mouth.' And 2 I said: 'O (my) lord, with my whole heart will I call upon God.' And Adam said to me:
3 'Take great care of thyself. Except thou seest me and all my tokens, depart not out of the water, nor trust in the words, which are said to thee, lest thou fall again into the snare.' And 4 Adam came to Jordan and he entered into the water and he plunged himself altogether into the flood, even (to) the hairs of his head, while he made supplication to God and sent (up) prayers to Him.

xxxvii 1 And there, the angels came together and all living creatures, wild and tame, and all birds that fly, (and) they surrounded Adam, like a wall, praying to God for Adam.

xxxviii 1 The devil came to me, wearing the form and brightness of an angel, and shedding big teardrops, (and) said to me: 'Come out of the water, 2 Eve, God hath heard thy prayers and (heard) us angels. God hath fulfilled the prayers of those who intercede on thy behalf. God hath sent me to thee, that thou mayst come out of the water.'

xxxix 1 But I (Eve) perceived that he was the devil and answered him nothing. But Adam (when) he returned from Jordan, saw the devil's footprints, and feared lest perchance he had deceived me; but when he had remarked me standing in the water he was overcome with joy (and) he took 2 me and led me out of the water.

xl 1 Then Adam cried out with a loud voice: 'Be silent, Eve, for already is my spirit straitened in my body; arise, go forth, utter prayers to God, till I deliver up my spirit to God.'

(Passage follows exactly parallel to Apocalypsis Mosis xxxii. seq., but in abbreviated form.)

Return

2 Baruch

Chapter 1

1 And it happened in the twenty-fifth year of Jeconiah, king of Judah, that the word of the Lord came to Baruch, the son of Neriah, and said to him:

2 Have you seen all that this nation (people) are doing to Me, that the evils which these two tribes which remained have done are greater than (those of) the ten tribes which were carried away captive?

3 For the former tribes were forced by their kings to commit sin, but these two of themselves have been forcing and compelling their kings to commit sin.

4 For this reason, I bring evil upon this city, and upon its inhabitants, and it will be removed from before Me for a time, and I will scatter these people among the Gentiles that they may do good to the Gentiles. And My people will be chastened, and the time will come when they will seek the prosperity of this period (their times.)

Chapter 2

1 For I have said these things to you that you may tell Jeremiah, and all those that are like you, to leave this city.

2 For your works are to this city as a firm pillar, and your prayers as a strong wall.

Chapter 3

1 And I said: O Lord, my Lord, have I come into the world for this purpose that I might see the evils of my mother?

2 Not so, my Lord. If I have found grace in Your sight, first take my spirit that I may go to my father's and not witness the destruction of my mother.

3 For two things vehemently constrain me: for I cannot resist You, and my soul cannot behold the evils of my mother.

4 But one thing I will ask in Your presence, a Lord.

5. What will there be after these things? If You destroy Your city and deliver up Your land to those that hate us, how will the name of Israel be remembered?

6 Or how will one speak of Your praises?

7 Or to whom will Your law be explained and all things therein?

8 Or will the world return to the nature it had before, and the age revert to primeval silence?

9 And will the multitude of souls be taken away, and the nature of man not again be named? And where is all that which You said to Moses regarding us?

Chapter 4

1 And the Lord said to me: This city will be delivered up for a time, and the people will be chastened during a time, And the world will not be given over to oblivion.

2 Do you think that this is that city of which I said: On the palms of My hands have I graven you?

3 This building now built in your midst is not that which is revealed with Me, that which was prepared beforehand here from the time when I took counsel to make Paradise, and showed it to Adam before he sinned, but when he transgressed the commandment it was removed from him, as also Paradise.

4 And after these things I showed it to My servant Abraham by night among the allotted victims.

5 And again also I showed it to Moses on Mount Sinai when I showed him the likeness of the tabernacle and all its vessels.

6 And now, behold, it is preserved with Me, as also is Paradise.

7 Go, therefore, and do as I command you."

Chapter 5

1 And I answered and said: So then I am destined to grieve for Zion, For your enemies will come to this place and pollute your sanctuary, and lead your inheritance into captivity; And make themselves masters of those whom You have loved. They will depart again to the place of their idols, and will boast before them: And what will You do for Your great name?

2 And the Lord said to me: My name and My glory are to all eternity; And My judgment will maintain its right in its own time.

3 You will see with your eyes that the enemy will not overthrow Zion, nor will they burn Jerusalem, but be the ministers of the Judge for the time.

4 Now go and do what I have said to you.

5 And I went and took Jeremiah, and Adu, and Seriah, and Jabish, and Gedaliah, and all the honorable men of the people, and I led them to the valley of Cedron, and I explained to them all that had been said to me.

7 And they lifted up their voices, and they all wept.

8 And we sat there and fasted until the evening.

Chapter 6

1 And it came to pass the next day that the army of the Chaldees surrounded the city, and at the time of the evening, I, Baruch, left the people and I went out and stood by the oak.

2 And I was grieving over Zion, and lamenting over the captivity which had come upon the people.

3 Suddenly a strong spirit raised me, and carried me aloft over the wall of Jerusalem.

4 And I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the city, each of them holding a torch of fire in his hands.

5 And another angel began to descend from heaven, and said to them: Hold your lamps, and do not light them till I tell you.

6 For I am first sent to speak a word to the earth, and to place in it what the Lord the Most High has commanded me.

7 And I saw him descend into the Holy of holies, and take from there the veil, and the holy ark, and the mercy-seat, and the two tables, and the holy raiment of the priests, and the altar of incense, and the forty-eight precious stones, wherewith the priest was adorned and all the holy vessels of the tabernacle.

5 And he spoke to the earth with a loud voice: Earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the mighty God, And receive what I commit to you, And guard them until the last times so that when you are ordered you may restore them, so that strangers may not get possession of them.

9 For the time comes when Jerusalem also will be delivered for a time, until it is said, that it is again restored for ever.

10 And the earth opened its mouth and swallowed them up.

Chapter 7

1 And after these things I heard that angel saying to those angels who held the lamps. Destroy it and overthrow its wall to its foundations so that the enemy should not boast and say: We have overthrown the wall of Zion, and we have burnt the place of the mighty God.

2 And you have seized the place where I had been standing before.

Chapter 8

1 Now the angels did as he had commanded them, and when they had broken up the corners of the walls, a voice was heard from the interior of the temple, after the wall had fallen, saying:

2 Enter, you enemies. Come, you adversaries; For he who kept the house has forsaken it.

3 And I, Baruch, departed.

4 And after these things happened the army of the Chaldees entered and seized the house and all that was around it.

5 And they led the people away captive, and killed some of them, and bound Zedekiah the King, and sent him to the King of Babylon.

Chapter 9

1 And I, Baruch, came, and Jeremiah, whose heart was found pure from sins, who had not been captured in the seizure of the city.

2 And we ripped our garments, we wept, and mourned, and fasted seven days.

Chapter 10

1 After seven days the word of God came to me, and said to me:

2 Tell Jeremiah to go and support the people who are led captive in to Babylon.

3 But you remain here amid the desolation of Zion, and I will show you after these days what will occur at the end of days.

4 And I said to Jeremiah as the Lord commanded me.

5 And he indeed, departed with the people; but I, Baruch, returned and sat before the gates of the temple, and I lamented with the following lamentation over Zion and said:

6 Blessed is he who was not born, or he, who having been born, has died.

7 But as for us who live, woe to us, Because we see the afflictions of Zion, and what has befallen Jerusalem.

8 I will call the Sirens from the sea, And you Lilin, (Lilin, in Jewish myth, was the daughter of Lilith, Adam's first wife, and the demon Samael who is often identified with Satan) come from the desert. And you Shedim and dragons from the forests: Awake and prepare yourselves for mourning; and take up with me the dirges, and make lamentation with me.

9 You husbandmen, sow not again; and, O earth, wherefore gives you your harvest fruits? Keep within you the sweets of your sustenance.

10 And you, vine, why further do you give your wine; for an offering will not again be made there from in Zion. Nor will the first-fruits again be offered.

11 And do you, O heavens, withhold your dew, and open not the treasuries of rain? 12 And do you, O sun, withhold the light of your rays? And do you, O moon, extinguish the multitude of your light? For why should light rise again where the light of Zion is darkened?

13 And you, you bridegrooms, enter not in. And let not the brides adorn themselves with garlands. And you women, pray not that you may bear.

14 For the barren will above all rejoice, And those who have no sons will be glad, and those who have sons will have anguish.

15 For why should they bear in pain, only to bury in grief?

16 Why again should mankind have sons? Why should the offspring of their kind again be named; where this mother is desolate, and her sons are led into captivity?

17 From this time forward speak not of beauty, and do not discuss gracefulness.

18 Moreover, you priests, take you the keys of the sanctuary and cast them into the height of heaven; and give them to the Lord and say: Guard Your house Yourself. For we are found to be false stewards.

19 And you virgins who weave fine linen and silk with gold of Ophir (the place from where the fleets of Solomon brought gold), take with haste all (these) things and cast (them) into the fire, that it may carry them to Him who made them. And the flame send them to Him who created them, lest the enemy get possession of them.

Chapter 11

1 Moreover, I, Baruch, say this against you, Babylon: If you had prospered, and Zion had dwelt in her glory, the grief to us would have been great because you would be equal to Zion.

2 But now, the grief is infinite; and the lamentation measureless because you are prospered and Zion desolate.

3 Who will be judge regarding these things? Or to whom will we complain regarding that which has befallen us? O Lord, how have You borne (it)?

4 Our fathers went to rest without grief and the righteous sleep in the earth in tranquility.

5 For they knew not this anguish, nor yet had they heard of that which had befallen us.

6 Would that you had ears, O earth, and that you had a heart, O dust. That you might go and announce in Sheol (hell / place of the dead) and say to the dead: Blessed are you more than we who live.

Chapter 12

1 But I will say what I think and I will speak against you, O land, which are prospering.

2 The noonday does not always burn, nor do the rays of the sun constantly give light.

3 Do not expect [and hope] that you will always be prosperous and rejoicing. Do not be not greatly arrogant and boastful.

4 For certainly in its own season the divine rage will awake against you, even though now in long-suffering it is held in as it were by reins.

5 And when I had said these things, I fasted seven days.

Chapter 13

1 After these things I, Baruch, was standing upon Mount Zion, and a voice came from the height and said to me:

2 Stand up on your feet, Baruch, and hear the word of the mighty God.

3 Because you have been amazed at what has befallen Zion, you will therefore be certainly preserved to the conclusion of the times, that you may be for a testimony.

4 If ever those prosperous cities say: Why has the mighty God brought upon us this retribution?

5 You say to them: You and those like you who will have seen this evil; (This is the evil) and retribution which is coming upon you and upon your people in its (destined) time that the nations may be thoroughly beaten (smitten.)

6 And then they will be in anguish.

7 And if they say at that time: For how long? You will say to them: You who have drunk the strained wine, drink also of its dregs, the judgment of the Lofty One Who has no respect of persons.

8 On this account before he had no mercy on His own sons, but afflicted them as His enemies, because they sinned, then they were disciplined so that they might be sanctified.

9 But now, you peoples and nations, you are guilty because you have always trodden down the earth, and used the creation sinfully and wrongfully.

10 For I have always benefited you and you have always been ungrateful for the beneficence.

Chapter 14

1 And I answered and said: You have shown me the method (behavior / procedure) of the times, and that which will alter these things, and You have said to me that the retribution, which has been spoken of by You, will come upon the nations.

2 And now I know that those who have sinned are many, and they have lived in prosperity, and left the world, but few nations will be left in those times, to whom those words will be said which You have said.

3 For what advantage is there in this, or what evil, worse than what we have seen happen us can we expect to see?

4 But again I will speak in Your presence: What have they profited who had knowledge before You and have not walked in vanity as the rest of the nations, and have not said to the dead: "Give us life," but always feared You, and have not left

Your ways?

5 They have been carried off, nor on their account have You had mercy on Zion.

6 And if others did evil, it was due to Zion, that on account of those who do good works should be forgiven, and should not be overwhelmed on account of the works of those who practice unrighteousness.

7 But who, O Lord, my Lord, will understand Your judgment, or who will search out the profoundness of Your way?

8 Or who will think out the weight of Your path?

9 Or who will be able to think out Your incomprehensible counsel?

10 Or who of those that are born has ever found the beginning or end of Your wisdom?

11 For we have all been made like a breath. For as the breath ascends involuntarily and again dies, so it is with the nature of men, who depart not according to their own will, and know not what will befall them in the end.

12 For the righteous justly hope for the end, and without fear leave this habitation, because they have with You a store of works preserved in treasuries. 13 On this account also these without fear leave this world, and trusting with joy they hope to receive the world which You have promised them.

14 But as for us --- woe to us, who also are now shamefully treated, and at that time look forward (only) to evil.

15 But You know accurately what You have done by means of Your servants; for we are not able to understand that which is good as You are, our Creator.

16 But again I will speak in Your presence, O LORD, my Lord.

17 In ancient times there was no world with its inhabitants, You did devise and speak with a word, and with that the works of creation stood before You.

18 And You did say that You would make man the administrator of Your works, that it might be known that he was by no means made on account of the world, but the world on account of him.

19 And now I see that as the world was made on account of us, and it abides, but we, on account of whom it was made, depart.

Chapter 15

1 And the Lord answered and said to me: You are rightly amazed regarding the departure of man, but you have not judged well regarding the evils which befall those who sin.

2 And as regards what you have said, that the righteous are carried off and the impious are prospered.

3 And as regards what you have said, "Man knows not Your judgment," on this account hear, and I will speak to you, and listen, and I will cause you to hear My words.

4 Man would not rightly have understood My judgment, unless he had accepted the law, and I had instructed him in understanding.

5 But now, because he transgressed knowingly on this ground that he worked, he will be tormented.

6 And as regards what you did say regarding the righteous, that on account of them has this world come, so also again will that which is to come, come on their account.

7 For this world is to them a strife and a labor with much trouble; and that accordingly which is to come, a crown with great glory.

Chapter 16

1 And I answered and said: O LORD, my Lord, the years of this time are few and evil, and who is able in his little time to acquire that which is measureless?

Chapter 17

1 And the Lord answered and said to me: With the Most High account is not taken of much time nor of a few years.

2 For what did it profit Adam that he lived nine hundred and thirty years, and transgressed that which he was commanded?

3 Therefore the multitude of time that he lived did not profit him, but brought death and cut off the years of those who were born from him.

4 Or wherein did Moses suffer loss in that he lived only one hundred and twenty years, and inasmuch as he was subject to Him who formed him, brought the law to the seed of Jacob, and lighted a lamp for the nation of Israel?

Chapter 18

1 And I answered and said: He that lighted has taken from the light, and there are but few that have imitated him.

2 But those many whom he has lighted have taken from the darkness of Adam and have not rejoiced in the light of the lamp.

Chapter 19

1 And He answered and said to me: So it was at that time he appointed for them a covenant. And He said to them: Behold I have placed before you life and death, and he called heaven and earth to witness against them.

2 For he knew that his time was but short, but that heaven and earth endure always.

3 But after his death they sinned and transgressed, though they knew that they had the law reproving them, and the light in which nothing could err, also the spheres

(planets and stars?) which testify, and Me.

4 Now regarding everything that is, it is I that judge, but do not you take counsel in your soul regarding these things, nor afflict yourself because of those which have been.

5 For now it is the consummation of time that should be considered, whether of business, or of prosperity, or of shame, and not the beginning thereof.

6 Because if a man be prospered in his beginnings and shamefully treated in his old age, he forgets all the prosperity that he had.

7 And again, if a man is shamefully treated in his beginnings, and at his end is prospered, he remembers not again his evil treatment.

8 And again listen; though each one were prospered all that time all the time from the day on which death was decreed against those who transgress, and in his end was destroyed, everything would have been in vain.

Chapter 20

1 Therefore, behold! The days come, and the times will hasten more than the former, and the seasons will speed on more than those that are past, and the years will pass more quickly than the present (years).

2 Therefore have I now taken away Zion, that I may the more speedily visit the world in its season.

3 Therefore hold fast in your heart everything that I command you, and seal it in the recesses of your mind.

4 And then I will show you the judgment of My might, and My ways which cannot be known.

5 Go and sanctify yourself seven days, and eat no bread, nor drink water, nor speak to anyone.

6 Afterwards come to that place and I will reveal Myself to you, and speak true things with you, and I will give you commandment regarding the method (procedure / system) of the times; for they are coming and tarry not.

Chapter 21

1 And I went thence and sat in the valley of Cedron in a cave of the earth, and I sanctified my soul there, and I ate no bread, yet I was not hungry, and I drank no water, yet I thirsted not, and I was there till the seventh day, as He had commanded me.

2 And afterwards I came to that place where He had spoken with me.

3 And it came to pass at sunset that my soul (mind) took much thought, and I began to speak in the presence of the Mighty One, and said:

4 O You that made the earth, hear me; you that have fixed the firmament by the word, and have made firm the height of the heaven by the spirit, that have called from the beginning of the world that which did not yet exist, and they obey You.

5 You that have commanded the air by Your nod, and have seen those things which are to be as those things which You are (now) doing.

6 You that rule with great thought the hosts that stand before You; also the countless holy beings which You made from the beginning from the flame and fire, which stand around Your throne where You rule with indignation.

7 To You only does this belong that You should do whatsoever You wish.

8 Who causes the drops of rain to rain by number upon the earth, and alone know the conclusion of the times before they come; have respect to my prayer.

9 For You alone are able to sustain all who are, and those who have passed away, and those who are to be, those who sin, and those who are righteous as living and being past finding out.

10 For You alone live immortal and past finding out, and know the number of mankind.

11 And if in time many have sinned, yet others not a few have been righteous.

12 You know where You preserve the end of those who have sinned, or the conclusion of those who have been righteous.

13 For if there were this life only, which belongs to all men, nothing could be more bitter than this.

14 For of what profit is strength that turns to sickness, or fullness of food that turns to famine, or beauty that turns to ugliness?

15 For the nature of man is always changeable.

16 For what we were formerly now we no longer are, and what we now are we will not afterwards continue to be.

17 For if a conclusion had not been prepared for all, then their beginning would have been in vain.

18 Everything that comes from You, You informed me, and regarding everything about which I ask You, You enlighten me?

19 How long will that which is corruptible remain, and how long will the time of mortals succeed, and until what time will those who transgress in the world be polluted with much wickedness?

20 Command in mercy and accomplish all that You said You would bring, that Your might may be made known to those who think that Your long-suffering is weakness.

21 Show to those who do not recognize it, that everything that has befallen us and our city until now has been according to the long-suffering of Your power, because on account of Your name You have called us a beloved people.

22 Bring mortality to an end. Reprimand the angel of death, and let Your glory appear, and let the might of Your beauty be known, and let Sheol be sealed so that from this time forward it may not receive the dead, and let the treasuries of souls (the chamber of Guf, in Jewish mythology) restore those which are enclosed in them.

23 For there have been many years like those that are desolate from the days of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and of all those who are like them, who sleep in the earth, on whose account You did say that You had created the world.

24 And now quickly show Your glory, and do not put off what has been promised by You. When I had completed this prayer I was greatly weakened.

Chapter 22

1 After these things the heavens were opened, and I saw, and power was given to me, and a voice was heard from on high, and it said to me:

2 Baruch, Baruch, why are you troubled?

3 He who travels by a road but does not complete it, or who departs by sea but does not arrive at the port, can he be comforted?

4 Or he who promises to give a present to another, but does not fulfill it, is it not robbery?

5 Or he who sows the earth, but does not reap its fruit in its season, does he not lose everything?

6 Or he who plants a plant unless it grows till the time suitable to it, does he who planted it expect to receive fruit from it?

7 Or a woman who has conceived, if she bring forth untimely, does she not certainly kill her infant?

8 Or he who builds a house, if he does not roof it and complete it, can it be called a house? Tell Me that first.

Chapter 23

1, And I answered and said: "Not so, O LORD, my Lord."

2 And He answered and said to me: Why are you troubled about that which you know not, and why are you ill at ease about things of which you are ignorant?

3 You have not forgotten the people who now are and those who have passed away, so I remember those who are appointed to come.

4 Because when Adam sinned and death was the judgment against those who should be born, then the multitude of those who should be born was numbered, and for that number a place was prepared where the living might dwell and the dead might be guarded.

5 Before the appointed number is fulfilled, the creature will not live again for My spirit is the creator of life, and Sheol will receive the dead.

6 It is given to you to hear what things are to come after these times.

7 For truly My redemption has drawn near, and is not as distant as it was.

Chapter 24

1 The days come and the books will be opened in which are written the sins of all those who have sinned, and also the treasures in which the righteousness of all those who have been righteous in creation is gathered.

2 For it will come to pass at that time that you will see, and the many that are with you, the long-suffering of the Most High, which has been throughout all generations, who has been long-suffering towards all who are born, like those who sin and those who are righteous."

3 And I answered and said: But Lord, no one knows the number of those things which have passed nor yet of those things which are to come.

4 For I know indeed that which has befallen us, but what will happen to our enemies I know not, and when You will visit Your works.

Chapter 25

1 And He answered and said to me: You too will be preserved till that time till that sign which the Most High will work for the inhabitants of the earth in the end of days.

2 This therefore will be the sign:

3 When a stupor will seize the inhabitants of the earth, and they will fall into many tribulations, and again when they will fall into great torments.

4 And it will come to pass when they say in their thoughts because of their much tribulation: The Mighty One doth no longer remember the earth yea, it will come to pass when they abandon hope, that the time will then awake.

Chapter 26

1 And I answered and said: Will that tribulation which is to be, continue a long time, and will it necessitate many years?

Chapter 27

1 And He answered and said to me: Into twelve parts (pieces or section) is that time divided, and each one of them is reserved for that which is appointed for it.

2 In the first section (piece) there will be the beginning of commotions.

3 And in the second section (piece) slayings of the great ones.

4 And in the third section (piece) the fall of many by death.

5 And in the fourth section (piece) the sending of the sword.
6 And in the fifth section (piece) famine and the withholding of rain.
7 And in the sixth section (piece) earthquakes and terrors and wanting (need for food, water, and shelter).
8 And in the eighth section (piece) a multitude of specters and attacks of the Shedim.
9 And in the ninth section (piece) the fall of fire.
10 And in the tenth section (piece) rapine and much oppression.
11 And in the eleventh section (piece) wickedness and hedonism.
12 And in the twelfth section (piece) confusion from the mingling together of all those things aforesaid.
13 For these slices of that time are reserved, and will be mingled one with another and reinforce one another.
14 For some will leave out some of their own, and receive (in its stead) from others, and some complete their own and that of others, so that those may not understand who are upon the earth in those days that this is the consummation of the times.

Chapter 28

1 Nevertheless, whosoever understands will then be wise.
2 For the measure and reckoning of that time are two parts (pieces or section) a week of seven weeks.
3 And I answered and said: It is good for a man to come and behold, but it is better that he should not come lest he fall.
4 But I will ask this also: Will he who is incorruptible despise those things which are corruptible? What happens in the case of those things which are corruptible, so that he might look only to those things which are not corruptible?
5 But if, O Lord, those things will certainly come to pass which You have foretold to me, show this to me also if indeed I have found grace in Your sight. 6 Is it in one place or in one of the sections of the earth that those things are come to pass, or will the whole earth experience them?

Chapter 29

1 And He answered and said to me: Whatever will befall the whole earth all who live will experience.
2 For at that time I will protect only those who are found in those same days in this land.
3 And when all is accomplished that was to come to pass in those sections, that the Messiah will then begin to be revealed.
4 And Behemoth will be revealed from his place and Leviathan will ascend from the sea, those two great monsters which I created on the fifth day of creation, and will have kept until that time; and then they will be food for all that are left.

5 The earth also will yield its fruit ten thousand fold and on each vine there will be a thousand branches, and each branch will produce a thousand clusters, and each cluster produces a thousand grapes, and each grape produces a cor (a unit of measure approximately 517 pints) of wine.

6 And those who have hungered will rejoice, moreover, they will behold marvels every day.

7 For winds will go forth from before Me to bring every morning the fragrance of aromatic fruits, and at the close of the day clouds distilling the dew of health.

8 And it will come to pass at that same time that the treasury of manna will again descend from on high, and they will eat of it in those years, because these are they who have come to the end of time.

Chapter 30

1 And it will come to pass after these things, when the time of the advent of the Messiah is fulfilled, that He will return in glory.

2 Then all who have fallen asleep in hope of Him will rise again.

3 And it will come to pass at that time that the treasures will be opened in which is preserved the number of the souls of the righteous, and they will come forth, and a multitude of souls will be seen together in one assemblage of one thought, and the first will rejoice and the last will not be grieved. For they know that the time has come of which it is said, that it is the consummation of the times.

4 But the souls of the wicked, when they behold all these things, will then waste away the more.

5 For they will know that their torment has come and their perdition has arrived."

Chapter 31

1 And after these things I went to the people and said to them:

2 Assemble to me all your elders and I will speak words to them.

3 And they all assembled in the valley of the Cedron. And I answered and said to them: Hear, O Israel, and I will speak to you, And give ear, O seed of Jacob, and I will instruct you.

4 Forget not Zion, But hold in remembrance the anguish of Jerusalem.

5 For the days come, when everything exists will become the prey of corruption and will be as though it had not been.

Chapter 32

1 But if you prepare your hearts, so as to sow in them the fruits of the law, it will protect you in that time in which the Mighty One is to shake the whole creation.
2 Because after a little time the building of Zion will be shaken in order that it may be built again.
3 But that building will not remain, but will again after a time be pulled up by the roots, and will remain desolate until the time.
4 And afterwards it must be renewed in glory, and perfected for evermore.
5 Therefore we should not be distressed so much over the evil which has now come as over that which is still to be.
6 For there will be a greater trial than these two tribulations when the Mighty One will renew His creation.
7 And now do not draw near to me for a few days, nor seek me till I come to you.
8 And when I had spoken to them all these words, that I, Baruch, went my way, and when the people saw me leaving, they lifted up their voice and lamented and said: To what place do you depart from us, Baruch, and forsake us as a father who forsakes his orphan children, and departs from them?

Chapter 33

1 Are these the commands which your companion, Jeremiah the prophet, commanded you, and said to you:
2 Look to this people till I go and make ready the rest of the brethren in Babylon, against whom has gone forth the sentence that they should be led into captivity?
3 And now if you also forsake us, it were good for us all to die before you withdraw from us.

Chapter 34

1 And I answered and said to the people: Far be it from me to forsake you or to withdraw from you, but I will only go to the Holy of Holies to inquire of the Mighty One concerning you and concerning Zion; in the hopes I should receive more illumination and after these things I will return to you.

Chapter 35

1 And I, Baruch, went to the holy place, and sat down upon the ruins and wept, and said:
2 O that mine eyes were springs, and mine eyelids a spring of tears.
3 For how will I lament for Zion, and how will I mourn for Jerusalem?

4 Because in that place where I am now prostrate, of old the high priest offered holy sacrifices; and placed thereon an incense of fragrant odors.

5 But now our glorying has been made into dust, And the desire of our soul into sand.

Chapter 36

1 And when I had said these things I fell asleep there, and I saw a vision in the night.

2 I saw a forest of trees planted on the plain, and lofty and rugged rocky mountains surrounded it, and that forest occupied much space. 3 And over beside it arose a vine, and from under it there went forth a peaceful fountain.

4 Now that fountain came to the forest and was agitated into great waves, and those waves submerged that forest, and suddenly they pulled up by the roots the greater section (area) of that forest, and overthrew all the mountains which were around it.

5 And the height of the forest began to be made low, and the top of the mountains was made low and that fountain greatly overtook it, so that it left nothing of that great forest save one cedar only.

6 Also when it had cast it down and had destroyed and pulled up by the roots the greater part of that forest, so that nothing was left of it, nor could its place be recognized, then that vine began to come with the fountain in peace and great tranquility, and it came to a place which was not far from that cedar, and they brought the cedar which had been cast down to it.

7 And I saw that vine opened its mouth and spoke and said to that cedar: Are you not that cedar which was left of the forest of wickedness, and by whose means wickedness persisted, and did evil all those years, and goodness never?

8 And you kept conquering that which was not yours, and to that which was yours you never showed compassion, and you kept extending your power over those who were far from you, and those who ventured near to you held tightly in the toils of your wickedness, and you lifted yourself up always as one that could not be pulled up by the roots!

9 But now your time has sped by and your hour is come. Do you also therefore depart O cedar, after the forest, which departed before you, and become dust with it, and let your ashes be mingled together?

10 And now lay down in anguish and rest in torment till your last time comes, in which you will come again and be tormented still more.

Chapter 37

1 And after these things I saw that cedar burning, and the vine glowing and all around it the plain was full of unfading flowers. And I awoke and arose.

Chapter 38

1 And I prayed and said: O LORD, my Lord, You always enlighten those who are led by understanding.

2 Your law is life, and Your wisdom is right guidance.

3 Make known to me the interpretation of this vision.

4 For You know that my soul has always walked in Your law, and from my earliest days I departed not from Your wisdom.

Chapter 39

1 And He answered and said to me: Baruch, this is the interpretation of the vision which you have seen.

2 As you have seen the great forest which lofty and rugged mountains surrounded, this is the word.

3 The days come, and this kingdom will be destroyed which once destroyed Zion, and it will be subjected to that which comes after it.

4 After a time the kingdom will be destroyed, and another, a third, will arise, and that also will have dominion for its time, and will be destroyed. 5 And after these things a fourth kingdom will arise, whose power will be harsh and evil far beyond those which were before it, and it will rule many times as the forests on the plain, and it will hold firmly for a time, and will exalt itself more than the cedars of Lebanon.

6 And by it the truth will be hidden, and all those who are polluted with sinfulness will flee to it, as evil beasts flee and creep into the forest.

7 And when the time of its end and fall has approached, then the kingdom of My Messiah will be revealed, which is like the fountain and the vine, and when it is revealed it will root out the multitude of its host.

8 And concerning that which you have seen, the lofty cedar, which was left out of that forest, and the fact, that the vine spoke those words with it which you did hear, this is the word.

Chapter 40

1 The last leader of that time will be left alive, when the multitude of his hosts will be put to the sword, and he will be bound, and they will take him up to Mount Zion, and My Messiah will convict him of all his unlawful deeds, and will gather and set before him all the works of his hosts.

2 And afterwards he will put him to death, and protect the rest of My people which will be found in the place which I have chosen.

3 And his kingdom will stand for ever, until the world of corruption is at an end, and until the times aforesaid are fulfilled.

4 This is your vision, and this is its interpretation.

Chapter 41

1 And I answered and said: For whom and for how many will these things be or who will be worthy to live at that time?

2 I will speak to you everything that I think, and I will ask of You regarding those things about which I think.

3 I see many of Your people who have with drawn from Your covenant, and cast from them the yoke of Your law.

4 But I have seen others who have forsaken their vanity, and fled for refuge beneath Your wings.

5 What will become of them or how will the last time receive them?

6 Or perhaps the time of these will certainly be weighed, and as the beam inclines will they be judged accordingly?

Chapter 42

1 And He answered and said to me: "I will show you these things also.

2 To whom will these things be, and how many will they be?"

3 To those who have believed there will be the good which was spoken of before, and to those who despise there will be the contrary.

4 And regarding those who have drawn near (to Me) and those who have withdrawn (from Me) this is the word. As for those who were before subject (to Me), and afterwards withdrew and mingled themselves with the seed of mingled peoples, the time of these was the former, and was accounted as something exalted.

5 As for those who before knew (Me) not but afterwards knew life, and mingled (only) with the seed of the people which had separated itself the time of these (is) the latter, and is accounted as something exalted. 6 Time will succeed to (advance) time and season to season, and one will receive from another, and then with a view to the conclusion everything will be compared according to the measure of the times and the hours of the seasons.

7 Corruption will take those that belong to it, and life will take those that belong to it.

8 And the dust will be called, and there will be said to it: Give back that which is not yours, and raise up all that you have kept until its time.

Chapter 43

1 But, do you, Baruch, direct your heart to that which has been said to you, and understand those things which have been shown to you? For there are many eternal comforts for you.

2 You will leave this place, and you will pass from the regions which you see now, and you will forget whatever is corruptible, and will not again recall those things which happen among mortals.

3 Go and command your people, and come to this place, and afterwards fast seven days, and then I will come to you and speak with you.

Chapter 44

1 And I, Baruch, went from that place and came to my people, and I called my firstborn son and the Gedaliahs my friends, and seven of the elders of the people, and I said to them:

2 I go to my fathers according to the way of all the earth.

3 But you should not withdraw from the way of the law, but guard and admonish the people which remain;

4 that they should not withdraw from the commandments of the Mighty One, for you see that He whom we serve is just, and our Creator is no respecter of persons.

5 And see what has happened to Zion, and what has happened to Jerusalem.

6 For the judgment of the Mighty One will be made known, and His ways, which, though past finding out, are right.

7 For if you endure and persevere in fear (respect / awe) of Him, and do not forget His law, the times will change over you for good. And you will see the consolation (reward) of Zion.

8 Because whatever exists now is nothing, but that which will be is very great. For everything that is corruptible will pass away, and everything that dies will depart, and all the present time will be forgotten, nor will there be any remembrance of the present time, which is defiled with evil.

9 That which runs now runs to vanity, and that which prospers will quickly fall and be humiliated.

10 That which is to come will be the object of desire, and for that which comes afterwards will we hope.

11 For it is a time that will not pass, and the hour comes which abides for ever.

12 And the new world (comes) which is blessedness and does not turn to corruption for those who depart to it, but it has no mercy on those who depart to torment, and it leads to perdition those who live in it.

13 For these are they who will inherit that time which has been spoken of, and theirs is the inheritance of the promised time. 14 These are they who have acquired for themselves treasures of wisdom, and with them are found stores of understanding, and they have not withdrawn from mercy and the truth of the law have they preserved. 15 For to them will be given the world to come, but the dwelling of the rest, who are many, will be in the fire."

Chapter 45

1 Instruct the people as far as you are able, for that labor is ours. For if you teach them, you will quicken them.

Chapter 46

1 And my son and the elders of the people answered and said to me: Has the Mighty One humiliated us to such a degree as to take you from us quickly?
2 We will truly be in darkness, and there will be no light to the people who are left. For where again will we seek the law, or who will distinguish for us between death and life?
3 And I said to them: I cannot resist the throne of the Mighty One; nevertheless, there will not be wanting in Israel for a wise man, nor a son of the law to the race of Jacob.
4 But only prepare your hearts, that you may obey the law, and be subject to those who in fear are wise and understanding;
5 And prepare your souls that you may not leave them.
6 For if you do these things, good things will come to you., which I before told you of; nor will you fall into the torment, of which I testified to you before.
7 But with regard to the word that I was to be taken I did not make it known to them or to my son.

Chapter 47

1 And when I had gone out and dismissed them, I went from there and said to them:
2 I go to Hebron: for that is where the Mighty One has sent me. And I came to that place where the word had been spoken to me, and I sat there, and fasted seven days.

Chapter 48

1 And it came to pass after the seventh day, that I prayed before the Mighty One and said, O my Lord, You summon the advent of the times and they stand before You;

2 You cause the power of the ages to pass away, and they do not resist You; You arrange the method (progress / procedures) of the seasons, and they obey You.

3 You alone know the duration of the generations, and You do not reveal Your mysteries to many.

4 You make known the multitude of the fire, and You weigh the lightness of the wind.

5 You explore the limit of the heights, and You scrutinize the depths of the darkness.

6 You care for the number which pass away that they may be preserved and You prepare an habitation (abode) for those that are to be.

7 You remember the beginning which You have made, and the destruction that is to be You do not forget. 8 With nods of fear and indignation You command the flames, and they change into spirits, and with a word You quicken that which was not, and with mighty power You hold that which has not yet come.

9 You instruct created things in the understanding of You, and You make wise the spheres (orbs / heavenly bodies) so as to minister in their orders.

10 Armies innumerable stand before You and minister in their orders quietly at Your nod.

11 Hear Your servant and give ear to my petition.

12 For in a little time are we born, and in a little time do we return.

13 But with You hours are as a time (an age / eon) , and days as generations.

14 Be not angry with man; for he is nothing and take not account of our works; for what are we?

15 For by Your gift we come into the world, and we depart not of our own will.

16 For we said not to our parents, Beget us, Nor did we send to Sheol (place of the dead) and say, Receive us.

17 What therefore is our strength that we should bear Your rage or what are we that we should endure Your judgment?

18 Protect us in Your compassions, and in Your mercy help us.

19 Behold the little ones that are subject to You, and save all that draw near to You: Do not destroy the hope of our people, and do not cut short the times (occurrences) of our aid.

20 For this is the nation which You have chosen, and these are the people, to whom You find no equal.

21 But I will speak now before You, and I will say as my heart thinks.

22 In You do we trust, for Your law is with us and we know that we will not fall so long as we keep Your statutes.

23 To all time are we blessed at all events in this that we have not mingled with the Gentiles.

24 For we are all one celebrated people, who have received one law from One:

25 And the law which is among us will aid us, and the surpassing wisdom which is in us will help us.

26 And when I had prayed and said these things, I was greatly weakened. And He answered and said to me: You have prayed simply, O Baruch, and all your words have been heard.

27 But My judgment exacts its own and My law exacts its rights.

28 For from your words I will answer you, and from your prayer I will speak to you.

29 For this is as follows: he that is corrupted is not at all (is as though he does not exist);

30 He has acted sinfully in any way he could and has not remembered my goodness, and has not remembered My goodness, nor accepted My long-suffering.

31 Therefore you will surely be taken up, as I before told you.

32 For that time will arise which brings affliction; for it will come and pass by with quick vehemence, and it will be turbulent coming in the heat of indignation.

33 And it will come to pass in those days that all the inhabitants of the earth will be moved one against another, because they do not know that My judgment has drawn near.

34 For there will not be found many wise at that time, and the intelligent will be but a few. Moreover, even those who know will most of all be silent.

35 And there will be many rumors and tidings, not just a few. And the actions and deeds of spirits (phantoms) will be manifest, and many promises will be recounted. Some of them (will prove) idle, and some of them will be confirmed.

36 And honor will be turned into shame, and strength will be humiliated into contempt, and decency will be destroyed, and beauty will become ugliness.

37 And many will say to many at that time: "Where has the multitude of intelligence hidden itself, and to what place has the multitude of wisdom removed itself?"

38 And while they are thinking on these things, envy will arise in those who had not thought highly of themselves, and passion will seize him that is peaceful, and many will be stirred up in anger to injure many, and they will rouse up armies in order to shed blood, and in the end they will perish together with them.

39 And it will come to pass at the same time, that a change of times will manifestly appear to every man, because in all those times they polluted themselves. and they practiced oppression, and walked every man in his own works, and remembered not the law of the Mighty One.

40 Therefore a fire will consume their thoughts, and in flame will the control of their thoughts be tested; for the Judge will come and will not tarry, because each of the inhabitants of the earth knew when he was transgressing. But because of their pride they did not know My Law.

41 But many will certainly weep over the living more than over the dead.

42 And I answered and said: O Adam, what have you done to all those who are born from you? And what will be said to the first Eve who hearkened to the serpent?

43 For all this multitude are going to corruption, nor is there any numbering of those whom the fire will devour.
44 But again I will speak in Your presence.
45 You, O LORD, my Lord, know what is in Your creature.
46 Long ago You command the dust to produce Adam, and You know the number of those who are born from him, and how far they have sinned before You, who have existed and not confessed You as their Creator.
47 Their end will convict all of them, and Your law which they have transgressed will reward (revenge) them on Your day.
48 But now let us dismiss the wicked and inquire about the righteous.
49 And I will recount their blessedness and not be silent in celebrating their glory, which is reserved for them.
50 This transitory world which you live, has made you endured much labor in a short time, so in that world to which there is no end you will receive great light.

Chapter 49

1 Nevertheless, I will again ask mercy from You, O Mighty One, who made all things.
2 In what shape will those live who live in Your day? Or how will the splendor of those who are after that time continue?
3 Will they then resume this form of the present, and put on these members which hold us back, impeded us, and are now involved in evils, and in which evils are consummated, or will You possibly change these things which have been in the world as You also change the world?

Chapter 50

1 And He answered and said to me: "Hear, Baruch, this word, and write the remembrance of all that you will learn in your heart.
2 The earth will certainly return the dead, which it now receives in order to preserve them. It will not change their form, but it will return them in the same form it received them, and as I delivered them to it, so will it raise them.
3 Then it will be necessary to show the living that the dead have come to life again, and that those who had departed have returned again.
4 And when they have recognized those whom they now know, then judgment will grow strong, and those things which were spoken of prior will come to be.

Chapter 51

1 When that appointed day has passed, the appearance of those who are condemned will be changed and the glory of those who are justified will be shown.

2 For the appearance of those who act wickedly will become worse because they will suffer torment.

3 But the glory of those who have now been justified in My law, who have had understanding in their life, and who have planted the root of wisdom in their heart, their splendor for their face will be changed and glorified. Their face will be turned into the light of their beauty, that they may be able to take and receive the world which does not die, which is promised to them at that time.

4 Those that rejected My law, and stopped their ears that they might not hear wisdom or receive understanding will lament their actions over and above all things.

5 When they see those they were exalted over but who will be exalted and glorified more than they, they will both be transformed, the latter into the splendor of angels, and the former will waste away more as they wonder at the visions when they see the angelic forms.

6 For they will first see these things and afterwards depart to be tormented.

7 But those who have been saved by their works, and to whom the law has been a hope and understanding, and an expectation, and wisdom, and a confidence, will have wonders appear in their time.

8 For they will behold the world which is now invisible to them, and they will behold the time which is now hidden from them:

9 And time will no longer cause them to age.

10 For they will dwell in the high places of that world and they will be made like the angels and they will be made equal to the stars, and they will be changed into every form they desire from beauty to loveliness and from light to glorious splendor.

11 Before them the borders of Paradise will be spread out, and the beauty and majesty of the living creatures which are beneath the throne will be shown to them. They will see the armies of the angels who are held fast by My word, lest they should appear and are held fast by a command, that they may stand in their places until the time of their appearance comes.

12 There will be righteous excellence surpassing that of the angels.

13 For the first will receive the last. Those who have passed away will receive whom they were expecting. Those who had passed away and who we had heard of we should expect to see.

14 For they have been delivered from the tribulation of this world and laid down their burden of anguish.

15 For what have men lost their life, and for what have those who were on the earth exchanged their soul?

16 They did not choose the time which is beyond the reach of anguish. But they chose that time whose results are full of lamentations and evils, and they denied the world which does make those who come to it grow old, but they rejected the time of glory. Thus that they will not have the honor of which I told you before."

Chapter 52

- 1 And I asked: How can we forget those whom are destined for sorrow?
- 2 Why do we mourn for those who die? Why do we weep for those who depart to Sheol?
- 3 Lamentations should be reserved for the beginning of the torment to come. Let tears be stored up for the time of destruction.
- 4 But even in the face of these things will I speak. What will the righteous do now?
- 5 Rejoice in the suffering which you now suffer. Why do you look for the decline of your enemies?
- 6 Make your soul ready for what is reserved for you, and prepare your souls for the reward which is stored up for you.

Chapter 53

- 1 And when I had said these things I fell asleep and I saw a vision. A cloud was ascending from a very large sea, and I kept looking at it and I saw it was full of black and white waters, and there were many colors in those same waters, and it looked like powerful lightning as seen from a summit.
- 2 And I saw the cloud passing quickly in short courses, and it covered all the earth.
- 3 Then, after these things that cloud began to pour all the waters that were in it upon the earth.
- 4 And I saw that all the waters which fell from it looked different.
- 5 To begin with, the waters were black and there was a lot for a time, and afterwards I saw that the waters became bright, but they were not as much, and after that I again saw black waters, and after these things again bright, and again black and again bright how this was done twelve times, but the black were always more numerous than the bright.
- 6 At the end of the cloud it rained black waters, and they were darker than had been all those waters that were before, and fire was mingled with them, and where those waters descended, they work devastation and destruction.
- 7 And after all of this I saw that lightning I had seen on the summit of the cloud seized hold of it and hurled it to the earth.
- 8 Now that lightning shone very brightly so that it illuminated the whole earth, and it healed those regions where the last waters had descended and work devastation.
- 9 And it took hold of the whole earth, and had dominion over it.

10 After these things I saw the twelve rivers were ascending from the sea, and they began to surround that lightning and to become subject to it.

11 And because of my fear I awoke.

Chapter 54

1 And I besought the Mighty One, and said: You alone, O Lord, know the deep things of the world before they happen. The things which occur in their times You bring about by Your word. You speed the beginning of these times against the works of the inhabitants of the earth, and the end of the seasons You alone know.

2 For You nothing is too hard. You do everything easily by a nod.

3 You, to whom the depths come as the heights, and whose word the beginnings of the ages serve;

4 You, who reveal to those who fear what You prepared for them so that they may be comforted.

5 You show great acts to those who do not know You. You break down the walls of those who are ignorant, and You light up what is dark, and You reveal what is hidden to the pure, who have submitted themselves to You and in Your law.

6 You have shown your servant this vision. Reveal its interpretation to me.

7 I know that for those things I have asked You about, I have received an answer. You have revealed to me with what voice I should praise You, and with what members of mine I should praise You and cause hallelujahs to ascend to You.

8 If my members were mouths and the hairs of my head were voices, I could not give you adequate food of praise, nor could I worship you as is befitting. I could never tell the glory of your beauty or praise you enough.

9 For what am I among men? Why am I counted among those who are more excellent than I that I have heard all these marvelous things from the Most High and numberless promises from Him who created me?

10 Blessed be my mother among those that bear, and let she that bare me be praised among women.

11 For I will not be silent in praising the Mighty One, and with the voice of praise I will tell His marvelous deeds.

12 For who does deeds like Your marvelous deeds, O God? Who comprehends Your deep thought of life.

13 With Your counsel You govern all the creatures which Your right hand has created. You have established every fountain of light beside You, and You have prepared the treasures of wisdom beneath Your throne.

14 Those who do not love your law perish justly. The torment of judgment awaits those who have not submitted themselves to Your power.

15 For though Adam first sinned and untimely brought death upon all, yet each of those who were born from him has prepared his own soul for the torment to come, and each one of them has chosen for himself glories to come.

16 It is certain that he who believes will receive reward.

17 But now, you wicked are bond for destruction because you will quickly be visited because you have rejected the understanding of the Most High.

18 His works have not taught you, and you have not been convinced by the skill of His creation which argued with you continually.

19 Adam is therefore not the cause, except for only his own soul, but each of us has been the Adam (man) of his own soul.

20 But You, O Lord, explain (open) to me those things which You have revealed to me, and inform me regarding that which I besought You.

21 For at the creation and until the end of the world, vengeance will be taken upon those who have done wickedness according to the wickedness in them, and You will glorify the faithful according to their faithfulness.

22 For those who are among Your own You rule, and those who sin You blot out from among Your own.

Chapter 55

1 Then, when I had finished speaking the words of this prayer I sat there under a tree that I might rest in the shade of the branches.

2 And I wondered and was amazed as I pondered the multitude of goodness which sinners who are upon the earth have rejected, and the tremendous torment they have hated, though they knew that they would be tormented because of the sin they had committed.

3 And when I was thought about these things the angel Ramiel, who presides over visions of truth, was sent to me, and he said to me:

4 Why does your heart trouble you, Baruch, and why do you have disturbing thoughts?

5 If the report you have only heard regarding judgment moved you so much what will you do when you see it manifest before yours eyes?

6 And if you expect the day of the Mighty One and you are so overcome just by the expectation, what will you do when you come to its actual occurrence?

7 If at the mention of the announcement of the torment of those who have done foolishly, you are so completely upset, how much more will you be when the event reveals astonishing things? And if you have heard announcements of the good and evil things which are coming and are grieved, what will you do when you behold the majesty that will be revealed, which will convict some and cause others to rejoice.

Chapter 56

- 1 Nevertheless, because you have asked the Most High to reveal to you the interpretation of the vision you have seen, I have been sent to tell you.
- 2 And the Mighty One has certainly made known to you the arrangement of the times which have passed, and are destined to pass in His world regarding those of deceit and of those of truth from the beginning of its creation to its end.
- 3 As you saw, a tremendous cloud ascended from the sea, and covered the earth. This is the duration of the world which the Mighty One made when he thought to make the world.
- 4 And when the world came into being and had left His presence (area of the throne), the time of the world was short, and was established according to the vast intelligence of Him who sent it.
- 5 And as you saw before on the summit of the cloud, black waters descended previously on the earth. This is the transgression that Adam the first man committed.
- 6 For since the time he transgressed, (early) untimely death came. Grief was named and anguish was prepared, pain was created, and trouble was born, disease took hold, and Sheol kept demanding to be renewed in blood The birth of children was brought about, and the passion of parents was its fruit, and the greatness of humanity was humiliated, and goodness died.
- 7 What can be blacker or darker than these things?
- 8 This is the beginning of the black waters which you have seen.
- 9 From these black waters, black was derived, and from the darkness, darkness was produced.
- 10 For he became a danger to his own soul and even to the angels.
- 11 At the time when he was created, they (the angels) enjoyed liberty.
- 12 But some of them descended, and mingled with the women. 13 And those who did so were tormented in chains.
- 14 But the rest of the multitude of the angels, of which there is no number, restrained themselves.
- 15 Those who lived on the earth perished together with them (the fallen angels) through the waters of the flood.
- 16 These are the first black waters.

Chapter 57

- 1 And after these waters you saw bright waters. This is the spring of Abraham and his generations and the birth of his son and his son's son and of those like them.
- 2 Because at that time the unwritten law was named among them. The words of the commandments were then fulfilled. Belief in the coming judgment was then born and hope of the world that was to be renewed was then created. The promise of life to come was begun.

3 These are the bright waters, which you have seen.

Chapter 58

1 The third black waters you have seen are the mingling of all sins, which the nations committed after the death of those righteous men in the wickedness of the land of Egypt where they did unrighteousness. And they made their sons serve unrighteousness.

2 However, these also perished in the end.

Chapter 59

1 And the fourth bright waters you have seen are the birth of Moses, Aaron, Miriam, and Joshua the sons of Nun and Caleb and of all those like them.

2 For at that time the lamp of the eternal law shone on all those who sat in darkness, which announced to them that believe the promise of their reward, and to them that deny, the torment of fire which is reserved for them.

3 But also the heavens at that time were shaken from their place, and those who were under the throne of the Mighty One were disturbed, when He was taking Moses to Himself For He showed him many reproofs along with the principles of the law and the completion of the times, as He also showed to you. He also showed the pattern of Zion and its size, in the pattern of which the sanctuary of the present time was to be made.

4 But then also He showed him the size of the fire, the depths of the abyss, the weight of the winds, the number of the drops of rain,

5 How much of (His) anger (He) holds back, and the amount of long-suffering (He has), and the truth of (His) judgment,

6 And the origin of wisdom, the wealth of understanding, the wellspring of knowledge,

7 The height of the air, and the greatness of Paradise, the end of the ages, and the beginning of the day of judgment,

8 The amount of the offerings, the earths which are yet to come,

9 The mouth of Gehenna (hell), the place of vengeance, the place of faith, and the place of hope, 10 The visions of future torment, the multitude of angelic hosts, the flaming hosts, the splendor of the lightning and the voice of the thunders, the orders of the captains of the angels, the treasures of light, and the changing of times, and the searching of the law.

11. These are the bright fourth waters which you have seen.

Chapter 60

1 The fifth black waters you have seen rammg are the deeds the Amorites committed, and the spells of their incantations which they performed, and the unrighteousness contained in their mysteries, and the pollutions they mixed.

2 Even Israel was polluted by sins in the days of the judges, though they saw many slip from Him who made them.

Chapter 61

1 And the sixth bright waters you saw is the time in which David and Solomon were born.

2 That was the time of the building of Zion, the dedication of the sanctuary, the shedding of much blood of the nations that sinned, and many offerings which were given in the dedication of the sanctuary.

3 Peace and tranquility existed at that time, And wisdom was heard in the congregation.

4 The wealth of understanding was magnified in the congregations, and the holy feasts and ceremonies were carried out in blessings and great joy.

5 The judgment of the rulers was without guile and it was witnessed as such. The righteous law of the Mighty One was accomplished with truth.

6 And the land was then loved by the Lord because its inhabitants sinned not and it was glorified beyond all lands. At that time the city Zion ruled over all lands and regions.

7 These are the bright waters which you have seen.

Chapter 62

1 And the seventh black waters which you have seen is the perversion brought about by the counsel of Jeroboam, who decided to make two calves of gold:

2 And all the iniquities which kings who were after him sinfully worked,

3 And the curse of Jezebel and the worship of idols which Israel practiced at that time.

4 The withholding of rain, and the famines which occurred until women ate the fruit of their wombs,

5 And the time of their captivity which came upon the nine tribes and a half tribe because they were in many sins.

6 Then, Salmanasar, King of Assyria, came and led them away captive.
7 But regarding the Gentiles, how they always were sinful and wicked, and always unrighteousness would be wearisome to tell
8 These are the seventh black waters which you have seen.

Chapter 63

1 And the eighth bright waters you have seen is the correction and uprightness of Hezekiah King of Judah and the grace of God which came upon him. 2 When Sennacherib was aggressing in order to kill Hezekiah the deadly rage of Sennacherib troubled Hezekiah because a great population of the nations were with him .
3 When Hezekiah the king heard those things which the king of Assyria was devising and how he planned to come and seize him and destroy his people, the two and a half tribes which remained and how he wished to overthrow Zion Hezekiah trusted in his works, and had hope in his righteousness, and spoke with the Mighty One and said:
4 "Look! Sennacherib is prepared to destroy us, and he will boast and strut when he has destroyed Zion."
5 And the Mighty One heard him because Hezekiah was wise and so He listened to his prayer because he was righteous.
6 Then the Mighty One commanded Ramiel, His angel, who speaks with you.
7 And I went out and destroyed their population, whose count of their chiefs alone was a hundred and eighty-five thousand, and each one of them had an equal number that he commanded.
8 And at that time I burned their bodies from the inside out, but their clothing and weapons I preserved outwardly so that more wonderful deeds of the Mighty One might be seen, and that because of this His name might be spoken of throughout the whole earth.
9 And Zion was saved and Jerusalem delivered and Israel was freed from tribulation.
10 And all those who were in the holy land rejoiced, and the name of the Mighty One was mentioned and glorified.
11 These are the bright waters which you have seen.

Chapter 64

1 "The ninth black waters which you saw was all the wickedness which was in the days of Manasseh the son of Hezekiah.
2 His deed showed that he had no regard for God. He killed the righteous people, and he forcibly stole away judgment. He shed the blood of the innocent. He violently raped women, he overturned the altars and destroyed their offerings. He drove out their priests so that they could not minister in the sanctuary.

3 He made an image with five faces: four of them looked to the four winds, and the fifth on the top of the image was a passionate enemy of the Mighty One.

4 Then rage went out from the presence of the Mighty One to the intent that Zion should be pulled up by its roots, just like it happened in your days.

5 A decree went out from God against the two tribes and a half tribe that they should also be led away captive, as you have now seen.

6 The impiety of Manasseh increased greatly to the point that it removed the praise of the Most High from the sanctuary.

7 Because of this Manasseh was then named "the impious", and finally his dwelling was in the fire.

8 For though his prayer was heard by the Most High, finally, when he was thrown into the brass horse and the brass horse was then melted, it was meant as a sign to him for that time.

9 He had not lived perfectly. He was not worthy but this was done so that he might know by whom he should be tormented in the end.

10 For He who is able to reward is also able to torment. Chapter 65

1 Manasseh acted without regard for God, and thought that in his time the Mighty One would not look into these things.

2 These are the ninth black waters which you saw.

Chapter 66

1 "And the tenth bright waters which you have seen is the purity of the generations of Josiah King of Judah, who was the only one at the time who submitted himself to the Mighty One with all his heart and with all his soul.

2 He cleansed the land from idols, and sanctified all the vessels which had been polluted, and restored the offerings to the altar, and the horn of the holy was lifted, and he exalted the righteous, and honored all that were wise in understanding, and brought back the priests to their ministry, and destroyed and removed the magicians and enchanters and necromancers from the land.

3 He killed the sinners that were living and they also took from the sepulchers the bones of the dead and burned them with fire.

4 He established the festivals and the Sabbaths in their sanctity. He burned their polluted ones in the fire and the lying prophets which deceived the people were also burned in the fire, and the people who listened to them when they were living, he threw them into the brook Cedron, and heaped stones upon them.

5 And he was zealous with passion for the Mighty One with all his soul. He alone was steadfast in the law at that time, so that he left none that was uncircumcised, or that sinned in all the land, all the days of his life.

6 Therefore he will receive an eternal reward, and he will be glorified with the Mighty One beyond many at a later time.

7 For on his account and on account of those who are like him were the honorable glories, of which you was told before, created and prepared.

8 These are the bright waters which you have seen.

Chapter 67

1 And the eleventh black waters which you have seen is the calamity which is now befalling Zion.

2 Do you think that there is no anguish to the angels in the presence of the Mighty One because Zion was delivered up in such a way or that the Gentiles boast in their hearts, and amass before their idols? The gentiles say, 'she who so often trod down is now trodden down and she who reduced others to slavery is now a slave herself.

3 Do you think that in these things the Most High rejoices, or that His name is glorified?

4 But how will it effect His righteous judgment?

5 Yet after these things the gentile will seize and scatter them in the tribulation and they will dwell in shame in every place.

6 Because Zion is delivered up and Jerusalem has been laid waste, idols prosper in the cities of the Gentiles, and the cloud of smoke from the incense of the righteousness which the commands is now extinguished in Zion. In every place in and surrounding Zion there is the smoke of sin.

7 The King of Babylon who has now destroyed Zion will arise, and he will boast about being ruler over the people, and he will speak great things in his heart in the presence of the Most High. 8 But he will fall in the end. These are the black waters.

Chapter 68

1 The twelfth bright waters which you have seen is the word.

2 After these things occur a time will come when your people will fall into distress, so that they will all run the risk of perishing together.

3 Nevertheless, they will be saved, and their enemies will fall in their presence.

4 In time they will have much joy.

5 After a little space of time Zion will be built again, and its offerings will be restored again, and the priests will return to their ministry, and the Gentiles will come to glorify it, but not as fully as they did in the beginning.

6 After these things there will be the fall of many nations.

8 These are the bright waters which you have seen."

Chapter 69

1 The last waters which you have seen were darker than all that were before them. Those were after the twelfth number were collected together. They belong to the entire world.

2 The Most High made division from the beginning, because He alone knows what will happen due to the depth and breadth of the sin which will be committed before Him. He foresaw six kinds of them.

5 He also foresaw six kinds of good works of the righteous which will be accomplished before Him. They will go beyond those which He will work at the end and conclusion of the age.

6 For Him there were not black waters with black, nor bright with bright; because it is the end.

Chapter 70

1 Hear the interpretation of the last black waters which are to come after the all other black waters. This is the word.

2 The days will come when the time of the age is ripe that is the harvest of evil and good seeds. This is what the Mighty One will bring upon the earth and its inhabitants and upon its rulers. It is disturbing to the spirit and lethargy of heart.

3 They will hate one another, and provoke one another to fight, and the cruel will rule over the honorable, and those of low status will be honored above the famous.

4 Many will be delivered into the hands of the few, and those who were nothing will rule over the strong. The poor will have abundance beyond the rich, and the wicked will exalt themselves above the heroic.

5 The wise will be silent, and the foolish will speak. The ideas of men will not be heeded, nor will the counsel of the mighty. The hope of those who hope be will not be rewarded.

6 And when those things which were predicted have come to pass confusion will fall upon all men. Some of them will fall in battle, some of them will die in torment and pain, and some of them will be destroyed by their own people.

7 Then the Most High will reveal those peoples whom He has prepared from before and they will come and make war with the leaders that will be left.

8 And whosoever survives the war will die in the earthquake, and whosoever survives the earthquake will be burned by the fire, and whosoever survives the fire will be destroyed by famine. 9 But whosoever of the victors and the' vanquished survives and escapes all these things mentioned before will be delivered into the hands of My servant Messiah.

10 For all the earth will devour its inhabitants.

Chapter 71

1 And the holy land will have mercy on its own, and it will protect its inhabitants at that time.
2 This is the vision you have seen and this is the interpretation.
3 I have come to tell you these things because your prayer has been heard by the Most High.

Chapter 72

1 Listen, regarding the bright lightning which is to come at the end, after the black waters. This is the word.
2 After the signs which you were told of before, when the nations become turbulent, and the time of My Messiah is come, he will summon all the nations. Some of them he will spare, and some of them he will kill.
3 These things will come upon the nations which are spared by Him.
4 Every nation which does not know Israel and has not trodden down the seed of Jacob will be spared.
5 This is because some out of every nation will be subjected to your people.
6 But all those who have ruled over you or have known you will be given up to the sword.

Chapter 73

1 When He has brought everything that is in the world low and has sat down on the throne of His kingdom in peace for the dispensation, joy will be revealed and rest will appear.
2 Healing will descend in the dew and disease will go away and anxiety, pain and sorrow will vanish from among men. Gladness will go forth through the whole earth.
3 And no one will again die before his time (young) nor will adversity suddenly befall any.
4 Judgments, reproach, arguments, revenge, spilling of blood, passions, envy, hatred, and things like these will be condemned when they are removed.
5 For it is these very things which have filled this world with evils. On account of these the life of man has been greatly troubled.
6 Wild beasts will come from the forest and minister to men, asps and dragons (serpents) will come out from their holes to submit themselves to a little child.

7 Women will no longer then have pain when they bear children or suffer torment when they yield the fruit of the womb.

Chapter 74

1 In those days the reapers will not grow weary, nor those that build be weary from work. The works will quicken itself and speed those who do the work and give them much tranquility.
2 That which is corruptible will be destroyed. It is the beginning of that which is not corruptible.
3 Those things predicted will belong to this age. It is far removed from evil and near to things eternal.
4 This is the bright lightning which came after the last dark waters."

Chapter 75

1 And I asked: Lord, Who can understand Your goodness? For it is incomprehensible.
2 Who can look into your compassions, which are infinite?
3 Who can understand Your intelligence?
4 Who is able to explain the thoughts of Your mind?
5 Who of those born can hope to attain those things unless to him are merciful and gracious?
6 Certainly if You did not have compassion on those who are under Your right hand they could not come to those things. Only those who are in the numbers you named can be called.
7 We who exist know why we have come and so we submit ourselves to Him who brought us out of Egypt. We will come again and remember those things which have passed. We will rejoice in what has been.
8 But if we do not know why we have come and if we do not recognize the kingdom of Him who brought us up out of Egypt, we will have to come again and seek after those things which have been now. We will be grieved with pain again because of those things which have befallen.

Chapter 76

1 And He answered and said to me: This vision has been revealed and interpreted to you as you asked me to do, now hear the word of the Most High that you may know what is to befall you after these things.

2 You will surely leave this earth, but not by death, but you will be preserved until the end of the age (times).

3 Go up to the top of that mountain, and all the regions of that land, and the figure of the inhabited world, and the tops of the mountains, and the depth of the valleys, and the depths of the seas, and the number of the rivers will pass before you so that you may see what you are leaving, and to what place you are going. Now this will happen after forty days.

4 Go now during these days and teach the people as much as you are able so that they may learn and not die at the last age but they may learn in order that they may live at the last age."

Chapter 77

1 And I, Baruch, went from there and came to the people, and assembled them together from the greatest to the least, and said to them:

2 Hear, children of Israel! See how many of you are who remain of the twelve tribes of Israel.

3 To you and to your fathers the Lord gave a law more excellent than to all peoples.

4 Because your brethren transgressed the commandments of the Most High, He brought vengeance upon you and upon them. He did not spare the former, and the latter also He gave into slavery.

5 He did not leave a trace of them. But you are here with me.!

6 If you direct your ways correctly you will not depart as your brethren departed, but they will come back to you.

7 You worship He who is full of mercy. Your hope is in Him who is gracious and true. He will do good and not evil.

8 Have you not seen what has befallen Zion?

9 Do you think that the place (area/location) had sinned and that is why it was overthrown? Did you think that the land had performed foolishness and that because of this it was delivered up?

10 Don't you know it was because of you who sinned, that those things which did not sin were overthrown? It was because of you who performed wickedness that those thing which did not do foolish acts were delivered up to its enemies?

11 All the people answered and said to me, We can recall the good things which the Mighty One has done for (to) us. We do recall them. There are these things and those things which we do not remember that He in His mercy knows.

12 In spite of this, please do this for us, your people, write to our brethren in Babylon an letter of (religious) teaching and a scroll containing hope so that you may confirm them before you leave us.

13 The religious leaders (shepherds) of Israel have died, and the lamps which gave light are extinguished, and the fountains from which we drank have withheld their stream.

14 We are left in the darkness among the trees of the forest, the thirst of the wilderness."

15 And I answered and said to them: Shepherds and lamps and fountains come from the law: And though we leave, yet the law remains.

16 If you have respect for the law, and are determined to become wise, a lamp will not be lacking, and a shepherd (religious leader) will not fail, and a fountain will not dry up.

17 I will write also to your brethren in Babylon, and I will send by means of men, and I will write in like manner to the nine tribes and a half, and send by means of a bird.

18 And on twenty-first day in the eighth month that I, Baruch, came and sat down under the oak under the shadow of the branches, and no man was with me, but I was alone.

19 And I wrote these two letters; one I sent by an eagle to the nine and a half tribes;

20 And the other I sent to those that were at Babylon by means of three men.

21 And I called the eagle and spoke these words to it: The Most High has made you that you should be higher than all birds.

22 Now go and do not stop in any place, nor enter a nest, nor settle upon any tree, till you have passed over the breadth of the many waters of the river Euphrates, and have gone to the people that dwell there, and drop down to them this letter.

23 Remember that at the time of the deluge Noah received the fruit of the olive from a dove when he sent it out from the ark.

24 The ravens also ministered to Elijah, bringing him food as they had been commanded.

25 Solomon, in the time of his kingdom, when he wished to send or seek for anything, commanded a bird to go out and it obeyed him as he commanded it.

26 So do not tire, and do not turn to the right hand nor the left, but fly and go by a direct way, that you may preserve the command of the Mighty One, according as I said to you.

Chapter 78

1 These are the words of that letter which Baruch the son of Neriah sent to the nine and a half tribes, which were across the river Euphrates, in which these things were written.

2 Baruch the son of Neriah says to the brethren carried into captivity: "Mercy and peace."

3 I bear in mind, my brethren, the love of Him who created us, who loved us from ancient times, and never hated us, but above all taught us.

4 And truly I know that all of us in the twelve tribes are bound by one bond, inasmuch as we are born from one father.

5 Because of this I have been the more diligent to leave you the words of this letter before I die, so that you may be comforted regarding the evils which have come upon you, and also that you may be grieved regarding the evil that has befallen your brethren; and also that you may justify (understand and accept) His judgment which He has decreed against you that you should be carried away captives. What you have suffered is a sentence disproportionably greater than what you have done. But this was done in order that, at the last times, you may be found worthy of your fathers.

6 So, if you consider that you have now suffered those things for your good, that you may not be condemned and tormented in the end, then you will receive eternal hope. But you must remove from your heart all error and vanity, for it was because of this you departed from here.

7 If you so do these things He will never forget you. He who gave His promise to those greater than us but on our behalf, that He will never forget or forsake us, but will gather together again those who were dispersed with much mercy.

Chapter 79

1 Now, my brethren, learn first what befell Zion and how Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up against us.

2 For we have sinned against Him who made us, and we have not kept the commandments which he ordered us to keep. Yet he has not chastened us as we deserved.

3 For what befell you we also suffer in a the highest degree, for it happened to us also.

Chapter 80

1 And now, my brethren, I reveal to you that when the enemy had surrounded the city the angels of the Most High were sent, and they collapsed the fortifications of the strong wall and they destroyed the solid iron corners, which could not be pulled up.

2 Nevertheless, they hid all the vessels of the sanctuary, to prevent the enemy from possessing them.

3 And when they had done these things, they delivered to the enemy the collapsed wall, and the plundered house, and the burnt temple, and the people who were overcome because they were delivered up. They did this so the enemy could not boast and say: "In war, by force have we been able to lay waste to the house of the Most High."

4 They also have bound your brethren and led away them to Babylon, and have forced them to live there.

5 But we, being very few, have been left here ..

6 This is the tribulation about which I wrote to you.

7 And certainly I know that alleviation of the pain of the inhabitants of Zion consoles you. You knew that they prospered so your consolation was greater than the tribulation which you endured in having to leave it.

Chapter 81

1 But regarding consolation, listen to my word.

2 I was grieving regarding Zion, and I prayed for mercy from the Most High, and I said:

3 How long will these things last for us? Will we always have these evils on us?"

4 The Mighty One acted according out of the multitude of His mercies and according to the vastness of His compassion. He revealed to me His word so that my suffering would be relieved. He showed me visions that I should not again endure anguish. He made known to me the mystery of the times. And the advent of the hours he showed me.

Chapter 82

1 Therefore, my brethren, I have written to you, that you may comfort yourselves regarding the multitude of tribulations.

2 You know that our Maker will certainly avenge us and do to our enemies according to all that they have done to us. The end, which the Most High will make is very near will bring His mercy and the final result of His judgment is by no means far off.

3 For now we see the numerous prosperity of the Gentiles, even though they act sinfully and they are like a vapor.

4 We see their great power, even though they act wickedly, But they will become like a drop (of water).

5 We see the strength of their might, even though they resist the Mighty One every hour. But they will be considered as spittle.

6 We consider the glory of their greatness, though they do not keep the statutes of the Most High. But as smoke will they pass away.

7 And we think about the beauty of their gracefulness, even though they give it with pollutions. But as grass that withers will they fade away.

8 And we consider the strength of their cruelty, though they do not remember what it brought or how it ended. But as a wave that passes (through them) they will be broken.

9 And we remark about how they brag about being mighty although they deny that it was God that gave it to them. But they will disappear like a passing cloud.

Chapter 83

1 Most High will certainly speed up His times, and He will bring on His hours.

2 He will judge those who are in His world with certainty, and visit truth on all their hidden works.

3 He will examine the secret thoughts, and those things of all the members of man which they laid up in the secret chambers. He will make them appear in the presence of all with reproof.

4 Allow none of these present things to ascend into your hearts, but above all let us be expectant because that which is promised to us will come.

5 Do not let us look to the delights of the Gentiles now but let us remember what has been promised to us in the end.

6 For the end of the times and of the seasons and whatever is with them will cease together.

7 The conclusion of the age will show the tremendous strength of its ruler, when all things come to judgment.

8 Prepare your hearts for that which you have believed or you will be in bondage in both worlds and you be led away captive here and be tormented there.

9 That which is now or which was, or which will come, is the evil fully evil, nor the good fully good.

10 For all your health of this time are turning into sickness, and all strength of this time is turning into weakness, and all the power of this time is turning into impotence, and the energy of youth is turning into old age and death.

11 Every beauty of gracefulness of this time is becoming faded and hateful, and every prideful kingdom of this time is turning into humiliation and shame, and every praise of the glory of this time is turning into the embarrassment of silence, and every empty bragging insult of this time is turning into a mute ruin.

12 Every delight and joy of this time is turning to worms and decay, and every noise of the proud of this time is turning into dust and lethargy.

13 Every possession of riches of this time is being turned into Sheol (hell) alone, and all the yearning of passion of this time is turning into death, and every lustful desire of this time is turning into judgment with torment.

14 Every trick and craftiness of this time is turning into a proof of the truth. Every sweet ointment of this time is turning into judgment and condemnation, and every love of lying is turning to rudely to the truth.

15 Since all these things are done now does anyone think that they will not be avenged? The consummation of all things will come to the truth.

Chapter 84

1 Because of these things I have revealed to you this while I am still alive. I have said these things that you should learn the things that are excellent, for the Mighty One has commanded me to instruct you. So I will set before you some of the commandments of His judgment before I die.

2 Do not forget that Moses called heaven and earth to witness against you and said:

3 If you transgress the law you will be dispersed, but if you keep it you will be kept." He also used to say these things to you when you, the twelve tribes, were together in the desert.

4 After his death you threw them away from you and because of this there came upon you what had been predicted.

5 Moses used to tell you tell you what would befall you, and now you see they have befallen you because you have forsaken the law.

6 Now, I also say to you after you have suffered, that if you obey those things which have been said to you, you will receive from the Mighty One whatever has been laid up and waiting for you.

7 Let this letter be for a testimony between me and you so that you may remember the commandments of the Mighty One and that there may be to me a defense in the presence of Him who sent me.

8 And remember the law and Zion, the holy land, your brethren, and the covenant of your fathers. Do not forget the festivals and the sabbaths.

9 Deliver this letter and the traditions of the law to your sons after you, as also your fathers delivered them to you.

10 At all times make requests and pray diligently and unceasingly with your whole heart that the Mighty One may hold nothing against you, and that He may not count the multitude of your sins, but instead remember the rectitude of your fathers.

11 If He do not judges us according to the multitude of His mercies, woe to all us who are born.

Chapter 85

1 Do you not know that in the past and in the generations of old our fathers had helpers? They were righteous men and holy prophets.

2 We were in our own land and they helped us when we sinned, and they interceded for us with Him who made us, because they trusted in their works, and the Mighty

One heard their prayer and forgave us.

3 But now the righteous have been gathered and the prophets have fallen asleep, and we also have gone out from the land, and Zion has been taken from us, and we have nothing now except the Mighty One and His law.

4 If therefore we direct and commit our hearts we will receive everything that we lost, and much better things than we lost by many times.

5 For what we have lost would decay, but what we will receive will not be corruptible.

6 Also, I have written to our brethren to Babylon that to them also I may testify to these very things.

7 Let all those things I said before be always before your eyes, because we are still in the spirit and the power of our liberty.

8 The Most High is long-suffering towards us here, and He has shown us what is to be, and has not concealed from us what will happen in the end.

9 Before judgment takes its own (costs), and truth that which is its due, let us prepare our souls so that we may possess and not be taken as a possession and that we may hope and not be put to shame, and that we may rest with our fathers, and not be tormented with our enemies.

10 For the youth of the world is past, and the strength of the creation already exhausted, and the occurrence of the times is very short because they have already passed by. The pitcher is near to the cistern, and the ship to the port, and the course of the journey nears the city, and life to its conclusion.

11 Prepare your souls, so that when you sail and ascend from the ship you may have rest and not be condemned when you depart.

12 When the Most High will bring about all these things there will not be a place left for repentance, nor a limit to the times or a duration for the hours, or a change of ways, or a place to pray, or a way to send pleas, or to receive knowledge, or give of love. There will be no place of repentance for the soul, nor prayers for offences, nor intercession of the fathers, nor prayer of the prophets, nor help of the righteous.

13 There is the sentence of decay, the way of fire, and the path which leads to Gehenna (place of burning/ hell/ destruction).

14 There is one law (made) by one. There is one age and an end for all who are in it.

15 Then He will save those whom He can forgive, and at the same time destroy those who are polluted with sins.

Chapter 86

1 When you receive this, my letter, read it in your congregations with care.

2 Meditate on it, and above all do this on the days of your fasts.

3 Keep me in mind by means of this letter, as I also keep you in mind in it, always.

Fare you well.

Chapter 87

1 And when I had ended all the words of this letter, and had written it without tiring to its close, that I folded it, and sealed it carefully, and bound it to the neck of the eagle, and dismissed it and sent it.

THE ANCHOR
BIBLE

MATTHEW

A NEW TRANSLATION WITH INTRODUCTION AND COMMENTARY BY
W. F. ALBRIGHT and C. S. MANN

THE ANCHOR YALE BIBLE
MATTHEW

Introduction, Translation, and Notes by

W. F. ALBRIGHT

AND

C. S. MANN

THE ANCHOR YALE BIBLE
Yale University Press New Haven and London
Kindle version edited by Aiu

First published in 1974 by Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc. First Yale University Press impression 2008.

Copyright © 1974 by Yale University as assignee from Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc.

THE ANCHOR BIBLE
PUBLISHED BY DOUBLEDAY

a division of Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group, Inc.

1540 Broadway, New York, New York 10036

THE ANCHOR BIBLE, DOUBLEDAY and the portrayal of an anchor with the letters AB are trademarks of Doubleday, a division of Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group, Inc.

ISBN 978-0-300-13978-5

Library of Congress Catalog Card Number 77-150875

Copyright © 1971 by Doubleday, a division of Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group, Inc.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

PREFACE

At a time when the Anchor Bible was still supposed to consist of concise, one-volume paperbacks, the editors invited Professor W. D. Davies to prepare commentaries on Matthew and Mark. He accepted, but pressure of other work kept delaying him until he finally decided—presumably because of the steadily increasing length of the published contributions—that he would have to give up the assignment. We were greatly disappointed, but fortunately Dr. C. S. Mann of London and Baltimore had just finished collaborating with the senior editor on the unfinished commentary on Acts left by the late lamented Johannes Munck. We agreed to collaborate on the Matthew commentary.

We owe special thanks to the junior editor, Professor David Noel Freedman, for reading the manuscript and pointing out weaknesses in the original treatment.

We owe a deep debt of gratitude to Dr. Leona Running, of Andrews University, Michigan, for much invaluable help at various stages of the preparation of this work, and not least in the final editing of the typescript.

For much too long a time the course of New Testament scholarship has been dictated by theological, quasi-theological, and philosophical presuppositions. In far too many cases commentaries on NT books have neglected such basic requirements as up-to-date historical and philological analysis of the text itself. In many ways this preoccupation with theological and metaphysical interpretation is the unacknowledged child of Hegelianism. To this should be added the continuing and baleful influence of Schleiermacher and his successors on the whole treatment of historical material. The result has often been steadfast refusal to take seriously the findings of archaeological and linguistic research. We believe that there is less and less excuse for the resulting confusion in this latter half of the twentieth century.

Closely allied with these presuppositions is the ever present fog of existentialism, casting ghostly shadows over an already confused landscape; Existentialism as a method of interpreting the New Testament is based upon a whole series of undemonstrable postulates of Platonic, Neo-Platonic, left-wing scholastic, and relativistic origins. So anti-historical is this approach that it fascinates speculative minds which prefer clichés to factual data, and shifting ideology to empirical research and logical demonstration.

In this commentary we have endeavored to take the words of Matthew's gospel seriously and to see behind them a whole cultural, legal, and spiritual tradition growing around the belief that Israel was the chosen people of God and that the coming of the Messiah was the fulfillment of God's revelation of himself to men. This is the conviction with which the nascent Christian community met the world of its day, both Jewish and Greek, and there is no understanding of our NT sources unless the conviction that Jesus was the promised Messiah is treated seriously. We have, therefore, taken considerable pains to place the Jesus of the gospels firmly against his own background, making full use of all the evidence now available—historical, archaeological, and linguistic. For example, we have insisted that it is absolutely necessary to take seriously Greek historical sources such as Josephus and Eusebius, both of whom are now being vindicated as careful historians by independent discoveries. This is particularly true of the discoveries at Masada, Qumran, Chenoboskion, and Ugarit (the last-mentioned may seem anachronistic to NT scholarship, but it has done more to demonstrate the accuracy of Eusebius' use of such sources as Philo Byblius than any other discovery of modern times). Similarly, in spite of steadfast refusal on the part of some writers to give credence to the discoveries at Qumran as illustrating the New Testament, the cumulative results of Qumran studies so far have more than vindicated the tentative conclusions drawn by some of the first writers in the field.

Of almost equal importance for the NT scholar have been the epoch-making discoveries in Palestinian archaeology since the beginning of this century. We now possess a great deal more information about social and cultural conditions in Palestine in the time of Jesus than was dreamed possible seventy years ago.

In preparing this volume we have drawn especially on the results of Qumran research and other recent discoveries in the area of early Jewish sectarian studies as well as on the critical rehabilitation of early Christian historians. Thanks to this material, we have been able to determine the kind of Aramaic spoken by Jesus to an extent never before remotely approached. As a result we have resumed the research of the senior author on the original Aramaic form of the proper names of the New Testament, begun nearly fifty years ago and continued intermittently since then. This particular research has proved to have implications far beyond those originally envisaged. We do not believe that any substantial part of our present gospel text was first written in Aramaic, though the possibility of such a composition cannot be ruled out entirely. Research on the proper names has led to recognition of the extraordinary importance of the Syriac recensions for better understanding of the gospels.

It is doubtful whether this commentary would ever have been written at all without the highly original investigations carried on by the late Abram Spiro, of Wayne State University, on the importance of the Samaritans in NT tradition. This particular collaboration began with the joint study of some pēsher (commentary) fragments of Qumran while the senior author was in Detroit in April 1964. It led to a prolonged and voluminous correspondence between us, in which the junior author joined soon after his arrival in this country in July 1965. Dr. Spiro's untimely death put an end to this fruitful co-operation, but a mass of manuscript material is preserved, the most important of which was condensed by the authors of the present volume into a long appendix to Johannes Munck's Anchor commentary on Acts. In our opinion, Spiro's work is revolutionary in its importance for proper understanding of early Christian tradition in the book of Acts, and it casts a bright light on the parallel gospel tradition. We must rank Spiro's contributions to the understanding of the New Testament on a par with the Qumran and Chenoboskion discoveries and the new knowledge about the development of Aramaic dialects. We gratefully dedicate this volume to his memory.

W.F.A. and C.S.M.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

- I. THE GOSPEL AND THE CANONICAL “GOSPELS”
- II. MATTHEW IN RELATION TO THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS
- III. THE “Q” MATERIAL IN THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS
- IV. THE OLD TESTAMENT BACKGROUND OF MATTHEW’S GOSPEL
- V. THE DISCIPLES
- VI. THE KINGDOM: THE MAN AND THE MESSIANIC COMMUNITY
- VII. THE KINGDOM: THE MAN AND THE FATHER
- VIII. THE KINGDOM: THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN
- IX. JESUS AND THE LAW
- X. MIRACLES IN MATTHEW
- XI. PARABLES IN MATTHEW
- XII. THE MESSIAH IN MATTHEW
- XIII. AUTHORSHIP AND CHRONOLOGY

SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY

- I. The Background of the New Testament
- II. The New Testament Sources
- III. On Matthew’s Gospel
- IV. Miscellaneous Works on Particular Themes
- V. Greek Texts

MATTHEW

- 1. THE GENEALOGY OF JESUS (1:1–17)†

NOTES

COMMENT

- 2. THE BIRTH OF JESUS (1:18–25)†

NOTES

COMMENT

- 3. THE VISIT OF THE MAGI (2:1–12)

NOTES

COMMENT

- 4. THE FLIGHT TO EGYPT (2:13–15)

NOTES

COMMENT

- 5. THE SLAUGHTER OF THE CHILDREN (2:16–18)

NOTES

COMMENT

6. RETURN FROM EGYPT \(2:19–23\)

NOTES

COMMENT

7. JOHN THE BAPTIST \(3:1–12\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

8. THE BAPTISM OF JESUS \(3:13–17\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

9. THE TEMPTATIONS \(4:1–11\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

10. THE BEGINNING OF THE MINISTRY \(4:12–17\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

11. THE FIRST DISCIPLES \(4:18–22\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

12. MINISTRY IN GALILEE \(4:23–25\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

13. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN \(5:1–12\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

14. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: MARKS OF THE DISCIPLE \(5:13–16\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

15. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—FULFILLMENT \(5:17–20\)

NOTES

COMMENT

16. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: ANGER \(5:21–26\)†

NOTES

17. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—ADULTERY \(5:27–30\)†

NOTES

18. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—MARRIAGE \(5:31–32\)†

NOTES

19. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—OATHS \(5:33–37\)

NOTES

20. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—RETALIATION \(5:38–42\)†

NOTES

21. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: THE LAW—ENEMIES \(5:43–48\)†

NOTES

22. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: ALMSGIVING \(6:1–4\)

NOTES

23. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: PRAYER \(6:5–14\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

24. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: FASTING \(6:16–18\)

NOTES

25. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: WEALTH \(6:19–21\)†

NOTES

26. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: DISCIPLESHIP AND DETACHMENT \(6:22–34\)†

NOTES

27. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: DISCIPLESHIP \(7:1–14\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

28. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: FALSE TEACHERS \(7:15–20\)†

NOTES

29. THE GREAT INSTRUCTION: FALSE DISCIPLES \(7:21–29\)†

NOTES

30. HEALINGS \(8:1–18\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

31. AN INQUIRER \(8:19–22\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

32. CALMING THE STORM \(8:23–27\)†

NOTES

33. THE GADARENE DEMONIACS \(8:28–9:1\)†

NOTES

34. THE QUESTION OF AUTHORITY \(9:2–8\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

35. THE CALL OF MATTHEW \(9:9–13\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

36. JOHN’S DISCIPLES \(9:14–17\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

37. HEALINGS \(9:18–34\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

38. MISSION AND DISCIPLESHIP \(9:35–38\)

NOTES

COMMENT

39. THE MISSION OF THE TWELVE \(10:1–15\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

40. THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP: MISSION \(10:16–25\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

41. THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP: FEAR \(10:26–31\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

42. THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP: ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF THE MESSIAH \(10:32–11:1\)†

NOTES

43. JOHN’S QUESTION AND JESUS’ TESTIMONY \(11:2–19\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

44. DENUNCIATIONS \(11:20–24\)†

NOTES

45. THE SON’S PRAYER \(11:25–30\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

46. CONTROVERSY OVER THE LAW \(12:1–15A\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

47. HEALINGS, EXORCISMS, CHALLENGES \(12:15b–37\)†

NOTES

48. DEMAND FOR A SIGN \(12:38–45\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

49. THE MOTHER AND BROTHERS OF JESUS \(12:46–50\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

50. PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM \(13:1–52\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

51. UNBELIEF \(13:53–58\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

52. DEATH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST \(14:1–12\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

53. THE FEEDING \(14:13–21\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

54. THE WALKING ON THE WATER \(14:22–36\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

55. QUESTIONS ON THE LAW \(15:1–20\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

56. THE SYRO-PHOENICIAN WOMAN; FURTHER HEALINGS \(15:21–31\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

57. THE FEEDING \(15:32–39\)†

NOTES

58. DEMAND FOR A SIGN \(16:1–12\)†

NOTES

59. PETER’S CONFESSION \(16:13–20\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

60. PASSION PREDICTIONS \(16:21–28\)†

NOTES

61. THE TRANSFIGURATION \(17:1–13\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

62. A LESSON ABOUT FAITH \(17:14–21\)†

NOTES

63. PASSION PREDICTION \(17:22–23\)†

NOTES

64. QUESTIONS ABOUT THE TEMPLE TAX \(17:24–27\)

NOTES

COMMENT

65. PRECEDENCE IN THE KINGDOM \(18:1–9\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

66. THE LOST SHEEP \(18:10–14\)†

NOTES

67. COMMUNITY DISCIPLINE \(18:15–20\)†

NOTES

68. THE QUESTION OF FORGIVENESS \(18:21–35\)

NOTES

69. QUESTIONS ABOUT THE LAW \(19:1–12\)†

NOTES

COMMENTS

70. BLESSING THE CHILDREN \(19:13–15\)†

COMMENT

71. TRUE RICHES \(19:16–30\)†

NOTES

72. THE KINGDOM: THE WORKERS IN THE VINEYARD \(20:1–16\)

NOTES

COMMENT

73. PASSION PREDICTION \(20:17–19\)†

COMMENT

74. PRECEDENCE IN THE KINGDOM \(20:20–28\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

75. TWO BLIND MEN \(20:29–34\)†

NOTES

76. TRIUMPHAL ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM \(21:1–11\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

77. CLEANSING THE TEMPLE \(21:12–17\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

78. QUESTIONS ABOUT AUTHORITY \(21:18–27\)†

NOTES

79. THREE PARABLES \(21:28–46\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

80. PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM \(22:1–14\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

81. QUESTIONS \(22:15–46\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

82. WARNINGS AGAINST LEGALISM \(23:1–36\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

83. LAMENT OVER JERUSALEM \(23:37–39\)†

NOTES

84. THE FUTURE OF THE TEMPLE \(24:1–2\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

85. THE COMING PERSECUTION \(24:3–14\)†

NOTES

86. IMMEDIATE SIGNS \(24:15–28\)†

NOTES

87. THE MAN'S COMING \(24:29–44\)†

NOTES

88. PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM \(24:45–25:13\)†

NOTES

89. PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM \(concluded\) \(25:14–30\)†

NOTES

90. JUDGMENT \(25:31–46\)

NOTES

91. PASSOVER: PLOT TO KILL JESUS \(26:1–5\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

92. PASSOVER: BETHANY \(26:6–13\)†

NOTES

93. PASSOVER: BETRAYAL \(26:14–16\)†

NOTES

94. PASSOVER: THE LAST SUPPER \(26:17–29\)†

NOTES

95. PASSOVER: GETHSEMANE \(26:30–46\)†

NOTES

96. ARREST OF JESUS \(26:47–56\)†

NOTES

97. JESUS BEFORE THE COUNCIL \(26:57–68\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

98. PETER'S DENIAL \(26:69–75\)†

NOTES

99. JESUS TAKEN TO PILATE \(27:1–2\)†

NOTES

100. DEATH OF JUDAS \(27:3–10\)†

NOTES

101. JESUS QUESTIONED BY PILATE \(27:11–14\)†

NOTES

102. JESUS SENTENCED TO DEATH \(27:15–26\)†

NOTES

103. THE MOCKING \(27:27–31\)†

NOTES

104. THE CRUCIFIXION \(27:32–44\)†

NOTES

105. DEATH OF JESUS \(27:45–56\)†

NOTES

COMMENT

106. BURIAL OF JESUS (27:57–66)†

NOTES

107. THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS (28:1–15)†

NOTES

COMMENT

108. JESUS' FINAL COMMISSION (28:16–20)†

NOTES

PRINCIPAL ABBREVIATIONS

1. PUBLICATIONS

- BA Biblical Archaeologist
CBQ Catholic Biblical Quarterly
ET Expository Times
IB The Interpreter's Bible, 12 vols., New York and Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1951–57
ICC International Critical Commentary
IDB The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, 4 vols., New York and Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1962
JBL Journal of Biblical Literature
NovT Novum Testamentum
NTS New Testament Studies
1QH Qumran Hymns of Thanksgiving
1QS Qumran Manual of Discipline
RB Revue Biblique
StB H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck, Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrasch, 6 vols., Munich: Beck, 1922–61
StEv Studia Evangelica. Papers from the Oxford International Congresses of NT Studies, published at Berlin, Akademie-Verlag
TNTS Twelve New Testament Studies, by John A. T. Robinson, London: SCM, 1962
TS Theological Studies
TWNT Theologisches Wörterbuch zum Neuen Testament, eds. Gerhard Kittel et al., Stuttgart: Kohlhammer, 1933–
ZNW Zeitschrift für die neutestamentliche Wissenschaft und die Kunde der älteren Kirche

2. VERSIONS

- AB The Anchor Bible, 1964–
KJ The King James, or Authorized Version of 1611
LXX The Septuagint
MT Masoretic Text
NEB The New English Bible, 1961, 1970
RSV The Revised Standard Version, 1946, 1952

3. OTHER ABBREVIATIONS

- Ar. Arabic
Aram. Aramaic
Gr. Greek

Heb.	Hebrew
NT	New Testament
OT	Old Testament
Syr.	Syriac
TB	Talmud Babli
TY	Talmud Yerushalmi

INTRODUCTION

I. THE GOSPEL AND THE CANONICAL “GOSPELS”

A

The four books in our New Testament which are called the “gospels” stand alone, in that there is no other material by which to judge them.¹ This is not to say that they are a wholly new literary form, but rather that the material they discuss is not to be found paralleled anywhere else. It is true that during the centuries after the events recorded in the New Testament, the apocryphal gospels and various Gnostic compilations of sayings attributed to Jesus were composed. But an examination of the materials so collected, and a comparison of them with the canonical gospels of the New Testament, reveals that these later compositions were slanted to a form of belief about the person and work of Jesus which finds no expression in the pages of the New Testament.

The designation of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John as “gospels” has grown out of a convention. The New English Bible (NEB) provides the general title “The Gospel” for all four books, and then a subheading for each one, as: “according to Matthew.” The Gospel is the proclamation in the ministry of Jesus that through him the reign of God is being declared to men who are ready to receive it: it is the good news of man’s incorporation into this reign, this kingdom, through the remission of sin. “Good tidings,” or “to convey good tidings,” is a common enough expression in the Dead Sea scrolls: the Gospel, the proclamation, came about at a decisive moment in history when God uttered once-and-for-all his good news through Jesus, his “Word.” The Gospel shows us that God’s promise to Israel was fulfilled at a midpoint in history, that everything which God promised in his dealings with the people of the Old Covenant was summed up in his Anointed Servant, the Messiah Jesus. This Gospel presupposes and grows out of the Old Testament, and there is no understanding of the books of the New Testament without the books of the Old. (Even a cursory examination of Paul’s letters, especially Romans and Corinthians, shows how much knowledge of the Old Testament the Apostle demanded, even if the majority of his converts were non-Jews.) When we speak of the books of the Old Testament, it is well to remember that the Jewish canon of Hebrew Scripture was fixed long before the early rabbinic scholars gave it formal expression at Jamnia toward the end of the first century A.D.

If we come to Matthew’s interpretation of the Gospel expecting chronologically arranged history, we shall be disappointed. It is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile the two nativity narratives of Matthew and Luke; we have to assume that these represent two sources, or two traditions. The Great Instruction, which in Matthew is said to have taken place on a mountainside, is said by Luke to have been delivered on the plain; moreover, Matthew uses this account to include a whole block of teaching found in quite different contexts in the other gospels.

If we come to the gospels expecting to find biography in the modern sense, we shall again look in vain. There was little real interest in scientific biography in the ancient world—Plutarch is an exception—and Matthew provides us with no biographical material between the infancy and the beginning of the Baptist's ministry. Almost all the elements that a modern reader would demand of a biography are lacking. Matthew has two principal interests: the fulfillment of God's purposes in and through Jesus, and how this fulfillment will find expression in the community which Jesus founded. In addition to Matthew's concern with themes rather than with history, the most cursory inspection of this gospel would reveal that—from the purely historical point of view—it devotes a disproportionate amount of space and attention to the narrative of the passion.

This concentration on the passion and the resurrection of Jesus provides us with a clue to the purpose of a written gospel. Although it is possible to reconstruct something of the earthly life, and even the ministry, of Jesus from the letters and from Acts (and we have to remember that the letters of Paul were all written prior to the gospels), obviously there was a further need felt to make the record as clear and authentic as possible. There were, for example, phrases in Paul's letters which were open to misinterpretation or misuse by such as the nascent Gnostic sects (cf. the Apostle's use of "the wisdom of God" in 1 Cor 1:24). In addition, there must have been considerable anxiety among Christians lest all the original twelve disciples should die before the process of sifting and control had been completed. The four gospels were not written for people to whom Jesus-Messiah was outside experience; those outside the Christian community were not the intended audience for the gospels, however much the availability of those writings may now persuade us to the contrary. Belief in the passion and resurrection of Jesus, and in their saving effects, is central to the gospels; for the evangelists the passion was central to the interpretation of those events. References to the life and ministry of Jesus in the letters are central to practical questions of Christian living—God's will is ascertained by prayer and study of the Lord's teaching (1 Cor 7:10, 17, 25), and behavior at the Eucharist is determined, or should be, by what the Eucharist is (1 Cor 11:23 ff.; 2 Cor 8:9; Gal 4:4; 1 Pet 3:12 ff.).

Certainly there were differences of emphasis in the early Church on the ministry of Jesus. Jewish Christians might be acutely sensitive about the role of Jesus as Lawgiver, while Gentiles might be much more aware of Jesus as the harbinger of salvation (a popular concept in the world of that time). We must be careful not to see these two points of view as contradictory—all too often the contrast between these roles has been hopelessly exaggerated. There is equal concern for “salvation” in the material allegedly from the source(s) called “Q,” and lawmaking is not a Jewish prerogative. The two strands might appear to present divergent traditions, but both are to be found throughout the gospels and in the New Testament generally; they present us with a rounded picture of the whole scene. If we expect to discover traces of divergent tradition in the gospels, with the simplicity born of our modern habit of encapsulating everything, we shall find merely our own notions of what we think the divergent traditions ought to have been. It has been debated often enough in the past precisely how far it is correct to regard the gospel of John as “anti-Jewish,” or how far Matthew’s composition is the most “Jewish” of the four gospels. This is hopelessly simple. It supposes that Jews in the first century possessed a homogeneity which we now know to have been wholly lacking. It also fails to recognize that the omission of polemical material (e.g., against the Sadducees) may be due to the fact that after A.D. 70 the Sadducees had ceased to exist as a force at all.

Why were the gospels written?

The infant Christian community demanded that oral tradition be rightly evaluated to avoid misunderstanding, in the knowledge that the original disciples would soon be dead and the Community faced with the need to have more or less fixed patterns for recalling God's redemptive act in Jesus. There were other factors at work, too. We know from the evidence of both archaeology and secular writers that conditions in Palestine after A.D. 60 were fraught with uncertainty and pending civil strife, and that in these years (even before the fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70) thousands of people left the country. In such a situation, it is understandable that only Christians would feel the need to record and preserve the earliest oral memories of the ministry of Jesus and its culmination.²

Because of the nature of the Gospel proclamation, the original oral repetition of the story of Jesus and his teachings did not satisfy the early Christians for long. It was of the essence of the Gospel—supremely exemplified in Matthew and in Paul's teaching—that all Israel's experience had been gathered up, fulfilled, in Jesus. But how, and in what manner, had it all been fulfilled? If the earliest Christians had the Old Testament as scripture, and presumably followed the old synagogue pattern of reading and prayers, then it is obvious that the Gospel had to be put into a form in which it could be similarly used. We know from Paul's letters (cf. Col 4:16) that he was able to order his letters to be read aloud in his convert-congregations, and we may infer from this that during worship there was teaching by the apostles and elders. It is only logical to assume, therefore, that there was pressure to have on record an authentic account of what Jesus had said and done, and the better to show Christianity's roots in Israel.

It is possible to reconstruct the approximate process of transmission from oral to written form. There is a disproportionate amount of attention, from the standpoint of strict biographical interest, paid to the passion, death and resurrection of Jesus, which indicates the degree of importance attached to these saving events in preaching and teaching, and they must have been among the first parts of the Gospel written down. Matthew's use of OT quotations has led many to infer that the earliest written documents in the Christian tradition may have been collections of pieces from the Old Testament, and this view has been heavily reinforced by the discovery of just such collections (though not of course Christian ones) at Qumran.³ The manner in which the gospel material took final shape can be deduced from yet another characteristic of the finished product. Each pericope (a Greek word indicating a small block of material) in the gospels is self-contained, and is meant to convey some specific teaching, usually with no chronological or topographical indication of its place in the scheme of the Lord's ministry. Thus, for example, it is possible that the story of the Syro-Phoenician woman (Mark 7:24 ff.) may have been recalled originally in answer to the question: "How did Jesus deal with those outside Judaism?"

It is not easy to determine whether the pericopae as we now have them are identical with those same small blocks of material as they existed in oral tradition. For example, Mark 2:13 ff. (=Matt 9:9 ff. and Luke 5:27 ff.) places the call of Matthew after a time of teaching, whereas Matthew and Luke both place it after a healing. Each evangelist tells the story differently, and we are in no position to determine which evangelist to follow here—but all three (Matt 9:10; Mark 2:15; and Luke 5:29) have the same note of location. On the other hand, the healing of the centurion's slave in Matt 8:5 and Luke 7:1 ff. takes place in different places in the two gospels. If we assume that the pericopae were self-contained originally and implied some lesson, or sought to convey a truth, then if a pericope could only be understood in the context of a whole passage, it is quite likely that some editing took place.

The spread of the Church's work among Gentiles also served to dictate the formation of the gospels. The diatribē was a well-known literary form (Luke's Acts has been thought by many to belong to this category). It is unfortunate that the word has such pejorative undertones in modern usage, for the Gr. diatribē meant "propaganda," or better, "essays to persuade." There were obviously urgent questions to be answered among Jews, such as, "If Jesus was the Messiah, then why did he suffer an ignominious death?" Greek converts would have to be shown why a divine figure, especially one called "God's Wisdom" (1 Cor 1:24), had allowed himself to undergo the torture and death normally reserved for criminals. The very length of the passion narratives in all four gospels has led many scholars to argue the existence at a very early stage of a kind of catechist's manual, which was used to provide tested and approved answers to such questions.

It has occasionally been said (notably by Papias as early as A.D. 130) that the gospels were committed to writing because the apostles had begun to die. This doesn't seem very plausible, however—the gospel of Luke was composed by a man who had not known the Lord at all, and his Acts suggests that he was writing in a time when most of the apostles were already dead. The suggestion has also been made that the writing of the gospel was encouraged as the expectation of an early parousia (a manifestation of the presence again in visible form of the Risen Lord) faded; hence the needs of posterity had to be considered. The expectation of the parousia, however drastically reinterpreted (as, for example, by Paul), never did fade completely, but it was to remain a part of the faith of the writers.

In the light of the interpretations current in popular and semi-popular literature, it is of capital importance to note the appeal of the gospel to the educated classes. There is enough evidence from pagan classical writers to show that libraries were not uncommon among educated people. Luke's two-part work of gospel and Acts is plainly addressed to a man who did not need to have allusions spelled out for him. Evidently, Luke's material, addressed as a kind of "apologia" to a Greek patron, deals with the relationship of Christianity (of which his patron has heard) to Judaism.

It has been suggested that the pattern of the four gospels is in some sense dictated by liturgical considerations, or that the framework went back to an original pattern that either reflected the Jewish synagogue lections and the Jewish feasts, or was ordered according to the demands of early Christian worship. This theory further maintains that it is possible to determine, from the gospels themselves, the patterns of readings used by the primitive Church. However, we have no contemporary information about the lectionary patterns of the first-century synagogue, and Justin Martyr's record that the "memoirs" of the apostles were read at the Eucharist might equally well be applied to their letters.

It may be asked how far early Christian theology has either distorted, or been responsible for the arrangement of, the material which we now have, collected in the four gospels. Occasionally, the question is asked in a way which suggests that the inquirer is thinking of theology in terms of the developed Christology of the councils of Nicaea (A.D. 325) or of Chalcedon (A.D. 451). In any discussion of the gospels, one must remember that "faith" for the writers of the New Testament meant trust in the mighty acts of God through Jesus, with all that these acts implied about the intervention of God promised in the Old Testament. This kind of theological outlook has been provided by the Qumran discoveries with a good deal of control evidence bearing on the New Testament. Theology has indeed determined the framework of the four gospels, in the sense that there has been massive concentration on the central events: the passion and crucifixion.

The gospels have interpreted the material as well. For all the differences in precise chronology, John and the other three gospels agree that the passion must be seen in the light of the commemoration of God's deliverance of his people in the Passover rite. And we must read the gospels remembering the OT way of treating history. The books of the Old Testament view the escape of Israel from Egypt as a mighty act of God's intervention (cf. Exod 14–15; Pss 114–115), though the ascertainable facts might suggest only a disorganized and fearful group making its way by moonlight across the Sea of Reeds. So with the crucifixion: to Roman soldiers it was a routine execution; to the priestly party an end to a sordid little disturbance; to Paul and the NT writers generally it was the instrument of man's freedom from bondage, an event that will have repercussions right into eternity. In United States history, the incident at Harpers Ferry centered around John Brown seemed minor at the time, but we have seen how its implications exploded; this is the case again and again in the Bible. It is important to beware of using the stick of "distortion" in order to beat the evangelists when no other evidence is available.

Occasionally, endings—and even beginnings—appear to have been lost, elided, or misplaced from many of the gospel stories. For example, Mark 1:29–31 has no apparent ending, and vs. 32 has been added to fit, while Mark 3:1–6 ends with an account of Jesus' enemies plotting against him—a circumstance which does not fit our notions of how the story should end (cf. 2:21–22, 11:23–24). When it is obvious that some of the stories have been rearranged or collected into blocks, with the original meanings perhaps lost in the change—or at any rate misplaced (cf. Matt 5:25 ff. and Luke 12:58 ff., and this commentary ad loc.)—it is well to remember that the writers' interest centered in the Lord's mighty works, and that teaching was secondary.

Though the use of OT text seems central to Matthew's concern—and we will have more to say about this below—it is important to note that in the final analysis no one reason governs the arrangement of Matthew's material. We can say only that Matthew appears to have been influenced most by the theological idea of fulfillment. Most important in the written gospels is the proclamation of God's declaration of himself and his will in his Messiah Jesus, crucified, risen, and glorified. Around such a proclamation, there is—as one should expect—a great deal of variation in emphasis. Mutual agreement in detail would be suspect; and this we do not have.

B

In view of the interest excited by the discovery of parts of a library at Nag Hammadi in Egypt, including what has come to be called the “Gospel of Thomas,” it is important to determine precisely what is, or is not, a canonical gospel. It is simplest to answer the question by means of a negative, and to delineate what is not a gospel. (At the same time, documents such as Thomas ought not to be rejected out of hand because they may conflict with what has already been declared to be canonical.)

As rooted in historical circumstance as the Apostles’ Creed shows the Christian faith to be (sub Pontio Pilato), we have every right to expect a written Christian source, with the oral sources embedded in it, to manifest an awareness of history, and to place Jesus both politically and religiously in the framework of the history and circumstances of his time. Any document, therefore, which claims to be a “gospel,” but which actually consists of teaching or exhortation which is wholly detached from the Jesus whom we know historically from the four canonical documents, is not a gospel in any recognized canonical sense.

In the light of what we know of developments after the recorded events of the four gospels and the Acts, it may be better to stress another very important and definitive matter, the passion of Jesus. Paul tells us plainly that the cross and all that it implied in the early preaching and teaching was abhorrent to Jew and Gentile alike (1 Cor 1:23–24). Many people who might have been regarded as promising material for the infant Church must for this reason have rejected Christianity, whether sophisticated Greek intellectuals or passionately nationalist Jews. The development of the Gnostic movements came to show very early that there were those who were offended by the concept of the deity trafficking with mortal flesh (cf. 1 John 4:1–7). Therefore a need arose to accommodate the scandal of incarnation and passion to some modes of dualist thought, and the whole of John’s first letter is witness to the fact that in spite of acute differences there was a common “proto-Gnostic” vocabulary in which debate could be conducted. We have already called attention to the very high proportion of the four gospels’ narrative devoted to the passion. Any Christian document (or any document purporting to be Christian) that, compared with the canonical documents, plays down the central element of the passion in Jesus’ life and ministry must be held suspect.

Paul stresses one theme more than any other in his letters: the supremacy of grace, that unmerited free relationship with God which he avows characterizes the man “in Christ.” Though Paul’s letters were written before the gospels, they nevertheless are theological interpreters of the oral tradition, and the apostle’s emphasis on the supremacy of grace is echoed by its emphasis in the canonical gospels. We know from Paul's letters to Corinth and to Colassae—not to mention the evidence of John's letters to other parts of Asia Minor—that the early Christians often were tempted to consider other parts of Christian doctrine more important. Plainly, there was a good deal of exaltation of human progress, human reason, human achievement, all at the expense of the primacy of grace. No warnings in our gospel traditions are more frequently given, or more sharply worded, than those which condemn boasting, however "spiritual." This concern with grace, then, is yet another criterion by which to judge anything that comes to us as presumed teaching from the lips of Jesus and his apostles.

Matthew constantly stresses the element of "fulfillment" (which we shall examine in Part IV of this Introduction), and all four gospels in varying ways and degrees (followed later by Acts) emphasize the ministry of Jesus as the consummation of the prophecy of the Old Testament. That is to say, the four gospels indissolubly link the Old Testament and the revelation in Jesus. It was this relationship between the ministry of Jesus and the Old Testament that caused Marcion's teaching (second century) to founder and be condemned. His teaching, like that of many later "biblical" heresiarchs, was founded on a desire to make a clear repudiation of the "God of the Old Testament," variously presented as a cruel or a creator-God (as distinct from the true God), but in all the varying interpretations someone wholly other than the Father of Jesus. Many Gnostic systems, beginning with the followers of Simon Magus and Nicholas (cf. Acts 8:10; Rev 2:7) in one way or another sought to make the creation of matter itself the work of a lesser deity, with which the true God would have had no alliance. Hence, it was emphatically necessary, in any of these attempts to interpret the New Testament, that a decisive break be made with the Old Testament; and this break between New and Old Testaments was another negative criterion which the Church applied in assessing material laying claim to apostolic authorship or authority.

Closely connected with this concern for the Old Testament as necessary preparation for the acceptance of God in Jesus was the Church's consciousness of herself as the people of a "new covenant." A look at any concordance will show the New Testament's emphasis upon the adjective "new": following the ministry of Jesus, there is a new creation, a new man, a new life, a new age, a new covenant—in fact, the last book in the New Testament asserts that all things are being made new. But nowhere does the New Testament claim that there is a new Israel, a new people of God: rather, the Church is the inheritor of ancient promises, direct descendant of the people of ancient Israel, heir to the covenants made with the patriarchs. A new covenant is established in the blood of the Messiah's cross, but all our documents (especially the tract called "the epistle to the Hebrews") insist that this new covenant, sealed in blood as was the Exodus covenant, is essentially one with the older history of Israel, a new covenant for which that older history was a preparation. For any understanding of the NT faith this insistence on "covenant" is vital; it also explains the exclusion of much material which the Church refused to recognize as canonical scripture. Thanks to the work first of G. E. Mendenhall, followed more recently by H. B. Huffmon, it is clear that "covenant" in the Old Testament (and, pari passu, in the New Testament) describes an arrangement in which a sovereign Lord lays down the conditions under which he is prepared to accept the vassalage of, and afford protection to, those who seek his aid and wish to enter his dominion. Moreover, as Huffmon has pointed out, the Hebrew word "to know" is often to be interpreted in this convenantal sense, as demonstrating that God acknowledged, or "recognized," Israel as his, and Israel acknowledged the sovereignty of her Lord. From man's side—that is, from Israel's side, in this context—no conditions could be attached to this acknowledgment, for all the conditions were laid down by her superior, the Lord.

In this concept of "covenant," we have another test for any material which seeks, or sought, to be an authentic "gospel" handed down by an apostle. Again and again the Pauline letters—themselves a commentary, in a very real sense, on the Gospel proclamation—emphasized that man is saved only through the sacrifice of Christ consummated in blood; anything seeking to make this basis for salvation conditional is false to the Gospel. According to Paul, faith, that humble acceptance of what God has done for man in Jesus, is itself a gift of God; any pretense that human wisdom or any other achievement can substitute for faith is founded simply on human pride and arrogance. There are many indications in Paul's letters to Corinth and Colossae, and in the first Johannine letter, that certain people claimed a kind of esoteric wisdom or access to divine secrets denied to the generality of Christians. No doubt this kind of pseudosophistication must have been very disruptive to the life of the Christian community, and at the same time threatening to that direct dependence upon God which "covenant" implies. Indeed, this kind of attitude to "lesser breeds without the law" could, and frequently did, lead to an assumption of superiority in the sphere of moral conduct too. The apostle Paul is our principal witness to this phenomenon in early Christian experience.

At this stage we must briefly examine the background of the Gospel of Thomas, and some of the reasons which led the Church to reject, almost instinctively, such material as at best speculative, at worst heretical. The library (for such it appears to have been) of manuscripts discovered at Nag Hammadi (300 miles south of Cairo, 150 miles north of Aswan, near the ancient Greek monastery of Chenoboskion) included this “Gospel of Thomas.” Works that begin with some formula such as “These are the secret words which the living Jesus spoke” are usually late, and are associated with a specific kind of literature. But the Gospel of Thomas cannot be placed so neatly into such a category. It consists of 114 sayings attributed to Jesus, with very few dialogues, no narrative, and a bare minimum of incident. Furthermore, there are no links between the paragraphs. The discovery is important because collections of sayings (“logia”) are often thought to have existed before there was any attempt to set down a consistent gospel narrative. (We know, for example, from Acts 20:35, of at least one saying of Jesus that is not included in the four canonical gospels.) The age which produced Thomas is a little hard to determine, but the Coptic agrees with some third-century Greek fragments from Oxyrhynchus, which proves that the Gospel of Thomas goes back to the third century, and maybe earlier.

Opinions in the scholarly world about the document have varied. R. M. Grant (whose work is listed at the end of this part) dismisses Thomas as an example of how Gnostics understood, or rather misunderstood, Jesus and his Gospel. For Grant, the whole compilation witnesses to the very early perversion of the Christian proclamation. Professor G. Quispel, on the other hand, prefers to see in Thomas an independent and early gospel tradition, which even has traces of an Aramaic source-tradition lying behind it. Between these two positions, which might reasonably be described as the two poles of scholarly argument, Bertil Gärtner has it that Thomas does indeed contain some old material, but so overlaid with later material that it is hard to know how to define and limit it. If this section is not to become far too long and technical, we must content ourselves with merely giving some of the more significant links between Thomas and the canonical gospels, pointing out where the significant differences lie.

There is a good deal of material in Thomas that is very reminiscent of the canonical gospels; equally, there is material that is completely characteristic of Gnostic teaching, in its emphasis on salvation through knowledge, in its contempt for the body, and in its use of vocabulary with Gnostic shades of meaning (“light,” “unity,” “rest”).

Occasionally, there are passages in Thomas which are very close to the synoptic material, passages which could even be abridged versions of that material. There are parallel passages which are longer than their synoptic counterparts, and these might be expansions, or material from which the canonical material has been abridged. There can be no certainty on this point. In addition, there are wholly new parables, along with some sayings which seem to be composed of a regrouping of canonical material. For example, the parable of the Sower (Thomas ix) has features which, Quispel argues, are primitive, while the parable of the Tares (Thomas lvii) looks very much like an imperfectly remembered version of Matt 13:24 ff. (the dialogue between the lord and the servants has been cut to one speech in Thomas).

There is one feature in Thomas which is interesting in that it bears out the contentions of C. H. Dodd, made as long ago as 1935 (The Parables of the Kingdom, London: Nisbet; New York: Scribner). This is Thomas lxxv, the parable of the Wicked Husbandmen (Mark 12:1 ff., and parallels). In the Thomas version, there are but two servants and a son—which was the original basis of the story, according to Dodd's theory. This kind of feature in Thomas argues for an early origin, and perhaps earlier than the tradition enshrined in our synoptic gospels. There is, of course, no proof of this, and we ought to beware of subscribing automatically to the suggestion that what is shorter must necessarily be more primitive.

Expansion of the parable material in the canonical gospels is a far more difficult consideration. Thomas lxiv (Matt 22:5 ff.) provides us with a moral ending far more concerned with good manners than with response to the eschatological hope of the early Church, in favor of more mundane considerations in a continuing community. But so stated this makes the gospel material far too static and rigid, incapable of adaptation to the changing needs of the community as it moved into and faced the challenges of a Greek environment. Jeremias has pointed out that within the synoptic gospels there was an observable movement from eschatology to other interpretations in the parables. The confrontation of Israel with Jesus' assertion that the times were fulfilled in him is the keynote of most of the parables as they were originally delivered, but this kind of confrontation would have to be reinterpreted for those who were outside the covenants when the Gospel first came to them.

At the same time, there are interpretations of synoptic parables in Thomas, or lessons read into them, which can only be described as pale and insignificant beside the accounts which the canonical gospels provide. Such, for instance, is the treatment accorded to Matthew's "Agree with your opponent quickly" (Matt 5:25): in Thomas this becomes an injunction not to go to law. Here again a note of caution is necessary. We have Paul on record as expressing surprise that Christians in Corinth found it possible to reconcile Christian faith with litigation against their fellows (1 Cor 6:1–8); and it is at least possible that what we have in Thomas is a simple statement which may owe more to Paul than to Matt 5:25.

There is material in Thomas which could be looking back to sayings from the ministry of Jesus which have not otherwise been preserved—for example, the parables of the Lost Meal and the Attacker proving his strength (Thomas xcvi). The first of these may be genuine, as several scholars have argued; the second is far more uncertain, involving a man trying his strength against a fortified wall with no weapon but a sword. By and large, however, although we cannot with certainty say that the reinterpreted material in Thomas is Gnostic, there is reason to believe that his reinterpretation would have been acceptable to Christians who were in touch with Gnostic thinking. Thomas xlviii has a saying about two people agreeing together in one house, and then saying “Be moved” to a mountain: as a result of their agreement, the mountain is moved. Though this looks at first sight like a combination of two sayings (Matt 18:19 and Mark 11:23), the meaning provided by the combination in Thomas is radically different from that of the synoptic gospels. There is a saying about agreement between two people, but it results in our canonical sources in a promise of answered prayer, while the removal of a mountain (in Luke a sycamore tree) is the reward of faith, and has nothing to do with unity between two people. It would be hazardous to impose theological concepts on the material in Thomas, where we have as yet no controlling parallel evidence. Nevertheless, Thomas shows an interest in “unity”—a common Gnostic interest—and has nothing to say about faith nor of prayer.

There are inconsistencies in Thomas which suggest that it may have been written during the period when incipient Gnosticism was fast becoming consciously opposed to the Christian majority view, while still using large amounts of NT material. Knowledge is evidently for Thomas the one desirable goal, the one inestimable treasure. There are parables in our canonical sources which speak of the Kingdom as a treasure to be found: in Thomas (cf. cxi) the goal of search is self-knowledge. We must suppose that this was a major preoccupation of the writer (or compiler); the Kingdom is to be found in self-awareness (cf. xviii, xlix, l, lxvii, lxxxiv). If the writer is uninterested in the facts of Jesus’ life, it is rash to suggest that he is saying that salvation is merely to be possessed by knowing a secret, or that the significance of Jesus lies precisely in his being custodian of secrets now known to men. But it is true that this enigmatic collection of sayings seems to suggest that there is in all men the truth of their own being, which can be revealed by learning the meaning of the “secret words.” The life hidden within man must be sought, often at the cost of suffering and rejection, but the essential point to notice in Thomas is that this life is already in man—there is no marred image to be restored, no radical change in man’s being (repentance) necessary as a prerequisite for God’s action upon the soul. This life (variously described—cf. xxiv, l, lxi, lxxvii, xc and also iv, xii, lxxiv, cviii) is dormant in man and must be sought (ii, xxiv, xcii, xciv), if necessary through suffering (lviii, lxviii, lxix) and rejection of the material world (lxxx). It is difficult to escape the conclusion that what we have here is a scheme of salvation which—to use the modern phrase—is a “do-it-yourself” challenge to human striving.

And if there is no interest in the life and ministry of Jesus, there is an equal lack of interest in a future Event at the end of Time. There is no future Kingdom, such as we find in Matthew; rather, for Thomas (iii) the kingdom is “within you, and it is without you: if you know yourselves, you will be known.” Similarly, the “rest” of the dead (li) has come already, but “you know it not.” Though there are two sayings in Thomas which suggest (xxi, ciii) a need for awareness of an approaching time of judgment, they must be balanced against sayings which declare (e.g., xviii, lxvii) that the Kingdom will not come as an act of God in the affairs of men, but may be discovered by self-knowledge, by self-discipline.

Another feature should be noticed here: the suggestion in Thomas is that the Old Covenant was a spurious revelation of God’s purposes. Circumcision is rejected (liii), prophecy is repudiated (lii), and Jesus is represented as attacking the threefold duty of prayer, fasting, and the giving of alms (vi, xiv, civ). It is just possible the Gospel of Thomas contains, along with all known Gnostic writings, elements of anti-Jewish polemic. Considering the New Testament’s unanimity about the continuity of the New Covenant from the Old, and in light, too, of the controversy which centered around Marcion’s editing of the New Testament scriptures, these negative elements in Thomas are very serious.

We do not intend to draw any particular conclusions about the origin, provenance, date, or purpose of Thomas, since we are at this stage without adequate parallel material or evidence. It might, however, be appropriate to give a brief list of the most commonly held views about the Gospel of Thomas:

(1) Thomas was composed by means of excision and conflation from two existing documents, a Jewish-Christian gospel (“according to the Hebrews”) which was known to Jerome and is now lost, and another, far more Gnostic document (“according to the Egyptians”) known to Clement of Alexandria and also lost.

(2) Thomas was a thoroughly polemical work, composed by a Gnostic, containing enough orthodox Christian material to secure an audience, but nevertheless written with a single religious and theological end—namely, the Gnostic one.

(3) It is possible to hold, as do some accomplished scholars in this field, that Thomas was compiled at a time when rigid distinctions had not yet been drawn between what was orthodox and what was specifically and undeniably Gnostic.

In this view, Thomas is a rather haphazard collection of sayings—some imperfectly remembered, some interpreted by homiletics, some deliberately gnosticizing, and some written with the aim of encouraging spiritual perfection.

There are features in Thomas which argue against its being a unified collection of sayings. In many places we have good reason to think that the author or compiler was in fact relying on oral tradition, however much this may have been colored by his own interpretations or embellished from sources already departing from strictly NT standards. Joseph A. Fitzmyer (whose important contribution to the study of Thomas is listed below) argues that Thomas' work can be correctly called a gospel on the grounds that a collection of sayings would have been accepted without question by the early Church as being a proclamation of the good news in some form. Fitzmyer's contention is a useful reminder that we often assume far too easily that Christian faith in the century following the apostolic period had been already so far codified that there was a fully recognizable, organized, and coherent body of teaching which could be called "orthodox"; and that, correspondingly, beyond the periphery of this body of teaching there was an equally recognizable Gnosticism. This assumption makes the development of Christian belief far too simple. Not only did oral tradition, with an attendant danger of speculative interpretation being added to it, last longer in some places than in others, but even the written sources themselves were in a fluid state. By the middle decades of the second century, men had begun to rally round the canonical gospels as we have them now, and the position of the episcopate as the guardian of that tradition was becoming established. In this early period there was a large area of controversy over the admissibility of parts of our present New Testament (especially the Apocalypse), and some material of pre-apostolic date was often used as though it was canonical Scripture. In such circumstances, it was comparatively easy for anyone with a cause to serve and a case to plead to utilize oral tradition, written sources, or homiletic material to further his own ends. We need not suppose that this was always done with evil intent: the asceticism of the Gospel of Thomas in regard to property, sexual morality, and worldly involvement has many parallels with the canonical NT, and it is perhaps no accident that the document came to light near a settlement of early Christian hermits.

Christology, and the later definitions of the councils, could not have become the momentous matters they were in the third and fourth centuries without the intervention of the technical terms of Greek philosophy. But the process of codification and definition was immeasurably helped by an awareness on the part of the Church of the need to determine what was canonical Scripture, and what was interpretation.

SHORT BIBLIOGRAPHY ON THE GOSPEL OF THOMAS

- Doresse, J. R. Les Paroles de Jésus. Paris: Librairie Plon, 1959.
- Fitzmyer, J. A. "The Oxyrhynchus Logoi of Jesus and the Coptic Gospel according to Thomas." TS 20 \(1959\), 505–60.
- Gärtner, Bertil. The Theology of the Gospel according to Thomas. Translated by Eric J. Sharpe. New York: Harper / London: Collins, 1961.
- Grant, R. McQ., and D. N. Freedman. The Secret Sayings of Jesus: The Gnostic Gospel of Thomas. With a translation of the gospel by William R. Schoedel. New York: Doubleday, 1960.
- Guillaumont, Antoine, H.-C. Puech, G. Quispel, W. Till, and Yassah 'abd Al Masih. The Gospel according to Thomas. New York: Harper / London: Collins, 1959.
- Montefiore, Hugh, and H. E. W. Turner. Thomas and the Evangelists. Naperville, Ill.: A. R. Allenson / London: SCM, 1962.
- Unnik, W. C. van. Newly Discovered Gnostic Writings: A Preliminary Survey of the Nag-Hammadi Find. Translated from the Dutch by H. Hoskins. Naperville, Ill.: A. R. Allenson / London: SCM, 1960.
- Wilson, R. McL. Studies in the Gospel of Thomas. London: Mowbray, 1960.

II. MATTHEW IN RELATION TO THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

What has come to be known as the “synoptic problem,” studied with great determination during this century, concerns the relationships which may be found among the first three gospels, with the implied suggestion that it may be possible through such study to arrive at more or less firm conclusions about the temporal order of the three documents.

It is generally agreed that: (1) there was a period of oral transmission, in which stories about Jesus, incidents from his life and ministry, and collections of examples of his teaching were passed on by teachers to members of the community; and (2) it was the passion narrative that first took definite form as a result of constant repetition (though it is less generally held that this was the first part of our present gospels to have reached definitive form in writing). It is sometimes asserted, on the basis of what appear to have been collections of a similar character at Qumran, that the first Christians early developed a series of “testimonies” from Scripture (the Old Testament) which were thought to bear directly or indirectly on the life and ministry of Jesus the Messiah.

The commitment to writing of the sayings of Jesus and of reminiscences about his work may not have been urgent while the apostles were alive and Jesus’ early return was expected by many; but it was not long after this that the pressures for a permanent record began to grow. Conditions in Palestine in the middle years of the first century were marked by years of considerable crisis (to put it mildly), and large numbers of people (including Christians who were invaluable in keeping the memory of Christ alive) were already leaving the country. Simultaneously there was a rapid spread of false teaching about Jesus, his person and his work. Had Simon Magus been a minor figure, and his influence small, it is unlikely that Luke would have wasted so much time and costly writing material on setting the record straight. Apart from the testimony of the early Fathers about the malign influence of Simon, we have the witness of the Johannine letters to the emergence of a threat to the integrity of the Gospel—docetism, the claim that the Word of God, the Logos, in Jesus only appeared (Gr. dokein, “to appear”) to be in human flesh. This clothing of the Logos in a make-believe body, in the (deceptive) person of Jesus, was not without its attraction to the Greek mind, whose Hellenistic gods were only too human and often smaller than life-size. Any serious-minded person might be forgiven for scoffing at yet another manifestation of divinity in human form, especially one disgracefully executed. Docetism, this denial that the Word of God had truly appeared in human form, was also a theological refuge for many Jews who were attracted to Christianity, but to whom the notion of a crucified Messiah was abhorrent. In time, this teaching, along with many other features, was to find classic expression in what has come to be called “gnosticism.” Whatever may eventually prove to have generated the complex of movements and ideas that is loosely titled Gnosticism, it could never have become more than one minor field of speculation among many, had not the Gospel asserted that in Jesus a divine-human figure had entered the realm of man and the field of human history. The early Christian community’s awareness of the dangers inherent in movements like the one provoked by the religious genius of Simon Magus was enough to guarantee their careful attention to source material for a long time to come.

Oral Tradition

Though the role of oral tradition can be exaggerated, it seems generally true that the memory of words and stories is better in the ancient East than in the modern West. Yet even in the West today, anyone familiar with oral folklore and often-repeated rural tales in remote country villages will testify to the resistance of such stories to erosion or accretion. There are normally too many interested and informed auditors for embellishment to pass unnoticed. One of us was brought up in circumstances where the nightly retelling of old village stories, some more than two centuries old, was commonplace; he can testify to rigid controls on the intrusion of extraneous matter—“You’ve left that bit out ... you’ve no right to add that....” Jesus himself, like most early rabbis, relied on the tenacity of oral tradition, especially in the parables.⁴ Some of the differences in the gospel narrative are best understood as small—and normally unimportant—details which differed in the memories of those who passed on the stories. (For example, James and John’s mother asks a favor in Matt 20:20 ff., where Mark 10:35 ff. has the disciples themselves ask; Mark 11:33 is in direct discourse, in contrast with Matthew’s reported speech in 21:27.) There are, however, some details of agreement or difference which can best be understood as based on oral tradition: the gospels agree and disagree on points which we find unimportant, and differ where we expect unanimity; for example, in the accounts of the feeding of the multitudes, the texts differ about the kind of basket used to gather fragments, and, more seriously, the gospels do not agree about the nature of the resurrection-body of Jesus.

A Common Literary Source?

Matthew and Mark agree against Luke on several occasions, and Mark and Luke agree against Matthew on others. Either Matthew or Luke, it would appear, is following Mark on one occasion or another, in detail. The common order of events appears to be that of Mark, though Matthew deserts this order far more frequently than does Luke, in order to group his special material under subject headings. There is a common framework of incidents—John the Baptist, his preaching and mission, the baptism of Jesus, the temptations, the call of the twelve, the Galilean ministry, healings leading to controversy, Peter's confession, predictions of the passion, the final journey to Jerusalem, the passion and the resurrection—and this framework seems to come from Mark.

From this, it was possible for some early scholars to conclude that Mark was an abbreviation of Matthew (or Luke?), which was generally the view of the early Church, and especially of Augustine. In consequence of that view, Mark was seldom used in the early Church. It is now accepted by a great many NT scholars that Mark provided Matthew and Luke with a common source, to which they added their own special traditions, along with the traditions which they found (according to this theory) in another body of tradition ("Q," from the German Quelle, "source"). It cannot be too strongly emphasized that this theory is not the assured result of critical scholarship, and some recent critics have pleaded for the priority of Matthew's gospel or even Luke's, both in time and in source material. Moreover, it is only necessary (as some have suggested) to posit that Luke had read Matthew before compiling his gospel—and not the other way around—to dispense with the mysterious "Q" altogether. (A note appended to this section attempts to take a fresh look at the "Q" hypothesis.) Under the "four-document hypothesis," it has generally been assumed that Luke and Matthew both had independent access to the material found in the "Q" tradition and wrote independently of each other. This thesis was brilliantly criticized by Austin M. Farrer, in his contribution "On Dispensing with Q" to Studies in the Gospels: Essays in Memory of R. H. Lightfoot, ed. D. E. Nineham, Naperville, Ill.: A. R. Allenson / Oxford: Blackwell, 1955.

Mark has only about fifty verses that are unique: 1:13, 2:2, 3:20–21, 4:26–29, 5:3–6, 7:1–4, 31–37, 8:22–26, 9:49, 12:29, 14:51–52. It has been suggested that there was an "earlier edition of Mark," of which our present gospel is an expansion. The difficulty with this theory is that it is hard to separate expansions, or insertions, and there are unique details in Mark which have every indication of being a part of the original. (It is Mark, for example, who tells us that Jesus was asleep during the storm on the lake, who fixes the time of the feeding of the five thousand by informing us that there was green grass—i.e., it was spring—and who provides us with the family background of Simon of Cyrene, presumably because these men were known to his readers.)

To complicate the precise relationship among the documents as we know them, there is what is termed the Great Omission in Luke (i.e., the narrative covered by Mark 6:45–8:26), which occupies Luke 9:51–18:14. In this material, Luke omits all the material covered by the Markan tradition, from the feeding of the five thousand to Peter’s confession. Furthermore, this Lukan material is set in a kind of travel diary recording a very odd route—a route so strange that it provides commentators with much occasion for debate. Jesus is seen as traveling outside Galilee, and the only Markan note to assist us here is the evangelist’s remark that Jesus left Galilee in order to be away from Herod Antipas, since the hour of decision had not yet been reached. All this raises questions: Did Luke omit this Markan material because the healings in Mark 6:45–8:26 were paralleled elsewhere in his own tradition? Or does Luke’s omission mean that he did not know the Markan tradition? Certainly it is simpler to assume the latter rather than to contend that, once Mark’s gospel had been written, it was a necessary vade mecum for the other two evangelists. Whatever may be the answer to this question, it is true that Matthew, unlike Luke, appears to follow the Markan framework at this point in his narrative.

Three commonly cited arguments in favor of Markan priority are: (1) the retention of three Aramaic expressions, as against only one in Matthew, (2) an almost unconscious change in the later gospels to a more reverential attitude toward Jesus, and (3) the fact that only once in Mark is Jesus addressed as “Lord.” None of these arguments is very strong, however, since the characteristics used in (1) and (3) might be accounted for by the audience to whom the gospel was addressed, and (2) might indicate (on the part of later writers) a more leisured composition of their material. Moreover, though the supply of eyewitnesses may have been small when the oral tradition was committed to writing, there was undoubtedly disagreement over details in the tradition, with all sides clamoring for pride of place: Markan priority does not solve the question of dependence—it merely makes an assertion about temporal priority. Care in the assessment of oral tradition, given a restricted number of reliable eyewitnesses, would almost certainly produce some degree of agreement, both with regard to chronology and to the way in which blocks of narrative were put down.

The more critically the material in the three synoptic gospels is examined, the harder it is to determine precisely what—if any—dependence there was of Matthew and Luke on Mark, or in what way—if at all—Matthew or Luke were dependent on each other. There are, for example, twenty agreements of a verbal character between Matthew and Luke against Mark. Were Matthew and Luke working independently, and not using Mark, at these points? The word “agreements” is overdrawn, for there are variant readings between Matthew and Luke, even when they coincide against Mark. The tendency in copying is to assimilate—and it would be a bold man who went on record as preferring Matthew or Luke in a secondary role. (Some of the agreements of Matthew and Luke against Mark: Matt 17:17 and Luke 9:41=Mark 9:19; Matt 13:10 and Luke 8:9=Mark 4:11; Matt 9:20 and Luke 8:44=Mark 5:27; Matt 14:1 and Luke 9:7=Mark 6:14; Matt 26:68 and Luke 22:63=Mark 14:65; Matt 27:40 and Luke 23:35= Mark 15:30.)

Both Matthew and Luke have material peculiar to themselves, notably the nativity narratives (where each is plainly independent of the other’s tradition). There are, however, sayings and incidents common to both evangelists but not found in Mark. It has been held by many that we have here a common “source,” Q (referred to above), which accounts for about two hundred verses common to Matthew and Luke. There is, however, no hard evidence for this assumption other than the literary desk-work of continental scholars who may (or may not) have been acquainted with the manner in which oral tradition, for all its diffusion among various groups, can effectively and consistently preserve a story. No doubt “Q” is a useful kind of symbol, provided we remember that it is only a symbol, and not the name of an exactly determined, homogeneous body of tradition. “Q” is useful, for example, in categorizing sayings of Jesus that exist in doublets in Luke, in one instance in a Markan context (e.g., Luke 11:33=Luke 8:16; Luke 12:8=Luke 9:23), and in the other in a non-Markan context but an argument for a single body of tradition drawn upon by both Matthew and Luke is difficult to sustain.

The two hundred verses which comprise the non-Markan material common to both Matthew and Luke consist of sayings of Jesus, short discourses, an account of John the Baptist’s mission and preaching, and the story of the baptism and temptations of Jesus. Scholars who have been most vigorous in their championship of “Q” are not agreed as to whether this material originally contained a passion narrative. This non-Markan material contains elements that may have been collected in convenient “testimony” form at an early stage, in order to answer specific questions Christians might be presumed to have asked. The only miracle contained in this material is, significantly, the healing of the centurion’s servant—which may indeed have provided a stock answer to questions about Jesus’ attitude to Gentiles. This “Q” material too has a good deal of information on John the Baptist, his preaching, and—again significantly—the account of the messengers from John in prison, leading to Jesus' eulogy of John, which would have been of great interest to former followers of the Baptist.

But a far more important question is connected with this "Q" block of tradition than that of priority, or possible use by Matthew and Luke independently. What light does this material shed upon Jesus' own account of what he had come to do, upon his own understanding of his ministry? We know something from Acts of the content of the primitive Christian community's preaching, but was this an unwarranted series of inferences from poorly understood facts? The record of the sayings of Jesus in the "Q" material is clear: the primitive teaching begins with the ministry of John, whom Jesus (in this material) regards as standing at a mid-point in a crisis of the history of Israel—belonging to the old order, yet able to see the advent of a time of fulfillment. After John's ministry, there is something wholly new, but still conceived in OT terms: Jesus has a "baptism to be baptized with" before his mission to send fire upon the earth can be accomplished (Luke 12:49). Jesus has his death and passion already in view in this tradition, and it is interpreted as a "day of the Lord" (cf. Luke 16:16) and a day of the outpouring of the Spirit. Even allowing for the massive insights of Paul, there is no warrant for the once-popular liberalism intended to drive a wedge between the (alleged) simplicity of the teaching of Jesus and the (again alleged) later Greek sophistications of Paul.

Whatever may be the truth of the matter with regard to the Q-tradition, there are references in the New Testament to collections of sayings (cf. 1 Thess 4:5—Thessalonians may be the earliest Pauline letter—and 1 Cor 7, where Paul makes a careful distinction between the teaching of Jesus and other, non-canonical teaching). The "Q" theory as a source-hypothesis is not as popular now as it once was, and it is impossible to reconstruct "Q" as a document. There may well have been a number of "little gospels," using OT texts and allusions, as indeed there are certainly references and allusions to such texts in oral teaching in the time of the apostles. There may equally well have been fairly standardized collections of testimonies and stories, sayings and reminiscences, for purposes of missionary work. We know from Clement of Alexandria (ca. A.D. 200) that there was a good deal of fluidity in the state of the source material, even as late as the beginning of the second century. He quotes a saying as though it belonged to canonical Scripture, and on another occasion gives the same saying in a different form, attributing it to the "Gospel to the Hebrews" (the saying is now known to us from the Gospel of Thomas—lxxx 15–19—and the Oxyrhynchus papyri—Pap. Ox. 654b). On the other hand, there is the testimony of Irenaeus of Lyon (130?–?202) in his Adversus Haereses (I. 1. 15) that the Valentinians (a Gnostic sect) were guilty of conflating and even altering canonical material. Sayings, or collections of sayings, may have flourished for some time, but our present four canonical gospels reached their present status very early and it was against these four documents that the authenticity of sayings was judged. The fact that only four gospels are known to us (as noted earlier, Jerome was acquainted with the Gospel to the Hebrews, but this is now lost to us) may emphasize the fact that conditions in first-century Palestine were such that firsthand witnesses were few.

The supposition of an original gospel in Hebrew or Aramaic makes the problem of the relations among the synoptic gospels far more susceptible to rational explanation. The suggestion has been made, and recently repeated, that such an Aramaic or Hebrew source lies behind all our gospel traditions. If such a theory turns out to be true, the entire discussion of who depended on whom will be irrelevant. What does appear to emerge from a fresh examination of the evidence, in the light of conditions known to have existed in Palestine and the Near East in the first century, is that the oral tradition became relatively fixed at a very early stage, while the chronology of Jesus' ministry was paid little mind.

With all this in view, we might turn to the words of Papias (bishop of Hierapolis, ca. 130) as they were recorded by Eusebius of Caesarea (bishop of that city, ca. 320) in his Historia Ecclesiastica (III. 39). Papias is reported to have written:

The Elder used to say this also: Mark became the interpreter of Peter and he wrote down accurately, but not in order, as much as he (Peter) related of the sayings and doings of Christ. For he was not a hearer or a follower of the Lord, but afterwards, as I said, of Peter, who adapted his teachings to the needs of the moment and did not make an ordered exposition of the sayings of the Lord. And so Mark made no mistake when he thus wrote down some things as he related them; for he made it his special care to omit nothing of what he heard, and to make no false statement therein.... So then Matthew recorded the sayings [Gr. logia, which can mean "discourses"] in the Hebrew tongue, and each interpreted them to the best of his ability.

Papias, whom Eusebius first dismisses as a man of "weak intellect" and then later reconsiders, is reported by Eusebius to say that he took very great care to discover from those who had known the disciples, and especially from John the Elder⁵ precisely what each "living and abiding voice" had to say of the acts and words of Jesus. Perhaps bemused by Eusebius' first verdict on Papias, perhaps for other preferred reasons, NT scholars have dismissed the testimony of Papias nearly out of hand. Papias had, however, one inestimable benefit denied to his denigrators—he happened to live closer in time and place to centers of Christian missionary activity, to people who had heard the disciples, and to Jesus himself. It was fashionable at one time to qualify the testimony of Irenaeus of Lyon against the Gnostics with the suggestion that he was too biased an observer to be heard uncritically; now the discoveries at Chenoboskion in Egypt have materially confirmed all that the good man said. Irenaeus, whom we now know to have been careful about his sources, evidently believed the work of Papias bore out his own received traditions—and Irenaeus had been a close follower of Ignatius of Antioch, who had known the Apostle John.

All in all, if we allow due weight to the testimony of Papias—and of those who came after him—and if also we posit an original block of Hebrew/Aramaic tradition, or even an original Aramaic collection of sayings and reminiscences about Jesus, then some problems regarding the sources of our gospels become at once clearer and simpler. Certainly Papias' description deals faithfully with the very disjointed and almost breathless character of Mark's gospel. The various episodes, often strung together with the Gr. euthus ("immediately"), seldom identified by chronological notes, do indeed give the impression of being self-contained homiletic notes, faithfully drawn from the oral tradition, with details which betray the hand of a participant in the events (for example, "green" grass at the feeding of the five thousand), but with little attempt to present the kind of consistent narrative we might have looked for in a biography. Readiness to admit the evidence of Papias agrees with C. C. Torrey's view that there is an Aramaic/Hebrew original behind both Matthew and Mark. Moreover, this view is consistent with Streeter's account of what Luke did with Mark—that is, throughout his gospel, Luke alternates large blocks of Markan and non-Markan material, careless about fitting his own tradition into a Markan framework or chronology (cf. B. H. Streeter, The Four Gospels [London: Macmillan, 1924], pp. 165 ff.). However, this does not necessarily assume that Luke had access to Mark as he compiled his gospel, for Streeter's "alternate-block" thesis could allow for Luke's treating an Aramaic/Hebrew gospel just as easily.⁶

There is more to be said in favor of an original Aramaic/Hebrew gospel than this, however. Again we refer to Streeter: he described Mark's gospel as a "... shorthand account by an impromptu speaker, with all the repetitions, redundancies and digressions which are characteristic of living speech. And it seems to me most probable that his Gospel, like Paul's epistles, was taken down from rapid dictation by word of mouth" (p. 163). This is, in effect, no more and no less than was indicated by Papias.

But it is a wholly different matter to suggest that Mark's gospel lies behind Matthew—or Luke, for that matter. For this implies that a Roman gospel, mainly composed in the fashion indicated by Streeter, and largely homiletic in character, was the germ of wholly fresh Palestinian traditions. This we find wholly unacceptable, for it nearly compels the belief that, rumor having reached Jewish Christians of a collected volume of sayings and deeds of Jesus, a reception committee made haste to meet the boats as they arrived from Italy, in the hope that Mark's work would finally enable them to write down the Palestinian oral tradition. Such a theory ignores the extreme tenacity of oral tradition in rural areas, which as we have seen exists even in twentieth-century America. (It was, after all, in this century that some descendants of Scottish immigrants in North Carolina were discovered to have preserved a pre-Reformation hymn to the Blessed Virgin Mary.) Whole phrases, or series of words, appear in Matthew and Luke to parallel exactly words and phrases in Mark; but this is not positive proof that Matthew and Luke depended on Mark—though it is more than likely that both evangelists were glad to have independent (and, at one remove, apostolic) confirmation of their own traditions.

It has sometimes been urged that the “sayings” which Papias asserts were compiled by Matthew in Hebrew are best understood as being related to the material which is commonly designated “Q.” It is not in the least necessary, we think, to suppose that there was a single block of material on which both Matthew and Luke drew. The vitality of oral tradition, the varying emphases cherished by various groups in the early Church, the care that was taken (to which the Johannine letters bear witness) to ascertain from reliable sources precisely what did happen in the public and private ministry of Jesus, the urgent need felt to preserve Christ's teachings in writing in the face of the difficult times—all these will have led to more than one tentative collection of oral material.

Far too much work on the synoptic problem has been done on the tacit assumption that the making and dissemination of books in the first century was almost akin to the limited, hand-set editions published by private presses in our own time. We may underrate the literacy of the first century—and most people do—but there is enough classical evidence to show that the dissemination of written material was a considerable project even if the author was fortunate enough to have a wealthy private patron. Luke's Theophilus may have been such a patron, and Mark may have been a middle-class Jew with property, but the early Church in general was not made up of wealthy men who could assist in publishing. In any case, if we are to assume (with most NT commentators) that Mark's gospel was written ca. 65, its date almost rules it out as a serious contender for being the basis of (at least two) other Palestinian gospels. Traditions, wherever and under whatever conditions they were collected and committed to writing, will have been most carefully husbanded. Simple explanations may yet prove correct, and Mark and Matthew may represent two quite separate collections of tradition; it is only a failure to take tradition itself seriously that has driven many to assume the existence of almost a multitude of copies of written gospels on which the evangelists could exercise scissors and paste.⁷

III. THE “Q” MATERIAL IN THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

One of the difficulties facing a NT student is that of determining precisely how scholars use the term “Q” for the underlying source(s) of all material common to Matthew and Luke but not found in Mark. Some writers have concluded that this common material was at one time or another in a single document, which can be reconstructed with a fair degree of accuracy. Other writers use the term “Q” for this material without ever stating what kind of source(s) they suppose Matthew and Luke to have used. The hypothesis that Matthew and Luke drew their common non-Markan material from a single document seems far too narrow to us. All that can be said with any safety is that behind the “Q” material there appears to lie gospel material which may belong to many different traditions, written and oral. The material as it is found in our present gospels of Matthew and Luke overlaps, and verbal identity is not as common as the documentary hypothesis might lead us to think. There has been a good deal of rearrangement, regardless of whether Matthew or Luke was written first.

When Matthew and Luke are following the same historical framework as Mark, the degree of agreement between them is high, notably when they are reporting the words of Jesus. This near identification when reporting the sayings is what we would have expected, and in some cases the agreement is so close that we may reasonably posit a common source.

In some cases, however, the agreement is so slight that, though we may suppose Matthew and Luke to have had access to different versions of the same tradition, the visible modifications in the material are puzzling. Assuming the homogeneity of “Q,” the changes are anomalous and only cease to be odd when we rid our minds of the suggestion that “Q” is a single source. It is worth examining some of the “changes” in “Q,” if that is what they are.

(1) Luke 6:29 has a story of the theft of a coat, which Matthew changes (Matt 5:40) into a lawsuit. Is it not far easier to suggest an independent tradition of the saying rather than an alteration? Jesus, in common with all teachers, must often have used the same illustrations, and it would be unusual not to find in the gospels stories that were similar in wording, but different in meaning.

(2) In Luke 11:44 Jesus charges some with being like graves. The same charge is made in Matthew 23:27, but with different emphasis, and a totally different didactic purpose. Streeter (The Four Gospels, pp. 253 ff.) suggested that the form of these stories in Matthew has been conflated with Matthew’s own peculiar material. But it is far simpler to say that both Matthew and Luke had independent and variant traditions here.

(3) In one of the longer “Q” sections (Luke 6:20–26), a collection of Beatitudes and Woes, we are faced with a major piece of editing on the part of Matthew—assuming, that is, that Matthew had seen Luke, and also had access to the same “Q” material as Luke. Luke’s collection of Beatitudes and Woes in his chapter 6 is an entity, but it is odd that Matthew (who on the “Q” theory made a whole chapter, 23, out of a few sayings of Luke against the Pharisees, Luke 11:37–46), apparently did not know this collection of woes.

(4) Protagonists of the “Q” theory assert that material about John the Baptist, and the sayings of Jesus concerning the Baptist, were to be found in this source. The sayings about John in Luke 16:16 and Matt 11:12 f. do not bear this out. Manifestly, they come from different sources.

(5) If Luke 13:23–24 is from the hypothetical “Q,” then Matthew 7:13 demonstrates minimal agreement at this point.

(6) There is striking dissimilarity to be found in the two accounts of rejection in the judgment. For Luke (13:25 ff.) those who are cast out are people who had heard Jesus and eaten with him. Matthew, however (7:21 ff.), makes of these people men who were so closely identified with the Messianic community as to have been prophets and exorcists. It is true that these two categories of people may overlap; nevertheless, there is far closer identification with Jesus in Matthew than in the so-called “Q” material in Luke. More likely, these represent two disparate traditions.

(7) Far from Matthew’s having made use of “Q” material, it is perhaps possible to find one place where he certainly did not. Matthew 16:2 is omitted by some good Greek manuscripts, and it is to be presumed that a later scribe, noticing the lacuna, supplied the missing material from Luke 12:54 f.

(8) If the common assumption holds, that Matthew not only had access to Mark but had also read Luke, then in a good many instances an equally good case can be made for Luke’s having read Matthew. Luke thus might be the editor, not—as is usually assumed—Matthew. For example, it would be hard to say which of the two was responsible for apparently emphasizing the soil and the seed in Matthew 13:1 ff. and Luke 8:4 ff., rather than the sower, as in Mark 4.

(9) If we admit that Matthew’s additional comment on the sign of Jonah (Matt 12:40) came from a source which he knew and Luke did not, then it is possible that Luke read Matthew’s version, recognized that the Matthean comment did not fit the context, or the original meaning of Jesus’ use of the sign, and omitted it.

In relation to this version, it may be said that many minor variants in the use of the “Q” material between Matthew and Luke can be ascribed to varying translations of the original. But we must add that scholars are not agreed upon the degree of Aramaic, Hebrew, or Greek underlying our gospel sources. The examples given above are outstanding variants that must somehow be explained by any theory which postulates a “Q” source. It is, we contend, far simpler to suppose that both Matthew and Luke used their own sources than to assume that one evangelist saw the other’s work and proceeded to some radical editorial revision. Though recent discoveries about the melting pot, assimilative character of ancient Syria-Palestine have been a great help in attempting to unravel the various languages used to compose the gospels, the new discoveries have also increased the difficulty of asserting with conviction precisely which of three languages might have been used in any parts, or the whole, of original gospel fragments—Greek, Hebrew, or Aramaic.⁸

If “Q” (whether oral or written) was a source in the sense of being a block of recognizable, homogeneous gospel material, complete in outline, then something of the order of this source should have been found in Matthew and Luke. But this is not the case, as we can see by looking at a larger block of “Q” material.

About half of the verses in Matthew’s Great Instruction appear also in Luke—that is, “Q.” But of these fifty plus verses supposedly from “Q,” Luke includes a mere twenty-five in his “Sermon on the Plain.” Beyond this, sayings in one context in Luke are found in a wholly different context in Matthew, and the “Q” sayings in Matthew are widely scattered through Luke, between chapters 11. and 16. Matthew’s saying about coming to terms with an opponent are put by Luke in an apocalyptic context (Matt 5:25=Luke 12:57 f.). The Lord’s Prayer, put by Luke in his chapter 11—an apocalyptic context—is by Matthew placed in his great block of teaching material. If Matthew has edited and rearranged Mark and “Q,” and done this in the light of Luke, then his methods are at best unconventional. For if “Q” was a recognizable single entity, and Matthew also had access to Luke as well as to Mark, would he have separated the two verses of Luke 11:33–34, inserted them at different points in his own gospel, and in the process changed the meaning of the verses?

In very broad terms, the suggestion that Matthew knew and used “Q” together with Mark and Luke might stand. The accounts of John the Baptist, his ministry, and his baptism of Jesus (Luke 3:2–22=Matt 3:7–17), the temptation narrative (Luke 4:1–13=Matt 4:1–11), and the first instructions to disciples (Luke 6:20–49=Matt 5:1–7, 27)—all these come in the same historical order in Luke and have broad affiliation with each other. But when the story of the centurion’s servant has been told (Luke 7:1–10=Matt 8:5–13) the two gospels begin to diverge. Luke includes John’s questions to Jesus from prison, in 7:18–35, while Matthew postpones them until 11:2–19. The same thing is true of other material which has commonly been attributed by derivation to “Q.” The questions on discipleship are found in Luke 9:57–10:24, and in Matthew in two places—8:19–22, 9:37–10:14; the discussion of “signs” comes in Luke 11:14–32, and in Matt 12:22–45. Matthew leaves the polemic against the Pharisees (Luke 11:39–52) to almost the end of the ministry. All these examples occur in quite different contexts and are arranged in different chronological order. In fact, as soon as Mark’s order is deserted, Luke and Matthew begin to diverge. As a single, ordered source, oral or written, “Q” will not stand.

Much of the trouble with “Q,” then, has been the confidence with which some scholars have sought to reconstruct it as a single document. But even when this has been done, the contents of this hypothetical source are much what any oral tradition might have been expected to contain, outside the passion narrative: John the Baptist, his ministry, and preaching, his baptism of Jesus and the subsequent temptation story; selected instructions by Jesus; John’s place in the divine purpose and his subsequent fate; questions on the meaning of discipleship, signs authenticating the ministry, the disclosure of Messiahship, and preparation for the last acts of the ministry, with warnings about persecution. All that an examination of the “Q” material in Matthew and Luke seems likely at this stage to produce is evidence that more than one source was employed by all three evangelists.

IV. THE OLD TESTAMENT BACKGROUND OF MATTHEW'S GOSPEL

There have been many hypotheses about how Matthew arranged his material, and the text of the gospel can be interpreted to justify most of them.⁹ However, nearly all hypotheses have failed to do justice to one feature of the gospel as it appears to us, and that is Matthew's apparent conflation of two originally distinct traditions: (1) a missionary's vade mecum, mostly narrative in form, with illustrative material drawn (where helpful) from (2) the bulk of the private teaching Jesus gave to his disciples. This feature of Matthew's gospel we propose to consider below in Part XIII, Authorship and Chronology.

A

As Matthew discovered the need to explain the person of Jesus in order to encourage the development of Christian awareness, it might be suggested that his Christology dictated the framework of his gospel. For the sake of completeness, such a Christological framework is given here. Although it is viable and does full justice to the conservative Jewish background of Matthew, based wholly on Scripture, we do not find it entirely satisfactory. The analysis offered further below has the advantage of taking full account of the hermeneutic background of the gospel; we suggest it is the framework chosen and used by the author. The Christological framework would develop in this fashion:

(1) Up to the Petrine confession, the covenant people is called to relive its OT experience. The prologue makes the Messiah the Son of David (1:6, 17) and the Emmanuel quotation (1:23=Isa 7:14) in the Isaian context promises such days for God's people as they have never known before. The Micah passage (2:6=Mic 5:2) comes from a whole context in which the future ruler is depicted feeding his flock like a shepherd. So, too, with the return from Egypt: Israel, the child of the Lord, is called again from the land of slavery (Hos 11:1; Exod 4:22).

(2) This broad theme of reliving the OT experience is marked again at the baptism and temptation narrative. The beloved of Isa 42:1 (Gr. agapētos, as in the Transfiguration narrative of Matt 17:5) is reminded of his vocation to fulfill all righteousness (Matt 3:17). The temptation narrative (which will be discussed in its context) is cast in terms of Israel's time of trial in the desert. Here the narrative encapsulates Israel in the person of Jesus, and subjects him to the testing of covenant-loyalty in Deuteronomic terms.

(3) The (miscalled) Sermon on the Mount, or Great Instruction—which was private instruction for the inner circle of the disciples—with its strong emphasis on the law underscores the unique character of Israel's law, represents Jesus as compelling the errant community to return to the fundamentals of all law. So far, conceding the degree of authority attributed to Jesus (7:28–29) and also incidental assertions of his relationship with God which close the instruction (7:21), there is nothing which marks off the ministry as being more than largely a recapitulation of Israel's history, though admittedly in high relief.

(4) The next part of the ministry significantly changes this, though it is possible to see this change in scriptural terms, too. Chapter 8 introduces the term “The Man” (vs. 20) for the first time in a context of suffering. This appears to be an old tradition, in which “The Man” who fulfills a destiny of suffering could only be introduced when the ground was properly prepared for him. The “Servant Songs” of Isaiah were used in 3:17, but this was in a far different role from that indicated in 8:20.¹⁰ There is now an atmosphere of crisis about the ministry, almost as though history had suddenly leaped from the united people of I and II Samuel to the turbulence of Isaiah and Jeremiah. The Son of Man dispenses divine pardon (9:6 ff.) and excites charges of demonic alliance (9:34), meanwhile providing for his small community (10:5, 16, 23).

(5) The same picture carries through chapters 11 to 15, with The Man asserting his vocation and demanding allegiance to his message—and to his own person (11:19, 12:8, 15). This is heavily underlined in private to the disciples (10:16–42), while all the time those who may at first have expected Jesus to fulfill Messianic expectations of their own devising were driven to find explanations of his exorcisms in a conspiracy with Satan (12:22). The lines for and against his person and ministry are drawn harder and firmer, and the community of Israel, along with Jesus, begins to reach crisis point. At 12:32 Jesus heightens the prophetic insistence upon the validity of his message by asserting his familiarity with the inmost secrets of God's "council" (a well-known concept in the Old Testament). This had already been done privately (11:25 ff.), when the signs of the imminent reign of God had been apparently rejected.

(6) From 12:38, provoked by a demand for a sign, Jesus (in Matthew's tradition) reinterprets the covenant with Israel in a series of parables (13:1–51). The report of John's death causes him to withdraw. The die is now cast, and Jesus gives the crowds a foretaste of the Messianic banquet (14:13–21: there is apparently a repetition of this at 15:34–39, a sign of the great significance attached to this incident). Chapters 15 through 16:4 provide in miniature a summary of the mission of the Servant, wholly misunderstood (15:1–2, 12; cf. Isa 53:1), yet with a mission even beyond Israel (15:21–28; cf. Isa 49:6). Though the signs of the age to come are misunderstood, yet the disciples are put to the test, and 16:13–20 marks the watershed of the gospel. The Petrine confession is followed immediately in the present Matthean tradition by the first prediction of the passion (16:21–23), the call to believers to identify with The Man in suffering, and the transfiguration. From this point on, the gospel narrative is concerned with the inevitable movement toward the cross. The Petrine confession in Matthew (not, as in Mark and Luke, the transfiguration) marks the midpoint.

This sketch of the way in which Matthew treats the events prior to Caesarea Philippi seems to indicate a tradition that is (a) Galilean, (b) controlled exclusively by rigidly scriptural standards, and (c) wholly uninfluenced by speculative messianism from sectarian or other sources. The narrative which follows chapter 16, containing as it does the eschatological material, then develops very differently. The combination of the two traditions in this gospel suggests an editor and compiler of great ability, and—considering the smoothness of the whole—of no small theological skill.

B

Another device—well known to Jewish rabbinical writings, and also found in Proverbs—derives from oral tradition, and is faithfully followed by Matthew: it involves the use of numbers in teaching.¹¹ This phenomenon has been observed before—notably by W. H. Allen (The Gospel According to St. Matthew, ICC, Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark / New York: Scribner, 1907), and is listed here again because it throws light on the processes of oral tradition and transmission.

Two is a conveniently memorized number. In Matthew, we have two demoniacs (8:28), two blind men (9:27, 20:30), and two false witnesses (26:60). The number three is most frequent in Matthew, and always appears in blocks of material in which the proximity of the three integers is easy to recall. There are three temptations (4:1–11), three examples of righteousness (6:1–18), three prohibitions (6:19–7:6), three injunctions (7:7–20), three healings together (8:1–15), three miracles demonstrating the authority of Jesus (8:23–9:8), another three of restoration (9:18–34). There is a threefold “fear not” (10:26, 28, 31), and a threefold answer to questions on fasting, interwoven with the three complaints of the Pharisees (9:14–17, 9:1–17). The disciples are warned of three types of persons unworthy of Jesus (10:37–38), and there are three sayings about “little ones” together (18:6, 10, 14). There are three parables on sowing (13:1–32), three of warning (24:43–25:30), and three prophetic parables (21:28–22:14). The three questions in the Passion narrative (22:15–40) highlight the Messianic mission, and in a sense summarize the whole controversy about Jesus’ ministry in easily remembered form, whether they were all asked in one day or not. It is difficult to see any numerical contriving in the historical “threes” of the passion narrative (three prayers in Gethsemane, 26:39–44; three denials of Peter, 26:69–75; and the three questions of Pilate, 27:17, 21, 22–23) because that narrative would not demand such artificial memory aids as seem to have been applied to other material.

Five and seven are equally well known as mnemonics (the Talmudic Ethics of the Fathers has seven signs of a scholar and seven of a sluggard); in Matthew the number seven is well represented: seven demons (12:45), the sevenfold pardon (18:21–22), seven brethren (22:25), seven loaves (15:34), seven baskets (15:37), and seven “woes” (23:13–30). There seems little doubt that number schemes such as these were made an intentional part of the structure of the gospels to aid early evangelists in their teaching.

C

The attempts to find some structure in Matthew's gospel were for the most part made before the discoveries at Qumran. Now, however, we have a large corpus of material to illustrate at firsthand the methods of at least one kind of biblical interpretation in the first century B.C. This is pre-eminently the case with the Essene commentary on Habakkuk (1QpHab), which at first sight makes comments on the prophetic text that appear unrelated to the text itself. For example, Hab 1:11 reads: "The wind then sweeps on and passes: and they make of their strength their god." The Qumran commentary has this to say: "Interpreted (this concerns) the commanders of the Kittim, who, on the counsel of the guilty house, pass one in front of another; one after another their commanders come to lay waste the earth...." Despite the apparent discrepancy between prophetic text and sectarian commentary, principles of interpretation are involved. We give here the principles as seen by W. H. Brownlee ("Biblical Interpretation among the Sectaries of the Dead Sea Scrolls," [BA 14 \[1951\], 54–76](#)).

(1) Everything written by the ancient prophet had a hidden eschatological meaning.

(2) Since the prophet often wrote cryptically, the meaning may have to be ascertained through a forced or abnormal construction of the biblical text.

(3) The prophet's meaning may be discerned through the study of textual, or orthographic peculiarities in the text—that is, the meaning may turn upon special readings in the text.

(4) A textual variant may also assist interpretation.

(5) The application of a verse may be determined by analogous circumstances or allegorical propriety.

(6) For full understanding, more than one meaning may be attached to the prophet's words.

(7) Sometimes the prophet so concealed his meaning that recourse must be had to synonyms for the words used.

(8) Sometimes the hidden meaning may have to be discovered by a rearrangement of the letters the prophet actually used, or by substituting similar letters for one or more of those found in the text.

(9) Sometimes the prophet's meaning may be arrived at through dividing a word into two or more parts and expounding the parts, while at times the prophet may have concealed his meaning by abbreviation.

(10) Other passages of scripture may illuminate the prophet's original meaning.

Brownlee's survey was in 1951 an important contribution to our understanding of an interpretation of the Old Testament contemporary, or near contemporary, with the New Testament. But though Brownlee's study was quoted with some approval by Krister Stendahl (The School of St. Matthew and Its Use of the Old Testament [Lund: Gleerup, 1954], especially pp. 143 ff.), such definitive statements about sectarian hermeneutics were then premature. Since 1954 we have seen the Qumran version of most texts of our present Old Testament. (Esther alone remains unrepresented.) With far more confidence than was possible ten years ago, we can assert that the idea of a fixed text of the Hebrew of the Old Testament is later than the NT period. The sectarians of Qumran did not deliberately change the received Hebrew text in accordance with their own preconceptions—far from it. In fact, the Greek text of the Old Testament (LXX) derives from Hebrew originals which were often more reliable than the present Hebrew text \(MT\). Further, since much written work was copied from memory or from dictation (as illustrated by manuscripts from Qumran), the possibilities of misunderstanding are great. Some obscurities in the present Hebrew text of the OT, in both words and meanings, have been illuminated by the Qumran remains. So far as Matthew's gospel is concerned, therefore, we should not rely too much upon variations from the LXX text in Matthew's quotations from the Old Testament. To this extent, points (2) to (4) in Brownlee's listing given above are of merely peripheral interest. But points (8) and (9) as we have given them above are capable of seriously misleading us in understanding hermeneutics in both Old and New Testaments: pursued to their logical conclusion, Brownlee's suggestions could lead to an interpretation of Scripture similar to the fanciful identification of various Elizabethan dramatists with William Shakespeare. It must be added, however, that Brownlee's final point is still very important: it might be used as a text for this section of our examination of the structure of Matthew.

In his Hellenism in Jewish Palestine (New York: Jewish Theological Seminary of America, 1950), Saul Lieberman comments: "The early Jewish interpreters of Scripture did not have to embark for Alexandria in order to learn there the rudimentary methods of linguistic research. Although they were not philologists in the modern sense of the word they nevertheless often adopted sound philological methods." Lieberman goes on in his chapter on "Rabbinic Interpretation of Scripture" to outline the significant developments introduced into scriptural interpretation by Hillel the Elder. Interpretation of the Law had been a somewhat formless discipline before the first century of the Christian era, but the impact of systematic Alexandrian hermeneutics upon rabbinical study was profound. As Lieberman observes: "... it was the Greeks who systematized, defined and gave definite form to the shapeless mass of interpretations” (p. 62). This interplay between Greek orderliness in interpretation, and the practice of Hillel the Elder and his school in the interpretation of secular legal documents, has been discussed by David Daube in a series of articles (cited by Lieberman). The somewhat vague conventions of allusion and analogy were given precise formulation by Hillel as follows: (1) inference from the lesser to the greater, (2) inference by analogy between equal propositions, (3) constructing a family of regulations from a single biblical instance, (4) a similar procedure to the former, but based on two instances, (5) argument from the particular to the general, and inferring the particular from the general, (6) interpretation by means of a similar passage, and (7) derivation of meaning from context.¹²

The New Testament contains interesting contrasts between the somewhat loose methods of midrash (exposition or homily) on the one hand, and the more precise methods of halakah (legal material with commentary) on the other. Midrash is the method of Matthew, while halakah is exemplified in Paul’s custom of applying precise norms of interpretation to words and phrases. Paul, especially when examining the central themes of the Gospel, was capable of using the older homiletic method of interpretation (cf. 1 Cor 10:1–5; 2 Cor 3:7–18), but in general his hermeneutical method follows Hillel, with precise attention to words and meanings (cf. 1 Cor 9:8–10, 10:23–30), particularly in the extended treatment of the Law in Romans and Galatians. There is no ground today, apart from a desire to dissociate Paul from Judaism, upon which to deny that he was a pupil of Gamaliel (Acts 5:34).

The OT quotations in Matthew are a vital key to understanding the author’s methods, and also his background and possible identity. Characterized by a framework of OT quotations, Matthew’s subject matter, considered in the context of those quotations, accords far better with the pēsher (commentary) models of Qumran than does the later interpretive method of Paul¹³ C. H. Dodd, in his According to the Scriptures, London: Nisbet, 1952; New York: Scribner, 1953, made a strong case for considering the OT quotations in their original context as a key to understanding the gospel author’s use of them. (Dodd’s work, however, met with a remarkably cool reception from critics and reviewers alike; that the work appeared too soon for proper evaluation of the Qumran material as it bears on the New Testament hardly justifies this neglect.)

To assert, as has been done more than once, that Matthew’s quotations must be assessed as “proof texts” is a waste of time.¹⁴ Verse divisions are a relatively modern device, of which both the Old and New Testaments were wholly devoid in the early Christian era. The notion of a “verse” was foreign to hermeneutics—Pauline, Matthean, or any other kind. “Proof texts,” with the ensuing barren controversies they have engendered down the years, would consequently have puzzled any NT writer. Not only would the whole context of a cited passage have to be searched—if indeed a gospel author wished to discover what we call a “verse”—but the whole context would usually be known by heart. Contemporary Judaism shows innumerable instances of this in practice, and some writers on the New Testament might well have drawn warning and controlling evidence from it.

Here is the structure of Matthew’s narrative, as we came to examine it.

Prologue (Matt 1–3)

The evangelist's account of the annunciation to Mary is linked with the familiar formula "to fulfill what was written ..." Here it is Isa 7:14, and the most striking feature about the Emmanuel prophecy in Isaiah is the promise of the exercise of God's initiative in the face of the faithlessness and vacillation of men. For Isaiah, the promised child is a token of the end-time (Isa 7:17–25), a time of testing and also of calling to trust. The later uses of "sign" in this gospel are significant: one sign has been given—another will not be (cf. Matt 12:39, 16:4).

Closely allied with the thought of the birth of Jesus as a God-given sign is the quotation with which Herod's advisers in 2:5–6 reply to the king's question. Royal anxiety for a dynastic future, secular calculation—neither can stand against the whole prophetic context of Mic 5, with its promise of national upheaval until the birth of him who is to stand and feed his flock in the strength of the Lord. But this birth, and the promise of a future ingathering of the dispersed, followed by lasting peace, is to be accomplished at great cost: the denial of all the secular and religious aids (including sorcery) upon which Israel has hitherto relied. For God's people, as well as for their enemies, judgment is near.

The verse concerning the son in Hos 11:1 (Matt 2:15) carries with it the implications which we have seen at work (cf. Part I above) in Matthew's Christology: Jesus relives the spiritual experience of Israel in leaving the bondage of Egypt for freedom. All the emphasis in Hos 11 is on the close relationship which Israel, God's son (cf. Exod 4:22), enjoyed with God at that time. Jesus in his obedience is to relive, and reverse, Israel's dallying with temptation in the wilderness.

This thought of the Exodus, and of the grace which Israel might have found in the betrothal time of the desert wanderings, is not far removed from the ideal in the next quotation in Matthew (2:18=Jer 31:15). The testing and proving which inevitably follow God's initiatives also bring suffering, and the innocent are as likely to be struck down as the guilty. The whole of Jeremiah's chapter 31 is concerned with the hope of return held out to Israel by God's promise: those who have survived the sword will find grace and eternal love in the wilderness—a consideration which the evangelist cannot possibly have overlooked. Again there are references (as in the Micah passage) to God's shepherding of his scattered people. To Ephraim in the north (the prophet's own country) and to Judah in the south, the promise of healing and restoration is held out. God's sifting and judgment (Jer 31:28) will be followed by his planting and building. Above all, there is at the end of Jer 31 the promise of the New Covenant. Considering the importance which the New Covenant has in no less than five texts of the New Testament (Matt 26:28; Mark 14:24; Luke 22:19—the longer text; 1 Cor 11:25; Heb 12:24), this circumstance, in the face of Matthew's knowledge and use of the Old Testament, cannot possibly be considered pure accident or coincidence.

Baptism and Temptation (Matt 3:1–4:11)

Matthew's quotations from Jeremiah come, as we have seen, from a chapter which spoke unequivocally of Israel's experience in the desert, and here in this section the theme is renewed.

Matthew links the ministry of John the Baptist with Isa 40, which opens with the promise of pardon and restoration near at hand (1–2), heralded by an unidentified messenger in the desert. Here there is a link with John's gospel, in which all that the Baptist claims to be is a voice (John 1:23; cf. Isa 40:3 and Matt 3:3). Second Isaiah's prophecy, from which Matthew draws his quotation, refers again, as does Jer 31, to the divine initiative (cf. Isa 40:10 ff.) and recalls the shepherd theme of Micah (Isa 40:11; cf. Mic 5:4). The whole chapter in the prophet emphatically asserts the unfailing will of God, who will brook no rivalry from idols. Perhaps Matthew's report of John's ax of judgment (3:10) is a reflection of the prophet's scorn for idolatry (Isa 40:18 ff.). Whether or not this is so, John's charge to those who come to him is wholly that of Isa 40:21–31: those who have come to hear the prophet have no excuse for ignorance, and the privilege of election-covenant avails nothing in the face of the call to repentance.

The baptism of Jesus pinpoints the total identification of Jesus with his own people—he must, as must Israel, fulfill all the demands God makes of his people (3:15). (It is significant that Matthew here represents Jesus as hearing of John's mission while still in Galilee; this may have some bearing on the author's origins.) The occasion of the baptism is marked by divine approval (3:17), again in OT terms. Like the quotations concerning the flight to Egypt, this refers to the “chosen” (“beloved”) status of God's son. There is here the ambivalence that characterizes the use of “the righteous” in Enoch xxxviii, moving as it does between “the Righteous (One)” and the “righteous (ones)” who are his followers. But the reference in 3:17 is not merely one of status concerning Israel, which Jesus represents, or of Jesus himself, but a direct hint from Isa 42 of the nature of the mission of the “chosen,” the “beloved” of Matt 3:17. The mission of the servant in Isa 42 is followed by the conditions which God's act demands in that mission (42:5–9). The servant, the chosen, is a covenant bearer, a light and release both to Israel and the Gentiles, and the harbinger of new things (cf. Isa 61, the first verse of which is quoted by Jesus in the synagogue sermon account at Luke 4:18). The concluding part of Isa 42 changes the meaning of servant from an individual to the whole people: God now gives his servant-people an opportunity (which they have hitherto not heeded) to repent and be restored to divine favor.

The temptations, which we shall discuss in the commentary proper, again look to the spiritual history of Israel, and are seen primarily against the background of Israel's wilderness-testing. This has been brilliantly demonstrated by John A. T. Robinson, "The Temptations," in Twelve New Testament Studies (abbr. TNTS), London: SCM, 1962.

The Ministry (Matt 4:12–25)

This short section provides the occasion for an OT statement of the meaning of the ministry, and is characterized by a quotation from a “messianic” context in Isaiah (9:1–2). Here again we notice Matthew’s interest in the north, in Galilee. Joy at the birth of the future ruler (Isa 9:6–7) is offset by the thought of the rebellious nature of those with whom God must deal, and part of the Isaianic text speaks—as does the gospel itself in the later discourses—of the sifting and choosing which God performs (Isa 9:13–16). For the evangelist, the rejection of the divine calling by those who ought first to have heeded it (Isa 9:15) must have been a poignant reminder of Jesus’ later controversies with Israel’s leaders. In the meantime, the work of building the new ruler’s kingdom (Isa 9:7) begins with the first selection of the immediate circle of disciples (Matt 4:18–22), in the restoration presaged in Jeremiah (Jer 4:23–31), and, most important, in the private instruction given to the disciples on the nature of the kingdom (Matt 5–7).

The Ministry (Matt 8–9—Healings and Questions)

It is significant that the whole complex of healings (8:1–22, 28–9:8) and the stilling of the storm (9:23–27) should center upon the quotation from Isaiah (Isa 53:4) and a reminiscence from that book (Isa 49:8–13), the first as commentary by Matthew, and the second implicit in Jesus' interpretation of his work. Isaiah 49 is concerned, as are so many of the OT texts that Matthew considers, with the restoration, national or spiritual, of Israel, while Isa 53 (which the evangelist uses as the keystone of the whole section) speaks of the means by which God will accomplish restoration. This is in full accord with what we have written below (Part X) on miracles: all disorder and chaos in God's creation is inimical to the divine purpose and must be overcome. This, at the most crucial point of all, will bring the beloved Son to the final trial of strength at the Passion. But at this stage of the ministry the Servant bears man's burdens by the work which he must do to confront the dominion of Satan. But the very signs which proclaim God's reign, and in which that reign is demonstrably embodied, bring only misunderstanding—a theme which Matthew records Jesus as illustrating in a quotation from Hosea (6:6—cf. Matt 9:13, 12:7). Both Jesus and Matthew were surely familiar with Hosea, the prophet who earnestly longed for Israel's return to God in penitence (6:1–3), but who also knew that the prophets had been ignored (6:4–5) and that the people had broken the covenant and dealt in treachery, despite God's judgment (6:7–10). When they have opportunity to learn and to repent, their only response is to lie. They are too blind to see their own wrong (7:9) and indeed oppose the work of restoration by accusing it of collusion with evil (Matt 9:34). Here is another significant link with John's gospel: the fourth evangelist is emphatic that this charge of collusion with evil (John 9) is the highwater mark of opposition to Jesus. But through all faithlessness, God's love is unchanging (Hos 6:1–3), and Jesus' mission is once more described in terms of his shepherding his people (Matt 9:35–37; cf. John 10; Mic 5).

In a real sense, Matthew's chapter 10, which is private instruction to the disciples, follows through the theme of Hos 7—the disciples must not expect any better treatment than has been, or will be, accorded to Israel's king.

The Baptist (Matt 11)

Jesus' identification of John as the promised messenger of God's act, as we now have that identification in Matthew's tradition, is periodically the subject of investigation by NT scholars, the more so in that Matthew's quotation of Malachi at 11:10 is not a quotation from the Septuagint—as it stands, it appears somewhat closer to Exod 23:20—and the declaration by Jesus that John was “Elijah” has increased the attention paid to the last two chapters of Malachi. Perhaps the most persuasive attempt in recent years to examine the whole idea of a “coming Elijah,” who was to prepare the way for a day of the Lord, has come from Robinson, whose book TNTS has already been mentioned. The article in that collection, “Elijah, John and Jesus: An Essay in Detection,” argues that John the Baptist had cast Jesus in the role of an Elijah redivivus, did not at any time see himself in that role (cf. John 1:21), and sent his message from prison because he was puzzled that Jesus did not seem to be playing the part John had anticipated. Moreover, Bishop Robinson contends, there is a clue which we miss in this incident, for the simple reason that we know the end of the story, and therefore accept without question the equation John=Elijah, and Jesus as the “Coming One.” This, the author contends, is mistaken, and John's question “Are you the Coming One?” was addressed to Jesus out of doubt that Jesus might not, after all, be the Elijah-who-was-to-come. Though we do not share his view, Robinson's article set us thinking again about the precise way in which the Malachi quotation did, or did not, fit into what we are convinced was Matthew's mode of composition.

There is no reference to Elijah in the Qumran literature so far discovered, where we might have expected it. More significantly, there is no suggestion in the extracanonical books of Enoch that there was any expectation of a coming Elijah to prepare for the Messiah. Granted that there was some such expectation in the time of Jesus (to which John 1:21 and Josephus bear witness), the lines were not so finely drawn as Robinson's article might suggest. Our research into the ancestry of “the Righteous One” of Acts 7:52 has convinced us that there were varied expectations, any two or more of which might coalesce. Moreover, there is good NT evidence that the Messiahship of Jesus, his Sonship, was declared after his resurrection (Acts 2:36; Rom 1:4); in that event, there is but one coming of the Messiah, The Man, and that is the coming to the Father in the sense of Dan 7:13.

There is one other factor to be reckoned with—the ending of Malachi (4:4–5). That ending appears to us to come under the heading that was once described as “euphemistic liturgical appendices,” and it (in spite of all absence of textual variation) may not be more than a later appendage, even though it did give rise to the Elijah-expectation. (It should be noted that this ending is certainly older in the Hebrew than ca. 135 B.C., by which time the prophets had been translated into Greek, according to Sirach's grandson. It certainly appears in that translation.)

We came to the following conclusions: (1) John the Baptist's question in Matthew 11:3 might have referred to one of a number of "expected" personages, not excluding the prophet of Deut 18:15; (2) textual variation, when the text had not been finally fixed, is not as important as we might think at this remove of time, and the similarity of possessive personal pronouns between Matt 11:10 and Exod 23:20 does not alter the fact that the messenger of 11:10 does not guard (as he does in Exodus) but prepares the way: Matthew's quotation, however loose to modern eyes, is from Mal 3:1; (3) the whole context of what follows in Matt 11:11–24 is pēsher on Mal 3. In other words, there is no substantial difference between the way Matthew treats this OT quotation and the way the remaining quotations are treated. The whole context of Jesus' teaching about the Baptist must be seen in the light of the whole context of Mal 3–4. We gain the impression from this important passage in Matt 11:11–24 that a lot of discussion—public discussion—of the role of the Baptist occurred at this point. Matthew may have taken his Malachi quotation out of the context of a whole homiletic interlude on the precise place of John in the plan of salvation. If this is so, then Jesus' continued insistence on the manifestation of judgment in John's preaching, and in his own ministry, would have reminded his hearers of the Elijah passage at the end of Malachi. But Jesus dismisses the matter as inconsequential: syntactically, the Greek reads (in loose translation), "If you are interested in having someone fill the part of Elijah, if that kind of speculation interests you, then John is Elijah."

Controversy I (Matt 12)

So far as teaching, as distinct from self-declaration, is concerned, the visit of John's messengers marks an important step in the story of Jesus' ministry. It is as though the clarification of John's role left Jesus free to define more clearly his own ministry as well. Matthew's gathering of an unspecified total number of healings (12:9–14, 15–16, 22–23) and the subsequent controversy with the Pharisees around Isa 42:1–4 illustrates well the point we have already made—that the “fulfillment” texts must be seen in total context, both of the OT passages in question and also of the gospel. This quoted passage brings us once more to the “servant” theme of Second Isaiah. For all the opposition to his work and his message, the Servant will not be discouraged (Isa 42:4), still less will he cast aside as useless the apparently hopeless (42:3). The covenant-vocation of Israel itself is recalled (42:5–7) as that vocation was willed by God (42:8–9)—a vocation which Jesus personifies in his healing of the blind demoniac (Matt 12:22; cf. Isa 42:7). God will not concede his sovereignty, will not give his glory to another (Isa 42:9), and for that reason Jesus challenges his critics' ascription of his ministry to the Lord of Lies (Matt 12:24, 25–28). Those who should lead Israel are deaf and blind to God's call (Isa 42:18–20; cf. John 9:40–41), but the new things of God's act must be proclaimed, whether men understand or not (Matt 12:30–37; cf. Isa 42:9).

Parables (Matt 13)

The parables which Matthew records for us are concerned with man's response to the covenant-promises of God. The promises may directly concern the disciples in their preparation by Jesus for the advent of the Kingdom he proclaims, or they may concern the leaders of the Israel of the Old Covenant, face to face with the demands of that Kingdom. The parables themselves are discussed more fully in another part of this Introduction. But the disciples' questioning of this method of teaching brings another "fulfillment" passage; again from Isaiah (Matt 13:14–15; Isa 6:9–10; cf. Mark 8:18; John 12:39–40). In Matt 13 the parables are grouped around the theme of final judgment on the Messiah's community, Israel and the Church, and their import is intimately bound up with the prophetic question: "How long, O Lord?" (Isa 6:11–13), and with the promise in reply of a faithful remnant. So too, with the second "fulfillment" quotation in this chapter (13:34=Ps 78:2): the whole history of Israel, for all God's declaration of himself, has been one of rebellion and failure to hear, and the motif of refusal and rebellion suitably concludes the Matthean chapter (13:53–58). It is not without significance—in the light of what we have emphasized above—that Ps 78 ends with a reference to God's shepherding of his people.

Controversy II (Matt 15:1–20)

It is possible that the anti-Pharisaic tone of parts of Matthew's gospel may have much to tell us of the background of the author; this section of the gospel, however, in recording the dispute between Jesus and the Pharisees, does not use the "fulfillment" formula, but (like Mark 7:6) speaks of Jesus quoting from Isaiah (Matt 15:8–9=Isa 29:13). The section begins and ends on an anti-Pharisaic note, with a significant healing of a non-Israelite between the two passages. But we suggest that the quotations of Isaiah by Jesus, considering the nature of the material in Isa 29, may provide us with a clue to the way in which Jesus regarded his own mission; they may also indicate that some of Matthew's "fulfillment" quotations come not from the author, but from Jesus himself. The extensive use of Isaiah in Matthew, and the choice by Jesus of a passage from Isaiah for a synagogue sermon (Isa 61; cf. Luke 4:18–19)—of which there are echoes in Matt 11:5—is an indication which we think may be of importance.

Isa 29 deals, as does so much in the first part of that book, with the grim story of Israel's faithlessness, especially as it is manifest in those from whom faith was most of all demanded. The chapter begins with a lament over the capital of Judaism, and although promise is held out of God's visitation on behalf of Jerusalem, the main burden is of refusal to hear God's word (Isa 29:9–12; cf. Matt 15:1–6). In the last analysis, rebellion is precisely an attempt to make God an object to be manipulated (Isa 29:15–16), and this is Jesus' charge against his critics (Matt 15:12–14, 16:1–4). Between the two parts of the account of controversy are, first, incidents of healing which parallel the Isaianic prophecy (Isa 29:18–19) and secondly, the evangelist's second tradition of the proleptic Messianic banquet (Matt 15:32–39). If Isa 30 be included in the whole complex of the context, then the refusal of faithful allegiance to the Lord of the Covenant is even more heavily emphasized.

With the acknowledgment of Jesus' Messiahship by Peter at Caesarea Philippi, Matthew reaches the climax of the first part of the ministry, as we have noted. The necessity of being guided from this point on by the historical tradition dictates to the author a far less contrived arrangement of material. (Jesus' quotation of Gen 1:27 at Matt 19:5, which belongs at this point in the sequence of the gospel, will be discussed in the commentary.)

There are two points to be noticed: first, from this point onward, Matthew is far more free with his use of the term "The Man" (eighteen times, as compared to only nine before 16:20); second, the OT quotations draw on the Psalms for the first time—a Messianic psalm (quoted by Jesus) is used only when the issues are no longer in doubt.

The Passion Narrative (Matt 21–28)

The first quotation used in this second part of the gospel is from Isa 62:11 and Zech 9:9 (Matt 21:5). Here again, the passage from Isaiah must be read in total context. The salvation which God has appointed has been proclaimed, and prepared for (Isa 62:10–11). Redemption has been promised for a desolate people, but (continuing the context) Isa 63 speaks of the loneliness of the messenger of this salvation, and the unique character of God's saving love for his people. Zech 9:9, on the other hand, speaking of a triumphant and victorious king, of apocalyptic trumpets of joy, rests all confidence of victory and the release of prisoners on the blood of the covenant (Zech 11:11–12). This mention of the covenant recalls the previous quotation from Jer 31 at the outset of this gospel, and it looks also to Jesus' words at the Last Supper as recorded by the three synoptic gospels. Messianic salvation does not rest upon military strength (Zech 9:10), and while there is indeed freedom from captivity (Zech 9:11) it is from the captivity of sin that Jesus brings release. There would appear to us to be some grounds for thinking that it is upon these conflated contexts from Isaiah and Zechariah that Matthew hangs the whole passion narrative.

Matthew 21:13 has another quotation from Isaiah, again by Jesus. Bearing in mind what was said above about the total absence of verse divisions, Isa 56 is an enlightening commentary on Jesus' mission as he saw it himself. Reaching beyond the boundaries of Israel, God's act gathers not only the dispersed of Israel, but also "others not yet gathered." And the end of the chapter returns again to the shepherd theme, together with another constant prophetic theme—the failure of those whose responsibility it had been to provide for God's people (Isa 56:11–12). Later in the same chapter (Matt 21:16) Jesus cites Ps 8, and though the immediate context concerns the salutations of children, the whole psalm is concerned with the dignity of man's estate before God, and—by implication—the almost infinite degradation of man when he refuses or rebels against his God-given vocation. Again the Psalms are used in 21:42, and Jesus uses words which evidently became a locus classicus for the early Christians (Ps 118:22; cf. Acts 4:11 and 1 Peter 2:7). To read this psalm quotation is to be aware of the inevitability of such attention to Ps 118, concerned with celebrating God's acts of salvation. Linked with Isa 53 and 63 in vss. 5–13, it constantly repeats the emphasis on vocation in the Servant Songs, and all in all provides one of the best commentaries in the psalter on the Messianic vocation of Jesus. In the same way, the quotation by Jesus of Exod 3:6 (Matthew 22:32) focuses attention—in the context of that chapter of Exodus—upon God's saving act, the deliverance of Israel from Egypt. It is not necessary to labor the point that Paul frequently uses Exodus themes in order to emphasize the greater, permanent salvation effected by God in Jesus.

Jesus' challenge to his critics in Matt 22:44, quoting from Ps 110 (vs. 1), appears at first sight to be an assertion of Davidic messiahship. (Plainly there was a strong tradition of Davidic origin in Jesus' family, and humanly speaking it must have contributed appreciably to the growth of his sense of vocation.) But it is difficult to sustain the view that Jesus was here asserting that Messianic claim—perhaps all along we have been unconsciously led to suppose that he was doing so by the presence of the legitimizing genealogies in Matthew and Luke, which insist upon Davidic descent. It seems far more likely that the tenor of this short exchange between Jesus and his opponents was that Jesus rejected mere Davidic messiahship as too confining: it was open to serious misunderstanding for one thing. And far more important, messiahship had been reinterpreted by Jesus in quite other directions. During the process of compiling the gospels as we know them, questioning of members of Jesus' family would reflect this kind of speculation: some Christians would accept, and others reject as irrelevant, the Davidic claim.

If there is, as our Bible margins suggest, an allusion to Gen 9:6 in Jesus' reply to Peter (Matt 26:52), then the context of Gen 9 emphasizes once again in this Matthean tradition the supreme importance of covenant, and the total obligation of man to fulfill the conditions of covenant. The final OT quotation from Jesus in Matt 27:46, his last words, is familiar; and Ps 22 as meditative commentary on the dereliction of the Passion is apposite.

Matt 27:9, compounded as it is of Jer 32:6–15 (cf. 18:2–3) and—more particularly—Zech 11:12–13, is not a fixing of geographical location of the field bought by the rewards of Judas' treachery, not a recollected coincidence of thirty silver pieces, so much as commentary upon the treachery of those who should have shepherded Israel. It throws into high relief the infamy of one who had been called to shepherd the new Messianic Community, and had failed his calling.

This part of our Introduction was completed too early to take fully into account the recent work of Robert H. Gundry (The Use of the Old Testament in St. Matthew's Gospel, Novum Testamentum Supplement, XVIII, Leiden: Brill, 1967). The reader with technical competence in Hebrew and Greek is strongly recommended to use Gundry's work, since it provides the best recent study of the material. We would not subscribe, however, to some of the author's points of view. Notably, we dissent from his position that Matthew's use of quotations cannot be held to relate the evangelist to any particular tradition of interpretative method.

V. THE DISCIPLES

If we assume that Mark wrote his gospel soon after the middle of the first century, any evaluation we make of the other gospels, and of Mark himself, must take into account the state of affairs in Palestine in the years after A.D. 60. As previously pointed out, the extremely unstable social and political conditions of the times were causing Jews and Christians alike to flee the area.

It would be hard to exaggerate the sense of foreboding that overshadowed life in Palestine in the middle years of the first century of our era. The Nabataeans ceased to be a threat after A.D. 60, but up to that time, there was always the fear of border raids, some of them severe, with the inevitable ruthless Roman suppression and pacification. Strife among the quarreling sects of Judaism inevitably involved the Christians—they were, after all, suspected of being pacifists during the Jewish War, and provided warring sectarians with a common enemy. The archaeological evidence is plain enough from this period, and bears out the essential truth of Josephus' account in his Jewish War.

Not only was civil strife in the air long before the war of A.D. 66–70; we have also to take into account the sectarian interests that must have impinged upon the early Christian communities, either in sympathy or in enmity. Internecine warfare between the various sects was becoming common. The incident recorded by Luke (Acts 8:9–24) which centered around Simon Magus was clearly of interest to Luke and to his readers. What later came to be known as Gnosticism was already spreading,¹⁵ and Christians had to protect the gospel narrative against false testimony and false impressions. The ease and frequency of travel in the first century meant people were scattering; and the dispersal of Jerusalem Christians after the death of Stephen made much more difficult the task of correlating the apostles' information for written transmission. Acts records the death of James, John's brother, and the consequent search for Peter to subject him to a similar fate. James' death must have driven home the necessity of committing oral tradition to more permanent form before all firsthand witnesses died. In view of all this, we should perhaps avoid speaking of "sources" as though there was an unlimited supply of those who would be able to testify accurately to the events of the Lord's ministry and passion.

But how many people knew all the teaching of Jesus—was it confined to the Twelve, or did the crowds who followed him hear all of it? The answer we find to this question will color all our thinking about the manner in which our gospels were compiled. From the gospels themselves, we know that Jesus taught whole crowds on occasion. But to assume that all the teaching recorded in the gospels was so widely disseminated would mean that the same crowds had followed

Jesus on his journeyings, and that witnesses from them provided many sources of information. We have already drawn attention to the social factors after the early sixties, if not before, that would have made it very unlikely that such a large entourage could constantly accompany Jesus. And there is the additional factor that the gospels clearly distinguish between teaching given to a wide circle of hearers and that given to the restricted circle of the disciples. (That we shall have occasion to qualify this to some extent in the case of Luke's gospel in no way invalidates the distinction.)

The four gospels may thus have been composed in a far shorter period than has often been supposed, and the amount of reliable material to be drawn upon may not have been so great as has sometimes been thought.

With all this in mind, it has seemed worth while to look again at the use which is made in the New Testament of the term "disciple," with special reference to Matthew's gospel. The background of the word is clear enough, though it is well to remember that in Jewish and early Christian usage the term had much closer definition than it tends to have in modern English. Although the Heb. talmîd occurs but once in the Old Testament (1 Chron 25:8), it enjoys wide distribution in post-biblical Jewish literature. It is never used of a mere adherent (which the English disciple often tends to denote), but of a learner who constantly practices that which he learns. The Hebrew verb lāmad (from which talmîd is derived) is relatively common in the Old Testament. Another noun derived from it is used in an important connection in Isa 8:16; there the prophet, deserted by most of the people, entrusts his message to faithful disciples, urging them to make it effective. This meaning is important for the sense in which Jesus "makes disciples" and entrusts to them the proclamation of the Kingdom.

It is well to remember the finer definition of "disciple" not only in discussing the restricted use of the term in Matthew and Mark, but also in connection with those who are called "disciples of John" (cf. Mark 2:18 ff.; Luke 11:1; Matt 11:2; and Mark 6:29) and the "disciples of the Pharisees" (Mark 2:18; Matt 9:14 and 22:16). We know from the evidence of Acts that many continued to follow the Baptist's way of life, even though they were isolated from other "baptist" groups in Palestine, and the term "disciples of the Pharisees" would indicate those who were being instructed in, and who were assimilating, the teachings and practices of the Pharisees.

In Mark's gospel, the singular "disciple" is never used. The singular does occur in Matt 10:24 f. (=Luke 6:40), 10:42, with reference to the disciple as the emissary of his Lord. In Luke the singular is found at 14:26 f. (though not in the Matthean parallel 10:37 f.) and 14:33, again with reference to the disciple as in close relationship to Jesus. There is no reference to a particular disciple. In John's gospel, the singular is used fifteen times, usually with reference to "the disciple whom Jesus loved." Both in Matthew and in Mark, the disciples are few enough to be gathered in a house, or in a fishing boat (cf. Mark 6:25, 9:28), and Mark carefully distinguishes between the crowd and the disciples. In Mark 8:34, immediately following a prediction of his passion, the Lord calls the crowds to him, with the disciples, and speaks to them about suffering as a certain consequence of discipleship, and about willing endurance as a prerequisite of discipleship. The whole context plainly indicates a situation in which Jesus outlines to his hearers the price that must be paid by those who would stand in the same intimate relationship with himself that was shared by the Twelve.

Similarly, common rumor might suggest (Mark 6:15) that John the Baptist was Elijah, or that Jesus was, but it is only in private, with the twelve disciples, that Jesus acknowledges the identification of John with the Elijah who was to come (Mark 9:11 f.). With the disciples there was no risk of misunderstanding, no fear of his own ministry being misinterpreted in terms of revolutionary strife.

We are not immediately concerned with the parables, but it is germane here to point out that it is only by a perversity of scholarship that Jesus can be represented as teaching about his Messiahship and his understanding of his own mission publicly and to large crowds. Only by treating Mark's repeated phrase "into the house," or "in a house" as a stylistic device is it possible to avoid the conclusion that Jesus reserved his innermost thoughts and his self-awareness for his chosen company, which journeyed with him throughout his ministry. Mark records occasions when Jesus withdrew into a house to explain matters privately to the Twelve (Mark 7:17, 9:28, 10:10), and the same writer preserves for us the tradition of Jesus interpreting his own parables in private (4:10, 33).

Matthew agrees with Mark's tradition in all this; Matt 9:10 indicates a small company at table in a house (cf. 9:19), and 10:10 ff. makes the explicit statement that Jesus spoke to his disciples "plainly." In 15:1–10 there is a crowd listening to Jesus, but in vs. 11 it is the disciples whom Jesus calls to him for further conversation of a private nature. The disciples alone are admitted in 16:21 to the secret of the forthcoming passion, and 23:1 makes the twelve disciples quite distinct from the crowd.

The use of a verb in Matt 27:57 to describe Joseph of Arimathea may indicate a slightly wider use of the noun "disciple," but it is also possible that the evangelist here used the verb form precisely in order to avoid a noun which for him had specialized meanings. In that case, the translation would be: "... a rich man of Arimathea, named Joseph, who had been taught by Jesus." In the same way, Matt 28:19 would have to be rendered "teach all nations," rather than "make disciples of all nations." The verbal form of Matt 13:52, bearing in mind its context, might very properly be translated by a phrase which gave the narrower meaning of “disciple”: “the scribe who has been made a disciple of the kingdom ...”

It has sometimes been contended that there are two exceptions to Matthew’s precise delineation of “disciples” in terms of the Twelve—8:21 and 5:1. However, in 5:1 it is clear enough that Jesus, having seen the crowds, withdrew with the disciples. In 8:21, it is one of the disciples (the definite article is used), not simply “a disciple.”

If the usage of Mark and Matthew is clear, Luke’s interpretation of the term “disciple” is at first glance wider, more inclusive, and apparently much less precisely defined. However, we hope to demonstrate that Luke’s apparent divergence from the use of the other two synoptists is deliberate, and may have its origin in Acts rather than in his gospel. John likewise has other uses for the term than do Matthew and Mark.

It would appear from Acts 19:1, 4 that Luke uses the word “disciple” to indicate the half-instructed, which would not be faithful to the Hebrew sense of “well-instructed,” and might approach the common English meaning of “adherent.” But Luke is perfectly well aware that there was private instruction to the inner group of the Twelve—cf. 10:23, 12:1. If one examines all the occurrences of the word “disciples” in the Lukan passages which are said to be derived from “Q,” then not only do they manifestly not concur with Matthew in similar context, but they exhibit what appears to be a confusion of usage. Acts uses “disciples” as an equivalent for “believers” (6:1, 2, 7, 9:1, 11:26, 18:23, 19:1, 21:4, 16), while the derivative verb “to make disciples” is used in 14:21. Only once in Acts is the word used in a narrower sense—9:1, “the disciples of Jesus”—indicating that Luke has for purposes of his own changed the original meaning, or rather put it aside in favor of something far wider in scope.

The “Q” passages in Luke where “disciples” occurs are strikingly dissimilar from Matthew. In Luke 6:20, Jesus is apparently speaking to a crowd, while in Matthew this is private discourse with his twelve chosen ones. In Luke this is so public a sermon that in 10:23 the evangelist adds a note to the effect that Jesus turned to his disciples and spoke privately; in Matthew the whole discourse is of a private nature. Luke 12:1 begins what is presumably a private discourse—“to his disciples first”—but we have the crowd in 13:1–21, and then Luke finds it necessary to revert to the previous character of the teaching in vs. 22. Luke 14:25 ff. seems to suggest a separation between the crowds and the disciples, where the crowds are told of the conditions of discipleship. The warnings about the rich man in 16:1 are addressed to “the disciples,” but here it seems to be indicated that some Pharisees too heard this (16:14). Luke’s version of the teaching about temptation (17:1) has the “apostles” asking (17:5) “Increase our faith”—Matthew has “the disciples” at this point. There is no ambiguity in Luke’s 18:5, where it is the Twelve who are indicated by the formula “the disciples.” However, Luke makes the crowd which greeted Jesus on his entry into Jerusalem a crowd of his disciples, much as Luke reports a great crowd of his disciples at 6:17. (KJ at 7:11 mistranslates as “many of his disciples,” where Luke plainly distinguishes between the crowd and the disciples.) When Luke comes to the passion narrative, his usage is governed by the tradition, and “disciples” in 20:45, 22:11, 39, 45 indicates the Twelve as distinct from the rest.

In John the same wide application of the term “disciples” that we have seen in Luke is to be found (cf. 4:1, 6:60 ff., 8:31). There is recognition in John, too, that the term mainly covered a smaller circle—13:5, 18:1, 20:19, 30. In any evaluation of the evidence which we have so far covered, full recognition must be given to the terms “the Twelve,” and “the twelve disciples,” which are widely distributed in the four gospels, with Mark using the term “the Twelve” more frequently than the others.

Luke’s use must be briefly examined here. It is clear that Luke (and John, too) was well aware that there was a whole area of teaching that was inaccessible to the crowds gathered around Jesus, at any rate during his ministry. Matthew agrees with Mark’s pattern, and carefully separates teaching given to the Twelve from public utterances of Jesus. It seems more than likely that Luke’s usage is dependent on that in Acts. If it is remembered that, for Luke, the central figure in Acts is the Apostle Paul, we may arrive at an explanation that will cover what we have seen. While Paul is the central figure in Acts, his mission to Gentiles is also a principal feature. But Paul, it will be remembered, had occasion to defend his claim to apostleship in his letter to Galatia, and based his claim on having seen the risen Lord. Yet if the qualifications outlined in Acts 1:21 ff. were to be valid, then the term used in the Markan tradition to describe those who had been privy to Jesus’ teaching all through his ministry (that is, “disciples”) could not easily be applied to Paul, except proleptically. (There is some recognition of this in Paul’s first letter to Corinth, where he affirms that he received the Church’s Eucharistic tradition “from the Lord,” which can only mean the rest of the apostles—1 Cor 12:23 ff.) It is therefore likely that Luke diverged from the Markan tradition, broadening “disciples” to embrace all believing Christians. If this interpretation is correct, then what we have in Luke 6:17, and above all in Luke 19:37, is the evangelist seeing the post-resurrection community in prolepsis—both listening to, and confessing faith in, Jesus as Lord and Messiah. This would be equally true of John’s use in 6:60 ff., where the heavenly origin of Jesus is questioned, which John recognizes as an even more serious offense to docetic belief, in one of his letters (1 John 2:18 ff., 4:1–6).

Bearing in mind the unsettled situation in Palestine in the years after the events recorded in the gospels, coupled with the uncertainties attaching to the perhaps uneasy existence of the Church as an enclave within Judaism, and the realization that the original twelve disciples were growing older, we may be better able to re-evaluate the dates at which we assume the first oral traditions of the gospel to have been committed to writing. However much Luke and John may have extended the term “disciple” to include the early believers (an extension, incidentally, which the early Christian writers also followed), it is clear that few heard all the teaching of Jesus throughout his ministry. It was therefore imperative that all available material should be sifted and tested against known sources and parallel controls, that hearsay evidence from casual listeners be balanced against the testimony of the original disciples, and that interpretations from the known, tested evidence be balanced against the known traditions of the continuing community. It’s hardly surprising that as a result there are conflicts of dating, timing, and even topography. It is astonishing that with the prevailing conditions in Palestine known to be what they were, it has so often been assumed that Jesus did a great amount of public teaching of which only a selection survives; likewise that with the plain testimony of the first Johannine letter before us, some can still assume that the infant community felt no need to evaluate its records of the ministry of Jesus, and that dates as late as the end of the first century can still be suggested for any of the four gospels.

We shall have occasion to mention an important essay on “disciples” by Moses Aberbach in the course of the COMMENT on §82 (ch. 23).

VI. THE KINGDOM: THE MAN AND THE MESSIANIC COMMUNITY

Considerable controversy has attended discussion among NT scholars as to whether eschatology (consideration of the “last things,” or the “end of the age”) in the gospels and the epistles is “realized” (i.e., conceived as having already broken in upon men with the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus), or whether the end of the whole temporal process is yet to come, at a time determined only by God, not yet revealed. There is much material for both sides of the argument in the New Testament, and after some thirty years, there is still no real agreement among scholars as to how, if at all, the two views can be reconciled.

Matthew’s gospel is especially interesting for this discussion. The evangelist combines a very strong “futurist” eschatology on the one hand with stern notes of judgment arising from the ministry of Jesus on the other.

We shall not deal here with the parables except to note in passing that they, too, have Matthew’s characteristic conjunction of community-interest with eschatology.

It is not merely that Matthew’s work, in the Great Instruction, manifestly inspired a very early Christian document (The Didache) to provide a concept of what would be demanded of those who sought to enter the Kingdom (cf. the false prophets in Matt 7:15 ff. and 24:4 ff.). The whole discourse, from 5:3 to 7:21 ff., with its emphasis on the breaking in upon men of God’s act in inaugurating the Kingdom, still includes quite precise directions for the conduct of the continuing community which Matthew’s gospel assumes throughout; we may cite the sayings about prayer and fasting in Matt 6. The false prophets, to whom we have called attention already and who were a matter of much concern to Paul and the early Church, are gathered into the context of the Great Instruction, reappearing in an eschatological context in chapter 24.

In fact, Matthew’s combination of the eschatological with the ecclesiastical begins with the ministry of the Baptist. Here is none of the apparent hesitation with which the gospel of John treats John the Baptist, and it is noticeable that Matthew identifies John with the Christian community in a way which is not wholly true of the other gospels. Indeed, Matthew unites the Baptist’s proclamation with that of Jesus (3:2; cf. 4:17). The first proclamation (3:3) is bound up with an OT quotation which speaks of preparing the way for God’s act, but the second (4:15 f.) links the announcement of the Kingdom’s coming with OT citations which demand the notion of fulfillment. Again, John’s baptism is said by this gospel to be “for repentance” (3:11) and not “for the remission of sin” (cf. Mark 1:4), which indirectly bears testimony to Matthew’s interest in reserving the privilege of baptismal forgiveness for the future Christian community. John’s strictures against those who come to him claiming a privileged status through the Chosen People (3:7 ff.) are found in similar form on the lips of Jesus in 7:15 ff.

In Mark’s gospel, the confession of Peter at Caesarea Philippi is a turning point, linked as it is with the first prediction of the passion (Mark 8:27 ff.). It is equally pivotal in Matthew, though for different reasons. In Matthew, the confession of Peter is linked with the saying about the Church, and Peter’s function in it (Matt 16:13–23). This is followed, as it is in Mark, by the first passion-prediction (Matt 16:21 ff.); by the private warning to the Twelve on the meaning of the discipleship to which they were called, and by the account of the transfiguration—all of which is equally true of Mark (Matt 16:24–17:8; cf. Mark 8:31–9:8). But after Matthew parallels Mark’s account of the meaning Jesus attaches to the ministry of John—and we have already seen that Matthew places John in the context of both the ministry of Jesus and the continuing community—the evangelist begins to develop interests of his own. The story of the epileptic boy (Matt 17:14 ff.) clearly, in the private saying to the disciples, anticipates a community beyond the resurrection. Whatever its original meaning, the story about the temple tax in 17:24 ff. betrays Matthew’s concern for, and interest in, institutions. (Incidentally, it may also hint at the provenance of this gospel.) But above all, it would seem that the Petrine confession in Matthew serves to introduce a whole section on the management of the affairs of the infant community (Matt 18).

A continuous thread runs through most of Matthew’s material—a thread of concern for the right ordering of the community founded by Jesus. Jesus gives injunctions as the disciples depart from him in 10:5–15. The rules laid down for missionary activity, which Matthew confines to Israel (10:5), are followed by precepts which could only apply in the time after Jesus’ ministry was ended (10:16–23). This wider application of missionary principles is placed by Mark at the very end of the ministry. Yet even here there is a combination of the theme of judgment, and the “last things,” with the other Matthean theme of the Church as the post-resurrection community (cf. Matt 10:28–33). A saying which Mark places in the context of the feeding of the five thousand (Mark 6:34) is in Matthew linked with missionary work (Mark 9:37–38; cf. Luke 10:2). There will be no “apostolate,” no workers “sent” into the field, until there has first been prayer for the harvest and the field workers (9:38–10:5). It must be remembered here that in the Old Testament, the theme of the harvest is familiar in pictures of the last judgment (cf. Isa 24:13; Joel 3:13; cf. Mark 4:29; Rev 14:15, 18–19), of which perhaps the classic expression is to be found in Isa 63. The task which the missionary charge outlines in Matt 10:7–8 is to proclaim the kingdom, heal the sick, and raise the dead—charges which Luke significantly places in an eschatological context, and uses of Jesus himself (Luke 7:32). Matthew identifies the proclamation of Jesus with the proclamation of the disciples. The subordination of the disciple to the Lord (however much the disciple’s message may be identified with his Lord’s) belongs rather to the theme of the community than to signs of the “last times,” but here again Matthew combines his themes. The preaching of the Kingdom, which is the task of the community, will be authenticated by “signs” (10:8 ff.), yet these signs are themselves indications of “the end.”

It is indeed difficult to make any rigid distinction in Matthew between material that might be described as specifically eschatological, and material that is more concerned with ecclesiology. For example, the material which Matthew places at the end of his chapter 10 (vss. 40 ff.) follows sayings which spell out the price which must be paid by those who embrace the cause of Jesus, and in Matthew’s arrangement both sayings and ending equally well apply to signs of “the end” and to the post-resurrection community. The Markan equivalent of Matthew’s 10:40–42, however, is clearly in an eschatological context (Mark 9:37 ff.).

Matthew appears to say that the community of disciples (and, by anticipation, the Church; cf. 16:16 ff.) embodies all the marks of the proclamation of the Kingdom, with accompanying signs of verification, and also that the community must bear all the marks of living, here and now, in an “end-time” which in the present is not fully consummated. If this interpretation is correct, it is just what Paul urged upon the Corinthians, a doctrine which has passed into the vocabulary of Christian spirituality as “detachment” (cf. 1 Cor 7:17–31). This is in part borne out by Matthew’s use of the story about disputed precedence among the Twelve. Mark (9:34) links it with a prediction of the passion, but Matthew places it in the context of his material about the conduct of community affairs (18:1–4) and of a block of sayings about mutual pardon. But even here, the note of the “last things” is not absent, and the direct simplicity of the child, which must characterize the disciple, is linked with sayings about temptation (18:7–10).

In similar fashion, Matthew’s material skillfully links the discipline of the community with stories designed to emphasize that there is to be no claiming of privilege (20:1–16) and with the story about the question addressed by the mother of the two sons of Zebedee (20:20–27), which makes the same point. This story is followed, as it is in Mark, by the man who asked that his sight be restored (Matt 20:29–34; cf. Mark 10:46–52), as though this was the one necessary lesson (cf. John 9:39–41). Israel often misunderstood her vocation as God's beloved people, which led her to think that she was immune from process before the divine tribunal. Matthew's use of material insists that the community of Jesus must not make similar mistaken claims (20:1–16; 21:33–41; 22:1–14).

We find similar interests at work in the Matthean woes against the Pharisees (23:1–36). The community seems not yet free of the ties which bind it to Judaism; to that extent the whole section is "dated and addressed," yet there is consideration given to the later community and its affairs (vss. 8–12). The chapter ends on a note of impending doom, with the final verse bearing witness to the difficulty of finally separating "realized" and "futurist" eschatology.

Further evidence that the Church was identified with a suffering Judaism is provided by chapter 24, and it is most likely that this state of affairs had come to pass by the middle of the first century A.D. when the community was beginning to break up. In addition to that, sectarian Judaism was gradually being removed from the main body, and it did not need great prescience to see signs of an approaching end to national and religious life as it was then conducted. There is no need to labor the fact that chapter 24 is thoroughly Jewish with its list of natural disasters on a cosmic scale, its false messiahs and false prophets, and the final salvation of the elect, culminating in the impending presence (parousia) of The Man. This consideration has been urged often before, and the already published material from Qumran amply illustrates it from near-contemporary sources—apart, that is, from the figure of The Man. But this is not a uniform picture in Matthew: rather, the evangelist once again combines material, in order that a purely eschatological discourse might also serve his interest in nourishing the Messianic community in the post-resurrection period. There are, for example, in chapter 24 injunctions to watchfulness (vss. 36, 42–44, 45–51), and the same warning is found at 25:13. The latter is set in a context which will serve equally well the interests of both futurist eschatology and a continuing community.

There is, then, in Matthew a close association of an expectation of the parousia with instructions for the disciples. We shall examine in the final section Matthew's treatment, and reinterpretation of, the judgment theme. We have already called attention to the insistence by Matthew that the call to discipleship, whether to the original number of the Twelve, or to the larger community of the Church, does not imply immunity from judgment. This is demonstrated in the attitudes which, in context, characterize two examples of delay in the advent of the Lord's presence. The disciple, whether one of the original number, or a member of the infant Christian community, may not use the privilege of election to presume upon his Lord (24:48); and at the same time, any delay in the “end” is a test of the way in which the lessons of discipleship have been assimilated (25:1–3). Here are two interpretations of the “end,” or rather two ways of regarding a possible tardiness in the final decision of the “end”: in one, any lack of watchfulness on the part of the disciple is condemned; in the other, delay in the “end” is regarded as a trial of vigilance. The two attitudes or interpretations should not be regarded as mutually exclusive. From whatever tradition they may have come all are constantly under judgment.

The specifically Jewish strain in Matthew’s gospel is nowhere more clear than in his separation of the community of believers into the “elect” and the “many” or “the rest.” It is important here to keep in mind what has been said above about the necessity of vigilance, that the call to discipleship does not confer unquestioned privilege. Significantly, for Matthew the title “disciple” remains in force beyond the resurrection—the teacher-pupil relationship never ends. Matthew—and here he would appear to agree with Luke, who uses the term “disciples” for those who committed themselves to the infant community—identifies “the Kingdom” which Jesus proclaimed with the community. For that reason, those who are called “disciples” are the foundation of the Kingdom, and to them is given the authority of “binding and releasing” (cf. 16:19, 18:18). But at the End those who have been called will not necessarily be of the number of the “Elect.” “The righteous” who will shine like the sun (13:43) and who will be at the Father’s right hand (25:31, 37) will not automatically include all “the disciples.” It is the “elect” who will be called by angels on that “day” (24:31). For Mark, there is a separation already made between those who have accepted the ministry of the Messiah, and those who have rejected it (Mark 12:1 ff.), but Matthew very plainly makes this theme of election-rejection dependent on the End-time. There may well be here an element of conscious rejection of the separatism of such rigorist sects as Qumran, which were confident that the End would declare the sectaries to have been all along the chosen of God. Cf. NOTE on 20:28. Luke’s treatment of the parable of the wedding feast is well known (Luke 14:15–24); Matthew reopens the already established verdict of the story in terms of the Last Things (Matt 22:1–14). More than this: Matthew’s gospel asks the disciples whether they are in fact the people producing the fruits of the kingdom (Matt 22:11, 21:43).

There is in Matthew no facile identification of the Church with the elect. It is true that for the evangelist the community of believers, the Church, is the kingdom of The Man (cf. 13:36 ff.), but this by no means implies a complete identification with those who, as the elect, will enter the Kingdom of God at the last. Certainly there is a difference of theological emphasis, and it is important that we see it for what it is. There is no tension between a “realized” eschatology and a “futurist” eschatology in Matthew’s treatment of his material. John emphasizes the element of the “realized,” in seeing the “last hour” supremely in the concluding acts of the ministry of Jesus (cf. John 12:23 ff., 13:31), and John—in common with Mark and Luke—presents the judgment largely in terms of the confrontation between the Messiah and those who by previous tradition had received the vocation to prepare for the Coming One. Matthew does stress this element (in 26:64 he heightens the Markan 14:62 to “... after this you will see The Man seated at the right hand of power”—cf. Luke 22:69). But for Matthew, identifying the Kingdom as he does with the community, judgment means God’s declaration at the End-time, since the decisions called for by the ministry of The Man have been made.

All these considerations are strikingly confirmed by the manner in which the evangelist converts secret instructions to a chosen few (Mark 13:1–4) into a body of teaching that is cosmic in scope (Matt 24, 25). The beginning of the “woes” of Mark 13:3–8 is not followed (as it is in Mark) with a warning of what the community must endure at the hands of the synagogue (Mark 13:9 ff.), but with a prophecy of what the community will endure at the hands of all peoples (Matt 24:9 ff.). Indeed, the evangelist sees in the community itself the signs of the End-time (24:10 ff.), though he adds the condition that the gospel of the Kingdom must first be preached throughout the world.

If there is, therefore, a very developed ecclesiology to be found in Matthew, it would be a gross disservice to the evangelist to see in his arrangement of material any suggestion that Matthew so identifies the Church with the Kingdom of The Man that all who enter that Kingdom are ipso facto numbered among the elect who will finally inherit the glories of the Father’s reign.

Allied with these considerations, there is the very large element of reward and punishment in Matthew that has often distressed Christians. It has been urged from time to time that the whole idea of rewards and punishments is far removed from the kind of disinterested service the ministry of Jesus emphasized. With this in mind, we have chosen to deal with this question elsewhere in the main body of the commentary. (Cf. NOTES on ch. 6, §§22–26.)

VII. THE KINGDOM: THE MAN AND THE FATHER

It is necessary to exercise a good deal of care at this point in fixing the limits of what may rightly be said about the term “Son of Man” in the time of Jesus. It is important not to read into the NT material a developed Christology which that material will not bear. The term itself, in Hebrew or Aramaic, is best understood as either “Man” in generality, or “The Man” as a representative of some kind (which latter is the use depicted in Ezekiel, for example). Plainly, a wealth of tradition, or speculation, had accrued to the term between Daniel and Enoch, but we do not now have material that would show us the lines of development. Jesus’ usage (in the Markan tradition) appears to indicate an identification of Jesus with mankind, first in humble approach to God, then as recipient of God’s gracious gift, and finally as standing between man and God in redemptive activity. Jesus’ use of the term provoked questioning; that is clear from John 12:23–24, and its omission from the New Testament outside the gospels apart from Acts 7:56—cf. Rev. 1:13 and 14:14—indicates a reluctance to use a term which, in the Judaism of the Dispersion, would not have had the same nuances it carried among the speculations of semisectarian Judaism in Palestine.

All the Markan sayings about the “Son of Man” are found in Matthew; in addition, both Matthew and Luke apparently used some sayings from a common tradition. Two such Son of Man sayings are found only in Matthew (10:23, 19:28); both appear to illuminate Matthew’s understanding of the term, and will be examined in due course.

Two interpretations of the “Son of Man” concept in Matthew (12:41, 25:31) are much expanded from the context in which they are found in Mark. In 13:41 Matthew adds apocalyptic material, coupled with the assertion by Jesus that The Man will send his angels and sift the wicked from his Kingdom. The Man is presented to us in Matthew as though Jesus were speaking of another person—yet we know that, for the evangelist, the coming Son of Man is identical with Jesus (cf. 13:37). Matthew, in his own tradition, never combines the two functions of Jesus and Son of Man. Jesus, who preaches on earth, and brings men into the Kingdom (“sowing the seed”), is Son of Man; at the same time, the coming Man who will be Judge in his own Kingdom is Jesus himself. The evangelist’s own special contribution is based on considerations other than those of Mark.

Not only, apart from the Markan material,¹⁶ is there no indication in Matthew of the concept of The-Man-in-his-humility; in this gospel The Man is taken to mean a sovereignty which is true even when the Son’s Kingdom is understood as a temporary institution awaiting the Kingdom of the Father. The sons of the Evil

One who have been planted in The Man's Kingdom have been planted by the Evil One himself—but the sons of the Kingdom have been planted there by Jesus himself as The Man (13:6 ff.). This is not all. Temporary though the Son's Kingdom is, The Man's judgment at the End, by which he will sift the children of the Kingdom from the children of evil, will be confirmed by the Father (13:41–43). The Father will then establish, by incorporating the sons of The Man's Kingdom into his own Kingdom, that Jesus always acted with full authority. We have in this interpreted parable of the landowner no longer the warnings of a landowner against an impatience which would ruin the crops (12:29), but warnings of the impending judgment of The Man against the time of the End. In effect, men are being asked whether, as members of the Kingdom of The Man, they will be numbered among the elect in the Father's reign. In this interpreted parable, Matthew seems to have made what he could out of two traditions (two parables?), spoken at different times, and made both serve a single end.

In Part VI on The Man and the Messianic Community we saw that the dominion of The Man is the community. The community's Lord, The Man, will send his angels to implement the findings of the judgment. In Matthew's handling of the sayings of Jesus, this is the only occasion on which Jesus is spoken of as judge. It is noteworthy that Paul appears to have taught this conception of a dual Kingdom also. In 1 Cor 15:24–28, we have a picture of the Son's Kingdom, after the destruction of all opposing earthly rule, being delivered up to the Father. Paul, in addition to Matthew, sets limits on the reign of the Son—"he must reign, until he has put all his enemies under his feet."

Matthew's treatment of the Sower in 13:18 ff., for all its apparent connection with 13:37, places the emphasis on the goodness and integrity of the seed rather than on the Sower. Yet, even when attention is drawn to this apparent inconsistency in the two passages, there is in both cases an emphatic assertion of The Man's universal dominion, both as teacher and judge.

In a slight, but not irrelevant, digression we might review some of the steps which in later ages of the Church led to the formulation of the doctrine of the Trinity. It is clear from what has been said that Matthew draws directly on the traditional ideas of The Man-to-come when he combines—albeit inconsistently—two functions of The Man, first as Sower with complete authority, and then as Judge-to-come. The Man is Lord also of the community on earth, a theme developed by Paul in his concept of the Church as the Body, with The Man its Head. He is Lord, too, in his function of removing from his dominion the sons of the Evil One. But though Lord, he is not conceived by Matthew as Ruler of the Church on earth—he is not, that is to say, the Lord acting in the Church. This is a concept which Luke and John single out in their two gospels and in the Acts, in dealing with the Spirit. There are two poles in the material which Matthew treats—the time of the teaching ministry of Jesus, calling men and placing them in the Kingdom, and also the time of the coming judgment, a sifting which will deliver over the elect into the Father’s Kingdom. In Matthew’s gospel, the intermediate stage, though it is the subject of much teaching and provision for the future, is not represented as being the particular concern of The Man—he is Lord, but not Ruler. The Man’s Kingdom is one which asks its adherents to have faith in, and commitment to, both Jesus and his sayings. Those who hold fast to this faith and belief will be confirmed in their allegiance by The Man, and at the End will be taken into the Father’s Kingdom. Presumably, it was the role of The Man in the synoptic gospels, coupled with the role of the Messiah as seen in John and Luke’s conception of the Spirit-in-the-Church (which was John’s understanding too), that gave impetus to the formulations which were composed in the centuries after the apostolic age. (Certainly all these conceptions are present in our earliest liturgical texts.) Not until all four gospels, together with Paul’s letters, had become established would the application of Greek analytical methods to the transmitted material bring together into creedal formulation the reactions of the NT writers to the material which they had received.

It has been pointed out by Joachim Jeremias (The Parables of Jesus [London: SCM, 1963], p. 142) that there is a change from Matt 25:31 ff., where the evangelist deals with the judgment of The Man, to vss. 34–41, where the judge is named as “king,” and those summoned before him are represented as calling him “Lord.” Jeremias suggests that Matthew has adapted 25:30 as an introduction to the whole section, and this seems to be borne out by the interplay between 19:28, 16:27, and 25:31, all of which speak of The Man summoning to judgment. The judge declares in 25:31 ff. that he himself is either well- or ill-used in the persons of the least of his brethren, and so demonstrates the unity of The Man with the humblest. In Mark 8:38 and Luke 12:8 The Man acknowledges as his own those who have maintained allegiance to Jesus by word and deed. In the parallel account in Matthew this test of allegiance is absent, for the very good reason that it is Jesus who describes the judgment, who identifies the tests of judgment with the humility of his own Messianic work and ministry.

We now pass to an examination of the use which Matthew makes of the “Son of Man” material which he shares with Mark, and will proceed to suggest the possible ground for Matthew’s use of the Markan tradition.

On one occasion only does Mark (13:26 ff.) put a “Son of Man” saying in an apocalyptic context. In Matthew’s parallel version there is a subtle change (24:30 ff.): what is seen is the standard of The Man, certainly to be identified with The Man's cross. This sign is a judgment, not only (as in Mark) an ingathering of the elect. (The relation between Matt 24:30 ff., and Rev 1:7 and Dan 7:13 will be discussed in the commentary proper.) Furthermore, additionally emphasizing The Man's judicial function, Matthew alone has the Son of Man sending "his" angels (cf. Mark 13:27), and that with the apocalyptic trumpets (cf. Psalms of Solomon 11:1 and 1 Cor 15:52).

Matthew's tradition also modifies the crucial Mark 14:62. In Mark, the acknowledgment by Jesus of his claim to be Messiah and Son of God is followed by an assertion of the impending coming of The Man. Matthew, however (26:64), by the use of the particle plēn ("more than that") at the beginning of the sentence, makes a decisive break, and considerably modifies what follows: "More than that—from now on, you will see The Man seated at the right hand of power and coming on the clouds of heaven." Matthew uses the term "from now on" (ap'arti) at 23:39 and 26:29, and in neither case can the phrase have any other than the plain meaning "from now on." Here, then, the evangelist provides us with his understanding of the exaltation of the Son—a glorification which is closely in line with the Johannine identification of the glory of Jesus with his being lifted on the cross. In this fashion Matthew closes the ministry of Jesus: the time for choosing or rejecting that ministry is ended, and everything now looks to the eschatological coming of The Man. No longer are the titles Messiah or Son of God acknowledged; instead there is only the sovereignty of The Man.

There is a significant change from the Markan tradition (8:31) at Matthew's 16:21. Mark recalls the saying of Jesus that The Man must suffer. (The Greek here is important—dei pathein—and the English "must" is to be given its full import.) Matthew drops the title—in this context, the Messiah must suffer, but not The Man. Similarly—and significant in the light of what will be later said about Matthew's understanding of the tradition—Matthew has at 16:13, "Who do men say that The Man is?" (Cf. 16:15). Here again, The Man is a title of dominion.

Having used the saying in Mark 8:38, in another context, at 10:32 Matthew uses the last part of the saying just as Mark records it, but with a meaning which is governed by the preceding material. Mark's use acts as summary of a section on discipleship, while in Matthew it is the familiar pattern of the coming of The Man, conceived as pertaining to the judgment which the Son will execute upon his own dominion. The community, the Church, is established through the Petrine confession (16:18 ff.) and that community is immediately warned that all its members must prepare for suffering (16:24–26), but neither suffering, nor membership in the community, constitutes an indelible privilege: The Man will judge men according to their deeds in and through the community (16:27). This, as we have already had occasion to emphasize in Part VI above, is wholly in keeping with the tradition which Matthew embodies in his gospel. Furthermore, Matthew's significant contribution to the complex concept of The Man is that he preserves elements in the teaching of Jesus which are closely allied to ideas expressed in the second part of the pre-Christian book of Enoch (probably second century B.C.).

It is assumed by A. Oepke (Theologisches Wörterbuch zum Neuen Testament [abbr. TWNT], eds. G. Kittel et al. [Stuttgart: Beck, 1933–], s.v. “parousia,” p. 865) that the Matthean use of “the parousia of the Son of Man” (24:27, 37, 39) is a technical Hellenistic term for which the primitive community had no equivalent. Parousia (“coming,” “appearance”), he assumes, denotes the appearance of Christ in Messianic glory and came into the Church from Pauline usage. This view assumes far too much. The apostle retained an Aramaic expression in 1 Cor 16:22, which suggests that other technical expressions may have been subsequently lost to us, including the background of parousia. (It is more than likely that the rather odd and mysterious anathema of 1 Cor 16:22, when compared with the variant reading of 1 Cor 12:3, could likewise do with more examination than it has had hitherto; cf. now W. F. Albright and C. S. Mann, “Two Texts in I Corinthians,” NTS 16 [1970], 271–76.) Now Matthew speaks in 24:3 of the parousia of Jesus, on the part of the disciples, where the question obviously looks beyond the present ministry: “What will be the sign of your coming and the end of the age?” The early Christian writers (Justin and Ignatius in the second century, and the anonymous author of the Gospel of Nicodemus) are all careful to speak of a second parousia, and we are therefore justified in asking why they thought it fit to use a qualifying adjective, and further to inquire what primitive understanding of parousia is preserved in Matthew. So far as the rest of the New Testament is concerned, the word is used with reference to the End (cf., e.g., 1 Thess 2:19, 3:13, 5:23; 2 Thess 2:1), and John A. T. Robinson has forcibly argued that the idea of a “second coming,” in the sense of a return of Jesus to earth in glory, was not stated by Jesus (cf. Jesus and His Coming, Nashville: Abingdon / London: SCM, 1957), and was in fact a total misunderstanding of what Jesus had said. Certainly such a thesis explains the use of the qualifying “second” in the instances noticed above.

Some indication of the tradition which Matthew preserves—important as being closely allied with intertestamental literature—is to be found in 10:32 ff. The Lukan parallel (Luke 12:8) uses the term “Son of Man” where Jesus speaks of his advocacy before the Father on behalf of those who have followed him. No problems are solved by suggesting that Matthew read Luke and “edited” his own version in favor of his own preconceptions, but it is important to notice the absence in the Lukan text of any reference to The Man as judge—a crucial factor in the Matthean tradition.

The “regeneration” pictured in Matt 19:28 is a commonplace of Jewish eschatological thinking; it finds expression in Josephus and Philo, it is found in the Qumran Manual of Discipline (1QS iv 25), and is a notable motif in the Book of Revelation. It is one of Matthew’s peculiar contributions to our present tradition of the sayings of Jesus. This renewal of all things in Jewish thought belonged to the time of the Messiah’s triumph. Here The Man is apparently not exercising any judicial function, yet Matthew’s recorded saying is verbally far more in keeping with Jewish thought than is Luke’s 22:28–30; Matthew’s version is in fact almost a direct quotation from Enoch lxii 5. By comparison, Luke’s version emerges as a conscious attempt to put into manageable form a partly-recalled oral tradition which the evangelist did not wholly understand.

One feature of the Matthean tradition must be noted here. In chapter 24, vss. 39, 42, 44 conclude three short sections, in the first and last of which we have The Man, and in the second, Lord. Apart from the well-known dislike of the evangelist for too much repetition, there is an identity of meaning here which must not be overlooked. In all three sections there is a summons to vigilance in the face of the coming judgment, and both The Man and Lord here alike indicate the future judge of the community. Here, too, we find echoes of the “Son of Man” theme as it is presented in Mark and Luke, for Matthew uses “Lord” to designate the healing and redemptive work of Jesus (cf. 7:2, 6, 9:28, 15:22, 25). The Man who is active in the ministry of Jesus is also Lord, and the coming judge of the End.

R. H. Charles (in his edition of the Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English [Oxford University Press, 1913], II, p. 180) asserted that Enoch “has had more influence on the New Testament than has any other apocryphal or pseudepigraphic work.” At the time, it was possible to dissent from this kind of judgment, on the grounds of the dating of the material in Enoch, but since then fragments of the pre-Christian part of Enoch have been found at Qumran. These finds have placed the relevant parts of Enoch firmly in the intertestamental period and have established the use of parts of that work among a group known to have emphasized eschatology. Striking parallels between the Discourses of Enoch and the Hôdayôt (Thanksgiving Psalms) of Qumran now make it virtually certain that this part of Enoch—like the Hôdayôt—is of second-century B.C. date. Together with the “Son of Man” figure in Dan 7:13, this bears directly on our understanding of Matthew’s tradition.

In Enoch The Man is pre-existent (47:2), and as Messiah he is also Son of God (105:2): he is a judicial figure, possessing righteousness, vindicating the righteous, and judging men according to their deeds (45:3, 46). The Messianic figure in Enoch—variously called The Man (principally), the Elect One, and the Righteous One (by implication, usually)—has been categorized by R. H. Charles, and his division of the material is the one followed here. (Incidentally, Charles shows that the demonstrative “this” preceding “Son of Man” in the Ethiopic, is clearly only to be translated by a definite article, and the Greek demonstrative itself was so used on many occasions. Hence, the NT phrase ho huios tou anthropou is no new construction, nor ill-derived from the original—cf. Enoch xlvi 4, xlvii 2, lxii 9, 14, lxiii 11, lxix 26, 27, lxx 1, lxxi 1). In the Enoch mesâlê, the Son of Man is first Judge, then Revealer, and third Champion and Ruler of the righteous. As Judge, he has righteousness (38:2, 39:6, 46:3, 53:6; cf. Pss 45:4–7, 71; Isa 11:3–5), wisdom (49:1, 3, 51:3), and power (49:3, 62:6). He illuminates the realms of sin and righteousness (46:3, 49:2, 4), raises the dead (51:1, 67:5) and will judge all men (51:2, 55:4, 61:8, 62:2, 3, 69:27). It is his function to vindicate and reward the righteous (39:7, 47:4, 7, 51:5, 52:6, 62:7, 8, 14, 15). Charles calls attention to the following significant parallels between Enoch and the Matthean tradition: Enoch lxii 5 (Matt 19:28), 40:9 (Matt 19:29), 54:4, 5 (Matt 25:41); and 38:2 (Matt 26:24)—all of them in various ways concerned with the dealings of the Son of Man with both the righteous and unrighteous.

But even apart from references (which are in all four cases almost verbally identical) the parallels in ideas between Enoch and Matthew are far too close to be dismissed. To be sure, we can assume (as does H. E. Tödt, The Son of Man in the Synoptic Tradition, tr. from the 2nd German ed. by D. M. Barton, Philadelphia: Westminster Press / London: SCM, 1965) that the Son of Man material is “prophecy after the event,” incorporated into the gospel material by the evangelists (from the community?) in the light of the passion and resurrection of Jesus, but this is a hazardous assumption at best. The sayings which incorporate the expression “Son of Man” in the synoptic gospels are firmly set in their contexts, and are therefore part of the tradition which belongs to possible early collections of the sayings of Jesus. Another factor has already been noted—a possible removal by Matthew of one such expression where it did not agree with the tradition which he knew. We can make excisions and emendations on the basis of our own theological preconceptions, or on our own evaluation of what Jesus could, or could not, have said—presumably, according to taste, either as a simple quasi-peasant itinerant Jewish preacher, or as the initiator of a somewhat odd amalgam of features of Judaism with semi-intellectual “Gnosticism.” But the picture of first-century Judaism now open to us is far too involved, far too charged with theological awareness, for any such evaluation not to be slightly foolish.

Mark and Luke preserve for us a tradition of sayings from Jesus about The Man in the humility of an earthly ministry, consummated in a passion and death which the words of Jesus at the Last Supper interpreted as redemptive. Matthew's tradition presents another picture altogether. Many scholars have felt that the two pictures are contradictory, but in the face of present evidence, it is far more correct to say that the synoptic gospels are two sides of a single coin, and that the gospels provide us with a confluence of traditions fully articulate and widespread in the time of Jesus.

The notion of a semidivine figure coming to assist mankind in a quasi-redemptive role was known to the Babylonians as Atrakhasis the Man, before 1600 B.C. The Suffering Servant of Isaiah, whether an idealized figure, a collective for a group in Israel, or Israel itself, is seen not only as performing a redemptive function, but also (especially Isa 53) as sharing in the divine purposes, and as receiving honor from the hand of God. Similarly, all the "Son of Man" addresses in Ezekiel are used by the prophet almost as a title for one who represents God to Israel, and Israel to God. "Son of Man" in Daniel and Ezekiel are our principal written sources in Israel; what manner of apocalyptic speculation went to the making of the fully developed concept in Enoch, in the intervening period, we do not at the present time know. But that the synoptic gospels contain at one and the same time a cloud-rider after the fashion of Baal in the Canaanite epics, and also a redemptive figure marked out for suffering, should not surprise anyone familiar with the literature.

Our final suggestion in this examination of the material in Matthew could be expressed by saying that the real clue to the evangelist's tradition is to be found in Dan 7:13. We must note carefully that the cloud-rider ("on" the clouds, with LXX, and not "with" the clouds, as in the extant Aramaic text), one who is truly The Man, comes to the Ancient of Days.¹⁷ There is but one coming, and it was this coming which, misunderstood, first produced the vocabulary of a second parousia in the early post-NT writers. What we appear to have in Matthew is an understanding which proceeds from the ministry of Jesus (where the Markan material is intrusive), through resurrection-exaltation, looks to the kingdom of The Man as identified with the continuing community, and then bids men fix their gaze on that End when that kingdom (which The Man will summon to judgment) will be given up by the Son to the Father, whose kingdom will be for eternity. The Man's "coming" in Matthew is properly to be understood of that coming spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor 15, where The Man delivers up to the Father his own kingdom, which will indeed be the End, and the time of judgment.

With this consideration in mind, we pass in review the “Son of Man” sayings in Matthew. He reflects the Markan tradition of sayings, demonstrating the earthly ministry of Jesus, in 8:20, 11:29, 12:40 (doubtfully), 17:12, 22, 20:18, 28. At the same time, this Son of Man, in Matthew’s tradition, exercises authority and brings salvation (healing): 9:6 (especially), 12:8, 13:37, 18:11. He knows and reveals the things of God: 11:27, and in his passion is delivered over to the will of men: 17:22, 20:18, 26:2, 24, 45. But always, the Son of Man is master of events, and his own interpreter of his own share in those events, just as the Messiah is in John’s gospel (cf. Matt 20:28, 26:64). There is no “adoptionist” suggestion in Matthew saying that Jesus becomes Son of Man, for this he always is, vide 16:13, 17:9, even in the rejection and humility of the passion. But the definitive element in Matthew is that of the glory of the Son of Man, in his own kingdom, and the instances of its use (10:23, 12:32, 13:41, 16:27, 28, 24:27, 30, 37, 39, 44, 25:13, 31, 26:64) are all best understood of the Son’s coming to the Father. This, we suggest, is particularly the case with 10:23. We need not infer that the coming of the Son of Man will be so early as to limit the expectation of the End to the horizon of Israel: if this were so, the Gentile mission of 28:19 ff. would be nugatory, and contrary, too, to the material which Matthew drew upon from sources other than his own tradition. The saying comes in a context of provisions for a continuing community girded for persecution (10:17 f., 19 f., 21) and of incorporated apocalyptic sayings. The sayings look to a time—to predict which in those days required no particular prescience—when the end of the Jewish state would have taken place long before the Gospel had been extensively preached there. Long before the Son of Man’s presentation of his kingdom to the Father, evangelization of Jewry as then understood would be out of the question.

In sum, it would appear that in Matthew there is an understanding of the role of the Son of Man similar to that of the Messiah in John’s gospel, summoning men to take sides in the face of the proclamation of the Kingdom, and then bidding those men to look to future judgment as well as present decision. Secondly, we may find a possible explanation of Matthew’s dual-role Son of Man in his manifestly Jewish background. Mark and Luke may have found the Son of Man’s humility and his voluntary redemptive suffering so striking as to be difficult to accommodate with a tradition which spoke of the Son of Man’s glory. It is evident that Matthew found both ideas wholly congenial to patterns of thought with which he was familiar.

There is a very full discussion of recent writing on the subject of the “Son of Man” sayings in I. H. Marshall, “The Synoptic Son of Man Sayings in Recent Discussion,” NTS 12 (1965–66), 327–51.

VIII. THE KINGDOM: THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

Matthew's understanding of the reign of The Man must be carefully distinguished from his interpretation of material which deals with the reign of the Father (see Parts VI and VII above). We have had occasion to emphasize that in Matthew there will be two judgments in the End-time: that which The Man will execute upon the continuing community, the Church, which is properly The Man's Kingdom, and is in Matthew conceived of as temporary, and the judgment which the Father will execute upon all men, accepting The Man's judgment upon his own Kingdom. We have also seen that Matthew's tradition is rightly understood against a specifically Jewish background which looks to the Son of Man imagery of Enoch and Daniel. In that imagery, we suggested that it was of prime importance to take seriously the one "coming" of the Son of Man to the Father; allied with this consideration there were important links between the Matthean tradition and the Johannine concept of the Messianic reign being inaugurated through the passion, crucifixion and resurrection. (There appears to be an important link here, too, with Pauline thought, as expressed in Rom 1:1–4, where the "Sonship" is said to be declared by the resurrection.)

Matthew's use of his sources is very clearly exhibited in the care with which he uses the word "kingdom" and its qualifying possessive genitives. Before examining the material Matthew preserves for us, we suggest that no problems are solved by the mere assertion that whoever cast our present gospel of Matthew in its final form resorted to "editing" in favor of clarifying or emphasizing some theory of his own, or some theory of a group to which he may have belonged. We are not in possession of any certain information about such a group, and any assumption of "editing" is based in the last analysis upon nothing more solid than a priori assumptions of our own. What, to the contrary, we do have (and in this respect we are far more richly blessed than our predecessors) is a large amount of solid information about first-century Judaism. The more carefully the present information about that Judaism is studied, the more foolish appear many of the assertions made by an earlier generation about what Jesus and his apostles "could" or "could not" have said. The manifold variety of Messianic speculation in the century before Jesus and contemporary with him is sufficient to let the commentator allow the material to speak for itself.

Consistently, Matthew's gospel uses the phrase "Kingdom of the heavens" (or, as it is in most translations, "Kingdom of heaven"). The care with which Matthew differentiates the "Kingdom of heaven" from the "Kingdom of the Father" wherever it is found in his tradition suggests that we approach this distinctive Matthean use cautiously. In only one instance does Matthew concur with Markan tradition—at 4:17 (Mark 1:15); elsewhere, the evangelist makes use of his own tradition. We shall later suggest that if Matthew did have access to Mark (which is impossible to prove), then he deliberately changed the Markan use in favor of his own tradition, precisely because he believed his own tradition to be superior and closer to the sense in which Jesus had spoken of the Kingdom.

There are other examples in Matthew of “Kingdom” phrases: the Kingdom (4:23, 9:35, 13:19) in cases where the meaning is unlikely to be misunderstood; his Kingdom, or The Man’s Kingdom (6:33, 13:41, 16:28); the Kingdom of the Father (6:10, 13:43, 26:29). “Kingdom of God” occurs in Matthew only five times, at 4:17—cf. “Kingdom of heaven” at 3:2–12:28, 19:24, 21:31, 21:43. Matt 18:6–9 has no reference at all to the Kingdom, where Mark 9:47 does have it, and at 14:25 Matthew apparently knew of no Markan tradition of references to the Kingdom at the Last Supper, for he does not incorporate the Markan material at this point.

Matthew’s gospel begins—so far as public proclamation is concerned—with John’s call, and then Jesus’, to repentance, “for the kingdom of heaven is almost here.” This, as background to the remainder of this section, is of paramount importance: at hand, invested with an air of great urgency, is not the Father’s Kingdom of the End, but The Man’s Kingdom. Whether Matthew has deliberately changed John the Baptist’s proclamation here is uncertain, the preaching of Jesus as represented by the evangelist is completely in line with all the other ways in which he asserts the distinction between the two Kingdoms.

Matthew’s treatment of the way in which men are to enter The Man’s Kingdom betrays the same care in arrangement of material, the same meticulous differentiation of vocabulary, that characterizes his “Son of Man” material. The Beatitudes—which, as Joachim Jeremias has pointed out, are “gospel” applying to members of the community, and not a universal ethic—twice (5:3, 10) declare the conditions under which men in the Kingdom (of The Man) are to live. Matthew’s strong ecclesiological interest, his care to record all that he knew of the sayings of Jesus about the continuing community, his interest in what Jesus came to fulfill—all these are found in his pericope about the Law in 5:19–20. The Man’s Kingdom, the “Kingdom of heaven,” will have little attraction for those who in libertarian notions of freedom, or in antinomian reaction against their own past, throw aside all restraint. (The Apostle Paul had much to say of this to his converts.)

The Pauline teaching which is normally designated as “justification by faith,” that childlike acceptance of God’s gracious gift, undeserved and incapable of being merited, is found in Matthew, too. Men cannot enter into the Kingdom of heaven, into The Man’s realm, by mere assertions of allegiance (7:21): it is only the child—and the childlike—who can accept as wholly unmerited what is offered as a gift (17:1, 3, 4, 19:14). Those who would enter the Kingdom of heaven must have a faith that knows it can merit nothing, and must also be prepared to renounce quite legitimate human aspirations (19:12). The call to sacrifice and the certainty of persecution both make the possession of wealth a positive obstacle in the path of the would-be neophyte (19:23–24).

The comparisons the parables make between the twin worlds of nature and men on the one hand, and the Kingdom on the other, emphasize the miraculous growth of that Kingdom (13:31), The Man's dominion over it (13:24), the cost of discipleship (13:44), and 13:45 perhaps is intended to demonstrate the costliness of the Kingdom's inauguration to The Man. This Kingdom, which awaits the judgment of The Man, is not the Kingdom of the righteous—it contains both bad and good (13:47) and will so remain until the judgment of the End (18:23 ff., 25:1 ff.). Those who are trained and commissioned to preach the message of this Kingdom (10:7 ff.) know the mind of its Lord (13:11), and, instructed as they are, produce for the household of God all manner of treasure (13:52).

Two figures intimately connected with The Man's "Kingdom of heaven," one as forerunner and the other as its leader, are subjects of comment. John the Baptist, great though he was, suffered and was martyred before the inauguration of the Kingdom. In that sense, not having witnessed God's gracious act in The Man, he is less than the latest neophyte in that Kingdom (11:12). In the main body of the commentary we will discuss the difference between Matt 11:12–15 and Luke 16:16, but an editorial comment ("from the time of John the Baptist to this moment") seems to appear, followed by Jesus' words on impending and inevitable persecution: the Kingdom will suffer violence at the hands of men, who will seek to quell the dominion of The Man. Peter, whose confession of the Messiahship of Jesus gave the community strength at the crisis-point of the ministry, is given the care of this continuing community (16:19)—a tradition which also finds expression in another form in John (21:20 ff.).

The continuity of the Kingdom of heaven with the previous history of Israel (a theme heavily emphasized in Paul's letter to the Romans) is pointed out in the sayings of Matt 8:5 ff. Those who bow their necks to the yoke of the service of this Kingdom, whether Jew or Gentile, will inherit the promises to the patriarchs (8:11); those who refuse, not willing to accept God's gracious gift, will be cast out, even though professed allegiance counted them among the sons of the Kingdom (8:12). Similarly, the continuity of the community, the Kingdom of The Man, with the community of Israel does not confer upon the Jew any privilege or preeminence (20:1 ff., 22:2 ff.); those who, late or early, enter that Kingdom are equal recipients of God's gift. Of more than passing interest, in the light of what has so far been said here and in Part VII on the “Son of Man,” is the fact that the first condemnation of the Pharisees and scribes in 23:13 is based on their inability to comprehend what Jesus offers to all men: rejecting the Kingdom of The Man, they fight against it, too.

The remaining instances of Matthew’s use of “kingdom,” with its varying qualifying genitives, support these contentions. We have the same emphatic separation of the two Kingdoms in 13:43, the recognition of another Kingdom (that of the Father) in 26:29, while 4:23, 9:35, and 13:19 have no need of any qualification—what is under discussion is the Son’s Kingdom, just as men are bidden to pray for the advent of the Father’s reign in 6:10 (i.e., are to look to the End-time as goal). For Israel, acceptance of the message proclaimed by Jesus must understandably have been a matter of great difficulty, as the teaching that the Son’s Kingdom was open to all meant an end to what they imagined was their privileged relationship with God. Rejection of Jesus’ proclamation, however, was heinous; we ought not to miss the significance of Matthew’s careful record in 12:28. Failure to recognize that the focus of Jesus’ ministry was the battle against evil, with all its attendant redemptive implications, was to bring upon oneself the final judgment of God’s Kingdom, the judgment of the Father—for along with rejection of the ministry of Jesus went rejection of his Kingdom. In 21:31 the evangelist has “Kingdom of God” where we might have expected “Kingdom of heaven.” But—cf. commentary below—the use here is consistent with the evangelist’s purpose. The question is not that of entrance into the Messianic Community on the part of those who are still unbelievers, but of entrance into the Father’s Kingdom.

Matthew’s use of the word “kingdom” elsewhere in the Gospel can be handled more easily. That there was very early some doubt as to the differences between Matthew and Mark is evidenced by the variations at 6:33, though it is plain even in the manuscript variations that it is the Father’s Kingdom which men are to seek as the goal of their lives. The finality of the Father’s Kingdom, as distinct from that of the Son of Man, has been stressed above.

There is one final reference to be noted—Matt 16:28. This occurs in a context which marks out the path of suffering and denial of self which is the lot of the disciple. Though 16:27 gives us the familiar pattern of The Man’s future judgment upon his own people, this is followed by the saying that there are “men standing here who will not taste death before they see The Man enter upon his reign.” Mark 9:1 has “before they see the kingdom of God come with power” (RSV). The distinct use which Matthew makes of the Kingdom of The Man here had prompted some to ask whether the evangelist, or his source, expected an early end to the world order, in the lifetime of some who heard this saying. Some have asked whether, granted that the saying is authentic, Jesus was himself a mistaken visionary (which was the view of Albert Schweitzer). It is not necessary to return an affirmative to either alternative. (To “taste death” was a common Jewish expression [cf. John 8:52; Heb 2:9], and hence we are dealing with a saying which is part of Jewish life in the time of Jesus—the saying need not be denied to Jesus solely on grounds of dating.) Matthew’s use of his sources here shows some interesting divergence from the Markan tradition. To begin with, Matthew does not have Mark’s “and he said to them,” which prefaces the Markan version; instead, he firmly links this saying with what has gone before—that is, with the saying about judgment in The Man’s Kingdom. Furthermore, Matthew uses the Greek participle erchomemon, “coming,” for Mark’s elēluthian; in Mark it is the Kingdom of God which men will see, while in Matthew it is The Man coming in his Kingdom. We have contended elsewhere (fn. 17) that Daniel 7:13 is the clue to Matthew’s tradition about the “coming of The Man,” and it is possible to see the same concept at work here. In the trial scene of Matthew’s passion narrative, Jesus declares that the bystanders will see The Man coming on the clouds, already in the seat of power. This can only rightly be understood—as we have seen—in the light of the Johannine tradition that Jesus spoke of his passion and his resurrection as his glorification, his enthronement; the numerous occasions on which Jesus (in John’s gospel) speaks of his “coming” to the Father can only refer to the glory of his resurrection-exaltation. To this must be added the further Johannine tradition that the community was established in the Spirit immediately following the resurrection (a tradition which, incidentally, Luke’s account in Acts 2 in no way contradicts). It seems reasonable to suggest, therefore, that Matthew here records a saying which anticipates the Son’s coming to the Father, with a Kingdom, a community, already in being at the time of the resurrection.

This analysis may firmly place Matthew in a first-century Jewish tradition that understood the sayings of Jesus far more clearly than did Mark or Luke—an understanding which the evangelist shares with John. If so, some very interesting questions are raised about the precise relationship between Matthew’s tradition and that of John, and a very fruitful field of inquiry is suggested in the exploration of common elements of thought in Matthew, John, and Paul.

IX. JESUS AND THE LAW

No other NT document represents Jesus upholding the Law so extensively as the gospel of Matthew. Jesus confirms the Law in 5:17–19, 23:1 ff. If this were all—and some writers on the New Testament have apparently been persuaded of this—then we would expect the Judge in the End-time in Matthew’s gospel to hold court on the basis of the Law (cf. 25:31 ff.); his granting or withholding mercy on the basis of the Law would be sufficient ground for acquittal or condemnation.

A massive concentration on the theme of Law in Matthew, however, seriously disturbs the whole balance of the work, and would succeed in removing Jesus’ discussion of the Law from the context of the Kingdom he proclaimed. Whatever prominence the Law holds in this gospel, the concern of the Kingdom in all the gospels is soteriological, and interest in the Law is subordinate to this overriding consideration of salvation effected by Jesus.

The element of the soteriological apart, it is right to call attention to one vital concern shared by the Israel of the Sinai Covenant and the Messianic Community which Jesus proclaimed: the relationship of the individual to the community, whether of Israel or of the Church. For Israel under the Old Covenant, as for the Church under the New, the paramount concern was not whether Israel or the Kingdom was a vaguely identifiable disposition of mind or heart, but whether men did or did not belong to Israel or the Kingdom. Individuals may have been aware of being members of Israel or of a proclaimed Kingdom, but it is the people, the community, who stand under the Covenant and the judgment of God. The individual in either community attains the salvation of God as a member of a covenant-community. The attitude of Jesus to the Mosaic Law must be seen against the background of the Covenant; likewise, discussions of the ethical demands of the NT writings are pointless without reference to the community in which those demands are to be met.

It is necessary to emphasize here, too, the element of “fulfillment” in Matthew’s gospel, for it has a direct bearing on our subject. The evangelist combines his concept of Jesus establishing the Law with his understanding of the person of Jesus. The teaching of Jesus given to the inner circle of his disciples is supplemented by references to the Law, to its foundation in the purposes of God at creation (cf. 19:4, 8), but he himself fulfills the purposes of the Law (5:17, 23:23). To follow mercy, righteousness, and faith is precisely that total lack of concern for the things of self which exceeds the righteousness of scribes and Pharisees (cf. 5:20): the righteousness demanded by Jesus is based on allegiance to the principles on which the Law was based, and also (and vitally) on allegiance to his own ministry and person.

The very terms in which Jesus proclaimed the Kingdom's advent—OT terms, intimately bound up with the whole concept of covenant-obligation—carried with them the implication of an organization through which the new Covenant-community expressed its allegiance. (The unfortunate and inaccurate contrast often drawn between the idea of a community on one side, and a “religion of the spirit” on the other, is examined carefully in B. C. Butler's Spirit and Institution in the New Testament, London: Mowbray, 1961.) Given the need for some means of identifying the membership of a community, there is a corresponding necessity to legislate for that community's life: the Corinthian letters of Paul together with the Johannine letters eloquently testify to this need. The gates of the New Jerusalem in the Apocalypse, it has been pointed out, are always open but that same Jerusalem also has walls. It is quite misleading to imply that the freedom secured for men by Jesus (according to the Apostle Paul) was meant to issue in an undifferentiated enthusiasm, free of all restraint by common discipline.

Matthew's gospel clearly demonstrates that Jesus' life also points out the path of discipleship. Mercy—“covenant-loyalty”—which Jesus teaches as the very heart of the Law (9:13, 12:7), which he commends to the disciples (5:7, 18:33), and by which standard the world will be judged (25:31 ff.), is what Jesus himself demonstrates in his dealings with men, even the most insignificant of his brethren (11:28–30). Allegiance to one who acts in such a way demands similar conduct from anyone who professes that allegiance: the disciple must exhibit the humility that characterizes his Master. There is no new Law, but neither is there simply a reiteration of the old Law's precepts; Matthew's gospel presents a new frame of reference—allegiance to the interpreter of the Law, whom Jesus claims to be, an allegiance in covenant-loyalty and faith. But allegiance proves nothing (cf. 25:40), the imperative is the conduct which allegiance implies.

More than one commentary has suggested that the misnamed “Sermon on the Mount,” particularly that part of it known as “The Beatitudes” (10:3–12), was deliberately meant by Jesus to be a superior declaration of the divine will in contrast with an (implied) “lower” revelation under Moses. Such interpretations are more suggestive of outworn theories of “degrees of inspiration” than of serious scholarship. Without the Law there would have been no Gospel: ex nihilo nihil fit is valid today as it was in the Middle Ages: without the Covenant of Sinai and the election of Israel there is no understanding of the Gospel. We can say with considerable emphasis that Jesus' attitude to the Law was positive, that he accepted the rightful place of those who taught the Law as God-given (23:3), even in one instance accepting the extension of the law of tithe (23:23). But while affirming the validity of the Law up to the time of its “fulfillment,” he rejected the proliferating oral tradition, increasingly fostered by the Pharisees and eagerly seized upon by the scribes.

Matt 5:17 records Jesus as saying that he came to “establish,” “fulfill,” “sum up” (plērousaí) the Law. David Daube (The New Testament and Rabbinic Judaism, The Jordan Lectures, 1952 [London: Athlone Press, 1956], pp. 60 ff.) gives the meaning as “uphold,” translating the Heb. qiyyem. But the Syriac and the Aramaic would be far more faithfully rendered by “establish” in the sense of “give firm foundation to,” while “uphold” in the context would provide the unhappy sense of “defend.” The Aramaic can also tolerate the meaning of “resurrect.”

In discussing specific examples of Jesus’ treatment of the Law in Matthew three things must be borne in mind:

(1) Jesus conceived of his own mission in terms of Israel alone (15:24–26; the parallel Mark 7:27 is no different), regardless of whatever exceptions might be made in particular cases of healing, or in directions to disciples as to their own missions. It is true that the abrogation by God of exclusive privileges of election is plainly indicated by the sense of some of the parables, but the keeping (or not) of the Law was not a burning issue until the mission to the Gentiles was begun in earnest.

(2) Jesus’ appeal to the Law and his understanding of the demands of God upon the covenant-people is cast, significantly, in terms taken from Deuteronomy (cf. the temptation narrative, and see also Mark 12:29 and parallels, Deut 6:4). That book is not only Law and commentary on Law, it also sharply and frequently emphasizes the compassionate love of God both in the choice of Israel and also in qualifying that choice’s provisions for maintaining Israel’s unique inheritance.

(3) Whatever lessons the parables may carry about the overconfident reliance of Israel on the mere privilege of choice, Jesus’ appeal both in the parables and in his teaching on the Law is to the divine initiative which formed Israel, which act gave the Law its sanctions. As such, the teaching of Jesus is cast in a prophetic mold.

To take up the last point, we are guilty of an alarming simplicity with respect to the evidence of rabbinic form if we suppose that the Matthean formula “It was said by the ancients ... but I tell you ...” is tantamount to an abrogation of the Mosaic Law. Cast though it may be in a prophetic and not in an academic/rabbinic mold, it was nevertheless a well-known interpretative device. Daube (New Testament and Rabbinic Judaism, p. 58) calls attention to the rabbinic formula “I might hear (understand) ...” (i.e., literally) “but you must say ...” (i.e., “the essential meaning is ...”). This formula—as Daube points out—is certainly as old as the New Testament. It was a well-established convention in the time of Rabbi Ishmael (first part of the second century A.D.) and therefore had a far longer oral history. (The whole of Daube’s chapter 7 is extremely useful in illuminating this point.)

Jesus’ attitude to the Law has run a whole gamut of comment, some of it theological (and having to do with his Messianic dignity, or even consciousness of divinity), some of it frankly reminiscent of nineteenth-century liberal humanitarianism. Nearly all the commentaries ignore the salient fact of the background and upbringing of Jesus as a loyal and devoted son of Israel. His appeal was not to any new interpretation of the Law, still less to an interpretation propounded by himself, any more than the strictures of Amos, Micah, or Jeremiah can be held to urge any new interpretation of the Law. Jesus’ appeal is firmly against new interpretations, in particular those proliferating from the oral tradition of the Pharisees, and arising from the new application of Greek hermeneutics to Jewish law. Jesus’ appeal is always to real meanings, real interpretations, to foundations. The whole force of the discussion about duty to parents in Matt 15 is directed against new interpretations imposed by legislation. Similarly, in the celebrated passage about divorce (19:4), the significant phrase is ap’ archēs,—19:4, 8: “from the beginning, at the foundation of things.” Moses is not being condemned for his legislative work; on the contrary, it is Israel which stands condemned for having wrung from the lawgiver a concession which was rooted in human sin.

It is appropriate to consider here Paul’s understanding of the “law,” as one trained in the rabbinic tradition of Hillel by Gamaliel.¹⁸ The apostle does use nomos (=law) in a sense which any Greek would have understood, in the sense of a principle of life itself—that is, natural law. This sense, which we might translate as “the foundation of all good order,” is used by Paul at Rom 7:23 and 8:2, and there are certainly instances where nomos in his writings would do violence as an equivalent of the Heb. tôrah (cf. Rom 3:27, 7:23, 25; 8:2). H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck, Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und Midrash (abbr. StB), 5 vols. (Munich: C. H. Beck, 1922–55), ad loc., maintain that the whole argument of Rom 2:14–15 is foreign to rabbinic Judaism. All this is simply to say that for Paul the Jew, the primary meaning of nomos would always be tôrah, yet once LXX had used the word nomos (=the law of a community; cf. Eph 2:15), then Paul could use expressions which covered whole areas of ideas that tôrah could not easily sustain. By what steps he came to find in nomos a wider sense for tôrah, which contained “commandments put out as decrees” (Eph 2:15) we are not told; attention has already been called to the way in which Jesus appealed to the Law as an expression of underlying purpose, sustaining principle. It may be that Paul grasped the flexibility of this concept and in his penetrating way saw its implications for his own theological writings. At the same time he is aware of the way in which “law” had come to mean interpretations which were not commandments. In Rom 3:10–18 he provides us with a combination of quotations from Isaiah and Psalms, adding that “whatever the Law says it addresses to those who are subject to it.” A quotation from Isa 27:11 he designates as “written in the Law” (1 Cor 14:21). Obviously, both examples are outside the legal material of the Old Testament, but the point to be made is that rabbinic usage specifically sanctioned such an extension of the meaning of tôrah (cf. StB, on John 10:34; Rom 3:19; 1 Cor 14:21).

